Kempthorne threatens sanctions

Showdown over nuclear waste could come in 2003

The Times-News and the Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne Thursday said he would invoke the sanctions available under Idaho's 1985 nuclear waste deal with the federal government if a key deadline for processing plutonium-contaminated waste in Idaho is missed — as congressional investigators predict.

The showdown, which may stop some — but not all — waste shipments to Idaho, would come in early 2003 during the initial months of Kempthorne's second term, should he seek and win another four years in office.

"What I've always maintained, and this will come as no surprise to the Energy Department, is that I'm going to abide by the waste for temporary storage at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory until a new processing plant strict letter of that agreement," the governor said. "I will carry out Idaho's rights."

Kempthorne said he would block shipments to Idaho of highly radioactive Energy Department starts up.

A General Accounting Office report for House Commerce Chairman Tom Bliley, R-Va., found that the revised timetable shows the Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment Project will not begin operating until November 2003, seven months after the March 31 deadline spelled out in the nuclear waste agreement.

And that assumed that construction started last month. The report said the required permits probably will not be issued before July, lengthening the delay by jeopardizing plans to have the plant shell under a roof before the harsh high-desert winter weather moves in, so work can continue on the interior.

"We're still committed to meeting the deadline," INEEL spokesman Brad Bugger said. "But if we don't get started this construction season, we're in trouble."

A top Energy Department official conceded that meeting the deadline is questionable because even if construction is finished on time there will not be sufficient time left before March 31, 2003, to conduct the required testing and readiness reviews.

DELIGHTFUL TIMES COME TO TF

Josh Pearson helps his father set up the Donut Delights stand at City Park Thursday afternoon for Western Days. Festivities start today.

Vendors set up shop for Western Days

By Brandon Flata Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Thursday was a day for setting up in Twin Falls City Park as vendors prepared for today's opener of the 18th annual Western Days celebration.

For vendors and organizers, today promises a full day of activity. City Park is the epicenter of the celebration, with food vendors, arts and crafts booths and other attractions, but for this weekend's festivities, Western Days events will branch out around town.

"Western Days has grown to be the kickoff to the summer," said

Shellen Gilliland, public relations director for the Western Days Committee.

"This is a get-together for people to enjoy great food, have a good time and support good causes," said John Pohlman, who was setting up the Lamb Weston booth Thursday.

All proceeds from the booth, an estimated $2,500, will go toward the Magic Valley Skate Park. Pohlman said. The booth sells French fries and potato sticks.

"This will be the first year

Western Days organizers will take a head count of participants in the City Park area, Gilliland said. An estimated 20,000 people watch the Western Days parade, but an accurate count of people at City Park hasn't been done.

Western Days organizers are experimenting this year with branching out events from City Park, and some local officials have said the event might need to move to a different venue.

Randy Guiles, who operates a fajita booth at Western Days, said Thursday the event has probably outgrown the park.

For Dave Pearson, setting up Thursday for his 18th year in the park, the event has helped him grow his operation.

"We started out with just a table," said Pearson, who owns a Donut Delights booth.

Since then, he has worked the Eastern Idaho State Fair in Blackfoot, the Boise River Festival and other events.

"Western Days is probably one of the best shows we've ever done," he said.

Panelists: Adversaries must cooperate to solve key issues facing the West

By Michael Journe Times-News writer

BOISE — The polarized nature of the West's environmental debate must be overcome before the region can resolve a number of key issues, a panel of Western governors, former governors and newspaper executives said Thursday.

Regardless of party or position on the hot-button issues pitting environmental interests against economic development, panelists said the players must work closely with one another. An open discourse is the only way to overcome the distrust that has characterized the environmental debate to date.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — Gov. George W. Bush, campaigning for president as a compassionate conservative, blocked Thursday evening's scheduled execution of a convicted killer by approving his first reprieve in a Texas death penalty case.

Bush issued a 30-day reprieve for Ricky McGinn, less than a half-hour before the convicted murderer was set to die for killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter seven years ago.

Bush has allowed 131 lethal injections over his 5 1/2 years as governor of the nation's busiest execution state.

McGinn and his attorneys want additional DNA testing, which they say will exonerate him. Although DNA evidence was used by prosecutors to help convict McGinn of the May 1993 rape and ax slaying of Stephanie Flanary, his lawyers contend more sophisticated testing now exists to aid his case.

Bush did not act until McGinn's appeals were exhausted. Both the U.S. Supreme Court and the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals refused to grant McGinn a stay Thursday.

Because Bush was campaigning out of state, the reprieve actually was issued by state Sen. Rodney Ellis, a

ACROSS THE NATION

Nation: Storms over the upper Midwest caused flooding across Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa on Thursday while much of the West basked in summer-like temperatures.

The frontal boundary extended from New England west to the Great Lakes and central Plains, bringing severe thunderstorms from Minnesota to Indiana, and causing extensive flooding in southern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

By Thursday afternoon, Rochester, Minn., had reported 5.13 inches of rainfall, and Harmony, Minn., had 5.71 inches. Residents of about 25 homes in Spring Valley, also in southeast Minnesota, had to be evacuated because a creek flooded its banks. Some highways were closed in the Midwest because of standing water or mudslides, but most had reopened in the afternoon.

The storms moved east into Indiana, Ohio, northwestern Pennsylvania and western New York state Thursday afternoon.

Fair and mild conditions dominated the South and mid-Atlantic states. The western United States was fair and dry.

Democrat from Houston, who has approved three previous executions. As president pro-tem of the Texas Senate, Ellis constitutionally was in charge because Lt. Gov. Rick Perry, a Republican, also was out of the state.

"Throughout this process, I have been in close contact with the governor's office and we agree that a reprieve is unnecessary in this case," Ellis said. "I sincerely believe in the principle of swift and sure punishment, but our paramount concern must always be that justice is done," he added. "In my view, it is in the best interests of justice to delay Mr. McGinn's execution and permit new DNA testing."

Despite the anticipated reprieve, Texas prison officials had prepared for the execution of McGinn, who had even eaten what was to be his final meal: a double-meat cheeseburger, french fries and a Dr Pepper, which he ate in a smug look a few feet from the death house.

Earlier, he spent more than 3.5 hours meeting with relatives, then was taken at midday from the Terrell Unit near Livingston, about 45 miles to the east, to the Huntsville Unit, where executions are carried out.

The McGinn case illustrates a heightened national debate over the death penalty, which Bush favors. Illinois Gov. George Ryan, a Republican like Bush, imposed a moratorium on executions in January amid concern innocent people were on death row.

Bush, however, has rebuffed calls for a moratorium in Texas, where the 218 executions since 1982 account for more than one-third of all executions in the country since the Supreme Court allowed capital punishment to resume in the mid-1970s. Virginia is next with 76.

During his tenure as governor, Bush refused in 1998 to block the lethal injection of Karla Tucker, the first execution of a Texas woman since the Civil War era. A second woman, Betty Lou Beets, was executed in February, with Bush abandoning the GOP presidential primary campaign to return to Texas to sign off on her punishment.

Bush's likely Democratic opponent, Vice President Al Gore, said Thursday that Bush had a difficult decision but that of slant must not be viewed in terms of politics. "I don't know the facts of the Texas case, but I think that DNA and DNA testing is a valuable new tool that can provide new evidence in a lot of cases," Gore said.

Bush proposes cooperation in land conservation

SAND HARBOR STATE PARK, Nev. (AP) — George W. Bush Thursday proposed tax incentives for private conservation efforts and more money for federal programs to promote preservation instead of simply placing land off-limits by federal order.

Standing on the shores of Lake Tahoe on a crisp, late-spring day, the Republican presidential contender said his five-point proposal would place oversight of conservation efforts where it properly belongs.

He criticized the Clinton-Gore administration, which he said has steadily increased the government's grasp on forests, monument properties and seashores. "It's Washington-centered mind-set breeds resentment and it breeds needless conflict," Bush said. "It's time to build conservation partnerships," he said, among the federal government, state governments, local communities and private landowners.

The governor said that in his home state of Texas, "we have succeeded not by antagonizing people but by inviting folks to become part of the solution."

In particular, Bush proposed to give a 50-percent tax break on capital gains incurred when private landowners sell property for conservation purposes, and to abolish the inheritance tax so landowners won't be encouraged to sell property to developers in order to pay taxes.

"Our philosophy is we trust local folks to make the right decisions for their community in which they live," Bush said. "Somewhat the mentality of Washington is 'we know better.'"

Workers show video to support allegations of live cattle skinning

SEATTLE (AP) — The state Attorney General's office is reviewing video footage of cattle being skinned alive, following calls by an animal-welfare group and employees of the IBP Wallula plant for an investigation.

IBP said it already has taken steps to address any problems.

As many as 30 percent of the cattle slaughtered have made it through the IBP plant's "knocking box" conscious, struggling as they were skinned and processed, two workers from the plant alleged Wednesday at a Seattle news conference sponsored by The Humane Farming Association.

The employees of the plant south of Kennewick alleged the cattle were mistreated because of pressure to work rapidly. Their video footage showed cattle being skinned alive as they were dragged through a line.

"The line needs to continue whether or not the cow is hung alive. The workers know that if they stop the line they can be fired," worker Adelaido Ramirez said.

A total of 17 employees have signed affidavits alleging cruel conditions.

ment in the West.

Kitzhaber and Raciocito were joined on the panel by former Idaho Gov. Phil Batt, former Utah Gov. Norm Bengert, Mike O'Callaghan, former Nevada governor and current executive director of the Las Vegas Sun, and Jay Shilley, editor of the Salt Lake Tribune.

Using the 1990 endangered species listing of the spotted owl as an illustration, Kitzhaber said the rhetoric surrounding current resource debates results only in bitterness. That's the case in the debate over dam breaching, benefit endangered salmon, the designation of national monuments by the Clinton administration or even the question of whether the federal or state governments would manage public lands better.

"The polarization literally tore communities apart," Kitzhaber said. "We are going to have to move beyond the cynicism and debate the issues on a higher plane."

Raciocito said the environmental debate had become "polluted" by intentional divisive rhetoric, and the debate should not be decided by who has the most political pull.

"That's not democracy — that's a jungle," he said. "More openness suggests more positioning for success."

The current debate over the Clinton administration's roadless initiative is a case in point, Raciocito said.

"That debate got started off completely on the wrong foot," he said.

The administration's secrecy in carrying out its plans, and the lack of local control for Forest Service officials in the region, made the debate too sensitive to be meaningful.

Raciocito said the administration may have a point with its roadless argument, but he said he would support designating the areas listed in Montana as roadless. But because of the administration's behind-the-scenes dealing, distrust might be too great to overcome.

"I don't believe there is any evilly intentioned people on either side of these issues, whether Democrat or Republican," he said. "There's hope for making decisions we can all live with."

But openness and involving local officials are key, he said.

"It's better to have the decision made in Boise — not in Washington, D.C.," he said.

Raciocito blamed much of the polarization on the media, which seeks out the viewpoints of the extremes on issues to the detriment of those holding more moderate positions.

Because of the emotions over the roadless dispute by environmental protection groups and the confusing matrix of land management agencies that often contradict one another, the panelists said the West is likely facing an uphill battle to resolve the issue. All the panelists agreed a simplification of the federal land management hierarchy would make things much less confusing.

"But it's a long reach to get rid of all these little fiefdoms," Bengert said.

Court agrees with government, denies asylum hearing for Elian

ATLANTA (AP) - A federal appeals court sided with the government Thursday and denied an asylum hearing for Elian Gonzalez - a ruling that could send the 6-year-old Cuban refugee survivor back to Cuba with his father within weeks.

A three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that Elian must stay in the United States for at least two weeks to give his Miami relatives a chance to appeal. Their lawyer said they would take their case to the Supreme Court within 10 days.

However, Elian's father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, pleaded with the Miami family to end the court battle so father and son could "finally go back home together." The father came to the United States to reclaim his son in April.

"Make no mistake about what happened today," said the father's lawyer, Gregory Craig. "This case has been decided, and in our view there is longer any doubt about the ultimate outcome."

Outside the Miami relatives' home in Little Havana, where Elian lived for more than four months until he was taken by armed federal agents and reunited with his father, protesters yelled and wept over the ruling.

About 100 people gathered and vowed to continue their fight to keep the boy in the United States.

Clinton says historic Middle East peace agreement is 'within view'

LISBON, Portugal (AP) - President Clinton said Thursday that a historic Middle East peace agreement is within reach for Israel and the Palestinians but only if both sides agree "to do things that they have not done in the past."

He directed Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to the Middle East next week to try to bridge the gulf between the two sides.

"This is tough work," Clinton said. "If it were easy, somebody would have done it a long time ago. But actually, it is within view now."

Clinton, who hopes to win a place in history as a Mideast peacemaker, announced Albright's mission after meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak. Before their talks, Barak complained in unusually blunt terms that Palestinian negotiators were dragging their feet. Clinton said he will meet soon in Washington with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

In Gaza Thursday, Arafat said it was Israel that was stalling the talks, not the Palestinians. "They are the side that is wasting time and not moving toward peace," Arafat said.

Barak and Arafat face a Sept. 13 deadline for reaching a full accord on the divisive issues of Palestinian independence, including borders, the fate of Palestinian refugees and the future of Jewish settlements, as well as the status of Jerusalem. They failed to meet deadlines in February and May for framework agreements outlining an overall settlement.

"We are dealing with the most fateful issues there are between Israelis and the Palestinians," a senior administration official said.

Clinton praised Barak and Arafat for their courage and vision but said they would have to make hard concessions.

"They could do it and I believe they will do it," he said, "and I'm going to do my best to help them do it."

Albright will fly to the Mideast from Ukraine, the last stop on Clinton's weeklong European tour, which includes a summit in Moscow with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Bush action could send message of compassion

By Ron Fournier
 The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In 1992, then-Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton left the campaign trail to oversee the execution of a cop killer. The decision drew criticism from liberal groups but helped the Democrat shed his party's soft-on-crime image and move toward the political middle.

New Texas Gov. George W. Bush stands poised to support a temporary reprieve to a death row inmate after allowing 131 executions an act that may appear to move him toward the political middle.

"At the end of the day, this action can leave a developing and emerging Bush image of a rather callous approach to the death penalty," said Democratic consultant Paul Begala, who was part of Clinton's 1992 braintrust.

Bush, the presumptive GOP presidential nominee, said he early Thursday was "more likely" to grant convicted child killer Ricky Nolen McGinn a one-time 30-day reprieve as defense attorneys seek DNA testing of crime scene evidence.

McGinn's case is part of a larger political drama with new science reshaping the national debate over capital punishment. It also handed Bush an unexpected opportunity to put his "pragmatic conservatism" philosophy to work and acquit himself for early missteps on the subject of capital punishment.

Bush jumped at the chance, signaling his intention before an appeals court could make his position mute by granting the reprieve on its own.

Bush has been criticized for running a busy death chamber while calling himself compassionate; there were 35 executions last year and 19 so far this year, including one Wednesday. At least seven executions are scheduled for June.

Bush has spared only one death row inmate.

Rejecting pleas from the Vatican, Bush refused two years ago to keep Karla Tucker from becoming the first woman put to death in Texas since the Civil War.

In a magazine interview during the GOP primaries, Bush was quoted as mocking Tucker's plea for a reprieve. He also raised eyebrows by chuckling - nervously, supporters said - when asked in a debate about inequalities in death penalty cases.

And on Thursday, Bush chose to remain on the campaign trail instead of returning to Texas to grant the reprieve. With Bush out of state, that power transferred to Senate president pro tem Rodney Ellis, a liberal Democrat who had not discussed the case with Bush.

"I'm not willing to say Governor Bush is making this a political issue," Begala said, criticizing Bush for not returning home. "What bothers me more is this will remind us of his cavalier attitude toward the death penalty."

Begala was working for Clinton in 1992 when the candidate interrupted his presidential campaign to be on call for the execution of Ricky Ray Rector, a 40-year-old man who defense attorneys said was mentally incompetent. Rector shot himself in his head after killing a police officer.

