Ban on abortion pill unlikely

Idaho activists weigh options on RU-486

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

BOISE - Anti-abortion activists in Idaho are preparing for their battle against the newly approved "morning after" abortion pill, RU-486. But so far, an all-out attack on the prescription drug in the Gem State is being held in check, said anti-abortion activist David

Ripley of Idaho Chooses Life. And constitutional issues could force abortion opponents to settle for something less than what they really want - a ban of the pill. "We are in the midst of analyzing what our options are at this point," Ripley said. Most likely Ripley and his allies will have to rely on "educating" the public on the pill's minimum, that means the reporting practices apply to chemical abortions. Ripley is a former strategist for the Idaho Democratic Party. His presence in Idaho's abortion debate at the Statehouse in recent years has led to some important victories for the anti-abortion cause, including a "parental consent" law, passed this year, requiring teenagers seeking an abortion to have their parents' permission. Drug industry takes cover

Candidates come down against prices

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - For at least a decade, the nation's prescription drug costs have risen like temperatures on a fever chart, helping to make the industry profitable, innovative and - when politicians have taken notice - vili-

Democrat Al Gore was first out of the gate in this presidential campaign in tapping the anxiety of voters squeezed by companies that may hold the key to their health. Now Republican rival George W. Bush is on the case, too.

But in a campaign with no room for shades of gray, some reasons for high drug costs - such as developing the pills that have brought huge strides in healing - are often brushed aside. "All of this is complicated," Gore says. "The underlying fact is these drug prices have been zooming up and people don't have the means to pay for their medicine. Those who blame higher costs on profiteering point to such developments as a more than 20-fold increase in TV drug advertising over the past six years, to $1.1 billion last year, stoking demand for costlier, expensive drugs. Revised federal rules allow more TV drug ads than before. Those who defend the industry point to its massive research investments - $21 billion in 1998 - and the fact that four of five experimental drugs fail. They note the health-giving benefits being wrought by the genetic and biotechnological revolution - at great cost in new factories and new processes. Analysts say the nation's drug costs now are rising by 15 percent or more a year. That's well above inflation and above the spikes President Clinton noticed in his 1992 presidential campaign before attacking the "shocking prices" for drugs and proposing a Medicare drug plan as president.

Plans for Pole Line

Residents, businesses show concern over road expansion

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Pole Line Road widening plan has pitted several residents and business owners against city officials. Representatives from the Lazy J Ranch and nearby business owners met with city leaders Monday to complain about a Pole Line widening plan, which includes adding a new center median to the roadway. "The residents and business owners said a center median would inhibit access into driveways and parking lots. The city and the Idaho Transportation Department plan to widen Pole Line Road to six lanes, from Blue Lakes Boulevard to about Grandview Drive. And city engineers say a center medicenter would be needed for better traffic flow and improved safety. But residents and business owners say that would come at a cost to those living or working along Pole Line. "This is a senior citizens' community. It's left to the hospital, left to the doctor's office," Linda Wills, manager of the Lazy J Ranch, said Monday. "When our residents leave here and can't turn left, it's up to Fillmore, Fillmore to North College, North College to Washington and Washington back home. That's just too much." "Lazy J residents echoed Wills' thoughts. "They have to think of the impact it would have on other streets," Paul Jones said. Cal Bonander, owner of Ace Hardware in Twin Falls, said a center median would definitely impact his store, because it would limit access from his parking lot to Pole Line. "It would wipe me out," he said. City Engineer Gary Young and Vance Henry, an engineer for M-K Centennial Co., which has been working on the project's engineering plans, said a median is necessary. "We have to do something with that space," Young said. There are options, though. There could be U-turn points and some turning lanes at parts of the median, including in front of the state Department of Health and Welfare office west of and near Harrison Street. Ultimately, the City Council will decide what will go on the street.

"I think we're going to have to see some medians and dividers," Young said. "Obviously we're going to look at this thing with turn bays, and that's where we need to be - it's the free access versus safety and congestion. We need to come to some accommodation on both sides of the issue. But exactly how it's going to shape up, I don't know." Construction could begin in the fall of 2001 on the expanded Pole Line, seen as an alternative route around U.S. Highway 93. Young said more meetings will be held involving city leaders, engineers and residents.

Leaders declare cease-fire

Five days of riots come to tentative end

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Israel and the Palestinians have declared a cease-fire, an Israeli officer said Tuesday, bringing a tentative end to five days of bloodshed that threatened to scuttle the fragile peace. Col. Marcel Aviv, a commander of the Etzion brigade in the West Bank, told Army radio that quiet has prevailed in the West Bank since the pre-dawn hours, when the sides agreed to stop shooting. "We won't open fire under any circumstances unless fire is opened against us first," he said. "In my opinion, in the coming hours the quiet will continue but Please see RIOTS, Page A2

Report might mean change in forest areas

The Associated Press

A new U.S. Forest Service report on how to prevent damage at popular recreation sites could mean changes for national forests in Idaho and across the West. The report calls for limiting the use of trails and other areas when they become so popular that their users cause environmental damage. "The Forest Service is the No. 1 supplier of outdoor recreation in the world," Forest Service Chief Mike Dumbleck said. "This plan will help us ensure people continue to enjoy their public lands and that together we continue to protect the natural beauty and environment that draws them to these natural wonders."

HAND GUN VICTIMS

The shoes represent the annual number of under-19-year-old victims of hand gun violence in the United States, and includes shoes from hundreds of victims. The display was one of 350 such events planned nationwide to mark First Monday 2000, the start of a two-year anti-gun-violence campaign.

Court: Exxon fine definitive

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court refused to free Exxon Mobil Corp. from having to pay $5 billion in damages for the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska, the nation's worst ever.

The nation's highest court, acting without comment Monday, let stand the award stemming from the tanker spill that polluted more than 1,000 miles of shoreline, killed tens of thousands of birds and marine mammals and disrupted fishing.

The oil company still has a variety of other appeals pending, and the high court action does not obligate the company to pay anything right away, said company spokesman Tom Cirigliano.

In this appeal, lawyers for Exxon Mobil had urged the justices to throw out the punitive-damages award on grounds of irregularities during jury deliberations.

"We're not even close," to the end of the case, Cirigliano said. "This doesn't have any effect whatsoever on us having to pay the $5 billion."

The Exxon order was among dozens released by the court on the first day of its new term. Among the highlights:

- The court refused to block the marketing of a generic chewing gum to help smokers give up cigarettes, rejecting an appeal in which the manufacturer of Nicorette gum said the marketing violated its copyright.
- It turned aside the argument of a Kansas youth suspended from school for three days after he drew a picture of a Confederate flag. Attorneys for seventh-grader T.J. West had maintained that the disciplinary action violated his constitutionally protected free-speech rights.
- The court refused to throw out a lawsuit in which actors George Wendt and John Ratzenberger, who played endearing barflies in the "Cheers" television show, say two robots stole their old act.

- It refused to allow some 30 members of Congress to sue President Clinton for ordering the military to join last year's NATO bombing of Yugoslavia. The lawmakers had argued that Clinton violated the War Powers Act of 1973.
- The high court refused to reinstate the California fraud convictions of financier Charles Keating, who became a symbol of the savings and loan scandals of the 1980s.

Study: Acid trims birth defects

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - Birth defects in which the fetal brain and spine are malformed have dropped by half in South Carolina since a statewide campaign to increase women's folic acid intake began eight years ago, researchers reported Monday.

Folic acid - found naturally in green leafy vegetables, orange juice and liver - appears to be the key to prevention, said Dr. Roger Stevenson of the Greenwood Genetic Center, the lead author of the study published in the journal Pediatrics.

An accompanying commentary suggested that all women of childbearing age should consume 400 micrograms of folic acid daily, and the study said federal guidelines for the vitamin should be raised.

Three of the most serious birth defects - spina bifida, anencephaly and encephalocele - are caused when the neural tube, which forms the brain and spine, fails to close in the first 28 days of pregnancy.

When the study began in 1992, South Carolina's prevalence of neural tube defects was about 19 cases per 10,000 births, almost twice the national average, Stevenson said.

By 1998, that had dropped to fewer than 10 cases per 10,000. The number of women in the state taking folic acid during the study jumped from 8 percent to 35 percent - about the national average.

"We want to see all pregnancies protected," Stevenson said. "It's comparable to having 35 percent of our children protected against polio. This would not be acceptable."

Kim Gates, 31, of Charlotte, N.C., learned the impact of folic acid after her daughter Breanna was born with spina bifida seven years ago.

Clinton touts advances in education, student loans

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton lashed back Monday at George W. Bush's criticism that the nation is in an education recession, and cited improved performances by minority students as proof of "an education revival."

Clinton said the country has made strides in education during his two terms, and could make even more progress if Congress would approve his plans for school construction, teacher hiring and performance standards.

His remarks came during a White House ceremony to announce the number of students defaulting on college loans is at a record low.

"There are lots and lots of challenges still out there, and what I believe we should be doing is to emphasize further changes in the direction we have been moving," Clinton said.

In unveiling his new focus on education last week, Bush, the Republican presidential nominee, said standardized test scores of American students are hardly competitive with students in other industrialized nations.

For example, he said, 68 percent of fourth graders in the poorest schools have difficulty reading a simple children's book. "America is in the midst of an education recession," Bush declared.

Clinton disputed that Monday, saying math and reading scores are on the rise, with "some of the greatest gains in some of the most disadvantaged schools."

Thurmond resumes senatorial duties

Thurmond was released from Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington about 10:45 a.m., spokeswoman Genevieve Emry said. He immediately returned to his routine of opening the daily Senate session, part of his duties as Senate president pro tem.

Official: Subsidies quell unrest

WASHINGTON (AP) - A flood of government farm subsidies over the past year has kept agricultural policy from becoming an issue in the presidential race, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said Monday.

While the magnitude of the payments "underscores the failure" of the Republican-authored 1996 farm law, "the amount of dollars going out have shielded people from feeling compelled to storm the gates of Washington," Glickman said. Glickman said that the government provided a record $28 billion in direct farm payments during the federal budget year that ended Saturday. That figure was misleading, however, because it included two years' worth of supplemental income assistance payments that Congress provided to farmers in successive bailout packages for the farm economy. Last year's payments were released at the beginning of the 2000 budget year, while this year's payments went to farmers in September. Together, the supplemental payments totaled $11 billion. Glickman says the 1996 farm law, which ended a Depression-era system of price supports and production controls, didn't provide for sufficient aid when commodity prices collapsed in 1998 and has proposed a new subsidy system that would be tied to swings in farm income.

War monument site worries some

WASHINGTON (AP) - Opponents of placing a World War II memorial on the National Mall between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial asked a federal court Monday to block construction, arguing that government officials had not complied with the law. Groundbreaking has been set for Veterans' Day, Nov. 11. "Our choice would be a site 125 feet to the north," said John Graves of the 63rd Division Association, chairman of Veterans to Save the Mall. That position would remove the memorial from the sight line between the two existing monuments. Opponents say the site now planned is on the grounds of the Lincoln Memorial. "The American people don't mind designating space on the Mall's central axis for the World War II memorial," Ray Smith, national commander of the American Legion, told a news conference soon after the suit was filed. "This memorial will whisper poignantly of the bloodshed and loss that preserved that which the Mall represents - the establishment and endurance of American democracy," said Smith.

