Bomb rips

At least six sailors die from 'terrorist' attack on U.S. warship

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - A harbor work boat that was helping to moor a U.S. Navy destroyer in the ancient Arabian port of Aden suddenly exploded alongside the ship Thursday morning, killing at least six American sailors and injuring dozens in what President Clinton called an apparent act of terrorism.

Though severely damaged, the USS Cole was not in danger of sinking, Navy officials said here. But they feared the death toll would rise because 11 sailors were still missing hours after the massive blast, which left a hole 20 feet high and 40 feet wide in the warship's armored hull, made of half-inch-thick steel plates.

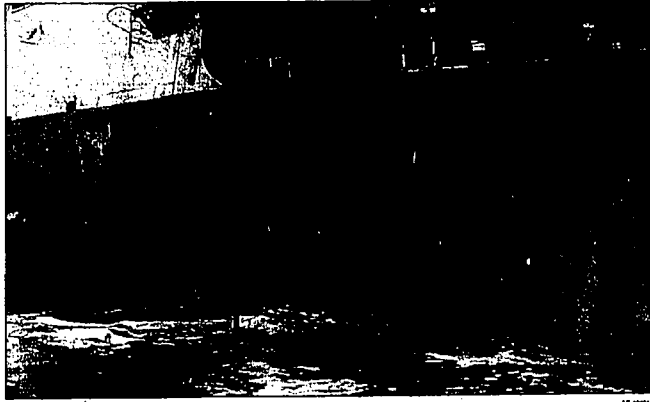

The attack was apparently a carefully planned terrorist act carried out by suicide bombers operating with inside information, Clinton administration officials and outside intelligence experts said Thursday.

The FBI formally opened a terrorism investigation, dispatching agents from the region as well as a specially-trained rapid deployment team based in Washington and laboratory experts to Yemen, Clinton administration officials said.

A long list of terrorist organizations have been linked to the process in Yemen, which the State Department considers a "safe haven for terrorist groups."

A number of those groups have links to Saudi terrorist Osama bin Laden, who emerged Thursday as a prime suspect in the blast. U.S. officials repeatedly emphasized, however, that it is not yet clear who perpetrated the deadly explosion aboard the USS Cole.

The powerful explosives that blew a hole in the warship were detonated from a 20-foot harbor vessel that aroused no suspicion because it was helping the warship approach a refueling facility in the harbor at the Yemen port of Aden, law enforcement officials said.

Crapo: Bombing an act of war against U.S.

By Sam Strike
States News Service

WASHINGTON - An apparent terrorist bombing of a U.S. Navy destroyer refueling in Yemen is an "act of war," one Idaho senator said.

"Clearly a crime has been committed. I consider this to be an act of war against a U.S. destroyer," said Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho.

The perpetrators of the attack remain unclear, U.S. sources said Thursday, but many on Capitol Hill were quick to suggest a long, hard look at U.S. policies in the Middle East. "We have always known of risks in the Middle East," Crapo said.

Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, said whoever is responsible should be punished by "retaliation."

"If you let this deter us from what we think is the right thing, then they've essentially won," he said.

At least six Americans were killed and 11 were missing after an explosion was triggered by a small boat that had pulled up next to the USS Cole, while it was in port for refueling at Aden.

Yemen. It was unclear Thursday whether any Idahoans were on board.

Depending on the source of the attack, Crapo said, the United States should take steps to hold the attackers accountable.

Simpson said the United States should be reserved judgment about who is responsible for the attack until the facts are clear.

The attack on the USS Cole heightens tensions in the Middle East and shows that there is "a price to pay sometimes for our extended involvement around the world," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

As a result, Craig said, "(It's) essential to sustain a well-equipped military force."

Israel strikes after killing of its soldiers

Combined wire reports

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip - In a day of incendiary violence in the Middle East peacemaking in ashes, Israeli helicopters rocketed Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's compound Thursday in retaliation for the mutilation of three Israeli soldiers by a mob of enraged Palestinians.

The new frenzy of killing quickly resonated around the world. As diplomats struggled to prevent the violence from escalating into full-scale war, the Study adds to evidence that fiber does not prevent colon cancer

The Associated Press

LONDON - Evidence is mounting that fiber might not prevent colon cancer after all, with a new study suggesting that one type of supplement might even be bad for the colon.

The theory that a high-fiber diet wards off the second-leading cancer killer has been around since the 1970s, but the evidence was never strong. The concept began to crumble last year when the first of three major U.S. studies found it had no effect.

In the latest study, published this week in The Lancet medical journal, European researchers found that precancerous growths, or polyps, were slightly more likely to recur in those taking a certain fiber supplement.

The findings demonstrate the difficulty of trying to figure out the relationship between nutrition and disease, said Dr. Michael Thun, who heads epidemiological research for the American Cancer Society.

Fiber is particularly complicated, he said, because there are various types and they all could act differently.

Thun said the American Cancer Society will revisit its recommendations on fiber and colon cancer in light of the growing body of evidence eroding support for the theory that it wards off the disease.

Experts recommend a low fat, high-fiber diet rich in fruits and vegetables and whole grains because it has been shown to reduce the risk of heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes and some other cancers.

"There is definitely something dietary going on with bowel cancer, but we haven't really been able to fix on what it is," said Dr. Tim Key, a cancer researcher at Oxford University who was not connected with the study. "The cause of colorectal cancer is very far from understood."

Plant seeks fees

Cheese firm seeks legal fees after Jerome drops annexation bid

By Brandon Flato
Times-News writer

JEROME - City officials could be facing a double whammy in their high stakes struggle with Jerome Cheese Co.

The city has given up its goal to annex Jerome Cheese, a move that could have brought the city some $300,000 a year in new tax revenue. And now company officials are seeking legal fees from the city, which could exceed $100,000.

It's unclear whether a city could annex a property of more than 5 acres, without landowner approval, Williams said. Jerome Cheese has long fought Jerome's bid to annex the plant. Company officials have said they had a handshake agreement with city officials, who promised not to annex the plant.

"There's no current attempt to annex Jerome Cheese because there are too many legal clouds as to how it can be done," said Roy Williams, Jerome's city attorney. "The annexation statute makes it unclear whether we can successfully annex Jerome Cheese... Because it's unclear the city won't proceed."

If the company were annexed, it would have paid nearly $300,000 a year in property taxes to the city, the city's 2000-01 budget totals about $9 million.

Jerome Cheese now wants the city to pay its legal bills stemming from the city's protest of a water transfer.

In its push for annexation, the city in March protested a water transfer that would make Jerome Cheese completely independent of city water, said Jon Davis, Jerome Cheese's general manager.

"We've spent over $100,000 in the past six months on attorney's and expert witness fees," Davis said. "We have a right to go after fees created by the city's protest."

The city appealed the water transfer twice, Jerome Cheese attorney Christopher Meyer said. The city's first appeal was to Glen Saxson, a Water Resources hearing officer, who rejected it. The city then appealed to the Water Resources director, who will review the decision.

After the first appeal failed, Jerome Cheese wanted the city to pay its attorney fees, claiming the city's appeal was frivolous. The city then filed a second appeal, Meyer said.

The city's just looking out for the best interests of Jerome residents, Williams said. At a Water Resource hearing, it was determined the city would suffer short-term economic losses of $41,000 if Jerome Cheese leaves the city water system, Williams said.

ing to broker a truce to end two weeks of daily fighting. But it degenerated swiftly, with both sides unleashing pent-up rage.

The Palestinians inflicted the worst losses yet on Israeli troops, staged unprecedented attacks on high-profile Palestinian targets and tanks rumbled to the outskirts of Palestinian cities.

One Israeli rocket struck 150 feet from Arafat's seaside residential headquarters, with the Palestinian leader inside at the time, his aides said.

"This is a declaration of war - a crazy war," said Saeb Erekat, a senior Palestinian official.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak said Arafat "does not appear to be a partner for peace at this time."

Barak said he held Arafat indirectly responsible for the killing of the soldiers, and said Israel would hunt down those involved.

He demanded that the United States publicly affix blame to Arafat for the collapse of the peace talks and the escalation of violence.

Thursday's turmoil appeared to extinguish hopes that Israel and the Palestinians could soon negotiate a truce and bring an end to 15 days of bloodshed that have left at least 95 people dead, the vast majority Palestinians.

The attack on Arafat's compound and other key Palestinian targets was the first major Israeli assault on important Palestinian sites since Arafat returned to the region in 1994 and the two sides launched negotiations aimed at a comprehensive settlement.

A smiling, defiant Arafat was cheered by hundreds of Palestinians as he toured the Gaza sites hit by rockets, including a power station, a government building and a police station. "Our people don't care, and don't hesitate to continue their march to Jerusalem, their capital of the independent Palestinian state," he said.

The violence had been waning this week, but erupted anew when Israeli reservist soldiers made a wrong turn and ended up near the center of the West Bank town of Ramallah, a flashpoint of fighting between Israeli troops and Palestinian rioters.

The soldiers, traveling in a civilian car, were chased by Palestinians and sought shelter in the Ramallah police station. Word of their presence spread, and more than 1,000 Palestinians surged toward the building.

Palstinian forces tried to keep the mob at bay, but about 10 men broke through a second-floor window where the Israelis were held. The attackers soon emerged with blood-covered hands as the crowd roared with approval.

The body of one Israeli soldier was thrown into the street, and a second was dangled down by a rope, where the corpse was stomped and beaten with iron bars. From the window, Palestinians shot at the invaders (left) gleeful "V for victory" signs. Both bodies were soaked in blood.

There was continued confusion about the number of Israeli soldiers killed. The army said two bodies were handed over to Israel. However, Barak later told CNN that three soldiers were "lynched and mutilated."

Before Thursday, only one Israeli soldier had been killed in the fighting.

"We want the department to reconsider their decision based on the economic impact on Jerome," he said. "We want compensation from Jerome Cheese for leaving the system."

"There would be a severe economic impact," Jerome City Councilman Joe Skaug said. "It would increase the rates of all the other users because they're such a large business. There would be drastically less money coming into city coffers."

But the appeals have no legal basis, company officials say.

"The city and Jerome Cheese have a contract, and under that contract the company can choose when to leave with no exit fee," he said. "The city's essentially going to Water Resources and asking them to rewrite their contract."

"The city thinks they can force us to use their water," Davis said.

Saxton said the city could have put an exit fee into their contract, but didn't.

Jerome Cheese is working to sever all ties to city services, Davis said. The city's water transfer appeal has delayed the company six months from leaving city water altogether, he said.

Jerome Cheese is trying to leave the city sewer system, and pipe the plant's 1 million gallons of waste water to a 620-acre site just south end of Gooding County.

That plan is tabled until the state's Department of Environmental Quality issues a preliminary draft permit for the project.

cials said. That is one indication the bombers had inside help, sources said.

The destroyer, en route to the Persian Gulf, was on a routine refueling stop that was scheduled to last only a few hours. "The watching from the deck, had no reason to suspect the 20-foot-tender boat, which had secured a line from the warship to a man-of-war and appeared to be returning for another line when it pulled along the Cole's port side and exploded in an apparent suicide attack, Navy officials said.

"If, as it now appears, this was an act of terrorism, it was a despicable and cowardly act," Clinton said. "We will find out who was responsible and hold them accountable. If their intention was to deter us from our mission of promoting peace and security in the Middle-East, they will fail utterly."

U.S. military forces around the world went on heightened security alert after the explosion, and the FBI dispatched a team of anti-terrorism investigators to the scene. Meanwhile, a Navy medical team flew to Aden Thursday to assess the condition of the 35 wounded, and a Navy air ambulance was on the way to evacuate them, if necessary.

As with many Navy surface ships, the Cole has men and women in its crew, and some female sailors were among the injured, Navy officials said.

The blast hit amidships and tore into an engine compartment and an engineering space filled with equipment, flooding both. The force of the explosion drove the ship's mess upward, into the deck above it, and rescue crews struggled all day to make their way through the sandwiched metal, according to a Pentagon official.

Had the explosion occurred a bit more forward or backward on the ship, it might have set off ordinance, including Tomahawk cruise missiles, causing an even more catastrophic explosion, a senior Navy official said.

Study: Meteorite may give new clues to origin of life

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a search for new clues about the origin of life, researchers worldwide are analyzing bits of a bus-sized meteorite that blazed to Earth last January in a spectacular fireball, giving science the most pristine primordial matter ever recovered.

The meteorite, estimated to weigh about 220 tons when it smashed into the atmosphere, shattered before it hit the ground and sprayed bits of space rock over a frozen lake in Canada's British Columbia.

More than 70 eyewitness saw the fireball and a week later Canadian Jim Brook, while driving on the ice of Tagish Lake, spotted bits of the meteorite.

Working in minus-20-degree temperatures, Brook collected about two pounds of the black, charcoal-like fragments in a plastic bag and stored them in a freezer.

Brook's careful handling will allow scientists to study matter that is virtually unchanged since the solar system formed some 4.6 billion years ago, said Peter G. Brown of the University of Western Ontario in London, Ontario, Canada. "These are the most pristine meteorite specimens on the planet right now," said Brown, author of a study appearing today in the Science.

Bill funds western fire prevention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western governors have won a major victory with President Clinton's signing of a key appropriations bill that earmarks about $1.6 billion for wildfire prevention over the next year.

The Interior Department budget includes cash to train firefighters, restore burned land and reduce the amount of fire-prone vegetation in forests. Land managers see it as just a start.

"Hazardous fuels reduction is not going to be a one-year deal," said Mike deLuz, incident commander for the Forest Service's Rocky Mountain region. "The big picture is a long-term effort involving the states, the communities, private landowners and the agencies."

In addition, the measure directs the Agriculture and

Interior secretaries to work with western governors on a 10-year comprehensive strategy that will fundamentally change federal wildfire and forest management policies.

The Western Governors' Association pressed for that during a meeting with Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman last month in Salt Lake City.

"This summer, any justification for continuing the status quo forest policy just went up in flames," Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, who heads the governors' association, said in a statement. "Clearly, it is time for a new policy, one that's based upon scientific principles, and one that focuses on forest health."

Engineer gets NASA recognition

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A NASA engineer who spied a 4-inch pin wedged against space shuttle Discovery's fuel tank will get a medal for quite possibly saving the lives of seven astronauts who are now en route to the international space station.

Jorge Rivera, 43, was a reluctant hero Thursday, saying he was just doing his job of the past 19 years.

He spotted the pin shortly before the shuttle was supposed to lift off Tuesday night.

The launch was scrubbed, the pin was removed, and Discovery finally blasted off Wednesday night on NASA's 100th shuttle flight.

On Thursday, meanwhile, Discovery gained on the space station with each lap of the Earth in a high-speed chase set to end with a docking today.

Discovery's astronauts may have to attempt the rendezvous without the use of the main shuttle antenna.

The dish-shaped antenna abruptly stopped working Thursday; it is needed to beam down TV images from Discovery and doubles as a radar tool.

Rivera and the rest of the debris-inspection team are normally looking for any ice on the external tank, which is filled with super-cold fuel.

Because of the danger of being so close to explosive fuel, only volunteers are recruited.

Clinton may visit North Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Down to his last 100 days in office and eager for a foreign policy breakthrough, President Clinton is contemplating a trip to North Korea that would mark the first presidential visit to the reclusive communist nation. The visit would be an attempt to mend a relationship finally on the upswing after a half century of confrontation.

The disclosure came in a joint U.S.-North Korean communique issued Thursday at the conclusion of a visit by Jo Myong Rok, a special envoy and top aide to North Korean leader Kim Jong Il. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said she plans her own trip to North Korea before the end of the month as part of the rapidly developing relationship.

A Clinton visit to North Korea would have been considered inconceivable as recently as a few months ago. For decades, the relationship was marked by unrelenting hostility, the residue of their 1950-53 war that claimed the lives of more than 33,000 Americans and an untold number of North Koreans.

Jo, a top general, was treated with great deference during his two-day visit, notwithstanding the absence of diplomatic relations between the two countries and Pyongyang's role as one of seven countries the State Department deems to be as state sponsors of terrorism.

His friendly reception here reflected the administration's keen interest in opening a new chapter in relations with Pyongyang and in easing long-running tensions in Northeast Asia.

Chinese plant to make abortion pill

BEIJING (AP) — A leading Chinese pharmaceutical company that has made the abortion pill RU-486 for at least seven years will manufacture the drug for the U.S. market, officials said Thursday.

The China link adds to the controversy that has suffused RU-486's hotly contested entry to the United States. Anti-abortion campaigners have fought for eight years to keep the pill off the U.S. market have criticized China's widespread use of abortion, some of them forced, to limit family size.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the pill two weeks ago for U.S. consumption, but did not disclose the manufacturer's identity and location because of safety and security concerns.

The drug distributor in the United States, Danco Laboratories, has also refused to identify the company.

Navy: Protection not always possible

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — How could a small boat creep up and blow a crippling hole in the side of a U.S. Navy Aegis destroyer, one of the world's most formidable ships?

Easily — at least under the peculiar circumstances of Thursday's attack on the USS Cole, said several senior Navy officers, including one who recently commanded a destroyer in the Persian Gulf.

For more than a decade, the Navy has conducted extensive counter-terrorist training to try to prevent such attacks, and the Cole had its required security plan in place — including armed sailors on deck — when it steamed into the port of Aden in Yemen for refueling. But Navy officers said there was virtually no way to protect against an inside operation in which a friendly tender boat, which was helping to carry munitions cables from the American warship, exploded in an apparent suicide attack.

Given "the nature of this particular situation," Defense Secretary William Cohen said at a Pentagon news conference, it would have been "very difficult if not impossible to protect against this type of incident."

