Convention time arrives

Clinton: GOP poses a tough challenge

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Revving up party loyalists on the eve of the Democratic convention, President Clinton said Sunday that Republicans can be beaten, but it's going to take every day between now and November. Al Gore pledged that he will uphold "the highest values" if he wins the White House.

Gore spoke to The Associated Press from his campaign tour in Cleveland as delegates flocked to his convention city for a four-day political pageant staged on Hollywood's doorstep.

A vigorous demonstration brought a crowd of 2,000 to a downtown square in a colorful protest against police brutality and in support of Mumia Abu-Jamal, on death row for killing a Philadelphia police officer. Across the city, security was extraordinarily tight, so much so that Democratic officials were late for their own press conference because they were slowed gaining clearance into the convention compound.

Gore does not arrive here until Wednesday afternoon and in advance Clinton injected a note of optimism, telling party activists, "You should be of good cheer because we can turn around these polls. But it's not the work of a day. It's going to take every day between now and November."

Chris Bennett of San Francisco services the Jumbotron screen at the Staples Center in Los Angeles Sunday while Ian Olson of Fairbanks, Alaska, is shown on the screen testing a microphone.

If elected, Gore might seek Clinton's advice

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND - Vice President Al Gore, at the very moment he is trying to emerge from President Clinton's shadow, said Sunday he would not hesitate to seek Clinton's counsel if he wins the White House.

"Why would I rule that out?" Gore said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Asked if that tenure would include asking Clinton for advice, Gore lumped Clinton with former President Carter.

"If there's a subject where he can contribute advice, of course - along with President Carter who I talked with just the other day," Gore said.

TF contest fires up taste buds

TWIN FALLS - Tolerating the heat Sunday wasn't just about the 90-degree temperatures.

A handful of brave contestants lined up for a shot at $50 in a contest to see who could eat the most jalapeno peppers at the 11th annual Hispanic Heritage Fiesta in City Park.

Sunday's celebration of dance, games, food and crafts for children capped three days of Hispanic Heritage activities in downtown Twin Falls.

It was Daniel Martinez, 15, who without as much as a wince, polished off 11 jalapeno peppers in 30 seconds.

Sunday was his second win this year, after coming in first at a Cinco de Mayo contest where he managed 12 peppers in just 20 seconds.

Carmen Vazquez won the second round, eating at least as many as a dozen and possibly up to 14 peppers - she wasn't sure - within 20 seconds.

The pepper contest followed dance performances by Grupo Folklorico Azules of Pocatello. The dance troupe dressed in colorful costumes typical of the Spanish influence in the Mexican state of Jalisco, director Hank Gonzalez said.

The performances showcase traditional dances and music. "I like helping people not forget their heritage," Gonzalez said. "It reminds them where they came from."

The fiesta began Friday with a dinner in downtown Twin Falls followed by a number of other activities throughout the weekend including a street dance Saturday night on Main Avenue.

The event was sponsored by the Twin Falls Police Department and Rupert radio station La Fantastica 970 AM with financial support from the

N. Korea sets terms for ties

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea - The leader of long-reclusive North Korea said he would open ties with the United States right away if it removes his country from a list of terrorism-sponsoring nations, South Korea's state media reported Sunday.

"The U.S. is putting a cap of a terrorist nation on us," the Yonhap news agency quoted Kim Jong Il as saying. "As soon as they remove it, we would open ties with the U.S. - even tomorrow."

North Korea is one of seven countries branded by the U.S. State Department as a sponsor of terrorism. Under U.S. law, that bars all but humanitarian aid to the North's government and rules out bank loans from international financial organizations, which are heavily influenced by Washington.

The two nations recently held talks in Pyongyang, the North's capital, on possibly removing the communist country from the list. The U.S. State Department called the meeting "productive" but did not disclose details.

Pyongyang was put on the list because of its alleged involvement in the bombing of a South Korean airliner in the skies near Myanmar, also known as Burma, in 1987.

All 115 people aboard the Korean Air plane died.

Kim's comments on ties with the United States came last week during a meeting with executives of 46 South Korean media organizations who visited the Strait Times North, Yonhap reported. Kim invited the executives after he met with South Korean President Kim Dae-jung in Pyongyang in June - the first-ever summit between leaders of the two Koreas.

The North's leader told the executives he wants to visit South Korea "at an appropriate time, but as soon as possible," Yonhap said.

He had promised a visit during the summit.

SPY CENTRAL

Hollywood gadgetry comes to CIA

The Associated Press

LANGLEY, Va. - The CIA is offering its employees a fanciful look back at the "good old days."

In brightly lit corridors of its suburban Washington headquarters, the Central Intelligence Agency is displaying "spy-fi archives" - a one-of-a-kind collection of Hollywood spy gadgetry and memorabilia from 1960s television series and movies that romanticized and glamorized the spy business.

There's Maxwell Smart's shoe phone from the hit TV show "Get Smart." There's the pen Robert Vaughn used as a secret communicator in the series "The Man From U.N.C.L.E."

There's a mock tarantula used as a prop in a famous scene from the 1962 James Bond film "Dr. No."

And there's much more - all from the private collection of Hollywood screenwriter and author Danny Biederman.

important in the real world, and thus it happens that only people cleared for entry to CIA headquarters - not the general public - can see the Biederman collection. It was first shown to employees on Thursday and will be kept through the end of the year.

As a child, Biederman adored everything about the spy business. Still, he never dreamed his carefully preserved movie props, costumes, scripts, pho-

ACROSS THE NATION

Nation: Showers and thunderstorms scattered along the East Coast on Sunday contributed to a second day of flooding in northern New Jersey. Flash flood watches also were in effect for parts of Delaware, eastern Pennsylvania, eastern New York and eastern Maryland, and strong thunderstorms were reported along the South Carolina coast.

More showers and thunderstorms were pushing through the Great Lakes and Midwest on Sunday. Sturgeon Bay, Wis., received more than 2 inches of rain. The storms kept temperatures in the 60s and 70s as far south as the Tennessee Valley and mizzle Atlantic States.

The southern Plains states were partly cloudy and dry with temperatures in the 90s.

The West was mostly clear and dry. Winds as high as 30 mph were reported over the Northern Rockies where firefighters still battled dozens of wildfires.

The midday high temperature in the Lower 48 states was 99 degrees in Hattah, Okla., and the morning low was 32 degrees in West Yellowstone, Mont.

Protesters prepare for police, tear gas

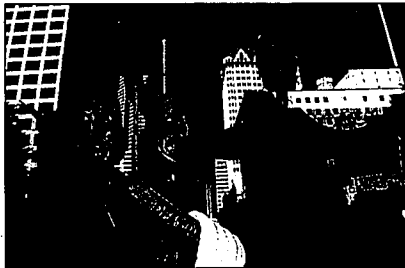

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Protesters were trained Sunday to deal with tear gas and pepper spray and police began working 12-hour shifts to gear for a week of demonstrations geared to this week's Democratic convention.

Gathering for protests were abortion rights activists, environmentalists, striking workers at a Santa Monica hotel and supporters of Mumia Abu-Jamal, who is on death row for killing a Philadelphia police officer in 1981.

At the protesters' headquarters near MacArthur Park, nicknamed the Convergence Center, protesters were taught Sunday how to cope with tear gas and pepper spray and how to behave when confronted by law enforcement during a demonstration.

One bright orange card distributed by the Midnight Special Law Collective contained four statements, starting with, "I am going to remain silent," and ending with, "I want to call my lawyer now."

Other activists were making banners, picket signs and large, satirical puppets for demonstrations outside Staples Center downtown where the convention will be held Monday through Thursday.

Jonathan Crowell put the finishing touches on a sign made to look like a coin with Al Gore and George W. Bush's picture on either side.

"Instead of, 'In God we trust,' it says, 'The evil of two lessers.' No matter what, we're going to get a stern, harsh system," said Crowell of New York City.

Police, meanwhile, bolstered their presence Sunday, sending out hundreds of additional officers. At least three patrol cars kept a watch on the Convergence Center. Police downtown were joined by a contingent from the California Highway Patrol and

More soldiers make tracks to Western fires

BOULDER, Mont. (AP) - Hundreds of evacuees were allowed back into homes in the Elkhorn Mountains on Sunday, but wildfires still threatened more than 2,000 homes across the state.

So far this fire season, more than 365,000 acres of Montana has burned - an area larger than the city of Los Angeles - and 169 buildings, including more than 50 homes, have burned.

More soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, were on their way to help fight the fires Sunday, and 79 firefighters from Australia and New Zealand were also en route, according to the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise.

Across the West, 76 major fires were burning on 869,000 acres in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, the fire center said Sunday.

In Nevada, a pilot was killed Saturday when his helicopter crashed while he was making water drops on a wildfire. The blaze, in a remote about 50 miles east of Fallon, had already consumed 37,700 acres.

The eighth fire-fighter killed fighting wildfires this year, and the second killed in a helicopter crash this month in Nevada.

South of Helena on Sunday, cars full of residents and their belongings wound their way back toward homes firefighters had saved in Montana's Elkhorn Mountains.

Firefighters had gotten a break from the weather Saturday and had made progress toward containing the fires, said Larry Humphrey, the area's incident commander.

percent. That margin was smaller than the double-digit lead reported in other polls, and even Gore's own internal surveys.

Gore told AP he would use his acceptance speech Thursday night to provide new details about his proposed $500 billion tax cut. He also said he will be addressing Social Security, and his proposal for giving private savings accounts on top of traditional benefits.

"In both of those cases, I will draw a sharp contrast between my proposals and those of Gov. Bush," he said.

"It will be a positive speech," Gore said. "I will not criticize my opponent."

That didn't stop the Democratic National Committee negative fallout from Clinton's well-chronicled personal failings.

In the AP interview, Gore was asked about presidential conduct, and said:

"I am who I am. I have served in the House and the Senate and as vice president for almost a quarter century. I feel that my record does speak for itself. This election is about the future and not about the past. I will uphold the oath that I hope to take Jan. 20. tographs and posters would end up at CIA headquarters.

"It's like freaky, bringing these two universes together. It's like beyond fiction," Biederman said as he strolled through the agency where some real-life - but still secret - tools of the spy trade may be not entirely unlike those that U.N.C.L.E. agents (the good guys) used to foil T.H.R.U.S.H. agents (the bad guys).

Take the pen communicator used by Napoleon Solo, the fictional hero played by Vaughn on "The Man From U.N.C.L.E."

It looks like an ordinary, if slightly oversized, pen. From the bottom you pull out a hidden transmitter, and from the top you open a short antenna. Just like that, instant communications. Good for use anywhere in the world. Might the CIA's agents have something similar?

"It's not out of the realm of possibility that very similar items existed - or continue to exist," said CIA spokesman Tom Crispell, dutifully careful to safeguard the spy agency's valuable "sources and methods."

It's that fuzzy connection between fact and fiction that makes Biederman's collection a natural fit for CIA headquarters. "Illusion in the real world is as important as it is in Hollywood," Crispell said.

