Swap plan raises tempers

BOISE — He said he introduced the bill to "initiate discussion" of the idea.

A proposal to allow Minidoka County to annex 360,000 acres of Blaine County's "tail" has been characterized by Blaine County elected officials as "a hostile takeover" — probably not the kind of discussion Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, had in mind when he brought the bill forward.

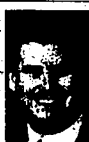

Even some residents of the area — and there are fewer than 30 — are saying their taxes will go up

The 'Tail'

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, wants to enact legislation to move Blaine County's "tail" into Minidoka County.

With property values totaling about $20 million, the tail — a strip of land protruding southward to the Snake River from southeast corner of Blaine County's main body along the Wood River Valley — was tacked on to Blaine County when it was created in 1885.

The purpose of the tail was to give the county access to the Union Pacific Railroad's main line running along the Snake River, and the tax windfall that came with it.

Today, $13 million of the area's property value is tied up in that portion of railroad line.

The shift would add 360,402 acres to Minidoka County's current 489,629 — an increase of 74 percent. Blaine County would be reduced by 21 percent to just under 1.35 million acres.

saying this is a perfect bill, but I am saying there needs to be a discussion of how those people are being treated," Cameron said.

Tail residents, and Blaine County officials, also are irked because the bill came as a late-session surprise — although Cameron says he discussed the idea with Blaine County lawmakers well beforehand.

Prison official resigns

The Associated Press

BOISE — State Correction Director James Spalding resigned Friday following the disclosure of widespread mismanagement and theft in the Division of Correctional Industries.

A report released by Attorney General Al Lance on the 22-month investigation documented widespread instances of theft of division-manufactured furniture and lack of control over prison inmates assigned to the division.

Spalding pointed staff he was resigning effective in the end of the administrative investigation.

Then, Correction spokesman Mark Carpius said.

Carpius said, Industries Administrator Mike Yang submitted his resignation about a month ago as the investigation was winding down. Carpius said Yang had decided to attend law school and his resignation had nothing to do with the investigation.

Services move back into church damaged by fire

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The congregation of a Twin Falls church, struck late last year by arson, is preparing to move services back into the church's sanctuary.

And a pastor and member of the congregation said they are taking some important spiritual lessons with them.

"There's nothing like having to do without something to make you appreciate it," said Carolyn Lewis, a member of Immanuel Lutheran Church for more than 25 years.

A fire early Dec. 8, 2000 in the church's day care center destroyed the day care and Sunday school wing and did extensive smoke damage to an adjacent sanctuary. That meant services and the day care had to be moved to a gymnasium at the nearby Immanuel Lutheran School.

The fire did an estimated $750,000 to $1 million in damage, which insurance should cover, Pastor Lawrence Vedder said.

Twin Falls residents, Travis G. Estep and David Allen Albert LaBrie, both 18, were later arrested and each charged with one count each of arson and two counts of burglary, according to court records. Those charges stem from the fire at Immanuel Lutheran, at 2055 Filer Ave., and a break-in a few nights earlier at Ascension Episcopal Church at 210 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Estep faces a preliminary hearing March 23. A pretrial conference for LaBrie is set for April 30, and a trial is set for May 15. Both were held Friday in the Twin Falls County jail.

The congregation was lucky to have the gym to move into, Lewis said.

Services resume

Regular Sunday services in the sanctuary at Immanuel Lutheran Church will resume Sunday. Sunday services include at contemporary service at 9:30 a.m. and a traditional service at 10:30 a.m.

Rev. Lawrence Vedder leads a service in the newly refurbished chapel at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls. A fire that destroyed one wing of the building also caused smoke damage to the chapel.

Even so, she said she's eager to begin worshipping in the church again.

"To me, it's a more worshipful atmosphere," she said. "While worship is an activity to attend with a group, you just feel more worshipful when you are in a church, rather than a gymnasium."

Foot-and-mouth disease stomps out St. Paddy's parade in Dublin

The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland — To the disbelief of Dubliners and their foreign guests, fears of foot-and-mouth disease have driven St. Patrick's Day out of Ireland.

