Court: Dams violate water act

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — A federal court ruled Friday that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' operation of four Snake River dams violates the Clean Water Act, a decision that could cost the agency millions of dollars to modify the dams to protect endangered salmon.

"I cannot overstate the importance of this ruling for native salmon and steelhead," said Kristen Boyles, an attorney with Earthjustice Legal Defense Fund.

Corps of Engineers ordered to lower Snake temperatures to protect quality, salmon

The U.S. District Court in Portland ordered the Corps to find ways — within 60 days — to lower water temperatures behind the dams to protect the river's water quality and threatened and endangered salmon and steelhead.

The ruling supports environmental groups, who were joined by the Nez Perce tribe and the state of Oregon in the suit, who said the dams raise water temperatures and add levels of nitrogen that violate water quality standards.

"This ruling makes it clear that the Corps is just like everybody else," said Tim Stairns, of the National Wildlife Federation. "They are not above the law."

Operation of the four dams in eastern Washington has made a significant contribution to poor water quality on the lower Snake, making the river slower, deeper and too hot for fish, Stairns said. The release of water over the dams sends nitrogen into the water, also harming fish.

Stairns said the ruling allows the Corps to decide whether to make structural

Billingsley idea draws a crowd

By Michael Joumea

HAGERMAN — Interest is high in a proposed state park, water quality and aquaculture research complex in the Hagerman Valley. About 75 area residents attended a public information hearing Friday to discuss the idea for a park along the valley's Billingsley Creek being pushed by Idaho Sen. John Sandy, R-Hagerman.

Representatives from a number of agencies and groups with an interest in the 300-acre reserve attended the meeting to tell the gathering about the potential for the proposal.

While generally enthusiastic about the idea of preserving the area, people at the meeting were concerned about how the park would be funded and how the park would impact its neighbors.

Casey O'Connor of Buhl encouraged Sandy to do his best in keeping funding for the project as local as possible, saying federal money has too many strings.

"I don't want people from back east deciding what we do with that property out here," O'Connor said.

Sandy said he is considering a number of possible income streams for the park, but the initial cost for the two tracts of land, which are noncontiguous, would likely come strictly from state coffers.

Leasing the small fish hatchery to the University of Idaho, which runs a renowned fish research center in the area for larger projects involving endangered salmon and rare western slope cutthroat trout, could help finance improvements to the park and its administration, Sandy said.

The gathering was also curious about how the new facility would affect local water rights and access to irrigation works. Sandy assured the group that none of ELKO, Nev. — After months of haggling and legal maneuvering, the federal government might allow local officials to reopen the South Canyon Road near Jarbidge, Nev.

U.S. Forest Service officials refused comment Friday on the nature of the agreement, but state Assemblyman John Carpenter, R-Elko, Friday called the agreement "a pretty big victory." Carpenter said earlier this week the settlement would allow the rebuilding of the road by

Bush, Fox pledge cooperation in summit long on symbolism

The Associated Press

SAN CRISTOBAL, Mexico — President Bush praised Mexican President Vicente Fox as a straight-shooting ally in fighting drugs and helping America cope with power shortages at a summit Friday that produced pledges of close cooperation but no major agreements on long-simmering disputes.

"Each nation has a new president, and a new perspective," Bush said.

The casual, colorful eight-hour summit at Fox's ranch 210 miles northwest of Mexico City was overshadowed by the bombing by U.S. and British planes of five Iraqi military sites.

"The leaders declared their meeting a success, if for no other reason than the expectations were set so low. 'This wasn't a meeting to arrive at agreements or details or decisions,' said Fox, who took power in December, ending seven decades of one-party control.

Fox had sought a sense that his nation was taken seriously, a goal

Bush achieved simply by putting Mexico atop his travel schedule. Bush produced an error-free maiden foreign policy trip, using symbols and soothing words to show that he wants to work with Mexico as a partner — not a meddling superpower — to deal with drug trafficking, immigration, trade and other issues that cause friction.

"Our nations are bound together by ties of history, family, values, commerce and culture," said Bush.

Bush orders strike on Iraqi radar sites

Combined wire reports

WASHINGTON — President Bush, signaling that he intends to hold a tough line against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, ordered warplanes Friday to strike five air defense sites on the outskirts of Iraq's capital, Baghdad.

American warplanes joined British fighters the first strike outside the "no fly" zone over southern Iraq in more than two years.

"A routine mission was conducted to enforce the 'no fly' zone," Bush said at a news conference in Mexico with President Vicente Fox. "It was a mission about which I was informed and I authorized. But I repeat, it's a routine mission."

At the Pentagon, a U.S. general called the strike a "self defense measure" initiated ated by the commander of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf. The number of U.S. and British attack planes involved — 24 — was much larger than in previous missions over northern and southern Iraq in recent years.

Iraq said nine people were injured in the attack.

The U.S. Central Command said that Iraq recently increased its use of anti-aircraft artillery and surface-to-air missiles, with more than 60 incidents since Jan. 1. It gave no figures for previous periods. Asked whether the attack was a signal to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that the Bush administration would take more frequent and more forceful military action, Bush said, "Saddam Hussein has got to understand that we expect him to conform to the agreement that he signed" after the 1991 Gulf War.

The missing doors were included in an investigation of crime scene reports, however, Rollins said.

The Times-News obtained the original crime scene inventory on Jan. 7; four days after the shootings that left Williams and two Jerome County deputies dead. That list cataloged 78 pieces of evidence, including a master bedroom door and a kitchen door from Williams' home.

"When we went through it, there were two exhibits that the evidence technician failed to put on there," Rollins said Friday. "It was quite a detailed crime scene. It's nothing major, everything was collected."

The doors are listed as two exhibits on the inventory, with the two entertainment center doors listed together. Coupled with police videotapes and film of the crime scene also added to the list, the inventory now contains 82 exhibits.

The head of the ISP investigation division and a deputy attorney general investigating the case said Friday they didn't think the changes indicate any problems with the investigation.

Deputy Attorney General Michael Henderson said he had no reason to think the ISP had botched the case in any way, but declined further comment.

The ISP this week wrapped up its investigation of the shootings and handed its findings over to the attorney general's office. The attorney general's office is expected to study the findings and make a recommendation on any possible criminal charges. The recommendations would go to Jerome County Prosecutor John Nicholson, who remains in charge of the case.

ISP investigations commander Maj. Dan Chardenus also said he had no reason to think agency investigators had made any mistakes. He also declined to comment on details of the case, citing the attorney general's investigation.

Rollins would not discuss the doors' evidentiary value.

Williams, 47, was killed in the shootout, along with sheriff's Cpls. James Moulson, 30, and Phillip Anderson, 23.

The sheriff's department was attempting to serve a search warrant for illegal drugs on Williams' home.

Officers have said the entrance way door into Williams' home was breached. After the shooting, a hole was visible in the wall behind the entrance way door, suggesting that police kicked in the door.

According to the amended inventory list, the metal door leading from Williams' garage to his home has a footprint on it.

Several guns were also included on the inventory list: A .44-caliber revolver, a 9 mm carbine and a .45-caliber handgun.

Rollins would not comment on who used what guns in the shootout. All guns used in the shootout were taken into police custody as evidence — as is standard procedure when any shooting occurs.

Rollins said "no more pieces of evidence would need to be added to the inventory."

"That was everything that was seized from that house," he said.

changes to the dams, or operational changes, such as altering the way it releases water.

In its written ruling, the federal court said "it was clear error of judgment by the Corps not to address compliance with its legal obligations under the Clean Water Act."

Dutch Meier, an Army Corps

spokesman in Walla Walla, Wash., said Friday he had not seen the ruling. "Once we receive it, we will study it for its implications or requirements so we can determine what actions may be appropriate or necessary and develop any appropriate plans."

Rob Masonis, a spokesman for the conservation group American Rivers, said Friday's ruling will force the Corps to make operational or structural changes to bring the dams into compliance with the clean water law.

tinued their plans after the federal government obtained a restraining order.

"Several hundred volunteers opened up a section of the road in July 2000.

Elko County has held to the argument that the road belongs in the county road system.

The proposed settlement was presented to U.S. Magistrate Robert McQuaid Friday in federal court in Reno, agency spokeswoman Erin O'Connor said.

It is being kept secret until it receives final approval from the Elko County Commission, the U.S. Attorney's Office, the Fish and Wildlife Service, Forest Service and Environmental Protection Agency, she said.

O'Connor would confirm only that "the representatives of the parties involved in the settlement conference have reached tentative resolution of their dispute regarding the Jarbridge South Canyon Road, that they will now recommend for approval."

"The proposed terms are confidential and cannot be discussed publicly," she said Friday afternoon.

Carpenter said Friday night he was prohibited from discussing any details. "The county had to get their road back in order to agree. So you can put two and two together," Carpenter said.

"It's not everything we wanted, but I think it is 80 percent."

Friday's meeting continued a settlement conference, ordered in December by McQuaid. He stepped in after months of mediation between the parties failed to produce an agreement.

The federal government filed notice a year ago that the county had violated federal water law when it worked on the road without necessary permits, endangering Jarbridge River bull trout, protected under the federal Endangered Species Act.

The government was seeking repayment of $400,000 the Forest Service reported spending to block the roadway in December 1998. The county was also facing fines of $27,500 per day from July 1998 when county crews attempted repair work on South Canyon Road.

To allow Elko County to rebuild the road would be a sharp reversal on the part of the Forest Service and Fish and Wildlife Service, which have argued that reconstruction of the road could push the threatened bull trout past the brink of extinction.

It also would be a change of heart for the Justice Department.

The controversy has become a rallying point for private property activists who say the federal government has gone too far in enforcing environmental laws.

Carpenter and other leaders of the effort staged demonstrations last July 4 reopening part of the road the Forest Service had closed off to keep four-wheelers away from the river.

Last year, they paraded down Main Street with 10,000 shovels donated from allies across the county to help rebuild the road.

Police seek teen in professors' deaths

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Police said late Friday night they have issued a warrant for a Vermont teen-ager in connection with the slayings of two Dartmouth College professors.

Police said they were looking for Robert Tullock, 17, of Chelsea, Vt. Police have a warrant charging him with two counts of first-degree murder in the Jan. 27 stabbing deaths of Susanne and Hal Zantop.

Police didn't say how they identified the suspect, but they said he might be traveling with a 16-year-old companion. They didn't release further information.

Zantop, 62, and his wife, 55, were stabbed to death in their secluded off-campus home. They were found by an arriving dinner guest.

Authorities believe the Zantops, who frequently opened their home to students and other guests, were killed by someone they knew or let into their home.

Half Zantop taught earth science. Susanne Zantop was chairwoman of the German Studies Department. Both were natives of Germany.

Bill targets Bush's ban on family planning funds

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of lawmakers launched a bid Thursday to overturn President Bush's ban on giving federal funds to international family planning groups that use other funds to pay for abortion-related activity.

Backing the effort are several international health organizations concerned the ban will force them to halt efforts encouraging their countries to liberalize abortion laws to reduce the number of women who die from illegal abortions.

The legislation has a good chance of passing in the Senate, which historically has been more supportive of family planning and abortion rights. Its prospects are more uncertain in the House, where the Republican majority could use parliamentary procedures to thwart it.

Navy calls off drills with civilian aboard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy submarine commanders have been ordered not to perform emergency surfacing drills with civilians aboard, pending the outcome of investigations into a submarine collision with a Japanese fishing vessel off Hawaii, Navy officials said Friday.

As a precaution, submarine commanders also are not allowed to permit civilians at control stations, the officials said. Two civilians aboard the USS Greeneville were at control positions when the accident happened, although the Navy has said there is no evidence they played any role in the tragedy.

At the Pentagon Friday, a Japanese foreign ministry official, Seishiro Eto, met with Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld and other senior Pentagon officials to discuss last week's accident and prospects for recovering the ship and the nine missing.

The meeting lasted almost an hour longer than the scheduled 75 minutes, and Eto was scheduled to hold talks later at the State Department.

Pentagon spokesman Craig Quigley told reporters that Eto was given a rundown by a Coast Guard representative on their response to the accident, including the rescue of 26 people from aboard the ship.

Eto also was briefed on the continuing effort by the Coast Guard to find the nine people who are missing, Quigley said.

Most of Eto's discussions were with Rudy de Leon, the deputy defense secretary, but Rumsfeld joined the meeting for about 10 minutes, the spokesman said.

President Bush said Thursday the Pentagon should review its policy on civilian participation in military exercises like the emergency ascent drill the Greeneville was performing when it sank the Japanese vessel.

"I think what's going to be necessary is for Secretary Rumsfeld and the Defense Department to review all policy regarding civilian activity during military exercises," Bush told reporters at the White House.

However, civilians are still being allowed to take trips on U.S. submarines, Navy spokesman Cmdr. Greg Smith said Thursday night. Sixteen civilians were aboard the submarine when the accident happened.

"I want to reiterate what I said to the prime minister of Japan: I'm deeply sorry about the accident that took place, our nation is sorry that the accident happened, and we will do everything we can to help recover the bodies," Bush said.

Study: Many Americans have undetected strokes

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A surprising 11 million Americans each year have strokes that are never detected because they cause no obvious symptoms, although over time they may lead to memory loss and other ills, a study contends.

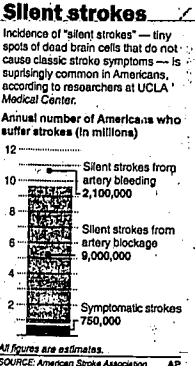

Doctors have long known that people can have insidious "silent strokes" — tiny spots of dead cells inside the brain that do not cause classic stroke symptoms. But the new study suggests they are extremely common, occurring in about 4 percent of the U.S. population each year.

Besides the 11 million Americans who have silent strokes annually, about 750,000 more have ones that cause classic stroke symptoms, such as slurred speech, dizziness and numbness on one side.

"Silent strokes are epidemic in this country," said Dr. Megan C. Leary. While they occur in parts of the brain where they don't cause symptoms right away, "the word 'silent' should be put in quotes, because their effects accumulate over the years."