The gagerty portrays an era of the "good old days," when the line between good and evil was cut clearly, when the "bad guys" were easily defined and demonized - in short, the heyday of the CIA.

When the Cold War ended and communism collapsed as a threat, the spy business lost some of its luster. More at the CIA suggested and the agency shifted its focus to less glamorous threats like drug runners and computer hackers.

Gore

"I don't anticipate that being a regular occurrence, but why would I rule that out?"

Gore said his own record speaks for itself. "I am who I am," he said.

Gore spoke on the eve of Clinton's valedictory on Monday night to the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles.

The next day, Clinton appears with Gore in Michigan. That symbolic transfer of the political baton illustrates the dilemma that has dogged Gore since Clinton's impeachment trial darkened the vice president's own ambitions: How to shine beside Clinton's white-hot charisma, elude the taint of scandal, and embrace Clinton's economic record.

Gore said separating from his political partner of eight years "is a natural process that evolved over the course of a final year. I received the crescendo at the end of the convention and after the convention."

Bush heads for ranch

Nominee plans to lie low during Dems' convention

SEDONA, Ariz. (AP) — Republican presidential nominee George W. Bush suspended active campaigning on Sunday to lie low for the Democratic National Convention. He said he may not watch or listen to it.

"I already know what they're going to say about me. They've been saying it for the past six months. It's predictable," Bush told reporters as he and former rival Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., parted company.

Republican presidential candidate Texas Gov. George W. Bush waves to media and staff after his campaign plane landed Sunday in Austin, Texas.

After spending the night at McCain's ranch here, Bush and wife-Laura headed back to Texas. They were to spend the next four days relaxing on their 1,500-acre ranch near Waco.

"I'm just going to hang out with my wife," Bush said. "Maybe chop a little cedar, maybe fish...Some friends are coming over. We may play some cards."

Bush and McCain have been campaigning together for the past three days, primarily on the West Coast, trying to appeal to the independent and swing-state voters who supported McCain in the GOP primaries.

At a picture-taking session in Sedona set up by the Bush campaign, with majestic 5,000-foot high Cathedral Rock as a backdrop, McCain said he hoped to turn the Bush visit into "an annual event."

Bush said that McCain was "at the top of his game" in preparing barbecued ribs the night before. "I ate about nine ribs," Bush said. "And homemade cherry ice cream."

Bush said he didn't plan to watch the Democratic convention because he didn't have cable television.

When reporters suggested that he could get parts of it on regular television or perhaps radio, he said, "You've caught me. I don't know if I'll watch it or not."

"I'll trust my sidekick... to give me briefings," he said, indicating communications director Karen Hughes.

Bush will resume campaigning next Friday — with an in-your-face visit to Democratic rival Al Gore's home state.

Iraq: Allied warplanes strike train station

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A second straight day of allied airstrikes over southern Iraq damaged a train station and several homes and injured at least three people, a senior Iraqi military officer said Sunday.

British and U.S. warplanes attacked targets Saturday in Samawa, 170 miles south of Baghdad, a day after airstrikes in the same city that Iraq said killed two people and injured 19 others.

Lt. General Shaheen Yassin Ahmad, commander of the Iraqi Air Defense, told reporters that the allied planes are targeting homes and civilian structures "from the Saudi and Kuwaiti skies."

"This train station is used to serve the people," Ahmad said. "Will they still claim they are protecting Iraqis when they are killing them on daily basis?"

Friday's airstrikes hit a warehouse used to store food allowed under the U.N. oil-for-food deal as well as several homes, Iraqi officials said.

The attacks ended a six-week lull in airstrikes, which used to take place almost daily.

The last raids that Iraq said caused casualties were June 29, when Baghdad said U.S. and British warplanes killed one civilian and injured another.

Ford says tire plant had high failure rate

The Washington Post

The recalled Wilderness tires made at Firestone's plant in Decatur, Ill., from 1996 to 1999 failed at a rate more than 10 times greater than the same tires made at all the company's other plants combined, according to an analysis by the Ford Motor Co.

Ford's release Sunday of the data coincides with a major advertising campaign the automaker has started to reassure customers that the Firestone tires on new Ford Explorers sports-utility vehicle, are safe.

Firestone announced the recall of 6.5 million 15-inch ATX and Wilderness all-terrain tires last week, including all the Wilderness models made at the Decatur plant.

It did so after the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it was investigating Firestone tire failures involved in accidents that killed 46 people and injured 80 others.

The data also seem sure to focus more attention on the Decatur plant, where many of the recalled tires were produced. The Washington Post reported Sunday that six former Decatur workers testified or are scheduled to testify about what they claim was shoddy quality control at the plant in the mid-1990s when the facility was making ATX all-terrain tires. There also were labor disputes at the plant during that period. Firestone denied any such quality problems.

Declare Independence from Sinus Pain!

Sinus Facts

Have you ever had a cold or allergy attack that wouldn't go away? If so there's a good chance you actually have sinusitis. Experts estimate that 37 million people are afflicted with sinusitis each year, making it one of the most common health conditions in America. The number may be significantly higher, since the symptoms of bacterial sinusitis often mimic those of colds or allergies, and many sufferers never see a doctor for proper diagnosis and treatment.

Compiled from staff reports

Sculpted from sage

A Times-News series covering construction of the Magic Valley Arts Council's millennium sculpture. Today's installment features quotes from current Magic Valley residents.

"The only Oregon Trail you could go old here was at the Stricker place."

"Everybody knows your business."

"They have their side of the street."

"We have a community that will... we have ours."

Paul Clausen, of Coeur d'Alene, Wash., is living in Twin Falls for six months to build a sculpture that captures the essence of the Magic Valley. Two downtown installations are at City Park and the other on the corner of Main Avenue and Shoshone Street - will feature a bronze harrow and plow and water spouting from the harrow. Historical and contemporary quotes about Twin Falls will be etched into the basalt.

Not all of the quotes featured in this series necessarily will appear on the sculpture. About two dozen people Clausen has named "community historians" will help him decide which quotes to use.

Only quotes of historical significance will appear with attribution on the sculpture to avoid cluttering it with too much text. Other historical quotes will be cross-referenced in a book kept at the library. But the question remains about how to handle cross-references for contemporary quotes. Attribution for historical purposes 100 years from now is significant, yet Clausen said he doesn't want people today to get caught up in who said what.

"What I really want is more people to think about their own relationship with the town and the city they live in," he said.

FRESH COAT

David Hanson volunteered his time Saturday to give one of the horse barns at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds a fresh coat of paint. The 84th Twin Falls County Fair is scheduled Aug. 30 through Sept. 4 and will include a number of equine events, including a Paint horse show, all-breed horse show and draft horse performances.

Council to discuss cops, money

By John T. Huddy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It's all about working together.

At least that's what the Buhl, Filer, Kimberly and Twin Falls city police departments want to start doing.

The City Council will discuss a memorandum of agreement that would allow officers of each city to do police work in the other cities.

The agreement would also provide for mutual aid in emergencies, Police Chief Lee DeVore said in a letter to city staff.

In the agreement, one city's officers can patrol in another city under the following circumstances:

- When there is reason to believe a crime was committed within an officer's jurisdiction.
- When investigation leads the officer to people living outside his or her jurisdiction.
- If the investigation uncovers a crime within the second police department's jurisdiction, the lead investigator will immediately notify and cooperate with the other agency.

Buhl and Filer have signed the agreement. Twin Falls and Kimberly still have to sign.

In other business, the council will also discuss the $26.6 million 2000-01 budget tonight. The council could adopt the preliminary budget at its meeting.

The 2000-01 budget is a 2.6 percent increase from the 1999-2000 budget of $25.9 million.

There are a variety of reasons for the budget increase this year, said Gary Evans, the city's finance director.

"There are some new policemen and some new personnel," Evans said.

Evans said it doesn't look like there is any overspending this year.

The council will also verify the date for a public hearing on the budget. That hearing is 6 p.m. Aug. 28.

The budget year starts Oct. 1. The budget will be published in legal notices Aug. 17 and 24.

The council also will consider the reappointment of Sue Burwell, Alan Horner and Scot McNeely to the board of directors of the city's Industrial Development Corporation and commission board of the city's Urban Renewal Agency.

BLM wants public to comment on motorized recreation

By N.S. Nohkventer Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Some people value the quiet and solitude still found in the backcountry of Idaho; others enjoy riding motorcycles and other off-road vehicles in those quiet places.

With the growing population in the West, those two groups are increasingly coming into conflict.

The Bureau of Land Management wants to hear from people about how best to manage the growing number of off-highway vehicles on public lands. And the Workers get a handle on Jackpot fires

The Times-News

JACKPOT, Nev. - Today most of the several hundred firefighters who battled the Camp Fire, a blaze that consumed nearly 32,000 acres, are expected to be pulled off the fire that was suppressed Sunday.

As its worst, more than 450 firefighters battled the blaze and two other fires that consumed more than 8,500 acres in the O'Neil Complex, a news release from the fire management team said. O'Neil Ranch is about 25 miles southwest of Jackpot, Nev. Helicopters have dropped more than 1.3 million gallons of water to control advancing flames and to douse hot spots in the complex.

No firefighters were injured and no structures were damaged or lost to the fire, the news release said.

It was an active blaze, with a new fire triggered Saturday by a muller on a hay wagon. The fire destroyed the load of hay, damaged the wagon's tires and began burning uphill into sagebrush. A helicopter working the Camp Fire broke away to douse the new flames along with the Fire Cats, a crew of 16 to 18-year-old girls. They stopped the fire at one acre, the news release said.

Two Bureau of Land Management hotshot crews will continue to monitor the Camp Fire with the support of engine and helicopter. Incident Commander Pat Murphy said. About 75 firefighters will remain on the fire at least through mid-week to mop up and patrol the area.

Firefighters were making good progress toward containment of the Chokecherry Fire that had consumed an estimated 25,000 acres 14 miles east of Jackpot, said Melissa Phillips, an information officer with the BLM. The fire was headed toward 100 percent containment Sunday night. It threatens livestock, grazing range, wildlife habitat, and historic resources along the California Trail.

Parade to honor Declo couple

By Ruth Stroeter Times-News writer

BURLEY - Two long-time teachers. Two professional caterers. Two lifelong Mini-Cassians who hardly expected recognition for anything but their prime rib.

"We're very surprised at the honor given us, because there are just so many deserving people in this area," Cleone Moncur said.

Moncur and her husband, Richard, were named this year's parade grand marshals for the Cassia County Fair. It's an honor that doesn't go unappreciated.

"I know it's a real great honor to us to be chosen," she said.

He was born in Rupert, she in Declo, and they both wanted to stay where they had roots. She

Ranchers don't panic over drought hardships

By Ruth Stroeter Times-News writer

BURLEY - It's a tough season for ranchers, but that's to be expected in the often-arid West.

Dry weather is taking its toll in several Idaho counties this summer. Within the past week, Cassia and Lincoln counties have filed drought-related disaster declarations. If Gov. Dirk Kempthorne approves Cassia County's declaration, it will enable livestock grazers to seek state or federal relief.