"We're in disaster-recovery mode," said John Cox, a tour operator coordinating visits this week by marching bands from Colorado to Delaware.

It had hoped to march today before an audience exceeding 1 million, but now must make do with private performances for traveling friends and family — just one casualty in Ireland's wider war to bar the livestock disease.

Although the government announced Friday that some small-scale sports events could resume next weekend after a more than three-week ban, the efforts to minimize large gatherings of people — particularly those traveling from Britain or rural areas — means Dublin and other Irish towns will have no official St. Patrick's Day festivities.

"At the moment I've got 18 tons of fireworks under my bed," said Dominic Campbell, artistic director for Dublin's planned four-day St. Patrick's Festival, whose frustrated organizers and sponsors hope may be staged later this year.

So far, the Republic of Ireland hasn't had a confirmed case of foot-and-mouth disease, which doesn't harm humans, but could devastate the country's livestock industry. Restrictions began after one case was confirmed March 1 in neighboring Northern Ireland — long after visiting U.S. bands had booked nonrefundable flights.

St. Patrick's Day in Dublin was the main billing for the trip, but this is still a wonderful opportunity and the kids' morale is staying high," said Joey Lincia, assistant band director for the Rebels of Jack C. Hays High School in Buda, Texas.

Dick Well, left, enjoys a pint with Jim Barry Friday in The Palace Bar, Athlone, County Westmeath, Ireland. The band traveled to play in the St. Patrick's Day Parade. Instead, they'll play at schools and churches.

life in prison on a first-degree murder charge stemming from the death of Aleta Diane Ray.

Pearson, Autumn Marie Pauls, 16, Gooding, and Vicki Arlene Jensen, 32, Gooding, on Sept. 9, 1999, went to Ray's home in Twin Falls while Ray was home alone with her 3-year-old daughter.

Pauls used a rehearsed story of distress to get into Ray's house, prosecutors say. Jensen and Pearson then overpowered Ray. As Pearson held Ray down, Jensen injected Ray with a syringe full of methamphetamine and another of insulin. Pearson, Jensen and Pauls then watched as Ray died before leaving Ray's daughter alone in the home.

It was inexcusable that Pearson didn't take any of the numerous opportunities to refuse to go along with the plot, or to try to save Ray, Burdick told jurors.

"Your ability to reach a rational decision may have been impaired at the time, but you know right from wrong," Burdick said.

Burdick this week sentenced Jensen to life in prison without the possibility of parole and Pauls to 12 years to life in prison.

Jensen, jealous that Ray was dating her estranged husband, hatched the murder plan, according to court documents.

Pauls was apparently recruited to help several weeks in planning, and Pearson was brought in about a week before the killing.

Psychiatrist Dr. Richard Worst, who evaluated Pearson, testified that Pauls and Pearson had apparently been involved in an intense romantic relationship, which Pearson longed to renew.

Pauls used the promise of rekindling the romance to lure Pearson into the plot, Worst said. Pearson would have been easily manipulated because he suffers from attention deficit disorder, anxiety, substance abuse and post-traumatic stress disorder, Worst testified.

But that's why the focus of Pearson's punishment should be rehabilitation, defense attorney Calvin Campbell argued.

Pearson's mother, Peggy Pearson, agreed.

"Mathew needs to receive help," she said during testimony. "Whatever his punishment is, he needs help."

But Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Benton Larsen said the key issues should be the enormity of Ray's murder and the potential danger Pearson could still pose to society.

"He was raised in a good home, he knew that murdering Diane Ray was wrong," Larsen said.

Larsen cited a recent written statement made by Mathew Pearson that indicated he knew what he was doing.

"He wrote that 'I chose to ignore the consequences because I wanted to be with Autumn,'" Larsen said.

Standing up just before Burdick announced his sentence, Mathew Pearson made a brief apology to Ray's family and his own family.

Burdick warned Mathew Pearson that because he is apparently so easily manipulated by bad influences, he should focus on counseling, learning and reformation while in prison.

"Otherwise, you're doomed," Burdick told Mathew Pearson.