Arkansas law did not require Clinton to be in the state for the execution. Critics said he was using Rector to redefine himself and his party.

In a speech to a predominantly black audience shortly after the execution, Clinton displayed his knack for using wedge issues like the death penalty to prove himself a "new Democrat" without alienating his party's liberal constituencies.

"Last night, I thought of Mr. Rector and also of Robert Martin, the police officer who was killed in cold blood... and I prayed that I had not made the wrong decision," Clinton said.

Equally adept at finding the political middle ground, Bush brags about his death penalty record while promising to support DNA testing to "erase any doubts" about a condemned inmate's guilt.

"This will help him with moderate Democrats, moderate Republicans and ticket-splitters," said Mike Lawrence, associate director of the Public Policy Institute at Southern Illinois University.

Bush and Democratic rival Al Gore support the death penalty, as do two-thirds of the public. But polls suggest growing concern over whether innocent people are put to death, with advances in DNA testing raising questions about the certainty of capital murder convictions.

Latin jazz king Tito Puente dies at 77

NEW YORK (AP) — Tito Puente, the exuberant percussionist and bandleader who rose to stardom during the mambo craze of the 1950s and paved the way for Latin musicians from Carlos Santana to Marc Anthony, has died. He was 77.

Puente, who had undergone treatment recently for a heart ailment, died at a hospital Wednesday.

Decades before the current "Latin explosion" of Anthony, Ricky Martin and Jennifer Lopez, Puente — a contemporary of the Desi Arnaz — was driving audiences to the dance floor with his wide-eyed, energetic style and influential sound. He created his own jazz by blending Latin rhythm with the Big Band stylings of Tommy Dorsey and Count Basie.

In a six-decade career that began at age 13, the New York City native recorded more than 100 albums and won five Grammys. His most recent Grammy, best tropical Latin performance for "Mambo Birdland," came in February.

"The excitement of the rhythms and the beat make people happy," he said in an Associated Press interview in 1997. "We try to get our feelings to the people, so they enjoy it."

Puente crossed over before anyone coined the expression, collaborating with jazz artists such as Dizzy Gillespie and Lionel Hampton. He wrote the song "Oye Como Va" years before it became an enormous rock hit for Santana.

He performed with various symphonies, and brought his band to the White House for Presidents Carter, Reagan and Bush.

Latin bandleader Tito Puente, shown here in February 1992, rode to fame on the heels on the 1950s mambo craze. He died Wednesday at New York University Medical Center, his agent said. He was 77.

Puente transcended music and entered pop culture. Bill Murray's character in "Stripes" hailed Puente's genius, as did TV's Lisa Simpson. Puente performed the theme song for "The Cosby Show" and played himself in the 1992 movie "Mambo Kings."

In 1997, he received a National Medal of Arts from President Clinton.

"Tito was for me more than family," said Cuban-born singer Celia Cruz, a longtime friend and collaborator. "Our world is in mourning because one of the souls of Latin music has died." Gloria Estefan, in a statement with husband Emilio, praised Puente as "a pioneer in the music industry ... an inspiration for artists and music lovers alike." "Tito said to us recently that his music was not only the story of who he was, but also the pride and the passion of a people rejoicing in who they are," the Estefans said. "There are no better words with which to say goodbye."

Ernest Anthony Puente Jr. was born April 20, 1923, in Harlem, the oldest child of Puerto Rican parents — a factory foreman and his wife. His mother called her son Ernestito — Little Ernest — then shortened the name to Tito.

Initially, Puente was a Fred Astaire-style dancer, a serious ankle injury in a bicycle accident focused his attention on music.

Over the decades, the hard-working Puente became an international star, taking his band around the world. In 1992, his 100th album — "The Mambo King 100th LP" — was nominated for a Grammy.

Puente is survived by his wife, Margie, two sons and a daughter.

Suspect's mom calls shooting 'an accident'

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Polly Powell rushed home when she saw reports of a shooting at her son's school on television. She knew 13-year-old Nathaniel Brazill had been sent home for throwing water balloons and she was concerned for his welfare.

He wasn't there when she arrived. Soon, the phone started ringing off the hook as the nation learned that her son was suspected of killing a teacher he "loved."

"My sister called and said 'Polly, you need to go to the police department and see if they got that boy.' It never dawned on me that this could be my child to do such an act," Powell told The Associated Press in her first interview since the May 26 shooting.

Brazill has been accused of killing 35-year-old Lake Worth Community High School teacher Barry Grunow.

Police say Brazill shot Grunow in the face with a .25-caliber semiautomatic pistol he had stolen from his grandfather's house.

After being sent home, Brazill returned to the school and went to Grunow's classroom, where he asked Grunow if he could talk to two girls in the class, police said.

When the English teacher shoed him away, Brazill pulled the gun from his pocket and fired, authorities said. A surveillance camera caught the shooting on tape, but police haven't released the video.

The case is scheduled to go before a Palm Beach County grand jury on June 12, said Brazill's lawyer, Assistant Public Defender Powell Berman.

'This was just an accident, a tragedy.'

— Polly Powell, mother of 13-year-old shooting suspect Nathaniel Brazill

Powell rushed to the police department. She kept asking an officer if her son was there. When he said yes, she began trembling and shaking, saying no, it couldn't be her child. Officers took her to a room where Brazill sat alone.

The teen began crying when his mother walked in. All she could do was hold him, Powell, said.

The mother said the shooting had to be an accident.

"He loved Mr. Grunow. They were best friends," said Powell, at work at an Episcopal retirement center for the last 11 years. "You don't just shoot your best friend. This was just an accident, a tragedy."

Kraft recalls day's worth of products

NORTHFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Kraft Foods said Thursday it is recalling six varieties of Light n' Lively and Breakstone's cottage cheese because they may contain E. coli bacteria.

The company said there have been no reports of illness linked to any of the products.

The recall involves one day's production. The cottage cheese was distributed nationally but primarily in states east of the Mississippi.

The six recalled products all have an expiration date and plant code 06 JUN 00 W on the bottom. 16- and 24-ounce cups of Breakstone's Free small-cup fat-free cottage cheese; 16- and 24-ounce cups of Breakstone's 4 percent milkfat small-cup smooth and creamy cottage cheese; 24-ounce cups of Light n' Lively Free fat-free cottage cheese with calcium; and 24-ounce cups of Light n' Lively 1 percent milkfat low-fat cottage cheese with calcium.

The company said the Food and Drug Administration found E. coli in several samples of Breakstone's Free cottage cheese products were made on the same line and are being recalled as a precaution.

Shoppers who bought any of the recalled products should return them to the store for a refund.

E. coli infection often causes severe diarrhea and abdominal cramps.

Seventh-grader wins national spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaking slowly but confidently, George Abraham Thamy of Maryland Heights, Mo., correctly spelled "demarche" — a step or maneuver — to win the 2000 Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee.

The 12-year-old, who is schooled at home, tied for fourth in 1998 and finished in a third-place tie last year.

Follow seventh-grader Sean Conroy of Newark, Calif., misspelled "apropriaic" — designed to avert evil. George then came through with "propaedeutic," which means preparatory study or instruction, to survive the round and eliminate his final rival.

That set the stage for him to

get "demarche" right.

"It's not really the cash prizes and the trophies. It was really the words," said George, explaining why he returned to the spelling bee for a third time.

First prize is $10,000, an encyclopedia set and a $1,000 savings bond.

Spelling is not George's only talent. Last week, he placed second at the National Geography Bee, also in Washington. He won $15,000 in that contest.

HUD: Landlord harassed couple

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Housing and Urban Affairs Department has filed housing discrimination charges on behalf of a non-tenant — the boyfriend of a tenant who claimed her landlord intimidated them because they are a biracial couple.

The charges — the first of their kind to be pressed by HUD — accuse landlord Thomas Neil of Starke, Fla., of threatening the couple, raising the woman's rent and using racial slurs to harass them. A civil suit, filed on behalf of the couple by the Justice Department, will be tried in federal court.

Carole Hernandez, who is white, and her boyfriend, Gilbert Wright, who is black, brought the complaint in 1998. Hernandez said the intimidation began shortly after she moved to the single-family home in August 1997.

A golden parachute for a fallen college prez

It sure pays to have friends in high places. Just ask the erstwhile president of Lewis-Clark State College, James Hottos.

After five years as president of Lewis-Clark, Hottos resigned last month. His search for a replacement job wasn't panning out, so he got in touch with University of Idaho President Robert Hoover. Hottos had been a political science professor before taking over at Lewis-Clark, and Hoover rustled up a position in UI's political science department.

Such a deal Hottos will be getting. He'll earn $96,780 in the first year of his five-year contract. After the first year, his salary will drop to $70,000. He earned $110,000 a year at Lewis-Clark, but he was the president there; in Moscow, he'll be a mere lecturer in a non-tenure-track position. As such, he'll still earn more than many of UI's tenured full professors.

The decision to hire Hottos bypassed the usual channels, such as UI's political science chairman and the dean of UI's College of Letters and Science. "He certainly has the credentials to do a number of things in political science," Dean Kurt Olsson told the Lewiston Morning Tribune. "But we haven't been able to talk to him yet." Did UI really need another poly-teacher? Or did the State Board of Education need a graceful exit for Hottos?

The attorney for the state board, along with a couple of board members, denies that the board was involved.

"He came to the board and resigned," said lawyer Kevin Satterlee. He added that it was Hoover who offered Hottos a job at UI, not the board.

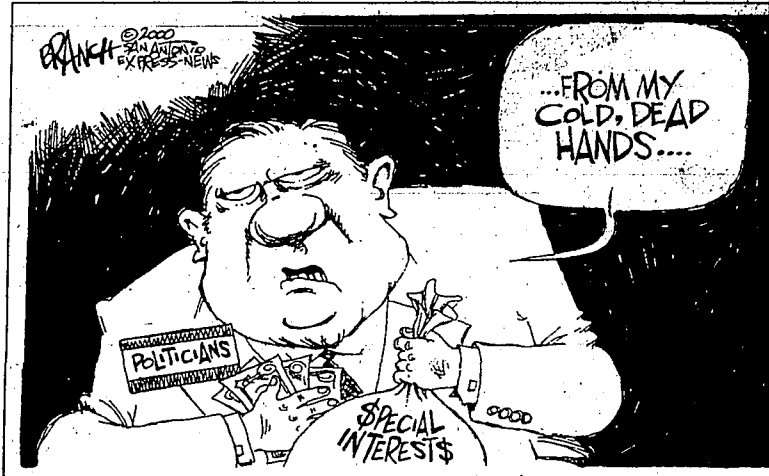

That may be. But Hottos' new job looks like a sweetheart deal engineered at the highest level.

Here's the obvious synopsis: Things turn sour for the president of an Idaho college, but he can't find a comparable job elsewhere. So his colleagues in the higher education system arrange a soft landing at the university up the road.

The upshot is that Lewis-Clark gets a new president, the former president gets a regular paycheck while he shops for another administrative job, and taxpayers get the bill.

The final insult is that UI won't pay all of Hottos' salary. The State Board of Education would condone this shell game.

The decision to hire former Lewis-Clark State College President James Hottos as a lecturer at the University of Idaho looks like a sweetheart deal engineered at the highest level.

Open meetings can be detriment to public

Your recent decision to send a reporter to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center retreat and the subsequent editorial is a perfect example of the law of unintended consequences. The public meeting law would seem to make perfect sense at first blush; however, when implemented, there are definite downsides.

At regular board meetings, every comment by board members who, after all, dedicated and non-compensated citizen volunteers, are carefully monitored by the media. This does tend to inhibit frank discussion and brainstorming simply because if members say something that they realize later to be less than brilliant, they hate to feel embarrassed in public. A good example of this is the comment you reported that was made by one of our new commissioners that would have amounted to a "sick tax" of the hospitalized. (I would expect it was just an off-the-cuff remark with no particular forethought.) A retreat where administrators, board members and commissioners can freely brainstorm, toss out and reject or accept ideas, as well as learn more about the intricacies of running a multimillion-dollar institution, is invaluable. This does not mean that decisions need to be or are made on these kind of occasions.

Another issue that The Times-News seems to forget is that, like it or not, MVRMC is a big business. (I should think that you, as well as the citizens of this area, would like it to be as successful as possible.) This means that it functions in a highly competitive market with private institutions such as St. Luke's, Saint Alphonsus and the Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital, to mention a few.

Although the lack of a level playing field where MVRMC's deliberations are made in public is usually not a major handicap, there are occasions where the potential loss can be significant. As an example, during my tenure as board chairman, a group of businessmen wished to approach the board with a proposal that might have benefited the hospital to the tune of several million dollars over a period of time. However, due to the fact that they required total confidentiality during any and all discussions and/or negotiations and that we were not in a position to do that without violating the statute, we had to bow out.

However, if The Times-News feels that the open meeting law should be applied to all public institutions at any and all meetings, and as a newspaper is a quasi-public institution in that it prescribes one member's love life, through its editorial page, and if it feels what's good for the goose is good for the gander, then I would suggest that all meetings of its editorial staff be open to the public, to see any and all discussions and deliberations that go into your editorial opinions. Perhaps the Open Meeting Law could be modified to include newspapers?

just a few minutes. Also there was bleach in that closet with my daughter. Door open or not. The aide had her back turned away from my daughter. By the way, how can the room be sound-proof with the door open?

I believe that my daughter is going to do a lot better now that she is out of your program. Her teachers' aides at Harrison never tried to get me to up her doses of medication or tried to talk me into trying a new drug on her. If anyone wants to really know how my daughter was treated at Morningside, I urge you to call the L.R.C. Room at Morningside and ask to see the tape where she is upset and biting her arms and they just keep following her around sticking the camera in her face for over 10 minutes. Anyone who has dealt with an autistic child would know that only upset them more.

Keep bones and muscles healthy

Imagine a time in the future when spinal cord disease and arthritis are not necessarily life-long ailments. When cellular biology makes it possible to cure most musculoskeletal diseases by regenerating nerve cells, cartilage and bones.

Today in America, injuries to our bones, joints and muscles are responsible for employees' 147 billion work-loss days and children's 21 billion school-loss days. One out of every seven people has a musculoskeletal condition, which costs the U.S. $215 billion annually. And as the population ages, significant increases in the number of people with hip fractures, arthritis, osteoporosis and other bone or muscle disorders are projected.

Now the good news! This is the first year of the Bone and Joint Decade (years 2000-2010), an exciting international initiative to raise awareness of the prevalence and impact of musculoskeletal disorders. The United Nations, World Health Organization, the Veterans, 22 countries, more than 800 organizations and patient-advocacy groups and 26 U.S. states have endorsed this effort. These groups have come together to raise awareness of the opportunities in injury prevention, treatment and research for all people affected by musculoskeletal conditions.

On June 7, a letter from President Clinton recognizing the decade and importance of the initiative will be presented to the U.S. Bone and Joint Decade Inaugural Meeting in Washington, DC.

Decide today to maximize your musculoskeletal health potential. Everyone can improve the quality of their musculoskeletal health with proper exercise, diet, safe lifting techniques and safety belt use, according to the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, which is a supporter of the Bone and Joint Decade. Even people with osteoporosis and osteoarthritis can benefit from regular, moderate amounts of physical activity.

For further information, check the Bone and Joint Decade website, which the Academy has launched a national injury prevention campaign, "Prevent Injuries. American!" For the latest information, check the Academy's website: www.aanos.org or call (800) 824-BONES (2663).

Will 'sexploitation' ever stop?
As I scanned the May 19th edition of the Times-News I noticed the largest ad in the movie section promoted "Road Trip". The description of this movie tells readers it is about "a gang of four college guys who embark on a wild road trip to preserve one member's love life. Josh's predicament a videotape that shows him having sex with another girl is accidentally sent to his girlfriend. Josh enlists his friends to help retrieve the tape before it reaches his sweetheart hundreds of miles away."

After looking at the ad associated with this movie I have a question for local business people. When are you going to draw a line on so-called entertainment that takes the beautiful gift of our human sexuality and trashes it in the gutter of the lowest common denominator for the sake of the dollar?