While a single silent stroke may have no impact, repeated ones lead to memory lapses, mood problems and difficulty walking. They are also a sign that people are especially prone to full-blown strokes.

Leary and colleagues from UCLA Medical Center released the results Friday at a meeting of the American Stroke Association in Fort Lauderdale.

"It's an alarming estimate," said Dr. Robert J. Adams of the Medical College of Georgia. "It's surprisingly high but very possibly accurate." Researchers say silent strokes are rare before age 30. But after that, their prevalence doubles every 10 years. By the time people reach their 70s, one in three has a silent stroke every year.

Russia launches missile tests as tensions with U.S. grow

MOSCOW (AP) — Firing from the sea, air and land, Russia on Friday launched an array of missile tests that underline the strength of its rocket forces amid increased tension with the United States over missile defense.

The tests came as a top Defense Ministry official accused President Bush's administration of engaging in "anti-Russian" rhetoric and basing its proposal for a national missile defense system on "pure fantasy."

The launches also came just days before a planned visit by the head of NATO, whose eastward expansion worries the Kremlin.

"The tests demonstrate that 'Russian strategic forces are capable of overcoming any anti-missile defense, be it a currently existing one or a potential one,' the military's first deputy chief of staff Gen. Valery Manilov said Friday, according to the news agency Interfax.

Firing the Topol with multiple warheads would increase its effectiveness against the proposed U.S. national missile defense system. The U.S. administration says such a system is necessary to protect the country against potential attacks by small countries believed to be developing nuclear missiles.

Russia vehemently opposes the plan, which would require amending the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty that the Kremlin says is a keystone of world stability. The treaty bans national missile defense systems under the belief that a country would not launch a nuclear strike if it were unable to protect itself against retaliation.

The Russian armed forces launched a Topol intercontinental ballistic missile from the Plesetsk base in northwestern Russia and a ballistic missile of unspecified type from a submarine in the Barents Sea off Russia's north coast. Both hit their targets in a test range on the Kamchatka Peninsula some 4,200 miles away in Russia's far eastern extremities, officials said.

Study: Test points to cure for disease

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists may be on the brink of curing Parkinson's disease using transplanted embryonic stem cells, but where and when that new treatment is tested in humans depends on unresolved political decisions, researchers suggested Friday.

Dr. Ole Isacson of Harvard Medical School and Dr. Ronald McKay of the National Institutes of Health said Friday they have both "cured" Parkinson's in mice and rats, using stem cells removed from embryos of laboratory animals.

In a report at the national meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Isacson said mouse and rat embryonic cells, after careful processing, can be grafted into the animal brains where they transform into replacements for cells killed by Parkinson's.

"In mouse models (laboratory tests) these cells have restored function," said Isacson.

Using a slightly different technique, McKay said his NIH lab has also prompted mouse embryonic stem cells to convert into cells that are lacking in Parkinson's.

Clinton inks office deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Bill Clinton struck a deal with the city on Friday to lease office space in Harlem, Rep. Charles Rangel's office said.

The news came after Mayor Rudolph Giuliani had turned down at least two offers for his administration to give up the lease it signed in December on the 14th floor office on 125th Street.

On Tuesday, Clinton declared the Harlem office "perfect." But then came news that the city already held the lease; negotiations ensued.

Officials' silence frustrates lawyer

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The lawyer for the wife of a Jerome County sheriff's deputy killed in a shootout Jan. 3 in Eden said he too is frustrated with law-enforcement officials' refusal to release information about the gunfight which left three people dead.

Jason R. Miciak, the lawyer for Amy Moulson, spoke with The Times-News in an exclusive interview Thursday.

Want to help?

A trust fund for Amy Moulson and her son Derek has been set up at the First Federal Bank of Twin Falls. Checks or money can be dropped off or sent to the bank. Moulson's husband, Cpl. James Moulson, was killed in a shootout

Jan. 3 in Eden while attempting to serve a search warrant for drugs. Checks can be made out to Amy Moulson and sent to the bank at 110 Falls Ave., Twin Falls. For more information, call the First Federal Bank at 735-8085.

Moulson's husband, James Moulson, 30, was killed in a shootout at the home of George Timothy Williams, 47, while attempting to serve a search warrant for illegal drugs. Moulson's partner, Phillip Anderson, 23, was also killed, as was Williams. Law officers said Williams opened fire on the deputies when they entered his home. Miciak — who works for the law firm of Rolig & Peterson in Twin Falls — said he has struggled since taking over the case to get information about the shooting.

And he has not yet heard a response to a letter he sent on Feb. 1 to Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver. In the letter — also addressed to Jerome County Prosecutor John Nicholson and Jerome County commissioners — Miciak says he is representing Moulson and will be overseeing her family's interests. "Having made the ultimate sacrifice, the Moulson family deserves — at the very least — a complete, consistent, honest and humble explanation of James' death. We will require such a report from you personally in the very near future," Miciak says in the letter. "The Moulson family appreciates the support that they have received from this entire Jerome community to this point and expect that all parties

Mary Ireton, along with her husband, Frank, was honored Friday at a dedication ceremony to open the new addition to the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

Classes resume in new addition to CSI building

By Kelly Bryant
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Architect Dave Turner probably best described the overall feeling at Friday's dedication ceremony to open the new addition to the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

"Mission accomplished and it was a pleasure to be involved," Turner said.

Frank and Mary Ireton were honored at the ceremony for helping with the project, which broke ground last March.

"I am just completely and totally overwhelmed," said Mary Ireton. "This is the most exciting day of my life."

Mary said the donation site at her husband gave to CSI was just a small way to give something back to those who had given her so much.

Fifteen years ago, Frank Ireton retired from banking and Mary, then 62, graduated from C.S. nursing program, fulfilling a lifelong dream. Nursing became a second career for Mary and she worked as a nurse for 12 years. To honor Mary's positive nursing experience, the Iretons donated $125,000 in seed money to CSI which eventually grew to $167,000.

Challenged by the Iretons, CSI President Jerry Meyerhofer matched the Iretons' contribution, and what started out as a simple piece of lab equipment grew into a $1.8 million, 13,600-square-foot addition. The addition will benefit 500 students enrolled in 11 health science programs at CSI.

Meyerhofer and the Iretons expressed great appreciation to Claudene Buetner, director of CSI's Health Sciences and Human Services Department, for her vision and leadership throughout the project.

Claudene said she was overwhelmed by the generosity of the community. Area dentists donated equipment.

Rep. Simpson spearheads new ethanol legislation

By Ruth Streever
Times-News writer

BURLEY — U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson is spearheading a bill that he says would help clean up air and water quality, and at the same time stimulate the agricultural economy.

And Monday, he'll discuss the effects such a bill would have in the Magic Valley at the J.R. Simplot Co. in Heyburn.

Simpson and other legislators are co-sponsoring House Resolution 608, the Clean Air and Water Preservation Act. The bill proposes a three-year phase out of "methyl tertiary butyl ether" — known as MTBE for short — as an oxygenate additive in gasoline.

As a result, the petroleum industry would be required to rely more heavily on ethanol, a more expensive, but cleaner-burning additive that isn't suspected of contaminating water sources.

That may come as welcome news to growers, who would have a new market for their crops.

Though the main source of ethanol is corn, potatoes, sugar beets and barley are equally sufficient.

"This is a market right now that's emerging and that we can do great things with," said Luci Willits from Simpson's Boise office.

"(Simpson) wants the agriculture to be aware of this, and he wants to be an advocate of it," Willits said. "If you've got farmers dumping potatoes, this is somewhere they can sell them."

Before the press conference, Simpson will talk with plant officials about the future of the ethanol industry.

Simplot has plants in Caldwell and Heyburn that produce between 3 and 4 million gallons of ethanol a year.

MTBE is used in 35 percent of reformulated gasoline and is considered effective in keeping down air emissions. But critics say the additive has been the source of water contamination across the country.

Ethanol is more expensive than MTBE, but many say it's better for the environment. Many gasolines in Idaho and around the country already are a blend of 10 percent ethanol and 90 percent gasoline.

That amount of ethanol contributes about 3 percent oxygen to the fuel, promoting cleaner burning.

TF club formerly known as Boot Scooters to reopen

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Save the last dancer: Soon there will be a floor big enough to shake your booty on.

The dance club formerly known as Boot Scooters will reopen on Twin Falls' north end, possibly as early as Wednesday.

It's called Bar Bonz now, but the 1,000-square-foot dance floor that attracted College of Southern Idaho students and other twentysomethings since Boot Scooters' opening in 1996 remains its major attraction.

"People have told me that since Boot Scooters closed (in August), there really hasn't been a place for them to go and dance," said Lito Morgan, the new proprietor.

"There are other bars in town with dance floors, but no place with a floor like this and nowhere that really offers a mix of different kinds of music that we'll offer."

Morgan, a Kentucky native who has lived in Twin Falls since 1997, says Bar Bonz will book a variety of live bands and offer recorded music, including rock, country, hip-hop and pop.

"Our goal is have a place where people can come, feel comfortable and have a good time," he said.

Although the bar and dance floor are largely unchanged, the look of the 7,500-square-foot building will be different when Bar Bonz gets up and running, Morgan said.

"We're just waiting for the furniture to get here," he said.

Morgan, who declined to give his age, said he holds a college degree in therapeutic recreation and has a professional background working with troubled juveniles. He worked for 10 months at Canyonview Addiction Services at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, he said.

"It's a (career) change for us, but we're looking forward to it," he said.

The Alire family, which built the dance club, closed it last year. Although the club's mix and DJ and live music always drew a loyal following, Boot Scooters was plagued with a lack of enough parking at its Fillmore Street North location that drew the ire of some neighbors.

"Our (parking) lot isn't very big," Morgan said.

Morgan says he plans to book local and regional bands into Bar Bonz, and will strive to attract a diverse clientele.

"It will be a safe place to come and enjoy yourself," he said.

Company proposes waste water treatment

By N.S. Nokkvented
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — You might not want to drink it, but waste water from a proposed treatment facility would be clean enough to swim in, says an official with Jerome Cheese Co.

"It's not like it's a major contaminant," Rex Minchey of Jerome Cheese Co. told a group of experts and members of a group working to help reduce pollution in the mid-Snake River. Though it is waste water from processing an edible product, it still is considered industrial waste water under state law, he said.

Jerome Cheese wants to send almost 1 million gallons of waste water per day through seven miles of 12-inch plastic pipe from the plant outside Jerome to a 920-acre farm in southern Gooding County — about two miles north of Niagara Springs.

There a treatment plant would remove most of the waste — known as bio-solids — and phosphorus from the water. The treated water would be held in a 120 million gallon pond — big enough to hold 120 days worth of water.

The solids removed from the water would be stored in a 4 million gallon pond. And it would be added back as the water is applied to 608 acres of croplands. Some of the solids would be applied directly to the land, Minchey said.

The company is taking pains to avoid spills and leaks, and plans include monitoring, Minchey said. Contingency plans include repairs and clean-up.

Gooding County planners last fall denied the company a special use permit for the project, but at the time a proposed permit from the state Department of Environmental Quality still was not complete.

Jerome Cheese hopes with a completed proposed permit — issued last week — Gooding County will look more favorably on the project.

That permit would require the treated water be applied with a

Wendell to pay for sewer connection

By Olina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - Wilma Butigan wants the city of Wendell to show her the money.

Butigan asked the City Council Wednesday to compensate her for $1,490 of repairs she had to do on her East Main Street home - damages that were caused by a faulty sewer connection.

The problem started nearly three years ago when city work crews damaged Butigan's sewer connection while working on a water pipe. Butigan said the crew used random pieces of pipe and duct tape to fix the broken connection. In December, after three years of debris catching on the different sized sections of pipe and the duct tape deteriorating, the sewer began to back up into the house.

Butigan said she received word Jan. 23 from the city's insurance carrier, Idaho Counties Risk Management Program (ICRMP), that the city was liable for the expense of repairing the sewer connection, but the city has yet to cut her a check.

"I have to earn my own living and I don't make a whole lot," Butigan said. "I paid my bill on time so I would really appreciate it if you would give me some kind of priority."

Council President Fred McCloud apologized for the delay, saying the city was waiting for word from ICRMP to find out what portion of the bill would be covered by insurance and what would be covered by the city.

Also Wednesday, Officer Brandon Southwick was sworn in as Wendell's newest police officer. Police Chief Dave Fisher said that Southwick is not Police Officer Standards Training certified, but that he will work on obtaining that certification sometime in the future. Southwick is from Gooding and will start at a monthly salary of $1,350.

In other City Council business, council members approved a request from Fire Chief Red Orr to purchase $1,095 in turnout gear and $400 for two first-aid kits. The expenses will be split between the city and rural fire departments.

Council members approved Fisher's request to look into purchasing a 1989 Chevrolet Caprice listed with the Federal Surplus Property in Boise. If purchased, the 1989 patrol car would be used to replace the department's 1990 Chevrolet Caprice, which needs a new transmission. Fisher said repair costs could run as much as $1,200. The 1989 Caprice's sale price is listed at $650 and it has about 91,000 miles reading on the odometer, about 50,000 less than the city's 1990 patrol car.

Budget writers eliminate community counselors

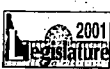

BOISE (AP) - Legislative budget writers essentially terminated scores of community resource workers on Friday as they tried to stem the skyrocketing price tag for health and welfare programs.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee refused to approve the $6 million in general tax revenue to keep the community program alive after federal cash dried up in June. Advocates for the cadre of workers who help families and children deal with personal problems called the majority shortsighted.

The committee also voted to delay - probably for another year - requiring prior approval for developmental disability and physical therapy services covered by Medicaid. That created the likelihood that the new Medicaid budget will still be short even after another 12 percent increase.

Saved from the ax were a significant expansion of services for the elderly and the developmentally disabled, vaccines against hepatitis and pneumococcal disease, and an increase in the monthly allowance from $30 to $40 that nursing home patients on Medicaid get to cover personal expenses.