"When you get to prison, lay low for about a month or two and find out who is just pretending to be nice and who is really trying to do the right thing,"

Having to move into the gym was, in some ways, a blessing in disguise, Vedder said. The open, noisy space often brought a new dimension to worship. And the need to decorate the gym to make it suitable for Christmas services and other events brought out the best in people.

"There are some things about worship in the gym I really liked," Vedder said. "People had to change their focus. When there's so much around to distract you, you either get distracted or you focus more on things. It challenged us in a way to make us think what we're really all about, to be focused on the word of God."

Still, getting back into the sanctuary will be welcome, Vedder said. The congregation Wednesday met there for the first time since the fire, for a Lenten worship service. Sunday services return to the sanctuary this weekend.

"It's just a relief to be back, we want to have to putting up and taking down folding chairs before and after each service," he said.

Senate tax panel narrows differences

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne endorsed a modified version of his original $140 million tax relief package on Friday in hopes of lining up a Senate majority behind a plan that contains a one-time rebate.

But the House, which has already produced one budget-busting $200 million tax package, was prepared to draw up another on Monday in the face of the more cautious attitude the Senate has taken on tax cuts.

The three latest options being submitted to the 32 Republican senators on Monday are closer than the two earlier ones that the GOP caucus split down the middle.

Benefits would include having Minidoka County take over county services from far-flung Blaine County. And Minidoka County would be able to collect property taxes for services it already provides to the area, such as fire and police protection.

And finally, the adjustment would clean up irregular county boundaries that could leave Blaine County divided among multiple legislative districts when reapportionment decisions are made in the next few years.

Bill opponents say such a swap has wide financial implications for the counties and the residents.

With nearly double the property tax rate of Blaine County, tax collector Eugene Hruza is worried about getting a larger property tax bill from Minidoka County for his farm, and no added benefit.

"Minidoka County won't bring in any new services," Hruza said. "Even though Minidoka County already provides fire and police protection, the five or six families that live in the tail — all near its southern end — hardly warrant the added taxes Minidoka County would have to add."

With $20 million in property value, the tail brings in between $120,000 and 140,000 for Blaine County each year.

Georgia farmers mull state's offer of cash to not irrigate their fields

DAWSON, Ga. (AP) - With Georgia looking at its fourth straight summer of drought, the state is holding a no-irrigation auction: It is offering to pay farmers NOT to water their fields. The state has set aside $10 million from the national tobacco settlement to pay farmers in 42 counties to forego irrigation in a region that includes cotton farms and the nation's most fertile peanut fields.

Farmers who accept the money can still try to grow crops, but their fields may wither if the summer is as dry as the last three years. If the summer is wet, the farmers can keep the money and still have a healthy crop.

"If we have good, moderate rains this summer on a timely basis, the no-irrigation payments will be a great windfall for farmers," said Tommy Irvin, Georgia's agriculture commissioner. "If it turns really hot and the crop perishes in the field, it could be a disaster for farmers."

In Idaho, the state's utility, Idaho Power, is offering to pay farmers for every gallon of water they don't use for irrigation.

Many Georgia farmers signed up Friday for the weekend auction. Most of them were not particularly excited about the idea but resigned to the need to do something to conserve water.

"I don't know of a single farmer who has admitted he likes it," Harold Wilson, the county extension coordinator Terrell County.

Ever since the New Deal, the federal government has subsidized to prop up agricultural prices, paying farmers not to grow certain crops.

But Irvin said he knows of no other state that has held an auction to pay farmers not to irrigate. And Tim Senn of the Natural Resources Conservation Service, a branch of the U.S. Agriculture Department, said in his 23 years with the USDA, this is the first time he has seen such an incentive.

In this time of depressed agricultural commodity prices, the needs to be some compensation for reducing yields," Senn said.

The auctions will be today in eight towns. Farmers will submit written bids offering to not irrigate acreage for a certain amount of money.

A computer will analyze the bids and determine which to accept. Farmers will know by evening whether their bids were accepted.

Some farmers said they have heard the state is considering payments of $100 an acre - an amount they consider insufficient - but the state has not confirmed that.