Indeed, one Navy officer said he probably would court-martial any sailor who opened fire with a machine gun on a local boat participating in a legitimate operation, even if the sailor had a hunch that something was amiss. Nor was it any surprise that a best-sell high explosives could punch a hole 20 feet high and 40 feet wide in the hull of the Cole, experts said.

Tomasz Wierzbicki, director of the Impact and of Crashworthiness Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, noted that modern missiles can wreak considerable damage with just a small amount of explosives. What the attacking boat lacked in speed and precision, he said, it made up for with the size of the bomb, which he said probably contained hundreds of pounds of high explosives.

"The (Cole) was lucky," said Wierzbicki, a professor of applied mechanics. "If the explosives had been slightly below the waterline, they could have lost the ship."

As the Navy began to assess the implications of the attack on the Cole, several officers recalled two incidents in the Mideast during the 1980s. One was the May 1987 attack by an Iraqi warplane that fired two Exocet anti-ship missiles into the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf, killing 37 American sailors. The Stark's skipper subsequently was reprimanded and pushed into retirement.

A year later, the USS Vincennes, also operating in the Gulf, mistook an Iranian airliner for a hostile fighter jet and shot it down, killing all 290 people aboard. A subsequent Pentagon investigation exonerated the Vincennes' captain, but talk continued for several years in the Navy that he had acted overly aggressively.

When a captain realizes that his ship may be under unconventional attack, said naval expert Harlan Ullman, he has to decide almost instantly how to respond, knowing that an error in either direction could result in a court-martial. "Is it going to be an Iranian or Stark?" Ullman said. "And what if it is just a Greenpeace raft or something?"

Retired Navy Capt. P.T. Deutermann remembers, for example, commanding the USS Tattalon on "picket duty" off the coast of Lebanon in 1984 when a small plane flew directly at his ship. He tracked it for several miles as it approached, determined that it was flying "the kamikaze pattern we had been warned about" and prepared to shoot it down. He was overruled by a superior officer. The aircraft then turned away.

Navy families wait, worry after bombing of USS Cole

Newport News (Va.) Daily Press

NORFOLK, Va. — Their spouses train to go "in harm's way." But Navy families were still shocked by Thursday's blast ripping a gaping, jagged and blackened hole into the USS Cole.

Information about sailors' fates was slow in coming. That made the wait excruciating for family members desperate for any word if their loved ones were dead, wounded or all right.

While waiting and hoping, Navy families did what they've done best for generations in crises: They pulled together.

The wife of Gunner's Mate Jeffrey P. Brown, who asked that her first name not be published, was coping the best she could, with prayer and help from friends and neighbors.

The Navy was providing her and other family members a personal counselor, free long-distance calls, child care and a place to meet.

"But they don't have any information," Brown said, her voice straining slightly at times.

"That's the worst thing. Right now, I'm on pins and needles. It's just bad."

"Just not knowing is the hardest part. I can't grieve because I don't know what to grieve for."

The Navy told Cole family members it would fly them to a military hospital in Germany if their spouses were injured, she said. Some might dread such a trip. Not Brown.

"I would rather fly to Germany and pick him up with no arms and legs," she said, "than to meet a casket at the airport."

Spouses whose loved ones were not on the Cole sympathized. But they also were relieved. "You got a lot of mixed emotions," said Tammy Martin, whose husband serves on an aircraft carrier. She also provides long-term care for the children of sailors, often for as long as a six-month deployment.

"Your thoughts and prayers go out to them and you know how they feel, but then in the same breath you think, 'Thank God, it's not me.' You feel guilty about feeling that way."

Among Palestinians, talk of revenge

Los Angeles Times

GAZA CITY - Even before an enraged Palestinian mob lynched Israeli soldiers in the West Bank town of Ramallah on Thursday, the talk here was of revenge.

Gathered in angry knots around their wounded sons at Shifa Hospital, fingering weapons nervously at an empty resort that just three weeks ago hosted Israeli tourists, lingering at the junction where 22 Palestinians have died in clashes in the past two weeks, Gazans said that this fight is not over. They said they are unhappy that mass demonstrations subsided Tuesday after Israeli authorities issued an ultimatum to Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat.

"Certainly, I don't agree with Abu Ammar," said 19-year-old Habbib Abu Zaid, using Arafat's nom de guerre. "And I don't accept his negotiating with the Israelis. I am angry that the demonstrations have stopped."

His anger was echoed by the uncle of an 11-year-old boy, Sami abu Jezzari, as the child lay dying in Shifa Hospital on Wednesday, the day after he was shot in the head by Israeli troops in southern Gaza. "We believe in God," said the uncle, who would give only his first name, Mohammed. "God said that our confrontation with the Jews is religious. We believe that it has come back to this real fact."

North of Gaza City at the Al Wihah resort, a monument that an Israeli peace group donated to the hotel has become a gathering spot for Palestinian security forces. "May Peace Prevail on Earth" is written in English, Arabic, Hebrew and Japanese on the simple white post. The gunmen cluster on the lawn around it, peering warily up the road, waiting to see whether fighting will erupt. "The Israeli soldiers at the checkpoint on the road fire this way sometimes, and we fire back," explained one member of the group, who refused to give his name. Across Gaza, Palestinians talk bitterly of their dead and wounded, and of finding a way to extract a greater toll in blood from the Israelis, whose casualties have been far fewer. News agencies that have kept track say about 2,000 Palestinians have been wounded and more than 90 killed. Palestinians insist that the numbers are higher, with as many as 3,000 wounded and more than 100 dead.

The day turns sour fast for Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) - Thursday was supposed to be a day of foreign policy highs for President Clinton. He was rolling back sanctions against Yugoslavia, where democracy has sprouted anew, and revealing the prospect of a historic visit to North Korea.

But those glowing feats fell victim to sad foreign policy events: A deadly attack on a Navy destroyer docked in Yemen and intensified violence in the Middle East that even Clinton said is melting the prospects for peace "before our very eyes."

Just two days earlier, the White House basked in the glow of history. Clinton met with Jo Myong Rok, special envoy for North Korean leader Kim Jong Il, to discuss, among other things, what North Korea could do to be removed from the list of state sponsors of terrorism.

Before Jo's visit ended, a joint U.S.-North Korean communique revealed that Clinton is considering becoming the first U.S. president to visit the reclusive communist nation - something seen as inconceivable just weeks ago.

After a day of fund-raising speeches in Pennsylvania, Clinton looked tranquil and happy Wednesday night as he stepped off of Air Force One, shopping bag from Tiffany & Co. in hand, heading home to Chappaqua, N.Y. so he and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton could celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Clinton had loose plans to return to Washington early Thursday, announce that he was lifting an oil embargo and a flight ban against Yugoslavia, then spend the morning playing golf. Aides prepared press releases trumpeting the sanctions removal as "a first step toward ending Serbia's isolation."

Instead, the president was awakened early Thursday by his national security adviser with news that a small boat had exploded beside the USS Cole as it docked in the Arabian Peninsula.

President Clinton arrives at Andrews Air Force Base Thursday from New York.

Crossroads can ask, but Jerome doesn't have to give

There are two abiding truths surrounding the long-unanswered question of sewer service for Crossroads Ranch in Jerome County. One is that Crossroads owner Arlen Crouch has every right to seek it. The second is that the city of Jerome is under no obligation to provide it.

Lack of sewer service is one, if not the only reason why the property, near the intersection of Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93, is still undeveloped. Crouch says he can't build an on-site sewage plant, or use septic tanks, because they probably wouldn't meet environmental standards. Remember, Crossroads lies near the spring that supplies the city of Twin Falls with most of its water.

So Crouch is looking for others who can provide sewage treatment for him. His most likely prospect is the city of Jerome's sewer plant, located a few miles to the west.

Crouch says he's willing to pay for sewer service, but there are other costs to consider. For starters, there's the cost of trenching and laying pipe from Crossroads to the sewer plant; that bill alone could top $3 million. Crouch says he's seeking grants to cover the cost, but nothing has been settled.

Meanwhile, basic questions remain. Even if it were connected to the city's sewer plant, Crossroads still wouldn't contribute to the city's tax base, because it is miles outside the Jerome city limits. Why should Jerome residents allow Crossroads to use their sewer plant when Crossroads wouldn't pay city taxes?

And why let Crossroads consume city sewerage capacity that could go to a customer that does contribute to the city's tax base?

The Jerome sewer plant is operating at about two-thirds of its maximum capacity of 2.3 million gallons a day. A contract with Crossroads would likely finance a major sewer plant expansion.

Crouch is an honorable man with prodigious business skills. He says he wants Crossroads to become a mecca for high-tech industry. Yet the only proposals we've seen have involved a livestock sale yard and a cheese processing plant that would dump treated liquid waste on the ground.

Crossroads Ranch is a prime location, smack in the middle of southern Idaho's transportation system. As a gateway to the Magic Valley, the area deserves to be developed thoughtfully.

It's conceivable that Crossroads' interests will coincide, at some future point, with the interests of Jerome's taxpayers. That day isn't here yet, and until it arrives, Jerome city leaders are right to reject the Crossroads request.

Gore loses ground in the debates

When Al Gore and George W. Bush debated on the Wake Forest campus Wednesday night, the 2000 election emerged more clearly than ever before as a choice between a liberal and a conservative. That is good news for Bush and a problem for Gore.

The Washington Post-ABC News poll released on the eve of the debate showed that by a margin of 58 percent to 32 percent, registered voters said they preferred a smaller government with fewer services to a larger government offering more services.

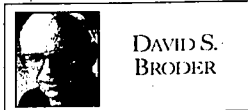

Six out of 10 identified Bush as advocating smaller government; seven out of 10 said they thought Gore was for larger government.

If that was the view going into the debate, those watching must have had it underlined and put into capital letters.

Whether it was the environment, health care, hate-crimes legislation or any other topic, Gore happily claimed the role of the governmental activist. And Bush lost no opportunity to counter with the observation that he would prefer to avoid what he called "top-down Washington directives."

This is the classic debate that has divided Republicans and Democrats at least since New Deal days, two-thirds of a century ago. But it is a choice that President Clinton tried to finesse with his "Third Way" politics and especially his declaration, following the Republican takeover of Congress, that "the era of big government is over."

Gore and his running mate, Sen. Joe Lieberman of Connecticut, are devotees of the Democratic Leadership Council, the headquarters of "Third Way" thinking. But on this night, at least, Gore sounded more like a traditional Democrat than an advocate of a new way.

DAVID S. BRODER

At one point, he seemed to sense the danger and insisted that "I want a smaller, or smarter government," not a behemoth on the Potomac. He referred to his "reinventing government" project, but did not have an opportunity to explain how he has been trying to improve the performance of the bureaucracy. And when Gore went after Bush for skimping on health care, environmental controls and protection of minorities who are targets of hate crimes in Texas, it sounded like the typical liberal critique of any conservative in office.

It is well known, of course, that many voters who say they want "small government" turn right around and endorse expanded budgets for education, health care, medical research, veterans benefits etc., etc. But the agenda of Wednesday's debate gave Gore few opportunities to identify himself with popular spending programs. Social Security, Medicare and prescription drugs were barely mentioned.

Only in his closing statement did Gore find a way to argue that Bush's tax cuts would come at the expense of school improvement programs. Even the foreign policy discussion, which dominated the first half of the Wake Forest debate, unexpectedly played into Bush's hands. This is one policy area where Gore clearly has the advantage of years of experience. But Bush appeared far more comfortable and less programmed - in Wednesday's extensive conversation on that topic than he had been in the brief exchanges that took place eight days earlier at the University of Massachusetts.

Moreover, the Third Way leaders, including Clinton, British Prime Minister Tony Blair, Gore and Lieberman, have been far more interventionist in foreign affairs than most congressional conservatives. In the debate, it was Gore who defended the use of troops for "nation building" in places like Haiti and who argued that the United States could not turn away from the challenges of genocide or "ethnic cleansing" anywhere in the world. Bush was the skeptic, enunciating a "national interest" test that would reserve deployments for those instances where vital strategic assets of the United States and its allies are at risk.

On the international scene, this is metaphorically the difference between "big government" and "small government" thinkers. And, once again, public opinion clearly supports a more confined role for the United States.

Two other things were notable about this debate. The biggest concerns held by Bush are their fears about what he might do to the Supreme Court and the economy. Not a word was said about either subject.

Gore has to find a way in the final debate to put these issues back on the agenda. For most of this year, people have been asking, "How could Gore not win in a time of peace and prosperity such as we now enjoy?" But voters have been telling me and other reporters all year they give Gore almost no credit for helping create these conditions.

And if he allows the debate to be framed as a choice between a big-government liberal and a small-government conservative, he could lose.

David S. Broder is a Washington Post columnist.

LETTER

Bush is a dire choice

Bush says he's a compassionate, experienced governor who will restore honesty and integrity to the presidency. Here's some of the truth:

G.W. has approved more than 135 executions. He reduced the time he spends reviewing death penalty cases from 30 to 15 minutes. Asked if he spoke to Karla Faye Tucker, executed in 1998, he said there was no point in it, then mocked the dead woman by whining in a high voice, "Please don't kill me!"

In Texas, the governor doesn't have a cabinet, write the budget or manage the state bureaucracy or finances. The governor of Arkansas has 1,400 people reporting to him; G.W. has 137.

In the Texas Air National Guard in 1972, G.W. received a transfer to the Alabama Air National Guard. There is no record that he ever showed up. Yet, instead of being court-martialed for going AWOL, he was honorably discharged a year later.

G.W. says he had "some kind of desk job," but he can't remember where, for whom or for what. G.W.'s oil company was never successful, yet attracted millions of dollars from wealthy Republicans. In 1982, with a book value of $382,376, he sold one-tenth of it for $1 million. When G.W.'s father became president, Bahrain suddenly gave his company a lucrative exclusive drilling contract. When G.W., a member of the board and audit committee, sold his stock at $4 a share, he was legally required to disclose the transaction. He didn't disclose it until eight months later, after the price tanked to $1 a share.

His 2 percent interest in the Texas Rangers, bought for $606,000 of borrowed money, was increased to 12 percent without him putting up another dime and was sold for more than $14 million.

How do you feel about voting for a personable, inexperienced, incompetent guy with the perfect name that some rich people are using to buy the presidency of the United States?

Democrats will break the bank

I will vote for George W. if for no other reason than his promise or pledge that if elected he will secure the current Social Security surplus. Unlike his opponent, Al Gore, who has indicated approval or other than Social Security benefits. His argument being this will strengthen the U.S. economy, thus creating more employment, thus more Social Security taxes being generated. I'm not an expert on economics, but I do know this - that once the Democrats divert Social Security funds for "other debts," a precedent will be set and they will continue that deception every year until they break the (Social Security) bank. Not so fast with entitlements

As we again have the privilege of choosing a new president, we find America in the business of seeking more pleasures, larger salaries, accepting matching funds from the U.S. Treasury and putting on the dark glasses, which can cloud the view of the road ahead.

If you are part of those families making $100,000 a year or less, an X in the right column brings entitlement.

Not so fast with the pencil, says Gov. Bush with his down-to-earth long-term goals. Speaking his heart, George W. offers a challenge to the $100,000-a-year Americans and a time to look back to presidents who dealt with the ingredients which really define us nationally and abroad: remember, Dick Cheney is only two doors down the hallway. Don't take abortion lightly

Craig Wutrich's letter in the Oct. 6 edition of The Times-News was nothing but an avenue for him to show his lack of respect for women. I love how he put all of the responsibility of an unwanted pregnancy on the woman. He seems to think that a woman who has an unwanted pregnancy and would seek an abortion is a woman who "sets aside such mundane things as chastity, responsibility, the sanctity of marriage, etc." Apparently, the man involved in the unwanted pregnancy holds no responsibility in the situation. Mr. Wutrich, you know nothing about any woman's reasons to have an abortion or what she goes through before, during or after the decision has been made. How dare you or anyone assume it is taken as lightly as simply popping a pill and moving on. Your ideas are degrading and are best left to the privacy of your own head. LESLEY HOLLISTER Twin Falls

Terror is a bargaining tool in Israel

It has been said that politics is war by other means. War presumably is the result of failed politics. But what then is terrorism? Yasser Arafat has provided an answer. Recent events in Israel suggest that Palestinian-inspired terror is a pressure tactic to achieve a negotiating advantage.

It is neither war nor politics. Arafat understands that rock-throwing youths and well-armed policemen firing at Israeli soldiers offer the most significant leverage in his negotiations with Prime Minister Ehud Barak and President Clinton.

Moreover, the wave of violence promoted by Arafat with the helpful assistance of Hezbollah has been orchestrated to force Israel into concessions that go beyond Barak's generous (fool-hardy?) proposals.

In this context, peace means stability to Israelis and a return to the map of 1947 for Palestinians, a time when Israel as a state didn't exist.

Since the rioting began, Arafat has not said a word condemning the violence, claiming that, like with authoritarian control of the police, cannot stop teenagers from throwing rocks at Israeli soldiers. In fact, Arafat said: "The Palestinian people are inclined to continue the confrontation because it is beginning to bear fruit." Alas, that may be true.

Many Israelis believe that with just a few more concessions the violence will end and peace can be achieved. This view represents little more than the triumph of hope over reality.

The violence is turned off and on by Arafat as if it were a spigot. Ariel Sharon's visit to the Temple Mount was merely a pretext for riots. Months before, intelligence reports indicated the Palestinians were preparing for violence. And why not? It is Arafat's trump card. The cold-blooded lynching of two Israeli soldiers in Ramallah by a Palestinian mob, as well as an apparent terrorist attack on a U.S. Navy destroyer in Yemen that left at least five American sailors dead, suggest a level of premeditation not acknowledged in most accounts of Middle East events.

That American officials do not understand or fully appreciate what is going on is remarkable. The recent scene in which Secretary of State Madeleine

HERBERT LONDON

Albright runs after Arafat, beseeching him to return to the negotiating table, displays in all its symbolism how the State Department capitulates to terrorists.