Stripped from Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's more aggressive spending proposal was a 10 percent increase in reimbursement for foster parents - something the governor said was needed to attract more foster families to deal with an escalating number of children.

The House-Senate budget panel was left little choice but to nix extra general tax spending and trim what it could from a gubernatorial spending blueprint that provided little room for financial maneuvering.

A day earlier, committee members relied on some creative accounting to cut $25 million from political sensitive public and higher education budgets without significantly undermining key initiatives.

But they were still falling farther and farther behind House tax writers, who introduced tens of millions of dollars of state-financed property tax cuts Friday on top of the $200 million tax relief package coming to a vote in the House next week.

House Appropriations Chairman Maxine Bell said those wanting to keep the resource worker program alive were ignoring financial reality.

Students attack with needles

CALDWELL (AP) - Three students were suspended from Sacajawea Elementary School and parents were notified after at least 22 children were scratched or poked with needles "used to test diabetics' blood sugar."

District officials sent parents a letter informing them of the situation. The three fifth-graders face expulsion after allegedly sickening the others on Feb. 7.

"We do not tolerate this kind of behavior in our schools," said Tim Rosandick, district associate superintendent.

Principal Gary Johnson said a student brought several needles from home.

The pins, which had not previously been used, were then distributed to the other students and used to poke or scratch other students of all grade levels.

Bank gets blame for bounced check

By Ruth Streeter Times-News writer

BURLEY - A bank's funds-transfer problem was apparently why a prospective hog farm developer's property-tax check bounced last month.

to warn that the check would not clear, Treasurer Gayle Erikson said. The accountant told the treasurer's office that Sun Valley Agribusiness's bank has been having trouble transferring funds, Erikson said.

A new check was subsequently submitted to the county, Erikson said. She delivered the check to the bank Feb. 1. As of Friday, two weeks after the deposit, she had not received notice of any problem with the second check.

Sun Valley Agribusiness Partners is managed by Ketchum businessman Ron Achs, who hopes to develop a proposed $95,000-hog operation, Big Sky Farms LLC, currently under consideration by the county planning and zoning board.

Achs has not returned phone calls seeking comment. But after receiving a certified letter from The Times-News on Tuesday, Achs replied with a fax confirming that his company's bank had paid a check in the amount of $28,157.40 on Feb. 5. He did not identify the bank.

Achs was also recently named in a lawsuit that alleges he defaulted on a lease agreement by writing an insufficient funds check and then closing his account.

Donald Knickrehm, the attorney representing Big Sky Farms, said earlier this month he wasn't aware that the first tax check had bounced. However, Knickrehm said he was aware of a previous incident, not involving the county, in which Sun Valley Agribusiness's bank had mishandled a substantial wire transfer.

In that incident, the bank informed Sun Valley Agribusiness that money was in the account, only to discover later that the money wasn't there, Knickrehm said. Knickrehm said he didn't know the name of the bank.

Fire victim remains critical at Utah hospital

Valley in brief

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man who suffered multiple burns while escaping a fire that ruined his house Thursday was listed in critical but stable condition Friday in a Salt Lake City hospital.

Dennis Cogswell, 45, was being treated at the University of Utah Medical Center's burn unit for burns to his face, neck and hands.

He was burned Thursday while fleeing his house at 198 Ramage St. in Twin Falls. Fire officials suspected that a wood stove started the fire which gutted the house and killed Cogswell's dog, Buckley.

Judge sends standoff case to District Court

TWIN FALLS - A Buhl man police say was involved in a six-hour standoff in Twin Falls will soon face a district court judge.

Names of District Court judge hopefuls stay on hold

TWIN FALLS - It could be Tuesday before the names of applicants to replace Twin Falls District Court Judge Daniel Meehl will be made public, officials said Friday.

Friday at 5 p.m. was the deadline to file with the Idaho Judicial Council to Meehl's job. Meehl announced recently that he plans to retire Sept. 1.

Fifth Judicial District Trial Court Administrator Linda Wright on Friday said she hadn't received a list of applicant's names.

A spokeswoman at the judicial council's office said the list must be approved by the council's executive director, Bob Hamlin, before it can be released. Hamlin was out of the office Friday and not expected to return to work until Tuesday.

The judicial council plays a key role in selecting District Court judges. Members of the council include the chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, a district judge, a magistrate judge, attorneys and some at-large members from around the state.

The council plans to interview

Twin Falls Magistrate Judge John Melanson on Friday bound over a first-degree kidnapping charge and an assault charge against Sergio Arroyo, 29, to District Court and increased Arroyo's bond from $100,000 to $250,000, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs.

Loebs said he had been set for Arroyo's initial appearance in District Court, and it wasn't known which District Court judge would handle the case, Loebs said.

The case stems from a Jan. 26 standoff near Lincoln Elementary School in Twin Falls. After being set for Arroyo's initial appearance in District Court, and it wasn't known which District Court judge would handle the case, Loebs said.

MV Stop the Violence Day approaches

By Aaron Brock Times-News writer

RUPERT - People in Idaho often don't report cases of domestic violence among neighbors because they don't want to interfere.

That, said Heyburn police officer Dan Bristol, is a serious problem, and one that he hopes to address with Stop the Violence Day, on Feb. 28.

"We're kind of behind the times," he said. "A lot of people don't like to get involved, but it's not just their neighbor's problem."

Nationally, about 5 percent of all police calls involve domestic violence, Bristol said.

But it may be an even bigger problem locally. Minidoka County has a high rate of civil protection orders - designed to keep victims and abusers from contacting one another - said Minidoka Memorial Hospital public relations director Tammy Hanks, who is organizing Stop the Violence Day.

Mayors and Minidoka County commissioners Thursday will sign a proclamation acknowledging the problems caused by domestic

Stop the Violence Day

When: From 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 28.

Where: Minlco High School auditorium.

What: Speakers, programs and information about domestic violence.

Who: Anyone with an interest in learning how to deal with domestic violence issues is encouraged to attend.

Neiwerth hopes the proclamation will make people more willing to get involved.

"I'm just hoping that people are more aware," she said. "They'll be aware of these problems and do what they can to help out."

Paul Mayor Randy Jones hopes the proclamation will simply increase awareness of the issue.

"It needs to pay attention to what's going on around us before it jumps down our throats," he said. "We can't just bury our heads in the sand."

Dance troupe's vans crash

OTHELLO, Wash. (AP) - Three vans carrying young Chinese dancers crashed Friday on icy U.S. 395 in Eastern Washington, killing two people and injuring 23 others.

Most of the injured suffered bumps and bruises; three were to be hospitalized Friday night, hospital officials said.

Many of the visiting dancers from the Beijing Academy of Dance were teen-agers or in their early 20s.

The 36 members of the dance troupe were in the midst of a three-week tour titled "China in Dance 2001-Legends of the Dynasties." The tour opened in Seattle last week.

They performed Thursday in Spokane and were headed to a Saturday show in Portland, Ore. The tour was also to include stops in San Jose and Los Angeles, Calif.

The accident occurred about 9:25 a.m. about 18 miles south of Ritzville. The two dead boys were ejected from the vehicles, two of which rolled over, said Capt. Mike Dubeo of the Washington State Patrol in Spokane.

Suitcases and stage props were scattered in the snow near the crumpled vans.

Patrol searches mountain for survivors

GRANGEVILLE (AP) - Stationed at a foggy window in a trailer overlooking the Grangeville airport, Alice Kingma, commander of the local Civil Air Patrol, helps coordinate rescue efforts over north-central Idaho's vast forests and rugged mountains.

One of nine Civil Air Patrol units in the state and one of only two without a plane, the Grangeville unit relies on its ground crew for search-and-rescue operations.

The unit was called in by the federal Department of Aeronautics to assist during the search for a helicopter that crashed Dec. 28 in the Lochsa River drainage, killing the pilot and an Idaho Fish and Game biologist. Fish and Game technician Matt Lucia survived the crash.

Four members of the Civil Air Patrol at Grangeville spent most of the night trying to pinpoint the signal from the downed helicopter. A big problem in mountainous areas is that a signal can bounce around and cause inaccurate readings.

Lucia had activated a hand-held transmitter much bigger than a cigarette lighter, but the Grangeville patrol's old but accurate location equipment was able to home in on the signal.

"The members aren't in it for glory. If you save a life, who really cares who was in charge?"

- Alice Kingma, commander of the Grangeville Civil Air Patrol

The crew making its way through deep snow toward the crash site also was in constant contact with Kingma and the other patrol members back at the Grangeville airport.

They, in turn, were in contact with the national patrol communication headquarters at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia. Langley houses the Air Force Rescue and Coordination Center and serves as the central communications point for the Civil Air Patrol.

Kingma is quick to note the rescue effort was a coordinated one, and the Grangeville patrol unit only played a part.

"The members aren't in it for glory," she said. "If you save a life, who really cares who was in charge?"

Grangeville's Civil Air Patrol was started in 1989 after Mark Gravatt, who grew up in the patrol cadet program while his dad was stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base, moved to the area.

Now the Grangeville unit has about 10 members and a handful of cadets. Everyone, including Kingma, is a volunteer who just enjoys flying. Kingma and her husband, Herman, spent their lives farming and logging.

German always enjoyed flying, and when he found out about the newly formed squadron in Grangeville, he joined. He soon talked his wife into joining as well.

Jack Soltman, now in his 80s, was a member for many years. A doctor who practiced in Grangeville for 42 years, Soltman enjoyed flying and used to help with search-and-rescue missions by piloting his own plane as the high bird, flying at 10,000 feet to monitor all the rescue planes, and making efforts such as a tower at an airport is used.

Harry Owens, mission coordinator for the Grangeville Civil Air Patrol, flew helicopters in the National Guard for 20 years.

"We'll consider any means we need to utilize to obtain fair access to all information and evidence," Brown said in an earlier interview.

Amended child marriage bill reaches Utah House

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Polygamist and supporters who turned out to a House hearing Friday claimed victory after an amended bill meant to crack down on child marriages was approved by the committee.

"This is a major day," said Anne Wilde, a polygamist author. "This is the first time in 100 years that (polygamist) people have come out in a public gathering in favor of the polygamist lifestyle."

Under the original bill proposed by Sen. Ron Allen, D-Stansburg Park, anyone convicted of performing or arranging a marriage involving a child younger than 16 could be convicted of a third-degree felony and sentenced to up to five years in prison.

But it also would have applied to those who perform any illegal wedding ceremony, including polygamist marriages involving adults.

That concerned polygamists and their supporters, who argued it is too harsh.

So on Wednesday and Friday, about 100 backers of public marriage showed up in the Capitol - an unusual move for a subculture that has been driven underground by the fear of prosecution.

In response to their concerns, Allen changed the bill so the felony charge only applies to child marriages. Performing an adult plural marriage would be a misdemeanor.

"Vicky Prunty, co-founder of Tapestry Against Polygamy, a support group for women trying to leave the polygamist lifestyle, said the law will still be a deterrent against those arranging child marriages.

Prunty said one girl who came to her group for help said she was forced to marry her own father at the age of 12 to keep the family's blood line pure. The girl said she was raped and impregnated but miscarried.

In a more public case, two members of Salt Lake City polygamist clan were tried for child abuse. John Daniel Kingston pleaded no contest to severely beating his 16-year-old daughter for fleeing a marriage to her uncle. The uncle, David Ortell Kingston, was convicted of incest and sentenced to up to 10 years in prison.

Wilde said such incidents have given polygamists a bad name, but insisted that those who attended the House hearings do not abuse children.

Waste

Continued from A4 precision sprinkler system to avoid rock outcrops, canals that cross the property and areas of shallow soil.

DEQ also would require an odor management plan, said Mike McMaster, DEQ Twin Falls office. And the agency would require a trained treatment plant operator.

If it's built and operated as designed and according to the permit conditions, the project should be able to meet environmental requirements, water quality standards and odor limits, McMaster said.

Minchey said the company is sensitive to odor concerns of neighbors. The waste water doesn't include any heavy metals. The treatment plant may emit a mild musky odor, but if the system is properly maintained and operated there would be no offensive odors, he said.

Gooding County Planning Administrator Judy Daubner said residents who have been concerned that this is Jerome

Cheese waste from Jerome County, and it ought to stay in Jerome County.

The cheese company doesn't have the land in Jerome County, and the Gooding County farm was the only place close to the plant where the company could find at least 700 acres, Minchey said.

Jerome Cheese's waste water now is treated by the Jerome sewage treatment plant, which discharges treated water into a North Side Canal Co. canal. The waste discharge makes its way through Gooding County on its way to the Snake River.

DEQ expects to issue a final permit by April 1 - depending on public comments, McMaster said.

And Jerome Cheese is expecting a hearing on March 28 with Gooding County planning and zoning, Minchey said.

Miciak was unsure if he would file a tort claim against the county, on Moulson's behalf.

"I still get more help in understanding what happened, we can't make any important decisions like that," Miciak said.

Weaver would not take calls from The Times-News Friday and his spokeswoman, Nancy Strickland, said she did not want to comment about the letter or Weaver's lack of response.

Patrick Brown, the lawyer for Williams' family, also has complained about the lack of response from law enforcement agencies.

Brown has requested access to various records, including autopsy results and audiotapes of conversations between Williams and 911 dispatchers.

Williams made several calls in the weeks before his death to the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, the area's 911 dispatch center.

Brown has said he has considered suing the various law enforcement agencies involved with the case, if his requests continue to be denied.

Class

Like a proud new mother, Claudene was anxious for everyone to tour the building.

She said she was especially excited about the new telecommunications room which boasts a seating capacity of 77 and two big-screen monitors for video-conferencing with CSI's Outreach Center, hospitals, schools "or any place in the world for that matter," Claudene said.

A bigger screen adorns the front wall where students had just viewed a surgical procedure at the Twin Falls Clinic. Claudene said watching the televised surgery was better than actually being in the operating room because the cameras are placed right above the operating table and students are able to see every procedure being performed. It's just like on-the-job training, she said.

Board suggests no television privatization

BOISE (AP) - The State Board of Education has passed along the message to the Legislature that viewers overwhelmingly oppose removing state funding from public television.