The drought, caused by poor winter snowfall and spring rain, has forced the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service to order herds home at least two weeks early.

When water is scarce, cattle will congregate wherever water can be found. That concentration of cattle is damaging vegetation lining those streams and creeks.

When cattle come home early, calves that would normally weigh 450 pounds at the close of grazing season weigh closer to 415 pounds, said Scott Bedke, an Oakley rancher and president-elect of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association.

Luckily the price of beef is good this year, ranging from $1.10 to $1.15 a pound, Bedke said. But the industry will still make a revenue cut. And low precipitation didn't help production, which Bedke speculates may be down by 20 to 40 percent.

Group discovers historic trail

•BOISE (AP) - The Forest Service and some volunteers have discovered portions of an historic trail used by miners more than 130 years ago.
The 50-mile long Goodrich Trail was the shortest route between Idaho City and Rocky Bar, two of the earliest gold producing areas in southwestern Idaho. Miners began using the Goodrich Trail in 1863 for travel between gold mining areas in and around the Boise Basin. But, poor maintenance, hazardous conditions and expensive toll stations pushed the route into disuse.
Two safer and more economical trails opened, replacing the Goodrich Trail.
Although archaeologists and historians have long known about the Goodrich Trail, no one had tried to locate the actual route. Much of the land now is part of the Boise National Forest.
Forest Service personnel and volunteers used historic records, maps and newspaper articles in efforts to survey areas they thought the trail was located. The team found several sites dating between 1862 and 1880, which coincides with the life of the trail. They also found artifacts including pieces of window glass that may have come from a toll station structure, a boot buckle, a button, pieces of ceramic crockery and a number of cans.

Archaeologist Tyrone Corn said the Goodrich Trail and other mining sites can reveal useful information about the Gold Rush era in Idaho. After gold was discovered in the Boise Basin in the fall of 1862, thousands of miners rushed to the area in search of their fortunes.
"It's a shared history and we're curious about what happened and how people lived," said Corn. "Even though it was little more than 100 years ago, records tend to favor famous individuals and events with little attention paid to the everyday life of working people."

Idaho Power says $3 million line upgrade will finish early

BOISE - Work has begun on the second phase of a new power line construction project to improve the reliability of Idaho Power's growing number of Boise County customers, according to an Idaho Power news release.

The three-year project began

Around the valley

last year and is expected to be finished by December, nearly a year ahead of schedule, the release said.

"We'll have as many as three contractors working on different sections of the line so we can make our target and beat the winter weather," says acting project leader Charlie Thomas in the release.

Because of growth in Boise County, Idaho Power is working to improve service in the area. Data on outages for 1999 showed more reliable service after the first phase of improvements, the release said.

Outage duration decreased 97 percent from the first quarter 1999 to the fourth quarter 1999 while outage frequency decreased 98 percent for the same period, the release said.

Highway crews repave U.S. Highway 30

SHOSHONE - Crews are repaving U.S. Highway 30 from Washington Street to Blue Lakes Boulevard and the project will continue on U.S. 30 from Red

Cap to Kimberly Road, according to an Idaho Transportation Department news release.

One lane will be closed and delays of five minutes or less are expected. Work is expected to be finished by the end of August, the release said.

"We have a good life. We have fun. We love being around people," said Glenn Moncrief. "I think that's the thing we thoroughly enjoyed with our students and staff and our catering."

Both have been active in their church and in community activities.

The Moncriefs have four children - Louise Mecham and Marlea Preston, both of Pocatello, Cherise George of Declo, and Monet Thomander of Colorado Springs, Colo., they have 12 grandchildren.

Richard Moncrief said his life here has left him feeling rewarded. He has known many good people, has had a terrific career, and with the catering business, has been able to serve many people.

"Cassia County has been extremely good to me and my family," he said.

Public hearing on off-highway vehicle use on public lands will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Tuesday at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Westcott Plaza on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

The Blue Ribbon Coalition in Idaho Falls, a motorized recreation advocate group, praised the effort. All kinds of recreation can be accommodated with proper management, she said.

"We want to work with BLM to keep all roads and trails open," Cook said.

It's important for people to turn out, if they don't show up, they can't complain about the results, she said.

Environmentalists say they are not seeking to ban motorized recreation, but they want the BLM to limit motor vehicles to appropriate routes to minimize the worst of their environmental damage, say four environmental groups.

The Committee for Idaho's High Desert, Idaho Environmental Society and the Sierra Club in a combined statement say off-highway vehicles traveling cross-country can leave lasting damage in fragile environments.

Inappropriate use can disturb wildlife, destroy habitat, cause soil to erode, kill rare and endangered plants, disturb the natural quiet in the backcountry that others users seek, the groups say. Sixty-one percent of public lands in Idaho are open to off-highway vehicles, but those vehicles also help spread nonpoint source pollution in trees, increase the chances of average precipitation for March through June 1999 was 1.43 inches. The year's is 39 inches.

Lightning-caused fires that have dashed through the county have completely burned some allotments. It takes two years before an allotment can be grazed again, while the ground recedes itself.

Not every rancher is affected equally. Through luck of the draw, some ranchers find themselves on more reliable springs that haven't gone dry, Bedke said.

Drought status will allow livestock grazers to qualify for assistance programs intended to mitigate damages.

After Kemphorne's office receives Cassia County's disaster declaration, he has 90 days to send a letter of concurrence to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The department then comes to the Farm Service Agency and requests support.

The county's Farm Service Agency then goes out and collects data. The department's approval is based on fire activity, current precipitation, creek flows and springs, Ulrich said.

It sounds like a long process. But with the recent fires, the county's drought application is "not going to lay around the government's office" long, Ulrich said.

human-caused fires and release air and water pollutants, the groups say.

Current BLM off-highway regulations stem from 1972, when only about 5 million off-highway vehicles were in use nationally. That number has risen and technological advances allow vehicles to travel in places that were once inaccessible.

Motorized recreation on public lands is one of the more contentious issues facing the agency, BLM Director Tom Fry says. And BLM officials are seeking the public to help develop a strategy that BLM field managers can use to solve local problems with motorized use.

Many BLM land users do not keep up with advances in technology and allow unlicensed users to travel over large areas often valued for other forms of recreation. And more is known now about the fragile nature of some of these areas.

Motorized recreation is a legitimate use of public land, but it should be done in an environmentally responsible manner, the BLM says.

The public can comment in a number of ways. A mailer will be sent to public commenters who contact the

IN BRIEF

Kleinkopf, Undhjem rule at Muni's Coors

TWIN FALLS — Just a junior-to-be at Twin Falls High School, Brett Kleinkopf fended off the likes of former course assistant Mike “Turbo” Magallon and Filer’s Nate Stinson on Sunday to win the Coors Club Championship men’s title with a two-day 131 at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Stinson, who will be a Filer High senior this fall, finished second at 139.

On the women’s side, Virginia Undhjem proved too steady to overcome, carding a 149 for the ladies’ championship title. Jennifer Hedberg, a senior-to-be at Twin Falls High, was second with a 153. Other flight winners included Dana Jones, who carded a 144 in the first flight, Rex Silcox, whose 160 was tops in the second flight, Rich Birrell, who fired a 146 to win the men’s senior flight, Penny Cash, who recorded a 186 in the ladies’ first flight, and Charlotte Brunelli, whose 172 was tops in the ladies’ senior flight.

Craighead, Carroll win Idaho Couples Chapman

TWIN FALLS — Gary Craighead and Kim Carroll teamed to shoot a final-round 51.8 Sunday at Candleridge Golf Course, earning the Idaho Couples Golf Association Championship flight title with a two-day 104.6.

Tied behind them at 105.2 were Reed and Sharon Dayton and Bob Hitchcock and Jeanette Johnson. Dave and Muriel Pettit won the first flight with a final-round 48.1, and Rocky and Leann Hogan, and Dick and Betty Pettit were tied 2.8 shots back. Jim and Joyce Fleming took second flight honors with a two-day 92.2, while hard-charging Vic and Barbara Darnell shot a tourney-low 42.3 to take second.

Win at Idaho makes Portland IPFL champ

BOISE — A 35-22 victory over Idaho at the Bank of America Centre late Saturday gave 11-5 Portland the regular-season Indoor Pro Football League championship.

Glenn Foreben scored twice and tallied 130 all-purpose yards as the Prowlers earned the right to host the IPFL championship game on Aug. 25. Idaho quarterback Albert Higgs was 13 of 38 for 164 yards and a pair of touchdowns in the Stallions’ losing effort. Idaho’s season ends at 5-11.

Buhl bulls its way to final four at regionals

By Jeff Rosen
Times-News sports editor

LEWISTON — The final four feels pretty good.

Just ask Buhl.

Another complete game on the mound, this time from Ryan Wagner, and TJ Cline’s towering grand slam in the fourth inning combined to lift the Tribe over Powell, Wyo., 7-2 on Sunday at Lewis-Clark State College.

The victory guarantees the 39-12 Idaho champions a top-four

In-the money

The Buhl American Legion Baseball team got another complete game on the mound and a grand slam from TJ Cline Sunday to advance into the final four of the Northwest Regional Class A Tournament.

What’s next: Undeclared Marysville, Wash., played once-beaten Bitterroot Valley, Mont., late Sunday night. Buhl will play one of those teams today in a loser-out affair at 8:05 p.m. Mountain Time.

The bottom line: Win or lose today, Buhl finishes no worse than fourth.

finish at the Northwest Regional Class A Tournament, not to mention another day to pursue even loftier goals: a third- or second-place showing, or maybe even the regional title Burley earned last summer.

“We’re pretty happy with where it’s at,” said Buhl coach Lee Cline. “The thing you see here, and the guys are hitting it right away, is you hit ball in the gap and the outfielders are running it down. It’s just a different level of play, and we’re playing pretty well.”

How well? Buhl’s 13 hits Sunday felt just one shy of Saturday’s production against Lebanon, Ore. That’s 27 hits in two days.

“There’s not a lot of teams that have had 13 hits (in a game) here,” Cline said. “Yesterday we had 14. The big key here is execution, and for the most part we’re executing.”

As has become customary for Buhl this postseason, the first inning brought the Tribe’s first score. Catcher Cory Hamilton was hit by a pitch, TJ Cline singled and Sean Van Elderen walked to load the bases. Cody Chandler grounded out, but Hamilton scored on the play.

Powell scored one in the third and another in the fourth, though, and Buhl trailed 2-1 heading into the bottom of the fourth.

Great Falls designated hitter and former Minico High standout Jared Price connects in his second at-bat Saturday night against the Idaho Falls Padres. Price, who finished the game 2-for-5 with two doubles, made his first trip back to Idaho Saturday after being drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers in June.

Minico High standout Jared Price settles into life in the minors

IDAHO FALLS — If crossing the state line didn’t feel like much of a homecoming, one glance around McDermott Field Saturday night should have.

With former teammates, coaches and fans peppering the stands, ex-Minico High standout Jared Price made a triumphant trip home Saturday, going 2-for-5 with two doubles and two RBIs as a member of the rookie-advanced Great Falls Dodgers.