Veterans of Foreign Wars and other veterans' groups joined in supporting the new site. Andrea C. Ferster, lawyer for the opponents, said the complaint and a request for an injunction were filed at the Federal District Court of the District of Columbia. Named in the suit were Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, Director Robert Stanton of the National Park Service and other officials who have approved the site. "The defendants have violated their congressionally mandated responsibilities," the complaint said.

Fox offers free hour of airtime to presidential candidates

NEW YORK - The Fox television network, criticized for its decision to show baseball and entertainment instead of the presidential debates, has offered an hour of free airtime to Al Gore and George W. Bush.

Fox also said that it would show the debates on its owned stations on a tape-delayed basis.

Fox is setting aside one hour at 6 p.m. (MDT) on Friday, Oct. 27, giving the candidates equal time to answer the question, "Why should Americans vote for you?"

There was no immediate word from either campaign whether they will accept the offer. A Fox representative said he didn't know whether a similar offer made in 1996 was accepted by President Clinton or Bob Dole.

Nader, Buchanan want in presidential debates

WASHINGTON - Ralph Nader and Pat Buchanan don't agree on much, but they're standing together in contending they both should be included in the presidential debates.

Both plan to be in Boston for the first debate today. However, they will be outsiders looking in, barred from a national forum that could have given their flagging third-party campaigns a boost.

Nation in brief

Buchanan, the Reform Party candidate, and Green Party nominee Nader fell far short of the level of support required by the sponsoring bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates. "The citizens of this country will lose out ... as Mr. Gore and Mr. Bush are allowed to sidestep issues and solutions," Nader said Monday while campaigning in Concord, N.H.

Lieberman tells debate opponent to 'watch out'

Lieberman was greeted at the airport by more than 150 supporters, including Kentucky Gov. Paul Patt.

The Connecticut senator told the crowd that he was hunkering down to prepare for Thursday's debate but hoped to get out during the next few days to meet local residents. "I feel as if this week is going to be like a boxing training camp," he said Sunday. "We're ready."

Study: Many wouldn't get full benefit of Bush tax cut

WASHINGTON - More than 12 million Americans would not get the full benefit of George W. Bush's tax cuts because they would become subject to another tax originally designed to prevent investors and the wealthy from sheltering too much of their income, a congressional analysis found.

The Joint Committee on Taxation, a bipartisan congressional panel, said the number of individuals affected by the alternative minimum tax would almost double under the GOP presidential nominee's 10-year $1.3 trillion tax cut plan. Some would get no tax cut; others would see smaller than anticipated reductions.

The panel, in a report prepared for Rep. Charles Rangel of New York, ranking Democrat on the House Ways and Means Committee, said increased exposure to the minimum tax could reduce the size of Bush's tax relief by $192 billion over 10 years.

Buchanan says voters shouldn't support Bush

MANCHESTER, N.H. - Reform Party presidential candidate Pat Buchanan returned to a state that gave him big lifts in the past to urge conservatives not to "throw away" their votes on Republican George W. Bush.

Buchanan, who won New Hampshire's 1996 GOP primary and made a strong showing there in 1992, said Bush has abandoned conservative principles. He urged voters to support his own bid to create "a fighting new conservative party."

Buchanan said the only thing he and Bush agree on is using the budget surplus to cut taxes. He said they differ on immigration, free trade, the strength of their opposition to abortion, and the role of government.

Researchers try to determine maximum human life span

The average human life span has been increasing for decades. But current scientific thinking is that the longest possible human life is about 120 years. Now, however, a team of U.S. and Swedish demographers is challenging that notion.

John R. Wilmoth of the University of California at Berkeley and colleagues analyzed national death records in Sweden for every year since 1861 and conclude that there are no signs the lengthening human life span is leveling off.

Milosevic addresses defiant nation

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—As thousands walked out of factories, mines and schools to demand Slobodan Milosevic leave office, the Yugoslav president claimed Monday the country would fall under foreign occupation if the opposition takes power.

Milosevic spoke after the opposition launched what it hopes will be a nationwide campaign to force the president to accept electoral defeat by Vojislav Kostunica. Truck and taxi drivers blockaded roads and bridges, students stayed home and factories closed throughout the country.

In a rare address to the nation, his first since the Sept. 24 election, Milosevic accused his opponents of using bribery and blackmail to organize the strikes, adding that if his rivals succeed, "Yugoslavia would inevitably break up."

"Our policy guarantees peace, while theirs clashes and hostility," Milosevic said. Otherwise, he added, Yugoslavia "would be occupied by foreign forces."

Milosevic, however, gave no indication he plans to use force against the strikers, although it clearly remains an option.

Less than a week remains before Sunday's scheduled runoff election. Milosevic says Kostunica failed to achieve an outright victory in elections and a second round is needed. The opposition, backed by the West, insists Milosevic rigged the voting.

Meanwhile, Russia on Monday resisted Western pressure to call on Milosevic to concede electoral defeat.

President Vladimir Putin said he was willing to receive both Milosevic and Kostunica in Moscow, "to discuss ways of resolving the situation." But Putin left Monday for a four-day visit to India, suggesting no meeting was likely before the runoff.

Philippine troops rescue evangelists

JOLO, Philippines (AP)—In the first major success of a 17-day rescue assault, Philippine troops freed a group of Christian evangelists Monday after one escaped and alerted the military.

The escaped evangelist was taken in a military helicopter and pointed out the rebels' camp from the air. The soldiers then attacked the rebels, who fled after a brief clash, military chief of staff Gen. Angelo Reyes said.

The recovery of the 12 Filipino evangelists, held by Abu Sayyaf rebels for three months, left five hostages in guerrilla hands — an American, three Malaysians and a Philipino.

The rescue on Jolo island was a welcome success for the military, which has admitted underestimating the rebels' strength in the assault that began Sept. 16.

"That is our good news for today," President Joseph Estrada said. "I think in one more week we will end this problem."

Evangelist Fernando Solon slipped away from the rebels after asking to take a bath Sunday night and discovering that his captors were not following him, officials said. He spent the night hiding in a mangrove swamp before locating a group of soldiers

Monday morning, they said.

Solon is the third hostage to escape from the rebels since thousands of troops began the assault. Two French journalists escaped Sept. 19 while their captors were fleeing from the military.

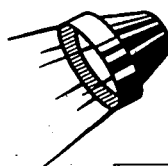

Many of the evangelists fasted in captivity, and their leader, Wilde Almeda, was reportedly in poor condition. He was carried in a makeshift chair by his followers when the rebels traveled through the jungle.

The Abu Sayyaf faction that held the evangelists now has no human shields, giving the military a freer hand to attack.

Napster argues music-swap service merits in federal court

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal court began hearing arguments Monday in the recording industry's copyright infringement case against Napster Inc. the joy of more than 22 million music-trading users but the bane of major record labels who say it cheats companies and artists out of sales.

The company was spared in July from a court order that would have shut down the site until the Recording Industry Association of America's lawsuit against the online service is resolved.

Only hours after a federal judge issued an injunction against Napster, saying it was encouraging "wholesale infringing" against music industry copyrights, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed the order.

Ramos, an attorney for the recording industry. "It really needs to be restrained. We urgently need relief."

Napster, started in a Northeastern University dorm room last year, pioneered the concept known as peer-to-peer computing in which people share files from their own computers rather than a central server. In Napster's case, users can download music from each other that is stored in the format known as an MP3 file.

The company claims its 22 million users are violating no law. It bases its defense on the Audio Home Recording Act of 1992, which it says grants immunity when music is shared for noncommercial use.

Another company, MP3.com, allows users to listen to songs stored on its own computers. It has settled lawsuits brought by four record labels and in September lost a copyright-infringement case brought by Universal Music Group. That case is likely to reach the Supreme Court.

In a statement released Friday about Monday's Napster hearing, Hilary Rosen, president and CEO of the recording industry's organization, said she hoped for "increased cooperation between innovation and industry so legitimate business models can make more music available online."

Bar codes for Internet scanners called CueCats, shown Sunday in Dallas, made their latest debut in print in The Dallas Morning News, even as the creators of this new technology grapple with concerns about privacy and ease of use. The Dallas-based company that makes the scanners, Digital Convergence, says it has given out nearly 2 million of the devices that hook up to personal computers and, when swiped across bar codes, call up the desired web page.

It's time to change horses

By Jim Coates
Chicago Tribune

Q. It seems that I find helpful hints in your column every week — keep-up-the-good-work! How about this: I work out of my home and find that my Hewlett-Packard DeskJet works like a horse but still doesn't print fast enough for my needs. I've heard that the way to go is a laser printer, which will give me better quality and faster printing — what do you suggest?

—Jim Benefield

A. They shoot horses, don't they, Mr. B? I say plug that HP workhorse and send it to sleep with the fishes. The human race has wasted far too much time waiting for ink jet printers to print out full-color Web pages and other documents when all anybody really wanted was information, not 256-color artwork.

Software Q & A

Q. Often while connecting to AOL, I have difficulty in signing off and AOL stays on the screen for several minutes. On checking my hard drive, I noticed that there are four copies of America Online: AOL 5.0, AOL 5.0b, AOL 5.0b and AOL 5.0c. Should I delete three of the copies, and which ones? Thank you for your assistance.

—Peter Sievering, Newark, N.J.

A. Bad news and good news, Mr. S. Whatever is causing America Online's software to linger on your screen when it should go booby-bye is not related to your proliferation of AOL directories, which I will deal with in a second.

First, let me tell you that you probably can nuke that lingering AOL just by pressing the Alt+F4 key combination.

Your best bet is an ironic one. You need to install another version of America Online on your hard drive. But first you want to get rid of each of these past versions.

To do this, you need to use the Add/Remove Programs control panel to remove America Online's software scattered after your hard drive. Click the My Computer icon and then Control Panel and then Add/Remove Programs.

Select America Online and remove it.

Now go back to the My Computer icon and select the icon for the C: drive. There you will find folders for AOL and AOLa, b and c. Nuke them all.

Software tracks head movements

By Heather Newman
Knight Ridder News Service

The next time you duck while playing a computer game, the character on-screen may duck with you.

Cybernet Systems of Ann Arbor, Mich., is releasing a $30 program early this month that tracks head movements and translates them into keystrokes the control action on the screen with the help of a Webcam.

Called HeadHunter, the product is the first of many to take advantage of Cybernet's work on gesture- and movement-recognition technology for NASA and the military.

The program, which is exceedingly easy to use, tracks four head movements: side to side and forward and back.

The user can associate each movement with a keystroke or combination of keys, which is especially useful in keyboard-intensive computer games.

Because each program can have its own keystrokes assigned to different movements, HeadHunter can have a variety of uses. A simple on-screen window shows gamers how well their Web camera is doing at tracking their movements and allows players to control how much is required for HeadHunter to respond. The program will work with most games and software packages.

Other games, including some for young users marketed by Intel Playt, use gesture-recognition technology. But they can only be used with those particular games.

Coming down the road are two new products based on Cybernet's technology. The Gauntlet will provide sophisticated hand-gesture recognition for games and will be sold by Essential Reality.

The second product is a cheap software add-on for the Microsoft PowerPoint presentation program that lets you use a Webcam and hand gestures to control the movement of slides on screen. It will be available in early 2001.

Cybernet originally developed motion-recognition technology to help the military train soldiers on the correct gestures to use during silent operations.

The company has been in business for 12 years, concentrating in its early days mostly on government contracts.