While Hollywood coats the bitter pill of immorality with carefully picked and brushed accents and so-called sophisticated humor, people in the real world of our communities are left to deal with the disrespect fostered toward people, primarily young ladies, we care about by this kind of garbage. Are any of your parents of daughters who you want to be viewed respectfully by the young men they associate with? For one, am I really tired of this kind of exploitation made available in the name of entertainment and whatever other excuses are offered by the "licentious left"?

Singer Julie Miller sings a song about being sick and tired of sex being used and abused for commercial purposes. Business people, especially theater owners and managers, and the advertising media, take a stand for decency on this issue. Please do not continue to facilitate this coarse, crude, sexual exploitation being offered up by Hollywood's pornographers.

Skate park would be an asset

We often hear that timing is everything, sometimes for our good and often not so! An example is what has happened regarding the skateboard park and the unfortunate incident at the Lynwood Shopping Center.

Last year I became involved with HealthNet in several areas of the Magic Valley. As I met with youth and leaders it was evident that the youth, especially the young men, had a great interest in the creation of a skateboard park. This was true in the Mini-Cassia area where the city of Burley encouraged them. Again, in Twin Falls, the city recreation was optimistic and advised them that a local skateboard park association was at work on plans. The youth were most encouraged and so were HealthNet leaders.

It was about this time that the Lynwood Mall incident happened - very unfortunate in more ways than one, especially timing. Since then I have visited the skateboard park in Boise, located under the connector and took time to walk around, observe its youth and talk with some of the young people involved. I was amazed at the skill of the participants, the willingness of the skillful ones to help new beginners, the way they studied each others' equipment and safety equipment. The youth were helpful to me as I explored their territory. I came away convinced such a facility could be an asset to any community.

I encourage the leadership of the Magic Valley to become informed of the benefits of having skate parks in their recreation programs. Recognize that the young people who caused the incident in Twin Falls made a mistake but the entire youth community should not be penalized for the mistakes of a few. I feel certain that the youth and adults who are involved in the HealthNet programs will support the skateboard association and the city recreation programs who move forward in developing facilities and leadership to help build another fine recreation program we can all be proud of.

Aides didn't help my autistic child

My name is Margie Black. I am the mother of the autistic child that was placed in a janitor's closet for time-out at Morningside School. I would like to respond to the aides of the L.R.C. Room. If you think my mother's accusations are inappropriate, I have some facts for you. Six weeks into the school year, I called for an I.E.P. meeting because I could see my daughter was very unhappy. Her school work was not up to her potential. She would scream "no school - no school" when I tried to get her ready. My husband and I wanted her transferred back to Harrison then but we were talked into giving this program a chance. I still regret not pushing for a transfer then. I fought with my daughter every day to get her to go to school. Now that she is back at Harrison she wants to go to school. Harrison does not have a closet for time-out. Her teachers report there were little transition problems the first day but no major school shaking incidents.

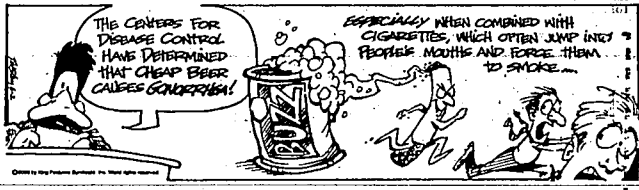

I would also like to ask why I was never told about this time-out space in the L.R.C. Room. Why was the closet kept a secret? As for my daughter only being in there a short time, hal I have had three people who work at Morningside School call and inform me that it was at least every other day and for longer than

Milosevic again lashes out at foes

Yugoslavian leader seizes control of transport company in capital

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Two weeks after seizing a non-government TV station, Slobodan Milosevic's administration lashed out again Thursday by taking over an opposition-run public transport company in the capital.

The decision to take the Belgrade City Transport Company from the hands of the opposition-run municipal authorities followed a four-day strike by private carriers which brought public transport in the capital to a virtual halt.

The incapable and irresponsible municipal government in Belgrade has blocked all vital public services in the capital and created a complete chaos," a government statement on the takeover said.

"The total collapse of public transport in Belgrade has jeopardized living and working conditions of all the citizens, as well as functioning of enterprises, schools, hospitals," said the statement carried by the official Tanjug news agency.

The mild response to the media takeover obviously encouraged Milosevic to move against the transport firm.

In a sign of further rift among Milosevic's opponents, key opposition leader Zoran Djindjic admitted Thursday that "opposition unity so far has been mostly rhetorical, and even that has been jeopardized."

Serbia's opposition leaders — formally united in their struggle to oust Milosevic — have been unable to mount a credible challenge to the autocratic president, who has moved to silence critics and independent media.

"The regime is continuing with violence which is destroying the legal order," warned Belgrade's deputy mayor Milan Botic. "We fear this government act could have much more serious consequences than it seems at first."

Announcing the takeover of public transport company, Milosevic's spokesman Nikola Salovic said "the work (of the transport company) involved a lot of criminal deeds."

The opposition took control over Belgrade and dozens of other Serbian cities at municipal elections in 1996. When Milosevic's allies tried to annul the opposition victories, they triggered more than three months of street protests.

In the past four years, Milosevic's government has sought to undermine the opposition rule in Belgrade and other cities.

The takeover was part of a campaign by President Milosevic's government to discredit the opposition ahead of municipal elections due by the end of the year.

Two weeks ago, the government seized Belgrade's main Studio B television and B2-92 radio. The move triggered few days of protests but also revived traditional differences between Serbia's opposition leaders who could not agree on what to do in response.

Business tycoon Berezovsky defies Putin on control plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Almost alone in public opposition to President Vladimir Putin, Russian tycoon Boris Berezovsky on Thursday denounced a Kremlin plan to tighten control over the nation's regions as a move away from democracy.

"What Putin is trying to do will lead to dictatorship," Berezovsky told a news conference. "It's a revival of the Soviet-style system of government."

Putin, who was elected president in March, has made strengthening federal control over Russia's independent-minded provinces a top priority.

He says the plan is necessary to fix the ailing economy and keep Russia from breaking up into pieces.

Authorities shoot man, save kids

WASSERBILIG, Luxembourg (AP) — Clutching dolls and cradled in their parents' arms, 25 children returned home safely Thursday after police stormed a day care center where they had been held hostage and shot their heavily armed captor in the head.

"Everything is over. Everybody is fine," said Jose Lello, a Portuguese official who came to Luxembourg because many of the children held hostage were Portuguese.

The 30-hour standoff ended when authorities lured the hostage-taker into the open with promises of a television interview and a marksman opened fire, critically wounding the man.

Immediately afterward, police moved in and two helicopters flew low near the building. The 25 children and three teachers who had been held hostage were rushed out unharmed.

The call then went out over police radio, telling dozens of anxious parents who had gathered nearby that their children were safe. The children, ranging in age from 2 to 11, were quickly taken to a crisis center where the parents had waited through the night.

"It was indescribable the happiness and joy expressed by families when they were united with their children," Lello said.

Onlookers broke into wild applause when the first parents and children left the crisis center. Most of the children looked baffled by all the attention.

One boy in a gym suit was carried in his father's arms. Another father choked back tears as he and his young son headed home.

Police and psychiatrists had struggled for most of the day to convince the lone hostage-taker brandishing a gun and grenade to release the captives and drop his demand to fly to Libya. At one point, the 39-year-old man stood by a window in the day care center and waved his gun and grenade beside a picture of a teddy bear.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Teen critical after fall from pickup truck

TWIN FALLS - A teen-ager who fell from a pickup truck was listed in critical condition Thursday at a local hospital.

Travis G. Estep, 18, was in the intensive-care unit at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, where he was airlifted Wednesday night following the accident.

Estep was standing in the back of a 1990 Jeep truck before he fell out around 9 p.m. Wednesday in the Magic Valley Mall parking lot near Taco Bell, a Twin Falls police news release said.

No charges have been filed, and the investigation was continuing.

Man gets seven years in Twin Falls bank robbery

BOISE - A Jerome man convicted of robbing a Twin Falls bank was sentenced Thursday to seven years and three months in federal prison.

Vance D. Caswell, 24, was also ordered by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge to repay more than $54,000 of the $71,000 he stole in the Nov. 9, 1999, heist.

That morning Caswell entered the Key Bank branch at 1665 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. with a pellet gun and two road flares, held employees at gunpoint and duct-taped an employee's hands and eyes.

Caswell escaped and wasn't caught until six weeks later at the Lewiston airport.

Caswell originally faced a maximum of 10 years in prison, but his sentence was reduced because he pleaded guilty and agreed to cooperate in the prosecution of his girlfriend, Misty D. Lorcher.

Lorcher pleaded guilty in federal court last month with failing to report Caswell's bank robbery to authorities. Her sentencing was scheduled for July 24.

Police near conclusion of Home Depot investigation

TWIN FALLS - Police expect to release information today about their investigation into an accident at the Home Depot store that killed a 3-year-old girl.

The Sunday accident at the building-supply store severely injured Janessa Homer, who died the next day at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

The Home Depot was conducting its own investigation, but had no new information to release Thursday.

Day-long ag tour to focus on bettering water quality

TWIN FALLS - Anyone interested in local efforts to improve water quality may want to join a day-long tour today.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce has organized the tour that starts at 6:45 a.m. at the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center, from there participants will be bused to a dairy south of Wendell for breakfast.

The tour's focus will be water quality projects to clean up irrigation return flows and efforts of dairies to manage the nutrients in their manure.

The tour also will include panel discussions on water quality and endangered salmon recovery.

For those interested to join the tour in progress, the lunch program will begin about noon at the Land O Lakes feed plant in Gooding.

About 75 people already have signed up, chamber executive vice president J. Kent Just said.

Water is an important issue to most people locally, and the chamber decided to concentrate its annual ag tours on water, he said.

Limberly cleanup day slated for Saturday

KIMBERLY - Saturday is the day for Kimberly's annual citywide cleanup day. Residents can deposit unwanted objects in Dumpsters that will be located at the city maintenance yard on U.S. Highway 30 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Furniture, large kitchen appliances, water heaters and ordinary debris such as tree limbs may be dumped. Tires, toxic materials such as oils and sprays and refrigerators that haven't had Freon professionally removed will not be taken.

There is no charge for any disposal.

Locals support museum moving plan

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Sitting off Addison Avenue just west of town, the county's historic museum is hardly noticeable. Cars and trucks race by the deteriorated Curry School building.

It's time for the museum to move, say museum volunteers and Twin Falls Centennial Commission members, who are discussing a relocation project.

"There are a number of reasons we would like to see the museum moved into town. For one thing the building is getting old," said Mabel Lamb, a 16-year museum volunteer.

The building was built in the 1920s, and the Twin Falls School District used it. The district sold it to Twin Falls County in 1967. After that county officials made it into a museum.

But traffic has increased along Addison, making it difficult for older museum volunteers to travel to work at the museum, Lamb said.

"We don't mind being in a busy area, it's just that they travel too fast on that highway," Lamb said. "We just feel like we could do a better job in town and we could get more volunteers."

It's six miles out here and back and for some of the older people, they don't want to drive that far out."

Jeff Gooding, the Twin Falls Centennial Commission's chairman, said the commission has discussed moving the museum to downtown.

Moving the museum downtown would provide better access to residents, Gooding said.

"This is really our legacy and we need to preserve it," he said.

But relocation money isn't there yet, nor has a site been found, Gooding said.

There is no cost estimate either.

Various state grants could be available, however, Gooding said.

And the centennial commission could raise money to help pay for relocation costs. The commission has planned fundraising efforts, including selling roses from the Stricker Ranch.

Roses were created from the offspring of a 100-year-old rambling rosebush Lucy Stricker planted back in 1900 on the side of her Hansen area home.

The commission plans to sell the rosebushes to help pay for Twin Falls' birthday celebration in 2004.

Twenty-five bushes are available for purchase, Gooding said.

The commission is trying to figure out how much to sell the roses for.

One idea was to sell 25 for $100 each. Another idea was to get corporate sponsors to donate $1,000 for a rosebush.

The bush would be planted where the sponsor wanted, and the commission would place a plaque in front of each bush explaining its significance and thanking the donor.

The centennial commission has scheduled its July meeting at the museum to further discuss fund-raising efforts and museum relocation.

Cops arrest man in 1975 killing

47-year-old murder suspect had been hiding out near Burley

The Times-News and the Associated Press

RIGBY - A Mexican national, who had been living in Cassia County in recent months, faces a June 12 preliminary hearing in connection with the 25-year-old murder of an eastern Idaho farmer.

Ramiro Cortez Resendez, 47, was formally charged this week with killing Juan Huizar on July 15, 1975, at a ranch near Roberts.

Police reopened the case more than a year ago after a relative of Huizar reported seeing Resendez.

The investigation, inactive for nearly a quarter century, was reopened. The murder warrant, issued for Resendez shortly after the body was found, was reactivated.

Authorities said Resendez fled Idaho for Mexico after the slaying, but then returned. Recently, Resendez had been living with relatives near Burley. He was arrested last week in Boise as he tried to renew his green card with federal immigration agents.

Jefferson County Sheriff Blair Olsen said relatives of Huizar reported seeing Resendez in March 1999. Those relatives contacted Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal, who said Resendez was living somewhere between Burley and Oakley.

"A family member recognized Resendez and went to the sheriff's office and, in turn, they contacted us," Olsen said. "It had not been put to rest in their mind."

Olsen said he was in contact with Crystal shortly after the tip and the two started working again at a case that had been dormant for years. Olsen said he was pleased with the cooperation he received from Cassia County officers.

The short time they were involved, Sheriff Crystal and his deputies were very willing and of tremendous help," Olsen said.

Olsen didn't know where Resendez worked or how long he was in Burley.

The Cassia County relatives, who Resendez had lived with, do not face any charges, Olsen said.

Huizar, 26, also a Mexican national, was found by a foreman for the Linden Buttkofer Ranch in the desert about 10 miles west of Roberts just before sunrise the day after he was killed. He had been stabbed in the head, back and chest.

Investigators have not disclosed any motive for the slaying. Resendez was charged with second-degree murder, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison. He was being held in the Jefferson County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Help goes high-tech

Volunteers get free computer training

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - A group of senior citizens will soon cross the digital divide.

Foster Grandparents, who work in the schools with children who need help, and Senior Companions, who provide friendship to elderly shut-ins, are signing up for College of Southern Idaho computer classes.

The volunteers in these programs are eligible to take three courses at no cost: introduction to computers, introduction to Windows and introduction to the Internet. Classes start July 1.

Maggi Seipel, project director for the foster grandparent and senior companion programs at the Office on Aging on the CSI campus, said lab fees will also be covered. Seniors who take the courses will also have access to a small library.

"We're going to get them beyond looking at the computer like a car they're afraid they'll break and look at it like a TV, which is basically how we look at it, which is why they have no fear," she said. "It's just a TV with buttons, basically."

Seipel said many senior citizens can afford a computer, but don't have access to the knowledge of how to run one.

At least a half-dozen volunteers in the programs own computers handed down from family members - and they just sit there.

"We'll figure out ways that they can access those computers," Seipel said.

For example, a senior volunteer trained in computer knows how to do desktop publishing can volunteer at a senior center and upgrade its newsletter.

'Valleyopolis': Students carve out visions of future

By Karen Bessick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Eighty-six Ketchum fifth-graders have unveiled their vision for the Wood River Valley of tomorrow.

Their version of "Valleyopolis" includes a train that floats on a magnetic track, a veterinary clinic in the shape of a dogbone with curvet windows depicting cats, dogs and birds, and a skate shop whose roof features curves and ramps to test skateboarders.

Merrill Hinrich designed her 7-story IMAX theater in the shape of a popcorn box with popcorn on the roof for insulation. Kaitlin Gasenica crafted a bowling alley with giant bowling pins on the floor and a bowling ball on its round ceiling. Connor Davis eschewed Ketchum's disdain for big, bulky buildings to build a 10-story building topped with a glass pyramid, complete with a revolving door that spins with the flutter of a switch.