Even now, with the evidence pouring in, U.S. officials refuse to point an accusatory finger at Arafat.

If Israel does not exist as a Jewish state, there will be tranquility. Without that eventuality there can only be violence. American utopians would be wise to appreciate this proposition. But hope does spring eternal and, after all, Clinton doesn't live in Tel Aviv or Jerusalem.

If this seems exaggerated, consider that Barak was willing to grant Arafat 95 percent of the West Bank and even share sovereignty over the Old City of Jerusalem — concessions no other Israeli leader has made or would make, since these moves could jeopardize national security.

Still, this was not enough for Arafat. Should Arafat re-enter negotiations, these Israeli concessions would be the starting point, not the goal. Clinton, eager for a peace of any kind as his historical legacy, will probably urge Barak to do even more than the dangerous proposals already on the table.

Philip Morris Introduces PaperSelect™

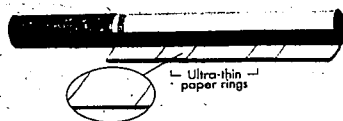

Now Featured on Merit Cigarettes.

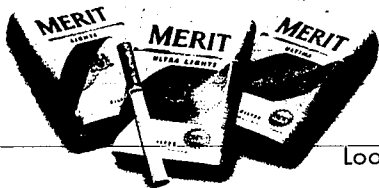

Cigarettes made with PaperSelect may be less likely to ignite certain fabrics.*

PaperSelect features ultra-thin paper rings that work like speed bumps, causing the cigarette to burn slower when the lit end crosses over them.

It may even put itself out when resting in an ashtray. You still get the same rewarding taste, only now with our patented cigarette paper.

Look for Merit cigarettes now made with PaperSelect.

*Cigarettes made with this paper were evaluated under a laboratory test method designed by the National Institute of Standards and Technology to measure the likelihood that cigarettes will ignite the three test fabrics specified in this test method. Under this testing method, these cigarettes produced fewer ignitions of the three test fabrics as compared to the same cigarettes made without the special paper. It is important to note that the test fabrics are not necessarily representative of the kinds of fabrics one might find in a particular home or elsewhere. These cigarettes are not "fire safe." Do not handle or dispose of cigarettes made with this special paper with any less care than other cigarettes. Anything that burns, including cigarettes or cigarette ashes, can cause a fire if handled carelessly.

Lawmakers discuss issues

By Michael Jousse
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Outgoing Rep. Randy Hansen won't be in Boise in three months to help decide where to spend the state's budget surplus of more than $280 million.

And he doesn't figure the money will last long, anyway. "They've already got it spent," said Hansen, R-Twin Falls, after reading off a list of agencies and other priorities that are jockeying for position to get some of the windfall. Hansen spoke

Thursday night during a panel on legislative issues, hosted by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and AT&T Cable Television.

The legislative issues discussion, aired live on cable television, was sparsely attended by the public and lawmakers; it was open only to lawmakers uncommitted in the Nov. 7 elections, and only Hansen and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, turned out.

The state's huge budget surplus, projected by some to be more than $280 million for the next budget year, was the major point of discussion.

The lawmakers said there is a long line of spending priorities and wish lists for the money, despite most lawmakers' agreement that some money should be returned to taxpayers in some form or another.

Potential budget line items could include $10 million for wildfire fighting bills, $29 million to cover a shortfall in the state Medicaid budget and money for building or renovating public schools across the state.

Hansen - who is giving up his seat in the House, and the Legislature's budget committee, before the coming session - warned the Legislature to not be lured into a spending frenzy that could cost the state down the road.

"If it's one-time expenditures, now may be the time," he said. "But if you put it in the base, you've committed the state."

State budget analysts don't expect the state's current technology-driven, urban economy to sustain the state's robust revenue collections on an extended basis, Noh said. So spending, and any tax cuts, must be prudent.

Twin Falls murder trial nears

Jury selection begins; possible jurors called

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Potential jurors were called Thursday to begin the jury selection process in a first-degree murder trial surrounding the 1997 killing of Twin Falls man Wayne Lafferty. Defendant Richard Dale Cheatham's trial won't actually begin until Oct. 31. He faces the death penalty if convicted.

Members of the jury pool were given questionnaires Thursday to help expedite jury selection, said 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl, who will preside over the case.

In complex, serious cases, the questionnaires have been shown to save as much as a day on jury selection, Meehl said.

Cheatham and Alicia Nicole Duyungan each have been charged with first-degree murder in connection with Lafferty's death.

His body was found Sept. 6, 1997, wrapped in a tarp and partially buried in the South Hills. An autopsy determined he died from multiple blows to the head.

The Idaho attorney general's office, which is prosecuting the cases, intends to seek the death penalty at both trials, spokesman Bob Cooper said. Duyungan's trial is set to begin Jan. 3, 2001.

The cases return to Meehl's courtroom after making their way up appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court, which ruled in June the defendants can be tried on first-degree murder charges.

Cheatham and Duyungan were arrested April 1998. The couple had lived next to Lafferty and often spent time with him in the months before his death.

Judge sentences Buhl vet

By Michael Jousse
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Buhl veterinarian, charged with lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor, was given what prosecutors called "a pretty stiff sentence" despite a character reference from a powerful state lawmaker.

Paul Mensinger, 41, was sentenced Wednesday to six months of retained jurisdiction, under the Department of Correction's supervision, after pleading guilty to lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor. After the six months, he could face a prison sentence of five to 10 years.

A number of Buhl residents - including Idaho Rep. Celia Gould, R-Buhl - testified for the defense during Mensinger's sentencing hearing Wednesday.

Most witnesses, including Gould, knew Mensinger only through his veterinary practice. "He worked on our animals," Gould said. "I was asked to testify because of that. I was simply asked what our relationship was, if I felt he was competent in his profession, and whether I felt he is an asset to the community as a veterinarian."

Gould said she believes Mensinger is a good veterinarian. She also said she does not feel he is a threat to the community.

Gould is chairwoman of the House's Judiciary, Rules and Administration Committee, and a possible successor to Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, now a candidate for Congress.

Gould has said she is interested in the Lieutenant governor's appointment, if it becomes vacant after the November election.

Mensinger pleaded guilty last month to fondling a teenage girl. But the victim says he attempted to have sexual intercourse with her.

Mensinger was originally charged after the 1997 incident. But because the victim was reluctant to proceed, the case was dropped with an option to revisit it if needed.

Smoke cancels classes at elementary school

By Aaron Brock
Times-News writer

DECLO - A circuit breaker was knocked out by a power surge Wednesday night causing a furnace fan at Declo Elementary School to malfunction.

The school was still filled with smoke Thursday morning so classes were canceled.

School officials discovered the problem about 6:45 a.m. Thursday, Principal Kevin Bushman said. Bus drivers were leaving at about that time and they instructed children to return home if a parent or guardian was there. There were no injuries.

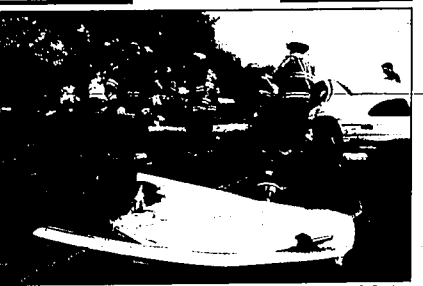

If there was no one at home, the students were bused to the school auditorium where they were supervised until a guardian could be reached, Bushman said. All students were picked up by 9 a.m., he said.

The power surge knocked out a fan that normally blows hot air to the classrooms. The furnace kicked on Thursday morning but the fan did not. As a result, the furnace overheated, causing the fan to stop and smoke to fill the school, Bushman said.

"There was a substantial amount of smoke," Bushman said.

SMASH-UP

Paramedics remove Michelle Farnsworth, 18, of Rupert, from her car on Falls Avenue in Twin Falls Thursday morning. Farnsworth's vehicle was hit by a pickup truck driven by Vickie Blunt, 38, of Gooding, as she tried to turn onto Falls Avenue from the College of Southern Idaho. Firefighters used extrication equipment - the 'jaws of life' - to remove Farnsworth from her vehicle. Both drivers were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with minor injuries. Larry Blunt, 35, a passenger in the truck, was not taken to the hospital. Police investigators concluded that Farnsworth failed to yield for Blunt's pickup truck.

MV counties stand to profit from timber bill before Clinton

By Sam Strike
States News Service

WASHINGTON - Four Magic Valley counties stand to share about $250,000 a year in new money from a bill before President Clinton, designed to offset money lost from declining timber sales.

The money is earmarked for school and road improvements. In all, 36 Idaho counties are expected to share $22 million annually, with 70 percent allotted for roadwork.

The Magic Valley's money breaks down as follows:
• Twin Falls County will receive about $18,000 annually, an increase of $8,000 from its 1999 payment.

• Blaine County will receive about $96,000 annually, up about $42,000 from 1999.

• Camas County will have more than $63,000 to spend, an increase of about $28,000.

• Cassia County will get about $76,000, an increase of about $34,000.

Other southern Idaho counties figure to get no additional money from the bill. The payments would go into effect in October 2001.

The bill is "one of the most innovative, bipartisan education measures to protect children and schools in rural areas considered by Congress this year," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a bill co-sponsor and chairman of a Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee on forests.

The bill uses figures from 1986 to 1999 to calculate the amount each county has historically received from timber sales.

The bill would affect 700 counties in 41 states and Puerto Rico, which have used 25 percent of the timber receipts for county projects since 1908, when the federal government established the national forest system.

Much of the new money will go to Idaho, California, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington.

Each county will use 80 to 85 percent of the money for schools and roads. They can use the rest for collaborative projects such as watershed restoration, erosion prevention, or forest management.

Craig's staff worked on the final shaping of the bill with the Clinton administration and Forest Service.

Craig's priorities were to provide a stable source of funding for rural schools and counties and to allow local people to be involved in federal land decision-making.

TWIN FALLS

Viola Mae Coonts

Viola Mae Coonts, 81-years-young, died Tuesday morning, Oct. 10, 2000 at her home of an apparent heart attack.

Viola was born on Nov. 9, 1918, in Kimberly, Idaho, in her parent's home, A.E. and Ida Gray. Her life was spent entirely within the boundaries of the Magic Valley. She married Theodore Coonts of Drury, Missouri, on March 3, 1940 in Twin Falls. Viola is survived by her husband, Theodore Coonts of Twin Falls; her two sons, Richard (Catherine) Coonts of McColl, Idaho and Thomas E. (Janet) Coonts of Kimberly, Idaho; and one granddaughter, Wendy Simono of Twin Falls. Her great grandchildren, Alicia and Josh Simono, will remember her generous spirit and helpful smile.

She was preceded in death by her parents, two sisters, Orla McClure and Mildred Eslinger, and one brother, Orval Gray.

Tender, loving, quiet, and shy, she moved graciously through her family's life never asking for much but giving a great many of those intangible gifts... an honest and open mind, a trusting and faithful heart, and always a helping hand. Humbly she offered her home, her table, and her hands to whomever and whatever was needed to give solace to the sick, the lonely, and the needy.

A true follower of Jesus Christ, when depression and Parkinson's diminished her smile and slowed her step, she prayed that she might find the light once again. And she did. Though restrained physically her smile once again graced the family's gatherings, and her wisdom once again preceded everyone to try a little harder, "in Jesus' name. Her loved ones will carry within their hearts and souls the lessons her life has taught... honesty, love, and forgiveness are far more important than wealth, status, and recognition.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 14, 2000, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls with Reverend David Dullinger of the First Christian Church officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

Friends may call on Friday from 3-8 p.m. at Reynolds Funeral Chapel. The family suggests memorials be given to the First Christian Church. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

JEROME

Sandra Kay Kohntopp

Sandra Kay Kohntopp went to be with her Heavenly Father at home surrounded by her family, on Oct. 11, 2000, after a courageous battle with cancer.

She was born on June 15, 1938, to Earl and Vera Patterson in Twin Falls, Idaho, the oldest of four children. She grew up in the Eden-Hazleton area and attended local schools. She was a member of Honor Society, a cheerleader, and involved in many school activities and clubs. She had many fond memories of her growing up years with her siblings and family. She married Russell "Cotton" Hammond in 1955, and they farmed in the area for many years. She worked in the local bank where she made many friends. She was an active member of the LDS Church in Hazleton where she held numerous church jobs in Relief Society and Mutual Aid. Sandra was a skilled homemaker, an excellent seamstress and made most of her daughters' clothes and all of their beautiful prom dresses. Treasured possessions are Barbie clothes lovingly made on Christmas. Sandra and Cotton were later divorced. She moved to Twin Falls and worked at First Security Bank from 1979 to 1985 where Idaho Friendships were formed and treasured. She married Vernon Kohntopp on Feb. 1, 1986, and lived in the Jerome area, both of them building a new and wonderful life together. She made a change of profession in 1985 and worked at Hanson, Cypher, & Fiala Company accounting firm for the last fifteen years as their tax and computer operator with her daughter Jan. She became an excellent mother and was affectionately called "Mama Sass" for her witty and vigorous sense of humor.

She enjoyed camping with her husband, family, and friends at "The Lot" in Fairfield. Her home was the center of family dinners, with Easter night flying and an outdoor picnic being an annual tradition she looked forward to, and Christmas Eve dinners—a long tradition she cherished. She loved watching her children and grandchildren perform in their music, sports, and activities. Sandra had colostomy surgery at the age of 25. Her dignified and uncomplaining attitude about this lifelong obstacle enabled her to counsel many people facing this challenge. After her diagnosis of cancer, she became involved in "Rela" for Life cancer walk held every May to help raise money for local cancer issues and research. Her generous and loving spirit touched the lives of countless people. She had an extensive angel collection and was an angel herself to everyone who knew and loved her. She will be greatly missed.

She is survived by her husband Vernon; daughters Jan (Jim) Luckert of Jerome, Debbie (George) Ellsworth of Lovellville; step-son Todd Kohntopp of Challis; step-daughter Julie (Dave) Krawala of Jerome; sister Bonnie (Ron) Frank of Burley; brother Kent (Sheila) Potter of Burley; brother-in-law Ron Eversole of Twin Falls and her mother Vera Patterson also of Burley. She is also survived by 12 grandchildren: Angie, Shanna, Matt, Corinne, Russell, Candace, Seth, Kristofer, Bradley, Cody, Tyler, Justin, one great-grandson, Alex, and many nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by her father Earl P. Patterson; sister Linda Eversole and granddaughter Carolyn Aulderhoide.

Funeral services for Sandra will be held Saturday, Oct. 14, 2000, at 11 a.m., in the Jerome 2nd Ward LDS Chapel, 520 North Lincoln in Jerome, Idaho, where family and friends may call beginning at 10 a.m. Internment to follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

The family suggests that memorials be sent to: Relay for Life, MVMRC, P.O. Box 2231, Twin Falls, ID 83301 or Friends of Hospice, 200 2nd Ave. N., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Mayor expounds on changes

By Dan Fields
Times-News writer

BURLEY - To say Doug Manning's vision is unclouded would be an understatement.

The Burley mayor Thursday gave insight into the changes residents can expect within the next five years.

Many of the changes center on downtown.

For instance, Manning said he'd like to see a fountain added to downtown, similar to the fountain at Boise's Centre on-the-Grove.

"We want an interactive fountain," Manning told the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce, describing an attraction that people could walk through and ride their bicycles through.

Burley's future is limitless, Manning told about 50 chamber members. Even though the local economy is slumping, people shouldn't be discouraged.

"It's not a matter of if something is going to happen here, it's when," he said. "It's exciting, it's scary, but we know things are going to happen here. I know the ag economy is going slowly, but things are going to happen."

Manning said city officials would like to see the original brickwork on various buildings redone, and see changes to the city lighting system.

"We have some incredible brickwork on the upper portions of buildings in downtown Burley, and in Rupert too," he said. "We're trying to bring as much of that material back as we can. We would like to re-light

Feds decline protection for sharp-tailed grouse

BOISE (AP) - The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has declined to protect the Columbian sharp-tailed grouse under the Endangered Species Act in what conservationists called a precedent-setting abandonment of the agency's responsibilities under the federal law.

Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Washington and Colorado.

The Fish and Wildlife Service wrapped up an 11-month assessment of the Columbian sharp-tailed grouse, concluding that it faced no risk of extinction in the foreseeable future.

While some small populations do risk extinction because grazing and development have destroyed habitat, the agency said in a statement, three significant populations remain in southeastern Idaho, northwestern Colorado and central British Columbia.

About two-thirds of the birds are in southeastern Idaho.

Experts have documented that the grouse now inhabits just 10 percent of its historic range in Idaho, Montana, Utah and Wyoming, between 10 percent and 50 percent in Colorado and Washington and about 80 percent in British Columbia.

In 20 years, the population has plunged from as many as 170,000 to no more than 70,000.

Both Noh and Hansen said the wisest way to ensure the state's continued economic vitality would be to give some money back in tax cuts or tax credits - but not too much. Some of that money could be used to do away with many of the state economic inequities.

One unfairness was the College of Southern Idaho's reliance on property tax funding, while other communities have similar schools funded through the state university system.

Magic Valley lawmakers have joined forces with North Idaho lawmakers, facing a similar situation with North Idaho College in Kootenai County, seeking property tax relief. They've had no luck so far, but Hansen and Noh think that will change.

"I think something will happen this time," Noh said.

District Judge Daniel Meehl recommended work release during the sentencing hearing.

Local fire officials were called in and inspected the area. In addition, an independent electrician was brought in to replace a few circuits and make sure the safety systems were working properly.

"It wasn't necessary to replace the circuits," Bushman said. "But it's better to be proactive than reactive."

The school has safety measures to prevent serious problems, Bushman explained. If the furnace had continued to get hotter, another system probably would have shut it down.