Now it splits its time between those and commercial partnerships, providing the technology behind whiz-bang computer and Internet products that are usually marketed by another company.

Small programs like HeadHunter are the exception, though, and Cybernet expects to sell many copies of the software on its Web site in addition to retail stores.

Early testers of the program have been enthusiastic. "Right now, the reactions we're getting have been awesome," said president Tony Comazzi.

Reburial of 'Kennewick Man' won't answer any questions

A 9,300-year-old skeleton found near Kennewick, Wash., has become the latest pawn in America's never-ending game of political correctness.

Anthropologists say the bones of "Kennewick Man" offer priceless clues about human habitation of the inland Northwest. But to Indian tribes of southeastern Washington he is "The Ancient One" — and the Indians say he's kin.

Now Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt says the skeleton is "culturally affiliated" with five Indian tribes that claim ancestral roots in the area. The upshot is that one of the oldest skeletons ever found in North America will go back into the ground. Scientific inquiry can take a hike.

The two sides have been locked in dispute since the skeleton was unearthed from the shallows of the Columbia River in 1996. The first anthropologists to examine the skeleton more in common with Polynesians or southern Asians than with local tribes.

That's a potential embarrassment for the tribes, who are heavily invested in the concept that they are the area's original inhabitants. Further study of the bones could reveal that the inland Northwest's Indians are immigrants, not indigenous.

For all anyone knows, the skeleton could be 'Amway Man' who was just passing through with a box of sample products. The Indians' desire for a swift reburial may have less to do with reverence for a long-dead ancestor than with the possibility that Kennewick Man could tell a tale they don't want to hear.

And another thing ...

While on the subject of political correctness, it's worth noting the mid-September death of a Panhandle woman is being blamed in part on air pollution.

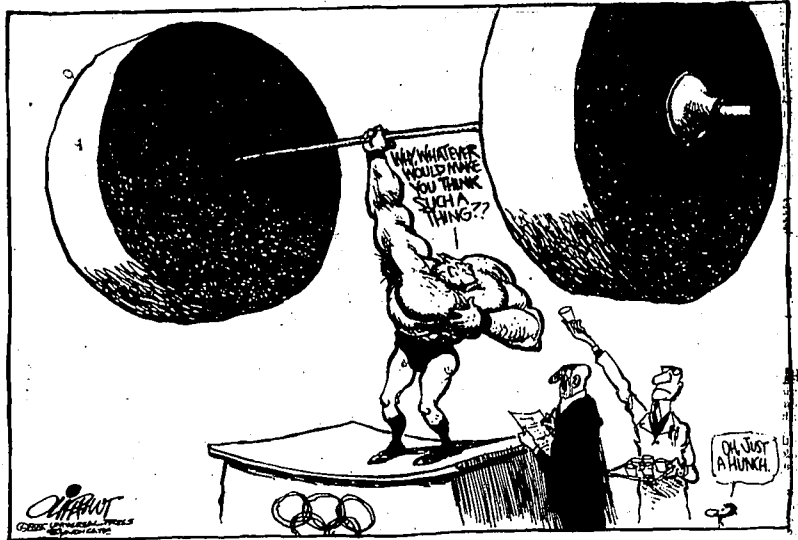

No one disputes that field burning filled the skies with smoke on the day before the 49-year-old woman died. For those who are easily led, the presence of smoke followed by the woman's death is a clear-cut case of cause and effect.

But the death certificate lists two contributing factors: air pollution and chronic asthma.

It turns out the woman had suffered from asthma for decades. It also turns out she'd smoked cigarettes for years until she quit in February.

Did the smoke from heavy field burning play a role in her death? Probably. But her past actions — including years of smoking — probably played an even bigger role. In this case, as in many others, there is no substitute for personal responsibility when one wants to enjoy a long and healthy life.

Further study of 'Kennewick Man' could reveal that the inland Northwest's Indians are immigrants, not indigenous.

The medium can distort the message

I've seen it live and I've seen it taped. And live is better. That's true of Olympics coverage, now that I've had a chance to compare the live broadcasts from Sydney on Canadian television, from across the river in Windsor, and the taped coverage on NBC.

But it's also true of politics, now that we are into the fortnight of live presidential and vice presidential debates. There's just no substitute for watching events unfold in real time and forming your own impression from what you see.

Of course, there's a difference between being there and watching a telecast. Football and baseball are different experiences in the stadium and on the living-room couch. Cameras bring you close-up you can't duplicate, even from a box seat on the 50-yard line or behind home plate. But they also limit your perspective to the shots the director chooses.

The same thing is true in political debates. I sat in the studio audience in Buffalo for the New York Senate debate between Hillary Rodham Clinton and Rep. Rick Lazio, and saw something different than the television viewers around the state and nation. When Lazio crossed over to Mrs. Clinton's podium and pressed her to sign a pledge not to allow "soft money" into their campaigns, it looked contrived and phony to me.

But in the tight shot TV viewers saw, it looked invasive and menacing, and women voters especially reacted negatively. Lazio is still struggling to recover the ground he lost.

But big as the differences between attending an event and watching it on TV may be, they are far less significant than the differences between live TV and taped.

DAVID S. BRODER

Like many of you, I had been frustrated by NBC's decision to show all of the Olympics events on tape, but I understood the argument that the 15-hour time difference between the United States' Eastern time zone and Sydney would have placed too many major events in the predawn hours. It did not ease my aggravation that performances I really wanted to see, like Michael Johnson's 400-meter run, were further delayed until after the 11 p.m. local news, in order to hold the NBC audience as long as possible.

But it was not until I came here late last week on a political story and tuned in the live coverage on the CBC that I realized just how much we had been missing. I awoke very early one morning in my hotel room, flipped on the TV and found the women runners lining up for the 1,500-meter race. The CBC announcer identified the contestants and their countries and within a few seconds, the race was on.

It turned out to be a tough battle, with elbowing and spills and a close, punishing finish. That night, I saw the same event on tape on NBC. But the experience was totally different — and not just because I knew who would win. NBC turned it into a mini-drama, with vignettes on the personal lives of the two American runners spliced between the shots of them lining up for the race and the gun going off.

What happened on the NBC Olympics coverage is what happens on 95 percent of our campaign coverage, too. The actual events are transformed into neat stories or packages by the media — fitting them into our formats, rather than letting them happen as they happen.

Except for C-SPAN, which airs almost all its programs unedited, and the other cable news networks, which often show political events as they occur, almost all our coverage of the campaigns is shaped by reporters and editors or producers who are looking for story lines. Ideology is less of a distorting factor than the simplification that results from a search for a simple narrative framework. I saw it in the coverage of a really good debate between congressional candidates in Lansing, Mich., last week — which lost most of its liveliness in truncated TV and newspaper stories — and I realize the same thing happens regularly in my own coverage of political events.

That is why these live presidential and vice presidential debates are so important. And why it is so shameful that the Fox network declined to cover the first one. And why NBC — whose showcase public affairs program, "Meet the Press," thankfully provided a live forum for Ralph Nader and Patrick J. Buchanan to debate last week — embarrassed itself by its decision that it would not delay its broadcast of a baseball playoff game to carry the debate live. The NBC mooks, eager for ratings, decided the Olympics audience could wait the better part of a day for coverage, but could not adjust its baseball broadcast for the first presidential debate.

For shame.

Commissioners aren't listening

Webster's definition of public service: a service to any or all members of a community, a service rendered in the public interest, governmental employment. So what does this mean to you? Are your county commissioners listening to you? Are they listening to any or all members of the community? They're not listening to me. They won't even respond to my correspondence. Countless times this year I have written them not to even acknowledge my inquiries.

Twin Falls County commissioners have also been mysteriously absent from two public meetings recently held in the county. A group of citizens met to discuss confined animal feeding operations south of Filer. The other meeting was with the state departments of Environmental Quality, Agriculture and Water Resources where, once again, citizens expressed their issues with CAFOs and officials were available for questions.

A recent article in the paper found your Twin Falls County commissioners at a Republican Women's luncheon, talking about problematic odors from CAFOs and how they're not to blame. Is this your idea of public service? Shouldn't they be more concerned about how to resolve problems than their image? Why meet with their own party but not their constituent? Because they were politically appointed, not elected. When you can't get politician's attention in an election year, that is quite a statement. Assume they aren't responding to me because I can't vote (although I'm still a taxpayer). But why are they ignoring the rest of the public? Is this public service to all or just to select few? Are they more concerned about special interest groups or the public at large? You decide.

You have public servants in the Magic Valley although they aren't on the public dole. There are four good men running for county commissioners in three counties. They've been present at nearly every meeting where your appointed commissioners have been absent. If you want change, if you want public service, if you're tired of the run around, vote for Bill Chisholm and Mike Ihler (write-in candidate in Twin Falls, Lee Halper in Jerome and Don Cogger in Gooding) for the true public servants who may have the toughest issues without worrying about their image or who's to blame. Exercise your freedom and cast your vote for change. Don't let the politicians pick your representatives.

Accentuate the positive

In our everyday lives, I believe that we dwell on the negative and tend to overlook the positive. The last couple of weeks, I have been making a big effort to point out to my children all of the positive in any situation. Recently, I had the chance to really witness something that may have meant nothing to most people, but to the one little boy it affected the most, it meant the world.

My son is in the second grade at Horizon Elementary. School has been a big challenge for him and it is the teachers that really make the difference. On Sept. 24, as we were getting ready for the school day, (Mrs. Hockenberry), she wanted to let him know that she would not be at school and that there would be a substitute and to ask him if he would be the helper so the substitute could find everything. Just that extra couple of minutes made more of an impression on my son than all the minutes that he went to school knowing that there would be a change in his classroom and that he was needed to help out.

All too often, we forget the good things that the people around us do and are quick to point out the negative. I think that if we all spent more time recognizing the positive around us, we would see more positive come our way. Three cheers to Mrs. Hockenberry for putting heart and humanity into a job that we all take for granted and yet is one of the most important in our society.

Manure in the water table

Mr. Reitsma, it is wrong to misquote me, then take me to task for words I did not say. My simple question remains unanswered by state and local officials.

How much manure are we producing and how much manure can we spread on Idaho land before we saturate our water with nitrates? Please don't forget, we have proposed for hog factory ranches, with more than a million manure-producing hogs, to add to your personal calculations of cow manure.

I simply think we should know our limits, but the state sanctioned family ranchers with more regulations that seem intentionally tunnel-visioned. The individual nutrient management plans are nice, but why do our officials refuse to look at the big picture?

I was quoting the state's Gooding County study that concluded, "The alarming rate of rising nitrate levels may be from decades ago." So, in concentrated areas, we "may" have exceeded our ability to safely spread manure years ago. This is why we should know our limits.

Your calculations included all Idaho land, but Louie Ellers of the Idaho Dairyman's Association said it is not economical to transport manure more than 15 miles.

I think I asked a reasonable question, and I never "stated" that we exceeded our ability to spread manure years ago. "To" people, as you claimed. Our state and local officials should have our soil scientists doing these calculations in an open, public forum. This would let us see the data, and you could even present your vision and calculations for a million more cows, for all to review.

Your letter on Sept. 19 oddly attacked me for supporting Bill Chisholm and famly farmer Mike Ihler for county commissioners, stating, "I should spend some money on an ad in this paper." I respect your right to support the commissioners that turn a blind eye for you. But you reminded me, I forgot to mention that folks have to write in the name of Mike Ihler.