And Austyn Butler designed a

NASA tower as tall as he is - to take advantage of the Wood River Valley's dark sky ordinances.

It was all part of a three-month effort, the Young Architects Project at Hemingway Elementary School.

"The kids learned everything starting with how to plikn a community. They started with a blank - raw land, mountains and river and had to decide where to put things," said architect Mark Gasenica, a Ketchum architect who has been helping with the project.

Some of the students' ideas were traditional - such as putting the retail section in the middle of the valley and building residences around it.

But some of these future City Council members and county commissioners thought outside that box.

Mikey Matteson designed a city hall with a hot air balloon on the third and fourth floors. Kirtle - "Noworthy's" house includes an Internet connection room and peace symbol-stained glass skylight. The house sits on stilts over a creek and beaver pond. The proximity of the creek also would give its occupants an opportunity to swing or slide into the water for fun and hull them to sleep with the sound of rushing water.

Remo L. 'Bud' Teasley

Remo "Bud" Teasley, beloved by his family and friends, passed away on Tuesday, May 30, 2000, after a long and courageous battle with brain cancer. Bud was born August 25, 1926, in Satanta, Kansas, to Vern R. and Blanche (Lyon) Teasley. He spent his early years in Kansas and Colorado, moving to Twin Falls in 1939. He graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1944, then served two years in the U.S. Army. On August 23, 1947, Bud married Marjorie A. Nelson of Buhl. They had two daughters, Alyson Renee and Regina Lorraine. "Bud" attended Boise Junior College, the University of Utah, Idaho State University, and the College of Southern Idaho, majoring in business, accounting and economics. He particularly enjoyed literature, poetry, geography, and current events. Bud played trumpet in the First Cavalry Division Band in the Philippines, and later in Japan. After his return to Idaho, Bud played with the Hochstrasser in Boise while attending Boise Junior College, then joined the Wayne Skene Orchestra in Twin Falls in 1950. He and his wife Marjorie established the Teasley Jazz Band in 1948, and played for dances in the local area. They later played with the Alvin Bastian Band, and performed with the CSI Jazz Orchestra for many years. Bud had a great love for music, and improvisation, and was a historian of that musical genre. In addition to the trumpet, he also played vibraphone, and in recent years, learned to play the trombone. His talent and love of music were extended to his children and grandchildren. Bud is survived by his wife, Marjorie, his sister, and her husband, Marian and Vic Graybill, their son, Mark Graybill, and his children, Victor, Jason, Destiny and Jared, all of Twin Falls; his daughter, Renee Martin of Boise, her husband, Alayson Brown, of Portland, Oregon, and Braden Fitzpatrick of Boise, and great-grandchildren, Tyler Jay Fowler, his daughter, the late Teasley of Ilhaca, New York, and her family, J.A. Saul and Alice Saul; and a sister-in-law and brother in law, Margaret and Jack Wilson, of Sun City West, Arizona, and their son, Eric Nelson of Sequim, Washington.

The family extends its sincere thanks to Dr. Deborah Blumenthal of the University of Utah's Huntsman Cancer Center, and her assistants, Julia and Becki, and to Dr. A.C. Emery of Twin Falls for their care and compassion during Bud's illness.

We will miss Bud's wit, wise sense of humor, compassion and generosity to all. A Celebration of Life memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 3, 2000, at the First Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls, with Pastor Paul Reeves officiating. Military rites will be conducted by area veterans. Cremation and services are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. The family suggests donations be given to the CSI Jazz Orchestra or the First Presbyterian Church. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Up in the air: Burley officials, feds disagree on airport timeline

By Ruth Stroefer
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Federal Aviation Administration says irrigation equipment at the Burley Municipal Airport must be moved immediately, but city officials say the job will take at least several weeks.

Burley farmer and Cassia County commissioner Paul Christensen leases the land from the airport to cultivate 85 acres. City administrator Mark Mitton says fixing the problem now would tear up Christensen's crops, and Christensen's lease provides thousands of dollars for the airport.

...sion's irrigation. "Immediately to him and immediately to us are two different things," Mitton said in reference to Watson's instructions. "For local pilot Mike Jones, the issue is more about safety and liability than money. Jones, who contacted the FAA a year ago about his concerns regarding other pilots have complained about the equipment, and the equipment doesn't pose serious safety concerns, because it would be broken off by an off-course airplane.

Watson said the city is required to meet standards the FAA sets. Some equipment might break off if struck by an airplane, but some won't, such as concrete "pieces and concrete cable markers."

"For a few bucks, it's just criminal to go on with these violations. They're trying to get another crop of wheat out before people can be safe."

—Mike Jones, pilot

The FAA disagrees with the city's assertion that the work can wait, and says the equipment should be moved immediately. Bill Watson, FAA section supervisor for Oregon and Idaho, said Thursday. The airport will not receive federal funding until the problems are fixed, Watson said.

Mitton said Thursday it will take another six weeks to remedy the problems, because that is the soonest the city can take action without interrupting Christensafety issues, says the city is ignoring the liability issue to the taxpayers and the safety of the pilots.

"For a few bucks, it's just criminal to go on with these violations," Jones said. "They're trying to get another crop of wheat out before people can be safe."

The safety violations came to light in a 1998 inspection, but the FAA didn't take action until Jones complained.

City and airport officials say no

The airport was in compliance before the FAA changed its regulations, which require objects to be no taller than a certain height and a certain distance from runways and taxiways.

Mitton said the irrigation equipment doesn't pose a significant liability issue.

The airport's insurance provider bases its policies on risk. "It's not a real substantial risk at the Burley airport," Mitton said.

Districts: State's building solution is flawed

BOISE (AP) — Taking money from academics to fix deteriorating schoolhouses will pose constitutional problems for the state, officials say.

A group of school districts made that argument in new documents filed in a legal battle against the state over the condition of Idaho's school buildings.

The case centers on the state Constitution's requirement that the Legislature provide a thorough education for Idaho students. That requirement has been interpreted by the courts as one that ensures quality education as well as safe classrooms.

Laws passed by this year's Legislature offer districts two new types of loans to fix safety problems, but they must be paid back with interest.

Robert Huntley, the former Supreme Court justice who's representing the school districts, called the new laws "a sham" because they provide no new money to fix building problems.

Districts would have to shift money from education to repairs, he said.

Lawyers for the state said all but two of the state's school districts have enough money to fix critical safety problems.

"If you have devoted your resources to going far beyond the minimums in some areas, you will have to cut back your educational program in some areas," said Michael Gilmore, a deputy attorney general handling the case for the state. "But we believe a school district has an obligation to meet all the minimums before they start going above the minimums."

The legal briefs filed by the two sides in the past week complete the steps necessary before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail can rule on the case.

A ruling on the lawsuit is likely in one to three months, but it's also likely to be appealed to the state Supreme Court.

The way Idaho pays for school buildings has become a hot issue in the Legislature in recent years.

Idaho law leaves the full responsibility for school construction to local property taxpayers, who must vote by a two-thirds majority to increase their taxes.

EPA ombudsman begins Superfund inquiry

WALLACE (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency's national ombudsman has tried to reassure Panhandle leaders and residents that he is serious about assessing the agency's handling of environmental cleanup in the Silver Valley.

Almost 60 people squeezed into a room set up to handle 40 to judge their complaints against EPA's actions in the Coeur d'Alene River Basin.

"I think there's a lot of concern that the government hasn't been forthcoming about the approach in the basin," said Ombudsman Bob Martin, who toured northern Idaho Tuesday and Wednesday and met with residents who have been dealing with the federal environmental regulators for the last 15 years.

"If you will get answers to the questions that have gone on here for far too long," Martin said.

He agreed in April to review results of the agency's cleanup action on the original 21-square-mile Superfund site, and now he plans to expand that inquiry to the agency's attempt to list another 1,500 miles of shoreline in the Coeur d'Alene River Basin as a Superfund cleanup target.

That has outraged civic leaders, who fear it will tarnish the community's image and deter tourism.

Martin said he will hold a hearing in August that will include Idaho Sens. Mike Crapo and Larry Craig and U.S. Rep. Helen Chenoweth-Hage.

While the ombudsman has no regulatory authority, recommendations from his office are generally accepted by the agency.

Martin estimates that up to 90 percent of his recommendations have been implemented in the past seven years.

Officials might alter CAFO ordinance

By Ruth Stroefer
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission recommended Thursday loosening a requirement in the confined animal feeding operation ordinance — one locking the CAFO owner into a 20-year contract with a waste management expert.

Commission chairman and local dairyman David Gerratt suggested the change. He started considering the clause in the newly passed ordinance when he had to apply for a CAFO permit.

Gerratt said a 20-year contract will discourage developers.

County attorney Stephen Bywater said a contract is necessary but could be reworked for flexibility. He said he would amend the ordinance to allow for contracts that could be renegotiated with six months notice. A replacement waste operator would need to be identified.

The amendment will go to Cassia County commissioners for approval.

Other suggestions by Gerratt were tabled for further discussion.

Gerratt suggested reducing the $350 permit fee to $150, saying the fee is unreasonably high for an operation that will bring other economic returns.

He also said he would like the county to cover the costs of mailing CAFO permit application notices to surrounding homes.

County administrator Tim Hurst said the permit fee offsets costs to the taxpayer, and he strongly disagreed that the county should bear the burden of notifying residents.

In any other application, notification is the applicant's responsibility. If the county misses one person in its mailing, the application could be thrown out, Hurst said, and the county would be responsible.

Gerratt also suggested eliminating the requirement that CAFO applicants find and plot all the wells within a mile of the waste management area.

He said the Department of Agriculture already handles well contamination, and identifying all the existing wells creates a burden in the application process.

Bywater said identifying the wells helps planning and zoning commissioners and the applicant know the layout of the land when an application comes before the commission.

City approves plan to expand dinosaur park

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A proposed $15 million exhibit hall at the Eccles Dinosaur Park would turn the destination into a year-round regional attraction.

The park now is only open seven months of the year because it lacks indoor exhibits.

"We're so weather dependent. That's one thing we're trying to get away from," said Brooks Brit, park director.

The Ogden City Council unanimously approved the project Tuesday.

Officials said it could increase revenue as much as 66 percent.

The project would be funded by the Ogden Dinosaur Park and Museum Foundation. The foundation's goal is to raise $15 million to build the exhibit hall and $1.55 million for an endowment to fund its operation.

Another $750,000 would be raised for new exhibits.

Planners say the hall would feature full-scale dinosaur skeleton casts, smaller hands-on exhibits and rotating displays from other institutions, such as dinosaur eggs or other specimens. Building completion is planned for June 2003.

Revenue at the six-acre park, if the hall is built, is projected to increase from $457,741 to $738,666 during the next eight years. Park admission would increase 75 percent, from $2 to $3.50 for children and up to about $6 for adults.

The new hall would add to the 2,176-square-foot Dinosaur Discovery Center built in 1993 and the 1,200-square-foot Stewart Education Building, constructed in 1996.

The park also boasts about 80 outdoor, life-size dinosaur displays.

Devin Parnes built a circular hallway in the middle of her house to provide access to any room in the house — an improvement over her current home, which has hallways going every which way. And she designed the garage floor in shades of purple and pink with butterfly designs, because "gray concrete is just too plain."

"These guys had no preconceived ideas, and that was pretty neat," said Tom Dabney, an architectural apprentice who helped with the project.

There are no fast-food burger joints in Valleyopolis. But there were a couple sushi restaurants — one in the shape of a starfish. This is, after all, still the Wood River Valley.

The students took care to protect the environment. There's no Idaho Highway 75. Instead, people travel up and down the valley on a train that runs on magnets.

At train stations they hop on bicycles to ride an extensive network of bike paths, or hop into a hovercraft.

"I don't like all the pollution from the cars. Even a bus system, or a train running up and down the valley would help," Parnes said.

The students made sure there was plenty to do, with a plethora of recreation centers, water parks and a zoo.

Annie Keenan forged through stiff opposition to build a mall after convincing classmates the local shopping would keep Valleyopolis dollars from heading south to Twin Falls.

Notes on the economy

Magic Valley report

Businesses in Twin Falls County Brang up $285.5 million in sales during the quarter that ended March 31.

That's a nice 14.9 percent above the county's $248.4 million in sales in the first quarter of 1999. That year, sales rose by just .6 percent over 1998's first quarter sales, according to Dave McMillin's records. He is Twin Falls city's economic development director.

Those totals exclude sales by businesses that have locations in more than one county. They file just one sales tax return and aren't included in the county numbers. Also excluded from county totals are sales by businesses headquartered outside of Idaho.

In the first quarter, Twin Falls County was No. 6 in the state, trailing behind Ada, by far Idaho's biggest seller; Canyon; Kootenai; Nez Perce; and Bonneville counties.

Other Magic Valley sales totals for January through March 2000, reported by the Idaho State Tax Commission:

- Blaine - $162.1 million.
- Gooding - $103.2 million.
- Jerome - $99.6 million.
- Cassia - $88.5 million.
- Minidoka - $59.5 million.
- Elmore - $47.3 million.
- Lincoln - $3.9 million.
- Camas - $1.6 million.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Organic dairy firm buys British company

LONGMONT, Colo. - Horizon Organic Holding Corp., a producer of organic dairy products and the parent of a Paul dairy, Thursday announced the acquisition of Devon, England-based Meadow Farms Ltd., the leading processor and supplier of organic fluid milk in the U.K.

The purchase includes a processing and packaging plant. Meadow Farms, with sales of about 16 million British pounds ($24 million) for its fiscal year ended May 31, produces private label organic milk for supermarket chains in the U.K., Horizon said. Meadow Farms' sales account for more than 60 percent of total organic fluid milk sales in the U.K. During the past five years, Meadow Farms has enjoyed annual compounded growth of 50 percent, which is expected to continue in the near term, Horizon said.

Meadow Farms in the U.K. has established relationships with leading suppliers and retailers. Horizon said it will continue to supply private label products under existing multi-year contracts to major grocery chains and will build on those relationships to introduce Horizon Organic branded milk in the U.K.

Mark Retzlaff, president of Horizon Organic International, said the acquisition fits with Horizon Organic's Wales-based Rachel's Organic Dairy division, acquired last year. With a larger operating base, the company should ultimately realize lower general and administrative costs due to economies of scale and increased market share, he said.

Gas users can comment on rate-hike proposal

TWIN FALLS - Intermountain Gas Co. customers and others have until June 16 to comment on the utility's request to raise residential natural-gas prices by about 7 percent and commercial users' prices by 31 percent.

Intermountain asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to approve the hikes to cover its increased costs of natural-gas supplies. Last week the PUC decided to process the case using written testimony as the basis for its decision, rather than using public hearings. To get your written comments included, send them to the PUC offices at 472 W. Washington, Boise, ID 83702; by fax to 334-3762, or by e-mail to mwalter@puc.state.id.us.

National trend edges into Magic Valley

More real estate consolidations are coming, some say

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Owners of small real estate firms often extol the virtues of working for themselves. But nationwide a growing number of independents are trading in the freedom of their small businesses to consolidate with firms with more clout and more profits.

Although the trend hasn't made a full appearance in the Magic Valley, it is slowly beginning to show its face, said Olivia Rowe, executive officer for the Greater Twin Falls Association of Realtors.

The reason? Small real estate offices cost as much to operate as larger ones, and the smaller company usually can't afford extensive amenities.

"I think (real estate consolidation) is something that is a trend nationwide," Rowe said. "It's not a huge trend, but it is becoming that way because of the high cost of overhead. You can operate a larger office for about the same dollar amount that it takes to operate a four- to five-person office. Smaller offices are cost prohibitive."

"Twin Falls is always somewhat behind the national trend in anything, but I think consolidation is what we can see in the future," she added.

In May, Coldwell Banker Western Realty sold the majority of its assets to Irwin Realty, bringing that office's staff to 24. And Sabala Realty plans to join Irwin Realty July 1, but it won't bring along all of its associates in the move, Sabala Realty owner Ray Sabala said.

Those consolidations are the largest in Twin Falls, but there have been smaller consolidations, too, Rowe said.