"We'll make sure now when we repair it that the safety shutdown system is there," said Cassia County School District Superintendent Jerry Doggett. "We'll improve on the situation."

Sheriff's department discusses new approach to school crises

By Aaron Brock
Times-News writer

BURLEY - If violence were to break out at a school in Cassia County, sheriff's deputies say they are ready to respond quickly.

Following the shootings at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., the Cassia County Sheriff's Department ran a test to see how long it would take to respond to a similar situation at Burley Junior High School, sheriff's Capt. Jim Higgins told the Cassia County School Board Thursday. The officers were in place in about 45 minutes, which was unacceptable, Higgins said.

Since then, the department has made some changes, such as having each officer carry gear such as bulletproof vests and helmets in patrol cars. In addition, the department is moving away from traditional police procedure during school and business shootings, he said.

Instead of waiting to set up a perimeter, now the first two or three officers on the scene of a school or business shooting will make it a priority to stop the shooter.

"Their job is to go to that active shooter and eliminate the problem," Higgins said.

With these new measures, response time is down considerably on the time it takes for two to four officers to arrive on the scene - sometimes under five minutes, he said.

School is safe, Higgins reminded the board. Most students are hurt or killed on the way to or from school than in the building, he said.

In other business, three Burley Junior High School teachers were recognized for excellence in their fields.

Erd Craythorn, Lynne Larson, and Carolyn Hondo were honored Thursday.

Craythorn was recently named Idaho Drivers Education Teacher of the Year for 2000. A 30-year teacher, he has educated more than 3,500 students in motor vehicle operation and safety.

"Anytime you are recognized by the state, it's quite an honor," Superintendent Jerry Doggett said.

Students often request Craythorn as a teacher, board secretary Kathy Patton said.

"When kids had to get into your class, it means one of two things," Doggett said. "Either you're good, or you're really easy."

Craythorn is good, Doggett said.

Larson and Hondo each were named Teacher Excellence Honoraria awards of $1,000. They will be officially awarded at a Success Breakfast with the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce on Oct. 19, but the board chose to recognize them Thursday.

It is rare that two teachers from the same district, let alone the same school, earn this award, Doggett said.

Hunting game law push begins again

COEUR ALENE (AP) - Another drive is on to convince the Idaho Legislature that requiring hunters to wear incandescent orange garments in the field will help prevent needless shooting accidents.

Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas is kicking off an effort to make hunter orange mandatory.

"This will be the start of a drive on behalf of this office and prosecutors across the state, the Department of Fish and Game and the loved ones of those who have been killed in hunting accidents to make hunter orange mandatory," Douglas said.

While similar proposals have run into opposition from hunters, some sportsmen said the law may be a good thing.

Although some hunters claim

"There have been two many accidental deaths in Idaho. This has got to stop."

According to Douglas' office, there have been 278 hunting deaths since 1993 when the state began keeping safety records. Another 879 non-fatal accidents occurred during the same period.

The victim was not wearing hunter orange in almost all of the deaths. Last year, four people died in hunting-related accidents in Idaho.

While similar proposals have run into opposition from hunters, some sportsmen said the law may be a good thing.

Although some hunters claim bright colors alert game animals, Fish and Game officials say there is no evidence to support that. Deer, elk and other animals are colorblind, said John Galt, Fish and Game education chief.

Idaho is among only 10 states that have no hunter orange regulation. Montana, Wyoming and Washington have laws on the books.

Fish and Game spearheaded an effort in the 1980s that failed to pass the Legislature, partly because the agency was not a member of the Fish and Game Commission.

Scientists find discrepancies in Idaho fish report

LEWISTON (AP) - In a fishy version of the "X-Files," biologists are searching for answers in the apparent disappearance of thousands of steelhead in the Columbia River.

Last year nearly 70,000 fish counted at John Day Dam never showed up at McNary Dam and this year's discrepancy so far stands at 80,000 fish.

Biologists are pointing their fingers at the accuracy of fish counts at the two dams.

"There is a problem with our counts at John Day, there is little doubt there," said U.S. Army Corps of Engineers biologist Mike Langley.

Langley hopes the mystery will be solved when scientists tally data collected from steelhead implanted with radio telemetry tags.

The fish are being marked and monitored by University of Idaho professor Ted Bjornn, who will compare the percentage of fish that have gone missing to losses of fish implanted with radio tags.

Scientists speculate that because the fish ladder at the John Day Dam has an unusual amount of turbulence and fish are flushed back downstream, the Corps has counted them twice.

Survival class helps save neophyte hunter's life

BOISE (AP) - Dustin Eldridge not only learned how to handle a rifle at the state's mandatory hunter-education class, but also how to stay alive for three days in the mountains near Riggins.

Eldridge, 23, of Boise became lost while hunting on Saturday.

Because he paid attention to a course sportsmen must take at least once to get a hunting license, he survived in good fashion. "I went into it thinking it would be stupid," Eldridge said, recalling the class he took three weeks ago. "I thought I was too smart to get lost."

Eldridge and his two fellow hunters camped in the dark Friday night and left to hunt the next morning before the sun rose.

Eldridge said the darkness threw him off. He finally realized he was in trouble when he saw there was no trail in front of him and no trail in back. He decided there was no way to go but down, so he hiked down to a creek. The safety instructor had advised the students to stay where they are, so Eldridge made camp. Before setting out on his first deer hunt, Eldridge made sure he had a lighter and matches in a waterproof container, pocket knife, candles, a flashlight and a double layer of clothing. With these, he was able to light a fire, keep warm and signal overhead searchers.

He also stretched a box of Pop-Tarts across his three-day adventure and resorted to drinking creek water.

Eldridge may yet experience some abdominal distress from giardia, a common organism in water.

Castleford to get full-time deputy

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - A full-time deputy sheriff will patrol Castleford and its schools starting Oct. 30.

The council and school district have entered a law enforcement agreement with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. Wayne Tousey and Captain Dan Hall met Wednesday with the council and School Board chairman Mary Potuck to work out details of the contract.

School Board members will meet Tuesday to discuss the contract, which then must be signed by county commissioners.

Deputy Mike Cooper has been assigned to Castleford and will have a county patrol car. The city will provide office space, telephones, answering machines, computer, copier and a fax machine.

Mayor Mary Pinkston appointed Brig Vulgamore as police commissioner, at a wage of $300 a month, to act as a liaison with the community.

For now, most of the money for the deputy will come from a federal grant, running through 2003.

While the grant is in place, the school district and city council will share $16,462 in costs, including fringe benefits and overtime.

The deputy will work on a flexible schedule and will get help from other deputies as needed. Services provided will include public safety, criminal and law enforcement, school resources, animal codes and all city ordinances.

Elko County looks at school plan

By G. Andre Beglin
Times-News correspondent

SPRING CREEK, Nev. - Elko County School District officials Tuesday unveiled an ambitious plan to upgrade, refurbish and build new schools to the tune of $84 million to as much as $107 million.

Director of Instruction William McLeod briefly explained the district's 10-year school facility master plan to the School Board and an audience of about 100 teachers, parents and students at Spring Creek Middle School.

Four new schools are scheduled for construction, including one high school, two elementary schools and one middle school.

The plan was put together in conjunction with various city council members from incorporated cities throughout the 16,000-square-mile county as well as community groups, citizen advisory councils and public interest elected officials.

The purpose of the plan is to meet the needs of a student population expected to grow from 10,381 to 13,359 over the next decade.

McLeod did not discuss how the district planned to finance the multimillion dollar plan. Currently, the district operates on a pay-as-you-go system of funding construction in which property owners are taxed 75 cents per $100,000 assessed value of their property. Under the pay-as-you-go system, the district estimates it would raise between $52 million and $75 million over the 10-year period depending on the number of Elko County property taxpayers.

In 1996, voters said no to a $65 million bond issue that would have financed the district's long-term building plan.

The district's building plan includes construction of new schools and renovations at older schools.

The high school planned for the city of Elko would accommodate 1,243 students and is meant to "relieve the overcrowded conditions and accommodate future enrollment."

The Kittridge Canyon area near Elko is being considered for a 200-acre campus which would include an elementary and middle school complex as well as a new district transportation center.

Another elementary/junior high complex for the west part of the city of Elko and an addition to the existing elementary school in West Wendover are also in the plan.

West Wendover, Spring Creek and Jackpot are experiencing the greatest student increase in Elko County which has a younger than average age of 30.4 years compared to the rest of the state's 34.3 years.

Younger adults "means more persons per family will be school age," states the two-inch-thick report presented to the board Tuesday.

The report was compiled with the help of California Financial Services, an educational consultant firm.

The plan analyzes demographic patterns, socioeconomic data, historical enrollment patterns and projects enrollment for the next 10 years.

The state of Nevada led the nation in population growth from 1990-1995, 28 percent, with Elko County contributing to that growth, causing a need for planning of future projected growth, according to the plan's introduction.

The multimillion dollar construction plan identifies the need for the four new schools as well as the "resources needed to carry out the plan" itself.

Rural schools, such as the new one-room schoolhouse for Petan Ranch that has 10 students on the roster, as well as schools in the incorporated cities of Wells, Carlin, Elko and West Wendover, were included in the comprehensive plan.

Detailed spreadsheets about the county's mining based economy, including projected birthrates and other economic data, were also in the plan.

Council looks into moratorium

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - Those hoping for a building permit to construct a new communications tower in Wendell might have to wait for at least 90 days.

The City Council on Wednesday approved imposing a 90-day moratorium on the construction of any new communication towers in the city. The draft moratorium will now be examined by the city's attorney.

Council members said the moratorium was necessary to give them enough time to research and draft an ordinance addressing the construction and placement of such towers.

City Building Inspector Sonny Henry said he fields at least one inquiry a week from communications companies who art scouting areas in which to erect cell phone towers.

"But, I haven't been able to find an ordinance that deals with towers," Henry added. The moratorium would apply to new building permit requests only. Those who have already obtained a building permit will be allowed to continue with their construction.

Also Wednesday, council members discussed exploring their options to possibly regain some of their jurisdiction in Wendell's area of impact. According to City Council President Fred McCloud, the city gave up the one-mile area of impact to Gooding County in the early 1990s.

Council member Paul Isaacson said by taking back the impact area, the city would have some influence and input on how the region is developed.

"I think that we should do some hard research into that impact area to see if it is possible," Isaacson said. "If it's not a possibility, we need to do something to protect ourselves."

McCloud said that even if the city took back the impact area, those residents would not have access to city services nor would they be obligated to pay city taxes. They would however, gain city police protection and would fall under the city's building ordinances.

Hazelton will project over budget

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON - Construction of the city's new well never budgeted. City Engineer Brian Smith told the City Council on Tuesday the well project is $43,000 over budget, or 9 percent.

Smith told the council he checked his figures to see what had gone awry and the problem seemed to stem from a much-higher-than-anticipated bid for the well drilling.

Smith said three companies had submitted bids for the drilling - all of which had obtained subcontracting bids from the same driller meaning the amount was the same, for all three.

Smith said he and grant writer Susan Riddle looked into the possible solutions to the problem. Smith said one solution would be to try to work out pre-award negotiations for a lower bid. Concerned about the legality and/or any complications that might cause, the council decided to check with the city attorney before making a final decision.

Another option, Riddle said, would be to appeal to the Idaho Department of Commerce for more funding. She said she had already told them about the situation and they had told her they were open to the idea of awarding an extra $25,000.

That meant, Riddle said, the city would have to commit another $18,000 before Oct. 18 when the governor's economic advisory council will meet to determine if Hazelton - on the advice of the Idaho Department of Commerce - should receive the extra grant money. Riddle said the likelihood of getting the grant is good because "the city has critical need documented by the DEQ (Department of Environmental Quality), and if we can't get the money we can't remedy the situation."

The City Council decided to ask for the grant. Last February, the council committed $30,000 from city funds for emergency situations related to financing the well and, if necessary, will use $18,000 out of the fund to complete construction of the well.

In the meantime, Smith said he will pursue any cost-cutting venues he can find. Also Tuesday, resident and service station owner Kern Douglas showed up with a sheaf of paid city bills the city had given him at his request. He claimed the city had given preference to other service stations and businesses that sold gasoline and heating oil.

Mayor Evr Vansickle told him it would only be natural to curtail business with someone who had attacked the city council publicly as Douglas had done in the newspaper.

"I don't think that makes for good business relations," Vansickle said.

The council decided to continue "with business as usual" after discussing the issue because trying to separate out the best prices for petroleum products and the best service seemed impossible over the long haul. Council members also said Douglas received more city business last month than other area businesses.

In other action Tuesday, Valley School District superintendent Laurel Nelson requested that new Hazelton Police Chief Kelly Bangerter come to the elementary school to present anti-drug-use classes.

She said the school would use him for approximately 42 hours and would reimburse him according to what the City Council thought was fair. The council told her it would contact her after it decided how much to charge.

Bush, Gore agree on Mideast crises in rare unity

DETROIT (AP) — Al Gore and George W. Bush both urged Palestinians to end the rising Middle East violence and demanded retribution for the recent terrorist bombing of a Navy destroyer, finding rare agreement on foreign policy issues that overshadowed their presidential campaign.

A day after their second debate, Gore and Bush scaled back plans to criticize each other's credibility, realizing that candidates — like the commander in chief they hope to become — must adapt to world events.

Vice President Al Gore

"It's time for our nation to speak with one voice," Bush, the GOP nominee, Gore, the Democratic vice president, cut short a campaign trip to return to the White House, where he hadn't been since June because of the presidential race. "They're learning what it means to be president of the United States because their plans and their campaigns just got wiped off the front pages," said Democratic political consultant Jim Duffy. "And neither one of them better get caught playing politics with these issues."

As the U.S. candidates slept, an angry mob of Palestinians killed three Israeli soldiers in the West Bank town of Ramallah. Israel's response was swift: Helicopters rocketed Arafat's residential compound in the Gaza Strip as well as targets in the West Bank. Separately, a small boat apparently carrying explosives tore a hole in the side of a Navy ship in port on the Arabian Peninsula, killing and wounding American sailors.

Gore abruptly dropped plans to criticize Bush's debate performance — "I'm not going to take any political questions," he told reporters — as aides said a full-throated attack would have been improper on such a day.

He did criticize Bush's health care record as Texas governor, telling supporters it "gives us an important window into what his priorities are."

Jury convicts man of manslaughter for taking 7-year-old's life jacket

BRANDON, Miss. (AP) — A man was convicted of a reduced charge of manslaughter Wednesday for wresting a 7-year-old girl's life jacket away from her and leaving her to drown in a Mississippi lake.

Troy Carlisle, 28, told authorities he was trying to save Dallas Reinhardt when he removed her life jacket to pull her to shore.

But Carlisle also testified that he knew the girl would die. Carlisle faces a maximum 20-year prison sentence as his Oct. 20 sentencing.

Troy Carlisle

He originally was charged under a 130-year-old Mississippi law called depraved heart murder, which is filed when someone is suspected of placing another person in imminent danger of death.

The charge carried a penalty of life in prison.

Bush gets Texas detail wrong; Gore overreaches on education

By Calvin Woodward
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Democrat Al Gore decided it was time to mess with Texas, Republican Gov. George W. Bush made a bit of a mess of his state's defenses. All on his own, Gore made his education plan sound more far reaching than it is.

Some facts and context fell by the wayside Wednesday night when the second presidential debate veered from cautious for-ign policy exchanges into deep reaches of Bush's Texas record, and into what both men would do as president.

Bush identified Haiti as a place where he would withdraw U.S. troops as president. But the Clinton administration brought nearly all U.S. troops home from Haiti earlier this year.

Gore said on education: "I think that we should require states to test all students."

But his education plan does not specify mandatory universal testing. It says he wants voluntary national tests in two grades and that he would encourage high school exit exams.

His plan would require all states to give a national exam — or a state equivalent — that tests only a small sampling of students in each state.

And he would keep in place current requirements that state assessments of one kind or another be given in three grades. Not all of these assessments are standardized tests, and in some states special education and bilingual pupils don't take them.

Addressing hate crimes, Bush wrongly stated during the debate that "the three men who murdered James Byrd ... are going to be put to death."

Byrd was a 49-year-old black man and father of three who was chained to the back of a pickup truck by three white men two years ago and dragged three miles to his death in east Texas.

Only two of the defendants were sentenced to death; a third was sentenced to life in prison.

Companies agree cigarettes addictive, but resist controls

GENEVA (AP) — Conceding that cigarettes are addictive and deadly, top tobacco companies said Thursday they would accept some form of global control — but not advertising bans or tax hikes.

"We agree that smoking is addictive and causes disease in smokers," David Davies, vice president of corporate affairs for Philip Morris Europe, said at the start of World Health Organization hearings on a planned convention to control tobacco.

It was one of the most explicit admissions to date by a Philip Morris executive that cigarette smoking is not a matter of free choice, as tobacco companies traditionally have argued.

A key representative of British American Tobacco also acknowledged the addictive nature of cigarettes and the world's largest smoker, China's National Tobacco Corp., agreed that smoking is harmful to health.

Anti-smoking campaigners dismissed the comments as a public relations ploy.

"The tobacco industry will stop if nothing," said Matt Myers of the U.S.-based Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids.

"It has staged the most devastating coverup of scientific evidence. It has preyed on our kids and lied to the governments. It has manipulated nicotine and our political system."

Cigarettes kill more than 4 million people each year, a figure that is estimated to reach 10 million annually by 2030, WHO said in making it a top priority to battle smoking.

Nearly 180 organizations, including medical associations, health campaigners and tobacco growers, were invited to address the hearings. Three hundred more submitted written evidence.

WHO's 191 member governments get down to the gritty-nitty on a global anti-tobacco treaty starting Monday.