And I forgot to mention Jerome County has a great choice in Lee Halper, and Gooding County would be well served by Don Cogger.

Before you blame me for attacking 4-H I love the program. I bet a lot of the kids in Hollister learn a lot from 4-H. Unfortunately, sometimes these kids can whine about odors from your operation, but at least you don't smell it where you live, right?

Presidential debates don't have winners, only losers and survivors

If presidential candidates ran the Olympic high hurdles, the finish line would just be coming into view for George W. Bush. In politics, the hurdles become gradually higher as the race wears on. Bush confronts the most difficult hurdle of all tonight, when he faces off with Democratic rival Al Gore in the first of the three presidential debates.

But unlike an Olympic sprint, there is rarely a clear winner to a presidential debate. The candidates jockey for position, continually pushing and shoving in an attempt to knock their opponents off-balance. The presidential campaign might be a road race, but the debates themselves are more like a well-dressed version of Greco-Roman wrestling.

In truth, presidential debates don't have winners. They have losers and survivors. And it takes only 15 seconds to lose a debate. One misplaced fact or poorly phrased response will become the sound bite of choice that replays endlessly for days, months or years afterward.

Both Bush and Gore have convincingly demonstrated their ability to engage in verbal self-immolation while on the campaign trail. But a memorable gaffe during a high-stakes debate would be seen by the entire country and create an unfattering impression that can't be erased before election day.

The most successful debaters are people who are able to pressure their opponents into a mistake, leading them into a discussion of unfamiliar or uncomfortable matters that results in a defensive candidate saying something he wishes he hadn't. The only way to convincingly win a debate, in other words, is to make your opponent lose.

For Bush, the temptation will be to play the character card — talking about the various Clinton scandals and Gore self-inventions are a sure crowd-pleaser on the fund-raising circuit. And it's great fun to crack one-liners about inventing the Internet and starring in "Love Story."

But this is a trap into which Republicans have regularly fallen during the Clinton years. After weeks of fighting precisely this battle, Bush would tread in national opinion polls last week by talking about the differences between himself and Gore on policy matters, not scandal. Bush's recent discussion of the nation's "education recession" reminds voters that the strength of the economy rests on the shaky underpinnings of an unsatisfactory school system. This is where Gore is most vulnerable. Education is Bush's signature issue: He can point to a significant record of achievement in Texas and discuss it with authority that he doesn't always possess on other topics. It's also an area that is dangerous for Gore, for despite an array of his own reform initiatives, he is constrained by his relationship with organized labor from more aggressively challenging the status quo.

Forget apple pie, pizza takes the cake

BERNICE KANNER

January is Diet Month in the United States, while February is Nutrition Month. April honors secretaries and July honors ice cream. September is the month to celebrate grandparents and literacy, while August is Pie Month.

So why shouldn't pizza get into the marketing game? After some lobbying, October has been slated as National Pizza Month.

Not that it needs it: Pizza is more American than hamburgers and hot dogs and may very well be more popular. Nearly 90 percent of Americans claim to have an insatiable appetite for the stuff that, thanks to its marketing inventors, has become identified as fun food.

New Pizza Hut, a division of Tricon Global Restaurants Inc., is hoping to cash in on its fun image by revealing how Americans go at it. One thing is for sure: They do it with gusto.

Americans don't mind at all getting their hands messy. In fact, 83 percent of us prefer eating pizza with our hands, according to a new survey from Pizza Hut. The remaining 15 percent prefer eating pizza with a fork, while 2 percent had no preference how they get it into their mouths.

Other dining rules don't necessarily apply either. While the living room is typically off limits for meals, it's by far the most popular room in the house for pizza consumption.

Nearly 76 percent of Americans admit they break kitchen or dining room boundaries when it comes to pizza. Single folks are even less rule-bound. Eleven percent say they're most likely to eat pizza in their bedrooms and 4 percent say most of their pizza is eaten on the floor of other rooms.

In contrast, just 2 percent of married couples say they cart pizza to their beds, and 6 percent prefer to munch away on pizza on the floor. More than nine out of 10 respondents to the Pizza Hut survey said they prefer to eat pizza sitting down rather than on the go.

And while other foods struggle to move from a defined meal occasion — cereal and orange juice aren't just for breakfast any more, we're told — pizza has already scored as an all-occasion food: Women are just as likely as men to grab a cold slice of pizza the morning after.

More than one in four Americans claim leftover pizza is their "breakfast of choice." It's also the dinner of choice for many, besting haute cuisine. Ninety-two percent of Americans would rather eat a slice of pizza than some pricey caviar.

Five out of five would rather have pizza than a hot fudge sundae. Our pizza preferences are so to marketers something like what the genome map is to scientists. Southerners are the biggest pizza lovers. Sixteen percent of them eat five or more slices at a time. Generation-wise, young adults (18 to 24) also eat the most pizza. Northerners and Westerners usually eat two slices a sitting.

Most people prefer it piping hot, though 15 out of every 100 of us prefer their pizza at refrigerator temperature, according to my own research. Those earning less than $40,000 a year are more than twice as likely as richer folks to prefer their pizza chilled.

The thought of cold pizza makes Southerners shudder. About four times as many Northeasterners eat it cold as do Southerners. Midwesterners are the ones who primarily attack pizza with a knife and fork.

And if there's one slice of a pie left? Almost one in five of us believe that if there's one slice of pizza left and more than one prospective mouth into which it might go, it's every man for himself.

While the vast majority of us claim they ask and offer the slice first, one out of four adults with children at home just grab. Men as a rule believe the slice should go to the one quickest on the draw.

Your health is our mission.

In 1998, there were 172 deaths from breast cancer in Idaho. In 1999, there were 100 new cases of breast cancer diagnosed in the Magic Valley area. Earlier diagnosis of breast cancer could save the lives of 10 more women in the Magic Valley each year.

Breast cancer is the most commonly occurring cancer in women and the second most common cause of death from cancer in the United States and Idaho. A recent survey of the mammography rates in the Magic Valley found that only about 44 percent of eligible women have had a mammogram — the rate should be 90 percent.

Parents, leaders warn speeders

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Tears streaming down her face, an angry parent pleaded with the City Council to help control the city's traffic problem.

"I've never been so aware as I was that day, to the dangers our kids face when walking in Twin Falls," Annette Wilkinson said Monday, as City Council members quietly listened. "We need to be looking at how we address the traffic situation throughout Twin Falls. When I stop at a red light and people thank me for letting them pass, we know there is a problem."

Wilkinson's 9-year-old daughter Jessica was hit by a car earlier this year at the intersection of Falls Avenue and Harrison Street.

Jessica survived the accident with minor injuries. But Wilkinson, and a group of other angry parents, complained to the City Council Monday about the city's growing traffic problems - problems that include speeding and inattention by drivers in school zones.

The meeting was in part prompted by the recent accident involving Triton Martin, 10, and his sister Katrina, 11, both of Twin Falls, who were hit by a pickup truck at the intersection of Filer Avenue East and Madison Street North.

Both children survived the accident.

City leaders agreed Monday that there is a traffic safety problem.

In fact, city officials are considering spending more than $25,000 on new traffic safety signs, including new speed limit signs and school zone signs.

A newly formed city police traffic division may also curb some of the speeders and reckless drivers.

Sr. Matt Hicks said the city's intent with the new division is to monitor traffic conditions and maintain traffic control.

To help the city figure out what is needed and where, a traffic council made up of parents, school district officials and other city leaders will also be formed.

"There are a lot of concerned parents that have decided to be pretty vocal about things that have been concerning them for years," Hicks said.

The traffic council will be formed Monday.

Officials halt pit plans

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - County officials rejected a proposed gravel pit in Ohio Gulch Monday.

Blaine County commissioners upheld an earlier county planning and zoning commission's denial of a conditional use permit application for Gary McStay.

McStay leases part of 640 acres of state endowment land administered by the Department of Lands in Ohio Gulch, three miles north of Hailey.

Commissioners decided the matter within a half-hour based on the county attorney's findings, reaching a decision so quickly that it stunned many of those sitting in the courtroom.

Prosecuting Attorney Doug Werth rejected both of McStay's reasons for appeal.

McStay had said the county lacks jurisdiction to determine the use of state endowment lands. That determination is reserved to the state Land Board, he said.

He also said the county has selectively enforced zoning ordinances by allowing multiple industrial uses in Ohio Gulch. During the 1999 operating season, for instance, Ohio Gulch was used by at least seven individual contractors including Blaine County Road and Bridge, Wood River Rubbish and K&D Excavation.

Werth pointed out in a brief that McStay voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of the county in a previous agreement dated Oct. 22, 1999. At that time, he agreed to seek a conditional use permit from Blaine County for future hauling of shale, fill and other minerals from state land.

Furthermore, there does not appear to be any no substantial evidence in the record to suggest that Blaine County has been

Superintendent visits Cassia schools

By Aaron Brooks
Times-News writer

BURLEY - As public schools add more computer programs for students, that will pose a challenge for higher education, the state's school superintendent said Monday.

On a tour of several Cassia County schools, the state superintendent Marilyn Howard, the Cassia Regional Technical Center, the Cassia Alternative Center, Burley High School, Mountain View Elementary School and Declo High School.

Superintendent Marilyn Howard got a glimpse at how the schools are incorporating computers into learning.

"With all this hands-on computer training, college classes could be harder to offer challenging curriculums to these students."

"The interesting thing is the impact this is going to have at the next level up," Howard said.

At a tour of the tech center, officials noted the center's growth in popularity, with enrollment this year of 388, up from 272.

Students in eighth grade have even come to county administrators asking what classes to take at the center, Cassia County superintendent Jerry Doggett said.

Here, the use of high-tech is critical.

"Every program we've got uses some measure of computer-aided instruction," said tech center everyone has expressed," Howard said.

Howard was impressed that the community, dependent on farming and ranching, devoted so much money and energy to the schools. But a solid school background is essential in agricultural areas today, said Howard, who noted that farmers cannot succeed without skills in some of the sciences.

Meanwhile, Cassia County's facilities made a good impression on Howard, Doggett said.

"She said she'd be talking about us all over the state," Doggett said. "That certainly makes us very happy."

City planners to talk towers in meeting today

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The meeting today will probably be the first of many more to discuss cellular towers in Twin Falls.

The Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission will discuss setting up a committee to start tower ordinance after its regularly scheduled meeting today, planning and zoning Director LaMar Orton said.

"We've got some of the cell people coming in, and then we're going to have the county over," Orton said.

"I've asked (county planning administrator) Bill Crafton to make a bit of a presentation so they know what the county is doing."

Twin Falls County's tower ordinance helps regulate the aesthetics and placement of the towers.

Clyton Trapp, a land use planner for U.S. West, said he would be willing to work with the city on a new ordinance. Trapp helps find sites for U.S. West towers. He said he has worked with local governments.

"What we want to do is work with the city and craft an ordinance that's good for them and good for us," Trapp said recently.

"We don't want to jeopardize our standing in the community."

U.S. West plans to have several cellular tower sites throughout the Magic Valley.

Orton said he has been researching ordinances other local governments have in place.

He has accumulated information on transmission towers, including articles from planning magazines that he will share with the planning commission.

The City Council last week imposed a four-month moratorium on new communication tower construction recommended by the planning and zoning commission.