Though the Dodgers lost to Idaho Falls 14-10 Saturday, the homecoming marked Price’s first professional game in Idaho since signing with Los Angeles in June.

Afterward, as youngsters scrambled around the bases as part of a postgame promotion, the former Spartan slugger reflected on his first taste of life in the minors.

Sir Rocco drives to Buick Open victory

Compiled from wire reports

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — The furor is over, the tumult and shouting have subsided.

The Flint area and southeastern Michigan can return to normal. Like Elvis leaving the building, Tiger Woods has left the area.

And the winner of the Buick Open is Rocco Mediate!

Woods didn’t make any pull-out-of-the-hat miracle, but enough drama was packed into the final hole to make up for it.

Instead of El Tigre, it was Sir Rocco, a lame-backed, fast-talking, good-natured 38-year-old Pennsylvanian who hung around the leaders for 71 holes, then brought heartbreak to Chris Perry at the tournament’s final hole.

Mediate whacked a nine-iron approach pin high, 12 feet away, then drained the putt after Perry, whose second shot came up short, clipped his long chip shot eight feet past the cup.

Then, with a large group of left-over Woods Watchers hushed, Perry — who had played a virtually flawless round — missed the putt and bogeyed for a two-shot swing.

“My last putt was so exciting,” said Mediate, who sent golf purists into a coma in 1991 when he became the first player to win on the PGA Tour with a long putter.

“This is a good one for me. I knew it would take a low score. . . . What did I shoot, anyway?”

Mediate had lost track as he and Perry duelled down the stretch. Mediate’s eighth and final birdie gave him a six-under 66 for 268, which is 20 under par at Warwick Hills’ birdie heaven.

Woods finished with a respectable 68, but settled for an 11th-place tie.

Jenkins enjoys Canada Senior Open championship

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Tom Jenkins is having the time of his life, both on and off the golf course.

Jenkins, who, at age 52, became a father again last month, won for the second time

Rocco Mediate tries to coax a putt on the 14th green in the final round of the Buick Open Sunday.

His 4-under-par 68 on the St. Charles Country Club course gave him a 14-under 274 total, one stroke better than Kermit Zarley.

A lesser light on the PGA Tour from 1973 to 1985, Jenkins has thrived among the over-50 set.

The first prize for his first victory of the year was $217,500 and it pushed him over the $1 million mark in official earnings this year with $1,134,196.

Doug Tewell shot a 69 to finish third at 276, and Bruce Fleisher, tied with Jenkins after the third round, finished four strokes back after a 72.

Mallon takes the last du Maurier Classic tourney

AYLMER, Quebec — Meg Mallon shot a 3-under-par 69 to win the du Maurier Classic, probably the last women’s major championship ever in Canada.

Mallon finished with a 6-under 282 total for a one-stroke stroke margin over Rosie Jones. Mallon earned $180,000 for her first major title since 1991.

Du Maurier is a brand name for Imperial Tobacco and sharp restrictions on cigarette advertising taking effect in Canada next year will force the company to cut ties with an event it has sponsored since 1984.

Quale blasts to fifth win

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defending Mountain Dew Modifieds champion Bruce Quale isn’t about to just hand over his crown to current points leader Steve Jones.

The Twin Falls resident ran to his fifth season win, and second in as many weeks, as the NASCAR Weekly Racing Series finished Week 18 in front of a sparse crowd at Magic Valley Speedway late Saturday night.

“Boy, this car is really good — on long runs especially,” said Quale, who finished the main ahead of Jones and third-place Brett Thompson. “Steve outqualifies me, but in the main it just goes like crazy.”

Quale, who began the race second to last, quickly made up ground as pole-sitter Tom Weiss got tangled up with Dana Pruett, allowing the pack of Thompson, Jones, Quale and Rick Corbridge to pull ahead.

With Thompson leading the way, Jones and Quale quickly pulled up into a three-car race through Lap 11.

The trio separated themselves as Thompson gamely held the inside lane in front of Jones and Quale. But a lap later, Quale pushed past the newlywed on the outside of the front straightaway and motored out to a three-second lead by Lap 17.

Quale extended his advantage by the midpoint of the race, running smoothly throughout. After grabbing the lead, Quale admitted he almost spun himself out while working the brakes.

“My crew never would’ve forgiven me if I’d caused the only yellow,” he said.

Bean tests Idaho Midgets

Pole-sitter Dave Bean went wire-to-wire to win the Idaho Midget Racing Association’s main event.

But after leading for 19 of the race’s 20 laps, he needed to get on the gas coming out of Turn 4 on the final lap as season points leader Steve Spoor suddenly nudged ahead for the lead.

Bean caught just enough horsepower, however, to nose out Spoor at the finish.

“I heard him all over me for the last 12 laps,” Bean said. “I opened the door for him but I said, ‘I’m going to give it everything I have,’ and luckily that was enough.”

Stuart Birkinbine grabbed third and Stan Going fourth.

Morris earns first Pony win

Running in only his sixth race of the year, Ethen’s Larry Morris survived a three-wheeled start amid clouds of dirt, then hit the gas and pulled away for his first NAPA Auto Parts Pony Stocks main event victory of the season.

“I’m excited,” Morris said from Victory Lane. “I like to win at least one a year.”

Morris, motoring the No. 44 Ford Mustang, escaped the early-race traffic and sped away on Lap 4 to win going away. Defending class champion David Caldwell Jr. placed second, followed by Ed Keyes, Mike Prara and Alan Newlan.

Solid signal-callers help Denver buck Pack

DENVER (AP) — It's a good thing the Denver Broncos don't have a quarterback controversy because Sunday's game wouldn't have settled anything. Gus Ferotte, who has failed to unseat incumbent Brian Griese as the starter and who conceded that he's not the job...

NFL preseason last week, put up nearly identical statistics to his counterpart in the Broncos' 26-20 preseason victory over Cline injury-ravaged Green Bay Packers.

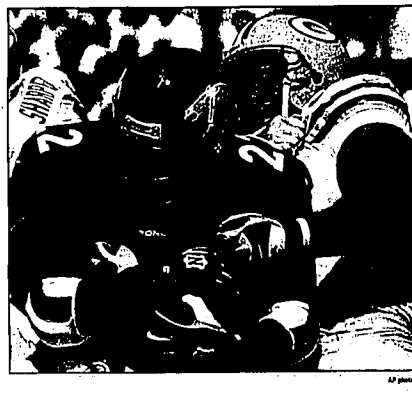

Olandis Gary ran for 94 yards and a third-quarter touchdown for the Broncos, and Jason Elam added four field goals.

In a rematch of the 1998 Super Bowl, the Broncos broke a 13-13 tie with 10 third-quarter points behind Gary and Ferotte.

Despite suffering the same breakdowns in the red zone that crippled them in 1999, the Broncos (2-0) generated 454 yards compared to Green Bay's 344.

Griese and Ferotte both were solid. Griese was 10-for-16 for 156 yards in the first half, and Ferotte was 13-for-20 for 153 yards in the second half.

"Brian was poised, he threw the ball well and he had command of the game plan," Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said.

Denver running back Olandis Gary is stopped after a short gain by Green Bay Packers defensive end David Bowens during the second quarter Sunday.

"That's what you're looking for. You're looking for leaders out there."

Terrill Davis, in his second game since undergoing reconstructive surgery on his right knee, rushed for a workmanlike 28 yards on eight carries.

The Packers (1-1) were without quarterback Brett Favre, who has been bothered by tendonitis in his right elbow.

"I told Brett to go out there in prime warmups and if he felt any pain whatsoever, I didn't want him to go," Green Bay coach Mike Sherman said.

Buhl

Continued from A7 But the Wyoming squad had scored all the runs it would muster, and Buhl was just getting warmed up.

Josh Prince led off with a double. Wagner walked and Matthews laid down a bunt. Cline called perfect to put a Buhl base runner on every bag.

"That was probably the second-biggest play of the game," the coach said. "He just painted the line with it."

Hamilton singled to tie the game 2-all, and TJ Cline cleared the bases by turning a 1-2 count into a left-field rainbow that made even his father chuckle.

"He hit it long ways," Cline said. "He hit the second row from the top of the bleachers that they have here for the (NALA) World Series."

Chandler's RBI single in the sixth rounded out the scoring. After that, it was all ground balls and defense behind Wagner, who struck out four and walked just three in his complete-game performance.

"I figured if we got six innings out of him, that'd be great," Cline said. "But he just hung in there, I kept asking him if he was OK, and he said he was. He showed a lot of moxie today."

Just as critical was Buhl's production throughout the line up: Hamilton, Cline, Chandler and Prince each had two hits and five other players had one apiece.

"Everybody contributed," Cline said. "Everybody put the ball in play. And we played real well defensively. We're in the final four, and you can't do much better than that."

Buhl resumes action at 8:05 p.m. Mountain Time today against an as-yet undetermined opponent. The only remaining teams are Buhl, host Lewis-Clark, Marysville, Wash., and Bitterroot Valley, Wyo. Buhl will play either Marysville or Bitterroot Valley.

The championship game is Tuesday.

Local baseball fans might recall that the Twin Falls Cowboys won the league that year, finishing the season 72-52.

Price and the Dodgers will play one more game tonight against Idaho Falls before returning home for an eight-game home stand against Ogden, Billings and Missoula. Today's game is scheduled for a 7:15 start at McDermott Sports.

Times-News sportswriter Matt Peterson can be reached via email at mpeterson@magicalvalley.com or by calling 677-4042.

Price

Continued from A7 "It's pretty good," Price said. "It's a little different. It's the same baseball, but speeded up a lot faster. It's fun though and I'm enjoying it."

As might be expected, he's also learning a lot about things he's never before known — at least on the baseball field.

Like failure. In high school, he hit 17 homers and batted better than .600, something most players would be hard-pressed to do off a tee. In 22 games as a professional, however, Price stands just a few faps north of the Mendoza line. "The two-hit performance Saturday raised his average from .227 to .239."

"The hardest thing for me is going from getting like three, four, two hits every game to getting one, for a 10-4," Price said. "That's probably the hardest for me. In high school, I was always hitting it every time."

He was also playing every day. With Great Falls, Price has played most of the year behind 20-year-old Dominican Jose Diaz (6-0, 204). An above-average defensive catcher with a rocket for an arm, Diaz has struggled with the stick, hitting just .205 through 41 games.

"I guess I've kind of gotten used to it," Price said. "I know that he's trying to give me a chance and I'm young and this is my first year. And I'll always get another chance, but I like to be out there playing all the time."

For at least a few more days, however, he's relegated to the role of designated hitter. Last week, he developed tendonitis in his throwing arm.

"I can't play right now," said Price, who instead of warming up with the team in the outfield Saturday hit off a tee near the dugout with hitting coach Bert Penn. "I've been playing and it's just gotten worse, so they pulled me out and I can't throw for a week."

Hitting eighth in the lineup Saturday, Price flew out to left field and grounded out to the pitcher in his first two at-bats against Idaho Falls starter Justin Williams.