Real estate owners have a number of reasons for joining forces; less overhead, less responsibility and more renew are just a few reasons to consolidate, said John Roberts, who owned Mountain Roberts Real Estate before it consolidated

Gom State Realty agent Sandy Thomas, right, works with now agent Roanne Mancari, left, at the real estate office. One of the benefits of consolidating is having a large support staff, Thomas said. When agents in her new office have questions, they can ask each other.

Homebuyer education program launches Twin Falls effort

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Fear of buying a home is comparable to fear of public speaking and fear of dying, some say.

A new program from the Idaho Partners for Home Buyer Education Inc. aims to help Idahoans come to terms with their fear of buying a home by learning about the process. The classes are held in eight cities, with one class per month since October at the College of Southern Idaho.

That program, officially kicked off in Twin Falls Thursday, helps participants understand such things as choosing a Realtor, qualifying for a mortgage with bad credit or no credit and accessing affordable mortgage programs. "People essentially learn A to Z about home buying with this program," said Sarah Waddell, spokeswoman for Idaho Partners for Home Buyer Education. "A lot of people who are eligible for home ownership don't realize it. This is a chance to get people in and educate them."

Home ownership can bring confusion - something the program tries to clear up.

"Buying a home, in the minds of many people, is a complicated, convoluted matter," said Jim Lau, president of the Idaho Partners for Home Buyer Education. "And then once we get someone in a home we want to keep them there."

The program, funded through a federal grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development and by individual and business sponsors, arose from a task force appointed by former Gov. Phil Batt in 1997. The task force examined the state of affordable housing throughout Idaho and recommended creation of a statewide, uniform homebuyer education program.

"Twin Falls leaders praised the program Thursday.

"These kinds of classes are really critical to educate people," Twin Falls Mayor Elaine Steele said. "When you own a house you have a vested interest in it. My message has always been to get in the market and own your own home."

"I can't tell you what this program will do for the young people," said Jerry Beck, vice president of instruction at the College of Southern Idaho. "The potential of this is absolutely huge."

HARD TIMES FOR ALASKA

After 10 years on top, Alaska Airlines hits turbulence

The Associated Press

SEATTLE - For the past decade, Alaska Airlines has been one of America's best carriers, topping passenger surveys for comfort, service and on-time arrivals.

But now the Seattle-based airline is struggling to rise above a severe patch of turbulence, including a catastrophic crash, a federal investigation of its maintenance practices, and a series of random, bizarre incidents on flights.

"We have had an incredible string of bad luck," Alaska spokesman Jack Evans said. "It's gotten to the point where I get anxious every time the phone rings around here. I just don't know what it's going to be."

The string started on Jan. 31, when Alaska Flight 261 from Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, crashed in the Pacific Ocean off Los Angeles, killing all 88 aboard. Allegations of unsafe maintenance work, which first surfaced in 1998, were thrust back into the spotlight.

Meanwhile, Alaska Airlines

flights have been host to a series of strange occurrences:

• A jet was forced to land after a device that resembles a bomb and is used to test airport security.

Judge declares mistrial in U.S. West lawsuit

The Associated Press

DENVER - It took U.S. West three days to win a discrimination lawsuit filed against it, but only minutes to lose it in a courtroom routine.

A 10-member jury deliberated over parts of three days before returning a verdict and the judge declaring a mistrial. The verdict was required to be unanimous.

"We won everything, and then they polled the jury," said U.S. West lawyer Larry Theris.

Verdicts for U.S. West on claims of negligence and breaches of contract and fiduciary responsibility were allowed to stand.

After a discussion at the bench involving the three dissenting jurors and lawyers from both sides, U.S. District Judge Wiley Daniel said all three believed Herman Malone was discriminated against, but two said the claim had been filed too late. The third juror indicated she had misunderstood the jury instructions.

Black-owned RMES Communications Inc. was the only remaining plaintiff in a class-action suit that claimed the phone company - which also offers local service in the Magic Valley - established a pattern of racial discrimination that resulted in the elimination of black suppliers.

Specifically, company owner Herman Malone said U.S. West reneged on promises to renew his contract because he is black.

U.S. West denied the allegations and said Malone's contract was canceled because his company failed to perform work in a satisfactory manner.

The jury's reversal occurred during the polling process. Polling is a courtroom routine in which the judge asks each juror individually if they agree with the verdict.

Three jurors stunned the courtroom by disagreeing with the verdict.

They cited several discrepancies, saying they were concerned about jury instructions involving the discrimination claim, and if discrimination had occurred, whether it happened too long ago to be claimed in a lawsuit.

The change in opinion by the jurors "reflects the strength of their conviction that discrimination did occur," said Malone's lawyer, Richard Sander. "That's why we're confident that on retrial, RMES and Herman will prevail."

Malone sought up to $3.8 million in the lawsuit.

TCBY sells to private SLC firm

The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - TCBY Enterprises Inc. announced Thursday that its merger with a private investment firm is complete - but did not immediately indicate whether anticipated layoffs at its Little Rock headquarters will take place.

The frozen yogurt company whose name is on a Twin Falls treat shop - announced Feb. 10 that it would fold into a private investment, Capricorn Investors Group III, a firm that already controls several cookie and soft pretzel brands. The $140 million merger was approved by TCBY shareholders April 18.

TCBY spokeswoman Stacy Duckett said previously the company employs about 500 people in Little Rock and some layoffs would come once the merger became final.

Officials from Salt Lake City-based Capricorn did not immediately return phone messages Thursday and Duckett was not immediately available.

Capricorn has said TCBY brands would be paired with brands under its umbrella. The company owns Mrs. Fields and Great American cookies and the Pretzel Time, Pretzelmaker and Hot Sam Pretzel brands.

TCBY has about 22.9 million shares outstanding. The stock went from $3.56 per share before the merger to $5.25 per share the day after the announcement and closed at $5 per share Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange. It did not trade Thursday.

Twin Falls' Western Days is bustin' out all over this weekend

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The youngster is a'turnin' 18 this weekend.

Western Days returns for its summer-sparkling run this weekend, the 18th consecutive June for Twin Falls' homespun hootenanny.

About 25,000 folks congregate in and around City Park for the event, which features the longest parade and the biggest basketball tournament in south-central Idaho, more music than tap your toe at, and food galore.

The format has changed little in the past decade, but the party has gotten progressively bigger.

Nashville recording artist Keith Bryant will headline the hoedown with a 7 p.m. concert tonight in the City Park bandshell, there will be rodeo events Sunday after at the College of Southern Idaho Rodeo Arena, and a street dance and carnival downtown.

It's south-central Idaho's fourth-largest - warm-weather - use that term advisedly - celebration, after the Twin Falls and Cassia county fairs and the Ketchum's Labor Day weekend Wagon Days.

Historic Downtown Twin Falls has scheduled an assessment of activities to coincide with the 135-entry parade on Saturday afternoon, before action shifts to City Park for two days of music, fun and games. As usual, a mock six-gun duel is planned for the corner of Shoshone and Main on Saturday.

The noon parade and the gunplay will be preceded from 8-10 a.m. with double-battered pancake breakfasts downtown and at the Masonic Lodge at the corner of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Falls Avenue.

But the proud heart of Western Days has always been music, and there's an expanded schedule of noteworthy entertainment this year, starting at 10 a.m. in the City Park bandshell on Saturday and continuing until 8 p.m. and resuming Sunday at the same hour and running all afternoon.

Bryant, a 28-year-old Virginian who's a fast-rising independent country singer, will perform for two hours tonight, preceded by the music of...

Big Pink: Planetarium goes to 'The Wall'

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Psychedelic rock 'n' roll, choreographed with three-dimensional images and moving lights, powered by full surround speakers that push 11,000 watts of audio.

Fillmore West in 1979? Nope, the College of Southern Idaho's Faulkner Planetarium.

"Pink Floyd 'The Wall' debuts at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Faulkner planetarium, which is located in the Herrett Centers of Arts and Science. Bearing no resemblance to the group's 1982 movie of the same name, the Faulkner version of The Wall will feature 11 album selections - some 45 minutes worth - of the compilation said to be rock's greatest concept album of all time.

"Using planetarium effects, we'll be showing a few of the themes of the movie, mostly when there is a strong audio component," said Chris Anderson, the Faulkner Planetarium production specialist. "Like when the helicopter comes in, we'll have a moving chopper in Digistar (the planetarium's 3-D effects generator). The same goes for a plane crash and a bomb dropping, other features of the movie that will be recognizable to Pink Floyd fans."

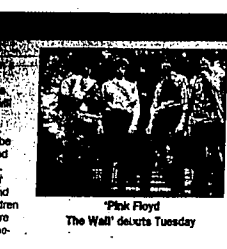

Planetarium manager Rick Greenwald agrees. "People are in for a heck of a ride. We're using lots of motion and some things they've never experienced in the Faulkner Planetarium before. We're re-creating some great new lighting effects in this show."

Sound and fury

However, departing from the themes of the movie that weren't suitable for family viewing, the Faulkner effects creators say the planetarium version will feature lots of "visual abstraction." There is no story line from start to finish. Aside from a few song lyrics that might be somewhat objectionable, Anderson says the production would be about the equivalent of a PG rating in a regular movie.

"A small Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce group just loved a special Pink Floyd show we put together a couple of years ago," Greenwald said. But that was a one-time-only event. Since then, Greenwald and Anderson have gradually re-created a longer, more elaborate production for this show. "The Wall" is the Faulkner's third music-based, pure entertainment show of the last year, following the hugely successful "Anthems of Cheeky Delight" that ran during last year's Halloween season and "Steamrolling Through the Holidays" featuring the music of Mannheim Steamroller last Christmas. The new show appears on the heels of Pink Floyd's 20-year anniversary re-release of the double CD set "The Wall/Is Anybody Out There?" as well as July 1 Boice concert by the band's co-founder, Roger Waters.

A tilted clown teetered on one leg last June at the beginning of the Western Days Parade in Twin Falls.

Renegade at 6 p.m. and a kickoff ceremony at 5 p.m. There will be a carnival downtown, and in the park about 15-foot vendors, 50 arts and crafts booths and a beer garden will be in business all day today, Saturday and Sunday.

In addition, there will be the traditional entertainments - the Western Days queen and princess contests; a 3-on-3 basketball tournament Saturday and Sunday; a petting zoo for kids on Saturday, a street dance from 9 p.m. until midnight on Main Avenue tonight (show up at 7:30 p.m. for swing dance instruction), and games and amusements in the park all three days.

Also downtown on Saturday will be dummy head roping at Vickers Western Wear and wagon rides in Old Towne and downtown.

On Sunday, a noon barbecue at the CSI Rodeo Arena will commence an afternoon full of rodeo events from 2-4 p.m., capped by the crowning of the Western Days royalty.

The Western Days parade will start at the Magic Valley Mall at noon Saturday, travel south on Blue Lakes Boulevard North to North Five Points, and southwest on Shoshone.

Sigourney Weaver gives sobering take on family life

By Chris Wagner
The Dallas Morning News

Kids may indeed say the darndest things, but they've also been known to say the meanest things. Not just mean, but full of spontaneous, undiluted rage at the world, the kind of innocent anger that flows through those young enough to assume that life is always supposed to be fair.

Parents, most of whom know better, take the brunt of the bawling and try to keep their heads.

The string of such dynamics provides the compass to "A Map of the World." Featuring a towering performance by Sigourney Weaver, "Map" pokes and prods at the ways childhood vulnerability and adult fear feed and heighten one another. It may not be a great film, but its emotional core lingers long after the lights go up.

Martin Lawrence stars in this week's big movie 'Big Momma's House'

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Options are by Los Angeles Times, Knight Ridder and Associated Press services. Rated by the Motion Picture Association of America: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Battlefield Earth'

John Travolta's dream project, a movie version of his spiritual guru L. Ron Hubbard's awful sci-fi novel, gives any underprivileged moviegoer's worst nightmare. Outfitted in a dreadlock wig and one of Kiss' old stage costumes, Travolta plays an alien conqueror who makes the mistake of sapping a man-ant slave (Barry Pepper) with centuries of knowledge. The next thing he knows, he's got a revolution on his hands, and we've got the worst kind of sci-fi. The film imagines itself imparting deep messages while embarrassing itself with its inept cheerleaders. Rated PG-13; language. 1 hour, 56 minutes.

'Big Momma's House'

Martin Lawrence always ends up playing the same character in his movies: Martin Lawrence. But his act - exaggerated facial expressions, a copycat defiant attitude, creatively off-color language - is still good enough to make for an amusing time. Here he plays an FBI agent who dons a fat suit and rubber face to go undercover as a 70-year-old woman whose sexy granddaughter (Nia Long) is under investigation. Just the sight of Lawrence dressed as the hefty old woman is enough for a few laughs. And when he tries to stay in character while admiring Long's body, fighting off the advances of a randy old coot or bumping some young punks on the basketball court, can be hilarious. The makeup is hit and miss, and the screenplay's mostly formulaic. But there are enough funny moments to keep the audience entertained. PG-13. 105 min.

'Center Stage'

The usual array of stereotypes in tights are competing for places in the American Ballet Company, and boy, do their feet hurt. Perky Amanda Schull is the Midwest girl who more sunk than sank and Ethan Stiefel is the brilliant Baryshnikov-style loutario who takes her for a ride on his big sexy motorcycle. The climactic ballet is set to Michael Jackson, which is more sunk than sunk. Rated PG-13; language, sexual situations. 1 hour, 54 minutes.

'Dinosaur'

Though the amazing computer-generated imagery makes its re-creation of the Cretaceous Period seem utterly, wondrously real, this story of a iguanodon who challenges the cruel leadership of a dinosaur herd remains more Disney than Darwin. Not only does it depict a world in which the world didn't exist, it can peacefully coexist, it avoids the subject of extinction altogether. Yet for all its kid-friendly cuddliness, it's a fantastic accomplishment. After a few minutes of marveling, you'll fall right into its prehistoric world. Rated PG; violence. 1 hour, 22 minutes.

'Erin Brockovich'

Irresistible, hugely satisfying feminist fairy tale about a woman the world didn't take seriously who empowered herself by helping others gain justice. Career milestones for Julia Roberts. (2.1). R for language.

'Final Destination'

A premonition of disaster leads some high school kids to get off a plane only to find that death comes calling on them anyway. A similar premonition of looming catastrophe overwhelms the viewer as opening credits roll. 1 hr. 32 R (violence, language).

'The Flintstones in Viva Rock Vegas'

This is a love story - the tale of how Fred and Barney (Mark Addy and Stephen Baldwin, respectively) meet and fall in love with Wilma and Betty (Cristin Johnson and Jane Krakowski). (1.1). PG for innuendo and brief language.)

'Frequency'

Depressed Queens cop Jim Caviezel ("The Thin Red Line") hooks up his long-dead dad's old ham radio, and gets the old man himself (Dennis Quaid) on the line. After preventing the elder's impending demise, they hook up to catch a serial killer who has done them both serious damage. A good script and economical direction, along with old-fashioned wish fulfillment - what if we could again talk to our parent? - help overcome a lingering feeling we saw this once on "The Twilight Zone." Rated PG-13; violence. 1 hour, 57 minutes.

'Gladiator'

We march back into the Colosseum for the first sword-and-sandal epic in nearly 40 years, and it looks like nothing has changed. We do get a better class of fighter; Russell Crowe actually does some action as a Roman general who runs afoul of a pasty, rusty Caesar (Joaquin Phoenix) and ends up enslaved and fighting for his life. But there are no "Spartacus"-style epiphanies in director Ridley Scott's genre revival, just time-tested conventions and the arena action we came for, now digitalized and in Dolby. Rated R; 2 hours, 34 minutes.