The board Thursday voted 5-2 to recommend lawmakers take no steps to privatize Idaho's system. Legislative advocates of privatization conceded the issue last month after a consultant's report suggested the move was not advisable.

"We've passed a milestone today," said Peter Morrill, Idaho general manager.

A public hearing around the state last week showed Idahoans who attended, strongly support leaving public television as is, an agency dependent upon the state taxpayers for about 28 percent of its funding.

Even more telling was the written testimony gathered at the seven sites. Education board information showed 867 citizens offered input. Just 31 favored privatizing public television.

But it was no easy feat for the system on Thursday.

Idaho Falls attorney Blake Hall expressed skepticism about a recent study that said public television could be damaged if state funding were removed.

Hall also asked Morrill if the hearing's outcome was not skewed because public television knew about the hearing ahead of time and had an opportunity to organize supporters.

But Post Falls board member

Jim Hammond said the week's notice given was more than enough time for both sides to organize support.

Hall offered a motion that nearly changed the outcome of Thursday's meeting. He proposed the board show its approval for Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's recommendation that the Legislature provide public television the $6.2 million to take the next step in the federally mandated conversion to digital technology.

Hall's motion also would have put off making any recommendations to the Legislature on privatization.

"Digitalization is something we have to do," he said. "I don't think we need to rush to judgment on governance. They are separate issues."

Hall's motion failed 3-4. The Legislature "is waiting to hear from us," Hammond said. "By taking this step, we take the issue off the table."

"We've spent enormous amounts of time and energy reacting to people across the state," said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard, also a member of the board. "I have heard support in about the same ratios we saw the other night in a public testimony."

ISU's enrollment hits all-time high

POCATELLO (AP) - Idaho State University has set a new record for spring semester enrollment.

The student head count of 12,910 is a 1.3 percent increase from last year's record of 12,739.

"These figures can be attributed to increases in freshmen, transfer students, growth in the outreach centers, and a special cohort of Taiwanese students," said

Jennifer Fisher, the university's assistant academic vice president.

Enrollment increased at the university's Idaho Falls, Twin Falls, and Boise outreach centers.

The total number of graduate and professional students increased 2.2 percent to 2,653 and full-time graduate students jumped 11.5 percent to 728 students.

New hearing for man in fatal wreck

BONNERS FERRY (AP) - A man acquitted last year of two counts of vehicular manslaughter may have his probation revoked after allegedly refusing to participate in an alcohol-treatment program.

Greg Fargen, 22, was found guilty of being a minor in possession of alcohol following a trial last summer. The jury did not find him responsible for the deaths of David Zepeda or Ricky Bennett, both of whom were killed in a high-speed wreck on U.S. Highway 95 in 1998.

Police and victims' families believe Fargen was driving his pickup when it went off the highway and hit a power pole. All three occupants were thrown from the truck, making it difficult to prove who was driving.

The driver apparently was trying to outrun a Boundary County Sheriff's deputy. Fargen, who suffered head injuries and nearly died at the scene, testified that he could not remember who was driving.

All three occupants of the pickup had blood-alcohol levels above the legal limit.

In a court affidavit, probation officer Jackie Bacon reported Fargen has refused to enroll in any court-ordered alcohol-treatment program. Fargen also has failed to check in monthly with the probation department.

Fargen has a prior conviction of being a minor in possession of alcohol. His license was suspended as of the day of the accident.

Otter breaks foot in fall

BOISE (AP) - When Congressman Butch Otter tromps around Idaho next week during the Presidents' Day recess, he will sport a plastic walking cast on his left foot.

Otter broke his foot three weeks ago while jogging on the National Mall in Washington, D.C. As he rounded the Washington Monument, he stepped in a hole and wrenched his foot.

With no cash or identification, he could not take a cab the 1.5 miles back to his office. "I had to walk back," Otter said. "But it taught me something: always carry my I.D. and some money."

Young drivers lack experience

I feel compelled to write in agreement with Gail Stajel of Shoshone concerning our young drivers.

The inexperience is the parents and students of not being able to drive alone for an extended period of four months should not even be a factor. I can tell you from experience, a period of four months is a very short time if it means the difference between your child being alive or dead.

On June 1, 1998, I received "that" call every parent dreads receiving at some point in their lives. My boy was dead. He was 16 years old. He had completed the driver's education program, he had driven his six to 10 hours, he had passed his course with an A, but he didn't have the most important aspect of driving - experience.

I made the worst decision of my life. June 1, 1998, I allowed my boy to drive to work alone. He ran a stop sign and collided with another vehicle. I will have to live with that decision for the rest of my life. If this law had been in place June 1, 1998, perhaps my boy might still be alive.

When I see the effect his death has had on his sister, mother, father, his best friend and his classmates, maybe an extra four months isn't even enough. I can't believe there are teens who do not need the extra time behind the wheel.

I've driven for 51 years and still find myself in situations that could be deadly without experience. I would give anything for my 16-year-old son to have had that four extra months' experience.

My heart goes out to the families that have had to face the tragedies that have taken the lives of their wonderful children.

We as parents and society as a whole need to do everything in our power to protect our children and prevent these tragedies. If it takes a few months of inconvenience, so be it.

Make F&G leave predators alone

What will it take to make you angry enough to do something?

In the calendar year 2000, reported kills of bears in the state of Idaho totaled 610, 276 females and 334 males.

In the six-month lion hunting season, a total of 1,502 mountain lions were killed; 495 females and 1,007 males. These were the legally reported numbers which do not reflect those animals "taken" by poachers.

Idaho law requires the salvage of meat, i.e., you bring out what you kill.

How do you, as the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has made a high-handed, essentially illegal decision which will further decimate the predators in our state.

It has asked for an environmental assessment of a project to further reduce black bear and lion populations as part of a "study" to determine the effects of predator reduction on elk calf survival.

The project calls for animal damage control to slaughter 75 or more black bears and 10 or more lions from the Clearwater Region starting on April 23.

Methods to be employed include calling, shooting, foot snares, neck snares, (read traps) bait stations and hounding by lion and bear dogs. Neither hides nor carcasses would be required to be removed from the point of kill - a clear violation of Idaho law.

It should also be noted that the proposed "removal" period coincides with the time that bear cubs are leaving their winter dens with young cubs. Killing sow bears is not restricted in the proposal; it will obviously result in the death by starvation or predation of their cubs.

There is no scientific evidence that predation is behind the decreased rate of elk calf survival in this area. Winter kill, over-hunting and loss of habitat have not been considered.

Last year, the quota for bears was two per hunter; this year, it's three. Quotas for lions have been effectively eliminated, and the season for lions has been extended in at least two units. Once again, the Fish and Game commissioners have demonstrated their ignorant, short-sighted belief that the only good predator is a dead predator.

It has been proven, time and time again, that when we change the balance of nature, we create more and more problems which we are unable to solve. Please write or call the Fish and Game Department at 600 S. Walnut, Box 25, Boise, ID 83707-0025.

Congratulations, Jerome students

I wanted to take this time to praise and compliment the students of Jerome School District. The support they show at the girl's basketball games is phenomenal.

I have known most of these students and players since they were in third, fourth, or fifth graders. I am very proud and honored to know all of them.

The high school band, drill team and the cheerleaders are always at the games to contribute their excellent performances, and Patrick Crozier adds a special touch by singing the National Anthem. Our players are respected for their devotion and hard work.

New radio station relaxes listeners

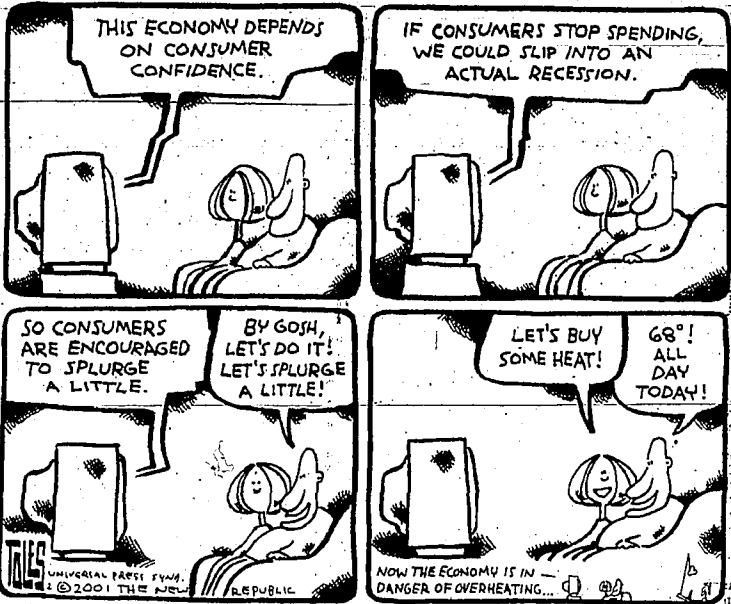

I want to take this opportunity to share with your readers a new radio station in the area - KJLZ. It is found at 100.7 FM.

It is so nice to have a choice of nice music instead of traditional types of music that the Magic Valley has had to offer in the past (country, rock, etc.).

It is so relaxing to listen to this music and, for those of us who travel 134 to Boise frequently, we now have a station that we can listen to all the way to Boise!

Baby boomers like me love this music. I have not listened to another station since I discovered KJLZ. I would like to say thank you to the person(s) responsible for bringing this great radio station to the southern Idaho listening audience.

Watch out for harmful fad therapies

Another unvalidated, pop-psychology therapy claims a life. Last year, 10-year-old Candace Newmaker died during a session of "rebirthing" therapy in Colorado.

Candace was wrapped in a blanket to simulate the womb and surrounded by pillows. The therapists then pressed on the pillows to simulate "birth contractions" and told the girl to push her way out of the blanket over her head. Candace, who had been adopted four years earlier and had been treated for various psychological problems, lost consciousness and died.

Cornell Watkins, an unlicensed social worker who operated the counseling center, and three of her employees were charged with reckless child abuse resulting in death. The child's mother, Jeanne Newmaker, was charged with negligent child abuse.

Were the techniques used by these therapists standard practice in psychotherapy? How is a lay person like Jeanne Newmaker, who wanted to help her troubled child, supposed to know the difference between good therapy and bad?

First, testimonials are no guideline. No matter what kind of therapy is involved, clients are motivated to tell you it worked. Every kind of therapy, including rebirthing, produces enthusiastic testimonials. But testimonials are not scientific evidence of effectiveness. A therapy's success could be the result of the placebo effect: The client's anticipation of success and the buzz about a new "miracle" method might be the active ingredients rather than the therapy itself.

Yet many new therapies are promoted not by evidence of their effectiveness but by the claims of a charismatic leader and the praises of happy clients. The method is then endorsed by enthusiastic practitioners who have been "certified" in the method, usually by attending a weekend workshop promoted by the therapy's founder.

The public is largely unaware of the enormous schism that exists between the training of most psychotherapists today and that of psychological scientists. There is no agency or organization to protect people from ignorant or unscrupulous therapists.

Thousands of people get credentials as "experts" in various techniques and therapies without learning the methods of science or even the basic research that has been done on these subjects.

Many well-rested therapists are available for treating psychological problems. These are the controlled studies have found that behavior therapy or cognitive-behavior therapy are the treatments of choice for a wide array of problems, ranging from depression, anxiety, panic and obsessive compulsive disorder to coping with chronic health problems and pain. Instead of encouraging people to simply ventilate their emotions these approaches teach people how to change their own self-defeating beliefs.

And in the case of chronic family problems, such as the conflict between Jeanne Newmaker and her adopted daughter, family or "systems" therapists can help both parties understand and change destructive patterns. But this process takes time; no quick fix or single emotional "catharsis" will provide lasting change.

Do behavioral or family therapies help everyone? Of course not. But they do no harm, whereas unvalidated psychotherapies and scientifically illiterate "experts" are causing enormous harm and sometimes death. The way to limit these fads has been through malpractice suits.

This means that it is up to consumers to think critically in determining what kind of therapy and therapist might be best for their problems. Ask about the therapist's training and credentials. Ask whether the therapy's assumptions, methods and effectiveness have been objectively assessed by something other than testimonials.

We learned to love the Constitution through the election of 1800

This week marks the 200th anniversary of the election of Thomas Jefferson as president of the United States.

Jefferson's election is generally conceded to have initiated the dominance of enduring traits of American political culture: a strong suspicion of government, an accompanying spirit of liberal capitalism, a sweeping ideology of democracy (if only at first, for white males), continental nationalism and an emphasis upon free trade.

But the election of 1800 was also notable for other reasons. It was one of the few presidential elections; like the one just past, that failed to produce a certain and clear finality. But the contest 200 years ago was unlike all others in a single respect: it inaugurated our love affair with the Constitution.

The election of 1800 produced a constititutional crisis, the gravest in our history except for 1860. The crisis occurred because of a constitutional anomaly. The original Constitution of 1787 did not require, as did a tardy amendment in 1804, that Electoral College members vote first for candidates for president and then separately for candidates for vice president.

When the electoral votes were tallied in December 1800, the Democratic-Republican ticket of Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr had soundly defeated the Federalist ticket of John Adams (the incumbent president) and Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, 73 to 65. The trouble was that Jefferson and Burr had both received the same number of votes.

Because of this, the election had to be decided by the House of Representatives. Like either candidate last fall, Burr could have resolved the unintended deadlock by simply withdrawing his name from contention for the presidency. But, opportunistic by a fault, he did not do so.

As a result, the Federalist Party, political home of Adams and Alexander Hamilton, was in a perfect position to make mischief by throwing its support to Burr so as to prevent Jefferson's election by the House.

Unlike the crisis this past fall, which was settled by the courts, the crisis of 1801 could be settled constitutionally only by the House. And the Federalists would not let that happen. For 35 ballots, stretching over six days beginning on Feb. 11, the House voted and voted again, each time with the same result—two too few to put Jefferson over the top. Finally, a single Federalist, James A.

Bayard, Delaware's sole representative, took a crucial step. He announced to his colleagues that on the next vote he would withhold his state's vote from Burr.

