Concorde crash kills 113

Aircraft plows into French hotel

The Associated Press

GONESSE, France — With flames and smoke streaking from its engines, an Air France Concorde carrying German tourists to New York for a Caribbean cruise crashed into a hotel outside Paris shortly after takeoff Tuesday. At least 113 people died.

It was the first fatal crash for the needle-nosed supersonic aircraft, and all other Concorde and British aviation for their luxury, safety and speed — were grounded.

Air France said one of the plane's four engines appeared to have failed. Some witnesses reported that an engine burst into flame even before the plane left the ground.

The passengers on flight AF459, chartered by a German tourist agency, included 96 Germans, two Danes, one Austrian and one American, as well as nine crew members, the airline said. The American was a retired Air France employee, but the company did not release a name. Four other people were killed at the small-hotel-levelled crash, the Interior Ministry said.

A pall of acrid smoke rose from the blackened wreckage and over the wheat fields at Gonesse, a small town near Paris' Charles de Gaulle airport. Firefighters sprayed the rubble with water, and the twisted metal from the plane — which was fully fueled for its trans-Atlantic run — was hardly recognizable as fuselage.

French legal experts were examining the charred bodies of the 113 victims for identification.

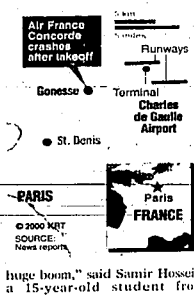

French television showed a dramatic photograph of the disabled plane flying low over the airport, flames spewing from the engines on one wing.

The Concorde struggled to gain altitude, then banked before slamming into the hotel.

"We saw flames shoot up 40 meters (120 feet) and there was a Gonesse, who was playing tennis. "The pilot tried to yank it up, but it was too late."

"For those who were witnesses, of whom I was one, it seems that there was a fire in one or more of the engines on takeoff," Air France President Jean-Cyril Spinetta told reporters at the airport.

Early Wednesday, the transportation ministry said the plane's two flight recorders, which were damaged in the crash, had been found. Experts said possible causes of engine problems ranged from birds flying into the air-intake to mechanical failure.

The crash did not appear to be linked to cracks found recently in both British Airways and Air France Concordes. Air France said this particular plane, in service since 1980, did not have reported fissures.

The first Concorde plane flew in 1969. With the crash, there are now 12 of the distinctive delta-wing jets in the Air France and British Airways fleets. British Airways canceled its two Tuesday night Concorde flights from London to New York and New York to London.

French Transport Minister Jean-Claude Gissot ordered all Concorde flights suspended for Wednesday. Air France's Spinetta said the day would be used to check the rest of the company's Concordes.

Officials agree to salmon strategy

Kempthorne calls

it recovery road map

By N.S. Nakkentwer
Times-News writer

BOISE — Four Pacific Northwest governors, in a rare agreement Tuesday, signed a salmon recovery strategy they called historic — but skeptics called window-dressing.

Idaho Gov. Dick Kempthorne called it a salmon recovery road map — which suggests the possibility of reintroducing salmon above Idaho Power Co.'s Hells Canyon dam complex, and supports using stored water from southern Idaho only if federal agencies can show it helps the fish.

Environmentalists and sport fishermen saw the agreement a good step, but it falls short because it doesn't include a call for breaching four federal dams on the lower Snake River.

"This is what the governors agree on; it's not what's good for the fish," said Mitch Sanchez of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited.

The document was signed by Republicans Kempthorne and Montana Gov. Marc Racicot, who attended via speaker phone, and Democrats John Kitzhaber of Oregon and Washington Gov. Gary Locke, who was represented by Larry Cassidy, chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council.

The document includes the suggestions for salmon recovery that they all agree on, but they acknowledged that salmon recovery is a national issue that will require a sizable federal commitment of money.

Meanwhile federal officials are scheduled to announce their

Magic Valley leaders support question marketing organization

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some Magic Valley leaders say they will consider a six-county marketing organization to encourage job growth, while others question the need for it.

"We're each out there trying to sell ourselves now," Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said Tuesday. "Are we not repeating ourselves with a greater program?"

Hempleman said Twin Falls County already works with the city of Twin Falls on economic development. But counties also work with other Magic Valley cities and counties.

But Hempleman agreed the county could use some more business.

Ray Prescott, a Jerome County commissioner, said he supports the idea for a six-county marketing organization — proposed recently by the Atlanta-based consulting firm Lockwood

A six-county marketing organization would serve Twin Falls, Cassia, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding and Minidoka counties.

Greene, hired by the Twin Falls and Jerome chambers of commerce.

"If a corporation were to come into Twin Falls, we would get some fallout of that. A company comes in and they have 15 to 300 (workers), some people will live in Jerome. There is benefit from all of it," Prescott said.

Lockwood Greene was hired to study the local market and determine its strengths and weaknesses.

A six-county marketing organization — the consultant's most aggressive plan for marketing — would serve Twin Falls, Cassia, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding and Minidoka counties, and have an annual budget of about $300,000.

The organization would have an executive director and a 15-member board of directors, made up of city, county, business and economic development leaders.

Lee Wagner, chairman of the Business Plus II economic development project committee, presented Lockwood Greene's idea to the Twin Falls City Council Monday. Jerome city and county officials and local business leaders reviewed the six-county plan last week.

Prescott said it's likely Jerome County will kick in money for such an organization.

The amount of money each county would give would depend on population.

Jerome County's share would be about $3,700, Prescott said.

Lockwood Greene, as part of its $80,000 study, determined that more industry would benefit the Magic Valley.

A six-county organization would work to bring in industry. Please see DEVELOPMENT, Page A2

Cheney pick draws mixed reviews in West

States News Service and Associated Press

Rep. Mike Simpson said Texas Gov. Bush, the presidential nominee, joked Tuesday that he hadn't picked Cheney.

Dick Cheney, Wyoming's

Westerners in a way that many before him in the White House have not.

"For the West, it is an extremely important choice," Sen. Larry Craig said.

The 58-year-old Cheney packs a hefty resume of congressional and executive branch experience.

He was White House chief of staff in 1975-76 and represented Wyoming in Congress from 1979 until 1989. He was secretary of defense under Bush's father.

President George Bush said, "He can provide a Washington perspective so he can provide a nice balance to the ticket." Idaho picked him because he is without doubt capable of being president of the United States and will be a valuable partner in a Bush administration."

Western Republicans echoed Bush's enthusiasm.

"I don't think Governor Bush could have found a better running mate," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said in a statement. "I believe we can count on him to be an effective advocate for issues that are critical to rural states such as Idaho."

Peace talks collapse over Jerusalem

The Associated Press

THURMONT, Md. — The Middle East peace talks at Camp David collapsed Tuesday over rival claims to East Jerusalem. Disappointed, President Clinton said he tried several approaches during 14 days of intensive negotiations but could not come up with a solution.

"They couldn't get there; that's the truth," Clinton said at the White House.

Despite the failure, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat pledged to continue their efforts to resolve the issues that have divided their people for 52 years.

"This is agonizing for both of them," Clinton said at a hastily arranged news conference. "I think they both remain committed to peace. I think they both will find a way to get there if they don't let time run away from them."

Clinton, Arafat and Barak met for a final time Tuesday morning, shortly before the official announcement that the talks had collapsed. A photograph released by the White House showed all three looking grim.

"Israel was ready to bring an end of the conflict for a painful price, but not at any price," Barak said at a news conference.

"On three things we cannot make concessions on security for Israel, the holiness of Israel, and the unity of the nation."

Arafat left the talks without talking to reporters, but a top aide, Saeb Erakat, said he was confident the differences between the Israelis and Palestinians could be overcome.

"The alternatives to a peace agreement are very ugly," said Secretary of State Colin Powell, the P.L.O.'s representative in Washington.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat receives a kiss from an unidentified man as he leaves Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland Tuesday for his flight home.

Concorde: Source of pride despite costs

Newsway
It's been a source of pride for its European builders but the Concorde SST also has been a source of headaches for European accountants.

Answers to America's space program, it's been a money loser for the French-British consortium that manufactured it and, until recently, for the two airlines that flew it. Aviation experts say it was doomed from the start, economically, by a range that's too short, by too few seats and by a fuel-wasting 1960's vintage design that was never worth updating because so few Concordes are flying—13 before Tuesday's crash. Rates according to figures: All the World's Aircraft is 4,090 miles, just over half the range of the long-range Boeing 747-400. "It is known as one of the giant planning disasters," said Michael Boyd, who heads the aviation consulting group in Evergreen, Colo., that bears his name. "It was built on the basis of national pride, not economics. No one bothered to stop and say 'Does this make any economic sense?'"

Experts say it also was designed based on flawed assumptions about how much most people were willing to pay to save time in the air.

More people might have been willing to pay a premium to board it if the Concorde could fly further and, thus, save travelers more time, said Adam Pilarski, a senior vice president at Avias Inc., the Virginia-based aviation consulting service.

"If you fly 15 hours and you can cut off half that time, it really means something," Pilarski said. "But if you're only flying seven and you can cut off three or four, it doesn't mean as much."

A 300-seat capacity would have made it more viable, he said. It seats only 100.

Only British Airways and Air France have ever operated the Concorde, which made its first test flight in March 1969. It's been carrying passengers since 1976, making it the world's second supersonic passenger plane, after the ill-fated Soviet-made Tu-144, which were yanked from civilian passenger service after one crashed at the 1973 Paris air show.

Report: Popular reforms boost students' scores

WASHINGTON — States that reduce class sizes, enroll more kids in public preschool, give teachers more classroom materials and target additional money to poor children are improving the lot of all students, according to a private study of how state policies affect test scores.

And Texas schoolchildren — regardless of how much money their parents make or what race they are — are likely to do better than counterparts in other states, Rand concluded in the report released Tuesday. California children had the lowest scores in the several socio-economic categories examined by Rand, a think tank based in Santa Monica, Calif.

"Regardless of where a child starts out in Texas, the research shows there is going to be improvement," said David Grissmer, the principal investigator of the three-year Rand study, which examined math and reading scores from the National Assessment of Educational Progress tests given between 1990 and 1996.

Educators reacting to the study said Tuesday that many states could be credited with improvements.

Like Texas, Wisconsin, Montana and Iowa also ranked high in the Rand study. Louisiana, Mississippi and West Virginia joined California in posting low scores across all categories.

Communities could get poverty relief due to bill

WASHINGTON — Forty impoverished communities to be chosen nationwide would get tax breaks, regulatory relief and new government programs under a bill passed overwhelmingly by the House on Tuesday as a partial solution for places not sharing in America's prosperity.

With a solid 394-27 bipartisan vote, the House sent the bill to the Senate, where a similar measure is pending. President Clinton is an enthusiastic supporter with Republican leaders in Congress, making the legislation one of the few major tax-related bills with a chance of becoming law this year.

"This is not pro-Republican or pro-Democrat. It's something good for people," said House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.

The anti-poverty legislation was rushed to the House floor under special rules prohibiting amendments and limiting debate so it would pass before Congress recesses in August for the Democratic and Republican political conventions.

Hero in shootings admits story was exaggerated

NEW YORK — A former student who emerged as a hero following the 1997 school shooting in Paducah, Ky., acknowledges his role may have been exaggerated, The New York Times reported Tuesday.

"Sometimes, people get the wrong idea," Ben Strong, 20, told the newspaper.

Three girls were killed in the December 1997 shooting at Heath High School. Five other students were wounded when shots were fired at a student prayer group.

Strong, who acknowledged in an interview that he did not take the gun away from the shooter, Michael Carnell, as he sometimes suggested after the attack, the Times said. He also acknowledged he might not have done anything to stop Carnell from continuing to shoot, the newspaper said.

News information began to emerge because of a lawsuit filed by the families of the three slain girls.

Rock that damaged car is a meteorite from outer space

MINNEAPOLIS — It was no ordinary rock that broke Rick Wirth's windshield four years ago. It came from outer space. And it's older than the Earth.

Wirth got confirmation that his rock is a meteorite from a geology professor Monday.

In 35 years at the University of Minnesota, professor Paul Weiblen said he has seen that kind of rocks brought in by people who thought they had meteorites. All of them were mere Earth rocks.

But when last month he saw the rock that broke through the windshield of Wirth's Geo Metro and split in two, Weiblen figured his luck had changed. "I feel every sample someone thinks might be a meteorite is worth looking at," Weiblen said. "But when I opened this package I knew."

Salmon

salmon recovery strategy Thursday.

The governors' document represents "a list of things that are doable... that we can do now," Kempthorne said.

"This is a clear-eyed recognition that although at this time there is not a political consensus on the fate of the lower Snake River dams, there is still a lot that can be done to restore the Columbia River ecosystem while the question of dam breaching continues to be debated," Kitzhaber said.

Arguments over breaching miss the larger question of what to do now, he said. Central to the controversy about recovering endangered salmon in the Snake and Columbia rivers has been the proposal to breach four federal dams on the lower Snake in southeastern Washington. Most Northwest fisheries scientists say dam breaching would be the best way to restore Snake River salmon.

Because the agreement doesn't include a recommendation to breach the four dams, the four governors are merely endorsing more of the same that has been done for the past 30 years, Sanchoena said.

Scott Bossert of Idaho Rivers United acknowledged the importance of what the governors agreed on, but said it doesn't address the four dams.

U.S. District Judge Malcolm Marsh in a 1993 ruling criticized the government's salmon recovery methods as inadequate because they rely on minor repairs rather than a major overhaul of the Snake and Columbia hydroelectric system, Bossert said.

Whatever the document leads to will have to stand up to Marsh's scrutiny. The Clinton administration has made it clear that the question of dam breaching would be put off for up to 10 years.

Kitzhaber has said he would support dam breaching, but said he would back away if these suggestions work.

The document doesn't appear in the document, the four governors expressed some support for completing the engineering, feasibility and mitigation studies for breaching the dams.

The governors' suggestions include:

- Recovering fish to fishable levels in accordance with federal laws and Indian treaties.
- Further reductions in commercial and sport fisheries.
- Habitat improvements that include land use restrictions and creating salmon sanctuaries.
- Reducing predators that feed on young salmon in the Columbia River estuary.
- Improved salmon passage at lower Snake and Columbia river dams.
- Improved hatchery operations.

Suggestions also include securing adequate amounts of water for the migrating fish. Kempthorne said he and the other states would support obtaining more water for salmon — known as flow augmentation — from willing sellers, as long as state water rights are respected and federal officials can show evidence that it helps fish.

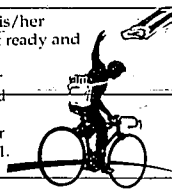

The Idaho Water Users Association Tuesday said the governors' agreement makes a beginning of the end for the controversial flow augmentation plan.

"The governors have challenged the federal government to document the alleged benefits of flow augmentation," Norm Semanko, executive director and counsel for the association, said in a prepared statement.

U.S. buys 'national treasure'

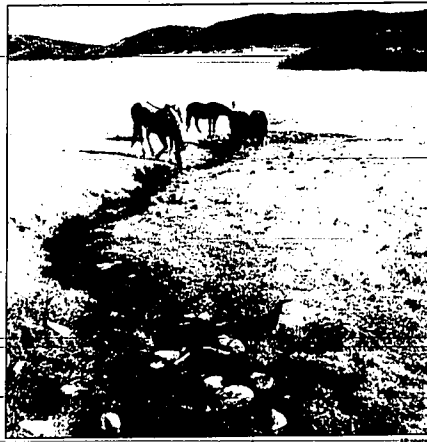

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signed a bill Tuesday to pay $101 million for a sprawling New Mexico ranch he called "an extraordinary national treasure."