In the fifth inning, with his team down 8-4, Price lifted a monster fly to shallow left-center that fell in for a double after Padres center fielder David Carter lost the ball in the lights.

After reaching on an error in the seventh, Price hit a hard grounder down the third base line for his second double of the game in the eighth. The hit scored teammates Jose Escalera and Nate Wright and pulled the Dodgers within four, 14-10.

Despite the loss, Great Falls (10-7 in the season's second half) maintained a one-game lead over Missoula in the Pioneer League's Northern Division.

As for living in Great Falls, Price said he's adjusted as well as he can.

"It's bigger than Rupert," he said. "But we hardly have time to go anything — go to the baseball field, go home, go to bed. It's a nice town. I was kind of surprised. I was going, 'Great Falls! This is gonna be bad,' but it's pretty good."

Though he's got years of baseball ahead of him, Price is already in good company. Among

Don't reject novel ways to make war on drugs

From the Deseret News (Salt Lake City)

Law enforcement officials need as many tools as possible in order to prosecute and arrest criminals, thereby making society safer for law-abiding citizens. The tools do need to be legal, however, which brings into question a tactic being used by Utah Highway Patrol troopers throughout the state.

The so-called "no-block roadblock," which has resulted in a number of arrests of drivers totting or using drugs or alcohol on the road, has raised eyebrows. Iron County Attorney Scott M. Burns believes the surveillance maneuver violates Utah law and therefore should not be used. Utah law states that police agencies must receive a judge's approval before conducting a roadblock. As such that particular tactic has been temporarily discontinued in Iron County.

The UHP counters by saying that the signs, placed along the highway shoulder with messages such as "drug-sniffing dog ahead" and "narcotics officers, checkpoint up ahead," don't constitute roadblocks but merely trick would-be drug users and dealers. Therefore, a court order isn't necessary.

Is the practice deceptive? Yes. But shouldn't law enforcement personnel be allowed to be deceptive to catch criminals? Criminals clearly are deceptive.

Here's how it works: Troopers watch for drivers who act suspiciously as they pass the sign. Some drug users actually toss drugs out a car window. Others do an abrupt about-face, making a quick U-turn to avoid the "roadblock." Some cars that are less blatant but still suspicious are followed by strategically placed troopers and pulled over if they disobey a minor traffic law. Troopers then conduct a routine traffic stop but are often accompanied by a drug-sniffing dog. If the dog reacts, the troopers then have probable cause to search the vehicle. Burns believes the pseudo-roadblocks not only violate state law but may be an infringement of constitutional rights involving search and seizure. The difference of opinion between Burns and the UHP needs to be resolved in court.

If the practice is found to be illegal, it will stop. If not, however, the UHP and other law enforcement agencies, assuming they're supported by their respective governing bodies, should be allowed to use unorthodox methods to identify those who break the law.

Law enforcement agencies should be allowed to use unorthodox methods to identify those who break the law.

Uncle Sam swindles docs, dentists

From the Chicago Tribune

The typical physician completes medical school with high hopes and lots of student loans to repay - $90,745 worth, on average, at a time when managed care is squeezing doctors' earnings. So many graduates do the obvious thing: grab the best-paying position they can find to get a good start on reducing that burden. But doctors who want to combine idealism with financial prudence have another option: getting paid extra to accept tough assignments in poor areas where doctors are scarce.

That's the deal offered by a federal program that dates back to 1989. Physicians, dentists, and other health professionals sign up to spend two years working at health clinics for the poor in underserved areas of rural and urban America. The clinics pay them much less than they might make in private practice, but the government pays them a bonus of $50,000.

It's been a good deal for these communities and a good deal for doctors - but not anymore. You see, this year, at least 700 of these health care providers won't get their bonuses. In response to congressional funding cuts, reports the New York Times, the Department of Health and Human Services has elected to eliminate the payments.

So doctors and dentists who passed on lucrative offers, packed up their families and headed to where they were needed have suddenly discovered they've been swindled. And as if it weren't bad enough to renege on its end of the deal, the government didn't even bother letting most of them know that the money wouldn't be coming.

This is terrible news for those who took the government up on its offer and now are left just as deeply in debt as ever. It's also a nightmare for clinicians serving poor areas, which badly need the federal bonuses to attract and retain staffers. Already, many of these providers are looking for better-paying jobs elsewhere.

It's hard to imagine that many people in Congress or the Clinton administration would want to defend a policy that involves deceiving medical professionals and short-changing underserved communities. Both branches need to act promptly to reverse it.

LETTER

Candidates skip U.S. debt issue

The Republican convention is over and most people attending claim it was a smashing success. If elected, George W. and Cheney promised a new American experience. To name a few, smaller taxes, better medical care, godly schools for the children to attend, less crime, better working conditions (nothing was said about better wages), a chicken in every pot and a lobster cookout every Sunday!

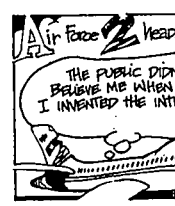

What will Gore promise this week? All the above and a lobster cookout every day. One thing we can be sure that neither will promise is less spending and to pay off our national debt. A liability that Reagan, Bush and Clinton are leaving us! I once read that a god who promises to fulfill all our desires is a devil in disguise. This makes sense to me. May I add, "Covered emption" (buyer beware).

Schools don't deserve T-N criticism

Readers of The Times-News Opinion page are no doubt familiar with the editorial board's negative views toward public education. The most recent examples of their negativity were published on July 20 in which the writers contend, "In short, the argument that teachers are overworked and underpaid simply doesn't hold water," and again on Aug. 8 when they stated, "Last year, Idaho's public school teachers got 5.5 percent raises. The rest of us taxpayers got a paltry 0.1 percent reduction in our income taxes." Both of these statements point to the fact that in the eyes of The Times-News editorial board, public school educators are not held in high esteem and receive plenty for what they do.

Frequent readers of The Times-News should be aware that not everyone views public schools the same fashion as does this paper. For example, Forrest J. (Frosty) Troy, award-winning journalist and editor of the Oklahoma Observer, debunks several myths about public schools - including the one about the number of hours public school teachers work. He writes: "Myth: Teachers teach only nine months so why do they belly-ache about salaries? Fact: repeated studies show that isn't true. If you count hours worked, the average teacher does in nine months what it takes regular 40-hour workers to do in 11.5 months."

READER COMMENT

Closer to home, Marty Trillhaase, member of the Idaho Falls Press Register editorial board, wrote in late July, "Idaho legislators wisely decided to boost starting pay for teachers in this state by 5.2 percent. That was a realistic decision. The national job market demands it." Trillhaase goes on to comment on the fact that when trying to compete with the nationwide demand for 2.2 million new teachers over the next decade, Idaho isn't positioned well. Trillhaase states, "Here is what Idaho offers: The lowest starting pay - except for South Dakota - in the country. And average teaching salaries ranking 39th in the country - slightly better than Utah, Wyoming and Montana but well behind Washington, Oregon and Nevada."

And what do Idaho citizens think of public education? In a 1999 survey conducted by the Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory, 400 Idaho households were randomly selected to participate in a public education "needs assessment." When asked, "Do Idaho schools have enough resources to serve all students," 54 percent of the respondents stated that our schools have "not quite enough" to "way too little money." When asked, "What would improve teaching more," 82 percent responded "provide more resources and support," while only 23 percent responded "pay" based on student performance. Regardless of what local editorials may suggest about public education, there are others around the state and nation who do not share their views. The fact of the matter is that, in the Twin Falls School District, our teachers work exceptionally hard to increase student academic achievement. Our testing data demonstrates their efforts are working, as increased student learning in this district is reflected in achievement levels at or above state and national levels on state-mandated and college entrance exams. Once again, patrons of District No. 411 receive a big bang for their buck.

Trail markings were just graffiti!

On Aug. 5, High Desert Back Country Horsemen had a fun ride in the Porcupine Springs area. We, as an active horse group in the education and maintenance of public lands used by equestrians, were deeply concerned by what we saw on our ride. As users of public lands, we could not believe the destruction caused by one of our own horse user groups who should know better. No group should use point on any surface to mark a trail. This is graffiti, even in a simple form, and is a finable offense.

The Arabian Horse Club, which put on the Diamondfield Jack endurance race, should be cited and required to clean up their mess. I have urged the Forest Service to do so and hope they will follow our recommendation. We of Back Country Horsemen have worked long and hard to keep trails in good shape for all users, including our friends and co-workers in the Magic Valley Trail Machine Association. When we use ribbons and markers for rides, we sweep and clean with the last rider leaving no trace of our outing.

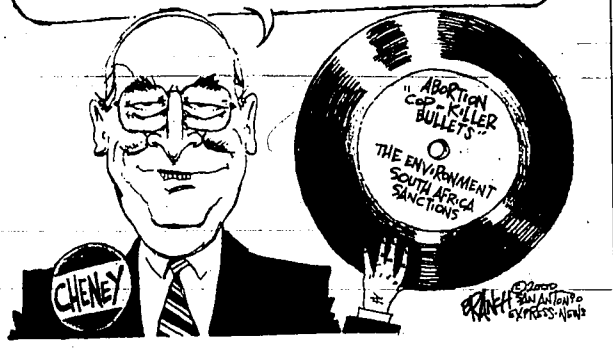

I do not want to be harsh on any user but blame must be placed where it belongs, and the user who causes the damage should pay the consequences. Those of you from any group should join the groups who maintain the trails for your use. We always need help; there is a lot to do. As an equestrian, I apologize for the mess left by a fellow group and hope they can take the criticism and fix the problem, as well as being more courteous to other users. We do not need trail wars in the South Hills. There are too many of us and too few trails to use.

You wanted a dogfight?

We already know that Max Hatfield can speak for himself! For those who wonder what right he has to speak, here is why. Mr. Hatfield was born and raised in Twin Falls County, going to Castelford School through the eighth grade, graduating from Buhl High School, Brigham Young University and the University of Utah with a master's degree in business administration. He worked with his dad on a rocky farm in the Sunnyside area. His father died when he was 18. He put himself and his wife through college working for Green Giant. He owns property in Twin Falls County and pays county and state taxes. His mother and stepfather are retired farmers, living on their farm southeast of Buhl. An inappropriately large dairy was built close to them and they suffer the bad odors, flies and truck traffic day and night. Their waste table has fallen. One can expect a dogfight when one messes with Max Hatfield's mama.

TO THOSE WHO CONSIDER ME A "RETRO PACK" FOR VICE PRESIDENT, I SAY, CHECK OUT MY RECORD!

Lawyers fly high with class-action suits, but we pay the price

Wow! I just won a suit and I didn't even know I was suing anybody. I never filed any papers. I never hired a lawyer. I never went to court. In fact, I didn't even know I had a problem until I got a letter in the mail informing me of my great victory. It seems that in 1995, American Airlines changed the rules for its frequent-flyer program, known as AAdvantage. It used to provide a free ticket for people who earned 20,000 miles, but it raised that figure to 25,000 miles on Feb. 1, 1995.

No big deal, you say? Not according to my battery of high-priced attorneys, whose names I'd never heard of until I got my letter. Nope, according to Chicago attorneys Gilbert W. Gordon, Spencer J. Marks, and Michael B.