Options for the convention include:

- a total ban on advertising and sponsorship by tobacco companies.
- tougher measures to prevent young people from starting.
- bans on smoking in public places.
- tax hikes to make cigarettes more expensive.
- measures to discourage production.

Myers joined the American Cancer Society, American Lung Association, American Medical Association and American Public Health Association in appealing to the Clinton administration to take the lead in pushing for a global convention.

Study holds hope for blind

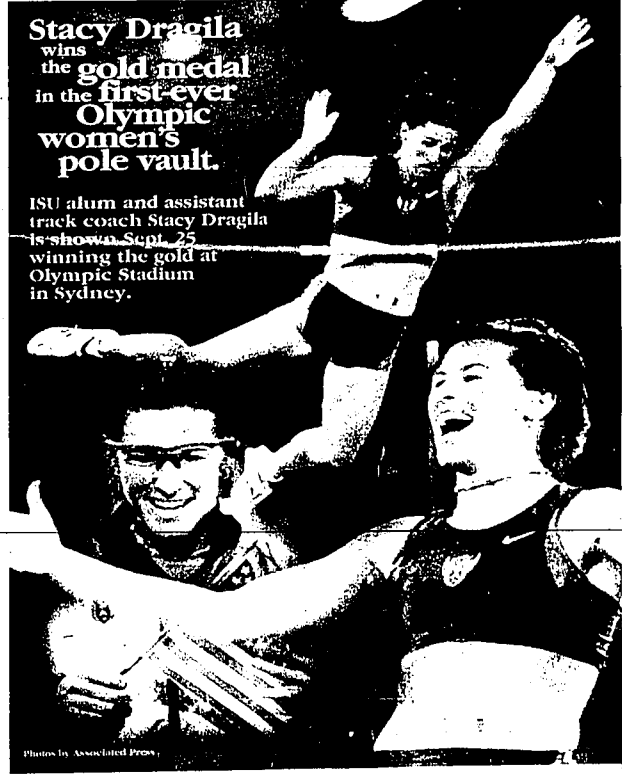

The Associated Press

Blind people often suffer insomnia and daytime sleepiness because they cannot see light and dark, the cues that set most people's internal clocks to a 24-hour cycle. But a study found that melatonin can reset those clocks.

The study, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, looked at seven blind men and women with circadian rhythms — the bodily changes that guide sleeping and waking cycles — of 24.2 to 24.9 hours.

Each person was given either a placebo or 10 milligrams of melatonin — a hormone produced deep in the brain by the pineal gland — an hour before bedtime for three to nine weeks. The people who had been taking the look-alike placebo got melatonin, and vice versa.

Colombian rebels seize helicopter in Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador — Colombian rebels seized a helicopter from an early Thursday morning in 10 foreigners aboard, military officials said.

Six Americans, a Chilean, an Argentine and the two Frenchmen piloting the plane were taken hostage at gunpoint at 4 a.m. in the El Coga region, 150 miles northeast of the capital, military officials said.

Vice President Pedro Pinto said the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, Colombia's largest guerrilla group, claimed responsibility, calling it "reprisal for Plan Colombia." Plan Colombia is an anti-narcotics initiative backed by a $1.3 billion U.S. aid package.

Yugoslav president meets senior U.S. envoy

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — President Vojislav Kostunica met Thursday with a senior U.S. envoy — the first high-level contact between the two governments since Belgrade broke relations with the United States last year on the eve of the NATO bombing campaign.

The meeting between Kostunica and Balkan envoy James C. O'Brien followed welcome news from Washington for the moribund Yugoslav economy. President Clinton announced Thursday he was lifting an oil embargo and a flight ban on Yugoslavia imposed in 1998 after former President Slobodan Milosevic launched a crackdown on Kosovo Albanians.

Meanwhile, Milosevic supporters tried to stem the steady erosion of their power. Milosevic's Socialist Party said its hard-line secretary-general, Gorica Gajević, had been replaced by the more moderate Zoran Anđelković, head of the Serbian Kosovo government.

Rescuers set free last rehabilitated penguins

CAPE TOWN, South Africa —

After pausing briefly on a Cape Town beach, 15 newly released African penguins plunged into the chilly Atlantic Ocean on Wednesday, their dives marking the end of the world's largest penguin rescue operation.

The 15 birds were the last of 19,000 penguins smeared by oil spilled from a tanker that sank June 23 off Cape Town's coast. Volunteers and experts cleaned and fed the birds until they gained enough strength to return home.

A further 15,000 unsold penguins were captured, driven about eight hours up the coast to the town of Port Elizabeth and released to swim home, which gave authorities time to clean up the spill.

Nobel Literature Prize winner writes to survive

BAGNOLET, France (AP) — Gao Xingjian burned his early writings to save himself from communist zealots, was denounced by his own wife and eventually went into exile. On Thursday, the 60-year-old survivor of China's upheaval and oppression became its first Nobel Prize laureate for literature.

The Swedish Academy cited the novelist and playwright for the "bitter insights and linguistic ingenuity" in his writings about the "struggle for individuality in mass culture."

Gao, "very, very surprised" at the honor, declared writing to have been his salvation, even during Mao Tse-tung's brutal 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, when intellectuals were silenced and he had to burn "kilos and kilos" of his writings lest they fall into the wrong hands.

"In China, I could not trust anyone, not even my family. The atmosphere was so poisoned, people were so brain-washed that even someone from your own family could turn you in," he told The Associated Press.

That actually happened, according to his friend and fellow Chinese exile, poet Bei Ling. "His wife told people from the government that he had been writing literary things at home, and writing literature then was very dangerous," said Bei.

Gao went on to become a leading cultural figure in China but fled in 1987 after one of his plays was banned and he was put under police surveillance. After the 1989 blood bath at Tiananmen Square in Beijing, he wrote "Fugitives," set against the background of the slayings. The Communist regime declared him "persona non grata" and banned his works.

Gao's novel, "Soul Mountain," a complex narrative based on his travels in China, was published in English translation last year and was singled out by the Swedish Academy as "one of those singular literary creations that seem impossible to compare with anything but themselves."

Gao has lived in France for 12 years, speaks flawless French and holds French citizenship. He is an authority on modern French drama but leads a humble, spartan life. After the Nobel announcement, he received visitors at his two-room apartment in a blue-collar Paris suburb wearing a sweat shirt and slippers.

Gao said he started keeping a diary when he was 8 and now writes or paints up to 16 hours a day on a glass table, the only furniture in the room.

Gao Writing eases my suffering," he said. "When you use words, you're able to keep your mind alive. Writing is my way of reaffirming my own existence."

UTILITY RATES ARE CHANGING... SOME LOWER, SOME HIGHER

First, what you like to hear. The new solid waste transfer station is complete. This decreases the costs of transporting and disposing of your garbage so we can REDUCE your sanitation and landfill fee by $1.39* per month.

And, what you don't like to hear. New improvements in both the water and sewer systems cost money. Accordingly, water and sewer rates are being raised by $2.00* per month and increased operating costs. This will increase an average water bill by about $.80 per month and sewer bills by $.51 per month.

The net effect is a decrease in utility bills where water consumption is 15,000 gallons a month, or less. Why 15,000 gallons? - that is the overall average monthly consumption of our customers. If you use less water the decrease is more and if you use more, the decrease disappears and you will pay more than you are currently paying.

*The decrease in the lower tier garbage can rate, available for qualified customers, is reduced by 1.77.

SHADES OF MISCHIEF

CSI Drama Department considers why 'I Hate Hamlet'

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Before the world ever heard of Drew Barrymore, it knew her grandfather, John - an actor of some note. "The Great Profile," he was nicknamed, and although Barrymore was a big movie star in the 1920s and '30s, he made his reputation playing Hamlet on stage - and drinking pretty much everywhere else.

Over time, that reputation got out of hand - so much so that every American actor who's portrayed the Melancholy Dane since has had to deal with John Barrymore's spirit.

But what, wondered New York playwright Paul Rudnick, if Barrymore's influence were, well, more tangible.

"It's a wonderful idea for a comedy," said Tony Mannen, College of Southern Idaho drama instructor who's directing a production of Rudnick's "I Hate Shakespeare" that opens next week. "What if John Barrymore's ghost was actually there when somebody did Hamlet?"

Rudnick's play is the run-up to an autumn of Shakespeare at CSI. In December, the drama department will perform the real "Hamlet."

"This is great way to work up the real thing," Mannen said. TV star Andrew Rally (played by Adam Myers) gets a chance to play Hamlet in Manhattan's Central Park, but something's rotten in the state of New York.

Rally's TV series is canceled out from under him and his rich, beautiful girlfriend clings to her virginity with unyielding conviction. Suddenly, neither the Hamlet ghost nor the Big Apple seem so grand.

But Andrew's agent once had a brief romance with Barrymore, years before, in the New York

College of Southern Idaho theater students Melanie Fisk, Alicia West and Adam Myers rehearse the seance scene in their upcoming play, 'I Hate Hamlet,' directed by Tony Mannen.

Shakespeare with a twist

• What: The College of Southern Idaho Theater Department will present Paul Rudnick's "I Hate Hamlet."
• Where: Room 119, CSI Fine Arts Center, Twin Falls.
• When: Wednesday, Thursday and

Oct. 20-21, then again Oct. 25-28, 8 p.m.

• How much: Tickets, which are $5 for general admission and $3 for students, are available at the door and at the CSI ticket office between 1-4 p.m. each weekday. The number is 734-9554, Ext. 2625.

apartment where Rally lives. This prompts a seance to summon Barrymore's ghost. Sure enough, he materializes - dressed in high Shakespearean garb, fortified by champagne and ego, and presses Andrew toward his actor's destiny. Jud Harmon, who played major roles in past CSI productions of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Our Town" and "Lead Me a Tenor," among other plays, is Barrymore - a role that legendary Scottish actor Nicol Williamson originated on Broadway. "The play is a ghost story," wrote Rudnick, who actually lived in a New York City apartment that once belonged to Barrymore. "I Hate Hamlet" celebrates the theater, in all its artifice and happy dementia. May the Barrymore panache rule all productions.

"It's an actor's play," Mannen said. "But a lot of fun for the audience."

Other principal cast members are Alicia West as Felicia Zolotarev, Peter J. Alfred as Dorado McDavey, Melanie Fisk as Lillian Troy and Beau Davidson as Gary Peter Lefkowitz.

Shanna Jacobson is Mannen's assistant director and CSI drama instructor Laine Steel is the technical director and designed the set.

Feeling sheepish?

Ketchum residents celebrate Trailing of the Sheep

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - June Day spent a year by herself herding sheep 75 miles between winter and summer pastures in rugged Hells Canyon. Last year, she and other localists-who spent 10 years as a "Lady Shepherd" in northern Utah.

And Sam Jackson hails from the Lost River Valley where he began spinning woolly verse to give sheep men the same good press that cattle men were realizing from cowboy poetry.

These three will kick off the Fourth Annual Trailing of the Sheep Festival by regaling listeners with sheepherder poetry. The eve talk will be held Friday evening in Starbuck's, which is now located in the same building where Wood River Valley sheep men used to talk about the weather, range conditions and sheep markets in Ogden and The Dalles. Sheep Poetry Readings is one of several new additions to a festival that celebrates the annual trailing of the sheep as they journey through Ketchum and Hailey on their way from summer pastures in the mountains to ranches near Carey and Gooding.

Also on tap is a Sheepherders Ball, folk contest and an expanded folk-life fair and parade.

The Sheep Folklife Fair, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at Roberta McKercher Park in Hailey, will feature Basque Games beginning at 3:30 p.m. Jose Luis Arrieta and his son John, both sheep men and weightlifters from Boise, will demonstrate the unique Basque style of weightlifting and competition weight-carrying.

Fairgoers who want to try their own hand at weight carrying can win dinner at a local restaurant by besting other fairgoers.

There will be shearing, herding, spinning and weaving demonstraincluding sheep mask and ornament making, said Carrie Schiller-Westergard of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce.

The fair will be moved into the nearby Armory in the event of inclement weather.

St. Charles-Catholic-Church will offer up its 51st annual Basque Lamb Barbecue at the fair. Several local restaurants will also feature local lamb in conjunction with the festival.

The new Sheepherders Ball will be held from 9 to 11 p.m. Saturday at the American Legion Hall in Ketchum. The ball will feature live Basque music by Boise Basque Jimmy Jausoro and his band, chorizo and other finger foods provided by Viva Taqueria and beer and wine. Admission is $3 a person or $5 a couple.

This year's Trailing of the Sheep Parade will begin at noon rain, snow or shine - after all, the sheep have Ketchum cemetery on Idaho Highway 75 and parade down Main Street.

Youth, Beethoven's Fifth highlight opener

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Four different people, four separate lives with very little in common except for their love of music.

The four - Heather Angel, Sarah Lincoln, Rebekah Jones and Vince Gerrish - will bring their love of music to the stage as the featured soloists at the Magic Valley Symphony's Youth Soloist concert Sunday.

Traditionally, the Youth Soloist Concert is the first program of the Symphony's season. It started in the 1970s as a way to encourage younger musicians to pursue excellence in their musical talents.

"We want to give them the opportunity to stretch forward in their musical careers," said Ted Hadley, Symphony music director and conductor. "Learning to solo with a large ensemble presents challenges they don't meet in the practice room. This is another way to help them meet and overcome those challenges."

The musicians chosen for the concert first auditioned in front of a panel of judges hired by the Symphony. The judges are professionals from nearby orchestras or universities who look for excellence of musicianship and audience communication.

"These four individuals stood out because of how well they played their instruments," Hadley said. "Their instruments and music was like an extended part of their personalities. They gave such emotionally and technically musical performances at the audition."

The evening's program will include Allegro performing

Concerto No. 7 for the Flute by Francois Devienne; Jones will play Allegro molto e con brio from Violin Concerto by Dimitri Kabalevsky; Lincoln will perform movements four and five from "Tableaux de Provence" by Poulenc Maurice; and Gerrish will play Andante and Rondo from Johann Hummel's Trumpet Concerto.

Sun Valley jazz fest expects crowd

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Hey, mates. You can brush up on your Olympic-nurtured Aussie lingo and get a feel for the music from down under at this year's Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree.

No word, yet, whether we'll have to roe walzing with Mauiia one more time. But there will be a good dose of music from the upside down part of the world, thanks to the appearance of The New Melbourne Jazz Band.

The 11th annual Jamboree — Sun Valley's biggest event of the year — kicks off Tuesday evening with a free concert at Sun Valley's indoor ice rink, which will be transformed into Carnegie Hall for the event.

Five days and evenings of jazz follow. "We get just a mob — more than 7,000 people from Boise and Twin Falls and all 50 states in the union," said Boisen Dick Black, a volunteer who puts 300 miles on his car those five days troubleshooting between the various venues.

"We even get people from

The actual event begins at 2 p.m. Wednesday and starts up every day thereafter through Oct. 22 at 9 a.m. The be-topping continues until 1 in the morning. Jazz musicians have even been known to strike a jam session at 2 a.m. In the lobby of the Sun Valley Lodge.

- How much: Bodes, available at the ice rink, cost $70 for the entire five-day event. Opening and closing day bodes cost $207 tickets for Thursday and Oct. 20-21 cost $25 each. Admittance for students between the ages of 13 and 17 is $10 for the entire five-day jamboree. Children 12 and under will be admitted free when accompanied by a parent. Australia and Canada and Europe."

"We're not limited by the number of chairs but by the beds in the Wood River Valley," added Hailey resident Floyd McCracken, who is in his tenth year of volunteering.

"We fill them up from Bellevue to Ketchum."

Even folks who prefer country music or heavy metal can find something to get jazzed about when Sun Valley metamorphoses into the French Quarter and Bourbon Street for a week.

An dazzling variety of musical styles will be displayed by 30 groups from throughout the world in 314 sets. And there are plenty of gimmicks to keep audiences on their toes — and we're not just talking tapping and dancing.

Captain of a cheerleading team at an affluent San Diego area high school that has won the national cheerleading competition five years in a row. To her chagrin she discovers that their current hip-hop routine was ripped off by her predecessor from a Compton high school. (1:35, PG-13, for sex-related material and language.)

'The Cell'
Jennifer Lopez would be very welcome in a lot of men's heads, but in 'The Cell' she's a therapist who goes uninvited into the dangerously twisted brain of a comatose serial killer (Vincent D'Onofrio) in an attempt to ferret out the whereabouts of his final victim. Don't ask how she gets in there. Just worry about how you can get out of what amounts to little more than a designer fetish-wear catalog. Rated R, nudity, torture sequences, language. 1 hour, 47 minutes.

'The Contender'
This riveting political saga has a terrific cast led by Joan Allen, Jeff Bridges and Gary Oldman, a captivating story line, a sharp script and excellent timing as the Clinton era closes. Allen plays a fiercely intelligent senator assailed by sexual innuendoes after she is tapped by the president (Bridges) to replace his deceased vice president. Oldman co-stars as a reactionary congressman trying to derail the nomination. 'The Contender' clips along with the tawdry energy of a fine palace intrigue. WEEKEND

ing political foes. Allen brings supreme dignity to her role, but her character seems too noble to exist in real-life Washington. R. 126 minutes.

'Coyote Ugly'
One of Manhattan's faux road-houses, where rowdy women sling shots and 'spontaneously' mount the bar to work up the overmanned crowd, is the setting for this post-Madonna, post-feminist 'Finsdance.' Sweet-faced Piper Perabo is a New Jersey naïf who comes to the big city to be a song-writer, only to end up playing sex bomb in the nightly, beer-soaked fantasia at Coyote Ugly. The movie is as fake and contrived as the bar's rundown decor, which isn't likely to bother anyone seduced by it. Rated PG-13, sexual situations, language, excessive leering and alcohol consumption. 1 hour, 34 minutes.