Clinton's signature gave final approval to the federal purchase of Baca Ranch, a 95,000-acre swath of forested mountains and grassy valleys that includes the collapsed crater of an ancient volcano. Supporters of the purchase, including New Mexico's entire congressional delegation, say the ranch is a pristine natural jewel that deserves to be preserved for all Americans.

"This property is unique," said Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M. "It deserves to be treated in a special way, set aside for future generations and made available to the public."

Clinton signed the legislation at Camp David, the Maryland retreat where Middle East peace talks ended Tuesday. The Senate passed the bill in April, with the House approving it 377-45 July 12.

Critics say the government is paying far too much for the ranch northwest of Santa Fe, which the late Texas oil tycoon James P. Dungan bought for $2.1 million in 1962. Rep. John Duncan Jr., R-Tenn., called the purchase "a colossal rip-off of the taxpayers" in House debate this month.

Supporters say the ranch is worth the money and add that it will be managed by a unique trust, unlike other federal lands in New Mexico. A nine-member board of trustees, at least five of them New Mexicans, will manage the property as a working ranch while allowing public access for hunting, fishing, hiking and other recreation. The trustees are to be named within 90 days.

"Now the challenge is for the trustees to run it right... and in the public interest," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

Clinton says he made a 'terrible mistake' on Waco

WASHINGTON — President Clinton told investigators in April he made "a terrible mistake" in yielding to Justice Department pleas to storm the Branch Davidian compound at Waco, Texas seven years ago and feels personally responsible for the tragedy.

"I gave into the people at the Justice Department who were pleading to go in early, and I felt personally responsible for what happened and I still do," the president said. "I made a terrible mistake."

Clinton's comments are in a transcript of his interview by federal investigators probing campaign fundraising controversies.

Senate approves conservation bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel approved a landmark conservation bill Tuesday that supporters say will provide a reliable $3 billion a year for buying land, restoring coastlines and protecting wildlife.

Western Republicans and other critics vowed to continue fighting the bill, which they termed a federal land grab and "pile of pork."

Despite indentments such as doubling payments to local governments to replace lost tax revenue for federal land, Western Republicans still don't like the bill.

They say the government mismanages land it already owns and shouldn't add more acreage. The Energy and Resources Committee approved the bill 13-7 with four Republicans joining all nine Democrats. The vote came after 11 hours of debate over five days.

"This is the most significant commitment of resources ever made to conservation by the Congress," said Chairman Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

The White House supports the bill and the House overwhelmingly approved a similar measure in May. Unlike the House version, the Senate bill would require Congress to vote on each purchase.

Mike Hardiman, a lobbyist for the American Land-Rights Association and bill opponent, said critics would step up efforts to defeat the measure in the Senate.

"This is a $45 billion pile of pork," Hardiman said. "We're going to fight this to the last ditch."

Murkowski said he believes the bill has the 60 votes necessary to stop a filibuster.

Crash kills seven, injures remaining four

CHAPIN, S.C. (AP) — Rescuers knew the wreck was serious when they saw the crumpled Chevrolet Suburban on its side and the smashed cargo truck on the shoulder of Interstate 26. Bench towels, suitcases and lawn chairs littered the highway shoulder.

It wasn't until authorities peeled back the Suburban's roof Monday that they realized it was the worst wreck most of them had ever seen.

Seven people were dead, including six inside the Chevy.

Troopers said a tire blew out on the truck, sending it across the median and heading into the Suburban along a stretch of highway with a 70-mph speed limit about 15 miles northwest of Columbia.

Killed were Taylor Odem, 42, his wife, Mary Ann, 41, three of their children and a Russian exchange student traveling with them, Coroner Frank Barron said.

The truck driver, Jim Harris, 72, also died at the scene. Four other children, including three members of the Odem family, were injured and taken to a hospital. At least one was in critical condition.

All-Idaho user pass could make life simpler for some

It was inevitable. The ever-growing list of fees that recreationists must pay to enjoy public lands is blurring together to create the mother of all user passes. Several state and federal agencies are proposing a single, unified pass to admit visitors to many of Idaho's day-use recreation spots.

The idea is much like a Sportsman's package from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which allows a hunter and angler to buy a single license for a wide variety of fish and game species. The proposed Visit Idaho Playgrounds pass, with an opportunity to offer comments, can be found at www.idahoparks.org/survey.

Want to comment

A 20-question internet survey about the proposed Visit Idaho Playgrounds pass, with an opportunity to offer comments, can be found at www.idahoparks.org/survey.

Visit Playgrounds (VIP) pass would gain the bearer access to more than 90 fee areas, including 38 trailheads in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, as well as all state parks, Park N' Ski areas, Craters of the Moon National Monument, and three fee areas administered by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Buying an annual pass for each of these areas would cost more than $150. All those passes would also require a lot of windshield space, because the passes are for motor vehicles, not people.

The proposed VIP pass would certainly be convenient, but it must be priced low enough to be of value.

As a practical matter, few people have the time, money or inclination to visit all the places where a VIP pass would be valid. Instead, most folks have a few favorite areas—usually within 150 miles of their homes—where they do the bulk of their outdoor recreation. If the combination pass is priced too high, it will make sense for most folks to continue buying annual passes for their favorite places and paying day-use fees everywhere else.

The VIP pass is still in its conceptual stages, but participating agencies are seeking public comment. This is a good time to comment because many details—including price—are still far from settled.

No matter how it's structured, the VIP pass must be a consolidation of existing user fees. It should not be a vehicle to create new fees for areas that currently don't have any.

Over the years, we've been skeptical of access fees on public lands. Asking taxpayers to open their wallets before taking a hike, spreading a picnic blanket or riding a mountain bike on public land is still a troubling concept.

But we'll concede a benefit. When people pay a modest fee to use improved recreational areas, they tend to be more respectful. Paying a small fee instills a sense of pride and, yes, ownership. The upshot is less litter, less vandalism and less disrespectful behavior.

Those are worthy goals, and so is maintaining affordable access to public lands. The trick is to balance these oft-competing interests for the greatest good.

Bush makes wise move with Cheney

Back on April 26, a few days after he had named Dick Cheney to manage the search for a Republican vice presidential candidate, I asked Texas Gov. George W. Bush if that assignment took Cheney out of the running for the No. 2 job. My reason for asking—which I did not share with Bush—was that the former defense secretary had seemed to me to be exactly the kind of partner Bush would want on the ticket, and even more, at his side if he became president.

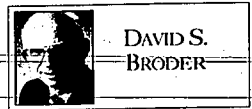

The governor said: "It's interesting. Only one other reporter—Ron Brownstein (of the Los Angeles Times)—has asked me that question. The answer is: Not necessarily. Dick is too modest to recommend himself. But I'm the one who will do the choosing."

I put the short exchange into the politics column of The Washington Post on April 28—and it stuck in my mind through all the weeks of increasingly heated speculation about which senator or governor Bush might pick.

Now, he has named Cheney as his choice, and it makes sense politically and governmentally, just as it did last spring, when I was speculating for my own amusement about Bush's options.

Here's why: You must understand that Bush fully expects to be elected president. He may be wrong. Vice President Gore may beat him. But Bush doesn't think that will happen, and so, the choice of a running mate for him has more to do with a partner in government than an ally in the campaign.

Few if any Republicans match Cheney's credentials. For most of the past quarter-century, he has operated successfully at the top levels of government, first as chief of staff to President Ford, then as a member and deputy minority leader of the House of Representatives, and finally as secretary of defense in the elder George Bush's administration.

Second, beyond ability, the quality Governor Bush—like his parents—values most is loyalty. And both the former president, as well as colleagues of both parties in Congress, give glowing testimony that Cheney is a man of his word. Once he makes a commitment, he keeps it.

The irony is that, were it not for the Democratic-controlled Senate's rejection of the late John Tower as secretary of defense back in 1989, which forced President Bush to make a second choice for the job, Cheney would probably be the speaker of the House. He was in line to succeed to the Republican leadership and, as speaker, Cheney would probably have been too important a potential partner for a Bush administration to be chosen for the ticket.

As everyone has pointed out, Cheney is not the obvious political pick for the job. At 59, with a history of heart troubles, he may not be a likely successor to Wyoming, whose paltry three electoral votes are guaranteed to be in Bush's column anyhow. His solid conservative voting record on economic, social and defense issues will comfort hard-core Republicans—but they were overwhelmingly pro-Bush anyhow.

But the choice of Cheney frees up Bush to do what he wants and needs to do politically: Focus his campaigning on the ticket-splitting, independent voters in suburban areas in the battleground states. Republicans in the Mountain states and the deep South will be happy to see Cheney come around; Bush won't have to bother. And it's important to note that Lynne Cheney has built her own following among conservatives as a harsh critic of "political correctness" and a lack-of-rigor and discipline in the schools.

Democrats will have no difficulty finding rhetoric and policy stunts by both Cheneys that will raise liberal hackles. But his manner gives him immunity from the extremist label. Voters who saw his televised briefings during the Persian Gulf War remember the calm voice and thoughtful expression that are his natural style. His careful preparation will almost guarantee him a respectable showing against any Democrat Gore, chosen to send into the vice presidential debate. And should Bush win, Cheney's friendships on Capitol Hill will be an asset in moving a legislative program.

Insiders say that Bush's choice came down to Cheney and former Missouri Sen. John Danforth. Both men are mature, deeply rooted in family and faith, with enough accomplishments in their past careers that neither hungers for the role. Both are serious about government and have the courage and experience to provide wise counsel to a president. By choosing a grown-up, Bush gave evidence of his own sense of responsibility.

Gore has a number of such people available to him—including at least two who, like Cheney, have retired from the political wars: George Mitchell, the former Senate majority leader, and Leon Panetta, the former congressman, budget director and White House chief of staff. Could we be lucky enough to go back to the future again?

Teachers work hard for students

I am writing in response to the Times-News editorial of July 20 concerning teacher salaries in Idaho. First of all, get your facts straight! You wrote: "Now consider the professional achievements of local teachers. In many school districts throughout the Magic Valley, student test scores are flat to declining. There are many reasons why Johnny can't read and Susie can't do math. It may be, as school officials assert, that our family environments play a role, but the bottom line is that society pays teachers to educate students. If the quality of education is declining, should teacher salaries go up?"

Your own newspaper has published the test scores of the past years, and this last school year the test scores jumped tremendously. Our district has committed to making sure all the possible education they can receive. They have hired reading specialists at each of the elementary schools and have spent all last year, this summer and next year training all Twin Falls teachers in the reading process. We spend exorbitant amounts of time in teaching math computation all the way through high school. As the Twin Falls High School class of 2000 graduated this past Memorial Day, it was announced that this class received more than $1.4 million dollars in college scholarships, an all-time high! This, Mr. Editor, is not done without committed teachers.

Before you write such blatant editorials in your own paper, get your facts straight. If you want to speak about a decline—what about your own circulation? What is the average length of employment of your employees? As a teacher proud to be employed in the Twin Falls School District, I have spent many long hours outside of school preparing for my students. I am spending most of this summer taking classes to further my skills as a teacher. Many of my colleagues are working second jobs this summer to help their families out. This, Mr. Editor, does not sound like "overpaid." This sound to me like commitment to the children of the Magic Valley!

Idaho needs more than one party
The Intermountain West is dominated by a political party. Our representative form of government here in Idaho does not work well when there is no opposition party.

I am urging people to become involved in the political process by becoming active in the Democratic Party. I know that many Magic Valley residents do not agree with some important moral issues that the national Democratic Party seems to espouse. This has become a major stumbling block to the success of our state party. I speak for myself in this letter, but personally I am pro-life and do not want to promote in any way the gay lifestyle. I believe there are others that are like me who are tired of the Republicans dominating our state government and would like to see change.

Please seek out the local and state Democratic Party and help us become a loyal opposition party that can help our state.

Website helps relieve pain

I have been suffering from a spinal cord injury that is both excruciatingly painful and ultimately crippling. I have been denied the specialty care I need for one of three reasons: I am an injured worker who put together a manual for others to navigate this terrible system or because I took a case before the Board of Medicine.

Many of the roadblocks I have run into have been alleviated by a site on the Internet for patients and using patient surveys to grade hospitals, doctors and other medical necessities. It is called healthgrades.com and is just the beginning for real quality care.

Time to hold leaders accountable

I believe that many problems boiling to a head in Jerome at present started with the appointment of full-time commissioner Roy Prescott. It was then that Roy began attending to all of the business in the county, and the other two commissioners relied too much on Roy to fill them in. This created an imbalance of power and influence which gave the "bad ol' boys" an environment in which to spread and metastasize like a quick-growing cancer. I attended many of these meetings myself in person. What I saw and heard was Roy Prescott pandering his pet project, "Crossroads," and not from the perspective of a public servant. His involvement goes as far back as his days on planning and zoning many, many moons ago.

The fact that The Times-News picked up on the blatant conflicts of interest among public officials in Jerome is an indicator of how bad it really is. I'm not against the development of Crossroads, but I don't think the cost should be born on the backs of tax-paying citizens in Jerome, put there by men who are supposed to be serving in our best interests. Prescott is not the only one we need to keep an eye on here.

I resent what some infer as being negative efforts to expose corruption. I think you are confused. Corruption is negative. Exposing corruption is a good thing.

While back, the paper had an article about a government watchdog group touting Idaho as one out of only three states without financial disclosure laws. We were in a three-way tie for last place for "making basic information on lawmakers' income, assets and conflicts of interest publicly accessible." I think it's time we start to hold our leaders more accountable. Financial disclosure laws would enable early detection of corruption. It creates checks and balances for just their own selfish interests, and that those who do risk being caught. It's a win-win for the people.

I know that some of the legislators don't agree. Well fine, when "if there's nothing to hide, then why try to hide it?"

What say you?

Don't be too quick to open roads

The good news is that calmer heads prevailed during the Jarbidge Shovel Brigade effort to defy professional management of public lands. Those who have some personal gain in mind or have a misguided belief that the Forest Service and other federal management agencies are somehow the enemy were ignored in the end. Most of the hyped numbers of people who were supposed to be coming probably never were; others who planned to come found higher priorities, and those who did come found that it is tough work to make a statement with shovel.

READER COMMENT

reopen a number of old, abandoned uranium mining roads and trails. As in that Jarbidge case, the roads really didn't go anywhere and weren't needed but did have the potential to cause erosion and other problems if they were reopened. On two separate occasions, I received word early on a Saturday morning that the county had machinery out on one of the sites and was going to open a road. For a number of reasons, it was not deemed to be in the public interest. It was my responsibility to go to the site to block the effort and to try to prevent any action that would lead to an escalation, which would inevitably lead to litigation and other expenses to both the local and federal government. This same sequence was repeated a second time at another road with the same results.

In both cases, the county commissioners flexed their administrative muscle, pushed a little dirt around and left the scene with a lot less cost to the taxpayers than has been the case in Jarbidge where out-of-state interests, including newspapers, congressmen and others with personal agendas have managed to force Elko County and the federal government into spending major amounts of money with no positive benefits to the land or the taxpayers.

The rest of the story in Grand County is that the roads were never opened; instead, they now form part of the Slickhorn Bike Trail and adjoining Negro Bill Canyon trail system. These trails are contributing to the economic well-being of Moab and Grand County as well as providing a great recreation resource for all of us.

Does this mean that I, representing the federal government, was always right and Grand County was always wrong? No, but it does mean that professional management and honest dialogue among local, state and federal officials will always carry the day. Let's hope that Elko County and the federal government can now peacefully resolve their differences and that all of the outsiders will mount their shovels over their fireplaces and tell stories to their grandchildren about the Jarbidge Shovel Brigade.