'Keeping the Faith'

A shaggy religious joke becomes a spirited comedy in the hands of first-time director Edward Norton, who also plays a priest who shares everything with his rabbi buddy (Ben Stiller) - including an attraction to beautiful, non-Jewish businesswoman Jenna Elfman. When one of the friends breaks a vow, comic complications ensue. Fortunately, they ensue with enough freshness to suggest divine intervention. Rated PG-13; sexual situations. 2 hours, 9 minutes. Director Ridley Scott's latest is a supremely atmospheric film that shrewdly mixes traditional Roman movie elements with the latest computer-generated wonders. Intensely masculine actor Russell Crowe is commanding as the heroic gladiator Maximus. But the movie - too long at a full 2.5 hours - is not as nimble outside the arena as inside. With Joaquin Phoenix, Richard Harris, Connie Nielson, Djimon Hounsou and, in his last screen role, Oliver Reed. (2.3). R for intense graphic combat.

'A Map of the World'

A quiet, disarming but flawed adaptation of Jane Hamilton's novel about a woman's fall from grace, and calamities that rain down on her and her family. Set in Wisconsin farm country, the film stars Sigourney Weaver as a school nurse and farmer's wife set upon by love. With Julianne Moore, David Strathairn and a scary Chloe Sevigny. R (adult themes, profanity, nudity, violence).

'Big box office'

Last week's top-grossing movies:

'Mission Impossible 2'

Hong Kong actionmeister John Woo brings his marvelous visual sense and showy flair to this follow-up to the 1996 blockbuster. Tom Cruise, looking a bit shaggier but still appropriately steely-eyed in this new incarnation of special agent Ethan Hunt, is one of "MI 2's" strongest weapons. With Dougray Scott, Thandie Newton and Ving Rhames. (2.06). PG-13 for intense sequences of violent action and some sensuality.

'The Road to El Dorado'

A pair of Spanish con men (voices of Kenneth Branagh and Kevin Kline) go searching for the City of Gold in this animated comic adventure inspired by the Bing Crosby-Bob Hope road movies of the '40s and '50s. The blending of hand-drawn and computer animation is somewhat less successful than in recent Disney movies ("Road" is from Disney's primary competition in that arena, DreamWorks) but it's still impressive to look at and moderately entertaining. It's also pretty forgettable. PG; violence. 1 hour, 28 minutes.

'Road Trip'

A blatant attempt to replicate the gross-out goofiness of "American Pie," sending fresh-faced Breckin Meyer and three pals on a mission to retrieve a incriminating videotape before his lifelong girlfriend sees it. Disgusting and depraved behavior ensues, but none of it inspires us to set comic standards aside and go with it. Prominently advertised Tom Green, MTV's provocateur of poo-poo, is the film's narrator, but he barely appears on screen. That, along with the gratuitous nudity, qualifies it as an actual exploitation movie. Rated R; sexual situations, nudity, language. 1 hour, 35 minutes.

'Shanghai Noon'

Jackie Chan, as an Imperial Guard out to ransom a kidnapped princess (Lucy Liu) in the Old West, and Owen Wilson as a rowdy train robber who becomes his sidekick, make for a terrific team in this hilarious and zesty comedy. Western. Roger Yuan and Xander Berkeley's virile villains head an exceptional cast in Chan's best American film to date. (1.48). PG-13 for action violence, some drug humor, language and sensuality.

'Snow Day'

Like the family restaurant, the family movie goes heavy on the carbs and sugar and easy on the nourishment. This one, with a menu that appeals to adults, adolescents and pre-teens, is no different. Slushy and insubstantial, but fun. With Chevy Chase, Mark Webber and Zenn Grey. PG (cartoon violence)

'28 Days'

Booze-and-everything-addicted Sandra Bullock is sent to court-ordered rehab in a movie more by-the-numbers than any 12-step program. As she discovers a lot about who she is and what she wants, you may feel as if you've been here before. The support group includes a gay crybaby, an angry pessimist, a vulnerable teen-ager and a major league ballplayer (Viggo Mortensen) who might as well be wearing a sign saying "Romantic Interest." Bullock again attempts to get by on cheeky charm; maybe it's time for a little professional behavior modification. Rated PG-13; language, brief nudity. 1 hour, 43 minutes.

'U-571'

A throwback to decades-old World War II submarine dramas, this ripping yarn attempts to steal a crucial code machine from a German sub, gets high marks for tension and excitement though its undernourished in terms of dialogue and character development. Directed by Jonathan Westow ("Breakdown"), Matthew McConaughey, Bill Paxton, Harvey Keitel, Jon Bon Jovi, Jake Weber and Erik Palladino star. (1.56). PG-13 for war violence.

'Where the Heart Is'

Natalie Portman, who was the Queen in "Star Wars: Episode I," trades her regal robes for Wall-Mart smocks to play an unwed teen mother in this misbegotten soap opera, which not only condescends to the white trash ethic it pretends to embrace, but also refuses to tell a coherent story. Ashley Judd and Stockard Channing are among the talents that are wasted by writer-director Matt Williams, but your heart goes out to the miscast Portman; it's like asking Audrey Hepburn to play Daisy Mae. Rated PG-13; language, sexual situations. 2 hours.

'Man on the Moon'

As Andy Kaufman, the widely misunderstood funny man who made a short-lived career out of trying not to be funny, Jim Carrey is dead-on fabulous. But director Milos Forman's biopic about the late comedian is less than stellar. The story covers the highlights of Kaufman's life, including his unhappy stint as Latka on the "Taxi" series, his much-publicized wrestling bouts with women and his love-hate relationship with a character called Tony Clifton. Forman and his scriptwriters, Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski, would like us to believe in Kaufman's brilliance and genius. Could any actor-comic have portrayed Kaufman so convincingly as Carrey? Robin Williams, perhaps. But even he might not have been climatic of cultural misunderstanding, particularly the enmity, mistrust and internment of Japanese-American citizens during World War II. But the message, that such bigotry was ignoble, feels forced. And dramatically, an over-long Japanese internment section makes us lose touch with the court case. Contains some violence, strong language and strong emotional themes. Rated PG-13.

'Miss Julie'

Director Mike Figgis pulls out all the stops — and keeps it in the kitchen — in his intense adaptation of August Strindberg's controversial play. The artifice of play-writings comes through loud and clear before the cold eye of the lens. But there are doubtless many who'll appreciate this crucible-intense drama, in which a wealthy count's beautiful daughter (Saffron Burrows) starts a dangerous flirtation with Jean (Peter Mullan), the count's foot-servant who happens to be going out with the cook (Maria Doyle Kennedy). It's a brilliant performance by Mullan, however. He's a symphony of aggression and tenderness, class resentment and sensitivity. Contains sexual scenes, obscenity. Rated R.

Proposed rules threaten Idaho's Div. I-A status

The Associated Press

MOSCOW - The Idaho Vandal football program may be facing new problems in maintaining its

I-A status in the NCAA.

The NCAA will consider a new attendance plan that would force Idaho to adjust its scheduling and promotional philosophies.

It would require schools to average 17,000 fans for every home game during continuous four-year periods. Now, the 17,000 per game average was necessary only once every four years.

But possibly more importantly, the proposal requires that people actually be in the seats rather than the tickets merely being sold and it eliminates:

- Discounted tickets, which Idaho used through its 12th-man promotion to meet attendance criteria last season.
- An exemption allowing teams playing in 30,000-seat stadiums to meet the requirement.

Another exemption allowing teams to reach the criteria by averaging 20,000 for all games, which was Idaho's intention.

Conference membership would remain, meaning four of seven Sun Belt football schools need to average 17,000 to remain in good I-A standing.

"Because our 12th-man tickets weren't full price, that's something we'd have to revamp,"

College ball rivals duke it out tonight

The Associated Press

Miami and Florida State are meeting earlier than expected this postseason and sooner than either team wanted. The national championship, won last year by Miami, isn't on the line, just a chance to play for one.

The Hurricanes and Seminoles begin a best-of-three series tonight in Tallahassee in one of the eight NCAA super regional series. The winner advances to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. and the loser stays home for the first time in recent years.

"This will always be a big rivalry, no matter what's at stake," said right-handed David Gil, Miami's Game 1 starter who has won 23 of his last 25 starts. "But it's all about going to Omaha now. We have to go out and play like the defending national champions."

The other best-of-three series, which begin today and continue through Sunday if necessary, feature Louisiana State and Lafayette (45-17) at South Carolina (55-8).

Mississippi State (41-18) at Clemson (48-16); Southern California (41-18) at Georgia Tech (50-14); San Jose State (39-21) at Houston (47-16); UCLA (38-24) at LSU (46-17); Penn State (45-17) at Texas (44-19), and Nebraska (50-15) at Stanford (45-14).

Miami beat Florida State 6-5 in last year's title game, sending the Seminoles home without a championship for the 17th time in as many appearances at the College World Series.

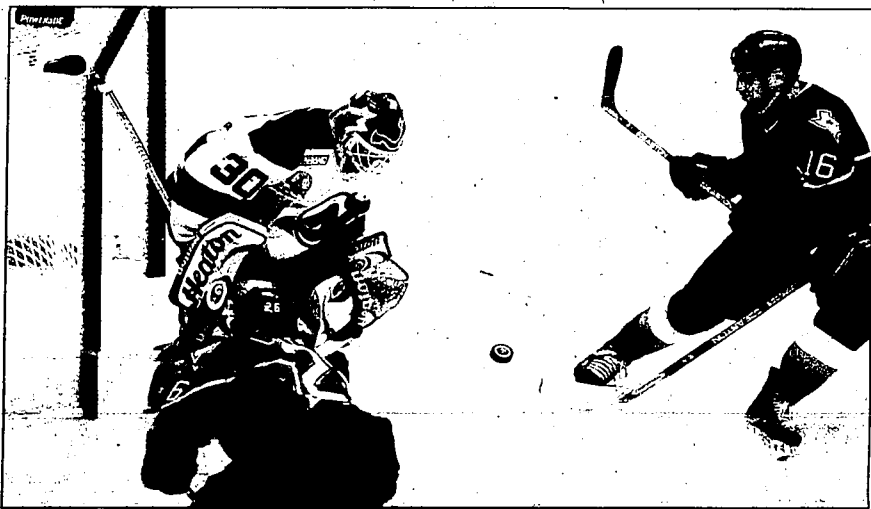

The Hurricanes (40-17-1) have been to Omaha six straight seasons; Florida State (49-16) has made the trip five of the last six years and 10 of the last 14, but still has the most appearances in the College World Series without winning a title.

That adds up to two perennial powerhouse and two longtime rivals playing for one spot in the eight-team CWS field.

"It's a tremendous thing for college baseball," said Seminoles coach Mike Martin, who will start right-handed Blair Yarnes against the Hurricanes. "It will be weekend to remember. What could be more exciting?"

Perhaps a rematch in Omaha. The Hurricanes have won 10 of their last 11 games and have won 12 in a row in the postseason. Their last tournament loss was June 2, 1998, against Long Beach State.

STARS SHINE

Stars exorcise their demons in Jersey

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - For the Dallas Stars, the devil wasn't in the details this time.

Brett Hull, one of the greatest clutch scorers in Stanley Cup playoff history, scored two goals Thursday night - the second with 4:16 to play - and the Stars rebounded from one of their worst playoff losses ever to beat the New Jersey Devils 2-1 in Game 2.

Dallas goaltender Ed Belfour, pulled after allowing six goals in an admittedly embarrassing 7-3 loss in Game 1, bounced back to turn aside 27 of 28 shots and give the Stars the road split they were fearful they wouldn't get after Tuesday's dismal game.

This time, the Stars tightened up defensively and got an exceptional game from Belfour, who has won his last nine playoff games after a loss.

The game-winner came after nearly two scoreless periods. Mike Modano pushed the puck between the legs of Devils rookie Brian Rafalski to Jere Lehtinen, who funned on a shot as he skated to the left of the net.

But the puck floated directly to Hull, who pushed it past Martin Brodeur for his 11th goal of the playoffs and 88th of

What's next?

Game 3 of the Stanley Cup Finals between the Dallas Stars and New Jersey Devils is Saturday in Dallas at 6 p.m. (ABC). The series is locked at one game apiece his career. The Stars now have one huge statistical edge on their side going back to Dallas, where they have won 11 of their last 12 home playoff games: the team winning Game 2 has won 25 of the last 28 Stanley Cups.

The Stars also were 1-1 after Game 2 last year against Buffalo, and went on to win four of the next five to win their first Stanley Cup.

The Stars, 3-0 in Game 2s in these playoffs, also got their first lead of the series from a familiar source - Hull, whose nickname is "The Sniper."

Hull scored his 10th of the playoffs and fourth in four games, putting a hard wrist shot over Brodeur's glove that hit off the crossbar and fell across the goal line at 4:25 of the first.

Agassi stubs toe, bows out of Paris

The Associated Press

PARIS - A blister burst and so did Andre Agassi's Grand Slam dream.

For most of two sets at the French Open, Agassi did everything right. He toyed with Karol Kucera, teasing him with looping floaters, punishing him with hard, flat groundstrokes, keeping him back with deep serves, while taking a 6-2, 5-3 lead as bright sunshine baked the court late Thursday afternoon.

Then, suddenly, a whopping blister the size of a half-dollar ripped open on the big toe of Agassi's right foot. He couldn't run without pain, couldn't serve without stubbing the toe achingly into the dry, brick-hard red clay when he landed. Even standing still, he whacked balls wildly, trying to win rallies with one shot instead of six.

Nothing worked and Kucera won 16 of the next 17 games to send Agassi, the top-seeded, defending champion, out in the second round, 2-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-0 as the stunned crowd watched nearly in silence.

"The first two sets, he's got the match in his hands," said Kucera, who had won just three matches in seven years at the French before this tournament. "I was lucky to get back, actually, in the second set."

Agassi, a desperate, forlorn expression on his face, signed a few autographs, then fed Roland Garros without a word. He sat in silence in the limousine to his hotel, accompanied by girlfriend Steffi Graf, coach Brad Gilbert and trainer Gil Reyes.

"No one said anything," Reyes said at the hotel shortly after they arrived. "We want to give

Green Bay might cut Chmura loose

The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE - The Green Bay Packers will release tight end Mark Chmura on Monday, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported on its Web site.

Citing an anonymous source "closely connected to the matter," the newspaper said Thursday the Packers plan to cut ties with the former All-Pro who was accused of sexually assaulting a 17-year-old girl at a post-prom party on April 9.

Earlier this week, Chmura, 31, and Robert Gessert, 43, were ordered to stand trial in Waukesha County on third-degree sexual assault charges.

Green Bay general manager Ron Wolf was out of his office Thursday afternoon and was not immediately available for comment.

Chmura's agent, Eric Metz, could not confirm the report. "I've read a million reports that say he's going to get out," Metz said Thursday. "But I haven't heard."

Metz said Chmura, who declared his innocence earlier this week, plans to speak publicly

Mark Chmura

Saturday about his future in football and in court.

Chmura's release has become a widely expected since shortly after the incident.

Chmura, who became one of the game's elite tight ends during the Packers' run to consecutive Super Bowl appearances, missed all but two games last season with a neck injury that caused partial paralysis in his arms and threatened to end his career.

Metz said he hasn't considered whether Chmura will have a future in football beyond the Packers. Metz publicly urged his client to retire last season because of his injury.

He said the Packers' decision could be based more on their concern about his health than his guilt or innocence.

"You can't assume anything in this business ... but I also assume that he's innocent too, and that he's acquitted on all charges," Metz said.

Carbonneau climbs the ladder

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dallas Stars forward Guy Carbonneau played his 227th career playoff game on Thursday night, tying him with Devils coach Larry Robinson for second overall in Stanley Cup history for games played.

Mark Messier of Vancouver is the all-time leader with 236 games, most of them with the Edmonton Oilers.

"Obviously you need to play a long time and be a lucky guy," Carbonneau said Thursday morning. "I have been lucky throughout my entire career to play with good teams, teams that did well in the playoffs."

Carbonneau, the oldest player in the NHL at 40, has played on three Stanley Cup champions, last year with Dallas and in 1986 and '93 with Montreal.

"I'm really happy," said Carbonneau, who admits to feeling old some mornings. "I have always said this is the best time of the season. Playoff time is everything you work for and fight for all year."

Stanley Cup notebook

Hockey in June

When Devils coach Larry Robinson started playing hockey in the 1970s, the season was over by the time June rolled around.