GREG SCANDLEN

Hyman, AAdvantage members were injured because some of us had to fly 25,000 miles to get the free trip we used to get for 20,000. Still others suffered because they didn't have enough money to invest the miles to reach the 25,000-mile figure before deadlines.

The lawyers say that American Airlines wasn't just giving faithful customers a little bonus, but they had a contract to give us free stuff. American Airlines has agreed to settle, rather than fight it out in court.

I can claim my share of the settlement pretty soon. The letter knows exactly how many miles I collected in 1992 and 1993 on American Airlines (10,787, if you're nosy), and that makes me eligible for a Group I award. I wish I could tell you what my prize is, but it's hard to tell. It looks like I might be able to get a coupon worth $25 or $50 off my next ticket on American Airlines. I'm not even sure why I should get any kind of prize, since I only had 10,000 frequent-flyer miles and wouldn't be able to invest the miles to reach the 25,000-mile rule or the new 25,000-mile standard.

Now, to collect my award, I've got to read through 14 pages of fine print, sign some kind of "Declaration Under Penalty of Perjury," and wait another year or so. I'm not sure it's worth the bother. And I doubt if very many of my fellow plaintiffs will bother either.

So, why all the fuss? Why have all these high-priced lawyers just for a $25 or $50 coupon? Why, because lawyers get rich off this stuff. They get a contingency fee, worth one-third or more of the total settlement. If there are 1 million AAdvantage members awarded a coupon worth $25, that is a total settlement of $25 million - even if no one ever actually uses the coupon. But the lawyer prices. So, really, it's something like $8 million - plus expenses. Not bad work.

That's an awful lot of money, and who pays it? Well, American Airlines, of course, by raising their prices. So, really, it's American Airlines passengers who pay the bill. The more you fly on American Airlines, the more you will pay for this settlement.

Thanks, but here is one plaintiff that would rather not pay for higher-priced tickets. American Airlines can keep its coupon and keep its fares low. That would be a much better outcome for me and for most of the other people who have been used as plaintiffs against our will.

Class-action lawsuits have become a billion-dollar rip-off. Any clever lawyer can file one, just by thinking up some teeny annoyance that affects lots of people - paper cuts, broken shoe laces, you name it. The sky is the limit, and attorney greed is insatiable.

The solution is simple. Lawyers shouldn't be allowed to sue on behalf of anonymous plaintiffs. They should only be able to sue on the request of a plaintiff, and only represent those individuals who have asked to be represented.

They would still be able to represent very large numbers of people in an action that consolidates many individual complaints. They could still advertise to attract clients and even send out invitations to sue to members of a class. But they would have to get informed consent to represent a person - before the case is filed.

Or maybe I should just bring a class-action suit on behalf of all the people who will be paying higher fares due to this settlement.

Hang it up: At 66, Social Security should just retire

STUART BUTLER

You probably don't have it penciled in on your social calendar yet, but on Aug. 14, Social Security turns 65.

That's right - the premier New Deal program, the one that has served the nation through war and peace, through recessions and booms - hits its retirement age. And I can think of no better way to observe the occasion than to retire the Depression-era program will full honors and a prominent place in the Hall of Fame.

No, I'm not saying that Social Security should be abolished. But a partial retirement - one that honors the commitments made to current and near-term retirees and allows it to continue as a smaller, leaner program - is clearly needed.

Why? Because demographic changes that will leave too few workers supporting too many retirees is about to give my generation (the baby boomers) and my daughters' generation almost nothing in return for our "investments."

Social Security's defenders say the system should be left intact or undergo only minor changes - usually tax hikes or cuts in benefits. That means Rachel, my 14-year-old, can expect to earn less than 1 percent (0.78 percent, to be precise) on the $455,645 she'll pay in Social Security taxes over her lifetime, assuming she earns the average wage.

You don't have to be fabled investor Warren Buffett to beat those numbers. If Rachel stays in the workforce until she's 67 (which will be the retirement age then), Social Security will pay her 195,502 over her expected retirement years. A gain of $110,000 sounds good, until you realize she could have nearly $1.5 million in the bank if the government would allow her to invest the $455,645 she'll pay in taxes.

It's not just young people who are getting shafted. As a 53-year-old resident of the District of Columbia, I'll get a rate of return of 1.1 percent on my payroll taxes. I, too, could have made more than $1 million if I had been permitted to invest these taxes. A simple savings account from my neighborhood bank could earn me 3 percent or 4 percent.

There's no question that Social Security has helped reduce poverty among the elderly, while reassuring families with only one breadwinner that there will still be an income to support them if their primary earner dies suddenly. It's an important safety net.

But that's where the good news stops. Unfortunately, President Franklin Roosevelt and the congressional leaders who launched the program couldn't have foreseen that their "pay as you go" system, with today's workers funding yesterday's retirees, would be tripped up by the largest annual post-World War II generation.

Simple math shows there won't be enough workers to support 77 million boomers through retirement and leave something for Generation X. Which is why the payroll tax burden, which has grown steadily over the years, threatens to get worse.

When Social Security started in 1935, the government took 2 percent of the first $3,000 of earnings, to pay for the program. Today, the government takes 12.4 percent of the first $76,200 in earnings - an amount that will have to increase even more if the government hopes to pay benefits to my daughters when they retire.

But don't take my word for it. According to the most recent Social Security trustees' report, the program faces financing disaster, with Social Security's cumulative deficit amounting to $21.6 trillion between 2015 (when the program first dips into the red) and 2075.

To keep paying benefits, payroll taxes would have to be hiked to 18.6 percent, benefits slashed by 32 percent, or some combination of the two. No wonder retiree plans that would allow American workers to get even a small part of their payroll taxes into personal investment accounts have gained bipartisan support in Congress.

And with more than a dozen and a half countries (including Great Britain, Mexico and Sweden) having at least partly privatized their Social Security systems, such accounts are hardly untested.

They would let a Social Security system that is showing its age concentrate on providing a true safety net for everyone, while letting all Americans - Rachel included - look forward to a far better return on their retirement dollars.

Liberals once spoke of the national debt as a cost they didn't want to pass on to future generations. Fine, but a $21.6 trillion Social Security shortfall is a debt I don't want to pass on to my children.

The next administration, whether Republican or Democrat, should find a way to ease Social Security, carefully but firmly, into a well-deserved partial retirement.

Don't leave kids in the cars - not even a minute

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, your readers were reminded to never leave their dogs and other pets inside cars during the warm summer months.

DEAR ABBY
Aligail VanBuren

In that vein, I would like to bring to your attention a more common practice than some would think: children left in the car by well-meaning parents during a hectic day of running errands or driving the kids to various activities.

Since 1998, the New Jersey Department of Human Services has promoted the "Not Even for a Minute" campaign, which warns against the dangers of leaving children in a car alone.

Window decals and posters distributed through day-care centers, schools, police stations, retailers, the AAA and new car dealers remind parents not to leave their children in cars. "Not Even for a Minute."

Children's health experts warn that on a breezy day with the outside temperature only in the low 70s, a closed automobile can heat up to 125 degrees within 15 minutes.

Even with the windows cracked, a small child can dehydrate within minutes. The result can be deadly, as the family of a 13-month-old baby in New Jersey recently learned.

Whatever the season, leaving children alone in cars is risky. In less than a minute, a child can climb out of a car seat and shift the car into gear.

It takes only a minute for someone to break into a vehicle and abduct a child.

It's easy to underestimate the time a child will be left alone in an automobile.

We've all had the experience of finding ourselves standing in the unexpected line or of running into someone we know, having a conversation and losing track of time.

Abby, please urge your readers to make themselves promises: When you walk away from your car, take your child, too. It takes only a minute.

-MICHELE K. GUILH, COMMISSIONER, NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES.

DEAR MICHELE: Thank you for an important letter. There is nothing more precious than a child's life. I hope all parents heed your warning - and other states initiate similar campaigns.

DEAR ABBY: Last January, my boss promised to give me a raise for taking on a new responsibility at work. This responsibility involved taking a class away from home, which I completed.

Now that I've taken the class and am doing the work, he tells me there is no money in the budget for the promised raise (even though he just bought a new vehicle for the office) and says I'm doing the work anyway - so why should I get the raise?

Should I refuse to do any more work associated with this added responsibility, or just keep doing it and hope for the best later on?

-TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF IN KANSAS

DEAR TAKEN: You'd be wise to look for another job. Your employer is ethically challenged and it's unrealistic to hope he'll change "later on." If you opt to remain with this company and your boss makes any more promises, get them in writing.

DEAR ABBY: How do you know when a guy is thinking about marriage? What sign should I be looking for?

-WANNA-BE WIFE, NORTH PROVIDENCE, R.I.

DEAR WANNA-BE: An engagement ring.

Aries - don't tell all, confide or confess, let others talk

IF AUGUST 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are dynamic, inventive, sensitive, persistent and you know the meaning of showmanship, advertising. You are attracted to psychology, astrology. During this cycle, you could change residence, marital status. In September, you'll know that your love is not unreciprocated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't tell all, confide or confess. Let others do most of the talking; be an attentive listener. People who want to know more should give their reasons.

TAURUS (April 20-May): Pressure is on, you can handle it. Relationship wobbles up, could get too hot. Business success makes this day memorable. Capricorn figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Utilize talent for predicting the future. Travel to another country is distinct possibility. Someone in distant land wants to tell you something. Aries involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make fresh start. Emphasize original thinking; don't follow others.

Why is it so hard to accept the simple fact that milk is heavier than cream?

Q. If thieves want to steal a stand-alone ATM, why can't they just hoist it onto a truck and drive off with it?

A. Most such independent institutions now are equipped with Global Positioning System beacons that can broadcast the stolen ATM's whereabouts.

Get'cher Harry Potter knockoffs where they're not

I am NOT jealous of the woman who writes the Harry Potter books. It does NOT bother me that her most recent book, "Harry Potter and the Enormous Royalty Check," has already become the best-selling book in world history, beating out her previous book, "Harry Potter Purchases Microsoft."

It does NOT make me bitter to know that this woman's books are selling like crazy, while my own books - some of which took me HOURS to write - have become permanent nesting grounds for generations of bookstore-dwelling spiders.

And I disagree with the critics who charge that the Harry Potter books reach witchcraft and Satanism. Yes, I'm aware of the recent case in Pittsburgh, where a 9-year-old boy recited a so-called "magic spell" from a Harry Potter book, and his piano teacher turned into a singing walnut. At first glance, this incident seemed alarming, but it turned out that there was a "perfectly innocent explanation," according to a police source, who spoke on the condition that his head be changed back to its normal size.

HUMOR
Dave Barry

So as far as I'm concerned, the only problem with the Harry Potter books is that they're not being produced fast enough.

Booksellers have already been swamped with orders for the NEXT Harry Potter book, which hasn't even been written yet. So I'm thinking: Why should the Harry Potter woman get to write all the Harry Potter books? Any professional writer can do it! All you need is your plucky British schoolboy characters, your forces of evil, your ominous foreboding, your grave peril, and your totally unexpected plot twists. In fact, I'm going to write the next Harry Potter book right now.