Let's keep "public lands in public hands" and remember that these lands may be the most valuable asset that states like Idaho and Nevada have. Arguments over a few roads here and there are bound to

A comparison was made between the Jarbidge affair and the incidents which took place in Grand County, Utah, during the so-called Sagebrush Rebellion of the late '70s. Even the Bureau of Land Management Moab District manager at that time and was responsible for the nation's public lands in the four counties in southeast Utah. The BLM was trying to respond to public requests for a host of uses including mining, grazing, oil and gas leasing, recreation use and, at the same time, trying to protect the outstanding values of the rivers and scenic areas. Grand County, with its county seat in Moab, decided to assert what it considered its right to open, but private ownership of these lands is the motive of many of the agitators in disputes such as Jarbidge and that means the public is locked out and the "Private - No Trespassing" signs go up as they have in so many other non-public land states.

People need more knowledge
I am not a teacher. However, my parents are teachers. My sister is a teacher. I thus have a certain familiarity with the teaching profession. For this reason, I am angered when I hear people minimize the work teachers do and am disturbed when I hear non-educators attempting to dictate how schools should be run.

My aim here is not to advocate raising teachers' salaries but rather to suggest that if people don't understand the reality of a teacher's life, the question of whether teachers are appropriately paid cannot be properly resolved.

In the July 20 editorial, the author expressed the sentiment that teachers have reasonable, 40-hour-a-week jobs made cushy by a much vaunted time.

My mother is a kindergarten teacher. On a typical school day, she wakes up at 5:15 so she can be at school before 7 a.m. She then works straight from 7 a.m. until 5 or 6 p.m. and, on a good day, will have half an hour of uninterrupted time at lunch to eat. Then she comes home and, unless she has family or church obligations, she works on school work until 10 or 11 p.m.

While most grades are not as time consuming as kindergarten, all teachers grade papers, figure report cards and serve on various school committees — work that is generally done outside school hours. Teachers do not "sometimes take work home with them;" most of them do so every day. Even summer vacation — which is not so long once you subtract the amount of time teachers spend working in their rooms and preparing materials for the coming year — is small consolation for working 12- to 14-hour days five to seven days a week nine to 10 months of the year for substantially less than $22 an hour.

Granted, there are mediocre teachers who slack off in their jobs. So does this mean that my mother — and others like her — should be rewarded with a higher salary through "merit-based pay" as the editorial's author suggests?

My mother would say no. In education, basing an employee's salary on performance would be counterproductive. Teachers need a collaborative, harmonious work environment to function most effectively. If we implement a system where teachers have to compete against each other for pay it will create negative incentives for teachers to share ideas and is likely to cause dissension.

Woman dies in I-84 rollover Tuesday

WENDELL - A woman, possibly from Texas, died Tuesday afternoon at the scene of a single-vehicle rollover on Interstate 84 just east of Wendell.

Identity of the woman, and a man injured in the accident, had not been determined Tuesday evening, the Idaho State Police said.

The man and woman were the only people in a 1999 Ford sport utility vehicle with Texas license plates. The SUV rolled at about 3 p.m.

The exact cause of the accident, and the circumstances surrounding the accident, were under investigation Tuesday evening, the ISP said.

The man, thought to be in his early 20s, was taken by Life Flight air ambulance to the Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Air Force to hold hearing on supersonic jet plan

TWIN FALLS - Southern Idaho residents will get a chance tonight to comment on a plan that could bring a wing of new F-22 supersonic fighter jets to Mountain Home Air Force Base.

The hearing will be held from 6:45 to 9 p.m. at rooms 276 and 277 of the Taylor Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

The Mountain Home base is one of five bases across the country under consideration for the first operational wing of the newest Air Force fighter jet, the F-22 Raptor.

Air Force officials will consider the options for locating the new wing in an environmental impact statement.

Air Force officials expect to get 72 of the controversial aircraft starting in 2004, and they propose to establish an operational wing, split into three squadrons of 24 each.

In addition to Mountain Home, Air Force officials are considering four other locations - two bases in Florida, one in Alaska and the preferred alternative, Langley Air Force Base in Virginia.

Blaine planners to discuss hospital sign proposal

HAILEY - The Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing Thursday on an application by St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center for a sign variance for its new hospital.

The hearing will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the old County Courthouse, 206 First Ave. S.

Simpson staffer to tour Gooding County Thursday

TWIN FALLS - One of U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson's staff members will travel to several Magic Valley towns Thursday to visit with constituents.

Twin Falls staff assistant Linda Culver will serve as Simpson's "traveling district office," designed to give residents who may not live close to one Simpson's four field offices the chance to sound off on his issues.

Culver will be at Hagerman City Hall from 9 to 10 a.m., at Bliss City Hall from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., Gooding City Hall from 2 to 3 p.m., and Wendell City Hall from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Open house planned for Jerome administrator

JEROME - Everyone is invited to an open house-farewell party scheduled for outgoing City Administrator Jon Cecil Friday in City Council chambers from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The open house will give staff, friends and acquaintances an opportunity to say farewell to Cecil.

Police arrest suspect in Colorado prison escape Tuesday

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A man suspected of escaping from a Colorado prison was arrested early Tuesday after a high-speed chase and fiery crash in Twin Falls County, according to court documents.

Edward P. Conyac, 29, was arraigned Tuesday on charges of attempting to elude an officer, resisting or obstructing officers, driving without privileges and reckless driving. A preliminary hearing for Conyac on the attempt to elude an officer charge is set for Aug. 4. He pleaded innocent to the other charges and was being held on a $4,500 bond.

At about 1 a.m. Tuesday, the Twin Falls County sheriff's office was alerted that Wells, Nev., police were chasing a 1985 Honda northbound on U.S. Highway 93, according to a deputy's report filed with court documents.

Wells police reported that the pursuit was reaching speeds of 85 to 110 mph and was nearing the Idaho-Nevada border. Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy Jason Farr wrote in his report. A warrant had been issued for Conyac's arrest in connection with a Colorado prison escape, according to the report.

No details were available Tuesday about the Colorado prison escape, or Conyac's criminal record there, sheriff's department spokeswoman Nancy Howell said.

Farr joined the chase as it crossed into Idaho. About 28 miles north of the state line, near Hollister, the car struck a spike strip that deputies had placed on the highway.

After another 4 1/2 miles, the car veered left across the highway before crossing a residential lawn, going through a wooden fence and slamming into the rear of a parked farm tractor. The Honda ignited shortly after impact, according to the report. Conyac left the car and tried to run from officers, but he tripped, fell and was caught a short while later.

Officers on the scene put out the fire, and the Honda was impounded for scrap.

After his arrest, Conyac complained of neck and back pains, Farr wrote in his report.

Conyac was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for an X-ray examination. He was treated for scrapes, then released to deputies' custody, the report says.

Parade kicks off Jerome County Fair and Rodeo

Organizers hope for increase in attendance

By Brandon Flala

JEROME - With its annual parade, the Jerome County Fair marched into 2000, with hopes of increased attendance.

About 25,000 people attend the fair each year. But Tuesday, buoyed not only by the parade but by back-to-back concerts, organizers were hoping for an attendance boost.

"This year we may go a little over, because we get the better part of 5,000 people just for the concerts," Fairgrounds Manager Rob Lundgren said.

Two separate concerts were slated for Tuesday night - one featuring country singer Pam Tillis, another featuring the Tejana band Kumbia Kings.

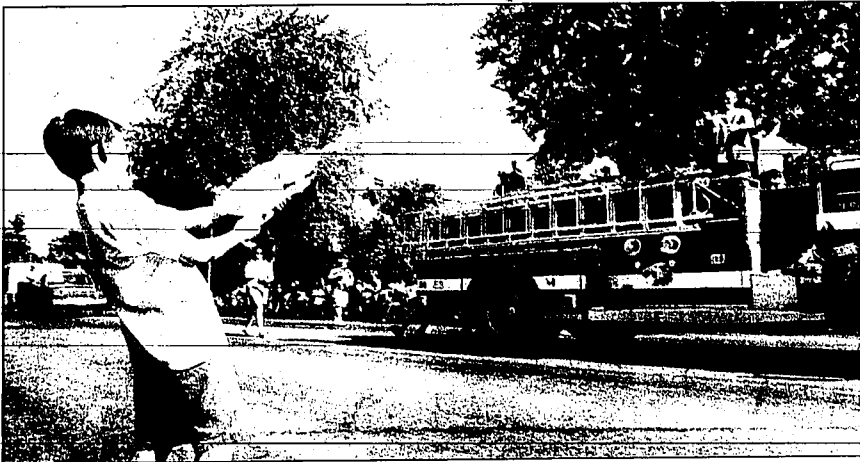

"Ticket sales have gone well for Tillis and fairly well for the Kumbia Kings," said Jack Webster, an employee of Kat Country and KTFA radio stations, which shelved out about $50,000 to sponsor the concerts.

"It's a gamble because there's a tremendous outlay of money," Lundgren said.

The Jerome fair had promoted concerts in the past with taxpayer money, but stopped after the shows money, Lundgren said.

This year's fair has a budget of $146,000, Lundgren said. About a third of the budget comes from taxpayers, a third from fair revenue such as receipts and sponsorships, and a third from booths and building and grounds rentals, Lundgren said.

For the rest of the fair, which runs through Sunday, organizers are hoping to bring in fairgoers with a range of events - from the vicarious thrills of the rodeo and demolition derby to the first-person fun of the carnival.

Oakley-area burn fades out

Crews move on to fight other blazes

OAKLEY - Firefighters who were knocking down the 3,500-acre Devine Canyon fire through Tuesday night still get off a day's rest before heading out to battle other Western wildfires.

Firefighters were aiming to have the week-long fire under control Tuesday, after getting an assist from three days of good weather. About 240 firefighters were dispatched to battle the lightning-caused fire.

The Bureau of Land Management fire crew from Shoshone was scheduled to be dismissed Tuesday night, while the overhaul team - including Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and Idaho Department of Lands firefighters - was scheduled to come off the fire this morning.

Some firefighters will stay around a couple more days to make sure no flareups occur, said David Howell, fire information officer with the Eastern Idaho Interagency Fire Center.

BLM resource advisers will also start work on rehabilitation efforts in the wake of the fire, Howell said. The fire burned on 2,973 acres of BLM land, 477 acres of state land and 43 acres of private property. BLM firefighters had battled the fire all last week. It had nearly been contained Friday at 600 acres when a sudden wind gust fanned the blaze over the perimeter, where it burned an additional 2,900 acres.

No structures were burned or livestock harmed in the fire. The overhaul team will only get about a day's rest before heading off to combat other wildfires. But that's the nature of fire season, Howell said.

In Idaho, four major fires were still burning Tuesday, two in the Salmon area and two north of Boise.

Committee starts to look at change in livestock ordinance

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

FILER - A committee recently formed to look at the county's livestock ordinance has already started work, one of its members said Tuesday.

Ed Smith said he and other committee members met last week and have scheduled another meeting for the beginning of August.

At that meeting, the committee will collectively start reviewing the county's livestock ordinance, which critics have said is flawed. But Smith said he and other residents, including Committee Chairman Jim DeKleinbans, have started suggesting changes for committee consideration, however.

"It was an effort to essentially get our thoughts down so we don't have to start from scratch," said Smith, who was among several dozen residents who met at Lan Miracle's Filer home Tuesday evening to discuss dairy issues.

Smith and DeKleinbans, two citizens' representatives on the seven-member panel, have voiced criticism about industrial dairy operations. The panel also includes dairymen Dave Gondolfo and Alvin Smutny; insurance agent Dave Stuebner; banker Jack McGill; and county planning and zoning commission member Libby Lucas.

"The committee is a good working group," Smith said. "We want to still allow agricultural and confined animal feeding operations to continue. The group is not completely opposed."

Many people at Tuesday night's meeting complained about the smell of the dairies, and said county officials have failed to regulate operations or address their concerns.

"We feel like the county has forgotten about us," Laurie Warren said.

Warren asked, by a show of hands, how many other people at the meeting felt like she did. Nearly everyone in the room raised their hands.

But county officials - who set a three-month moratorium on livestock operations - and appointed the citizens' panel, both within the past three weeks - say they are taking complaints seriously. County commissioners also say they are trying to give residents a forum to air their views.

In an interview earlier Tuesday, Commissioner Gary Gundstad said a public meeting with state agency officials - including Pat Takasugi, director of the state Department of Agriculture - and Steve Allred,

Jack Eugene Simpson

One of Ketchum's legends surrendered his two-year battle with cancer Sunday evening, July 23, 2000. Jack was recently voted the "unsung hero of the valley" by one of the local papers. Humble, but never unspoken, he inspired and touched a lot of people, never once expecting anything but honesty in return.

Born in Wendell, Idaho, on June 1, 1924, he was raised on a farm there by his parents, Owen and Josephine, until the depression forced them to change occupations and move to town. They lived in Hagaman and Wendell off and on until the late thirties. He finished grade school in Wendell, then for his parents in Ketchum in 1939, who already had a grocery store business on Main Street. He graduated from Hailey High School in 1942. It was during this period that he became a skier. Although never mentioned in Sun Valley's history, at age 16 he was a stand-in skier for Sonny Hono when Sun Valley Summer was filmed here. He attended the University of Washington as a member of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity until he was drafted into the Navy in 1943.

He served in the South Pacific and was discharged March 4, 1946, declaring "I've stepped going to capture me for at least five years." He met Mary Lou Shaw while skiing at Stevens Pass, Washington, that same winter. They were married the following March in Hailey. Michael was born in 1948, followed by Patrick in 1951, and Kelly in 1951. Following their marriage, they moved back to Ketchum and helped Jack's parents. The Simpson family opened the Warm Springs Restaurant August 1, 1953. They moved to Fairbanks, Alaska, in 1955, where Jack was a commercial pilot for Wien Airlines until they returned to Ketchum in 1960, to take over Warm Springs Restaurant. Jack ran the bar and Mary Lou was the ever-grocery hostess. During this time, Jack was a ski captain for Sun Valley, a member of the Sun-Valley Ski School and head coach for the Sun Valley Ski Team. Jack and Mary Lou retired from the restaurant in 1975. They enjoyed many years of traveling and adventuring. They built a house in Loreto, Baja California, in 1985, where they have lived for the past 15 years. Jack was a skier, a coach, a pilot, a hunter, a fisherman, an outdoorsman, and a proud and loving father and husband. We will miss him very much.

Jack is survived by his wife Mary Lou of Ketchum; his son, Patrick Simpson (Karen) of Hailey; his daughter, Kelly Allison (Glen) of Ketchum; and three grandchildren, Amber Simpson, Corie Simpson and Josh Allison.

He is preceded in death by his parents, and his son, Michael Simpson in 1999.

A memorial service will be held from noon to 4 p.m. Sunday, July 30, 2000, at the Warm Springs Ranch Inn Restaurant.

Memorial contributions are suggested to the Hospice of the Wood River Valley, P.O. Box 4320, Ketchum, ID 83340. Burial was under the care of Wood River Chapel of Hailey.

Activists call for major overhaul of welfare program

BOISE (AP) - Social activists renewed their attack on Idaho's welfare system on Tuesday, calling for dramatic - and costly - reforms in what they see as a program that puts little value on families.

As the state began its fourth year under the dramatic 1997 revisions to its welfare program, Jen Ray of the Idaho Women's Network argued that "families are not doing better in Idaho, they're doing worse."