Large areas of the country have been gripped by drought recently.

On Friday, the government began making $1.1 billion in payments to 160,000 farmers who lost crops to drought and other weather-related disasters last year. Texas, North Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas were among the states with the greatest demand for the money.

Crewman: Lack of time contributed to collision

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) - With only a few more minutes to analyze data, crewmen aboard the USS Greenville would have probably realized a fishing trawler was dangerously close and acted to avoid a deadly collision; a sonar supervisor testified Friday.

Petty Officer 1st Class Edward McGiboney told a Navy court of inquiry that a lack of time to perform a proper sonar analysis contributed to the Feb. 9 sinking of the Elhime Maru.

"Why didn't you hear this guy?" demanded Vice Adm. John Nathan, one of three admirals presiding over the inquiry.

"I don't think we had enough time," McGiboney replied.

The Greenville was demonstrating a rapid-surfacing drill for 15 civilians when it surfaced beneath the Elhime Maru, tearing into its stern and sending it plunging to the ocean floor. Nine people, including four teenagers on an expedition to learn commercial fishing, were killed.

The inquiry has zeroed in on two key factors - whether Greenville Cmdr. Scott Waddle, with his ship running behind schedule, rushed preparations for surfacing and whether he failed to look long enough or high enough to detect the Elhime Maru during a periscope search.

Three-year-old shoots attendant

CLARKSDALE, Miss. (AP) - A policeman's 3-year-old son shot a gas station attendant in the face with his father's pistol, authorities said.

James Collins, 43, was in critical condition Friday. Off-duty Patrolman Randy Tomlinson had brought his truck into the gas station on Thursday, leaving his gun in the back seat and his son in the front, Capt. Danny Hill said.

Jury acquits rap star of weapons charges

NEW YORK (AP) - Rap impresario Sean "Puffy" Combs was acquitted Friday of taking an illegal handgun into a crowded Manhattan hip-hop club where three people were later wounded.

Combs was also cleared of trying to bribe his way out of jail by using a diamond ring given to him by ex-girlfriend Jennifer Lopez.

Moments after he walked out of the courtroom, Combs called his children on a cell phone with the good news.

Combs' bodyguard, Anthony "Wolf" Jones, was acquitted of the same charges faced by his boss. Both men had faced up to 15 years in prison.

Rapper Jamaal "Shyne" Barrow, a Combs protégé who had been charged with attempted murder, was convicted of two counts of assault and reckless endangerment for the shooting inside the club in the early morning hours of Dec. 27, 1999.

"While Combs walked away a free man, Barrow was jailed pending his April 16 sentencing. The 21-year-old, whose glum reaction stood in stark contrast to Combs' celebration, faces up to 25 years in prison.

Officials: Cuts would help businesses

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush's Treasury Department estimated on Friday that at least 17 million small businesses would benefit from his proposed income tax cuts. Democrats argue the cuts are too small at the start to help the faltering economy.

At a White House small business conference, Bush said that dropping the top income tax rate from 39.6 percent to 33 percent "serves as a stimulus to small business growth in America."

"Millions of sole proprietorships, partnerships and certain corporations pay personal income taxes, not corporate income taxes."

"The tax relief plan will increase cash flow of small businesses, giving folks more resources to buy more equipment, and, as importantly, hire more workers," Bush said.

Nonetheless, Democrats continued to criticize Bush's plan for providing little immediate tax relief to stimulate the economy, even as White House officials said they were discussing with Republican leaders ways to adjust the plan to boost upfront benefits.

The $955 billion in income tax cuts passed by the House, which drop the lowest 15 percent rate to 12 percent retroactive to Jan. 1, would provide just $5.6 billion in 2001 - but would give $124.7 billion in tax cuts in 2011.

"If you're going to provide a stimulus, let's do it soon and let's target it to those families where it can do the most good," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

HATS OFF!

Members of the Idaho House of Representatives wear and display western wear Friday in Boise to remind Rep. George Swan, R-Twin Falls, that he has 69 colleagues pulling for him as he rests at home fighting colon and liver cancer.