Bayard's decision prompted enough other Federalists to withdraw their votes from Burr so that, on Feb. 17, the Squire of Monticello attained the majority of states he needed for election.

Historians like to emphasize that Feb. 17, 1801, marked the triumph of new ways of seeing ourselves and the world, ways that remain with us still. But something else also happened that winter day. When pressed to explain his action, Bayard, the Federalist who had given the opposition its victory, said that he had acted "so as not to hazard the Constitution."

Bayard cleared the way for Chief Justice John Marshall's great-1803 decision of Marbury v. Madison, the first to strike down a provision of federal law as unconstitutional. It was the supremacy of the Constitution that was at stake again in 1860 when the South seceded, and the Civil War validated that supremacy.

These days we take for granted appeals to the Constitution, both sincere and demagogic. Last fall, all factions appealed to constitutional rectitude, constitutional tradition, constitutional right. Those appeals, even when lacking sincerity, owed much to the act of a single man from a small state long ago.

As the turbulent but peaceful resolution of the electoral confusion last fall demonstrates, the Constitution's supremacy remains the bedrock of our political life.

Woman pleads guilty to an injury to child charge

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - The mother of a baby killed in 1998 has pleaded guilty, two weeks before she was scheduled to go to trial.

Misty Genter, 20, faced one count of injury to child stemming from the death of her infant son, William, who died April 17, 1998, at Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Genter's trial - if she had not pleaded guilty Thursday - was slated to begin Feb. 27 in 7th District Judge Richard T. St. Clair's Madison County courtroom.

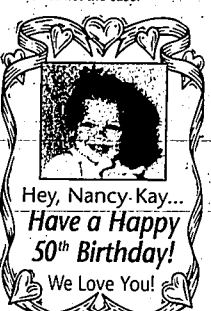

St. Clair will determine Genter's sentence after a presentencing investigation is complete.

Injury to child is punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Madison County prosecutors allege Genter failed to protect the 9-week-old boy from his father, Benjamin Genter, who is serving a 17-years-to-life prison sentence for the murder.

In November, the father's attorney, Robert Crowley, said the trial needed to be moved from Rexburg, arguing that publicity from the baby's death tainted his client's right to a fair trial.

Prosecutor Sid Brown said that was not the case.

California governor proposes power line purchase

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Gov. Gray Davis proposed a long-awaited, multibillion-dollar plan Friday to rescue California's utilities from the brink of bankruptcy in part by buying their transmission lines.

The plan would require the parents of Southern California Edison and Pacific Gas and Electric Co. to help pay off the utilities' debts, which both say are approaching $13 billion due to high wholesale prices the state's deregulation law bars them from passing onto customers.

Davis declined to put a dollar amount on his plan, which also includes the purchase of power lines owned by the state's third investor-owned utility, San Diego Gas & Electric.

Assemblyman Fred Keeley said the state could pay $7 billion for the power lines; Davis would say only that talks would start at their book value, which Keeley aides pegged at $4.5 billion.

Davis said the plan would be financed with no rate increase for the utilities' customers.

"Ratepayers did not ask for deregulation," Davis said. "They were promised that rates would go down. Obviously this system was flawed from its outset."

The proposal would be financed with revenue bonds that would be paid back with part of utility customers' bills. Legislation signed by Davis last month extended a temporary 7 to 15 percent rate increase for Edison and PG&E customers up to 10 years.

Davis' plan would require

Edison and PG&E to drop lawsuits they filed against the state seeking to force bigger rate hikes.

Davis said two of the three utilities were open to the plan, declining to elaborate. Negotiations were continuing Friday, he said.

As the governor released his proposal, a federal judge was holding a hearing on whether to continue forcing three wholesalers to keep selling power to the managers of the state grid despite worries that Edison and PG&E, major recipients of that emergency power, are unable to pay for it.

California was under a Stage 3 power alert for the 32nd straight day, with grid operators searching for enough electricity to prevent reserves from falling to 1.5 percent or lower.

The state has scrounged for electricity for weeks due to a combination of high demand, a tight supply driven in part by short hydroelectric power in the Pacific Northwest, and high wholesale natural gas and electricity prices. Rolling blackouts hit the northern two-thirds of California twice last month.

Davis' debt-relief plan is one of several proposals aimed at resolving the power crisis.

The governor earlier signed legislation that lets the state spend an estimated $10 billion to buy power for customers of Edison and PG&E, both denied credit by suppliers, and has pushed for faster state and federal approval of new power plants, a move backed Friday by President Bush.

Jerome topples Century, advances to tournament final

By John Deir
Times-News writer

BASE — Since before they left for state, you might have asked the Jerome Lady Tigers how many games they had left they answered one.

Today they are right. And it's the big one.

On Friday, Jerome used solid defense to defeat the Century Diamondbacks 39-27 and advance to today's championship game of the Class A-1, Div. II girls' state high school basketball tournament.

The Tigers will meet Caldwell today at 6 p.m. at the Idaho Center for the first-ever title in the state's newest high school classification.

"The girls did a good job and played through some adversity. There are only two teams left, and we are one of them," said Jerome coach Michelle Skyles, who has a team in the title game for the second time in four years.

The previous three games between District IV-VI foes Jerome and Century were all close. This one was no exception. The difference may have been the depth of the Tigers, who continued their usual substitution pattern, where 10 players see time in every quarter.

"I think our depth was a key," Skyles said. Neither team could find the bucket early as each combined for four free throws and a 2-2 tie. Andrea Davis, who Skyles praised for her play in the game, came off the bench to hit the first basket of the contest at the three-minute mark.

The first quarter ended with Jerome leading 6-4. Jennifer Pond scored the first of her seven first-half points with a bucket in the paint, and Jerome jumped up by seven midway through the second period.

"We came out pumped up for this game," said Pond, who finished with a game-high 13 points and grabbed six rebounds. "This is good feeling for my first trip to state."

The lead was seven when the second team came in. Thanks to a nice pass from Vanessa West to Davis, the lead was the same when the starters came back three minutes later.

"I have been waiting a long time for that. It felt good to help out the team," said Davis, who had six points on 3-of-3 shooting.

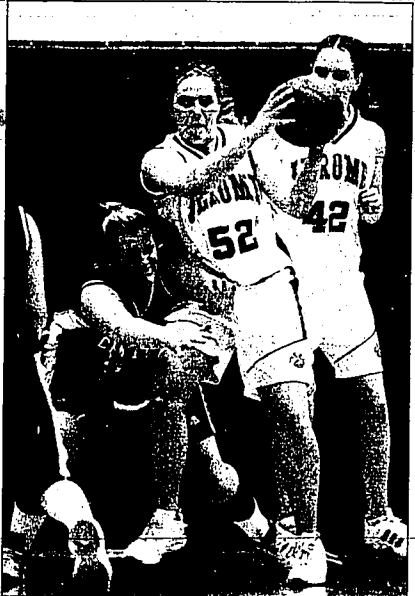

Kecely Osborn added a putback near the end of the half and Jerome led 17-8 at the break. Century was led by post Lyndsey Lewis, who had six points in the first half.

Kendra West, who finished with nine points, seven rebounds and an assist, converted two baskets in the paint early in the third quarter and Osborn added a jumper as the Tigers built their largest lead in the game at 23-14.

"The coaches put in a special defense that helped us tonight," Pond said.

The Diamondbacks weren't done yet, though, and staged a comeback. Six points from Brynn Rydman cut the deficit to seven heading into the final period.

Nicole Paulos' putback of her own miss put Jerome up by nine, then Pond added a putback and

Yankees ink Rivera to four-year deal

The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — The Yankees finally closed a long-term contract with their closer.

Mariano Rivera became the highest-paid relief pitcher in baseball, agreeing Friday to a $39.9 million, four-year contract with the Yankees.

"He's earned it by the way he's pitched. He's the best around right now," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "If he hasn't been our MVP, he's one of them. It's really hard to win without a closer."

Rivera, who made $7.25 mil-

Mariano Rivera

in 2004. "It was a relief," the slender 31-year-old right-hander said. "Not that I was thinking about it 100 percent, it was in the back of my mind. I came here for one reason, to get ready for spring training and try to have another good year. Now, it's much better and it's over."

With a nasty cutter, Rivera is virtually automatic in saving games. His average annual value of $9,997,500 tops San Francisco reliever Robb Nen, who averages $8,125,000 under a $32.5 million, four-year contract that starts this season.

To help close the deal, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner agreed to donate $100,000 to Rivera's church in Panama.

"George Steinbrenner put his money where his heart is," said Randy Hendricks, who last week replaced Jim Bronner as Rivera's primary negotiator.

Rivera, who reported a day late to spring training because of food poisoning, will not begin throwing until early next week. He received a no-trade clause for the first two years of the contract. He also can terminate the deal after two seasons and become eligible for free agency.

If he does that, he loses the final $4 million of the signing bonus, meaning he will have received $18.6 million for two years.

Eagle men roll CNCC

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

Colorado Northwestern Community College is the lonely outpost of the Scenic West Athletic Conference, and as such, it sucks teams into playing some of their worst basketball.

That was the case Friday night for No. 4 College of Southern Idaho, which escaped Rangeley, Colo., with an impressive, yet unimpressive, 80-52 win — its ninth straight.

Uche Okafor led CSI with a game-high 18 points and seven rebounds. Marko Popovic scored 10 points for the Eagles (22-3 overall, 11-2 SWAC), who had 11 players in the lineup.

Derrick Lemuel and Nathan Moore each had nine points for the Spartans (22-1, 0-1), who dropped their 18th consecutive game.

Despite the mediocre play, especially in the first half by his Eagles, CSI coach Derek Zeck was obviously happy with the win.

"It was ugly, but it was a W," Zeck said. "(We were) good at times and had at times, but it's a win in the Scenic West, and you know how that goes."

More importantly, the win keeps pace with first-place No. 2 Dixie State College, who play at Ricks College tonight.

CSI began horribly, as the unheralded Spartans held leads of 10-9 and 13-12. But Zeck quickly went to his deep bench, who proceeded to ignite a 17-2 run for the 29-15 lead, as CSI never looked back.

"We came out flat, so I went right to the bench," Zeck said. "Sometimes that happens with guys who don't come out focused."

Okafor was unstoppable underneath, scoring 13 points in the first half.

"I thought we did a great job of getting the ball to Uche," Zeck said. "He was very effective."

Nigerian countryman James Iduko also provided a boost off the bench, finishing with a season-high eight points.

"James faced up and really did a great job of attacking the rim," Zeck said.

Spartan women topple Eagles

CSI plays without suspended Gosschalk

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

They usually don't have much to cheer about inside the Colorado Northwestern Community College gymnasium, but Friday night, it was bedlam.

The Spartan women's basketball team picked up its third win of the season in the Scenic West Athletic Conference, upsetting the College of Southern Idaho, 80-66.

It was CSI's third loss in a row on the CNCC home floor, and the Eagles' fifth defeat in their last seven attempts against the Spartans (12-13, 3-11 SWAC), who snapped a three-game losing streak.

Southern Idaho (15-9, 5-8) played without second-leading scorer Jinga Gosschalk, who was benched for "an altercation in practice this week," said head coach Kendall Grant.

With a win, CSI could have secured a berth into the Region 18 Tournament March 7-10.

Instead, Grant said the Eagles will have to reset their game if they hope to play in the postseason.

"We're not too tickled with (the loss)," he said. "We had to come out with a 20-point lead and we just didn't get it going."

Angie Coff had a game-high 29 points to lead the Spartans. Alicia Chadwick chipped in 19 points and Jennifer Gallegus added 12.

Southern Idaho was led by Elizabeth Roberts with 20 points and the 17 of Belinda Stubbs.

Coming out flat to start the game, CSI went into halftime trailing by 10. Please see LADIES, Page B3

Dodge makes splash at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bill Elliott led the first nine laps of his qualifying race for the Daytona 500, then virtually disappeared.

Was the pole-winner for NASCAR's biggest race hiding his superiority — and the dominance of the new Dodges — before springing out on the rest of the field in Sunday's main event?

Ask the rivals from Ford, Chevrolet and Pontiac, and they'll give a knowing smile and nod.

"There's certainly a concern that they may have snookered us all the way around," said Dale Jarrett, a three-time Daytona 500 winner and Ford's leading driver.

Nobody is really all that surprised, though. The new Dodge effort is led by Ray Evernham, the former master crew chief selected by DaimlerChrysler to guide its re-entry into NASCAR's top series after a 16-year absence.

Evernham left Hendrick Motorsports late in the 1999 season to form his own two-car team and direct the development of the new Intrepid and the Dodge V-8 NASCAR engine.

The only recent NASCAR history for Dodge was in the Craftsman Truck Series, where the manufacturer has become a regular winner.

In fact, Joe Ruttman gave Dodge a victory in the season-opening truck race in Daytona on Friday. Jarrett won the day's other race, the International Race of Champions Series event.

In testing over the winter, the new Intrepid R/Ts were slower than the rest of the makes, which worried Evernham.

"We knew it was going to be a tough road," said the man who mentioned Jeff Gordon to 47 victories and three Winston Cup championships.

Then came the start of Speedweeks, the official beginning of the new season at Daytona International Speedway.

Elliott, who drives for Evernham, led a Dodge sweep of the front row for Sunday's race with a pole-winning lap of 183.565 mph. Stacy Compton, who had never qualified better than eighth in his brief NASCAR career, will start NASCAR's biggest race alongside the two-time race winner.

Sterling Marlin, also a two-time winner, won one of the 125-mile qualifying races and will start third in yet another of the Intrepids.

Members of the Dodge NASCAR racing team, including, from right, Ray Evernham, Richard Petty, Jim Zullo, Bill Davis, Ward Burton, and Dave Blaney, introduce themselves and their new car to the media Saturday morning at the Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach, Fla. Ten Dodge Intrepids, including one owned by Petty, are entered in Sunday's Daytona 500.

Daytona weekend

The big race, the Daytona 500, is Sunday. It will be shown on FOX starting at 11 a.m.