While the number of families receiving cash assistance has plunged from over 9,000 in 1996 to under 1,200 now, Ray and others maintained poverty problems across the state are on the rise. They cite reports of increasing pressure for services from private, nonprofit food pantries and temporary-housing providers to prove their point.

MAGIC VALLEY'S LOW PRICE LEADER.
In recent days, there has been notice of funeral homes in the area offering lower prices. This may sound like a new approach, but it simply reinforces the plain fact that they were charging exorbitant prices to begin with. At Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, we would like to reassure our clientele that we have always offered the lowest prices in Twin Falls and will continue to do so. As my grandfather used to say, "Take the time to offer service and quality. People know the difference and won't be fooled by hype."

BURLEY - Most people become CPR certified because it's a job requirement, not because they choose to, said Marty Buss, director of health and safety services administration at the American Red Cross office in Twin Falls.

But once people take first aid classes, they become aware of what they can do in the workplace and in everyday life, Buss said.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation is important to know because there are incidents when a person's chance of survival is much greater if someone knows CPR, Buss said.

Through CPR and other first aid courses at the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Cassia Center in August, people can learn to save lives.

People can learn to use an automated external defibrillator, a laptop-sized CPR device that can restart a person's heart. Students will learn how to recognize and care for adult breathing and cardiac emergencies in this intensive course, scheduled for 5:30 to 10 p.m. Aug. 16. The cost is $25 plus $8.50 for a textbook.

The Red Cross says the device is easy to use and has audio prompts that guide the user.

A workplace training course, slated for 6 to 10 p.m. Aug. 15, will give students knowledge and skills necessary to prevent, recognize and provide basic care for injuries and sudden illnesses. The course meets Occupational Safety and Health Administration first aid requirements. The cost is $40 plus a $14 textbook.

A similar two-hour first aid course will help people prepare for and respond to emergencies when emergency response could take longer than 30 minutes. A valid American Red Cross first aid card is a prerequisite for the $25 class, scheduled for 6 to 8 p.m., Aug. 17.

Other courses include:
• A free course that teaches the benefits of home ownership.

Organizers say the course can help new homeowners qualify for reduced mortgage insurance premiums, closing cost assistance or other special lender programs. The course is scheduled for 6 to 9 p.m. Aug. 14 and 21.

The class includes a training manual and guest speakers.

• Beginning racquetball is scheduled for 1 to 2 p.m., Thursdays between Aug. 17 and Sept. 21. The course is $20.
• Sport safety training specially designed for volunteer coaches who work with children or teenagers. The course teaches techniques to keep athletes safer, will enable coaches to prevent, prepare for and respond to sports-related injuries, raise awareness of sport safety issues.

The course covers sports-related injury prevention, first aid care and adult and child CPR. The cost is $35 plus $17.50 for a textbook.

More than 50 community courses will be offered through GSI's enrichment program at the Mini-Cassia Center between August and December. September courses include Internet research, computer courses, a professional resume-writing workshop, puppy obedience, infant and child CPR, photography, shorthand, bagel making, an injury-prevention series and preventing disease transmission.

Fire bosses get some reinforcement on new blaze near Montana border

SALMON (AP) - Fire bosses got some reinforcements Tuesday in the bid to check a new lightning-sparked wildfire in central Idaho that continues to pose some threat to a ski resort on the Montana border.

Eighty new firefighters were committed to the Twin Fire Tuesday, bringing the total number to 180.

"The Alaska Incident Management Team came in and assumed responsibility for the fire. There are now 180 people on the fire," Willa Bartlett, fire information officer for the Salmon-Challis National Forest said.

Bartlett said the fire had been estimated at 350 acres but has now been reassessed to 270 acres.

The fire has been burning actively since it erupted last weekend just west of U.S. Highway 93 and only a few miles south of the Lost-Fruit Powder Mountain resort below Lost Trail Pass into Montana.

Homes along the highway to the south of the fire were not in any immediate danger.

Aerial bombardment of the hottest spots with water and retardant kept the blaze from growing despite persisting high temperatures and humidity bordering on the single digit.

Meanwhile, two other major central Idaho fires continued to grow.

Some 919 firefighters worked the lines on the Clear Creek Fire, which is about 50 miles west of Salmon. It grew from 46,000 to 54,000 acres Tuesday as it continued to burn in pine and Douglas fir.

Crews focused on the southwestern flank near an area where fire intensity had increased as helicopters again dumped water on hot spots. The fire was also active on the northeastern front at the head of Beaver Creek.

Only 20 percent of the two-week-old lightning fire was contained, and no target date for full containment has been set. A half dozen out buildings were lost to flames.

To the west, near the small community of Burgdorf, about 110 miles north of Boise, the Burgdorf Junction Fire grew from 7,100 to 8,200 acres. The fire was started by lightning 11 days ago.

Although there was no date for full containment, crews aided by air tankers unloading retardant and helicopters dropping water on key points had essentially secure line around 50 percent of the fire.

"We are keeping up with the ground and waiting for a weather change," Mick Moore, fire information officer with Payette National Forest said. "It's getting into some steep terrain. We would like to see the humidity go up and the temperature go down."

Payette National Forest officials indicated the threat had lessened to homes in the Sweeth Meadows subdivision just off the southeastern flank of the fire area.

To the south in the Boise National Forest, crews had 70 percent of the 1,035-acre Horn Creek Fire contained and expected full containment of the blaze about 35 northeast of Boise by Wednesday evening.

Crews brace for more angry flames

MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK, Colo. (AP) - A wind shift and thinner vegetation helped slow a wildfire that has carved an eerie landscape of burnt tree trunks and blackened ground across a third of the nation's largest archaic region.

The Mesa Verde National Park fire stalled Tuesday at an area damaged by blazes in 1972 and 1996, where shrubs were shorter and spaced farther apart.

Firefighters lit a strip of thick vegetation between the two old fire sites, hoping to prevent the current blaze from spreading. By Tuesday, the fire had burned 2,630 acres, including 18,630 acres on park land.

Scattered puffs of smoke could be seen across the park early in the day instead of the giant plume that had dominated the southwestern Colorado sky for days.

"We had a very good day," said Mike Lohrey, who took over as incident commander at the fire scene Tuesday.

Calmer weather and higher humidity in the afternoon and rain in the evening allowed about 700 firefighters to make progress against the blaze. It was about 15 percent contained Tuesday night, officials said.

Gov. Joe Rogers toured the scene Tuesday morning. Gov. Bill Owens declared a state of disaster emergency for the fire area and dispatched about two dozen Colorado National Guard soldiers plus equipment to the scene. The declaration frees up state funding and resources to help local governments.

lenges for firefighters and archaeologists, who are working side by side to protect mounds of rocks and rubble - artifacts from ancestral Pueblo Indians, who thrived amid the rugged mesas and canyons between 600 A.D. and 1300 A.D.

About 17 archaeologists, all certified firefighters, walk just ahead of the firefighters, tacking red-and-white tape on the historic sites.

"Sometimes you don't even know it's there until they point it out to us," said firefighter Wayne Kille Enemy.

"I saw a foundation of a dwelling, a two- to three-room dwelling, that at first just looked like a pile of rocks. But then I saw the outline of the rooms."

Julie Bell, a National Park Service archaeologist assigned to Mesa Verde, said there are a handful of new sites in the area where the fire is burning.

"There are very few recorded archaeological sites in those areas because they are hard to see," she said.

"Once the fire is out we're going to start to see these sites. Right now, we're just walking with the crews and making sure they don't cut through any of these sites.

Lightning sparked the blaze in the park Thursday, forcing the evacuation of visitors and employees. It moved toward the cliff known sites, including the Cliff Palace, earlier this week.

No date has been set, Grindstaff said.

Study: Officials need closer look at dams

WASHINGTON (AP) - A congressional study released Tuesday said federal officials have not sufficiently studied the environmental impact of breaching four Snake River dams.

The General Accounting Office report said a corps draft study, which examined the possibility of breaching the four dams in southeastern Washington state, did not consider the impact of removing the earthen portion of the structures on local air quality and human health.

The study also failed to examine certain pollutants, such as river sediment contaminants, which would be exposed as a result of breaching, the GAO said.

Sen. Slade Gordon said in a letter to the corps commander, Lt. Gen. Joe Ballard, that the results are "astounding" given that the administration considers itself pro-environment. "This should be another reason for taking dam removal off the table, not postponing it," Gordon said in an interview.

The corps should go back to the environmental analysis and "do it right," he said. But a corps spokesman said the agency is already doing a more complete environmental analysis.

The officials are taking the action based on concerns raised by the Environmental Protection Agency, among other groups and agencies, after the corps released its draft study last December, said Doug Arndt, an agency spokesman in Portland, Ore. Gordon and Sen. Gordon Smith, R-Ore., who are both dam-breaching opponents, asked the GAO to examine the corps' draft dams study. That study, at the request of senior corps officials, did not endorse breaching the Ice Harbor, Lower Monumental, Little Goose and Lower Granite dams, as a way to recover salmon. Instead the corps opted to study the issue more before releasing a final report, which is now expected early next year.

The importance of the corps study is largely diminished because a separate federal agency, the National Marine Fisheries Service, is issuing a draft plan Thursday that is expected to delay a decision on the dams for at least eight years.

The corps' final study is expected to follow the recommendation of the fisheries service, which is the agency most responsible for recovering Pacific Northwest salmon listed under the Endangered Species Act.

Sides reach settlement on water quality suit

LEWISTON — Environmental groups have reached a settlement in a suit filed against the Environmental Protection Agency over Potlatch Corp.'s water quality. If the environmentalists have their way, it could cost the company millions.

Under the terms of the settlement, federal regulators will complete a biological assessment and submit it to the National Marine Fisheries Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service by Nov. 1.

The suit began last summer when an environmental group, including the Lands Council, Idaho Rivers United and the Idaho Conservation League, sued the EPA in U.S. District Court.

The groups contended the environmental regulators failed to consult the two fisheries services about Potlatch's present permit to release wastewater into the Snake River and its effects on endangered salmon, steelhead and bull trout.

Under the terms of the settlement announced Monday, a new permit could be ready for Potlatch by next April. Until then, the government will allow the company to operate with a water quality permit that expired in 1997.

The environmentalists and Potlatch officials remain divided on the key issue of the temperature of the water Potlatch is releasing into the river.

Teaches learn about natural resources at workshop

COEUR D'ALENE — About 106 teachers from Idaho, Montana and Washington are spending the week learning about resource management from representatives of agriculture, mineral, forest and water industries.

All were part of the Northwest Natural Resources Institute's workshop to reach educators about the area's natural resources.

On Monday, a Dow AgroSciences researcher brought plastic baggies filled with bugs, giving teachers a crash course in entomology.

"The purpose is to acquaint people with how exciting bugs are for kids," said Jim Zahand. "Secondary is to give them some exposure to insect control so they can go back to their class and show kids what's going on out there on the farm."

Educators also are learning about natural resources.

Woman faces assault charge for battering inmate

WALLACE — A 63-year-old woman has been charged with battering a fellow inmate while awaiting extradition to Washington State on murder charges.

Shoshone County prosecutors say JoAnne K. Peterson of Moyne Springs slammed the inmate against a wall at the Shoshone County Jail, and also head-butted and bit the woman's nose.

The victim's shoulder fractured during the conflict, according to the criminal complaint.

The felony battery charge was filed July 13.

Peterson is wanted in Washington on a charge of first-degree murder in connection with the 1991 shotgun slaying of her former son-in-law, Peter L. Ziehen.

She is being held in Idaho pending a decision by U.S. attorneys to try her a third time on a charge of illegal possession of a machine gun.

Refiners agree to fines, pollution improvements deal

WASHINGTON — Avoiding the threat of lengthy litigation, two major oil refiners have agreed to spend $580 million to reduce air pollution at 12 refineries and pay $14.5 million in penalties for past environmental violations, the government said Tuesday. The agreements with the Environmental Protection Agency involve nine refineries owned by BP Amoco and three refineries owned by Koch Petroleum Group, which together account for about 15 percent of the country's refining capacity.

Koch is based in Wichita, Kan. Federal officials called the agreement, which avoids future enforcement actions and years of litigation, a major breakthrough that could lead to deals with other refiners to cut toxic and smog-causing air pollution.

Organizers of folk dance festival face visa woes

REXBURG (AP) — Idaho International Folk Dance Festival officials still do not know which teams will be on hand for opening ceremonies later this week. Changes in the way some U.S. embassies issues visas to international performers has kept organizers in the dark. They were to find out by Tuesday night whether dance teams from Russia, China and Bulgaria would receive permission to enter the country. In the past, embassies have issued B-2 tourist visas for the dance teams, said Executive Director Donna Benfield. "It was almost like a walk-in-off-the-street deal," she said. This year, however, U.S. embassies in China and Bulgaria want the dancers to obtain performer/professional visas, which take up to 12 weeks to process. Embassy officials say the dancers are professionals because they receive food, lodging and transportation from the local families that house them, Benfield said. "We've called our embassies in these countries and told them we're a nonprofit organization, and that these dancers dance more as a hobby," she said. Festival organizers have enlisted the help of Idaho Sen. Larry Craig. The team from Russia may still be allowed to enter on the traditional tourist visas, while the South Korean troupe canceled its appearance because of visa difficulties that could not be remedied in time.

Favorite summer drink ideas

On a hot summer day, nothing tastes better than a cool drink. There's a concoction for every desire and occasion: Bracing fresh lemonade is a satisfying thirst-quencher, for example, while a creamy milkshake makes a refreshing snack or dessert.

Here are several drink ideas to get you started, but don't hesitate to create your own variations - a little experimentation with your favorite ingredients and a blender may just yield a new summer classic.

FOUNTAIN DRINKS

For soda fountain drinks, genuine drugstore soda fountains are a rarity these days, but the drinks they served aren't hard to re-create at home.

ASK
Stewart

TWO-TONED MALTED MILKSHAKES: Shakes layered with vanilla and chocolate or strawberry flavors are as pleasing to look at as they are to sip. To make four shakes, place 1/2 cup milk and 3 tablespoons malt powder in the jar of a blender, and process until the malt is dissolved. With the motor running, add a pint of vanilla ice cream, scoop by scoop until it is fully incorporated and smooth. Fill four glasses halfway with vanilla shake, and place in freezer. Allow to chill for 10 minutes before proceeding. Then place 1/2 cup milk and 3 tablespoons malt powder in the jar of the blender, and process until the malt is dissolved. With the motor running, add a pint of chocolate or strawberry ice cream, scoop by scoop, and blend until smooth. Top off the four partially filled glasses from the freezer.

EGG CREAMS: Essentially effervescent chocolate milk, this is one of the quickest soda fountain treats to make. It contains no egg or cream; it gets its name from its foamy resemblance to a whipped egg. To make one, pour 2 tablespoons of chocolate syrup into a tall glass. Pour 1/4 cup milk over the syrup. Top off with 4 ounces of seltzer, stirring vigorously.

MIXED DRINKS

Evening gatherings in the garden and lazy summer brunches provide the perfect excuse for enjoying slushy mixed drinks.

LEMONADE: The most outstanding lemonade is concocted from nothing more than lemons, water and sugar. This recipe makes 10 cups of strong lemonade or limeade. Dilute with ice if you like. Stir together 3 cups freshly squeezed lemon or lime juice (about 20 lemons or 25 limes), 2 cups superfine sugar, 4 cups water, 4 cups ice and 2 lemons or limes, thinly sliced, for garnish. Add sliced strawberries, pitted cherries or blueberries for a dash of color and flavor. For pink lemonade, add 1/2 cup cranberry juice.