House salutes cancer-battling colleague

By Michael Journeé
Times-News writer

BOISE — During his first few weeks in the Idaho House, George Swan quietly asked veteran lawmakers whether he could wear jeans on Fridays.

Swan wanted to get on the road home as soon as lawmakers finished their business for the week. But the dress code was vague.

"He'd ask around and everybody kind of gave him a bad time about preserving the decorum of the body," said Rep. Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, a long-time friend and fellow freshman lawmaker. "But he did it anyway."

So after liver cancer forced Swan to leave his legislative seat indefinitely, House members declared "Jeans for George Friday."

Blue denim and Western hats, which some lawmakers wore with more ease than others, were a tribute to Swan's days as a rancher and livestock industry lobbyist. They lent a lighter air to the hectic Statehouse atmosphere on Friday.

But jokes and smiles turned to serious faces of concern when House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, updated the lawmakers on Swan's status.

"Total failure of his liver has left Swan bedridden and reliant on an oxygen mask to aid his fluid-filling lungs. Swan's sister, Kathy Swan Jones, confirmed his condition."

What we do here is not nearly as important as what's going on in his life," Newcomb said.

Friday's tribute echoed Newcomb's own bout with cancer in 1995. That year, several lobbyists and House members turned their heads after chemotherapy denuded Newcomb's scalp.

"I was in a life-threatening situation, and they turned it into a life-enhancing situation," Newcomb said.

Newcomb, now cancer-free, said he hopes Friday's show of support makes a difference.

"Something like this means a lot, especially to family — they suffer almost as much as you do," Newcomb said.

Swan left his House seat almost three weeks ago. Sharon Block, who chairs the Twin Falls County Republican Women, will likely sit in until the end of the session.

Swan was diagnosed with terminal liver and colon cancer last year, just a few weeks after being chosen by local Republicans to fill a vacancy on the primary ballot.

Despite a grim prognosis, the former Rogerson-area rancher and past president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association continued his campaign. He was overwhelmingly elected in November.

Surgeons removed a colon tumor in August, but nothing could be done for his liver.

Despite his condition, Kathy Swan Jones said Swan's spirits are good. He continues to joke with family members and visitors and seems more worried about his family than about his own condition, she said.

"He has got an incredible fighting spirit," Jones said. "We just try to put his mind at ease so let him know we're going to be OK."

Mini-Cassia puts itself on the map with signs

By Lorraine Caverner
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — New signs at six southern Idaho rest stops are designed to bring more visitors to the Magic Valley.

The signs, which will be going up in information kiosks, feature attractions such as Shoshone Falls and Mini-Cassia attractions such as City of Rocks National Reserve. An ad agency, contracted by the Idaho Department of Commerce, designed the signs — after a push from some Mini-Cassia residents.

When a group of area residents visited the grand opening of the Junior rest stop on Interstate 84 near the Utah border about a year ago, they were disappointed to see signs in the information booth did not mention any Mini-Cassia attractions, said Joan Asson, executive director of the Mini-Cassia

More information

Magic Valley sites and their descriptions are on new signs at six interstate rest stops in south central Idaho. They include:

- City of Rocks National Reserve: 600-foot granite columns; rock climbing, hiking and camping.
- Lake Walcott State Park: In the Minidoka Wildlife Refuge; camping, picnicking, fishing, boating and bird watching.
- Hagerman Fossil Beds.
- Malad Gorge State Park.
- Shoshone Falls and the Perrine Bridge.

Chamber of Commerce. Dwinelle Allred, chairman of the Mini-Cassia transportation committee, began a letter-writing and telephone campaign to the department. He requested some signs mention Mini-Cassia, and the department responded.

"Your personal enthusiasm has become contagious both within the Department of Commerce and our advertising agency," Carl Wilgus, the department's tour administrator, wrote to Allred. "I finally got them convinced to put us on the map," Allred said. Allred, a former Rupert mayor, presented a new sign at the Mini-Cassia transportation committee meeting Wednesday.

"It's been a long, hard struggle. I don't know how many phone calls and letters I had to write," he said. Allred is not the only person pleased with the new signs.