Residents have complained about new towers, saying there are enough of them already and that any more would be aesthetically unacceptable.

There are about seven large cellular towers in the city of Twin Falls now, and several others in Jerome and Twin Falls County.

Jerome City Council holds public meeting to discuss downtown

By Diane Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Downtown business owners will get a chance to speak out on their bills for a controversial downtown improvement project.

The Jerome City Council tonight will hold a public hearing to discuss merchants' bills for the downtown project, which is nearly complete after three years of work.

Problems have plagued the $2 million downtown facelift. Construction problems have delayed the project by two months in delays. Merchants have complained about lost business during the project, and poor workmanship.

To make matters worse, merchants received incorrect bills for their $360,000 share of the project. They were originally billed for $75 per frontage foot, rather than the $92 per frontage foot. If the corrected bills are approved at tonight's council meeting, downtown business owners can pay the assessment in full within 30 days, or pay over 10 years at 10 percent interest.

The downtown project — including widened streets, a left-turn lane and signal, new sidewalks, landscaping and street furniture within two blocks of the intersection of Main and Lincoln streets — is undergoing repair work, city councilman Jerry Crozier said. In other business:

• City engineer Scott Bybee has asked the city to declare an emergency on South Lincoln Street so the sewer pipeline can be replaced as soon as possible. Bybee said the pipeline can pose a health and safety risk.

A sewer lift station recently went down and was inoperable for about two days. With existing and new flows coming from Wal-Mart and other developments in the area, the station and related sewer lines will be incapable to meet the higher flow levels.

An emergency declaration would allow the city, with state Department of Commerce approval, to proceed with the immediate selection of a contractor and get work completed as soon as possible, Bybee said.

Mayor Dennis Moore wants to extend Bybee's temporary appointment as city administrator for another six months to run through March 2001 and hire an assistant administrator, Travis Rothweiler, at a rate of $37,164 per year.

If hired, Rothweiler would come on board Monday.

Burley residents will see their electricity bills go up next year

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Starting October 2001, Burley residents will see a 2 percent rate increase in their electricity bills.

The Burley City Council Monday renewed its contract with the federal Bonneville Power Administration, which sells power wholesale to the city. Because energy prices are on the rise, BPA is upping its cost to the city by 4 percent, or $100,000.

To cover that cost, the city will need to increase rates by 2 percent to be revenue neutral, said Dick Monson, superintendent of the city's electric department.

And despite universal price increases, BPA is still "the very lowest price on the block," Monson told the City Council.

The 10-year contract provides a fixed rate for five years, and assures that the following five years BPA will provide the lowest prices it can.

The benefit of a 10-year contract as opposed to a five-year contract is that if energy prices remain high or stay the same, those who signed on for 10 years will have seniority for low rates, Monson said.

City residents are paying less than 2 cents per kilowatt hour, and will still pay less than 2 cents with the rate increase, Monson said.

The contract also includes a clause that allows BPA to further raise its rates if BPA receives an increase in service requests, but its supply stays the same.

It may never happen, but if it did, BPA could increase the city's cost by up to 20 percent, which would mean a 10 percent rate increase to residents, Monson said.

The contract also requires that 300 kilowatts of the average 14,000 kilowatts being delivered daily come from renewable energy sources.

Council member Curtis Mendenhall said sticking with BPA is also a way to support the major power supplier for the Pacific Northwest.

"Our power is in jeopardy in the northwest," he said.

Forest Service learns about historic sites

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service now knows a lot more about how Chinese gold miners lived and worked in the central Idaho mountains in the late-1800s, thanks to some hardworking volunteers.

Thirty-two volunteers from all over the country recently spent two weeks helping Forest Service archaeologists relocate and inventory artifacts on more than a dozen historic Chinese mining sites on the Boise National Forest.

The volunteers uncovered thousands of artifacts related to everyday life, including square nails, rice bowls, medicine bottles, fragments of opium pipe bowls, stoves, woks and shards of ceramic soy sauce jars.

They also found many artifacts and earthworks related to mining, such as dams, ditches, tailings, shovel heads and gold pans at the sites near Centerville.

"Finding the artifacts and thinking that you may be the first person to touch them after more than 100 years is quite a thrill," said Morgan Dethman, a volunteer from Boise.

"It's really neat to be able to actually cut and feel the artifacts instead of seeing them in a museum or reading about them in a book. It's fun to imagine who might have had an item and used it last, to think about how it's been sitting on the ground for over 100 years and to think about how it got there."

The volunteers, participants in the Forest Service's "Passport in Time" program that provides opportunities for the public to work with professional archaeologists and historians, also helped with evaluating damage caused by looting since the sites were first recorded almost 20 years ago. "So far, on almost every site, artifacts that were recorded in the 1980s are now either gone or broken," said Ty Corin, a Boise National Forest archaeological technician.

George Grimes discovered gold in the mountains on the edge of the Boise Basin in 1861, along the creek named after him. In the ensuing three years, the area experienced the greatest influx of miners the Northwest had ever seen.

By 1864, the Boise Basin had a population of more than 16,000 in five towns. But miners began relocating to new discoveries in Montana as the amount of gold produced from the claims dwindled in late 1865.

Damage claims are relatively small, despite number and size of wildfires

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — More than 4,500 wildfires scorched parts of Idaho, Montana and Wyoming this summer, burning an area twice the size of Rhode Island.

But the devastation was largely restricted to trees, grass and brush in remote areas of public land. Relatively few homes were destroyed, so insurance companies are not facing enormous claims.

Insurance claims in the three states should total about $25 million, said Krista Fischer, executive director for the Insurance Information Service of Idaho and Oregon. Most of the fires burned in remote areas and in heavily forested public lands, so relatively few homes and cabins were destroyed.

Total western wildfire-related damage claims for 2000 figure to top $100 million, but most of those are from homeowners in Los Alamos, N.M. A controlled burn got away from firefighters and ravaged 75 square miles, forcing the evacuation of 25,000 people.

"From the insurance point of view, this wasn't a catastrophe," Insurance Information Institute spokeswoman Alejandra Soto said.

The flames did consume some structures in the region. Nearly 70 homes burned in the Bitterroot Valley Fire Complex in Montana, and more than 25 ranches and summer cabins were lost to the Clear Creek fire near Salmon and SCF Wilderness fires near Challis.

"It potentially could have been something as huge as Andrew," said Susan Wells, Farm Bureau Insurance regional claims manager. "We had a lot of property that was threatened."

During the peak of the Idaho fires, Farm Bureau used moratoriums and denied coverage to keep people around the state from buying coverage for one month, said Tim Stronks, the company's underwriting manager.

In Montana, after customers complained, insurance commissioner Mark O'Keefe told companies to end the practice. In Idaho, there is no state law stopping companies from denying coverage.

The Idaho Department of Insurance got two complaints from customers who were denied full coverage during the fires. Those complaints are still under investigation.

Casino dominates talk at tribe's meeting

LAPWAI (AP) — Some Nez Perce tribal members have expressed concern about the apparent fall-off in patronage at the tribal casino, but a leader warned against focusing too tightly on just that one economic enterprise.

"At the beginning of our casino, we did require parking attendants and there was standing room only," tribal member Gloria Green told other members during the general council meeting.

"Now, you can just about play three machines at once if you have the money," Green said. "Why are we not getting the support of the people?"

Green suggested stepping up marketing and promotions at the Clearwater River Casino by giving away a recreational vehicle or car every six months or so like some other casinos have been doing. She argued, however, that more customers at the casino, which has been largely responsible for revitalizing the depressed reservation economy.

But John Matthews, chair of the tribe's enterprise board, said some reduced patronage is to be expected.

"Just like anything, when something's new, everyone jumps on the bandwagon and wants to go," he said.

The goal of the enterprise board, Matthews said, is to continue to maximize profits in all its endeavors, not just the casino.

Officials approve research projects

BOISE (AP) — The initial 13 research projects have been selected for six universities working with the operator of the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory under the Inland Northwest Research Alliance.

Officials said the projects are focused on gaining a better understanding of the subsurface conditions and various contaminants at the INEEL site and other Energy Department facilities.

INEEL has come under fire from anti-nuclear activists on the Wyoming border, who repeatedly claim it has downplayed health risks from release of contamination during this past summer's wildfires on the site.

The most recent barrage on Monday also accused the government and the site operators of negligence for not hiring more firefighters last spring in anticipation of a busy fire season this year.

The group, Keep Yellowstone Nuclear Free, asked Energy Secretary Richardson to set up an independent monitoring program for INEEL similar to the one watching the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

The research projects announced on Monday have the goal of developing methods for reducing radioactive materials that can be used in a variety of applications.

Three generations die in U.S. 95 crash

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A Sandpoint woman, her daughter and granddaughter all were killed in a weekend collision on U.S. Highway 95 near Sagle.

Idaho State Police Sgt. Sandra Lee Shiell, 47, Heather Rene Paulsen, 24, and Kaitlin Paulsen, 6, both of Coeur d'Alene, died at the scene of the crash about 11 a.m. Saturday.

Investigators said Shiell was southbound when she was struck by a pickup truck and slid into the northbound lane. The car was hit broadside by a pickup truck driven by Steven Sidwell Siemer, 47, of Sagle.

Police said Siemer braked and veered right in trying to avoid the crash.

Siemer and Jacalyn Siemer, 44, were treated and released from Bonner General Hospital.

Housing authority asks for sales tax renewal

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The Teton County Housing Authority plans to ask voters next year to help relieve Jackson Hole's housing crisis by renewing the 1-cent sales tax.

The housing authority wants to spend $10 million to $12 million of the revenue creating and promoting affordable housing. Forrest Neuberger, executive director of the housing authority, said his agency has a preliminary strategy to increase the number of affordable homes. The high cost of living in the region prevents people who earn lower incomes from seeking employment in needed positions.

"If we don't make this effort we'll just get further behind," he said. "Five years from now it'll be too late. By then we probably will have lost the game, and it's too serious not to make our best effort right now."

The council unanimously approved a downtown Local Improvement District.

The new LID was crucial to a project to replace sidewalks, curbs and gutters while adding landscaping elements and other features to the 200 and 300 blocks of Main Avenue North and a few nearby blocks of Second and Third streets.

The estimated cost for the project is $920,750. The Urban Renewal Agency has pledged $120,000 and the City Council $102,000 for the project. $50,000 could come from an Idaho Community Development Block Grant, which is contingent on formation of the LID. Property owners would pay $198,750 through LID assessments. Property owners within the LID would be assessed $75 per linear foot fronting Main Avenue North and $35 per linear foot on Second and Third streets.

Gravel

Selective in its enforcement of zoning regulations in the Ohio Gulch area, Werth said.

The planning and zoning hearing, during which McStay's application was denied, was highly charged. Residents of The Heatherlands, an upscale development at the west end of Ohio Gulch, packed the courtroom, pleading that the operation would be noisy and unsafe for residents and countless recreational users in the canyon.

Supporters of McStay argued that the area has historically been used as a gravel pit.

McStay said he has lost thousands of dollars by not being able to operate the pit this summer. McStay said he has even more money that could have gone towards public schools, he added.

But Marc McGregor, an attorney for the grassroots organization Citizens for Smart Growth, said that gravel pits are one of the least compatible uses for areas, such as Ohio Gulch, that are zoned residential.

The board will have 15 days to finalize its decision. It may reconsider the decision within 14 days of that time.