'The Cup'
Director Khyentse Norbu's study of the relationship between the sacred and the profane and the arrival of 21st century in Tibetan Buddhist culture. Rated G.

'Digimon: The Movie'
The Digital monsters of TV take to the big screen, with all the requisite noise and product promotion. Digi-nemic. Screenplay by Jeff Nimoy and Bob Buchholz. Animation directed by Takashi Yamashita, Hisashi Nakayama and Masahiro Aizawa. (1:14. C.)

'Disney's The Kid'
The film is so titled to distinguish it from Charlie Chaplin's 'The Kid,' but no one is likely to mistake this open-hearted but clunky fantasy-fable for a classic - or even classic Disney. Bruce Willis is a professional stater and human failure whose chubby 7-year-old-self (Spencer Breslin) shows up to teach him - and us - a valuable lesson. Audrey Wells' script shows signs of insight and intelligence, but director Jon Turteltaub stomps over them like an overbearing dweeb at a birthday party. Rated PG; language. 1 hour, 41 minutes.

'Dr. T and the Women'
Despite the title, 'Dr. T and the Women' isn't about Dr. T and it isn't about the women. It's about Dallas, in all its materialistic glory. Robert Altman's new film is the story of a Dallas gynecologist (Richard Gere) and the women who dominate his life: his wife (Farah Fawcett), his nurse (Shelley Long), his daughters (Kate Hudson and Tara Reid) and the country club's intriguing new golf pro (Helen Hunt). The story meanders, but Altman gets the details right. He says the film is a satire, but his depiction of blond society mavens dressed in designer suits and enormous hats is right on the money. R. 122 min.

'Duets'
Three unlikely couples get paired up onstage and off in this time-dead road movie that rips the lid off karaoke corruption. Huey Lewis is a karaoke bar hustler, scamming his way from local contest to local contest until he's reluctantly reunited with the daughter he never knew. Vegas chorus girl Gwyneth Paltrow. Andre Braugher is an ex-con with the voice of a soulful songbird who hitches a ride with a sad-sack salesman liberated by karaoke, and Mario Bello and Scott

Spellman, well, we don't really know what they are, and neither does director Bruce Paltrow (Gwyneth's father), who has no idea how to get this out of first-gear. Rated R; violence, language, nudity. 1 hour, 52 minutes.

'The Exorcist'
William Peter Blatty's pungent, slightly hysterical tale of the devil, who spends most of his energy bedeviling and possessing one little girl. With Ellen Burstyn, Lee J. Cobb, Max Von Sydow, Jason Miller and the teen-age Linda Blair. William Friedkin directs. (R.)

'Get Carter'
Sylvester Stallone and Miranda Richardson in a remake of the 1971 British action thriller. Original star Michael Caine makes an appearance.

'The Ladies Man'
The 'Saturday Night Live' franchise issues this story of a smooth-talking radio host sorting through his list of conquests in search of his true (and wealthy) love. Tim Meadows stars for director Reginald Hudlin.

'Lost Souls'
Cinematographer Janusz Kaminski ('Saving Private Ryan,' 'Schindler's List') debuts as a director with a supernatural thriller about a woman (Winona Ryder) who discovers a conspiracy to give Satan a human form. She must convince New York crime reporter Ben Chaplin that he's the target.

'Meet the Parents'
Ben Stiller and Robert De Niro star as prospective son-in-law and father-in-law from hell in one of the most fun mainstream comedies in years, a film that gets its laughs from shrewd casting, well-timed line readings and gags that are worked out to a remarkable degree. (1:48. PG-13, for sexual content, drug references and language.)

'Nurse Betty'
Though he didn't write the script, the frigid fingers of Neil LaBute ('In The Company of Men') are on this noticeably sour fairy tale about a woman (Rene Zellweger) who can no longer distinguish television from reality and thinks the soap opera doctor she idolizes (Greg Kinnear) is a real person. (1:52. R, for strong violence, pervasive language and a scene of sexuality.)

'Nuttty Professor II: The Klumps'
The further adventures of the poundage-challenged Professor Sherman Klump is all Eddie Murphy all the time - he plays eight different roles - but the film's decision to compete in Hollywood's trendy Gross-Out Derby means this sequel is a lot less funny than it sounds. (1:45. PG-13, for crude humor and sex-related material.)

College of Southern Idaho

By Joe Surran

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - If there is one thing that Leah Hollingshead has learned while attending the College of Southern Idaho, it's that hard work does pay off.

Even for the shortest person on one of the best volleyball teams in the nation.

Focus on

Leah Hollingshead CSI volleyball

The freshman defensive specialist isn't really that small - in fact, she's taller than the average female - but put her on the court with the CSI line-up, and she becomes downright Lilliputian.

Adjusting to the college game has been hard enough for her without having to compensate for nature.

"Defensive specialist is a lot different than what I played in high school," Hollingshead said. "I was a middle blocker my senior year and I am only 5-foot-8. That is considerably short for college so (CSI coach Ben Stroud) has been working with me to play defense. I'm getting better and improving - slowly."

Finding a way to improve is something that Hollingshead has always excelled at. The former Filer High standout earned all-conference honors in three sports as a senior and became one of the best softball players in the valley after being cut from the team as a freshman. Even that kind of an athletic background wasn't enough to prepare for life as a Golden Eagle.

"I had no idea what to expect," Hollingshead said. "I was coming from Filer High School, which is a small school compared to Twin Falls or Pocatello, and the competition for playing time wasn't as high. But it seemed achievable to come here if I worked hard enough. I figured I could go somewhere, maybe not CSI, but I could play somewhere."

"It has been a great honor to be a part of this program just because of the reputation it has."

Nothing has been a sure thing in Hollingshead's quest to become a part of the CSI volleyball tradition. She juggled her work schedule over the summer to attend team workouts and spent many hours in the weight room to ensure she would be in shape. She also turned down a softball scholarship to Treasure Valley Community College because her heart was set on coming to CSI, so making the team has been that much sweeter.

"When I found out I had a scholarship I was ecstatic," Hollingshead said. "It was like all the hard work had paid off. It was a real big relief, consider emotionally because I felt like I could go somewhere else but I had dedicated myself here."

So far this season, however, playing time has been hard to come by. The biggest contribution she has been able to make has been on the practice floor. The transition from all-everything high school athlete to role player hasn't been without its disappointments, but Hollingshead has taken it in stride. "I am part of one of the best volleyball clubs in the nation at this level," Hollingshead said. "It's been a good experience and I am getting better. If I would have gone to a smaller school, I might be able to play more, but since everybody here has excellent talent it doesn't really bother me. There is huge competition just to be able to play."

Wyoming town welcomes home Olympic medalist

The Associated Press

AFTON, Wyo. - Olympic gold medalist Rulon Gardner, once a chubby kid ridiculed by bullies as "Fatsie," was hailed as a hero Thursday in a homecoming that drew thousands.

Gardner, a hulking man as big as he is gentle who earned a national championship wrestling at Ricks College in the early 1990s, paraded through the downtown of this western Wyoming community where he grew up in celebration of his Greco-Roman wrestling triumph over Alexander Karelin, one of the greatest upsets in the history of the games.

"This medal is not mine," he said, holding the gold off his 54-inch chest. "This is all of ours."

Gardner, who said he uses the childhood insults as motivation, won the heavyweight class last month at the Sydney Olympics by upsetting Karelin, the Zeus of world wrestling. Karelin had not lost an international match in 13 years until Gardner's 1-0 victory. Gardner, who now lives in Colorado Springs, Colo., where the Olympic training facilities are, became an instant celebrity.

"Still a lot for me to swallow, all these experiences," he said. "When I left for Sydney, it was just me. When I came back I was an Olympian. It's great."

Another wild Ankiel outing dooms Cards

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - Once Rick Ankiel zinged the first pitch of the game to the backstop, it was bound to be a wild one at Busch Stadium. And it was, with the New York Mets once again finding a way to win at the end.

With Ankiel out of control, the Mets took control of the NL championship series. Jay Payton hit an RBI single in the ninth inning and New York beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 Thursday night for a 2-0 lead.

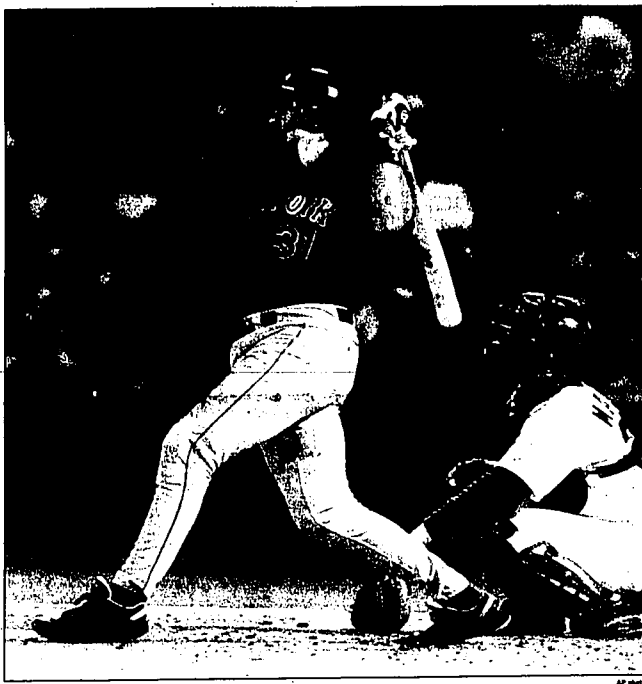

The Mets won for the fifth straight time in this postseason, with three of them coming in their final at-bat. An error by first baseman Wilk Clark set up Payton's one-out single off losing pitcher Mike Timlin.

New York now returns to Stadium for Game 3 Saturday, sending Rick Reed to pitch against Andy Benes. The Mets' victory also kept them on track for a Subway Series, meaning they may not have to leave New York for the rest of the year. The Yankees and Seattle are tied at one game each in the ALCS.

Turk Wendell wound up with the win and Armando Benitez pitched the ninth for a save in a game that lasted one minute short of four hours. Mets starter Al Leiter got a no-decision, leaving him winless in nine postseason starts.

Time Perez's mad dash around the bases helped New York take a two-run lead in the eighth.

The Mets' late-season sparking singled with two outs, took off on Mats Morris' full-count pitch and hustled home when Edgardo Alfonzo hit a soft single into the no man's land of shallow right-center field. Todd Zelle greeted reliever Dave Veres with an RBI single for a 5-3 lead. The Cardinals came back to tie it in the bottom half, with a run scoring on John Franco's wild pitch and another on pinch-hitter J.D. Drew's double. After pinch-hitter Mark McGwire was intentionally walked, Wendell struck out Craig Paquette to end the inning.

Bad omens abounded for Ankiel, even before he took the mound. There was a full moon above the ballpark and former St. Louis star shortstop Ozzie Smith bounced the ceremonial first pitch.

Then Ankiel suffered a meltdown, the same kind that saw the 21-year-old rookie throw a record five wild pitches in an inning last week in Game 1 against Atlanta.

Ankiel hit the backstop with five of his first 20 pitches, though only two of them counted as wild pitches. All of the crazy tosses came in the same place - the spot that would be high-and-away to a right-handed batter. Ankiel was mercifully pulled after getting only two outs in the first inning. He seemed to be biting his lip as he walked off to sympathetic applause, with fans no doubt wondering whether he had caught the same wildness disease that derailed Mark Wohlers and Steve Blass.

PLAYING FOR PRIDE Once-victorious Bruins face winless Jerome

By Kevin Hall Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - There's still hope for a postseason for the Twin Falls High School football team.

Battered and bruised by the 'bules in the East, the Bruins get a break from pod play tonight when they travel across the bridge to Jerome.

A break from the rigors of the pod, yes, but a break as a game, hardly.

"Traditionally, year after year it doesn't matter," said Bruins head coach Mark Schaal. "It's always going to be a good game." Friends by day, enemies under the lights, both sides know a win secures bragging rights in the Magic Valley.

"I know a lot of the kids know each other and play ball against each other and we're basically the two closest teams within our separate leagues," Schaal said. "It's basically a pride thing."

Riding a 13-game losing streak, and owning a 2-18 mark against Twin Falls since 1980, Jerome coach Eric Anderson said his Tigers would like nothing better than to end their misery against the cross-river rivals.

"Our kids always feel we play get a sense from the players they feel we're capable of winning this game. Who knows - maybe the home-field advantage works in our favor."

Winning will require a

Herculean effort from nimble tailback Blake Thompson. The Tigers got good news two weeks ago when junior quarterback Kiel Thibault returned from a broken hand. In Jerome's 35-7 loss at Minico, Thibault threw for 129 yards and a touchdown.

On defense, Jerome relies on middle linebacker Ryan Diehl, who has 62 tackles and is being recruited by Boise State and the University of Idaho.

"But our go-to guy is Blake Thompson," Anderson said. "He's kind of our do-everything. He's the best athlete on our team."

Countering that, fans can expect the Bruins to throw an antsy 8-man front at their hosts. Please see BRUINS, Page 02

Field goal frenzy?

Ravens-Skins could be low-scoring affair

By Dave Goldberg AP football writer

In its last three games, Baltimore has allowed 10 points, all in Jacksonville last week, and seven were on a late touchdown drive engineered by Jamie Martin after he replaced Mark Brunell.

But the Ravens have scored just 27 points in their last two games - on nine Matt Stover field goals.

On Sunday, they travel 25 miles down the road to visit the Redskins, whose three-game winning streak is largely the work of their multimillion dollar defense.

Is this a scoreless tie waiting to happen?

Not quite. Las Vegas has made the over-under 34.5, not very much for a game that should be played in good weather. The Redskins are favored by 3.5, meaning if you play the exact odds, the score comes out something like 19-15.5, Washington.

But Washington has injuries on the offensive line, not good against one of the NFL's top front sevens.

The Ravens, on the other hand, have Tony Banks at quarterback. Last week against the Jags, Banks looked like St. Louis Tony Stewart and Durrell Green are the best cornerback trio in the league.

But Stephen Davis will have trouble running against the Baltimore front, particularly without Tre Johnson, Cory Ramey and probably Keith Sims. Irving Fryar, who despite his 38 years has been Washington's best receiver, also is out.

Stover, 18-of-20 on field goals this season, is more experienced and probably more dependable than Kris Heppner, signed this week by the Redskins after going 6-for-14 in Seattle.

That's the difference. RAVENS, 12-9

Jacksonville (plus 6) at Tennessee (Monday night) Will playing the team that handed them their only three losses last season wake up the Jaguars? TITANS, 21-6

Oakland (plus 2.5) at Kansas City The Raiders' secondary was shredded by San Francisco's Jeff Elvis Grbac. CHIEFS, 24-20

Atlanta (plus 18) at St. Louis The Falcons' had Chris Chandler in their first meeting and were at home. They still led by 21, although they held the Rams to 41, two points under. Please see PROS, Page 02

"When it comes to the tournament, you can kind of toss it all out," Nyblade said. "You just can't tell with tournaments."

In other action, No. 2-seeded Pocatello (3-1-2) hosts No. 3 Highland (2-2-2), also at 4:30 p.m. today. This game might be the closest of the tournament, as both previous contests between these two rivals resulted in ties.

"Right now, they are a step above the rest of us," Nyblade said. "We're still all playing catch-up right now."

The first-round winners will play Saturday at the higher-seeded team's home field. The first-round losers will do the same Saturday, but in a loser-out contest. Game times have yet to be announced.

Century plays No. 5 Blackfoot Saturday at 9 a.m. with the winner receiving a second-round bye. The loser will play the loser of the Jerome/Bonneville game at 2 p.m.

One classification lower, Burley enters the Region IV-VI District Tournament as the top-ranked team from the Magic Valley. The Bobcats (6-1-1 conference) take a No. 2 seed into the tournament and will get a first-round bye before taking on the winner of the No. 3 Jerome/No. 4 Bonneville game at 2 p.m. Saturday.

All of Saturday's games will be played in Idaho Falls. After that, games will be played at the higher-seeded team's home field.

The tournament's third-place finisher will play the fourth-place team from District III for the final state berth.

The Bobcats have beaten both teams twice during the regular season, edging Jerome 3-0 at home and 3-1 on the road and downing Bonneville twice by identical 1-1 scores.

A disappointing 2-1 loss to Highland on Wednesday not only cost Twin Falls a No. 2 seed in the Region III tournament, it also cost the Bruins an opportunity to host a first-round game.

with plenty of stifles and blitz packages. "With Thomson, we got some pretty good speed, and he's helping them from rushing," Schaal said.

"We have to force them to throw it." With the football, look for Bruins' all-purpose back Orin Clements to get lots of looks. He had an 80-yard run on the ground last week. Clements caught his first two touchdowns of the season.

Both teams have been riddled with injuries, but penalties and mistakes have been mostly. Jerome made 80 yards in penalties in its first three games and Anderson said the Tigers have hurt themselves with poor play. "We've been shooting ourselves in the foot," he said.

"We can move the ball, but we have too many mistakes in the red zone."

A refrain Schaal is very familiar with. "We've just got to eliminate mistakes," he said. "Turnovers, fumbles, missed assignments, dropped balls, doing a better job on being sound offensively and defensively."

Rivalry aside, a victory would give Schaal's team momentum heading into next Friday's must-win game at Pocatello. Beat the Indians, and the coach said the Bruins should make the playoffs facing powerhouse Highland.

"We still have a shot," Schaal said. "Once you get in the playoffs that's a whole different season."

Blue Jackets notch inaugural victory

CALGARY, Alberta — Kevin Adams' first career two-goal game came at the perfect time for the expansion Columbus Blue Jackets.

Adams snipped a tie with his second goal of the game 4:13 into the third period Thursday, helping the Blue Jackets to the first victory in franchise history, a 3-2 triumph over the Calgary Flames.