ICED TEAS

Iced tea tastes even better with a shot of homemade mint or ginger syrup. Serve these in small pitchers alongside the tea, and let your guests add the syrup to taste.

MINT SYRUP: Combine 1 cup sugar, 2 bunches of mint cut into 2-inch lengths, and 2 3/4 cups water in a small, tall saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Cook until the sugar dissolves, 1 minute. Remove from heat and let stand 30 minutes. Pass through a fine strainer and discard mint.

GINGER SYRUP: Combine 1 3/4 cups sugar, 1 1/2-inch piece of ginger that's been peeled and thinly sliced, and 3 1/2-cups water in a medium saucepan and bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Cook until the sugar is completely dissolved, about 1 minute. Reduce heat to a simmer, and cook 5 minutes more. Remove saucepan from heat, and let syrup stand about 30 minutes. Strain and discard the ginger.

FILER - July is Baked-Bean Month

According to the Idaho Bean Commission, beans have been a staple of the American diet since forever. History books tell us that the American Indian cultivated beans before Columbus discovered America, and introduced them to the British colonists who created Boston Baked Beans.

Because beans are high in protein and low in fat, they work nicely into the summer cooking schedule. And since both canned and dried beans are available, cooking with beans is easy. If you "bake" beans in a crockpot, the house stays cool and you can work on other projects while the beans are cooking. Before cooking dried beans, soak them before cooking.

There are two methods for soaking beans - quick soak and overnight.

With the quick soak method, for every pound of dried beans, you boil 6 cups of water. Add the beans and continue to boil for 2 minutes. Remove from heat and cover. Allow beans to soak for 1 to 4 hours.

With the overnight method, add 6 cups water to every pound of dried beans. Let stand overnight or for about 10 hours.

The Idaho Bean Commission sponsors the Filer Bean Festival Bean Cook Off every summer. It was held on June 24 at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer this year.

Irma Haley, a farmer's wife, has helped her husband, J. Roy Haley, raise beans in the Castleford area for nearly 60 years. During that time, she has won many cooking contests, including three prizes in the Filer Bean Cook Off.

Haley said she doesn't recall where she originally found her Texas Baked Beans recipe, but she said she clips lots of recipes from magazines and newspapers. She tries them as written the first time, then tweaks them to her liking.

The Texas Baked Beans took a second-place prize in the 1997 Filer contest.

Two years later, the Best Overall Main Dish Winner award was presented to Teresa Tremblay Shank, a Filer bean farmer's wife.

Irma Haley has won prizes at the Filer Bean Festival Bean Cook Off for many years. Haley is shown cooking a bean dish at her home in Buhl.

Shank attended the bean festival originally to sample the chili, she said, but she enjoyed the festival so much that she decided to enter the cooking contest herself. She has entered the cook off regularly for the past four years and has won several prizes for her efforts. She got her main dish-winning crockpot recipe from a friend's grandmother.

Here is Teresa Tremblay Shank's 1999 Best Overall Main Dish winning recipe.

Grilling Tips

- When using a gas grill, it's wise to preheat it before cooking. Food is ready to be cooked on a charcoal grill when the coals are covered in a light gray ash.
- Have your grilling utensils ready and at the grill before you begin cooking. A large metal pan, cooking utensils, foil, apron, cooking mitt and some extra paper towels are nice to have on hand and reduce trips back to the kitchen.
- To avoid losing any natural juices, use tongs to turn foods. Metal spatulas are ideal for flipping turkey burgers.
- Don't peek! Lifting up the grill lid increases cooking time.
- Food Safety Note: Never reuse marinades or barbecue sauce as a condiment when serving cooked foods.

Brown Sugar Barbecue Sauce, divided

1/2 cup dried bread crumbs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
6 burger buns
Combine ground turkey, onion, 1/4 cup barbecue sauce, bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Mix until thoroughly combined. Form into 6 patties. Grill over medium heat for 5 to 6 minutes per side or cook in a large nonstick skillet over medium heat for 10 to 12 minutes. Turn 2 to 3 times for even cooking and browning. Baste with remaining barbecue sauce.

Make sure you're spraying the right stuff

DEAR CATHY: I enjoy your garden column very much and have found a lot of helpful information in it. I read with interest your recent article suggesting changing off with fungicides. I have been spraying my roses on a regular seven-to-10-day schedule. Some still look bad.

I have enclosed a cutting from the climber that has powdery mildew. I can't seem to get it. The tea and floribundas just have spotty leaves.

The raspberry cutting is another mystery. They looked beautiful, green and healthy with many blooms this spring. Now the ends are mostly shriveled. We have fertilized and have a spray service doing shrubs, fruit trees and berries. They get water from the automatic lawn sprinkler system.

The apricot and peach trees set fruit, but a late frost caused all fruit to fall from the apricot and about half the peaches. Could this same frost have damaged the berries, or are we killing them with kindness - pruning, watering, fertilizing and speaking kind words to them? Last year we had an ample harvest.

-ALL MESSED UP

DEAR MESSY: Thanks for the beautifully wrapped samples. They gave me a good look at the problems you're having, so I'll be better able to advise you.

Fire your spray guys.

GREEN THUMBPRINTS
Cathy Walworth

The roses have blackspot, powdery mildew and spider mites. You didn't say what was being sprayed, but I'm betting your guys didn't see the need for fungicides or miticides.

Funginex, Triforin or chlorothalonil work pretty well on blackspot. Spray every seven to 10 days like the label says, and do it first thing in the morning. In this hot weather, some sprays cause sunburn if used in the middle of the day.

Avoid overhead watering, and make sure you soak the root zones deeply - again - early in the morning. Fungus-like to grow out on the left wet. Cut off obviously infected canes and put them in the trash. Pick up fallen leaves from the ground. The fungus spores are still alive on them and will happily jump right back up on a healthy leaf. In the fall, make sure you rake up all the leaves and debris and put them in the trash, too.

Powdery mildew is controlled with the same good garden sanitation combined with protective sprays of Triforin. Repeat every seven to 10 days, as directed. You'll find Triforin and other fungicides labeled for blackspot and powdery mildew in different formulations. Every three weeks, it helps to change to Brand B for a few weeks, then switch back to Brand A. That way, you keep the fungi on their toes, so to speak.

The red-brown mottling and the teeny webbing on the undersides of the leaves are the telltale signs of spider mites. Spider mites show up when it's been hot and dry - they love dust. Look for a miticide containing kelthane or hexakis. Make sure you cover the undersides of the leaves and canes. Spider mites like to hide in that little armpit right where the leaves attach. You'll need to repeat the spray in seven to 10 days.

The raspberries look like they are, in fact, loved to death. Reset those lawn sprinklers. Water them only when the soil two inches deep feels barely moist, then really soak them. You want the water to reach down two feet deep if you can. The only fertilizer they should see is two pounds of 10-10-10 per 20-foot row first thing in the spring. Ignore them the rest of the time and you'll get along much better.

What's bugging you garden? Write to Cathy in care of this newspaper or Tenderloin Communications, 3263 E. 3210 N., Twin Falls, ID, 83301, or e-mail her at: cwtwo@cyberhighway.net.

No more mystery when it comes to perfect ham

By Linda Cicero
The Miami Herald

Q: It will be a miracle if you can find this recipe, but my whole family is hoping you can. When we were children, our family had a reunion every summer. Our mother always took what she called sugar ham, slices of ham in a red sauce made with cinnamon red-hots. She doesn't remember the recipe, but says she got it from Duncan Hines.

-E. SAMPSON, EASTON, PA.

A: There really isn't a mystery, because we're not talking about cake mix! Duncan Hines, unlike Betty Crocker, was a real person who wrote many travel guides and cookbooks in the 1930s and '40s. I found the recipe your mother no doubt used in my battered 1946 edition of "Adventures in Good Cooking and The Art of Carving in the Home," written by Hines. I have adapted the recipe for a fully cooked ham. You could also simply make the sauce and use it on ham slices. The recipe is credited to Crane's Country Cottage in Chagrin Falls, Ohio. The sauce is zippy and tints the ham a wonderful cherry red. I cut the ham in big-size pieces, and had plenty of little thermik biscuits to make eating easy.

SUGAR HAM

- 1 cooked ham, about 1 3/4 pounds
- 3/4 pound (about 1 3/4 cups) brown sugar
- 1/2 cup prepared mustard
- 1/2 cup water

SAUCE

- 3 pounds (6 cups) sugar
 - 1 pint water
 - 1/2 cups red cinnamon candies
 - 1/2 cup raisins, optional
 - 1/2 cup sherry
- Put the brown sugar all over the ham. Mix the mustard with the water and pour over the ham. Bake in a 425-degree oven for 15 minutes.

Make the sauce: Stir together the sugar and water and bring to a boil over high heat, stirring. Add the cinnamon candies, cooking constantly, until dissolved. Add the raisins and remove from heat. Let sauce cool to room temperature; stir in the sherry. When ready to serve, cut the ham in one-quarter-inch slices and heat in the sauce. Serve with additional sauce as desired. Makes 30 servings.

Cordless mowers cut noise, gas costs.

DEAR JIM: I would like something more convenient than my noisy, hard-to-start gasoline lawn mower. I am considering a rechargeable cordless one or even a robot mower. Will these new mowers push up my electric bills much?

-ALR.

DEAR AL: You will barely notice the increase in your electric bills from recharging the mowers. Over the entire summer, it costs only about $20 to $30 for the electricity to recharge the batteries. Operating a typical gasoline lawn mower, with regular maintenance, costs about $50 to $60 per year.

I have a 1/2-acre lot and I have a cordless lawnmower for many years. When my legs are too old to push the mower, I will consider a gasoline one. Actually, I will use an automatic robot mower and watch it cut from my hammock.

The advantages of cordless mowers are many. First, they cut very quietly. I can talk on my cordless telephone while I mow. This is also a plus if you like to cut grass early in the morning or later at night when it is cooler.

Second, a cordless mower always starts and requires no maintenance. Just sharpen the blade each year and you are good to go. Third, they do not create any air pollution while you cut.

SENSIBLE HOME
James Sulley

Even the best new overhead valve (OHV) gasoline mower engines still produce a substantial amount of pollution.

Cordless mowers are available in 12-volt, 24-volt and 36-volt models. The 36-volt models can cut a large lawn (up to 1/2 acre) between recharges, but they are heavier with the third battery. Although it takes about 24 hours to fully recharge them, they reach 70 percent power in four hours to use it again.

The newest designs of rechargeable robot mowers work very well. These have computer brains so that they stop at a perimeter sensing wire that you lay around the edge of your yard. The technology works in a similar fashion to an invisible dog fence. Sensors in a bumper make them turn if they hit a tree.

There are two basic designs of robot mowers. The simplest one looks somewhat like a regular mower without a handle. It has a remote control to drive it out into your yard. Once out there, it will run for about two hours, crisscrossing the lawn until it is all

Various models of battery and gasoline mowers.

Underside of automatic battery mower.

Many types of lawnmowers are available.

It has three small rotary blades.

Other more sophisticated designs sense when the batteries are running low and go to recharging station automatically. Once you put one out in the yard, you seldom have to even think about it. This design uses a tiny blade that nips at the grass continuously so it always looks just cut.

If you prefer a self-propelled gasoline mower, select one with an OHV 4-stroke or a low-maintenance 2-stroke engine. The most convenient models have a gearbox that automatically adjusts to whatever speed you are walking.

Many materials can be used for wainscoting

QUESTION: I want to install wainscoting in one of the rooms of my house. I'd like to use ordinary plywood paneling. Can you give me any tips?

ANSWER: There are several ways to install attractive wainscoting, which covers only the lower part of a wall, using pre-finished panels. For example, some manufacturers of pre-finished plywood paneling, including Georgia-Pacific (1-800-284-5347 or <http://www.gp.com>), make special wainscot panels. Georgia-Pacific's wainscot panels are 48 inches wide and 32 inches high, and come in a variety of patterns, including "beaded" panels, which have small vertical ridges or beads instead of grooves between the simulated boards that make up the panels. These panels generally cost $9 to $10 each. Beaded panels or "beadboards" are considered especially suited for wainscoting.

Regular prefinished paneling can also be used for wainscoting. Just buy standard 4-by-8-foot panels, sold at most home centers and lumber yards, and cut them to size. Use a fine-toothed saw when cutting, to avoid chipping the panels. Wood planks, with tongue-and-groove edges, also can be used for wainscoting, but an installation of this type requires a lot more work than using wide panels.

Plan carefully before beginning a wainscot project. Doors, windows and electrical outlets require careful cutting and fitting. If a wall is flat and smooth and finished with drywall or plaster, paneling can generally be attached directly to the wall with adhesive and special corner and edge nails. If the wall is uneven or made of masonry, horizontal furring strips must be installed and shimmed to provide a flat fastening surface for the panels.

Existing baseboard is generally removed so the bottom of the wainscot can butt against the floor. When the baseboard is finished, new baseboard that matches the wainscoting can be installed, or the old baseboard can be refinished and reinstalled. A special molding, called chair rail or cap rail, is used at the top of wainscoting to provide a finished appearance and conceal the top edges of the panels or boards.

QUESTION: How can I patch a cracked toilet tank? I'd replace it, but it is very old and I can't find a new tank with a color that will match the tub.

ANSWER: I don't know of any product that I can recommend for patching a toilet tank. I think the tank, or the entire toilet if necessary, should be replaced as soon as possible, even if the color doesn't match the tub. If the tank goes to pieces, as it probably will under the weight and pressure of the water in it, there could be extensive damage to the home unless the supply valve to the tank is shut off immediately.

If a color match with the tub is important, check under Bathtubs & Sinks - Repairing & Refinishing, in the Yellow Pages. The cost of refinishing to match the fixtures might be small compared with the cost of repairs if the tank lets loose.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, the Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 861, Blue Bell, Pa. 19422. Questions cannot be answered personally.

RUPERT - Stephen Tingey of Paul looked to the past for his Eagle Scout project. He recently restored a two-row International Harvester corn planter for the Mindokda County Museum for his Eagle Scout project.

Tingey found that the machine was originally horse-drawn and sold for around $200 new in the 1930's, museum officials say. The machine was later adapted for a tractor and was red with white wheels and blue seed cans. Walt Schoer with the Mindokda County Historical Society helped Tingey track down the can lids, which were missing from the planter.

The restored planter is on display at the Mindokda County Museum at the corner of 100 E. Baseline Road in Rupert. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and no admission is charged for tours.

Lakeview brings outdoors inside

The Lakeview is a vacation home designed to take full advantage of a panoramic view. Built on a plot of beach or lakefront land, this small home lets you continue enjoying the outdoors even when you have to come inside.

Stacks of glass fill most of the space on three sides of the lofty vaulted great room. Doors on both sides provide cross-ventilation and open onto a covered porch that wraps around this dramatic living area.

A large fireplace separates the great room from the dining room and serves as a warm focal point on chilly days. The ceiling in front of the fireplace is a full two stories high. The hearth is overlooked from vantage points on either side of the wide chimney that stretches upward by the second-floor loft. Outfitted with bunks, the loft can provide additional sleeping space when needed.

The U-shaped kitchen is brightened by a bay window and has plenty of counter space. A compact, piggyback washer/dryer combination is nestled in an alcove under the stairs. Sliding doors open onto a small back deck shaded by a wooden arbor. This area could be screened. A storage area is also conveniently located off the deck.

Jackson buys Roseanne's former digs

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - Actor Samuel L. Jackson and his actress wife, LaTanya Richardson, have purchased the Beverly Hills-area home of actress-TV talk show host Roseanne for about its $8.9 million asking price.