McStay has the option of appealing the case to district court if the board chooses not to reconsider the issue.

Children, water don't mix without supervision

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Concerned in California," regarding her fears about her child drowning while visiting relatives who have unprotected swimming pools, prompted me to write. Her fears are well founded. You were on target telling her that her sister and ex-husband were ignorant about child safety.

As mothers — and emergency flight nurses with 30 years of combined experience — we can testify that any unfenced pool in the vicinity of any child is a prescription for tragedy. It does not matter that a child knows how to swim. "Swimmers" drown every day.

Statistics collected by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission paint a frightening picture of childhood drownings and swimming pools:

- 77 percent of the drowned children had been seen five minutes or less before being missed, and subsequently discovered in the pool.
- 69 percent of the accidents occurred while one or both parents were responsible for supervision — 65 percent of the accidents happened in a pool owned by the child's family.
- 39 percent of the supervisors

DEAR ABBY

were doing chores.
 • 18 percent were socializing.
 • 9 percent were busy on the telephone.

Thank you, Abby, for letting us share this information.
 —MICHELLE WILT, RN, KATHLEEN O'BRIEN, RN, ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR MICHELLE AND KATHLEEN: I hope your sobering statistics will serve as a warning to parents, relatives and caregivers of children everywhere, especially those in warm climates where swimming pools are common.

And thank you for sending me the following list of "Drowning Prevention Tips for Pool Owners," published by the National Network of Trauma Professionals. Read on:

1. Never leave a child unattended in the water or pool area for any reason.
2. Always keep your eyes on the child or children. Designate a child watcher, whether you or someone else, when you attend a party or have friends or family over.

3. Talk with baby sitters about pool safety and supervision.
4. Post rules such as "No running," "No pushing," "No dunking," and "Never swim alone." Enforce the rules. Don't rely on swimming lessons or "floaties" to protect your children in the water.
5. Don't assume that drowning or a drowning incident couldn't happen to you or your family.
7. Don't be lulled into a false sense of security just because you think your pool area and home are secure. Always watch your children, whether in the house or outside.
8. Attend a CPR class. Make sure your baby sitter knows CPR.

9. For the nearest cardiopulmonary resuscitation class, contact your fire department, Red Cross or hospital.
10. Encourage your neighbors to follow pool safety guidelines, including keeping their back gates and doors locked, and their pool gates securely closed and latched.

Husbands, the odds are against you

If the census takers have their data right, three out of five women now in their 30s will demand divorce.

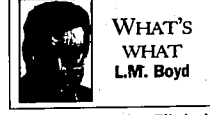

That historic name "Ming" — as in China's Ming Dynasty — meant "brightness."

When a man gets fired, he's called a "Ming" because he's not bright. When a woman gets fired, she's called a "Ming" because she's not bright. When a woman gets fired, she tends to take it quite personally, as though it were an insult to her looks and character as well as to her performance. You and I know generalities about gender are far from absolute, but personnel experts mostly seem to agree on this one.

I am told 80 percent of the songbirds don't live a year.

World's largest butterfly — with an 11-inch wingspan — is found in New Guinea. But not often.

When a woman takes leave from her job to care for her newborn baby, her working hours almost double, the experts say.

The American writer Elizabeth Marbury said, "The richer your friends, the more they will cost you."

Frogs, too, get athlete's foot.

Q. In computer research, what's the difference between an "Alpha test" and a "Beta test"?

A. Alpha, in the laboratory. Beta, in the field.

No crow learns how to caw. It knows.

A sweet surprise

Auxiliary mixes 'tea' cookies recipes in book

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

Want a book? When the Minidoka Memorial Hospital Auxiliary needed a new idea for a fund-raiser, a cookbook seemed like a sweet idea. But not just any old cookbook.

The auxiliary (formerly called the Pink Ladies) is famous for its extravagant teas. And after each one, women were asked for the recipe for their cookies.

The group collected recipes from present and past members. The result is 159 mouth-watering recipes from easy to complex.

"We've got some wonderful cooks," auxiliary president Nancy Saurey said. "This collection is a treasure."

She said the group hopes the cookbook proceeds will finance the redecorating of a room in extended care which is used by all the residents.

Saurey nominates the following recipe as her personal favorite. It tastes elaborate, as if you've spent all day in the kitchen, but is surprisingly quick and pretty.

ter, 3 1/2 cups powdered sugar, and 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Auxiliary members who helped assemble the recipes include Saurey, Lois Kowitz, Ella Knopp, Louise Dockter, Eunice Fredrick, Irene Maxson, Barbara Rodgers, Dolly Freiburger, Barbara Wilski, Mae Bubel, Barbara Dessel and Leah Leon.

The members photocopied the pages, punched them and bound them rather than sending the job to a printer. The result was book titled, "Tea and Cookies."

And the cover is, naturally, pink.

Agencies promote child seat safety

By Betty Taylor
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - To promote seat belt safety and proper use of child seats, Magic Valley Bank, Magic Valley SAFE Kids and the Idaho State Police gave away 18 child safety seats Sept. 14 at Magic Valley Bank.

People registered for the seats at Magic Valley Bank locations and the Twin Falls County Fair.

The child seats were installed for the winners at the parking lot of the bank.

Want more info?

For more information or to have a child safety seat checked for proper installation, call Magic Valley SAFE Kids at 737-2433.

Cassia County Deputy Mark Loos, College of Southern Idaho professor of law enforcement Tim Miller and Clinton Elmer, Lisa Hills and Carmen Miller, who are Safe Kids staff members as also properly installed the child seats at the event.

"We expose children every day to the risk of death or injury by not restraining them properly," said Hills, assistant coordinator of Magic Valley SAFE Kids. "The effort put forth by Magic Valley Bank and Idaho State Police will dramatically decrease that risk for each child that received and had the child seat installed properly."

In Idaho between 1994-1998, 203 children were killed in motor vehicle crashes.

Of that number, 153 were not restrained, Hills said.

Twin Falls man is named 'Ageless Hero'

TWIN FALLS - Regence BlueShield of Idaho has named Joe Newbry of Twin Falls as one of Idaho's Ageless Hero.

Newbry was named in the Bridging the Generations category in recognition of his ability to reach into the future through a young person's admiration.

He was nominated for the award by a teacher, Chris Dickard of Kimberly.

Newbry was chosen from more than 100 nominees throughout the state of Idaho.

As an Idaho winner, he has been nominated for the national Ageless Heroes award.

"We're delighted to honor the contributions and achievements of Mr. Newbry," said John Ruch, president and chief executive officer at Regence BlueShield of Idaho. "He is truly an inspirational senior. At Regence BlueShield of Idaho we see hundreds of people who serve as living proof that maturity can be a time of vitality and positive growth. Through programs like the Ageless Heroes Awards, we recognize their spirit and drive, and highlight these real heroes as role models of healthy aging, inspiring all of us toward our own bright futures as members of an older generation."

Newbry, 74, continues to work as a substitute teacher for grades kindergarten through 12 in the Hansen School District. But he doesn't just teach, he inspires and mentors the students, BlueShield said.

"The students' affection for Joe is evident when they request him for their substitute," Dickard said. "They learn perseverance, caring, and patience through his example."

Newbry also participates regularly in community service projects through the Charity Anywhere organization. Newbry was honored at the annual Governor's Conference on Aging in Nampa on Sept. 21. Gov. Dirk Kempthorne presented the award.

Jerome FFA chapter starts off with win

JEROME - The Jerome FFA chapter has started this year off with a bang.

On Sept. 8, a group of FFA members traveled to the Eastern Idaho State Fair in Blackfoot and fared well, especially because this was the first year they attended the competition, said Jennifer Shoup, Jerome FFA chapter reporter.

The chapter sent three teams of five members plus alternates. There were 32 teams from around the state participating in livestock judging, dairy judging and horse judging contests.

The livestock judging team placed 19th overall. Tenisha French, Chance Cox, Lindsay Cox, Matt Reisch and Josh Hunt made up the team with Sean Rantala as an alternate.

The dairy judging team, consisting of Greg Nelson, Heidi Blom, Aric Blom, Burke Higley and Jonathan Amend, received fourth place.

The horse judging team was awarded third place with team members Jennifer Shoup, Rachel Cox, Jessica Thompson and Katie Prescott. Alternates were Sabrina Johnson, Indy Hobson and Linda Kissingner.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

U.S. will refund money to chipmaker

SEOUL, South Korea — The United States will return $60 million it has collected in anti-dumping duties from South Korean chipmaker Hyundai Electronics following a complaint from Micron Technology Inc., Seoul officials said Monday.

The refund will be made because Washington retroactively withdrew its anti-dumping duties on Hyundai's dynamic random access memory chips, or DRAMs, the Commerce Ministry said.

The reimbursement will be made within two months. Hyundai has been paying 10.44 percent of its chip export revenue from the United States in anti-dumping duties since January this year.

The United States imposed the anti-dumping duties against Hyundai Electronics after Micron, a major Idaho employer, accused the Korean chipmaker of selling DRAMs in the United States at below fair value.

South Korea had petitioned the World Trade Organization last spring to end the duties because the WTO had previously ruled them illegal. The United States disputed the charge, claiming its import penalties complied with global trade rules.

A WTO panel of experts ruled last year the action was not allowed because Washington had not used the right criteria to establish a case against Hyundai and LG Semicon. The United States agreed to comply and amended its regulations. But after a second investigation, the duties were retained. The Koreans maintained the new U.S. regulations were still so vague that they continued to violate WTO requirements.

Wal-Mart plans major store expansion

CHICAGO — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. said Monday it plans to grow its store base by 8 percent next year — its most aggressive expansion yet — opening stores in new territories while relocating and enlarging existing discount stores.

The world's largest retailer, which has stores in Burley and Jerome, also said sales from stores open at least a year rose 4.8 percent in September, compared with 7.2 percent in the year-earlier period.

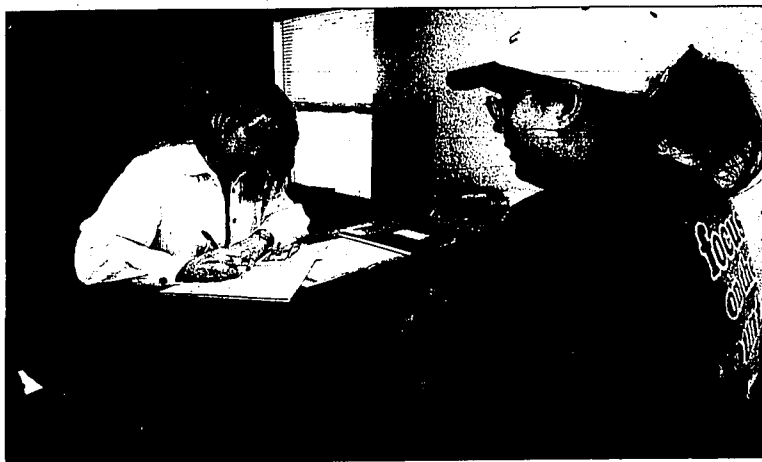

Wal-Mart said in the United States it will open about 40 new discount stores, 40 to 50 new Sam's Club stores and 170 to 180 new supercenters, or warehouse-sized centers that sell groceries as well as general merchandise. About 100 to 110 of the domestic openings will be relocations or expansions of existing discount stores, the company said.