"The Rupert Renaissance Initiative is extremely happy to have that done," said Chris Jackson, executive director of the Renaissance Arts Center Inc. "This will put us on the map."

Other signs featuring Rupert, installed near I-84's Rupert exits, came with help from a $3,600 state Commerce Department grant. The organization of Rupert Businesses supplied $2,600 in matching funds.

The signs feature the Minidoka County Historic Society Museum, Lake Walcott, the Minidoka Dam and wildlife refuge and Rupert Square. And the signs should bring tourists to spots such as the Rupert Square and Lake Walcott.

"Lake Walcott is one of the best-hidden secrets in the state," Jackson said. "Once people discover it, that will be a different story."

Film star dies in Sun Valley

The Associated Press

KETCHUM — Ann Sothern, an Oscar-nominated actress and 1950s television star who became a feminist icon for her portrayals of independent women, died of heart failure at her Sun Valley-area home. She was 92.

Sothern, who died late Thursday, was nominated for an Academy Award in 1987 for her 70th and last film, Lindsay Anderson's "The Whales of August," in which she starred with fellow screen legends Lillian Gish, Bette Davis and Vincent Price.

She starred from 1939 to 1947 as the savvy, street-smart heroine Maizie Kevier in a series of 10 films for MGM that became one of the most popular in the studio's history.

But Sothern was perhaps best known for her television roles in "Private Secretary" and "The Ann Sothern Show" from 1953 to 1961, playing the first working woman in a situation comedy.

In each, she was the power between actor Don Porter's hotel manager and talent agent. She received five Emmy nominations and won a Golden Globe for the shows, which she also produced.

"She was one of those people who I think was never, ever appreciated in her own time," Robert Osborne, a columnist for The Hollywood Reporter and host of Turner Classic Movies Channel network, said Friday.

"There was nothing she couldn't do. Light comedy was her forte, but she also was a good singer and the camera loved her."

A Mass will be celebrated Friday at Our Lady of the Snows Church network, which also said Turner Classic Movies plans to air many of Sothern's films during July, when she will be the network's star of the month.

Born Harriette Lake on Jan. 22, 1909, in Valley City, N.D., Sothern was the eldest of three sisters. Her mother was a singer and father an entrepreneur. She became a leading ingenue on Broadway in Ziegfeld's "Smiles," Rodgers and Hart's "America's Sweetheart" and the national touring company of Gershwin's "Of Thee I Sing."

Harry Cohn, head of Columbia Pictures, changed her name when he signed her to a studio contract, and she starred in her first film, "Let's Fall in Love," in 1934. She worked at Columbia and RKO throughout the 1930s and was loaned to other studios for such movies as "Kid Millions" with Eddie Cantor and "Folies Bergere" with Maurice Chevalier.

In 1941, Sothern performed the Oscar-winning song "The Last Time I Saw Paris" in "Lady Be Good," and in 1949 she starred as an advertising executive and wife to Kirk Douglas in the multiple Oscar-winning "A Letter to Three Wives."

In the 1950s, she was among the few stars who successfully made the transition to television, along with longtime friends Loretta Young and Lucille Ball.

"She was one of the great comediennes of the screen, and I think a lot of the ladies that came after her learned a lot from her."

Minidoka County prohibits Exit 208 parking

By Aaron Brock
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — Developing the Exit 208 land is a goal for Minidoka County commissioners, who are taking steps to clean up the area.

"We thought we'd maybe make it a little more presentable," said commission Chairman Don Handy.

Eliminating parking on the property is a major part of the effort, commissioners have said. Several trucks have dumped oil on the property, and other drivers have deposited trash and other waste.

"There's no regulations on the accidental dumpings," said Michelle McFarland, Mini-Cassia economic development coordinator.

McFarland confirmed several businesses are looking at the property and said she had worked closely with one considering a move to the area.

The business, which she would not identify, has narrowed its choices to Mini-Cassia and two other Idaho locations, she said. If it comes to this area, she said, she hopes it will consider the Exit 208 land.