Jackson and Richardson have been living in Los Angeles' Encino district. Roseanne and her husband and former bodyguard, Ben Thomas, bought a home on the Palos Verdes Peninsula for $6.5 million in May. They had lived in the Beverly Hills-area home since 1998.

Built in 1987, the home originally was owned by a British lord who paid more than $7 million for it and then spent $3 million in remodeling and additions.

The estate, in a gated community overlooking Beverly Hills, has a total of nine bedrooms and 10 baths in 11,000 square feet, including a two-bedroom, Ben Thomas guest house. The two-acre property also has a pool, spa, tennis court and rose garden.

Collectors adore Depression glass

By Dru Wilson
The Gazette

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - There was a time when you could get a full set of any five-and-dime store for $1.89. In some cases, gas stations or movie houses simply gave it away. It was also a prize in cereal boxes and flour sacks.

Today, dishes known as "Depression glass" are hard to find. Lots of it is boxed up in dusty attics and damp basements or displayed in antique stores or a collector's cupboard. Much more of it is simply gone. Because it's rare, Depression glass is a hot commodity.

Collectors covet it with all the zeal of a miner searching for gold. "Imagine the elation of walking into an antique shop and finding something you have been looking for for a long time. I am personally 100 percent addicted to the hunt," says Les Stewart, a member of the Pikes Peak Depression Glass Club and an organizer of last weekend's National Depression Glass Association show in Denver.

Stewart says his mother, an avid antique collector, gave him his first piece of Depression glass, along with an appreciation for antiques and collectibles. But he became a devoted collector 20 years ago after his brother-in-law told him Depression glass was a better investment than the stock market.

LES STEWART SAYS A PINK floral bowl he purchased for $6 is now worth $80. A butter dish he acquired for $12 is now worth $120-$130.

Depression glass is uniquely American. It was the first glass dinner- and kitchenware mass-produced by machine, starting in 1928 during the Great Depression, then extending beyond that into the 1940s and 1950s. Factories in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania produced Depression glass. At the time, it was cheap and considered more functional than fine china.

Because it was so expendable, Depression glass is harder to find in Western states because people moving west didn't bother to bring it with them when they moved.

They discarded or gave it away rather than pack it, Stewart says.

Because of the early machine

Depression glass info

Depression glass is colored glassware mass-produced from the late 1920s through the 1940s. Some also was manufactured as late as the 1960s, hence the term "Depression era." Common usage of the name Depression glass also includes "elegant glass" - hand made or at least involving some hand work in the making - and "kitchenware glass," such as spice jars and mixing bowls.

Glassware came in rainbow hues of pink, red, yellow, green, blue, lavender and deeper hues of cobalt, amber and amethyst. Pieces were embellished with designs of flowers, birds, fruit, snowflakes, swirls, bubbles, diamonds, cubes, rings, blocks, ribs and thumbprints. Manufacturers included Anchor-Hocking, Jeannette, Federal and Hazel Atlas. Patterns included Fostoria, Fire-King, Fiesta, Morgantown, Heisey, Imperial and Cambridge.

work was crude, the glassware often contained flaws.

"If you hold it up to the light and don't see bubbles, mold marks or cracked edges, then it should prove your curiosity." The piece is probably a fake or a reproduction, Stewart says.

Take advantage of all that fresh produce

It's been warm this summer. The gardens are coming in early. Corn is on the verge, and I've been picking strawberries out of my newly-planted strawberry patch already.

I've polished off my cherry tree, too, and I'm starting on the apricots.

Every day, more squirrels move into the apricot tree. From the amount of nuts and twigs they make when I pick fruit, they don't seem to realize that I consider the topmost branches of the tree to be their property and the bottom branches mine. If only I could speak squirrel, I'd explain it to them.

The grandchildren came for a visit for two weeks before the Fourth of July. Although I hated to see them go home, I was glad to get the house back. The grandchildren have been gone for about two weeks now, but I still haven't found all the things they moved around.

Here are some recipes to try with the fresh produce so abundant this summer.

CORN SALSA

- 6 ears sweet corn (4 cups of kernels)
- 1 bell pepper
- 1 large tomato, chopped
- 2 jalapeno peppers, minced
- 1 bunch green onions, diced
- Dressing:
 - 1/3 cup olive oil
 - 1/4 cup fresh lime juice
 - 2 tablespoons water
 - 2 teaspoons chili powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon cilantro
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 2 teaspoons sugar

Mix the spices with 2 tablespoons water in a small bowl. Let stand 5 minutes; add lime juice, oil, sugar and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Whisk to combine. Set aside. Peel the corn for about 8 minutes. Cool, then cut off the cob. Place the kernels in a large bowl along with the bell pepper, tomatoes, onions and jalape-

nos. Don't worry about the salsa being too hot - the corn seems to absorb a lot of the hot and the spices. Pour the dressing over the salsa and toss gently to combine. Refrigerate overnight. Just before serving, toss again. Taste, and adjust the seasoning to your liking. Add the other 1/2 teaspoon salt at this point, if needed. Serve with corn chips.

I found a recipe for a peach and blueberry-cobbler recently. I tried it with apricots off my tree in the back yard. It turned out wonderful.

BLUEBERRY APRICOT COBBLER

- Crust:
- 1/4 cup butter, softened
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 egg
 - 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1 1/2 cups flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1/2 cup milk
- Fruit Filling:
- 2 cups apricots
 - 1 cup blueberries
 - 2 tablespoons sugar
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1 tablespoon butter
- Streusel topping:
- 2 tablespoons flour
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Wash, pit and slice the apricots. In a large bowl, toss the fruit with sugar and cinnamon. Pour into an 8-by-12-inch or 8-by-8-inch glass baking dish. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter and set aside. Cream the butter and sugar with a mixer. Add egg and vanilla; beat till fluffy. Sift flour mixed with salt, cinnamon and baking powder into mixing bowl; add milk and beat gently until combined. Spoon batter over fruit mixture. Smooth out a bit, but don't worry if it doesn't reach the edges all the way around. Make streusel topping by rubbing butter, cinnamon, flour and sugar between your fingers and sprinkle over top of the batter. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes, until crust is firm and golden brown. Allow to cool a few minutes. Cobbler is best served warm. Top with vanilla ice cream, if desired.

I came across a bag of berry raisins recently. They made a delightful variation to some raisin cookies. So when my pie cherry tree came ripe a couple of weeks ago, I tried the same idea with cherries. I substituted a handful of the dried cherries for raisins in a nut-bread-recipe and was impressed with the results.

CHERRY RAISINS

If you have any cherries left from the recent cherry harvest, pit them. Use enough lemon juice and sugar to keep them from turning dark while you work. I used 1 cup sugar and the juice from 1/2 lemon in a 4-quart bowl. I then pitted the cherries and filled the bowl with them. Dry the cherries in your food dehydrator and bag them up for use as substitute raisins. You will be pleased with the interesting flavor they add to baked food. I didn't bother to rehydrate them either - just threw them into the recipe like raisins. The moisture in the recipe rehydrates them as you mix the batter and as the dough cooks.

Dixie Thomas Reale welcomes comments on recipes. Her address is 503 W. Eighth, Jerome, Idaho 83338.

Love Russian caviar? Better stock up now

The Philadelphia Inquirer

If you like Russian caviar, the news isn't good: Russian exports of black caviar are set to plunge this year, due mainly to pollution and a big increase in poaching, says Russia's State Committee for Fishing. The country plans to export between 50 and 60 tons of black caviar this year, compared with 170 tons in 1999.

FOOD & HOME

Early education: Mother, son bond in kitchen

By William Rice
Chicago Tribune

or until desired crispness is reached.

Michelle Seitz, 32, mother of a 4 1/2-year-old son, Quinton, has adopted a two-pronged approach. From the day Quinton started table food, he has dined with his mother and father and eaten the food they eat, be it steak, lobster or frozen pizza. No separate menus, no separate meal hours in the Seitz household.

Also, Quinton shares regularly in food preparation and is allowed to select the menu for one dinner a month.

Health and diet are important to the Seitzes. Michelle is manager and massage therapist at the Westin River North hotel's fitness center. Her husband, Charles, works for Whole Foods Market and has been an organic produce specialist for a decade.

MICHELLE SEITZ'S EASY PITA CHIPS
4 servings
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup olive oil
1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
2 rounds pita bread
1/4 teaspoon each dried basil, marjoram, oregano
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Heat oven to 400 degrees. In a small saucepan, combine the butter, oil and garlic and heat until the butter has melted. Split the pita rounds open and cut each into 8 pieces. Line pita pieces on a cookie sheet. Brush each piece with the butter-oil mixture. Lightly sprinkle each piece with the dried herb mixture and then with cheese. Bake for 10 minutes.

QUICK BLUEBERRY AND PEACH COBBLER
4 servings
6 tablespoons butter
1 can (8 ounces) peaches
1/2 pint fresh or frozen blueberries
1 cup flour
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
2 tablespoons quick-cooking oats

Whipped cream or ice cream, optional

Heat oven to 375 degrees. In a small saucepan, melt 5 tablespoons butter. Set aside. Coat the inside, bottom and sides of an 8-inch pie pan with the remaining tablespoon of butter. Drain peaches and cut into bite-size pieces. Arrange in a single layer in the buttered pan and pour the blueberries over them. In a small bowl, combine the flour, sugar, cinnamon and oats. Pour the melted butter into the bowl and mix until it forms coarse crumbs. Scatter mixture over the fruit. Transfer the pie pan to the oven and bake until topping is firm and brown and the fruit is hot, about 30 minutes. Cool slightly and serve with optional whipped cream or ice cream.

These No-Yolk Deviled Eggs are for people who love serving up deviled eggs, but can't afford the fat.

It's no yolk: Deviled egg lovers can cut fat

Taste of Home

Dottie Burton of Cincinnati, Ohio, whipped up the recipe for this lighter, great-tasting deviled egg. It was published in Taste of Home magazine, and the cooks who have tried it say it provides the traditional deviled egg flavor and appearance - with just 1 gram of fat.

NO-YOLK DEVILED EGGS
10 hard-cooked eggs
3/4 cups mashed potatoes (prepared with skim milk and margarine)

1 tablespoon fat-free mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
2 to 3 drops yellow food coloring (optional)
Paprika

Slice eggs in half lengthwise; remove yolks and refrigerate for another use. Set whites aside. In a small bowl, combine mashed potatoes, mayonnaise, mustard and food coloring. Mix well. Stuff or pipe into egg whites. Sprinkle with paprika. Refrigerate until serving. Makes 10 servings.

Best summer drinks use few ingredients

Remember the simple joy of a frosty pitcher of pink lemonade on a hot summer's day? Or an icy Popsicle quickly melting around sticky fingers onto the hot pavement below? Every kid on the block had a favorite flavor: banana, cherry, strawberry. And it's not so different now, with our penchant for smoothies and bottled waters married with citrus or kiwi.

Everything seems to be fair game for the glass. Our recently published book on drinks even gives us a smoothie recipe using canned yams and marshmallow cream. But the best summer drinks use just a few quality ingredients with seasonal fruits mingling with rosemary or mint, or the brash heat of fresh ginger.

SPARKLING ICED LIME TEA
Serves 4
4 cups freshly made tea, lightly brewed
3 tablespoons sugar
1 lime, sliced paper thin
1 cup sparkling water
Ice cubes

Strain the tea and stir in the sugar. Cool and chill. About 30 minutes before serving, put the slices of lime in a pitcher and pour the tea over them. Refrigerate. Just before serving, stir in the sparkling water and pour over ice.

—From "Juices and Tonics" by Elsa Petersen-Schepelern.

SPARKLING WATERMELON AND LIME SLUSH
Serves 6
6 cups cold, cubed seedless watermelon (rind removed)
3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 to 3 tablespoons superfine sugar
2 teaspoons ginger juice
2 cups cold sparkling water
Ice cubes

Put the watermelon, lime juice, sugar and ginger juice in a blender or food processor. Puree. Refrigerate if not using right away. Just before serving, stir in the sparkling water and serve over ice.

STRAWBERRY-PINEAPPLE SMOOTHIE
1 serving
12 strawberries, hulled
1/3 cup pineapple juice
1 to 2 tablespoons superfine sugar or honey
1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt
1/2 cup crushed ice

Blend the berries with the pineapple juice, sugar or honey and yogurt in a food processor or blender until smooth. Add the crushed ice and blend until smooth.

Fountains of youth: Some drugstores still dispense sodas

By Joe Stumpe
The Wichta Eagle

When Frank Shrimplin closed his soda fountain in Valley Falls, Kan. for the last time earlier this month, generations of customers must have felt like crying in their cherry phosphates and ice cream sodas.

The soda fountain had been around for almost as long as the drugstore in which it sits. And the latter dates to 1872, or about the time the last spike was being driven into the Santa Fe railroad between Archison and Topoka.

"It was an established tradition here in town. I hate to give it up even now," said Shrimplin, whose health is declining. But, he added, "it's getting to be a thing of the past."

Drugstores with soda fountains and lunch counters still operate in some towns and cities. Today's megapharmacies offer everything from lawn furniture to one-hour film developing, but they provide little in the way of culinary comfort. By contrast, the pharmacist of yore often had to be as handy compounding a hot fudge sundae as he was filling a prescription.

Then, as an increasing amount of business went to fast-food operations, drugstores used their floor space for items that brought in more money. Many drugstore food operations were break-even propositions anyway, generating traffic rather than revenue. And the availability of ice cream in grocery stores was another reason many drugstore soda fountains bit the dust.

Source: "Ice Cream! The Whole Scoop," by Gail Hamerow - The Wichta Eagle

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
2 cups (one 12-ounce package) semi-sweet chocolate morsels
2 teaspoons vanilla extract

Combine evaporated milk, sugar, butter and corn syrup in a medium heavy-duty saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Reduce heat to low; cook, stirring constantly, for 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in morsels and vanilla extract until thickened and smooth. Serve over ice cream. Store leftover sauce in refrigerator. Reheat before serving. If needed, add water to thin to desired consistency. Makes 3 cups.

Note: For a thicker sauce, reduce evaporated milk to 1 cup.

PIMENTO CHEESE SPREAD
10 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
2 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, processed or American cheese, shredded
8 ounces cream cheese, cut in 1-inch cubes

1 jar (4 ounces) diced pimientos, drained
2 tablespoons grated fresh onion
1 teaspoon each: Worcestershire sauce, prepared horseradish
Cayenne pepper sauce to taste
3/4 cup mayonnaise

Combine shredded cheeses and cubed cream cheese. With an electric mixer at medium-low, blend just until cheeses form a mass. Add pimientos, onion, Worcestershire, horseradish and pepper sauce. Stir until combined. Add mayonnaise and mix until spreading consistency. Cover and chill.

Note: For a quick version, combine 2 cups grated cheddar or processed cheese, two 4-ounce jars diced pimientos, 1/4 cup mayonnaise, a dash of Worcestershire sauce and salt to taste and mix well. Add milk to achieve desired consistency.

OLD-FASHIONED BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE
1 1/3 cups (packed) light brown sugar
3/4 cup light corn syrup
4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter
2 tablespoons water
Pinch of salt
6 tablespoons heavy (or whipping) cream

Combine the brown sugar, corn syrup, butter, water and salt in a heavy saucepan over medium heat. Bring to a boil, stirring, and boil for 2 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and set it aside to cool. Once cool, stir in the cream. Refrigerate in a covered container up to 2 weeks. Makes about 2 cups.

Cowboys show Spartans the door in Rexburg

By Matt Peterson
Times-News writer

REXBURG — Three hours from home on a foreign field of green, the Twin Falls Cowboys ended their neighbor's season.