The Bentonville, Ark.-based company also plans to expand its Neighborhood Market concept by adding 15 to 20 units in the fiscal year beginning Feb. 1, almost doubling the number of units added last year. International plans include opening between 100 and 110 new stores in existing markets.

The planned square footage growth for the coming year represents approximately 40 million square feet of new retail space, which will be the largest square footage increase in the company's history, Chief Executive Lee Scott said.

Landlords and the law

Wanda Luna, left, collects rent at the Northview Apartments on Washington Street N. Luna will be a panel member at a three-night workshop on rental housing on October 10, 12, and 19 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Forums focus on rental relationships

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

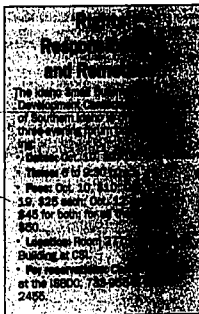

TWIN FALLS — Their intentions might be respectable, but their knowledge is sketchy.

So landlords who don't keep pace with changes in the law, and some property managers new to the business, end up treading on renters' rights, Wanda Luna said.

"You're not trying to discriminate, but it'll come out that way if you don't know what the laws are," she said.

"The (federal) Fair Housing Act is a really large publication," Luna said. "There's so many different things, and it's so hard to just sit and read it." Luna should know.

She's the manager of Northview Apartments in Twin Falls, and the Twin Falls apartments and houses of Quilici Trust Properties. Those rentals all belong to the College of Southern Idaho. And she's sure a three-evening workshop planned at CSI this month will be a much easier way to stay abreast of changes in the housing-rental business — from either side of the rent check.

"Whether you are a landlord or a tenant engaged in renting, there are a myriad of things you need to know to make informed decisions," said Sherry-Rust, training coordinator for the Idaho Small Business Development Center at the College of Southern Idaho.

The center, she said, plans a series of three forums to teach the basics of avoiding "risky business" in renting as a landlord or tenant.

The first session will be an overview of "Rights, Responsibilities and Remedies" related to renting. Rust said panel members for the Oct. 10 open forum will include but aren't limited to:

- Karen McCarthy of Idaho Legal Aid Services Inc. in Twin Falls.

- Richard Mabbutt of the Idaho Fair Housing Council in Boise.

- Ernest Benefield of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Boise.

- Graydon Stanley, director of student services for CSI.

- John Wilson, a Twirl Falls police officer.

- Luna.

- Jim Brawley of Brawley Realty in Twin Falls.

On the second evening, Oct. 12, Mabbutt will speak on fair housing. On Oct. 19, McCarthy will speak on landlord and tenant law in Idaho, Rust said.

Wilson, who handles media and public relations for Twin Falls city police, said he'll participate on the panel to answer landlords' questions about disputes with tenants, and about how police deal with those disputes.

Radio stations change hands

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Bainbridge Island, Wash.-based Horizon Broadcasting Group LLC said Monday it is acquiring five radio stations in southern Idaho from FMH.AM Inc. LLC.

Horizon said it will immediately begin operating all five stations under a local marketing agreement.

The stations are KTFZ-FM in Boise and Mountain Home; KMXM-FM, "Maximum

Country," in Boise; and Gooding; classic rock KIRX-FM in Twin Falls and Ketchum; the full-service KTFJ-AM in Twin Falls, which has served Magic Valley since 1928; and KMLH-AM in Mountain Home.

Horizon said it will own 11 radio stations — seven FM and four AM — in Oregon and Idaho once the acquisition of FM Idaho is complete.

Terms were not disclosed for the transaction, expected to be completed in fourth quarter 2000.

Wendell Starke of FM Idaho, operated under the name Impact Radio Group, will join the Horizon board of directors when the transaction closes, the Washington company said.

"This cluster of stations, in addition to the Boise Hawks baseball club, provides the company with an exciting future in the fast-growing markets of Boise/Ontario (Ore.), Bend (central Oregon) and Twin Falls," Horizon Chief Executive Officer Bill Ackerley said in a statement.

Horizon said it will own 11 radio stations — seven FM and four AM — in Oregon and Idaho once the acquisition of FM Idaho is complete.

Horizon formed to acquire and operate small- and middle-market radio stations in the West.

Continued demand, high prices will boost utility's profits

Idaho Power beats expectations again

The Associated Press

BOISE — Continued strong demand and high prices will push third-quarter profits for Idaho's largest electric utility to a record high, the company announced Monday.

"The company's energy merchant group continues to demonstrate its ability to increase market share and profitability during these periods of increased activity," President Jan Packwood said in a statement.

IDACORP, the parent company of Idaho Power Co., said net income for the three months through September will approach and possibly exceed 90 cents a share, up dramatically from year-ago earnings of 59 cents a share and over its record second-quarter profit of 86 cents.

Wall Street had been anticipating earnings of just 61 cents a share, according to First Call. The quarterly report, to be filed Oct. 26, will mark the third straight time the company has performed ahead of industry analyst expectations.

Packwood said the earnings report will reinforce the second-quarter filing that showed how the company was able to take advantage of the pressure being placed on limited supplies of transmission and generation by unprecedented economic expansion and unusual weather patterns throughout the West.

The utility continued to capitalize on the situation by last month by calling for significantly more water to be released from American Falls Reservoir in eastern Idaho so it could maximize generation from its relatively cheap hydroelectric system downstream.

An additional 53,000 acre-feet was being released, raising concerns that the dropping water level would affect an endangered snail and that rush of additional water would lower downstream water quality.

The company said it needed the additional water to avoid having to meet customer demand by buying the same kind of expensive wholesale power that it sold to generate the record profits of the spring and summer.

Economists think interest rates won't change

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Reserve policy-makers, facing slow economic growth and higher oil prices, are expected to keep interest rates unchanged today, preferring a continued low profile at their last meeting before the presidential election.

A one-half percentage point increase on May 16. "Given the uncertainties created by oil prices and the evidence we are seeing of a slowdown, I think they will sit on their hands," said David Wyss, chief economist at Standard & Poor's Co. in New York. "There is enough evidence of a slowdown that the Fed can feel its job is done."

Another report did show that construction spending shot up by a bigger-than-expected 1.4 percent in August, but that was the first increase after four consecutive declines as building activity has been dampened this year by higher interest rates.

"The soft landing is in full swing, and the Fed is on hold for the foreseeable future," said Gerald Cohen, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

Rates on short-term securities rise during auction

WASHINGTON (AP) - Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction. The Treasury Department sold $1.5 billion in one-month bills at a discount rate of 6.075 percent, up from 6.005 percent last week. An additional $9.5 billion was sold in six-month bills at a rate of 6.040 percent, up from 5.985 percent. The three-month rate was the highest at 6.14 percent, when the bills sold for 6.140 percent, and the six-month rate also was the highest since that date, when the rate was 6.100. The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors. A 2.57 percent return for three-month bills, with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,846.40, and 6.318 percent for a six-month bill offering for $9,694.60.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, fell to 6.08 percent last week from 6.09 percent the previous week.

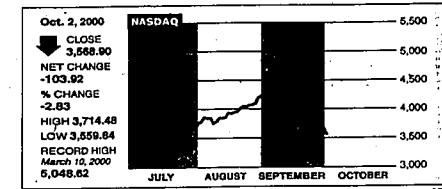

Landlords

landlord dispute is a civil matter, not a police problem. The police department advises property owners and managers to go through the courts and obtain court orders to show to police if they want to evict someone from a home.

Landlords sometimes think they can set even lower limits than the Fair Housing Act sets for the number of occupants in a certain type of apartment or house, Luna said. That's not all. "In the Twin Falls market, there are quite a few landlords or property managers that discriminate against college students" because they're young or landlords think they'll be noise problems, Luna said.

Stocks end day mixed; tech pulls down market

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices were mixed Monday as investors worried about corporate profits and the moderating economy once again unloaded technology issues. Blue chips faded somewhat better, but were unable to rally the overall market because of ongoing fears that third-quarter results for many of Wall Street's highest profile and most expensive stocks will be disappointing.

Standard & Poor's 500 index was off 0.28 at 1,436.23. "The volatility is going to stay with us because valuations for stocks aren't cheap, especially in technology," said Rick Jandrini, chief investment officer for equity securities at Banc One Investment Advisors in Columbus, Ohio. "In 1999, the market was just dominated by technology and this year it's totally different. The non-tech part of the market is doing better."

Snodgrass aces with Sargent around

TWIN FALLS — After Verne Snodgrass of Twin Falls aced the third hole at Candleridge Golf Course Monday, he might have thanked Bill Sargent for serving as his good-luck charm. Sargent, who along with Duane Schrank witnessed Snodgrass make the 125-yard shot with an 8-iron, has observed no fewer than four holes in one at Candleridge Golf Course. But it was the first career ace for the 69-year-old Snodgrass, who has played for nine years.

Dunn, Floyd take Sky player honors

OGDEN, Utah — Charles Dunn, who rushed for 201 yards to lead Portland State to a 42-10 win over Northern Arizona, was named the Big Sky Conference offensive player of the week. His teammate, Rashad Floyd, received the defensive player of the week award. Dunn carried the ball 22 times and leads the conference with an average of 181.2 yards per game. Floyd scored the Vikings' first touchdown with a 42-yard interception return and scored a second on an 87-yard fumble return. He also had seven tackles in the game. Floyd and Brightful also were named two of the five national NCAA Division I-AA players of the week.

Correction

A Monday sports brief listed an incorrect order of finish for last weekend's IGA Tournament of Champions at Elkhorn Resort. Merril Lyn Gibbs won the women's championship with a 156 in the Champions Division. Club Champions Division entrant Stephanie Friley also had a 156 and topped her division, but lost to Gibbs in a playoff. Marilyn Reynolds of Boise won the women's senior title with a 169. Complete results for both men and women in each of the six divisions can be found in Scores and Stats, Page D3, today.

Cameron, not Junior, leads M's to playoffs

With solid defense and speed, Mike Cameron has helped the Seattle Mariners into the postseason for the first time since 1997.

Cameron, 27, made it to the playoffs in his first season with the Mariners, who clinched the AL wild card with a victory in their regular season finale in Anaheim. They open the postseason against the AL Central champion White Sox today in Chicago.

“It's going to be a very emotional series for me,” said Cameron, who was with the Mariners last year.

Duval is back to form

The Associated Press

FIVE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — David Duval needed only one week to answer two critical questions about his career — his back is fine, and so is his game.

The next hurdle could take a little longer. While Duval made a spectacular return by winning the Bulch Challenge, Tiger Woods was in the middle of his victory.

“We all know Tiger Woods is the best player in the game, and that he's better prepared than everyone else,” Duval said. “You can talk about it until you're blue in the face, but somebody's got to go out there and do something about it.”

Maybe that somebody will be Duval. Strong enough to finish a tournament for the first time since the British Open because of a sprained ligament in his back, part-time Sun Valley resident Duval made 16 birdies during the weekend, including three on the final four holes, for a two-stroke victory over Nick Price and Jeff Maggert. It was his first victory of a season that, until Sunday, had been a lost cause.

And there are still miles of ground to cover.

While Duval was flat on his back for six weeks while recuperating in Idaho, Woods won three of the four tournaments he played — the PGA Championship, the World Golf Championship event at Firestone and the Canadian Open. Duval won for the first time in 29 tournaments, dating to the BellSouth Classic in the spring of 1999. During that span, Woods won 16 times, including five majors, and nearly as much money as Duval has made in his career.