Rusty Wallace, another of Ford's top entries, said no one should be surprised, considering that NASCAR gave Evernham and the Dodge designers and engineers last year's Taurus templates for their starting point.

"Somebody told me the 'R/T' on the Dodge meant 'Really a Taurus,' but my Taurus doesn't run like that," said Wallace, who will start 12th in the 43-car field.

Intimidator gives Cheever a love tap

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — It's a good thing Dale Earnhardt wasn't really mad.

The seven-time Winston Cup champion survived being banged into a wall at 185 mph, then later kept his car under control speeding through the infield grass near the end of Friday's opening round of the International Race of Champions Series.

Instead of a possible victory, Earnhardt ended up seventh, and the driver who forced him into the grass, Indy Racing League star Eddie Cheever, needed a place to hide.

To the delight of the crowd, The Intimidator gave the bumper on Cheever's car, a whack on the cool-down lap, sending him spinning down the back straightaway. Winner Dale Jarrett became the forgotten man.

Earnhardt's retaliation was different from the love tap the defending IROC champ gave Cheever's bumper in salute after Cheever outdrove him and the rest of the NASCAR contingent for a victory last June at Michigan International Speedway.

"That was a five, this was a 500," Cheever said. "I thought it was an earthquake."

'Old man' Ruttman wins Daytona truck race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Joe Ruttman, the oldest driver in the NASCAR truck series, gave the youngest racer an education about Daytona.

Ruttman, 56, held off 20-year-old Ricky Hendrick on Friday to win the season-opening Florida Dodge Dealers 250 and become the oldest winner of a stock car race at Daytona International Speedway.

Hendrick and Scott Riggs, running second and third on the final lap, tried to gang up on Ruttman. But the driver who calls himself an "old man" moved to the low side on the backstretch and blocked them.

That broke their momentum, and Ruttman held them off by four truck-lengths for his 12th career victory.

THE GOLDEN BEAR IS BACK

LUTZ, Fla. (AP) — The Golden Bear is back.

Jack Nicklaus shot a 4-under-par 67 on Friday for a share of the first-round lead with Doug Tewell in the Verizon Classic.

"I managed my game well," Nicklaus of his bogey-free round on the 18th hole at the Tampa Bay. "I didn't play one of my better rounds of golf, but I scored one of my better rounds."

The 61-year-old star is winless since 1996.

"I haven't had a lot of fun in my golf game since I got my hip done," said Nicklaus, who had hip replacement surgery in January 1999. "I don't want to be doing something I can't do. I love playing golf. I don't want to hack it around."

Around Christmas, almost two years after his hip procedure, Nicklaus noticed a marked physical improvement.

"Guys have come back from it, but it takes a while," Nicklaus said. "I didn't think it would take that long. I just feel good. I'm tickled with that."

Tewell overcame two front-nine bogeys with four birdies over the final seven holes.

"I had some bad breaks on the front nine," Tewell said. "I stayed patient. The golf course was docile at the outset. The wind picked up on the back nine."

Defending champion Bruce Fleisher, Jim Hogshire and Allen Doyle shot 69s. Two players, including Hale Irwin and Leonard Thompson, had 70s. Lee Trevino shot a 72.

Durant slips to 67; still leads by three

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Joe Durant was so frustrated trying to play golf for a living that he quit the game to sell insurance. Luckily for him, he turned out to be even worse at selling than he had been at playing.

Durant's decision to return to golf paid more dividends Friday when he shot a 67 to take a three-shot lead over Paul Stankowski through three rounds of the Bob Hope Classic.

The 5-under round was the worst yet this week for Durant, who shot a 61 a day earlier. But he kept the same lead he started the day with, with two rounds to go in the 90-hole tournament.

"Anything you shoot a low round, the next day is kind of difficult," Durant said. "It was a little tough to follow yesterday."

Vijay Singh lurks at Malaysian Open

SHAH ALAM, Malaysia — New Zealand's Michael Campbell shot a 5-under 67 in rainy conditions to take two-stroke lead in the suspended second round of the Malaysian Open.

Campbell had an 8-under 136 total on the Saurjania course. New Zealand's Elliot Boulton was second after a 66.

Masters champion Vijay Singh of Fiji was three strokes behind Campbell with two holes to play. John Daly shot his second straight 72.

Matthew holds lead, Scranton shoots 64

KAPOLEI, Hawaii — Scotland's Carriona Matthew shot a 1-under-par 71 on Friday to maintain her two-stroke lead in the windswept Hawaiian Ladies Open.

Matthew, who opened with a 67 on Thursday, had four birdies, a bogey and a double bogey on the Kapolei Golf Course. Nancy Scranton matched the tournament record with a 64 to join Vicki Goetze-Ackerman at 4-under 140.

Matthew was 7 under after 14 holes, but had a double bogey on the 337-yard sixth. Her second shot landed behind a palm tree, her third went into a bunker and she three-putted the green.

She rebounded to birdie No. 7 and closed with two pars.

Knicks lick Nets in an East Conference clash

NEW YORK (AP) — Allan Houston scored 31 points, Latrell Sprewell added 22 and Larry Johnson had 18 as the New York Knicks picked on the weakest Nets defenders and defeated New Jersey 114-104 Friday night.

Although their lead-lagging defense allowed an opponent to score 100 points for the fourth time in six games, the Knicks had their highest scoring game of the season and shot 56 percent from the field.

Houston was 11-for-20, Sprewell hit half of his 20 shots and Glen Rice came off the bench to go 6-for-8 for 15 points as the Knicks snapped a two-game losing streak and sent the Nets to their eighth consecutive road loss.

76ers 108, Clippers 93

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson scored 42 points as Philadelphia won its third straight game and delivered coach Larry Brown his 1,000th professional victory.

Iverson shot 16-for-31 from the field and scored more than 40 points for the third straight game and for the 12th time this season.

Spurs 91, Timberwolves 85

MINNEAPOLIS — Tim Duncan had 26 points and 12 rebounds and Derek Anderson added 21 points as

San Antonio won its third straight.

Kevin Garnett had 31 points and 16 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who have lost three straight after winning a franchise-record 11 consecutive games.

Magic 108, Rockets 93

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tracy McGrady scored 14 of his 35 points in third quarter as Orlando won its eighth straight.

Darrell Armstrong added 20 points and nine assists for Orlando, which can tie a franchise record for consecutive wins with a victory over visiting New York on Sunday. The Magic won nine straight in the 1994-95 season.

Cuttino Mobley had 31 points for the Rockets, who had their four-game winning streak snapped.

Lakers 99, Hornets 94

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Shaquille O'Neal scored 38 points, including eight straight in the fourth quarter, and had 12 rebounds to lead Los Angeles.

Kobe Bryant, who scored 44 points against the Hornets on Feb. 2, was held to 25. He scored five of his five second-half points in the final minute to preserve the win.

Jamal Mashburn led the Hornets with 26 points and a career-high 15 rebounds.

Mavs owner fined, banned in fast-food dash

DALLAS — Mark Cuban was fined $10,000 — enough to buy 10,011 chalupas — and banned from Reunion Arena for two games for his fast-food inspired dash onto the court at the end of the Dallas-Cleveland game.

A shoving match between the Mavericks and the Cavaliers broke out at the end of Thursday night's game when Dallas tried to reach 100 points in the final seconds of a blowout victory so fans could get coupons for 99-cent chalupas as part of a fast-food promotion.

Cuban came rushing onto the court to aid his players when the Cavaliers objected to Mavericks' running up the score.

The outspoken owner has now been fined a total of $405,000 for infractions ranging from criticizing referees to sitting too close to the court. But this was his first suspension.

Kootenai Electric seeks cheaper power

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - The West's electricity crunch is prompting Kootenai Electric Cooperative to seek a speedy approval for a portable diesel generator next to its Athol substation.

The 1.6-megawatt unit will replace a small amount of electricity purchased from Avista Utilities, General Manager Bob Crump said.

The price of the power is indexed to wholesale market prices, Crump said, and costs have soared as high as $500 per megawatt. The truck-mounted unit will generate power for about $106 per megawatt.

A megawatt will serve about 600 homes, depending on climate and heat source.

Crump said diesel from a tank will be fed directly into the generator. The reservoir will sit atop a spill container. Kootenai Electric wants the generator running by March 1.

With time short, state regulators are fast-tracking processing of the necessary permits, officials said.

Under a new policy, Kootenai Electric will get an expedited review by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality, chopping the time involved from about four months to one.

Kootenai Electric will be responsible for determining the potential for air pollution instead of Environmental Quality agents. The cooperative then gets a traditional permit at a later date.

The process is only being used because of the current dearth of power, department officials said.

Air quality analyst Dan Redline ran a computer model of the potential emissions from the generator. He found the substance that most concerns regulators - nitrogen oxides, an agent of acid rain - falls below the national annual standard.

The cooperative also needs approval from the Panhandle Health District because the diesel generator will sit over the Spokane Valley-Rathdrum Prairie Aquifer.

Online retail sales boom at end of 2000

WASHINGTON - Internet sales of everything from books to cars boomed during the final three months of 2000 even as the nation's economy slowed sharply.

Online purchases rose by 35.9 percent to $8.69 billion in the fourth quarter from the third-quarter, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

Those sales accounted for 1 percent of the $856.2 billion in total retail sales during the fourth quarter, the weakest performance in more than five years. The nation's retailers reported lackluster sales at the end of last year because of a number of factors including harsh winter weather, lower consumer confidence, stock market volatility and higher energy prices.

For all of 2000, online sales totaled $25.8 billion. That accounted for 0.8 percent of the $3.2 trillion in all retail sales during the year.

IP adds fifth line between Hells Canyon and Boise

WEISER - Idaho Power Co. is conducting its first significant electrical power line construction in 20 years with a 52-mile project from the Hells Canyon dam complex.

Crews are hanging wire in the overall $30 million Brownlee-Paddock-Ontario transmission line project. It adds a fifth major transmission line into the Boise valley from the three dams on the Snake River, increasing capacity and reliability of service.

The inch-thick wire, or conductor, will transmit 230 kilovolts from the Brownlee Power Plant to the Paddock tap line southeast of Weiser. From there, it runs west to Ontario, Ore. and eventually loops to Boise through Caldwell.

A helicopter pulk is stringing rope from structure to structure. The conductor is then attached and is pulled through large pulleys called stringing dories.

"Doing this aerially is an effective way to string the wire," project leader Darel Tracy said. "It's a technique that saves a lot of time for crews, especially in this terrain where you have to move between access roads."

The wire-stringing should be completed next week. The line is expected to be energized by mid-March.

Poor market closes nation's most prolific silver producer

The Associated Press

KELLOGG - The Sunshine Mine, the nation's largest and most prolific silver producer and the site of one of the nation's worst mining disasters, closed Friday, throwing 130 miners out of work after years of low metal prices and foreign competition.

General Manager Harry F. Cougher shook hands with the mechanics and contract miners as they left the mine - perhaps for the last time - after a final fire drill Friday morning.

The mine's owners, who have come through two bankruptcies in the past decade, will keep a skeleton crew to run massive pumps and fans so the mine can be reopened if silver prices rise in the future.

"Personal opinion, it's very unlikely," said Ken Poulson, a Sunshine mechanic and official of the United Steelworkers of America.

"There's a lot of depression and uncertainty about where we're going next," he said. "Most people are wandering around. They knew it was coming, but it's still a shock."

Discovered on a hillside above Big Creek, east of Kellogg, in 1884 by brothers True and Dennis Blake, the Sunshine Mine became the nation's largest and most productive underground silver mine. In its heyday, it employed nearly 600 workers and had yielded more than 300 million ounces of silver by its 100th anniversary.

Harry Cougher, general manager of the Sunshine Mine, right, greets workers leaving the facility after finishing the last shift at the mine near Kellogg Friday. Years of low metal prices and the closure of a Montana smelter meant the closing of the Sunshine Mine. Some 130 miners worked their final shift Friday morning. A skeleton crew will remain for about three months to put the mine into mothballs.

The mine, with shafts plunging 6,000 feet beneath the surface, was the scene of one of the nation's worst mining catastrophes, when an underground fire killed 91 miners on May 2, 1972.

The closure weighs heavily on the Silver Valley - named for the success of the Sunshine and other nearby mines.

"It's like a member of the family disappearing," Cougher said.

There's a sadness, whether you work here or not," Larry Brown, a mechanic who has worked at the mine for 26

Inflation spike, Mideast military action contribute to market losses

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Wall Street plunged back into pessimism Friday, sending stocks sharply lower after Nortel Networks, Dell Computer and Hewlett-Packard warned that business will slow further this year. A spike in inflation and military action in the Middle East increased the market's woes.

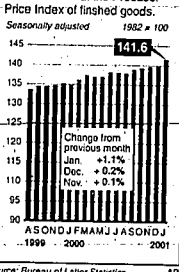

"The market just doesn't like today at all," said Dan Ascani, president and research director at Global Market Strategists in Gainesville, Fla.

After a session of heavy trading and plenty of reasons for selling, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 91.20 to close at 10,799.82. The Dow was up 0.2 percent for the week.

WASHINGTON - Wholesale prices in January took their biggest leap in a decade, even as industrial production fell for a fourth month in a row. Natural gas prices soared at a record pace.

Analysts said the figures portrayed an economy that was struggling but not in recession. Inflation has eased recently, they said, and a third report Friday showed housing construction flourishing.

The reports came as Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues seek to stave off an economic downturn. The Federal Reserve slashed interest rates by a full percentage point in January, the first time the central bank has moved so quickly during Greenspan's 14-year tenure.

While Friday's mixed economic news could complicate matters a bit for them, economists continue to believe Fed policy-makers will move to cut interest rates again, next month.

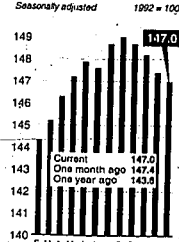

"When you add it all together, there is still a bright green light for the Federal Reserve to ease monetary policy," said Mark Zandi, chief economist for Economatics.