More importantly, they prolonged their own.

Losing 4-3 to Upper Valley Tuesday morning, Twin Falls fell into the losers' bracket of the American Legion Baseball Class AA Area C Tournament, then promptly found itself pitted against Minico. The Cowboys responded with a 10-9 victory and earned the right to play the fifth-seeded Idaho Falls Reds today at 9 a.m.

The Reds beat Pocatello 6-5 Tuesday and knocked off Minico in the first round Monday before losing to the top-ranked Idaho Falls Russets Monday night. In other action Tuesday, Pocatello beat Bingham 13-4.

Today's championship game pairs No. 3 Upper Valley against the Russets at noon. The winner of the Twin Falls-Idaho Falls Reds game plays the loser of the noon contest for the final state berth at 3 p.m.

Upper Valley 4, Twin Falls 3

Catcher Chad Mackert blasted an opposite field, two-run home run in the top of the ninth inning to break a 2-2 tie and carry No. 3 seeded Upper Valley past Twin Falls and into today's championship game against the top-seeded Idaho Falls Russets.

With two outs and one on in the inning, Mackert lifted a 1-1 offering from Twin Falls starter Sean Bernhard over the right center field fence to give the Bulldogs a 4-2 lead.

"I was just waiting for a pitch to drive," said Mackert, who finished the game 3-for-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored. "And I threw me an (outside) fastball."

The Cowboys staged a one-out rally in their half of the ninth, scoring once on a Jeremy Suddick fielder's choice groundout. But Bulldog reliever Jody Wells struck out No. 9 hitter Joel Osborn to cut short the comeback and end the game.

Top seeds rule at Legion A tourney

By Kevin Hall and John Derr

TWIN FALLS — The top-four seeds easily advanced while the lowest-seeded Burley Bobcats pulled a huge upset Tuesday as action began at the American Legion Class A District Baseball Tournament.

At Harmon Park, Shelley defeated Idaho Falls 9-5, Burley sent Jerome to the consolation bracket with a 6-3 victory, Wood River topped Upper Valley 8-3, and Marsh Falls ended Burley's run 8-3.

AC Twin Falls High School — Upper Valley defeated Pocatello 10-3. Twin Falls bested Kimberly 9-6, Bear Lake advanced with a 9-4 victory over Shelley, and Buhl beat Twin Falls 10-2.

Today is elimination day as six of the 12 teams will bow out. Games start at 9 a.m. on both fields. Winners' bracket games at Twin Falls High School will feature Bear Lake and Marsh Falls at 3 p.m. and conference rivals Wood River and Buhl at 6 p.m.

Buhl 10, Twin Falls 2

A 2-2 pitcher's duel exploded in the face of the Twin Falls Cowboys Tuesday night as No. 2 Buhl broke out for eight runs in the fifth en route to a 10-2 rout.

It could've been much worse earlier. Buhl threatened in the first with the sacks jacked and only one out and had two runners in scoring position in the second. But Twin Falls starter Tyler Maxfield escaped both jams with only two Buhl runs.

The heavy workload under a hour's rest proved too much for Maxfield in the fifth, however, as the left-hander had already thrown 80 pitches through four frames. And before he'd recorded an out in the fifth, four Indian runs were home, two coming off a Josh Prince double to the left field wall.

After the rally, Buhl's Jeff Walker closed the door on Twin Falls. He gave up only a Bruce Salinas double in the sixth and a walk in the seventh. On the game, Walker chucked a three-hitter with five strikeouts for the Tribe. Twin Falls scored its only runs on a fielder's choice in the first scoring Derek Tenny and a fielder's choice in the fourth scoring Brandon Salinas.

Buhl (28-9) won its sixth. Please see LEGION, Page D2

Joe Peterson of Burley throws a pitch to home plate in Tuesday's American Legion Baseball Area C District Tournament game against Jerome at Harmon Park in Twin Falls. The 12th-seeded Bobcats beat the fifth-seeded Tigers 6-3 behind Peterson's three-hit performance on the mound.

Andersons lead local NHRA to Seattle

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A family of Twin Falls drag racers will lead a strong local contingent of competitors this weekend as action unfolds at the NHRA Northwest Nationals at Seattle International Raceway.

Dianna Anderson, perhaps the most successful female driver in the Northwest, will pilot her 1967 Chevy II "The Buzz" in the Super Comp category, husband Don Anderson will drive his 1957 Corvette in the Super Gas division, and son Kenny, who runs the fastest machine of the three, will drive in the Super Comp bracket.

The trio teams up to form one fast family tree.

Dianna Anderson, who sits in eighth place in the NHRA's Sixth District standings heading into the weekend, runs the standing quarter mile in 10.90 seconds at 132 mph.

Don Anderson, meanwhile, will be returning to the site of what remains his best showing ever at a NHRA national race. He defeated more than 100 other cars in 1999 to earn a spot in the final six, and hopes to do at least one well again when action unfolds once again with qualifying on Thursday.

Twin Falls racer Don Anderson will drive his 1957 Corvette Super Gas entry in the NHRA Nationals near Seattle, Wash., this weekend. Last year, he beat out more than 100 other cars to make the final six in his class.

And the prodigal son? Kenny Anderson's rear-engine, Chevy-powered dragster turns the quarter mile in 8.90 seconds at well over 150 mph.

They will not be the only valley entrants at the Northwest Nationals, however.

Also slated to make the trip west are Gooding's Bill Hawkes, Wendell's Dan Lafferty and Mark Kidd of Twin Falls.

Hawkes will also run a Chevy dragster in the Super Comp class, and was a top finisher recently at the NHRA Divisional Points Meet in Sacramento, Calif. He'll have all all-female crew this week. Please see ANDERSON, Page D2

Broncos get their man

New running back is real-life soldier

The Associated Press

GREELEY, Colo. — Mike Anderson carried a football and survived boot camp long before he ever thought of attending NFL training camp.

Three years after creating the "Mile High Salute," the Denver Broncos have found a true-to-life soldier.

Anderson, Denver's sixth-round draft pick in April, spent four years as a communications specialist in the U.S. Marine Corps after graduating from Fairfield (S.C.) Central High School.

Football was never a consideration when Anderson was a lanky teenager. He played drums in the school marching band before deciding to join "the few, the proud."

"When I got out of high school, I was just looking for something to do," Anderson said during a break at Denver's training camp. "I kind of wanted to get away from where I grew up, and I also wanted to earn money for college. I saw it as a good opportunity and it was a challenge."

Six weeks of two-a-day practice sessions pale in comparison to rigorous military boot camp.

Anderson began to acquire the traits he still takes on to the football field.

"As a Marine, you've got the attitude that you're willing to lay down and die for the man beside you," he said. "That's your brother. When you come out on the football field, as a team you want to achieve the ultimate goal, the Super Bowl. You can't let the next man down."

After Paris Island, Anderson was assigned to Camp Pendleton north of San Diego and fulfilled his physical training requirements by playing flag football.

Word of his running ability led to a visit from a Camp Pendleton football coach, who gave Anderson an order that would change his life.

"A couple buddies of mine in the unit played on the base team that we had," Anderson said. "They had the coach come to me and demand me to come out, sweat out and started playing after that."

straight game and advances to face nemesis and third-seeded Wood River today.

"I expected Wood River," said Buhl, coach Lee Cline. "It's going to be a close game. We've just got to go out and battle."

Twin Falls 9, Kimberly 6

Trailing 6-2 heading into the bottom of the fifth, Twin Falls got leadoff hitters Tyler Maxfield and Brett Miller aboard before Kimberly's Brett Baldwin retired Salinas and Andy Coats on strikeouts.

Baldwin couldn't find the strike zone after that, as walks to Jake Asher and Jake Brady came around a Matt Colvin RBI single. Carl Blackwood added a two-run single up the middle. Maxfield also ripped a two-RBI single in the frame as 12 Cowboys batted in the frame.

"Kimberly played a good game," Krumpholtz said. "I'm proud of our kids for not giving up."

Bulldogs coach Terry Bohan lamented the swing in innings in his team's loss.

"For me, one of the big things in any baseball game is how tense the pitcher is during the game," he said. "We score three in the third, they score one. We score three in the fifth, they come back with seven. Then immediately after that we have a chance and that was it."

Burley 6, Jerome 3

Last year, Burley was the second seed in the tournament, but lost to Jerome in the first round. It was time to turn the tables this year. The last-seeded Bobcats got the production they needed from the top of the lineup and upset Jerome.

"I felt good and had the confidence. The last two times I have pitched the team has hit and pitched well," said Peterson, who reached three times and scored a run while on the mound he collected.

Kam Redder opened the game with a double and scored on a fielders choice. As the Tigers were busy putting Dallas Bristol in a pickle, Tyson Meredith scored the second run of the inning for the Bobcats.

Blake Thompson got Jerome on the board reaching on a passed ball. Matt Tilley, the Tigers starting pitcher, then put Jerome on top with a towering two-run blast over the left field fence.

But Burley responded in its next at-bat. Ryan Bailey walked, Redder singled and Meredith walked to load the bases. Peterson slapped a shot past the first baseman that rolled nearby to the fence and cleared the bases. Peterson later scored on a single by Bristol to make it 6-3.

Marsh Falls 8, Burley 3

It didn't take long for the bubble to burst as the Bobcats were sent to the consolation bracket by the fourth-seeded Marsh Eagles.

Things looked good early as Kam Redder again started the game with a double. Tyson Meredith's matched the feet sending Redder across the plate. Jacob Kay's sacrifice fly to center brought another run home.

It took the Eagles three innings for Marsh Valley to tie the game. Then they kept going, keeping the Bobcat fielders busy while belting out 14 hits.

"We threw the ball around and that gave them some extra runs, and we played into their pitcher's game," said Burley coach Josh Hegstad. "We play our good game then fall into a pattern of losing. We can't do that anymore."

Wood River 8, Upper V. 3

It looked like it was going to be a blowout.

Wood River put a pair of runs on the board the first three innings, then relaxed only to see Upper Valley cut the lead in half.

"We definitely relaxed a bit. Once our bats went quiet they got back in the game. We had to pick it up again," said Max Paisley, who reached all four times at bat and scored three times.

Paisley doubled, and scored on a single by James Cordes to put the Wolverines on the board. The lead was 6-0 in the third after Cory Goicoechea blasted a two-run single. Upper Valley finally got on the board in the fifth. James Hammer singled in a run and Matt Berry sent one over the fence for a two-run homer. Nice recorded the complete-game victory tallying four strikeouts.

"I felt pretty good, but I had too many walks," Nice said.

Bear Lake 9, Shelley 4

The top-seeded Bears (40-7) put up seven runs in the first and second innings then held on to down the Shelley Sting 9-4. Shelley (11-24) hurt itself by stranding six base runners. Bears centerfielder Shad Romrell went 3-for-3 with two singles, a triple, two RBIs and two runs scored.

College of Eastern Utah-bound Bo Smith took the win. Luke Mecham suffed the loss.

Shelley 9, Idaho Falls 5

Ninth-seeded Shelley pulled a minor upset, downing eighth-seeded Idaho Falls. Shelley led early and got some insurance runs in the sixth inning as Matt Sorge and Henry Elizondo both blasted two-run homers for a 9-0 advantage.

Cowboys

run short of forcing the extra frame, they had numerous chances to score throughout the contest. But Twin Falls seemed determined to make the base paths a lonely place, stranding 15 runners in the game and leaving the sacks loaded in both the third and eighth innings.

"I think that was the difference in the ball game," said Twin Falls coach Mike Federico. "We just left too many guys on base and just didn't get the big hit at the right time."

Much of that also had to do with the play of Upper Valley starter Scott Bramble. The 6-3, 190-pound southpaw mixed speeds effectively and all day showed a knack for working out of a jam. He threw 164 pitches and struck out seven in 8 1/3 innings of work before yielding to Watts with two on in the ninth.

"That's definitely not something I ever want to do - throw a kid that much," said Upper Valley coach Brian Ayers. "He would not come out of the game. I talked to him a couple times once we got late in the game and he said, 'Coach, you can't pull me.'"

Upper Valley's late-inning heroics, and Twin Falls' inability to drive runners in, overshadowed an outstanding pitching effort from Cowboy starter Fenell. The janky right-hander gave up one run in the first inning, then held the Bulldogs scoreless until the eighth, allowing just three hits during that span. He struck out four and needed only 118 pitches to hurl the complete game.

"It was a great ballgame, we didn't make any errors, we didn't have any base running blunders and Sean threw a great game," Federico said. "We just didn't get the big hit when we needed it."

Twin Falls 10, Minico 9

The Cowboys torched Minico aces John Fennell and Josh Bartolme for five runs in the seventh inning and rallied from a 7-5 deficit to eke out the win.

The big blow in the seventh came on a two-out, three-run homer by "Twin Falls' Scott Spritzer. He launched a 1-1 Bartolme pitch out to right to give Twin Falls a 9-7 lead.

"I've done really bad against Minico this year," Spritzer said. "Bartolme almost blowed by me. I barely got that ball. I hit it opposite field and got it over the fence."

The Cowboys scored once more on an RBI single by Jonas Brice to take a 10-7 lead into the eighth. Though Minico rallied for two runs, reliever Tyler Warburton preserved the lead in the ninth striking out Jacob Martin before yielding a single to Jordan Mingo. He then induced a fly ball from Andy Coats and coaxed a fly fly ball to center from Ty Dietz to end the game.

"Tyler did a good ninth inning I thought, and I think we showed a lot of character today," Federico said.

Unlike his lack of clutch hits against Upper Valley, Federico struck eight of his 10 runs against Minico with two outs.

"Some of those hits just fell. It was one of those deals," Federico said. "That's the name of baseball. We always have great batters with Minico."

Minico entered the game with its two best starters - Fennell and Bartolme - having yet to record an inning of mound time in the tourney. Though seemingly fresh, both lacked their usual nasty stuff. Fennell allowed seven runs in six innings, while Bartolme lasted just six batters and gave up the big homer to Spritzer.

"Josh struggled," said Minico coach Russ Wright. "I mean, he'd be the first one to tell you that ... Johnny was not as sharp as I've seen him, but always seemed to find a way to wriggle off the hook."

Twin Falls will be without Ben Mueller this morning. He suffered what Federico said was a dislocated shoulder sliding into first base trying to beat out a grounder in the seventh inning.

Lafferty has also won a number of major Northwest events, and finished runner-up at a national race in Phoenix several years back. He'll drive his 170 mph Chevy dragster in the Super Comp class hoping to improve upon his current eighth-place standing in the Northwest points race.

Kidd, the Magic Valley's most successful racer on both the regional and national level, will be coming out of retirement to pilot a pair of cars for Boise car owner Delbert Marcum. The two-time national event winner and two-year NHRA Northwest drag racing champion will be behind the wheel of a Super Comp dragster and a Super Gas Chevy-powered 1927 T Ford Roadster.

Notably absent this weekend, though, will be Jerome's Mitch McDowell, who remains Idaho's only professional drag racer. After attending the last six NHRA Northwest Nationals, he will content himself rebuilding his dragster, which endured a series of violent engine explosions recently at Rocky Mountain Raceway in Salt Lake City.

McDowell intends to return to NHRA competition this November for the NHRA World Finals in Pomona, Calif.

Irving, Texas-based ExxonMobil said net income rose to $4.15 billion, or $1.18 per share, excluding special items, more than double year-ago results of $1.855 billion, or 53 cents a share. Analysts surveyed by First Call Corp. had expected the company to earn $1.07 per share.

Revenue climbed to $55.9 billion from $43.2 billion a year earlier.