Shortly before scoring the goal, Adams had a breakaway, but was checked off the puck by defenseman Robyn Regehr before he could get a shot off. The puck bounced to David Vyborny, whose wrist shot was stopped by goaltender Mike Vernon. But Adams backhanded the rebound into the top left corner for a 3-2 lead.

Columbus had two tries to win its first game, but came up short in losses to Chicago and Toronto. The Blue Jackets scored three goals in the first period of their first-ever game, but were outscored 12-1 over the next five periods before tonight's contest.

Stars 4, Flyers 1
DALLAS — Brett Hull scored twice to pass Mario Lemieux on the NHL's career goal list Thursday night and lead the Dallas Stars to a 4-1 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers.

Red Wings 4, Blackhawks 0
CHICAGO — Manny Lepage stopped 23 shots for his first NHL shutout and Detroit scored on its first three shots in a victory over Chicago.

Doug Brown, Sergei Fedorov and Tomas Holmstrom connected in the opening 5:39 to chase goalie Jocelyn Thibault and spoil the Blackhawks home opener. Brendan Shanahan added a goal with 8:02 left in the game.

The only ondraft silenced a sellout United Center crowd moments after the Blackhawks introduced their 75th anniversary team in a pregame ceremony.

No. 3 Hokies rout West Virginia

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Andre Davis scored three touchdowns and No. 3 Virginia Tech overcame its first deficit of the year to beat West Virginia 48-20 on Thursday night.

In a span of 6:06, Davis scored on a 30-yard reverse, a 64-yard pass from Michael Vick, and a 76-yard punt return — the Atlantic 10 sprint champion's third return for a touchdown this season. It gave the Hokies a 34-14 lead late in the third quarter.

Virginia Tech linebacker Ben Taylor smashes West Virginia running back Avon Coburn during the first quarter in Blacksburg, Va., Thursday.

Only 4:10 later, after the Hokies stopped West Virginia's fourth-and-3 try from the Virginia Tech 36, Vick found Davis behind Richard Bryant and hit him for their longest connection this year. Davis, who averaged 27.5 yards per catch last year, came in averaging just 11.3 this year.

Finally, Davis capped his burst less than two minutes later by fielding Mark Fazzolari's punt at the own 24, getting a devastating block from Wayne Ward and taking off to the right side of the field. The 27-point third-quarter spree brought a tall crowd at Lane Stadium back to life after a first half that was a Hokies' horror show.

MAJOR LEAGUE PLAYOFFS

New Yorkers salivate over a Subway Series

NEW YORK (AP) — Outside the New York Public Library on Fifth Avenue, the lions are wearing giant Yankees and Mets hats.

"I've been a Yankee fan since 1951," said Jim Salone of Rochester, N.Y., a retired UPS manager who was eyeing warmup jackets at the Yankees Clubhouse Store on the Upper East Side Thursday.

"I think it would go at least six games, if not seven. I think they're very well matched."

The last Subway Series was in 1956, when the Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers in seven. The Dodgers and Giants moved west in 1958, replaced by the expansion Mets in 1962.

Mets-Cards: The hot ticket

ST. LOUIS — Dick Cheney was in town Thursday. President Clinton was expected today, with Al Gore due over the weekend as he prepares for Tuesday's debate here with George W. Bush.

"This is what's on top of everyone's mind right now," said Sheila LaRose, 37, a lifelong St. Louis Cardinal fan who, like many of the city's residents in recent weeks, was decked in bright red.

Cheney, in Missouri twice this week, was among Thursday night's crowd at Game 2. Asked whether he believed St. Louis sports fans were tuned to politics

Middle-infield pals meet in super showdown

The Associated Press

It took a while but the two shortstop pals are all even after two games in the American League playoffs.

Seattle's Alex Rodriguez got the jump with a monstrous home run that was headed for the upper deck at Yankee Stadium Tuesday night before it hit the screen on the left-field foul pole.

That accounted for half the runs in the Mariners' 2-0 Game 1 victory over the New York Yankees.

His buddy, Derek Jeter, was silent in that game, striking out three times, a major part of the offense came the Yankees were in.

But Jeter drew even with Rodriguez in Game 2, hitting a two-run homer Wednesday to cap a seven-run eighth inning in the Yankees' 7-1 victory.

games of the series, and the rivalry is heating up.

Did Rodriguez think the Game 1 homer might ignite his pal?

"I don't want to talk about what might turn him around," A-Rod said, "because I don't want anything turning him around."

"I can't keep up with him in homers," Jeter said. "I keep saying this series is not about me against A-Rod. He's not pitching to me and I'm not pitching to him. I wish I was, actually, because I have a nasty two-seamer."

energized by each other, two of the best shortstops in the game.

They share matinee-idol good looks and frightening talent, each considered a major factor in the success of their teams.

Jeter is a favorite of Yankees manager Joe Torre. During the team's offensive drought, Torre needed his shortstop in the dugout saying, "Are you guys trying?" The shortstop shot him one of his over-the-shoulder Mona

Air miles pile up for Yankees

SEATTLE (AP) — The New York Yankees are solid gold, at least when it comes to air miles.

In 12 days since the end of the regular season, the Yankees already have traveled 12,542 miles in the air, making two trips to Oakland and one to Seattle.

By the time they return to New York on Monday morning, their total will have climbed to 14,938.

After finishing a three-game series at Seattle on Aug. 30, the Yankees traveled home, had an off day, and then finished the season with games on 31 consecutive days — a major league record — perhaps part of the reason they crashed with 15 losses in their final 18 games, including seven in a row entering the playoffs.

these days, the Republican vice presidential nominee quipped: "I'm a politician who's tuned in on St. Louis sports."

Mets or Cards? "I have to be neutral on that," Cheney replied, grinning. But he joked that having to work the baseball park for votes was "tough duty."

Veteran utilityman Shawn Dunston had some advice for viewers who regret missing a presidential debate for a ballgame.

"During the commercial, you want to hear what they have to say," Dunston said. "Then you turn back to sports."

Mark McGwire was disappointed that a St. Louis television station chose to air the first presidential debate last week instead of a playoff game between the New York Yankees and the Oakland Athletics.

"Major League Baseball should be embarrassed by that," McGwire said. "Channel 5 here in St. Louis should be embarrassed. When did a playoff game ever not get shown?"

Twins, GM Ryan reach deal

MINNEAPOLIS — General manager Terry Ryan and the Minnesota Twins have reached agreement on a contract that will keep him with the team for another year.

The agreement marks the first time that Ryan will work under a contract since he became general manager at the end of the 1994 season. He previously has worked on his debate days. The Twins have endured eight straight losing years and are 404-548 in Ryan's six full seasons as general manager.

Hingis breezes through Swisscom quarters

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — World No. 1 Martina Hingis had an easy time in the quarterfinals of the $1 million Swisscom Challenge, taking just 47 minutes Thursday to oust Russian qualifier Anastasiya Myskina.

Hingis, still looking for her first title in her native Switzerland, beat the 55th-ranked Myskina 6-0, 6-4.

"I felt in control and I could feel she had a lot of respect," said Hingis, fresh off her singles and doubles triumph in Filderstadt, Germany, on Sunday. "Even in an interview with her I saw this morning I could see it."

Tennis

"When you see people like that, you feel the match is already half won."

The sometimes combative Hingis simply overwhelmed the nervous Russian in the opening set, sending her chasing wildly after her shots. Myskina, who had topped home favorite Patty Schnyder in the opening round and eighth-seeded Anastasiya Dementieva in the second, appeared bewildered, and compounded her own misery with 12 unforced errors.

However, with the lack of challenge, Hingis began to lose focus in the second set, her play often bordering on sloppy. This time, when she broke to jump ahead 2-1, Myskina immediately broke back. But the difference in ranking was evident in the final moments, with Hingis taking the Russian's serve again at 4-4 then easily holding on to wrap up the match.

One of the players Hingis could meet next is sixth-seeded American Jennifer Capriati, who won her ninth career tournament title in Luxembourg two weeks ago. Capriati, needed just 58 minutes Thursday to oust France's Anne-Gaëlle Sidot 6-3, 6-1 in a second-round match.

France's Nathalie Tauziat breezed through her first singles match of the week and into the quarterfinals, routing Bulgaria's Magdalena Maleeva in straight sets 6-0, 6-4.

In the singles quarterfinals, Tauziat will meet Austria's Barbara Schett, who upset fifth-seeded Amanda Coetzer in a three-set marathon. After an intense 2-hour, 7-minute clash, Schett, a quarterfinalist at the Sydney Olympics, finally prevailed 7-6 (6), 3-6, 6-4 over the South African.

Frazier lounges while men struggle in their matches

TOKYO — Gustavo Kuerten and Mark Philippoussis struggled to third-round victories Thursday at the Japan Open tennis tournament, while defending women's champion Amy Frazier won easily. Kuerten, the 24-year-old Brazilian ranked third in the world, needed three sets and almost two hours to overcome unseeded Italian Andrea Gaudenzi 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Philippoussis got a surprisingly tough match from South Korean qualifier Yong-il Yoon, but the third-seeded Australian prevailed in straight sets 7-6 (7), 6-4. Things were much easier for Frazier. The 28-year-old American, seeded second to France's Julie Halard-Decugis, dominated Austria's Sylvia Plischke 6-1, 6-2 and moved one step closer to recapturing the women's crown.

Indiana Pacers coach Isiah Thomas watches his team from the bench during an exhibition game against the Minnesota Timberwolves in Indianapolis Wednesday. Thomas will take his place in the Basketball Hall of Fame Friday.

Overachieving Isiah heads Hall inductees

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — With that lanky face and unimposing 6-foot-1 frame, Isiah Thomas will step on stage today, looking harmless enough, to take his place in the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Don't be fooled: This man didn't just flit, fly and then beam an angel's smile. With the temperament of a street fighter and the heart of an executioner, he helped make the NBA not just beautiful, but bruising.

Ask Chuck Daly, who coached Thomas, Vinnie Johnson, Joe Dumars, Dennis Rodman, Bill Laimbeer and Co., aka the Bad Boys of Detroit, "We kind of lived up to it. We were a very physical team. We did not have the finesse," Daly said. "We had to win another way."

Thomas enters the club of basketball's greats with NBA master shooter Bob McAdoo and Tennessee women's coach Pat Summitt. The other new hall of famers are the most winning high school coach ever, Morgan Wootton of DeMatha High in Hyattsville, Md.; Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton; and the late Syracuse Nationals founder Danny Biasone, who introduced the 24-second clock.

As a Pistons guard, Thomas ran the offense for NBA championship teams in 1989 and 1990. He could jump, shoot, pass and steal balls like few others, averaging 19.2 points a game and 9.3 assists in his career. He ranks fourth all time for NBA assists. A 12-time All-Star, he commanded a spot on the NBA's list of 50 greatest players in 1996.

"He might have been the best player in history if he were 5 inches taller," Daly said.

The sometimes combative Thomas, who grew up in a tough Chicago neighborhood, disliked nothing more than losing. He refused to shake hands with Michael Jordan and the rest of the Chicago team when it bumped the Pistons from the 1991 Eastern Conference playoff, although he later said he regretted his behavior.

Thomas had tasted success early with an NCAA championship at Indiana in 1981, scoring 23 points in a 63-50 victory over North Carolina.

In recent years, he has refused to fade quietly into NBA retirement. He became part owner and general manager of the Toronto Raptors, bought the Continental Basketball Association for $10 million, worked in broadcasting and carried out other business ventures.

In July, he took on his first coaching job, replacing Larry Bird with the Indiana Pacers. As Miami's assistant coach, McAdoo also takes a break from NBA responsibilities to accept membership in the Hall of Fame. As a 6-foot-9 forward, he led the NBA in scoring during 1974-76, averaging more than 30 points a game in each of the three seasons. He averaged 22.1 points and 9.4 rebounds for his career.

Few, though, know more about winning than Summitt. In 26 seasons at Tennessee, she has led the Lady Vols to six national championships, including a 39-0 record in an unforgettable 1997-98 season. Summitt holds a 728-150 win-loss record. She also coached the U.S. women to a 1984 Olympic gold medal.

Interim Indiana coach lets players have fun

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Don't expect to see Mike Davis barking out instructions tonight when Indiana opens practice.

Or taking center stage. Instead, Davis is ushering in a new era of Hoosier basketball with his own version of Midnight Madness.

"This is their reward for really working hard," Davis said. "They're going to have some fun, but they're not going to be out there clowning around."

Hoosier players will find the atmosphere more relaxed. Gone are the days of fired coach Bob Knight's Midnight Madness in which players were required to do drills.

Instead, Davis, who accepted the interim job at Indiana last month, has implemented the spirit of festivities — 3-point shooting and dunk contests — not normally associated with such a high-profile event.

The practice will be Davis' first appearance in front of Hoosier fans since Knight was fired for violating Indiana's "zero-tolerance" policy after he allegedly cursed and grabbed a freshman student in the entrance to Assembly Hall.

Davis, too, is taking a relaxed approach.

"I'm going to sit back and watch unless someone challenges

me in the 3-point contest or the dunk contest or something," he said, laughing. "I would compete in the 3-point contest but I couldn't compete in the dunk contest because haven't been able to touch the rim for the last 10 years.

Not only is Davis trying to keep the night more enjoyable, he's also invited the Indiana women's team to participate for the first time in recent years.

Knight had little to do with the women's basketball team in past seasons.

"I think they've got a great coach in coach (Kathy) Bennett and I think the women's program is going to go to the next level," Davis said. "It gives these players a lifetime memory of participating with the men."

It won't be the only time, either.

On Nov. 10, the Hoosiers' exhibition game against Marathon Oil will be preceded by a women's game against a Finnish team, and a week later the women's season-opener against Washington will precede the men's season-opener against Pepperdine.

Passenger boardings for SkyWest Airlines - a Delta Connection carrier - at Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

September 2000: 1,561
That's a hefty 28 percent decrease from September 1999.

January-September 2000: 26,020
That's almost exactly the same as 26,028 for the first nine months of 1999.
(Those totals don't include charter flights.)

"We lost a lot to the runway closure, but we knew that would happen," said David Allen, manager of the Twin Falls airport. "Overall we're flat, but that's still not bad considering. Perhaps we can make up some of it through the end of the calendar year."

An unfinished runway last month led to an unexpectedly long shutdown. The runway resurfacing project finished two days late because a contractor ran out of the oil used to make asphalt. The unexpected delay didn't give SkyWest time to cancel flights, and affected passengers could choose to fly later, rebook to Boise or Pocatello, or get a refund or credit toward another flight.

Unified BID's board holds first meeting

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - These are the first days of a new marriage, and the partners are learning to keep house together. Thursday, the Historic Old Towne Twin Falls board held its first meeting to set forth a mission and to elect officers and three at-large members to help direct the newly unified downtown and Old Towne areas.

Executive Director Tim Jones defined his role as changing from promoting events to selling the unified districts as a good place to do business. He also emphasized a need to provide better service to all members of the business improvement district.

"A lot of people aren't receiving any benefits from their assessments," Jones said. "We need to do something different." The first call of duty was election of officers. Former downtown BID Chairman Ron Thompson, who owns Cain's Home Furnishings, was elected chairman of the unified BID; and Richard Crowley, owner of Crowley's Soda Fountain and General Store, was elected vice chairman.

In light of complications with the former downtown BID's books, the position of secretary-treasurer was separated, and Bonnie Lezama - a former employee of the downtown BID - was elected secretary. Jim Vickers, owner of Vickers Western Stores, was elected treasurer. At some point, a finance committee will be selected to work with Vickers, and an accounting firm has been hired on an ongoing basis to help keep up the accounts.

The new board, consisting of 12 members so far, elected three more to join on the basis of what would balance representation:

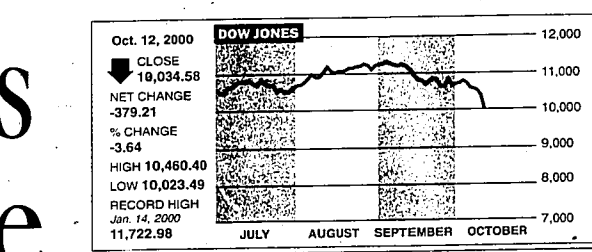

- Norm Wright of First Federal Savings Bank was elected as a representative of banks, which make up a significant portion of the district.
- Dave Woodhead, owner of The Lamphouse Theater, was elected primarily as a representative for landlords.
- Elina Annas, marketing director for Cooper Norman & Co., was elected because of her work on numerous downtown projects.

The board now consists of 15 members, all of whom will serve in full capacity. The board also unanimously chose five ex-officio - or nonvoting - members from the community. They include Tom Courtney to represent the city of Twin Falls, Glenda Thompson to represent City Council, Dave McAlindin to represent the Urban Renewal Agency, Kent Just to represent the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and Carleen Herring to represent Region IV Development Corp.

On every second and fourth Tuesday of the month - for now - the board will meet in order to maintain the momentum of refurbishing the district.

"By meeting more often we can keep everything current and fresh," Thompson said.

ISU's donated robot handles microchips

POCATELLO - A donated robot right out of the box will give Idaho State University students hands-on experience in manufacturing microchips.

Hyundai Semiconductor America Inc. donated the $350,000 piece of machinery to the School of Applied Technology to train students on equipment now being used in the work force. Often the machinery is outdated before they even hunt for jobs.

"It was like Christmas morning. When it arrived, students were climbing all over the shipping blocks and had moved it inside before I could even get a look at it," said David Green in the electro-mechanical technology program.

The robot's function is handling wafers: palm-sized discs carrying several microchips. It will carry wafer boats, used to transport about 25 wafers at a time.

By using the robot, operators can eliminate human error and some of the possibility for contamination particles in factories' "clean rooms."