“That's OK,” Duval said. “Eighteen months ago, everyone was asking what's wrong with Tiger. Memories are short out here, as they are in every sport.” Eighteen months ago, Duval

Lorenzen is large and in charge

Bigger is better for Kentucky QB

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jared Lorenzen was born big — really big.

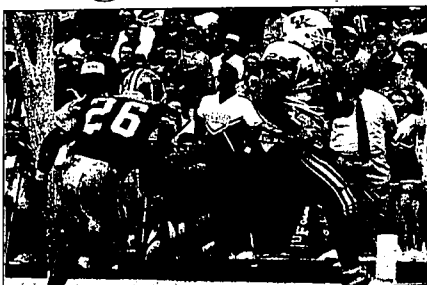

He was 13 pounds at birth and by the time he was in school he was the biggest kid around, towering over classmates and dreaming of playing football at Kentucky. When he graduated from Highlands High School in Fort Thomas, he was all-state in football and basketball.

Now a redshirt freshman, Lorenzen is listed at 6-foot-4, 275 pounds. Coaches say he's probably closer to 300 pounds.

Pretty big for a quarterback, huh?

“I really don't know what it's like not to be big,” Lorenzen said. “I love it to be honest with you. It gets everyone's attention. If people want to focus on my size, that's fine. That's the first thing they see. But I think people will be talking about things other than my size by the time the season is over.”

They are. Despite Kentucky's

Kentucky's freshman quarterback Jared Lorenzen scores a touchdown against Florida Saturday, Sept. 23. At nearly 300 pounds, he is one of the biggest quarterbacks in college football history.

2-3 record, Lorenzen ranks second nationally in completions (137) and passing yardage (1,598) and is second to Purdue's Drew Brees in total offense at 329.4 yards per game. Kentucky plays South Carolina on Saturday. Lorenzen's line reads: 137-of-

Long ball lifts Chiefs

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — There's nothing like a 73-yard play to snarl momentum away from one football team and give it to the other.

The Kansas City Chiefs, trailing 17-7 and backed up to their own 5-yard-line late in the third period, got a giant spark from Elvis Grbac's big completion to Derrick Alexander, who scored 17 straight points to beat the Seattle Seahawks 24-17 Monday night.

Both teams had won their last two games after losing their first two.

The Seahawks were in control for 2.5 quarters. They took a 17-7 lead on a 27-yard field goal in the third quarter by rookie Rian Lindell, who was making his first NFL start. But four minutes later, Grbac stepped back from his own 5 and hit Alexander streaking down the right side, beating Shawn Springs and going 73 yards before Reggie Tongue dragged him down from behind.

One play later, Alexander beat Springs in the end zone on a 17-yard pass, giving the Chiefs a 3-play scoring drive, with Grbac to Alexander accounting for 90 of the 95 yards.

After Eric Hicks' third sack of Jon Kina forced the Seahawks to punt a few minutes later, the Chiefs drove to the Seattle 8 and Pete Stoyanovich tied it at 17 with a 27-yard field goal with 3:18 into the fourth quarter.

Then, with all the momentum belonging to the Chiefs, Dante Hall sped 22 yards with a Seattle punt and the Chiefs took their first lead of the night with 4:26 left when Mike Cloud beat Willie Williams in the end zone on a 15-yard touchdown run.

Aided by six penalties against the Chiefs for 32 yards, the Seahawks burned nine minutes off the clock with their first possession. Hicks, after sacking Kina for a 10-yard loss, was flagged 15 yards for taunting. Then, a penalty against defensive tackle Dan Williams for having his hands to the face turned Seattle's fourth-and-5 into a first down at the Chiefs' 40.

Between Hicks and his own center exchange, Kina had trouble all night. Hicks had three sacks, increasing his season total to an AFC-leading seven. And Kina fumbled the exchange three times, each time falling onto the ball to avoid the turnover.

The Chiefs failed in their attempt to set an “on-site” NFL attendance record when only 4,391 showed up in adjacent Kaufman Stadium to watch the game on the giant video board. Combined with the sellout crowd of 78,502, the total attendance of 82,893 fell almost 8,000 short.

Can Bonds, Piazza and Clemens answer?

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball writer

Barry Bonds, Roger Clemens and Mike Piazza have spent their whole careers winning awards, making All-Star appearances and posing Hall of Fame stars.

In October, though, their numbers don't always add up.

Bonds and Piazza have barely hit 200 without much power, and Clemens is merely a 500 pitcher in the postseason.

They get a chance to change that this week.

Rick Ankiel is scheduled to throw the first pitch of the playoffs today when St. Louis takes on Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves.

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa, a master of gamesmanship, pulled the first surprise of the postseason Monday. With 20-game winner Darryl Kile expected to pitch Game 1, La Russa instead said his starter would be Ankiel, a 21-year-old rookie.

"I think it's going to be a conversation stopper," La Russa said. Said Braves manager Bobby Cox "Is he going to do that?" Maddux, a four-time Cy Young winner, is 10-10 in 23 career postseason starts. He'll get a break, as will the other Atlanta pitchers - Cardinals slugger Mark McGwire will only be a pinch-hitter, slowed by tendinitis in his right knee.

"There's nothing I can do about it," McGwire said.

Later in the day, the best-of-5 AL playoffs begin. The Seattle Mariners will visit the Chicago White Sox and Clemens will start for the New York Yankees at the Oakland Athletics.

On Wednesday, Piazza and the New York Mets will visit Bonds and the San Francisco Giants.

Clemens earned his first World Series victory last year when he finished off the Yankees' second consecutive sweep.

The Rocket's strong outing against the Braves left him 3-3 in 12 lifetime starts in the postseason. All in all, a record not quite befitting the pitcher who has won a record five Cy Youngs.

Clemens struggled after being hit in the right hamstring by a hard grounder off the bat of DETROIT'S BRAD AUSMUS IN LATE SEPTEMBER. THE YANKEES STUMBLING, TOO, LOSING THEIR FINAL SEVEN GAMES OF THE REGULAR SEASON - THE WORST ACID EVER FOR A TEAM ENTERING POSTSEASON PLAY.

Clemens and the Yankees did not seem too worried.

"I think you'll see the intensity there," Clemens said.

Against the Athletics, Clemens will return to the site of one of his postseason lowlights.

In Game 4 of the 1990 AL playoffs between Boston and the A's at the Coliseum, Clemens jawed with umpire Terry Cooney and wound up becoming the first person in playoff history to be ejected for arguing with an umpire while still in the game.

At Comiskey Park, the Mariners find themselves in a surprising position - in the playoffs without Ken Griffey Jr. Fred Garcia will start for Seattle against Jim Pate of the White Sox.

After trading Randy Johnson in 1998, Seattle sent away its greatest player in franchise history to Cincinnati for a package that included center fielder Mike Cameron and pitcher Brett Tomko.

THE RESULT? THE MARINERS WON A TEAM-RECORDED 91 GAMES AND THE METS AND LOS ANGELES.

"Regardless of how you slice it, we're going to the playoffs and the Reds are going home," Tomko said.

At Pacific Bell Park, Bonds and Piazza will be the main focus when the Giants and Mets meet.

Piazza is only 12-for-57 (.211) with two homers and seven RBIs in postseason series with the Mets and Los Angeles.

Bonds, in contention for his record fourth MVP award, has played in four postseason series and has never won one. He's 16-for-80 (.200) overall with only one home run and five RBIs.

Bonds praised Mets left-handers Mike Hampton and Al Leiter, who will start the first two games.

Hampton, 9-0 lifetime against San Francisco, will start the opener against Ivan Hernandez, MVP of the 1997 NLCS and the 1997 World Series.

"I'm giving them the respect they deserve," Bonds said. "All lefties are giving me trouble, but those guys are especially tough."

Payoff no longer equals payoff

NEW YORK (AP) - Hey, big spenders: The playoffs no longer are your private club.

After five seasons dominated by the high rollers, three teams from the bottom half of the payroll chart made the final eight this year, including the Oakland Athletics, just 25th in spending among the 30 major league teams.

The game is played on the field and not on paper," Chicago White Sox first baseman Paul Konerko said. "You can't measure how guys did all or how they will pull on one another.

Some things, you can't scout, and money has nothing to do with all that."

The New York Yankees entered the playoffs with a record payroll of $113.4 million, according to figures compiled by the commissioner's office and based on Aug. 31 rosters.

Among the other playoff teams, Atlanta is second ($95 million), the New York Mets fifth ($89.2 million), St. Louis eighth ($72.4 million), Seattle ninth ($62.6 million), San Francisco 18th ($54.2 million), the White Sox 21st ($35.9 million) and Oakland 25th ($32.7 million).

In the first five seasons after the 1994-95 strike, only one team not among the top half by payroll made the playoffs: The 1997 Houston Astros, who were 18th, were swept in the first round.

The eight postseason teams were all among the top 10 last year and the top 12 in 1998.

Four teams dance the managerial shuffle

Showalter, McKeon, Lamont and Francona get boot

PHOENIX (AP) - Buck Showalter was fired Monday as manager of the Arizona Diamondbacks after a disappointing season that saw the team go from division champions to third place.

Showalter, the only manager in the team's history, was hired in November 1995, 2 1/2 years before the Diamondbacks started play and one month after he led the New York Yankees to their first playoff berth in 14 years.

But his unsmiling personality proved his undoing when owner Jerry Colangelo decided that the roster of mostly veteran players needed a lighter touch.

Shawalter, 44, did not attend the news conference in a suite at the Bank One Ballpark, and Colangelo said he was in transit to Bristol, Conn., to do "some ESPN work."

He was the third manager fired Monday. Cincinnati's Jack McKeon and Pittsburgh's Gene Lamont lost their jobs earlier.

Colangelo said work would begin quickly on finding a Showalter's replacement.

"We want a solid baseball guy.

White Sox organization for his first eight seasons in pro baseball. "I'm going to do some damage any way I can."

Griffey, signed to Seattle through 2000, forced the Mariners to trade him early this year, and he told the franchise he would accept a trade only to Cincinnati.

In return, Seattle got Cameron, right-hander Tomko, minor league pitcher Jake Meyer and young infield prospect Antonio Perez.

Since the Mariners faced the prospect of losing Griffey as a free agent at the end of this season, they made the best deal possible.

Unlike Griffey, Cameron isn't an All-Star or a Gold Glove winner. Yet.

In his first season in Seattle, Cameron hit .267 with 19 home runs, 78 RBIs and 24 stolen bases. Batting leadoff in place of the slumping Rickey Henderson at least three occasions at Safeco Field.

Against the New York Yankees April 7 in Seattle, he leaped over the wall and took a home run away from Derek Jeter.

"He's showed me he's one of the best center fielders in the game on the Mariners," said Buhner, Griffey's best friend on the Mariners. "This is a huge ballpark and he covers a lot of ground. He's run down balls that I didn't think he'd get to."

Lorenzen's ascent at Kentucky was a stunner, too.

Lorenzen was redshirted as Durty Bonner took every snap and led Kentucky to a 6-6 record and second consecutive bowl appearance.

"He's big, he's physical and he can really throw. Everybody thinks he's just a big guy with a strong arm, but he's also very mobile."

Lorenzen threw for at least 325 yards and two TDs in each of his first four games, including a 363-yard, three TD performance against No. 3 Florida. On Saturday, he ran into a tough Mississippi defense, which staked him five times and