Chevron Corp. reported profit of $1.14 billion before one-time items, or $1.75 a share, up from $350 million, or 53 cents a share, in the year-earlier period. Analysts expected First Call to earn $1.74 a share.

The San Francisco-based company said revenues rose to $13.2 billion, up sharply from last year's $8.7 billion.

Kmart plans store closings

No local ones affected, in drive to improve earnings

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TROY, Mich. — Kmart Corp., the nation's third-largest retailer, is closing 72 of its less-profitable stores in 20 states and putting extra inventory on sale in an effort to improve earnings.

No stores in Idaho or northern Nevada are on the list of 72 closures, Mike Chummers, a Kmart investor relations spokesman, said Tuesday.

While most of the stores being closed are marginally profitable, Kmart said they didn't justify additional investment because of their locations and suitability for expansion. Six Super Kmarts and 66 traditional Kmarts will close, most of them by Nov. 1.

Stores in Burlington and Twin Falls are safe for now.

"We do close a certain number of stores in any given year," maybe 10 or 15, Chummers said. "But we practiced no more announcements of closures this year."

"I think this is it. But next year I'm sure we'll close some stores, as we frequently do," he said.

About 5,000 workers will be affected by this round of closings, Kmart spokesman Steve Pagnoni said Tuesday. The hourly workers will lose their jobs but are being advised to apply to other Kmart locations, he said. Managers will be transferred.

Kmart, which operates 2,171 stores, is considered to be in better financial condition than it was in the mid-1990s, but it has struggled to compete with Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and Target Corp., which both have Magic Valley stores. Its stock price is down 54 percent in the last 52 weeks, from its high of $15.25 June 28, 1999.

The retail chain is in the midst of an ambitious yearlong plan to build its presence on the Internet as well as renovate and open new stores.

At a shareholders' meeting in mid-May, Kmart said it would open 20 new Big Kmart stores, expand 12- to 15 existing stores and add five new Super Kmarts—24-hour centers that combine traditional Kmart discount stores with full grocery operations.

As a result of the closings, Kmart will take a one-time restructuring charge of $240 million during its second quarter. Kmart earned $403 million on revenue of $35.9 billion in fiscal 1999.

Sizzler juices up menu to lure customers

Los Angeles Times

With one foot in the buffet line and the other in the steak house world, Sizzler has earned a reputation in food circles as a "trough-brau," a place heavy eaters go to load up on $6.95 tri-tip and all-you-can-eat tapicoca.

But now it's trying to shake that image by introducing to the budget chain — which has a Twin Falls location — such extravaganzas as premium wine, U.S. Department of Agriculture choice steaks and a soothing, dark wood interior.

Although sales in these remodeled outlets are moving up, critics wonder if the steak house unit of Sizzler International isn't oversteering. Will customers order a glass of cabernet that they have to tote their table on a plastic tray? Will they be willing to fork out $15 for a ribeye ordered at a counter?

"I think that there's a large percentage of the population that doesn't want to stand in line to order dinner," says Ron Paul of restaurant consulting company.

McDonald's battles flat U.S. sales as earnings for quarter rise 2 percent

Bridge News

KANSAS CITY — McDonald's Corp., battling flat U.S. sales amid an ineffective Teenie Beanie Babies promotion, said Tuesday its second-quarter profit rose just 2 percent.

Income for the world's largest fast-food chain increased by 38 million to $526 million, or 59 cents per share, compared with 37 cents a share last year. The results met the expectations of analysts polled by First Call Corp.

System-wide sales at all company-owned and franchised restaurants — including a handful in the Magic Valley — rose 3 percent to $10.2 billion, and total revenue grew 5 percent to $3.6 billion. But the chain's operating profit margin fell to 17.3 percent from 18.4 percent last year.

Flat sales in the United States and declining sales in Europe limited overall growth for the Oak Park, Ill.-based company. Those locales comprise 63 percent of the chain's 28,000 restaurants but about three-quarters of its total business.

Sales at all U.S. locations would have increased 5 percent, the company said, had Beanie Babies' sales met levels from last year's widely successful promotion of the children's mini-dolls. Instead, system-wide sales across the nation remained stagnant at $5.2 billion.

In Europe, expansion pushed system-wide sales up 7 percent in local currency measurements. But the euro's declining value versus the U.S. dollar meant system-wide sales in U.S. dollar terms fell 3 percent to $2.3 billion.

Many industry observers had expected weak sales, though, after most U.S. fast-food chains endured a disappointing May on a same-site sales basis. At McDonald's, U.S. same-site sales fell 5 percent to 6 percent during May while total international same-site sales dropped 3 percent to 4 percent.

"Everything certainly was in the ballpark of expectations," said Mark Kalinowski with Salomon Smith Barney Holdings Inc. "It was pretty much a lackluster quarter overall, but that matched expectations."

chief executive, said the company remains confident sales momentum will return in the second half of the year.

"This expectation is based on our solid operating fundamentals, strong marketing and promotional calendars and less challenging comparisons in several key markets in the second half of the year," Greenberg said.

Kalinowski said Greenberg's assessment is accurate. McDonald's plans several significant promotions around the world in September tied to the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia.

The chain also has released a new advertising campaign with the slogan, "We Love to See You Smile," and is increasing promotions related to its new cooking system that delivers made-to-order food that doesn't require reheating.

That's not all, McDonald's also will offer three new compact discs in an August promotion highlighting teen pop sensation Brandy Spears, and it will heavily promote Disney's live-action movie "102 Dalmatians" this fall.

Harvest may cause storage difficulties

Wheat bins will overflow for 2000 harvest

The Associated Press

LEWISTON — If wheat yields continue to roll in at the record levels expected, warehouse operators may be trying to squeeze grain into every nook and cranny this summer.

"We anticipate that we'll probably have another million bushel pile of soft white wheat on the ground and agree that there will probably be tight storage due to carryover and the lack of export sales," said Marty Anderson of Cargill Inc. in Lewiston.

Jonathan F. Schlueter, executive vice president of the Pacific Northwest Grain Growers Association in Portland, Ore., said a recent survey revealed 17 companies with 27 locations in four Northwest states expect to be piling up to 20 million bushels of grain on the ground this year.

Companies that face the need to store grain on the ground must gain special permission from the state or federal licensing agency and meet certain requirements safeguarding the product.

"But if the grain sells, space opens up."

"What the amount of space available comes down to for us is whether the producer sells the grain," Ken Blakeman of Lewiston Grain Growers said. "If the producer sells the grain we will probably move it. If they don't, then it just clogs up the system."

Lewiston Grain Growers tries to move out grain stored on the ground by October, but other companies, such as Cargill, sometimes cannot get rid of it until December.

"It's a couple of years ago when a glut on the world market filled the warehouses and drove down prices, the United States and the European Union are currently the only places where grain stocks are a problem, according to Tom Mick, president of the Washington Wheat Commission."

There will be wheat that will go on the ground because we have a huge crop coming on and we'll have to see how fast this wheat can be moved out before the snows and rains. It's not so much concerned but not worried at this point."

But the prospects for moving grain are not entirely positive.

"The mood in Portland is pretty pessimistic," Schlueter said. "The demand for soft white wheat from the Pacific Northwest is off and countries like Egypt ... are switching to soft red winter or hard red winter wheat from the Gulf of Mexico."

Another problem for farmers is the cost of fuel, which affects everything from the gas that goes in the tractors. It's all to keep machinery lubricated and petroleum-based fertilizers.

Anderson said the large companies increased their costs by a half cent a bushel beginning July.

Grain shipments from Lewiston increased from 20.02 cents per bushel to 20.46 cents a bushel.

"Those who are going to feed it the worst are the growers," Anderson said.

AT&T beats forecasts on higher digital, wireless sales

Bridge News

NEW YORK — AT&T Corp., the largest U.S. long-distance and cable-television company, said Tuesday that earnings jumped as sales of digital-video and wireless services grew and expenses stayed flat.

The New York-based company said earnings excluding special items rose to $1.9 billion, or 57 cents a share, from $1.6 billion, or 49 cents, a year ago. The result beat Wall Street estimates of 53 cents a share. Net income was $1.75 billion, or 53 cents a share.

Revenue rose to $16.2 billion from $15.8 billion a year earlier. Wireless revenue was up 32 percent to $2.5 billion, while broadband revenue — including cable television — rose to $1 billion, up 10.5 percent, if the recently acquired cable system

MediaOne is accounted as a part of the company last year.

Revenue from consumer long-distance service fell 7.2 percent to $5 billion, but long-distance service to business customers grew 4 percent to $2.1 billion.

Total operating expenses for the second quarter were $12.954 billion compared with $12.839 billion for second quarter 1999.

AT&T Corp. also said it expects third-quarter earnings, to top analysts' expectations and its revenue for the year to be roughly in line with consensus estimates.

Third-quarter operating earnings should reach 40 to 43 cents per share, compared with Wall Street forecasts for the period of 37 cents a share. Full-year profit will come in at between $1.75 and $1.85 a share, the company said, against a First Call consensus estimate of $1.79 a share.

Charles Novak, the company's chief financial officer, said financial indicators pointed toward an improved performance in the third quarter and for the year.

Despite the continued decline in long-distance service revenue, Novak said growth in broadband, wireless and Internet services will allow an continued growth of the company.

Consumer confidence recovers

NEW YORK (AP) - Consumer confidence rebounded in July for a sharp drop last month, suggesting that consumers are optimistic that the U.S. economy is headed in the right direction.

The Conference Board said Tuesday that its Consumer Confidence Index increased to 141.7 in July, up from 139.2 last month but well below the record of 144.7 set in January and reported in May.

The survey showed consumers are more optimistic about the economic outlook for the next six months than they were a month ago, said Lynn Franco, director of the New York group's Consumer Research Center.

Consumer Confidence

The index, based on a monthly survey of some 5,000 U.S. households, is closely watched because consumer spending makes up about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Also Tuesday, the National Association of Realtors reported that sales of existing homes rose an unexpected 2.8 percent in June as Americans continued to lock in deals before mortgage rates climb higher.

The stronger-than-expected performance pushed sales of existing single-family homes to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.23 million units, the highest level in 10 months.

Mark Vitner, an economist with First Interstate in Charlotte, N.C., said the confidence rating should translate into strong consumer spending in the second half of this year, which could mean healthy back-to-school sales and holiday shopping.

America, analysts said. Gibboney Huske, an analyst at Credit Suisse First Boston, said it is too early to tell if the new product will help Polaroid compete in an increasingly digital-oriented market.

"The challenge is because they're really the only company in instant photography that's not getting as defined as a niche market," she said. "To their credit, the involvement of Olympus helps Polaroid gain more mass appeal."

Polaroid Olympus unveil printing digital camera

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Polaroid Corp. and Japanese camera maker Olympus Inc. plan to introduce a digital camera that prints instant pictures on Polaroid film.

The deal announced Tuesday means that Cambridge-based Polaroid, which has long made instant prints and digital cameras that took instant pictures, will have one camera that does both.

The camera, called the C-211 Zoom, will be released this fall and will sell for $800. It has both optical and digital lenses, and allows users to store pictures on a disk and print from the camera by inserting an instant film cartridge.

rent conditions, but their expectations for the next six months signal continued low unemployment and minimal inflationary pressures."

the market, and stocks traded in a narrow range throughout the session.

Analysts predicted the trend would continue until more detailed economic data is released later this week.

Stocks rise as earnings overcome inflation fears

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks edged higher Tuesday after some strong second-quarter earnings reports gave technology investors a boost and overshadowed issues' latest claims about inflation.

But there was little conviction in the market, and stocks traded in a narrow range throughout the session.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.85 to 10,699.97. Broader Stock indicators also rose. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was up 10.18 to 1,474.47, and the Nasdaq composite index gained 48.00 to 4,029.57.

Little League dad cries foul for stand comment Mosquitoes bite birds

DEAR ABBY: I recently took my father to my 11-year-old son's Little League game. While my son's team was at bat, a ball was hit up over the first base line. The first baseman made a gallant attempt to catch the ball, but missed and it went into the outfield.

The right fielder stopped the runner at second base, and my father shouted to the first baseman, "You should have made that play!"

Concerned that he would hurt the boy's feelings, I told Dad he shouldn't shout at the boy. My father then became angry with me and said the boy needs to know that he

"screwed up" so he would "learn from his mistakes."

My father's loud lecture embarrassed me. I told him after he calmed down that I would be sitting in the bleachers. A few minutes later, I looked for him and saw that he was walking home. I had driven him to the game. We have not spoken since.

I feel it is the coach's responsibility to instruct the players. Was I wrong to defend the boy and "insult" my father?

-FRUSTRATED LITTLE LEAGUE DAD

DEAR FRUSTRATED: The job of parents and grandparents at children's sporting events is to cheer them on. Your father's remarks were not helpful. They were hurtful to the first baseman's self-esteem. The boy couldn't help but know that he goofed.

Call your father and point out to him that he didn't like being corrected in public - he got angry and walked home - so why would he think a young first baseman would appreciate being yelled at by a stranger? Perhaps that will help him view his actions in a different light.

DEAR ABBY: It's rare nowadays to find a nice people willing to help a complete stranger. That's why I want to share this with you:

I live in Cheyenne, Wyo. I was seven months pregnant and was driving alone to Thermopolis, five hours away.

Three hours into my trip, I found myself in a major snow storm. I couldn't go on and I couldn't turn back, so I left the interstate at the first change I got. The nearest town had only one gas station, one motel and two restaurants. Neither of the restaurants accepted credit cards, and all the rooms at the motel were already booked. I waited with other stranded motorists for the weather to clear. Unfortunately, it just got worse. The highway patrol eventually closed all the roads.

A wonderful couple checked into their room and invited me to share it with them. Then they bought me dinner. They refused to accept anything from me except my profuse thanks.

I never expected to meet people willing to put themselves out for someone they didn't even know. In this age of distrust, it's reassuring to know that there are still wonderful people out there.

-VALERIE GIBSON

DEAR VALERIE: Thank you for sharing your experience. As more and more people have written to me relating random acts of kindness, it is clearly apparent that generosity of spirit is alive and well in our country.

Q. Did the scientists ever find out what sound most interests the male mosquito?

A. Indeed they did - 250 cycles per second. It took them a long time to find out. Then it took them even longer, surprisingly, to realize that 250 cycles per second is exactly the sound made by the female mosquito.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Care and diligence bring luck." -Thomas Fuller

"My luck ran out on me," lamented South after losing today's game. "I did well to dodge East's tricky play in hearts, but I couldn't overcome the nasty club break."

Was that all there was to the story?

West led the heart deuce. East cleverly won with his ace, and returned the six. His play would win on the off-chance West had led from Q-x-x or if South inserted his 10 with Q-10-4. However, South survived the 10-4 and won the trick with his queen. Wisely, he credited East with all the missing top honors for his opening bid.

South then tackled clubs, leading low to the ace and back to his queen. East's discard brought bad news, and South's last bid was to find East with K-x or a singleton king in spades. He led his last club to dummy's king and took a successful spade finesse. But when his ace failed to drop East's king, South's game fell beyond reach.

South's play in clubs would have picked up the entire suit had East held a singleton 10 or jack. However, he failed to check whether or not he could gather all five club tricks.

To make his game, South should take a spade finesse after winning dummy's club ace. When dummy's king drops, South's ace reveals the finesse, and his ace captures East's king. Now it's safe to try the clubs. If they run, South scores overtricks. More important, when they fail to break, South has his nine winners and his vulnerable game.

ANSWER: Two no-trump is better than bidding two spades. Two no-trump invites a game; two spades implies more strength.