Federal Reserve approves purchase of First Security

SALT LAKE CITY - As expected, the Federal Reserve Board this week approved Wells Fargo & Co.'s purchase of Salt Lake City-based First Security Corp., paving the way for the $2.9 billion deal to close by month's end.

The board voted 5-0 to back the acquisition, which will make San Francisco-based Wells Fargo Utah's largest banking company.

Both banks have branches in the Magic Valley.

The approval comes after the U.S. Justice Department said in September that it, too, will allow the deal to go through if Wells Fargo sells four of its branches and 35 First Security branches.

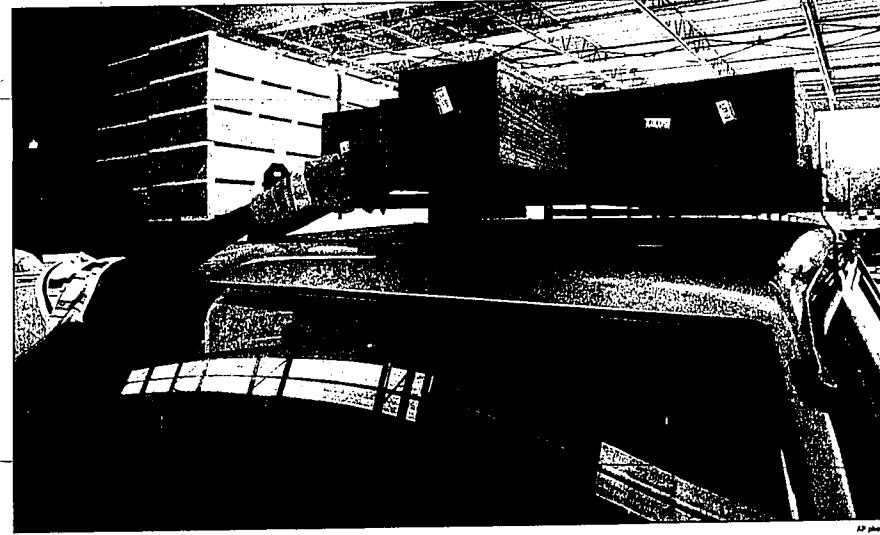

Branches being divested include Wells Fargo branches at 491 Sun Valley Road E. in Ketchum and 205 N. Main in Hailey, being sold to Kellspell, Mont.-based Glacier Bancorp Inc.

All of the branch sales are in areas where the Justice Department deemed the banking market would not remain competitive if Wells Fargo were able to keep the branches after its acquisition of First Security.

Spencer Eccles, First Security chairman and chief executive, agreed to sell the bank to Wells Fargo in early April, three days after Zions Bancorporation shareholders rejected a deal to acquire First Security.

Under the Wells Fargo deal, First Security shareholders, who approved the acquisition July 31, will get 0.355 shares of Wells Fargo stock for each First Security share.

Home Depot employee Ibrahim Hussien All loads a truck with building materials at an Atlanta store Thursday. For the fiscal year, which ends Jan. 31, Home Depot said its per-share earnings will be $1.16 to $1.17, falling short of analysts' expectation.

Home Depot warning pulls down retailer stocks

CHICAGO - Home Depot Inc., the United States' biggest retailer of home-improvement goods, said Thursday that fiscal-third-quarter earnings would be less than expected, as lower retail prices for lumber and other building materials undermined its sales.

The warning sent shares of Home Depot and its competitors lower.

Atlanta-based Home Depot, which has a new Twin Falls store, said profit in the quarter ending this month would be about 28 cents a share. It was expected to earn 31 cents a share, according to the average estimate of analysts polled by First Call/Thomson Financial.

Same-store sales for the quarter are expected to rise 4 percent, the retailer said, less than the 5 percent to 7 percent increase the company predicted previously.

Home Depot is scheduled to announce its profits Nov. 14.

For the fiscal year ending in January, Home Depot forecasts it will earn between $1.16 and $1.17 a share, also less than First Call/Thomson Financial's average estimate of $1.25.

Besides the plunge in Home Depot stock, shares in Lowe's Companies Inc., Home Depot's biggest competitor, were down, along with the stock in Sears Roebuck and Co., a more diversified retailer that also competes with Home Depot.

San Francisco company negotiates for Albertson's building

SALT LAKE CITY - A San Francisco company is negotiating to buy the American Stores tower in downtown Salt Lake City.

The prospective buyer, Thomas Real Estate Advisors, and building owner Albertson's Inc. - a Boise-based grocery chain that does business in Twin Falls - are working out final details.

"If all goes well, the building most likely will be sold by the end of the year," Jenny Enochson, Albertson's spokeswoman, said Wednesday. She was quoted in a copyright story in The Salt Lake Tribune.

Thomas Real Estate Advisors presumably will buy the building to lease to prospective tenants, but a company spokesman did not return calls.

The former headquarters of American Stores Co., the 25-story tower became part of Albertson's after the Boise chain acquired American Stores in 1999.

After the merger, about 800 of 1,600 American Stores' employees in the building either transferred to Albertson's sites outside Utah or were laid off, leaving the building largely empty.

This spring, the Salt Lake Organizing Committee for the 2002 Winter Games moved about 400 employees into seven floors of the tower. By the time the Games start, SLOC expects to have 800 workers in the building.

SLOC's lease expires soon after the Games. Spokeswoman Caroline Shaw said Wednesday the change of ownership will not affect the committee's lease.

Selling the building has not been easy, and the fact that it has remained unsold has put several other downtown office developments on hold.

Chicago-based Hamilton Partners, for example, wants to build a 20-story building across the street from the American Stores tower, but the company has been unable to obtain financing because lenders first want to see what will happen to the American Stores building.

But a sale is not enough. Only if the building begins to fill with tenants will Hamilton Partners be able to proceed.

"That building has been the one thing that has held up our project," said Bruce Bingham of Hamilton Partners.

PETA aims at Burger King

Animal rights group demands changes, threatens campaign

Knight Ridder News Service

MIAMI - In its efforts to create a kinder, gentler world for farm animals, the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals turned its sights this week on Burger King.

The animal rights group threatened to launch a campaign against the Miami hamburger chain with Burley, Twin Falls and Jerome restaurants, unless it institutes stringent animal handling standards among its suppliers and slaughterhouses.

The threat from PETA comes as the group emerges mostly victorious from an 11-month crusade against McDonald's, with a campaign that encompassed more than 400 protests, posters of decapitated cow heads and the relabeling of "Happy Meals" as "Unhappy Meals."

"Please know that since we've suspended our McDonald's campaign, we are in the process of choosing our next target," Bruce G. Friedrich, PETA's vegetarian campaign coordinator, wrote in a letter to Burger King's Chief Executive Colin Storm.

"As McDonald's chief competitor, Burger King is our likely choice," the letter said.

Burger King already faces a boycott threat from the Rev. Al Sharpton to protest the company's treatment of the black community, while Muslim groups, angry over Burger King's operation of a restaurant in a Jewish West Bank settlement, are also threatening to target the fast-food group.

After several delays, Sharpton officially kicked off a boycott Wednesday covering only New York.

In its letter to Burger King, PETA listed a series of demands, from giving children's room to respect the farming range to making sure that all hogs and cattle are completely stunned before the slaughterhouse process commences.

Burger King issued a sharp rebuttal to the threat, saying its suppliers of animal products "are in full compliance with all regulations governing the meat and poultry industries," which included requirements for the humane treatment of animals prior to and during slaughter.

In response to the PETA campaign, McDonald's in 1999 set out the farming standards and established accountability procedures for farms and slaughterhouses in an attempt to diminish the stress and suffering of animals.

Among concerns raised by PETA are violations of humane animal handling practices at the IBP slaughterhouse in Washington state, one of Burger King's largest suppliers and part

Dow drops on rising Middle East tensions

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 379 points Thursday, nearly dropping below 10,000, as new Middle East violence and soaring oil prices compounded worries about weak company profits.

Unrest triggers market tremors

News of an apparent terrorist attack on a U.S. ship, and more violence in the Middle East, sent shockwaves through the business world on Thursday.

Oil prices up as much as 10 percent, helping to re-ignite inflation fears. And Israeli combat helicopters rocketed Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's residential compound in the Gaza Strip as well as a West Bank town in retaliation for the brutal slayings of three Israeli soldiers.

Oil prices reached $37.00 a barrel at one point on the New York Mercantile Exchange, nearing its recent 10-year high of $37.80 a barrel. Crude futures closed Tuesday at $36.06, up $2.81.

Meanwhile, shares of Home Depot, the nation's largest home improvement retailer, tumbled $13.81, or 28 percent, to $53.15 after it was reported Thursday of lower-than-expected earnings, primarily because of material costs.

Jobless claims rise, but strong appetite for workers remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for state unemployment benefits edged up for the second week in a row but hovered at a level indicating the still-sizzling economy's strong appetite for workers.

The new jobless claims for the week ending Oct. 7, the Labor Department said Thursday, that was the highest level since claims stood at 310,000 on Sept. 16.

Last week's gain came on top of a 12,000 rise in jobless applications reported for the prior week.

Even with the increases, the nation's labor market remains tight, meaning businesses are scrambling to find qualified workers to fill openings, economists said.

"It is a worker's market," said economist Clifford Waldman of Waldman Associates. "There's still a big demand for labor."

In making this point, Waldman also noted that the most stable four-week moving average of jobless claims fell last week.

The moving average, which smoothes out week-to-week volatility, declined to 301,500, the lowest point since Aug. 19.

Westinghouse wins waste plant contract

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — The federal government's nuclear waste repository east of here will be managed by a new joint venture in the future.

The U.S. Department of Energy announced Thursday that a five-year, $500 million contract to operate the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant had been awarded to Westinghouse TRU Solutions, a joint venture of Westinghouse Environmental Services Co. and Roy F. Weston Inc. The firm will take over Dec. 1.

Westinghouse Environmental Services Co. with 88 percent of the contract is owned by Boise-based Washington Group International.

of a company with some Magic Valley shareholders. The Washington State Attorney General's Office has filed a complaint against the slaughterhouse, but the case has not yet been returned before they are killed.

To avoid the campaign, PETA called on Burger King to show it a copy of its standards for the welfare of animals raised by the corporation's beef, pork, chicken, egg and dairy product suppliers.

PETA said Burger King should exceed the new animal welfare standards set by McDonald's. The separate campaign by Sharpton is designed to protest March 1999, was designed to permanently store plutonium-contaminated waste more than 2,100 feet underground in ancient salt beds. The waste — such things as contaminated clothing, tools, debris and residue — comes from the nation's defense complex.

The Energy Department solicited competitive bids last August to manage the operation.

"By holding an open competition, the department was able to challenge industry to bring their best ideas forward on actions needed to maintain WIPP's safety and operational efficiency," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said.

The agency received two bids. The contract, which has a five-year option to renew, requires the contractor to retain the current work force at comparable pay and benefits. The repository currently employs about 1,000 people.

He will lead a picket line outside a Burger King restaurant in Harlem Saturday. The picket line was expected next week around New York.

If Burger King does not address his concerns, Sharpton said he would announce a national boycott against the fast-food chain during the Million Family March on Monday in Washington.

Rising bank fees spur more shopping around.

By Ellen At Powell The Associated Press NEW YORK — Routine banking is getting to be an expensive activity. That's because fees are going up, there are more of them, and they're harder to avoid.

According to a new survey of more than 350 banks by the online financial information site bankrate.com, the fees to maintain checking accounts and to deposit checks have risen sharply in the past two years.

So, too, has the cost of using automated teller machines, with customers often facing fees from more than one bank and from their own bank.

Experts advise that there are ways to keep banking costs down — if you're willing to shop around. They suggest to be realistic about the way you use your accounts, then hunt for the best ones with the lowest cost.

Faculty says governor listened, but made no commitments

Idaho Gov.
Dirk Kempthorne

The Associated Press

LEWISTON - The leader of a fledgling faculty group at Idaho's four-year schools is not optimistic Gov. Dirk Kempthorne will include money in his budget proposal next year to make university professors' salaries more competitive.

Kempthorne appears to be more interested in proposing one-time expenditures rather than increasing the ongoing budgets of Idaho's three universities and Lewis-Clark State College, said Randy Earles, Idaho Council of Higher Education Faculty chairman.

"I still think we have a chance of our salary competitiveness budget request being in his budget request, but it will be after more careful consideration," the Idaho State University music professor said Wednesday.

Faculty leaders met Tuesday with Kempthorne in Boise to ask him to include $2.5 million in his proposed budget to make their salaries more competitive.

Professors say average salaries in Idaho are 18 percent, or $8,380 a year, below pay levels of schools across the nation. Last year, the average salary in Idaho was $47,568.

They say their schools are experiencing high turnover rates and costly searches to find replacements. Kempthorne spokesman Mark Snider described the meeting as a good dialogue, but he said no decisions were made.

Kempthorne asked about cash other than general tax revenue that could be used to boost pay. He was told other sources were tapped out.

Last year, the Legislature appropriated $1.3 million for Kempthorne's initiative for excellence in higher education. The four-year schools matched the state dollars for the effort aimed at retaining and recruiting key teachers. But school officials were disappointed Kempthorne did not propose expanding his initiative earlier this year.

This year's Legislature boosted state support for the four-year schools by $12.9 million to $215 million and appropriated enough money for 3.5 percent raises. The Idaho Board of Education is seeking about a 10 percent hike in state support next year.

Veterans deserve recognition for preserving freedom in America

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the letters you printed earlier this year encouraging veterans to speak to students about their military experiences. In recent years, I had noticed less and less recognition of this holiday in schools and realized that unless we teach our children about the valuable contributions of all veterans, they will be forgotten. So, for the past two years I have organized a Veterans-Day assembly for students and staff at Van Buren Elementary School in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Our assemblies have been successful and greatly appreciated by students, staff and local veterans.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the letters you printed earlier this year encouraging veterans to speak to students about their military experiences. In recent years, I had noticed less and less recognition of this holiday in schools and realized that unless we teach our children about the valuable contributions of all veterans, they will be forgotten. So, for the past two years I have organized a Veterans-Day assembly for students and staff at Van Buren Elementary School in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Our assemblies have been successful and greatly appreciated by students, staff and local veterans.

A terrific resource for schools planning a Veterans Day program is available at our Web site: www.va.gov/pubaff/vetsday/index.htm. Our site contains ideas to use with students from kindergarten to high school.

The school also honors veterans with a "Wall of Stars." Near the end of October, each student is given a note with red, white and blue paper stars attached to take home. The instructions are for each family to talk about veterans in their family. Students are to write on the stars the names of any family members or friends who have served in the military. When the stars are returned to school, they are placed in random order on the "Wall of Stars" to create a visual thank-you to all veterans. During November conferences, students enjoy pointing out to their parents the stars they have placed on the board.

I recommend that all parents and educators use Veterans Day as an opportunity to teach their students about the contributions and sacrifices veterans have made so that we may enjoy our many freedoms.

—KATHY SHELTON

Day as a day of remembrance, and in 1938 it date became a federal holiday. In 1954, the name was changed by Congress to Veterans Day to honor all U.S. veterans.

Readers, a reminder: Hundreds of thousands of our service members gave their lives so that we can live in a free country and elect our leaders by voting. If you haven't already done so, there may still be time to register to vote. Call your local registrar of voters for more information.

DEAR ABBY: I am searching for a tradition or custom for my daughter's 13th birthday. I have heard of sweet-16 parties, but is there something for a sweet 13-year-old going from childhood to her teen years?

—MANTECA, CALIF., MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Since the age of 13 marks the official end of her days as a "girl" and the beginning of her years as a young woman, take your daughter out to dinner to celebrate. Consider including some of her older female relatives who are especially close to her. It will be an occasion she will remember for the rest of her life.

Go ahead, sleep in an outhouse

Used to be against the law in San Jose, Calif., to sleep in an neighbor's outhouse without permission. It's not enforced any more. Go ahead, if you want to. Do it.

Doll creator Rose O'Neill said she coined the name "Kewpie" out of "Cupid" and "baby."

Who designed the U.S. President's personal flag? Each President designs his/her own, if he/she wants to.

Q. I just can't buy the line that every cowboy in the Old West carried his own prayer book...? A. "Prayer book" was slang for cigarette papers. The Nile River is about as long as a straight flight between New York City and Los Angeles. Q. How can the South American natives in backwoods areas endure the flies and mosquitoes? A. No problem, evidently. According to South American explorer Willard Price, those Indians don't eat salt, so rarely are they diets, though, they lose this resistance, Price said. Many have written, "Love is Blind," but Chaucer wrote it first, I believe. Put a live piranha and a live trout of the same size in a fish tank and you can expect the piranha to eat the trout, bones and all, in approximately 25 seconds. Or witness to such an experiment so attest. Q. Weren't the feet of all Chinese women once bound to make them small? A. Not all. Only in the privileged class. Peasant girls were expected to work in the fields, and weren't so disabled. Q. What's the difference between a burro and a donkey? A. No difference. Burro is the Spanish name for donkey.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolf

"The net of the sleeper catches fish." — Greek proverb. "You caught a whopper on that cast," lamented a disgruntled East...

West led his spade jack to South's king. East's slight encouragement with his eighting. With neither time nor resources to test other suits, it was imperative for South to collect four club winners...

How should he play the suit? Typically, a careful South would go for the probable 3-2 break (approximately 66 percent). In today's layout, clubs are 4-1, and the odds-on play loses the game...

South holds: Q 8 3 2, K 5 4, A 7 3, 10 7 4

ANSWER: Two no-trump. Invite opener to bid game if he has more than a minimum.

Send bridge questions or requests for free copies of Ace on Bridge to The Aces, P.O. Box 2626, Sevier Park, 22220 Inland Empire Postage & Service Center, Copyright 2000, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