CHAPTER ONE

"Harry Potter awoke with a start. Outside Hogwarts Castle, it was dark and ominous. In his mind, Harry mentally reviewed his situation for the benefit of people who have not read the first four books in this series. He was a plucky young wizard with magical powers living in England, a small foreign country that speaks English, but with a lot of slang. He was in grave peril from forces of evil.

"Blimey, Ron!" he said to Ron Weasley, with an English accent. Ron and Harry were mates, which in England has a different meaning.

"Crikey, Harry!" said Ron. "You look as pale as a blooming ghost!"

"Cool!" said Harry, as he fingered his lightning-bolt-shaped forehead scar, which he received as a baby when his arch-nemesis, the evil Lord Voldemort - who was always trying unsuccessfully to kill him - had attacked him with a powerful deadly curse, which incredibly, had not been successful. "I just had a foreboding that Lord Voldemort is going to try to kill me again, as he has in every book so far in this series!"

"Well," responded Ron, "Duh!"

The two chums laughed in a plucky British manner, little suspecting that there were going to be some totally unexpected developments in the chapters that lay ahead.

CHAPTER TWO

"Drat that blasted Harry Potter!" sneered the evil Lord Voldemort to his evil sidekick, a giant snake named Nagini, who in the movie manner will be played by either Cher or Jim Carrey.

"I have to think of a way to successfully kill that blighter of a bloke!" sneered Lord Voldemort, who was always in a bad mood because his lips hurt from the strain of constantly sneering when he talked. "Begrab! I hate it!"

And he outlined his evil sneering plan to Nagini, who realized with a sense of foreboding that, of all the unsuccessful attempts on Harry Potter's life, this was going to be the most totally unexpected one yet.

CHAPTER THREE

"Od's bodkins, Hermione!" said Harry Potter, by way of a British slang greeting to Hermione Granger, a plucky young female wizard who had become Harry's close friend during the previous books, even though he had no idea how to pronounce "Hermione."

"Jeepers creepers, Harry!" responded Hermione. "Is that a magic wand in your wizard robe, or are you just glad to see me?"

They both laughed heartily, but their laughter ended suddenly, for they had a joint foreboding that something very perilous and evil was about to happen, without anybody expecting it.

That's all I've written so far. If you young readers would like me to finish this book, all I need is for two million of you to send me one dollar apiece. Or, that sounds too greedy, I'd settle for just two of you sending me one million dollars apiece. The important thing is that we all work together to find a way for Uncle Dave to "share the magic" with you young readers. Because Uncle Dave loves you very much. He would hate to have to turn you into squid.

Big blazes mean major trouble for some southern Idaho residents with respiratory problems.

Smoke of a distant fire

Wildfires add to misery of Idahoans with breathing problems

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - For members of the Magic Valley Breathers, the dog days usually bring a couple of weeks of respite between the spring allergy season and the onslaught of bean and grain dust stirred up by the harvest.

Not this summer.

"It's bad, I'm hearing it from everybody," said Helen Justesen, president of the support group for folks with chronic respiratory problems. "It's the fires."

As of Saturday, there were eight major grass and forest fires burning in southern and central Idaho and more than 80 in the West. That makes for gorgeous sunsets and hazy mornings for most Magic Valley residents, but hell for others.

"If you've got respiratory problems, smoke can aggravate them in a big way," said Janice Lambert, respiratory therapist at Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital.

Smoke is usually a wintertime problem across the Snake River basin, when warm area traps colder air near the ground, and along with it exhaust fumes and other airborne pollutants.

But this summer, with a powerful high-pressure system parked long-term over the Intermountain West, all the smoke from wildfires is staying in the neighborhood.

"You combine that with the heat, and it's pretty miserable," Lambert said. "People who already have trouble breathing are having a harder time."

Asthmatics and people with emphysema suffer most, he said. "Those are conditions where the respiratory system is already compromised," he said. "Introducing smoke to the air they breathe can be debilitating."

Although some of his patients are feeling some effects of smoke of distant fires, Dr. Ron Fullmer, a Twin Falls pulmonary specialist, hasn't yet seen major problems.

"Summer can be an uncomfortable season for people with asthma, emphysema and allergies," he said. "There's a lot of stuff in the air this time of year."

Southern Idaho is now on the cusp of sagebrush pollen season, the major airborne allergen of late summer and early fall in the Magic Valley.

"It'll be around until the first hard freeze in October - and the fires very likely will be, too."

It looks like we're in for a couple more months of this," Lambert said. "People with respiratory problems need to be conscious of that and to have

Blondes don't have more fun

Blondes don't necessarily have more fun. Seventy-five percent of women and 49 percent of men prefer brunettes, according to Stuff magazine's "Sex Survey 2000" of more than 25,000 men and 10,000 women.

Shading the truth

If you're having trouble convincing yourself that sunscreen is necessary, frame the issue in a positive light, Fitness magazine suggests. It notes that the American Psychological Association says people respond better to the upbeat ("Use sunscreen to help your skin stay healthy") than to the foreboding ("Without sunscreen, you increase your risk of developing cancer").

A slippery slope

Talk about going downhill! Despite a booming economy, the ski industry suffered its second straight decline this year, and experts say even the popularity of snowboarding has dropped. From California to New England, skier and snowboarder days were down, according to figures released at the annual convention of Colorado Ski Country USA, a trade association. Analysts fear the sport is relying too much on aging baby boomers.

Facial-hair remover

Women take note: Bristol-Myers Squibb and Gillette have announced that the Food and Drug Administration has approved Vanique (eflornithine hydrochloride) Cream, 13.9 percent, as the first topical prescription treatment

Health notes

For unwanted facial hair. The cream, due in pharmacies next month, was shown in clinical trials to provide significant improvement in the reduction of facial hair growth in women, the drug companies say.

Nip and tuck

More and more of you are having "work" done. Liposuction, breast augmentation, and improvement of the eyelids are most frequently requested. New statistics from the American Society of Plastic Surgeons show that the number of such operations - performed last year was up more than 25 percent.

Serging makes home decorating even easier

During the last decade, more people than ever have been sewing for their homes. Among the reasons: significant savings, simple stitching and personal color choices. You've probably noticed, too, that many fabric stores have expanded their home decorating departments, so supplies are easy to obtain.

Recognizing this trend, Palmer/Pletsch Publishing, a well-known name in the sewing industry, has just updated and reissued "Creative Serging for the Home and Other Quick Decorating Ideas" by Lynette Black and Linda Wisner ($19.95). It is packed with ideas and step-by-step projects in styles for every type of dwelling. The authors designed 29 rooms in nine settings, from "this first apartment" to a bungalow, to his-toric mansion, to travel trailer.

Far from intimidating, many of the projects start with basic fabric rectangles or squares sewn together with straight seams on a conventional machine. What makes them even faster, though, is the suggestion of using a serger, also known as an overlock machine; the book frequently refers to this method. You can stitch and finish a seam or an edge in one simple step.

When you've spent much time exploring both the utilitarian and the creative possibilities of serger sewing for the home," explain the authors, "You could, for instance, make decorative stitches on flat pieces with a serger. You can create tassels and piping to insert into pillows, in exactly the colors of your fabric. Sew and/or serge window treatments, table accessories, and many other items."

Here are a few tips: If project instructions call for serging (without seam

Small arterial blockages can kill

The Washington Post

No question: Size still counts when it comes to heart blockages.

A blockage that obstructs 90 percent of an artery is likely to bring the same bomb just waiting to cause a heart attack or stroke. Standard angiograms – the invasive test that threads a tiny probe into the arteries to explore them from within – can indeed detect this sort of severe blockage. When blockages are detected, "a 90 percent lesion has more of a likelihood of rupturing (and causing a heart attack) than a 30 percent lesion," says Julio Panza, head of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute's echocardiography section.

But here's the rub: "There are many more 30 percent lesions, so the proportional risk is greater" from the smaller blockages, Panza says. What's more, "most of the 30 percent blockages don't show significant narrowing before they break off," he says.

That's why researchers believe that the new imaging techniques may give them a much-needed edge in preventing some of the 250,000 sudden cardiac deaths that occur each year in the United States. If the techniques can distinguish between the plaques that are less likely and more likely to burst – and not just measure amount of blockage – they could be used to save many lives.

While atherosclerotic plaque accumulates slowly, building up over years and even decades, it also produces a gradual decline in blood flow. That prompts the growth of tiny new collateral vessels, much of the way that commuters find alternate routes to avoid a bad traffic jam. The collateral vessels can't handle the full artery load, but they can keep channeling blood if the 90 percent blockage suddenly ruptures and causes a heart attack. Hence the blood, in fact, to preserve precious heart muscle.

Health after a heart bypass

1 Blockage of one or more of artery may limit heart's oxygen supply

2 They are bypassed by heart, bypassing the blocked arteries

3 Blood supply to heart is improved

Normal Artery

Narrowing Artery

Severe Blockage

Coronary arteries

Heart muscle

POST-BYPASS PROBLEMS

Two types of complications can develop years after a bypass:

Rest narrowing of vessels

- Cholesterol can continue to deposit inside the grafted blood vessels, reducing the amount of blood they can carry
- Chest pain may return
- Blockage of heart attack increases the vessel's narrowness

Damage to bypass vessels

- Veins used for graft are thinner and softer than arteries
- If person has uncontrolled high blood pressure, they may weaken and threaten to rupture

TREATING BYPASS PROBLEMS

- Another bypass operation may be performed
- Angioplasty, called "stenting," the vessels may be widened. The graft vessels may be advised.
- A tube-like device called a stent is inserted to hold the vessel open

ILLUSTRATION: Current Medical Diagnosis & Treatment, American Heart Association; © Jane Kirtz; GREGG TOOD LINDSEMAN

It's often a different story when the 30 percent blockage ruptures. "Since the 30 percent blockage has not yet limited blood flow in the artery, no collaterals have been developed," Panza said. "There's no backup if the blockage ruptures."

And often, no way to keep the heart alive. That's why smaller blockages can sometimes be deadlier than larger lesions. For this reason, scientists want better methods to detect which of the smaller blockages might blow. Angiography can detect the 30 percent blockages, but it provides virtually no information about their composition. And it falls short at examining the artery walls, where plaque builds up.

How are your arteries really doing?

The Washington Post

It's a common story: a middle-aged man who has recently received a clean bill of health from a physical exam suddenly drops dead of a heart attack.

Despite great strides in diagnosing heart disease and treating it with a wide range of increasingly sophisticated technologies, doctors still fall short of accurately predicting which patients are at greatest risk of suffering a heart attack. The problem is that it remains difficult to precisely assess the condition of one's coronary arteries using current technologies. And most techniques used to explore this question are expensive, invasive, time-consuming, imprecise or sometimes risky.

Right now, most of our strategy centers around waiting for a heart attack to occur, hoping that the patient survives," says Sidney C. Smith Jr., past president of the American Heart Association and director of the Cardiovascular Center at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. "But more than 250,000 don't each year."