"We thought it was long when we were playing in May, so it's definitely not the way most people would like it," Robinson said Thursday morning. "I know that speaking to a lot of fans that I have talked to, they say they find it hard sometimes watching games when it is the middle of June."

If the Cup finals goes seven games, the last one would be played here on June 12.

"There is no way getting around it," Robinson said. "It's a long season and long playoffs. The nice thing about it is when you are playing in June, it means you have gone a long way."

Gomez family album

There's competition in the Gomez family during the Stanley Cup.

Devils rookie center Scott Gomez only had to get tickets for his father, Carlos, for the opening two games of the cup finals in New Jersey.

Gomez's mother, Dalia, stayed in Alaska because his sister, Natalie, had school and a soccer tournament.

"She (Natalie) doesn't realize how big this is," Scott Gomez said of Natalie. "She's 12. She's the baby of the family. I guess she gets dibs on mom."

Dalia Gomez will make the trip to Dallas for Games 3 and 4.

However, if the best-of-seven series goes the distance, Scott Gomez will have to miss his sister's graduation from sixth grade.

"She's more mad that I'm not there than her not here," said Gomez, who is the leading candidate for NHL rookie of the year honors.

Then and now

Coach Ken Hitchcock said that Dallas' run to the Stanley Cup championship last year was like a magical ride in which everything went right for the Stars.

They were the best team in the league most of the year and they got the big goals and big saves throughout the playoffs in winning the title.

"A lot of this year has been swimming upstream to be honest with you," Hitchcock said. "We had tough luck with injuries and we had some real battles trying to get out focus generated."

"But you know what, we are here and we are here because of a magical character and a lot of pride in what we do. We are four wins away from reaching the goal again. I think the players haven't lost focus of that."

Muni's Mike Hamblin wins Jackpot Pro-Am

JACKPOT, Nev. — Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course pro Mike Hamblin finished strong at the Jackpot Pro-Am on Thursday, firing a 70 at Jackpot Golf Course across the border in Nevada to beat runner-up Jeff Thompson by three strokes, 66-70-136 to 71-68-139.

Next up for Hamblin is a Monday tournament at the Lake Merced Golf and Country Club in Daly City, Calif., which should draw 60-80 entrants. Depending on the quality of the field there, as few as six and as many as eight berths to the 100th U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif., and Montpelier's Ted Slinvins, Kerry Haddock, Ron Singleton and Lynn Perkes overtook first-day leaders Scott Jerome, Hamblin, Matt Juliano and Mike Stanfield to win the team championship with a 190.

Jim Malay took first-flight gross honors with a 67-72-139, and Ken Miller was top run with a 66-68-134. Jerome won the second flight with a 75-75-150, and Juliano was first net with a 74-62-136. Chris Meyerhofer's 76-76-152 was good for third-flight gross honors, and Bob Moody's 64-66-130 led the net scoring.

Lee Nelson paced the fourth flight with a gross 82-77-154, and Ken Boer maintained his net lead to win with a 63-66-123. Bruce Kemper took gross honors in the fifth flight with a 83-77-160, and Kent Eicheberger had the best net score, at 67-64-131. Tom Fuchsler's 83-86-169 topped gross scoring in the sixth flight, and Mike Carr earned net honors with his 66-66-132.

McCarty, Royals slug past Boston

American League

BOSTON (AP) — Dave McCarty capped a wild game with his fourth hit, a two-run triple in the eighth inning, as the Kansas City Royals had their best performance of the season in a 13-11 win over the Boston Red Sox on Thursday night.

The Royals, who trailed 8-2 after five innings, rallied in nine runs in a crazy sixth inning that saw the teams combine for 12 runs, 12 hits and four walks as 22 batters faced 78 pitches.

Two runners were thrown out at the plate in the game. Kansas City's Joe Randa on the back end of a double-steal attempt in the second and Boston's Jeff Frye on Trot Nixon's double with the score 11-11 in the seventh.

Then Kansas City scored the winning runs off Derek Lowe (2-2). With Carlos Beltran at first and two outs, Randa singled and McCarty tripled into the right-center gap.

Jose Santiago (5-2) was the beneficiary of the Royals' season highs of 13 runs and 19 hits.

Curt Everett had a grand slam, his 17th homer of the season, and Nomar Garciaparra added a two-run shot, his third, for Boston. Each drove in four runs.

Four Kansas City hitters — Johnny Damon, Mike Sweeney, Beltran and Randa had three hits each to go with McCarty's four.

Toronto's Chris Woodward, right, misses a foul ball by Minnesota's Jay Contreras as a fan and his beer get in the way during the seventh inning Thursday.

The left-hander has won three straight starts and has allowed just two earned runs since getting shelled for nine in 2 1/3 innings on May 15.

"As hard as it is, you have to forget about games like that, and that's what I've been able to do," Milton said. "I've worked hard, and the last three starts have been great."

saw them drop eight straight series. Rekar (2-3) took a five-hit into the ninth inning before allowing a one-out solo homer to Brady Anderson.

Roberto Hernandez came on and got two outs for his sixth save in 10 chances.

Cubs 5, Braves 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Even Tom Glavine has bad days.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner gave up four runs and six hits in five innings Thursday, his shortest outing of the season, as the Chicago Cubs beat the Atlanta Braves 5-3.

The victory kept the Braves from sweeping the Cubs for the first time since July 28-30, 1997. Atlanta hasn't swept a series at Wrigley Field since 1994.

The game, a makeup of Wednesday's rainout, drew only 5,267, the smallest crowd at Wrigley since Sept. 23, 1986, when 4,684 showed up for a game against the Boston Red Sox. It also was the first time the Cubs drew fewer than 10,000 fans since April 23, 1992, when 9,086 showed up to see a game against Philadelphia.

Kevin Tapani (3-6) looked more like a Cy Young winner than Glavine did. He had a two-hitter going until the sixth inning, when Andres Galarraga hit a three-run homer. It was Galarraga's third homer of the series, and his 15th of the year.

Tapani gave up three runs on five hits in seven innings. Rick Aguilera got two outs for his 10th save.

Glavine (7-2) had lost only one start dating back to Sept. 22, going 10-1 in 14 games. But he seemed just a little off against the Cubs. He struck out seven, one shy of his season high, but walked five and threw a whopper 114 pitches in only five innings.

Expos 9, Reds 7

CINCINNATI — Rondell White and Charlie O'Brien hit two-run homers off Ron Villone (6-2) as Montreal concluded an injury-marred trip with a win.

Montreal won the first game and the last two on a 3-6 trip that put a deep gap in its pitching plans. The Expos lost pitchers Matt Blank, Mike Thurman and Hideki Irabu and catcher Chris Wigger to injuries during the three-city trip.

Javier Vazquez (6-1) allowed seven runs in 6 1/3 innings for the win, and Steve Kline pitched the last two innings for his second save in three chances.

Arizona's Randy Johnson pitches to Milwaukee's Ron Belliard during the first inning last Friday in Phoenix.

Ryan's 215.

At his current rate, Johnson would surpass Lolich in his next start and rank second to Steve Carlton among left-handers.

Big Unit wins past Cy Young

PHOENIX (AP) — On another night of pitching magic, Randy Johnson came out in front of two pretty fair ballplayers — Mark McGwire and Cy Young.

The 1999 NL Cy Young Award winner added another line to his resume in his last start when he moved past Young in career strikeouts.

"It's an accomplishment, but I try not to get wrapped up in it," Johnson said Wednesday night after striking out 10 Cardinals to give him 2,824 in his career — five better than Young and eight behind Mickey Lolich for 15th on the career list.

Johnson tied Young by striking out McGwire, the Home Run King and Johnson's former college teammate at Southern California.

He struck out McGwire twice, then got him to pop up to center with the bases loaded to start the first triple play in Diamondbacks history as Arizona won 6-2.

McGwire homered in his last at-bat in his major league-leading 21st this year and 543rd of his career — to knock out Johnson.

"You're in awe just like everybody else," Johnson said about watching the arc of the ball. "It's just a matter of where it's going to land. You know, I've faced him enough now when I was with Seattle and he was with Oakland, that the theory if you face someone long enough, you're going to have some success and they're going to have some success."

Johnson has had his share of success against just about everyone this season. He is 9-1 with a league-leading 1.41 ERA and 131 strikeouts in 95 2/3 innings.

"I couldn't imagine anybody playing any better than he is right now," Arizona manager Buck Showalter said.

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa agreed.

"He's up there with the best of them," La Russa said. "Our hitters were not throwing any a-bits away. We tried our best; he beat us trying our best."

Johnson, however, was not at his best on Wednesday.

He allowed a season-high nine hits and walked three in 7 2/3 innings. But he still joined Toronto's David Wells as the only nine-game winners in the majors.

He also struck out at least 10 batters for the 10th time in 12 starts this season and 135th time of his career, second to Nolan steady migration of top FAA programs to I-17.

The Sun Belt Conference has asked for clarification of how the 17,000, four-year average would be calculated, and it is reviewing plans to expand beyond seven teams in light of the proposal.

According to last year's figures, only two future Sun Belt schools would have reached the attendance requirement — Idaho and Louisiana-Lafayette. New Mexico State and Louisiana-Monroe were close to 17,000.

Failure to meet the attendance requirement relegates a school to restricted division membership for three years, NCAA spokeswoman Jane Jankowski said. If the school fails to meet the requirement during those three years, it would be reclassified, likely to I-AA.

She said the new rule would ensure I-A remains the highest level of competition. But skeptics believe it has more to do with the

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Players propose moving Houston to AL West

NEW YORK — While baseball's owners can't get together on a realignment plan, the players are offering their own proposal.

Player representatives are circulating a union counterplan that will move the Houston Astros from the NL Central to the AL West to create two 15-team leagues. The players' plan is much simpler than the main one being considered by owners. That proposal would have Tampa Bay and Arizona switching leagues, the elimination of the wild-card in the NL, and a six-team AL Central to go along with five four-team divisions.

Donovan hits million-dollar mark at Florida

DESTIN, Fla. — Florida got its second million-dollar coach this week when it handed Billy Donovan a $1.2 million-per-year contract extension for leading the Gators to the national championship game.

Donovan signed a five-year, $6 million deal to join football coach Steve Spurrier ($2 million per year) in the million-dollar category. The deal also brings him even with Kentucky coach Tubby Smith as the highest-paid basketball coach in the Southeastern Conference. Duke's Mike Krzyzewski earns about $1.6 million a year.

Brown will be absent from Browns' camp

CLEVELAND — Orlando Brown won't practice with the Cleveland Browns when they take the field for the first time since last season today.

Brown, the team's mammoth offensive tackle, hasn't been able to run, lift weights or do anything strenuous since he was accidentally hit in the right eye by an NFL official's thrown flag during a game in December. His playing career is in jeopardy, and Brown has retained renowned attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. to explore the possibility of filing a lawsuit against the league.

Redskins release running back, return man

WASHINGTON — Brian Mitchell, the NFL's career leader in combined kickoff and punt return yardage, was cut Thursday by the Washington Redskins.

A former 10-year veteran who will turn 32 in August, had three years left on a contract that would have counted $1.7 million against the salary cap this season. Backup, fullback Larry Bowie, who the Redskins also cut Thursday, would have cost the team $1.1 million.

Police say Lewis lied in interviews

ATLANTA — Police officers testified Thursday that Baltimore Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis gave them a statement full of lies that left two men dead.

The statement shows Lewis denied knowing many of the people who rode in his rented limousine and gave inconsistent accounts of whether anyone in his party was cut during the fight. Lewis and two friends, Reginald Oakley and Joseph Sweeting, are on trial for murder in the deaths of Jacoby Baker and Richard Lollar, who were stabbed in the Jan. 31 fight after a Super Bowl party.

Grizzlies hire marketing pro as new coach

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The Vancouver Grizzlies hired Sidney Lowe as head coach and Andy Dolich as president of business operations, two moves the franchise hope will turn around losing ways on the court and at the box office.

Lowe, a former head coach with the Minnesota Timberwolves, and Dolich, vice-president of Tickets.com, North America's second-largest ticketing organization, were introduced at a news conference Thursday. Lowe, 40, had a brief stint as Minnesota's head coach six years ago, going 33-102.

UCLA discus thrower makes history

DURHAM, N.C. — Even while training through the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, UCLA's Seillauna Sua was good enough to win the women's discus Thursday and make meet history.

Sua's triumph made her the first woman to win the same field event four times. Wisconsin's Suzi Favor is the only other woman to win the same event four times, the 1,500 meters from 1987-1990, with her final victory also coming at Duke's Wallace Wade stadium. Sua will defend her shot put title today.

Bengals say goodbye to troubled Kl-Jana

CINCINNATI — Kl-Jana Carter, whose NFL career was ill-fated from the start, was released Thursday by the Cincinnati Bengals.

Carter, who played for the Bengals in the NFL, was drafted in the 1995 draft but missed that entire season when he tore an anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee in the preseason. He played only one game in 1998 after severely fracturing his wrist in the season opener. He was sidelined in 1999 when he dislocated his right kneecap in the third game.

Minor-leaguer throws perfect game

PAWTUCKET, R.I. — Tomo Ohka, the Boston Red Sox minor-leaguer of the year in 1999, became the dirt pitcher in the 117-year history of the International League to throw a nine-inning perfect game Thursday night as Pawtucket beat Charlotte 2-0.

The 24-year-old Japanese right-hander needed just 77 pitches — 59 of which were strikes — to complete the first perfect game in Pawtucket history. Ohka (5-5) struck out six batters and hit on a single Knights hitter and went to two balls just twice. He had eight strikeouts.

Athletic Director Mike Bohn said. "Rather than playing big money away games, we'll try to get quality home games, which we're trying to do anyway."

Bohn is working on a home date with Oregon State in 2003. In return, Idaho would play at Oregon State in 2004 and 2006.

The Vandals have traditionally struggled to draw top-flight opponents to the Palouse. Aside from its unusual arrangement to play home games at Washington State's Martin Stadium, Idaho has not had a home game against a FA non-conference team since moving up to the top division by joining the Big West Conference in 1996. Idaho joins the Sun Belt Conference in 2001.

Idaho had scheduled future road games with Washington, Arizona and Oregon, banking on big guarantees and big crowds to qualify under the 20,000 in overall average attendance rule that would be eliminated under the new plan.

Portland Trail Blazers center Arvydas Sabonis practices free throws Thursday.

Trends point to Lakers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The remarkable road show known as the Western Conference finals makes its last Portland appearance tonight, and one of the stars is hurting.

Kobe Bryant didn't practice with the Los Angeles Lakers for the second consecutive day Thursday because of a sprained right foot, an injury that occurred in the first half of his team's 96-88 loss Tuesday night.

"He's not ready to practice yet," coach Phil Jackson said.

"Will he be able to play today?"

"We don't know," Jackson said. "We'll know game-time about that."

Officially, the Lakers listed Bryant as probable.

Bryant's injury adds a little more uncertainty to a strange series in which the visitor has won four straight games and in which Portland is 2-1 in Los Angeles but 0-2 in the ultra-friendly confines of the multi-billionaire owner Paul Allen's Rose Garden. Los Angeles leads the series 3-2. If the home-court advantage persists in Game 6, the Lakers will be headed to the NBA Finals. If the Trail Blazers finally win one at home, the deciding Game 7 will be Sunday in Los Angeles.

"It's all good and dandy that we have confidence that we can win in L.A.," Portland guard Steve Smith said before Thursday's practice, "but tomorrow means everything to us. We've got to win on our home court to keep the series alive."

The Lakers worked out one final time at their El Segundo, Calif., practice facility before heading north. They have won three in a row in the Rose Garden, counting their Feb. 29 meeting in the regular season.

Bryant didn't talk with the media. Neither did Shaquille O'Neal nor Ron Harper.

If Bryant does play, he likely won't be at full strength.

"I definitely think Kobe's going to be limited," said forward Glen Rice, who was 1-for-8 from the field in Game 5. "Myself and everyone else are going to have to pick up their game."