Economists rejected the notion that the economy might be coming to face the twin evils of high inflation and sluggish growth. That's because many analysts believed Friday's Producer Price Index report by the Labor Department painted a picture of wholesale inflation that isn't as bad as it seems.

The PPI, which measures inflation pressures before they reach store shelves, shot up 1.1 percent in January, the biggest rise since September 1990. That followed a mild 0.2 percent increase in December.

"While the raw producer price numbers seem a bit scary, a closer look shows that the spike in prices was isolated mainly to energy, tobacco and autos," said Jerry Jasnowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. Excluding those increases, wholesale prices rose by a modest 0.3 percent, he said.

Although natural gas prices rose sharply in January, they have since moderated, boding for more tame inflation - figures - in February, economists said.

The PPI report said the price of natural gas to heat homes and for other residential uses rose by a record 11.3 percent in January, surpassing the previous high set in December. Costs of natural gas to power electric utilities and used in industrial production also registered record increases of 64.4 percent and 46 percent, respectively.

Mixing hearts and flowers with dollars and cents

By Eileen Alt Powell

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - After the hearts and flowers of Valentine's Day, perhaps it's time to start talking about the dollars and cents of your relationship.

"Most of us were brought up never to talk about money, to consider it the other person's very private business," said Corbin Borden, a senior editor for the women's Internet site iVillage.com. "It's the last bastion of Victorianism."

One way or another, money makes its way into romance

But the fact is, love doesn't conquer all. Nearly half of all marriages in the United States end in divorce, and experts say money problems are often a major factor.

"If there was a way to wave a magic wand and make one change in the way people court and marry, my vote would be that before they say 'I do,' they learn a great deal more about the way each other expects to live," said Leo Borden, a divorce specialist who runs the Alabama Family Law Center in Birmingham.

He believes most young couples have trouble getting to the nitty-gritty questions: How much is appropriate to spend on a vacation? What level of savings is right for us? Should we pool everything we make, or are we going to have "his" money and "her" money? How do we go about making decisions for major purchases?

"I think conventional wisdom has it that it's a shortage of money that causes disputes," Borden said. "The real marriage breaker is when people have different expectations about money. They may be very wealthy, but have very different expectations about how money should be accumulated and how it should be spent."

Eileen Blyney, a certified financial planner in Leavenworth, Pa., acknowledges that broaching the subject of money can be difficult, not only for people who are dating but for those who are married. Her attitudes about money are formed in our childhood, she said. "They're difficult to articulate, sometimes difficult even to recognize - but they're very powerful."

High debt is among the issues that have arisen in recent years, she said, because that many young people are not experts at distributing on students loans, personal loans and credit cards.

"It may not sound very romantic," she said.

What planet is so far away, it has never been visited by spacecraft from Earth?

Pluto is at least 2.7 billion miles from Earth. It's usually the outermost planet in the solar system. Many mysteries surround the planet because it is so far away from Earth and because it is very small and moves very slowly...it takes Pluto 248 years to complete an orbit around the sun.

Discovered in February 1930 by Clyde Tombaugh, Pluto is 1,430 miles wide and has a temperature of -380°. The planet has big, dark markings on its surface. It is made up of ice from frozen nitrogen.

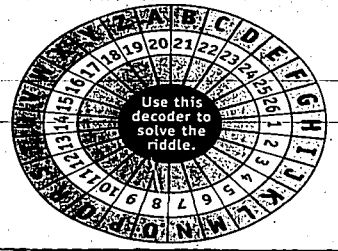

The makeup of Pluto may be like Neptune's moon, Triton. On Triton, there are seasons and winds, so there may even be clouds and storms on Pluto. However, it's really hard to see this when looking at Pluto from here on Earth.

It wasn't until 1978 that a man named Jim Christy discovered Pluto has a moon, Charon, which is about 12,000 miles from Pluto. Because Charon is almost as big as Pluto and they orbit each other, it is almost a double planet.

Kosovo blast kills Serbs on pilgrimage

PODUJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Kosovo militants blew up a bus carrying Serb families on a pilgrimage to the graves of their ancestors on Friday, killing seven people, injuring 43 and leaving behind a tangle of charred metal, scraps of clothing and scattered notebook pages covered with children's doodles.

The attack was the deadliest in more than a year and is likely to further undermine efforts by NATO and the United Nations to improve relations between Serbs and ethnic Albanians after last year's rise to power of a democratic government in Belgrade.

NATO detained two ethnic Albanians near the scene before the remote-controlled bomb was detonated — just after two armored personnel carriers full of Swedish troops passed safely over it.

"All of a sudden, everything burst, the bus seemed to have fallen apart," Gorica Stjepanovic, 24, said from her hospital bed in Kursumlija, a Serbian town just outside Kosovo. "Blood was dripping from the roof, we were trying to see whose blood." "Somebody's leg was hanging from the window," said Stjepanovic, her left eye bandaged and her clothes filthy from the blast. "When I managed to get out, parts of bodies were everywhere."

There were signs the bombing — apparently by ethnic Albanian radicals — was part of a broader campaign against the Kosovo Serb minority.

The Bota news agency in Belgrade quoted unidentified NATO officials as saying that peacekeepers deactivated six remote-controlled bombs Friday near the southwestern Serb enclave of Strpce. The officials linked the bombs to the one that destroyed the bus, saying they apparently were meant to target Serb convoys.

Large-scale ethnic violence has generally ceased since mid-1999, when NATO peacekeepers took control of the Serbian province as part of a deal ending the NATO bombardment of Yugoslavia and putting a stop to a Serb crackdown in Kosovo.

But ethnic tensions have continued. Kosovo's Serb minority has increasingly been targeted by members of the ethnic Albanian majority seeking to get even for the Serb crackdown. Many of Kosovo's 200,000 Serbs have fled the province.

The bus — near the city of Podujevo, 25 miles northeast of Pristina — was part of a five-vehicle convoy carrying about 250 people, accompanied by five Swedish armored personnel carriers and a medical detachment peacekeepers said.

The bus company that chartered the vehicles to the Serb said they were on route to Gradnica, just south of Pristina. The families were planning to visit graves of relatives on Saturday, the Orthodox Day of the Dead, and to celebrate Mass.

The 100 to 200 pounds of explosives were detonated by remote control from more than half a mile away, said Brig. Gen. Rob Fry, commander of British troops in the region. "This is an act of ruthless, premeditated murder," he said.

Yugoslav President Vojislav Kostunica urged Serbs "not to fall into the trap of Albanian terrorists and respond with force to their crimes." He called on NATO to prevent Kosovo from becoming a place "where fear and intimidation rule."

The European Union said the attack was a "barbarous act of violence," but asked all parties to remain calm.

Barak says he will stay on as defense minister

JERUSALEM (AP) — Unmoved by a deluge of criticism, Ehud Barak announced Friday that he wants to stay on as defense minister under Prime Minister-elect Ariel Sharon, paving the way for the creation of a broad-based government with a limited peace agenda.

Sharon and Barak, the outgoing premier, agreed late Thursday to form a joint coalition that would include Former Prime Minister Shimon Peres as foreign minister and Barak in the defense post.

The Palestinians warned Friday that Barak and Peres would only be used as "a fig leaf" in any peace talks to cover up Sharon's hard-line stance.

Violence that broke out in late September persisted Friday with exchanges of fire reported in the West Bank cities of Hebron and Ramallah. Two Palestinians were killed in Hebron and 10 Palestinians injured in Ramallah, doctors said.

Sharon and Barak were reportedly to conclude a coalition agreement by the end of the weekend so the new government could be formed quickly. Sharon was hoping to end the political limbo at a time when many Israelis are demanding more effective action against the Palestinian uprising, now in its fifth month.

A list of ministers would have to be approved by Barak's Labor Party and Sharon's Likud. Some in Labor indicated they would fight Barak's efforts to stay on in a party meeting expected next week.

Barak's situation is complicated by his announcement, on the night of Sharon's Feb. 6 victory, that he would resign as Labor Party leader and leave politics for a while. His about-face has been widely condemned, even by supporters, as crass opportunism.

In a speech Friday to Labor members in Tel Aviv, Barak said he wanted to maintain the defense post — which he held for 20 months in conjunction with the prime ministership — to confront the "emergency situation" with the Palestinians.

"Emotion says leave — but common sense says stay," said Barak. "My responsibility to the public says that, at this moment, with these tough incidents, I should stay."

Some in the audience heckled him for this chance in stance, shouting "Zigzag!"

America's fattest city tries to dump some pounds

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The City of Brotherly Love, which two years ago earned the distinction of being America's fattest city, is trying to shed the fat.

Led by Mayor John F. Street, a fitness fanatic, and Pat Croce, owner of the NBA's 76ers and a former fitness trainer, the city is trying to get residents to lose a combined 76 tons in 76 days.

In 1999, Men's Fitness magazine named Philadelphia the least fit city in the country after a survey showed nearly 30 percent of its residents were obese, and only 16 percent exercised regularly.

Street, a now-trim 57-year-old who once weighed nearly 300 pounds, makes regular use of the gym he had installed in his City Hall suite after taking office last year. He even has a full-time fitness czar.

"He knew that if other citizens became more disciplined with their health, they'd be more disciplined with their lives," said Gwen Foster, a childhood friend

Norman Seibold, with his wife, Dona, recalls events from the past at the couple's home in Rupert.

Angels in residence

Rupert author writes about Mormon missionary evacuation

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — During a time in his life that was supposed to be set aside for unity and introspection, Mormon missionary Norman Seibold was called to accomplish a different purpose — amid the turmoil of war.

Forty-five years later, Rupert author Terry Montague was so intrigued by the story of Seibold helping to evacuate Mormon missionaries from Western Germany in 1939, that she wrote a book about it. The book, written in 1989, was released in paperback version in November 2000.

"Mine Angels Round About" takes its readers back to a time when Hitler's army was steamrolling toward Poland. It tells the story of 85 stranded missionaries, who were evacuated just before World War II broke out in Germany.

Seibold, now 85, is a former Minidoka County commissioner who lives in Rupert. When the missionaries got the evacuation order from President Heber J. Grant of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, they thought they would run over to Holland and wait until the situation stabilized. But Seibold was contacted by the Frankfurt missions office, and ended up volunteering to help find missionaries and get them safely out of the country.

He knew the best place to look (for people) would be in train stations, said Montague. "There were people scrambling to get home, Jews trying to get across the border and military men trying to report for duty."

The military had commandeered the train, and Holland had closed its borders to refugees.

Seibold headed to the nearest train station and employed a code often used by missionaries to call to each other. He climbed on top of a baggage car and whistled the first five notes of the Mormon hymn "Do What Is Right." Soon, several missionaries gathered around him. From there, they went on to the next train station. Within five days, the group had collected all 85 missionaries.

"I did the only thing there was to do," he said, more than 60 years later. "The word was go and get. That's pretty well what you did."

Seibold understood the missionaries were leaving for their own protection, but it was not easy for him.

"We were leaving a group of people that, in two years, we had come to love," he said. Montague heard this same sentiment over and over again when she interviewed the evacuated missionaries, she said.

"These missionaries were serving in a country where they were not allowed to tract or teach," she explained. "They had the SS following them around. They were searched, arrested; their mail was gone through. There was no indoor plumbing; food was not readily available. When they were called to evacuate, they left, but it broke their hearts that they couldn't go back. They loved the people."

Montague first heard the story of the evacuation when Seibold spoke at a fireside talk at her stake about 15 years ago.

"We need to write this down," she told him.

She also got information for the book from church archives in Salt Lake City and by asking for the names of missionaries in Germany in 1939. She spent about five years scanning phone books, sending letters, making calls and writing it all down.

The book itself

"Mine Angels Round About" priced at $14.99, is available at LDS bookstores, including The Book Store in Rupert, The Book Plaza in Butley, Bell's Family Books in Twin Falls and Crowley's — The Quaid at the Magic Valley Mall in Twin Falls. Author Terry Montague will be autographing books from noon to 1:30 p.m. at Bell's and from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at Crowley's on Feb. 24.

The book is also available from Granite Publishing (with a credit card) at 1-800-574-5779. For information about obtaining autographed copies if you can't make the book signings, send e-mail to zowlmoon@safelink.net. To read an excerpt from the book, go to www.MineAngelsRoundAbout.com.

Terry Montague

She found the families of all but two of the missionaries and received letters, recordings, or personal interviews from 59 of them. Many of the missionaries were dead, but she was able to get information from their families. And she found some of them in places as far away as Israel and New Zealand.

"One woman in Montana sent me her husband's journal," she said.

Montague was so intrigued by the evacuation story that she became wrapped up in it as she wrote.

"I dreamed about the people I was writing about," she said. "I sat at my computer and heard their voices."

Seibold said so much time has passed that he doesn't remember such voices as often anymore.

"I think more about things like the price of wheat," he said.

But he does try to keep in touch with some of the people who lived through the experience with him. A few of the former missionaries have even stopped by and gone fishing with him, he said.

"I think more about things like the price of wheat," he said. But he does try to keep in touch with some of the people who lived through the experience with him. A few of the former missionaries have even stopped by and gone fishing with him, he said.

The title of Montague's book was taken from a passage in an LDS scripture called the "Doctrine and Covenants." It promises protection for missionaries, Montague said ...

"And I will be on your right hand and on your left, and my Spirit shall be in your hearts, and mine angels round about you to bear you up."

"I don't know any other way they could have done what they did," Montague said.

By Richard Ostling The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The complaint has a familiar ring: Science-driven secularism has simply gone too far. It has arrogantly tyrannized American higher education, leaving religious faith to the margins, and has moved on to colonize huge tracts of American culture, law, media, and even some churches.

This time, however, the lamentation comes not from the religious right but from a foe of that movement: the certifiably liberal dean of American experts on world religions, Huston Smith.