At least a third of those who suffer heart attacks never have earlier episodes of chest pain that would alert them to a problem, according to a recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association. And while many have the usual risk factors – high blood cholesterol, diabetes, high blood pressure, obesity, smoking, family history of heart disease – so do a lot of people who never have heart attacks. What's missing is a test that can more accurately predict who is likely to have a heart attack or other cardiac event.

Millions feel sluggish over their thyroid

New York Daily News

NEW YORK – Amy Martin was 26 when her body seemed to go out of whack with, she says, "no explanation." She gained 30 pounds, her periods became irregular, she felt tired all the time. Just before her wedding, her weight started to fall out.

Even worse, says Martin, who lives in Brooklyn, "I was unable to concentrate and focus." She feared her career – she is a graduate student at Columbia University – would go the way of her energy. She began seeing doctors.

One blamed birth-control pills and stress, another thought she was pregnant (she wasn't). Finally, a gynecologist discovered that her thyroid – the bow-tie-shaped gland that wraps around the lower throat – wasn't making enough of the hormones that run the body's energy systems.

So Martin saw a hormone expert who gave her synthetic thyroid – a good drug that didn't agree with her. "For six to eight months, the doses continually changed and I was out of my mind," she says. "You feel anxious and overloaded and you can't sit still. You drop weight quickly."

After a year, the doctor told Martin her thyroid levels were normal. She disagreed. "I felt sluggish, and my hair was still falling out," she says. "I was unable to produce coherent, sustained writing for my dissertation."

When she complained, the doctor told her to go on Prozac. "I said, 'I am not depressed!' and he just dismissed me," Martin says. "I decided to get pro-active."

Thyroid problems – usually caused by insufficient thyroid hormone, known as hypothyroidism – affect some 13 million Americans. A Colorado study estimates another 13 million, twice the number previously thought, have an undiagnosed condition.

The symptoms are subtle, a laundry list of easily dismissed problems that might not have anything to do with the thyroid: weight gain, fatigue, depression, carpal tunnel syndrome, hair loss, fuzzy thinking, low or lost libido.

Sewing

Continued from B1 (allowances), let the serger knife barely skim the fabric edge to ensure both perfect stitching and clean edges.

Make rolled edges by adjusting the serger tension to allow fabric to roll around the narrow stitch "finger" on your machine. For custom piping, serge over filler cording on a strip of lightweight bias fabric.

Loosen tension for bulky fabrics, and tighten for thinner fabrics such as sheer curtains. Adjust stitch lengths for various weights of fabric.

On your next home decorating project, think about the possibilities of using a serger. Look for "Creative Serging for the Home and Other Quick Decorating Ideas" in fabric departments or in bookstores, or call 800-728-3784 anytime. It may also be ordered from the Web site: <http://www.palmerpietsch.com/>

Is a steady diet of overly thin models harmful to young girls?

Knight Ridder News Service

Claudia Schiffer, Sharon Stone, Penelope Cruz, Cate Blanchett and Rebecca Romijn-Stamos all grace the covers of some of the leading American women's magazines this month. They're beautiful women, according to many people, and their oft-exposed midriffs reveal they are in no way overweight. But are they too thin?

Such was the question at a recent government-sponsored body image seminar in London. The seminar, organized by Britain's minister for women, Tessa Jowell, addressed concerns that media use of overly thin models contributes to eating disorders in young girls.

The seminar resulted in a recommendation that the British media monitor themselves against the use of overly thin women. But some of Britain's top magazine editors said they did not have plans to form a self-regulatory group, according to The Times newspaper in London.

Although the seminar focused on British media, the executive editor of the American magazine Marie Claire says her magazine sent a letter to Theresa Lou, the director of the President's Interagency Council on Women, suggesting holding a body image seminar in the United States.

"Maybe it is time for people to get together," Jenny Barnett said. "We take very seriously our responsibility as a form of media in terms of how we're portraying women."

"We are a fashion magazine so, of course, we are going to use women who are paid to be models. But we choose our models very carefully."

The recommendations from the London seminar did not extend to the American media, but similar complaints about the presentation of women have come from various organizations in the United States.

For example, the National Organization for Women released reports in May from its "Watch Out, Listen Up!" campaign, designed to monitor the representation of women during prime time television programs.

And New Moon: The Magazine for Girls and Their Dreams published in its May/June 2000 issue a "25 Beautiful Girls" spread that emphasized inner beauty - in response to People magazine's "The 50 Most Beautiful People in the World" spread.

Girls ages 8 to 14 make up the editorial board of the Minnesota-based New Moon magazine, which has 23,000 subscribers worldwide.

Ten-year-old Carly Timm-Bijold, a New Moon editorial board member, said she has seen the media influence how some young girls think about themselves.

"A few of my friends have wanted to diet," she said. "They weren't happy with how they looked, and some of them were really skinny to start with."

Mothers and older young girls have begun speaking out against overly thin models, said Atossa Rubenstein, editor in chief of CosmoGIRL. The New York-based magazine targets 13- to 17-year-old girls.

The 28-year-old said she has turned down models whom she considers too skinny and said her magazine, which features Britney Spears on the July cover, chooses cover models who can serve as role models.

"They need to be real," she said. "They need to be girls who have things going on."

While we do use models, we try through our words, through our editorials, to say this is not what we expect everyone to look like."

When readers write letters asking for more plus-size models, Rubenstein said she tells them to write to clothing manufacturers. The manufacturers provide the sizes for the photo shoots, and usually the sample sizes are 4 or 6.

Your skin and AHAs really only need to get together once a day

DEAR PAULA: I've been told that using alpha hydroxy acid products several times a day can be cumulative and therefore more beneficial. (For example, a 5-percent solution applied three times a day would be like a 15-percent concentration.) Also, do you need to experience a tingling sensation every time you use an AHA product in order to know it is working? If you get a lotion of 12 percent and a gel of 10 percent, is the lotion less effective than the gel? I spoke to a pharmacist who said that since the lotion has a thinner consistency, you would have to use more of it than the cream at 10 percent.

tration such as Alpha Hydrox's Sensitive Skin Cream or Pond's Age Defying Cream for Sensitive Skin (also 5 percent AHA).

Generally, lotions are considered less penetrating than gels, but that is very dependent on the ingredients and the pH of the product. In general, because the positive effects of AHAs are cumulative, how quick one works doesn't matter because well-formulated ones will all work well (for exfoliation) in a few weeks.

Boning up on osteoporosis

Knight Ridder News Service

It's called the silent disease, and Genie Feichter of Coral Springs, Fla., isn't about to let it sneak up on her.

As soon as she discovered her mother had osteoporosis, Feichter started taking calcium supplements and made an appointment for a bone density test.

"It wasn't something I had thought of doing," said Feichter, 55, as the bone scanning machine whirred over her recently at the University of Miami Osteoporosis Clinic. She didn't stop there; she made sure her 25-year-old daughter started taking calcium supplements, too. Feichter is doing all this because she knows the good news about osteoporosis: In most cases, it's preventable.

"Osteoporosis was once considered an inevitable consequence of aging," said Dr. Silvina Levis, director of the Osteoporosis Center at UM. "Now we have become more proactive because we know we can prevent and treat it."

Ten million people in this country already have osteoporosis, and 18 million more have low bone mass, according to the National Institutes of Health.

One of the most powerful tools in the prevention arsenal is the bone densitometer, the machine taking pictures of Feichter's spine.

Osteoporosis, a skeletal disease in which bones become more fragile, can creep up on you because it "doesn't hurt until you break a bone," Levis said. The bone density test shows whether deterioration has begun or is a threat, and doctors can begin one of many new treatments or recommend lifestyle changes.

UNNAMED CHARITIES
QUESTION: Can I leave part of my estate to a trust with directions simply to benefit worthy charities?
Dennis S. Voorhees
The mere reference to "worthy charities" is too vague. Idaho law requires that the class of eligible beneficiaries be designated with reasonable certainty. It is not sufficient that the beneficiaries be "some worthy charitable or public institution."
You do not need to specifically name eligible charities, but you must describe the class of eligible beneficiaries with reasonable certainty. You must give enough statements of purpose for the court to know what your intentions are and that they are capable of being carried out.
Modern trust law attempts to strike a fair balance between the need for trustee instructions to carry out the overall intentions of the person who created the trust.
Taking time at the outset to clearly describe your goals and purposes will not only ensure the legal validity of trust provisions, it will better guide your trustee and assure that your class of intended beneficiaries is properly identified and served.
Compliments.

INDUCTION OF LABOR
A normal pregnancy is 40 weeks, or approximately 9 months long. It can seem a lot longer than that. We are often asked, therefore, "doctor, can't you just induce my labor?" Pregnant patients are often tired, some miserable, etc. Even the family is tired of waiting. They eagerly indicate of labor with freedom from pregnancy.
The rate of labor inductions in this country has more than doubled over the past 10 years, and unfortunately, the benefits of labor induction must be weighed against the potential risks to both mother and baby. If the induction is done too early, the baby's lungs will be too poorly developed, and they will spend unnecessary time in intensive care, or contract a high threatening illness due to prematurity.
Inductions performed before the cervix is ready for labor have a very high chance of failure, often resulting in an unnecessary Caesarian delivery. Inductions may last anywhere from 6 to 12 hours.
When your doctor tells you it is best to "let nature take its course," it is usually sound advice. Spontaneously going into labor offers a high chance of a normal delivery. Inductions done at the right time, or at the right reasons, also offer a high chance for the same. If done incorrectly, it can result in harm both to mother and baby.
So when you ask, "can't I just induce my labor?" consider the consequences. Ask your doctor.

FATTY LIVER or NON ALCOHOLIC STEATOHEPATITIS

WHAT IS FATTY LIVER?
Fatty liver is an increased accumulation of fat within the liver. These fat cells nestle between the liver cells, and at times break open and cause irritation to the liver cells. The amount of irritation to the liver can lead in some low cases to scarring of the liver. This can rarely lead to cirrhosis of the liver over time.

WHAT ARE THE SYMPTOMS OF FATTY LIVER?
People with NAFLD are usually asymptomatic, as this process fat accumulates slowly within the liver. This slow increase in fat does not cause pain, nor does the condition cause jaundice (yellowing of the eyes and skin), pruritus (a generalized itching) or other signs of liver disease.

HOW DO YOU TREAT FATTY LIVER?
It is essential to stop any offending drug, chemicals, or even modest amounts of alcohol if you are diabetic, tight blood glucose control should be a goal. High cholesterol levels need to be lowered in modestly overweight, a gradual weight loss with a restricted diet and exercise has been shown in studies over three months to improve the weight, liver test, and fat to a significant degree. This restricted diet should be accompanied by moderate daily exercise.

IF YOU HAVE FATTY LIVER:

- Try to identify possible causes.
- Avoid liver toxins.
- Start a slow weight reduction program with daily moderate exercise and a liver biopsy, and plan to repeat that biopsy in about 5 years to look for progression of this condition.
- Remember, fatty liver is a condition, not a disease.