The Blazers have gone more and more to a big lineup that has Scottie Pippen at point guard. That spoils the matchup advantage Bryant had against 5-foot-10 Damon Stoudamire and shakes up the Lakers' defensive strategy.

Bryant has had to guard Pippen. That resulted in foul trouble for Bryant and 22 points for Pippen in Game 5, and it could mean even bigger problems for the Lakers if Bryant is hurting.

"Kobe's a terrific defender and where does he excel?" Portland coach Mike Dunleavy said. "He excels in the open court, he excels at getting steals, making reads, driving and blocking shots from his position."

"When he's the main guy having to do the defending, it's a little bit different. He's needed some help."

Pippen, in search of his seventh NBA championship but first without Michael Jordan, loves the big lineup.

"They've been able to take advantage of Damon's size at times out on the court with Kobe," Pippen said, "but having trigger guys out there really puts us in a position where we really have to go and double-team one guy on a pass, and that's Shaq."

Pacers sit one victory away from finals again

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The two-word message on the blackboard in the Indiana Pacers' locker room summed it up in perfectly perfect English: "One mo."

One more win, and the Pacers will achieve the goal that has both tantalized and eluded them throughout their existence: A trip to the NBA Finals.

"It's up to them. If they want to give the effort, this series will be theirs," Pacers coach Larry Bird said.

Extra effort was the deciding factor in Game 5 Wednesday night, as the Pacers finally listened to their coach's simple pleadings and did all the little things that Bird said would ensure a victory. Scrambling for loose balls, boxing out, never losing confidence — all were keys as the Pacers shook off an early 18-point deficit and controlled the game for the final 34 minutes to take a 3-2 lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

Winning three games in the conference finals has never been that much of a problem for the Pacers. It's getting that fourth one that has been their burden.

"We know that a Game 7 is a crapshoot. Anything can happen," Pacers guard Mark Jackson said. "That's why we want to take care of business right now."

Two years ago, the Pacers collapsed in the final three minutes and lost Game 7 to Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

Five years ago, they won Game 6 of the conference finals against Orlando only to be blown out by 24 points in Game 7.

Six years ago, they also took a 3-2 lead on the Knicks but lost the final two games, including a four-point defeat in Game 7.

Indiana Pacers coach Larry Bird demonstrates a move during practice Thursday. Austin Croshere (44) shoots free throws in Indianapolis.

"If I remember right, it's all the little things that really separated us from New York in '94," Pacers guard Reggie Miller said. "They got all the loose balls, a lot of second shots and played much harder."

The home team has won every game in this series so far, a trend the Pacers would like to halt tonight. Indiana has lost five straight games at Madison Square Garden, and Miller has yet to have one of his signature breakout performances on the Knicks' home floor.

"They are a very scary and dangerous team," Miller said Thursday before the Pacers flew to New York. "You've got to put the dagger in and make sure the heart isn't pumping any more. If you give them any type of life, you never know what'll happen. You have to kill the dog."

The Knicks have faced elimination twice already in this year's playoffs, winning Games 6 and 7 in the second round against Miami after falling behind three games to two.

Though they have an array of injuries and suffered a jolt to their confidence, the Knicks have always played their best over the past two years when the situation has gotten dire.

"The closest game is always the toughest. The other team really has nothing to lose and everything to gain," Miller said. "We know they'll be playing with a sense of desperation."

Late Model Lites invade MV Speedway

By Kevin Hall
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "I feel the need, the need for speed," was once uttered by a young Tom Cruise in his movie "Top Gun."

That same catch phrase could very well be the motto for Saturday's showing of Corvettes, Thunderbirds and Grand Prix as the Late Model Lites return to Magic Valley Speedway.

The fast, ultra-sleek racers make their one and only season appearance Saturday along with NASCAR's Weekly Racing Series classes: the Mountain Dew Modifieds, Grand National Sportsman and Dairy Queen Thunder Stocks.

Known for reaching speeds of up to 75 mph around the tight, 1/3-mile short track in Twin Falls, the Late Model Lites feature roughly 360 cubic-inch motors with 104-inch wheel-bases and weigh approximately 2,900 pounds.

During the cars' appearance last Aug. 21, Dave Woodbury completed a class qualifying lap in 15.941 seconds.

"It's pretty much a race to see who can get to the front first," said Boise's Kenny Chandler, last year's Lites main event winner.

The Thunder stocks saw a whopping 22 cars fill out the track last Saturday, resulting in a bevy of fender-benders and spinouts.

With her second-place finish, Natalie Wheeler took over the Thunder points lead, becoming the first female driver to hold the points lead in any class this season.

The feature-division Modifieds resume their always-intense points battle Saturday, with Steve Jones of Kuna still atop the leader board in his Dodge. Through six races, five drivers have taken checkerered flags, but Jones' one win — along with five top-5 finishes, including last Saturday's runner-up finish to John Newhouse — keeps the No. 3 ahead of local favorite Bruce Quale by a mere 34 points.

Last Saturday saw Gooding's Thomas Powell win his first Sportsman main event, as well as the A heat. The two wins keep Powell in the thick of the points chase behind season-long leader Jeffrey Meads, who grabbed fourth in Saturday's main.

Currently, Meads leads defending Street Stocks champion Dale Miles by 23 points, with Powell 37 points back in third.

Gates open at 4 p.m. Saturday with Modifieds and Lites McDonalds time trials set for 6 p.m. The green flag for heat racing unfurls at 7 p.m.

PROFILE Matt Kenseth

By Monte Dutton
 NASCAR This Week

Yet another rookie has won a Winston Cup race.

Matt Kenseth, a protégé of Mark Martin's, drove the Ford Martin partly owns to victory in the Coca-Cola 600, becoming the first rookie ever to win NASCAR's longest race.

David Pearson, Jeff Gordon and Bobby Labonte are others who won their first races in the 600.

Kenseth unsuccessfully battled Dale Earnhardt Jr. for the Busch Grand National championship in both 1998 and 1999. He joined the five-car Roush Racing stable this year and actually leads Earnhardt Jr., who has already won two official races as well as the Winston, in the rookie point standings.

John Clark/NASCAR This Week
 Matt Kenseth celebrates his Coca-Cola 600 win.

How does winning feel? "It hasn't sunk in too much. I really don't even know how to act. I didn't think we were going to run as good as tonight. I thought we would maybe be in the top 10 and have a good competitive run, but I certainly wasn't expecting to win the race."

Who are the people who have helped you the most with your career? "The way I look at things is that my dad and I started this thing when I was 13 years old, and every person who has helped me along the way is as important as the next. Without any of those people, I wouldn't be where I am today. I have all of those people to thank."

Summit: Feds knew how to prevent blaze

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Leaders of a two-day fire summit concluded that most of the steps needed to prevent and combat catastrophic wild fires in the West were recommended 12 years ago.

The leaders met at firefighters battling a blaze across the West. A fire that has charred 25,000 acres in northern New Mexico got some unexpected rain Thursday in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains.

Before the rains came, the ferocious wildfire had already slowed its march northward toward the vast Pecos Wilderness and Gallinas Canyon, the main watershed for Las Vegas, N.M.

Meanwhile, dry, hot weather complicated firefighting in Arizona, California, Colorado and Utah. Record heat, high winds and low humidity fanned the flames in all four states. Arizona forest officials said a 10,200-acre burn northeast of Williams was 50 percent contained Thursday morning. Firefighters spent much of Wednesday strengthening fire breaks on the west, north and northeast flanks of the blaze by setting back fires to burn out underbrush and rob the larger fire of fuel.

Nevada Gov. Kenny Guinn's Fire Summit ended Thursday in agreement with much of the wild-fire management report that the Nevada Association of Counties issued in December 1988, from pooling local, state and federal firefighting efforts to developing rules for safer communities.

"We're encouraging NACCO to resist the urge to say 'I told you so,'" said Robert Ruffridge, regional manager for the Nevada

Department of Conservation and Natural Resources.

"They have the opportunity to say that. They came up with a lot of good ideas. Unfortunately, most of those were not implemented," he told about 200 people attending the summit at the Peppermill Hotel-Casino.

A number of local governments in Nevada already require residents to build with fire resistant roofs, reduce wildland vegetation around their homes and maintain green landscapes to help reduce fire threats.

TUPPENANCE A DROP

Almae Pope, operations director for the Animals in Distress Association's new Ruth Mellichar Bird Center, feeds a group of hungry starlings at the new facility, which opened last month in Boise.

Counties say snowmobiles not the issue

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Idaho, Wyoming and Montana counties surrounding Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks may hire a public relations firm to counter plans by the National Park Service and environmental groups to close the parks to snowmobiles.

While the surface arguments may deal with noise, air pollution and bison, local officials and some state lawmakers believe the point is really public relations and litigation.

"The issue here is not snowmobiles in Yellowstone — that's the tip of the iceberg," Park County, Wyoming, Commissioner Charles Johnstone said during a strategy session this week in Cody. "The issue is access to public lands and limitations of use and access — that's what's at stake."

Local officials agreed they must rally public support not just for continued snowmobiling in the two parks but also continued access to public lands across the country.

Ex-boyfriend gets 10 years to life for murdering woman

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A man who admitted he killed his ex-girlfriend in a fit of jealousy has been sentenced to the minimum 10 years to life in prison, drawing outrage from the victim's family.

Kenneth Haase, 39, expressed extreme regret for murdering Jennifer Miller and wounding her friend, John Vellone, last September.

"To say I'm sorry is not enough," Haase told Miller's family during Wednesday's sentencing hearing. "I do have a lot of remorse for what I've done, a lot of remorse."

But it was not good enough for Miller's family.

"With total disregard to her civil rights, Ken pursued Jennifer. He stalked her," relatives said in a written statement. "Perhaps we should all carry a .45-caliber and body armor because justice falls short to the victim."

First District Judge Craig Kosonen declined to follow the prosecutor's recommendation for a minimum of 30 years before parole could be considered on the second-degree murder conviction, saying he believed the killing was a crime of passion.

"It's clear something snapped,"

Kosonen said, citing the fact that Haase had no previous record of violent crimes.

Haase was originally charged with first-degree murder and prosecutors planned to seek the death penalty. But a plea bargain was struck on the lesser charge because Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas feared a jury might acquit Haase and a guilty plea would save the county the projected $100,000 cost for a trial.

According to witnesses, Haase broke down the front door of the home where Miller was staying after seeing her and Vellone enter the house.

Armed with a .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle, Haase shot and wounded Vellone, who dove into a bedroom and played dead. Miller's father, Kevin Doyle, said he came out into a hallway and tried to wrestle the gun away from Haase, who shot Miller as she turned away to run to the front door.

His mother, Claire Leisenring, turned Haase in to police after he told her about the shootings.

"I do not think it was my son who did that," Leisenring told the judge. "It was some demon that was in him."

District polls over school calendar

MERIDIAN (AP) — Surveys have been sent to parents in the Meridian School District in an effort to determine how many are happy with the district's school calendar.

Meridian now operates schools on the traditional nine-month calendar, which runs from late August to early June, and five modified "multitrack" calendars.

Parents at some schools have recently expressed dissatisfaction with the multitrack schedule. The survey is a response to the concerns over that system, which is used in the district's four year-round schools.

Opponents said the system has several disadvantages, some of which are wasted time and disruption of routine from changing classrooms at the end of each track cycle, lack of retention over repeated breaks and increased costs.

Woman's interest in teen spells trouble

DEAR ABBY: What do you get when you mix a 23-year-old woman with a 16-year-old boy? Trouble, as far as I'm concerned! For the past couple of months, my 16-year-old son, Eric, has been involved with a 23-year-old woman I'll call "Lois." Eric is only a sophomore in high school, and he should be dating girls his own age. He is the sweet, outgoing young man and is very popular with the girls.

I'm not surprised that he is flattered by the attention of an older woman, and I'm sure he acts very mature when he is around her, but my son is very much an adolescent at heart.

Lois comes to our house late at night when she thinks we are asleep, or she stops by when he gets home from school and his father and I are still at work. I don't think it has turned into a sexual relationship yet, but I know it is very purely platonic in nature.

I'm trying very hard to discourage this relationship, but Eric tells me they share the same

DEAR ABBY

relationship of equals. Your next move should be a telephone call to your attorney about the advisability of a restraining order.

Perhaps Lois' ardor could be cooled by explaining to her that, depending upon the circumstances, she could be subject to civil and criminal penalties if she continues to pursue your son.

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Ray," is an only child with exceptional talents. He is a 22-year-old college senior, an accounting major, and has already been offered a job upon graduation.

Ray recently completed a motorcycle safety course and would like to purchase one. My husband feels Ray is old enough to make his own decisions. Although I know he is a very responsible person and could handle it, I am absolutely against it. I even told him that if he bought a motorcycle, he would have to move out.

I love my son and don't want to deprive him of anything, but I'd worry about him every time he left the house.

Is there a magical age when a parent no longer should influence her child, or do you just never stop being a parent?

- WORRIED MOM

DEAR WORRIED: Parenthood lasts as long as the parent lasts, and sometimes it seems like an eternity! You and your husband will always be Ray's parents, and you will always be concerned about his safety and welfare.

Withdraw the ultimatum, because he will probably be moving out on his own after he starts earning his own money anyway.

Ray has taken motorcycle safety classes, and I'm sure you've shared your wisdom and common sense with him since he was a boy. The time has come to trust that you've done a good job. Cross everything that you have two of, and pray that your son will be one of the thousands of motorcycle enthusiasts who ride safely.

Artists celebrate nation's 'truly terrible' poetry

DETROIT (AP) - Rude Espinoza is a bad poet - a really bad poet - and that's a good thing.

Putting pen to paper recently, Espinoza churned out a wretched parody of renowned poet T.S. Eliot and managed to beat 60 other terrible poets to be crowned the worst of the worst.

"It's one thing to write, but to be known as a bad poet - I guess someone's got to have that title," said Espinoza, 28, whose "Love Song of A. Gino Angelo" earned first prize in this year's Julia A. Moore Poetry Farory.

"I guess that's me now," said a laughing Espinoza, who received a garish, pink and red iridescent trophy topped with an ear of corn.

The prize's namesake wrote serious poetry, badly. She often dealt with untimely death, such as a drowned child or people being crushed, and critics denounced her writing as horrible.

Sponsored by the Flint Public Library, the contest is its 10th year, the brainchild of a librarian who saw Moore's poetry and decided there had to be a contest.

The library held a festival a week ago to honor the winners and Moore's memory. Organizer Renee Nixon said each year a woman dresses up like Moore (1847-1920) and gives a dramatic reading before the finalists read their work.

"Some of them were truly terrible and some of them were very funny, and that's the intent - to shed some humor ... into an art form that can be stuffy sometimes," she said.

The festival isn't the only contest to highlight goofy writing. The annual Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest challenges entrants to write the worst opening sentence to an imaginary novel while the International Imitation Hemingway Competition asks participants to sound like and read like Ernest Hemingway.

Stem Iroquois engaged in dunking delinquents

Ants in ant hills, too, have their social class systems. High, middle, low. British researchers found that out. And reported that it's the high-class ants who are the more sexually active.

Word is about half the real estate in Boston is tax free. Our Love and War man put this open question to the clientele: "Who should get up first every morning - the husband or the wife?" Replies varied, but the most popular offering read something to this effect: "Whoever goes to bed first, Dummy!"

If you want to discipline your youngsters the way the Iroquois did theirs; don't spank them, just dunk them in water.

Q. What country has the greatest per capita consumption of beer?

Q. How many eyelashes do I lose in a year?

WHAT'S WHAT
L.M. Boyd

Requested Rem: Tennis players might quote Shakespeare's Henry VI: "O monstrous fault!" Basketball players, Henry V: "Hear the shrill whistle." Bowlers, The Tempest: "Mercy on us, we split." Gollers, King John: "Give me an iron." Baseball players, Othello: "You did bid me steal." Hockey players, "A Midsummer Night's Dream: "Gentle Puck, come hither." Among major predatory mammals, only one sort can climb high into trees - the leopard. A sloth can crawl but not stand up.