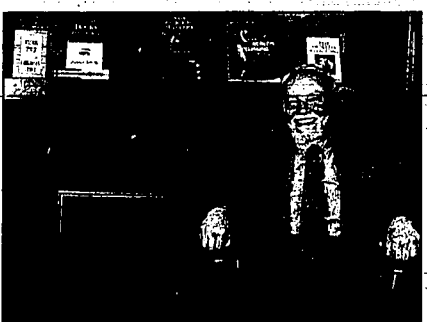

"The culprit is not science itself, but our misconstrual of it," Smith, 81, says in his new book, "Why Religion Matters," just published by HarperSanFrancisco. His "The World's Religions" sold well over 2 million copies. And he became something of a pop figure in 1996 when he was featured on a five-part PBS-TV series with Bill Moyers.

Smith says nobody in his right mind would attack science as such, considering its vast contributions to human betterment. But he warns that science has been twisted into "scientism," an ideology that tries to take the place of religion and deny it any legitimate place in modern thinking.

The problem became obvious to him, Smith said, when he taught philosophy at Massachusetts Institute of Technology between 1958 and 1973. The atmosphere on elite campuses was "materialistic or naturalistic to the core" and supposed that "there is nothing beyond this physical world and science is the royal road to truth in discovering the nature of reality."

"I didn't believe that," he says. "I still do not believe that."

In 1997, Smith sent a complaint to a national organization of high-school-biology teachers about its official definition of evolution as an "unsupervised, impersonal" process. There's no scientific proof for those words, he argued, and many Americans see them as a threat to their belief that God had a hand in the cosmos. After vigorous discussion, the association dropped the two words.

Theologian Huston Smith, in the Tattered Cover Book Store in Denver, speaks about his new book, Why Religion Matters. Smith is an expert on the world's religions.

Smith champions what he calls the traditional world view, which insists on the reality of things that cannot be known by science, such as values, beauty, the supernatural, the ultimate meaning of existence and fulfillment of "the basic longing that lies in the depths of the human heart."

Modern, scientific thinking, he writes, "cannot prevent us from having experiences that feel as if they come from a different world." If these important matters are suppressed, the stature of the human race is diminished.

Most Americans hold on to this great tradition, he thinks, but the intellectual elite largely rejects it. He quotes sociologist Peter Berger, who observed that India is "the world's most religious nation, Sweden is the least religious, and America is 'a nation of Indians ruled by Swedes.'"

The now-retired professor who was raised by missionary parents in China took an early interest in learning about Confucianism and Taoism. Later, he spent years working with spiritual masters to experience from inside the life of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Sufism, the mystical branch of Islam. He later explored American Indian religion.

He is, however, a lifelong Methodist churchgoer.

Reward posted after mission vandalized

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - A Tucson O'odham casino offered a $10,000 reward on Wednesday for information leading to arrest of vandals who smashed statues and spray-painted a chapel at historic Mission San Xavier del Bac.

"This is an international treasure. We need to throw up our hands and say, 'That's enough,'" said Ned Norris Jr., director of marketing and public relations for Desert Diamond Casino.

Meanwhile, the Rev. David Gaa was considering possible steps to increase security with the help of the casino and the community.

Gaa said the changes may include having a guard during the night. Currently, security consists of a locked gate to the complex and an alarm system for the main mission building.

About 35 statues known as santos were damaged or destroyed, and the mission's small mortuary chapel was desecrated. Graffiti was sprayed on walls, and many of the plaster statues were smashed. A maintenance worker discovered the damage early Tuesday.

O'odham Indian Reservation. Tribal police said they have no suspects and have made no arrests.

Tohono O'odham Police Chief Lawrence Seligman said he is devoting 10 people, 20 percent of his agency, to the investigation, adding, "This is a crime against the entire community."

Church court removes bishop for past sexual relationship

By Paul Novell The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - An Episcopal Church court ordered a Montana bishop defrocked Thursday for an affair with a married parishioner nearly 20 years ago.

By a 7-2 vote, a court of nine Episcopal bishops imposed the severest possible penalty, stripping Bishop Charles I. "Ci" Jones of his ordained status for what it called the "sexual exploitation" of the woman.

Jones, 58, who became Montana's bishop in 1986, can appeal.

He would be only the second bishop to be ousted since the denomination was founded in 1784, said James Solheim, spokesman at the denomination's New York headquarters. An Arkansas bishop was defrocked in 1924 for heresy after declaring that Christianity had become outmoded.

Jones' affair took place in the early 1980s when he was a young priest in rural Kentucky. Jones was and remains married.

Presiding Bishop Frank Griswold, head of the 2.3 million-member denomination, had sought Jones' removal. Jones admitted to the affair and received counseling during a leave of absence in 1993. But church law at the time did not permit a trial so long after the alleged misconduct.

Church membership in U.S. tops 151 million

NEW YORK (AP) - Total U.S. church membership is 151,097,906 in 320,697 congregations, according to the "2001 Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches." Three-fourths of those members belong to the 10 largest denominations.

The nation's biggest denominations are the Roman Catholic Church and Southern Baptist Convention, which posted membership increases of 373,048 and 122,400 respectively from the previous year.

The third-ranking United Methodist Church declined by 33,841 members. Also showing losses were the American Baptist Churches (53,012), Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (28,557), Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod (11,964) and Presbyterian Church (USA) (13,775).

The National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., typically ranks fourth in size but provided no data and was not listed.

The yearbook said the 62 U.S. denominations providing financial data had cumulative receipts of just under $27 billion.

What's with W's winking?

I wanted to report to my conservative readers that my opinion of George W. Bush has certainly been elevated during the first days of his presidency.

First off, the man proposed some sweeping educational changes, and though I am not a voucher champion, I certainly want what is best for children. George W. conducted himself well during the first days, his wife, Laura, has not lost her small-town smile and the government is clanking along like a well-maintained jalopy.

The thing that bothers me about Mr. President is his nervous habit of winking as he gives a speech. The poor man almost appears to have a tick that attacks his left eye as he's giving a speech. An observer can notice it's not a tick because his mouth moves in harmony with the eye. So, it looks like the man has been doing this most of his life.

FAITH TODAY

In midsentence he will focus on someone in the audience and he will pump up his grin and then the left eye flutters slightly. This is meant as an addition to the speech. It means, "I'm pretty serious; but I can also have a good time." Or it might mean, "This speech is grim stuff, but once it's over, watch out! 'Cause we're going to have a fun time."

I could be wrong about the hidden messages in his winking business. That's not really my point anyway. I simply want to warn the most powerful man in the world that winking is a dangerous habit. Why? Because we don't know exactly what a wink means. If the president winks at you, that could mean he is attracted to you physically or he's just kidding around about all this foreign-policy stuff, but he doesn't really intend to bomb the bad guys into oblivion. You can see it leaves too much to the imagination.

Further, a wink does not leave us with a clear message about our response. If the president winks at you, should you seek him out at the next opportunity and respond in kind? This could damage another administration.

Do you think Abraham Lincoln employed winking? With all the rumors surrounding George Washington, do you think he did his share of winking? The same might be true about Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson and a host of others. But thank God there have been some presidents that wuffed the winks and played it straight.

The Bible also does not like winking. I know that George W. is a United Methodist and a darn good one, I'm told. But if he looked deeply into the doctrine of his religion, he would find numerous warnings about people who wink.

For instance, Proverbs 6:13 says, "A scoundrel and a villain goes around with crooked speech, winking the eyes; shuffling the feet, (and) pointing the fingers." Of course, you all know that the left eye causes trouble, but there you have a warning. I'm guessing that President Bush will cause some trouble before his term is up. The question: Can we blame that trouble on to his habit of winking?

I repeat, I am not accusing the president of the United States of anything. I wonder what I would do if a friendly woman winked at me? Would I think she was communicating a serious message or would I look upon it as an invitation to potential trouble? You see, that is the problem with winking; it leaves us discommodated.

A serious president does not want to confuse his followers and certainly the man would not want to alarm his detractors. I am, however, neither a Bush follower nor a committed winking champion, and myself to helping this president continue in holiness. And there is no better place to start than with his winking.

Churches could benefit from support

By Jennifer Brown
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Amid the abandoned gas stations and boarded-up storefronts of North Philadelphia, the New Hope Revival Center church is practically a community unto itself.

For children, the church has elementary school classes, after-school dance and music programs and day care. For parents, there is job planning and literacy instruction. For the homeless and hungry, there are blankets and dinners.

And all of it is provided without government funding.

"It's like we're curing cancer without medicine," said the pastor, the Rev. Harold Faust. "Imagine what we could do if we did have it."

Faust is excited about President Bush's plan to open up government funding for faith-based social service programs. But other religious leaders are concerned that accepting federal support would mean compromising their evangelical mission.

"We haven't taken any government money over the past 109 years we've been in business because we don't want to have to water down or not be able to say that Jesus is important to us," said Brad Meuli, president and chief executive of the Denver Rescue Mission.

An estimated 90 percent of the nation's 353,000 churches, synagogues and mosques operate community programs, but less than 1 percent receive government money, according to a report issued in January by Independent Sector, a coalition of nonprofit and philanthropic groups.

Bush's plan would let religious groups compete more easily with secular ones for government grants, something they can do only on a limited basis now.

The religious organizations accept federal money would still have to meet federal anti-discrimination policies, meaning they could not require participants to attend religious activities and could not turn away people of other faiths.

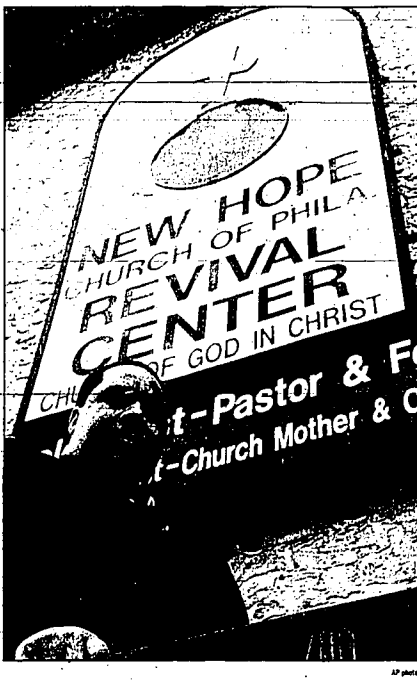

Dan Taylor, director of the Union Rescue Mission in Cumberland, Md., where shelter residents must attend evening worship services, said he is not willing to compromise just to get money from Washington.

"Our primary purpose is evangelizing to win souls. The charitable things we do are like an aside," he said.

But the Rev. Edward Rix of the Philadelphia suburb of Wynnewood said he does not see a problem with separating his church's social and religious activities.

"It's a service," Rix said about a clothing drive run by his Roman Catholic parish. "But it's also a way of letting people know that our church is here. If they want to come and worship with us, they are invited."

Pastor Harold Faust, of the New Hope Revival Center in North Philadelphia, says he is excited about President Bush's plan to open up government funding for faith-based social service programs. The predominantly black religious congregations would be among the most likely to benefit from the plan, according to a new study.

"We haven't taken any government money over the past 109 years we've been in business because we don't want to have to water down or not be able to say that Jesus is important to us."

Morals of Mayberry move to Sunday school

By Jim Jones
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Andy Griffith is everywhere - on "Matlock," solving crimes and eating chili dogs, in reruns of "The Andy Griffith Show" as a single parent counseling son Opie (Ron Howard), even making an unlikely appearance on an episode of "Dawson's Creek" last week.

Now Andy is in Sunday school, too.

Joey Fann, a 35-year-old computer engineer, has developed a series of Sunday school lessons based on the moral and ethical lessons illustrated by the TV adventures of Andy, Opie, Barney Fife, Gomer Pyle and others. Fann's book, released this month, "The Way Back to Mayberry: Lessons From Simpler Times" (Broadman & Holman), has pictures of Andy and Barney and Gomer, Bible verses and commentaries on moral lessons from the series.

"It all grew out of Wednesday night Bible study in my church that I thought would be a one-time thing," Fann said by phone from his home in Huntsville, Ala. It spread via his Web site, <http://www.barneyfife.com/>

What started two years ago at his church, the Twickenham Church of Christ in Huntsville, Ala., is now taught in churches of several denominations in more than 30 states.

Fann wasn't even born when the show aired in 1960, but he became hooked on the series as a student at David Lipscomb University in Nashville. He and a cousin would watch tapes of Barney Fife and other characters in the fictional small town of Mayberry.

Characters make few references to the Bible in the "Andy Griffith" shows, but the story lines are filled with moral teachings on basic values such as responsibility, honesty and integrity.

Fann's favorite tale is "Opie the Birdman," in which Opie accidentally kills a mother bird with his new slingshot. A distraught Opie takes responsibility for his misdeed and cares for the young birds until it is time to set them free. Reluctantly, he lets the three birds fly away and says, "The cage sure does look empty don't it, Pa?" Andy answers, "Yes, son it does. But don't let the trees seem nice and full." The show ends with Opie and Andy looking up at the trees, with the wonderful sounds of birds singing.

Says Fann: "We use this story to provoke discussion on a lot of things, including how we must live with our mistakes, take responsibility for our own actions."

Nelson-Word, a division of Thomas Nelson Publishers, produced two videos featuring the curriculum Fann developed. Members of the Sunday school classes view an episode from the show, and their teacher leads discussions about the moral and religious teachings.

Grayson Stone, fifth-grader at Harrison Elementary School, Twin Falls.

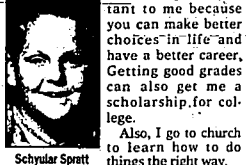

Grayson Stone

Some people delay school. I'll go next year; oh, it can wait.

No, it can't. You need an education in your everyday life. Some people say that they are too old to go back to college or get their high school diploma. You aren't. There is no age limit for learning.

Schuyler Spratt, sixth-grader at Lincoln Elementary School, Twin Falls.

Schuyler Spratt

Learning is important to me because you can make better choices in life and have a better career. Getting good grades can also get me a scholarship for college. Also, I go to church to learn how to do things the right way.

The Times-News presents "Asset Builders" in cooperation with HealthNet, a community partnership that aims at improving health in the community. National research shows there are 40 positive "assets" that help teenagers succeed and avoid risky behaviors.

Each month we'll focus on a different asset with comments from local teens.