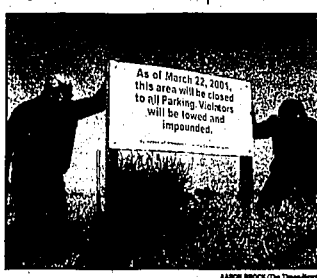

Commissioners take steps to clean up the area

"We're the prime spot for them," she said. "It's ideal for them."

The property is directly across from the Hub Plaza, and trucks and trailers have been left on the Exit 208 land for several months, commissioners said.

"There's enough parking over at the truck stop," McFarland said. "They can use that."

Times-News writer Aaron Brock can be reached at the Mini-Cassia Bureau at 677-4042, Ext. 110, or by e-mail at abrock@magicvalley.com

Minidoka County Commission Chairman Don Handy, left, and Joe Palomarez, an employee with Handy Truck Line Inc., put up a sign prohibiting parking in the Exit 208 area, across from the Hub Plaza.

Bush administration moves to postpone Clinton's roadless plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration asked a federal court Friday to postpone a hearing on former President Clinton's ban on road-building and logging in a third of the nation's federal forestland.

Environmentalists immediately voiced concern that President Bush was signaling his intention to reverse the regulations Clinton put into place in the final days of his presidency.

"This was their first opportunity to come in and defend the policy and instead they've come in with an offer to suspend it," said Tim Preso, a staff attorney for the Earthjustice Legal Defense Fund.

The Clinton ban, widely applauded by environmentalists and denounced by the timber industry, would set 58 million of forest acres where no roads currently exist.

The ban originally was scheduled to go into effect on March 13, but last month Bush postponed it until May 12 so that he could review it.

Shortly after Clinton announced the ban, the state of Idaho sought a preliminary injunction to keep it from going into effect, saying the government had not conducted adequate research nor offered sufficient comment in deciding the forestlands should be protected.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge in Boise set a hearing for March 30.

On Friday, lawyers for the Agriculture Department, which oversees the Forest Service, asked the court to delay the hearing until early May.

The lawyers offered to invoke a little-used administrative rule to suspend the ban, saying the department "has committed to postponing the effective date of the rule until this court has decided the motion for a preliminary injunction."

The roadless rule was published on Jan. 12, eight days before Clinton left office. It was two years in the making, after the government solicited 7.6 million public comments and held 600 public hearings.

"Now the Bush administration is going to negotiate changes to it with the timber industry and a governor or two at the table," said Philip Clapp, president of the National Environmental Trust.

Bush cannot block or alter the forest restrictions without going through a new rule-making process since they were published before he took office.

"The request Friday would at least give the Bush administration more time to review the ban before it goes into effect."

"Until the administration is finished with its review of the rule, less policy, will not comment on the merits," Justice Department spokeswoman Christine Romano said.

Hispanic numbers in Oregon double

SALEM, Ore. (AP) - Oregon's population jumped by 20 percent over the last decade, helped by a surge in Hispanics, Asians and blacks that created a state that is more diverse than it was a decade ago, according to census figures released Wednesday.

"When I first got here (in 1985) I felt like I was alone, I felt like the only Puerto Rican in Oregon," said Carrie Medina de Espina. But in the past decade, the 35-year-old Portland resident has become part of a Hispanic population that more than doubled in Oregon.

In 1990, the state had nearly 105,000 people who classified themselves as white Hispanics while in 2000 there were more than 275,000 people who were classified as Hispanics of any race.

People of Spanish-speaking ancestry are considered an ethnic group, not a racial group, so Hispanics can be white, black, Indian or multiracial.

The federal figures, unadjusted for sampling error, made comparing some categories difficult because some racial groupings differed in 1990 and 2000. The latest census also added multiracial categories for the first time.

Hispanic populations have expanded "from Hood River down south through Deschutes County," said George Hough, a demographer at Portland State University and coordinator of the Oregon State Data Center.

He said Hispanics have expanded their geographical base and no longer are coming just for agricultural jobs.

"They've branched out to represent themselves in all industries," and are starting up their own businesses, he said. In a number of communities, you'll see "a variety of businesses displaying a shingle in Spanish," he said.

Latins have also started up their own newspapers and radio stations.

The Asian population did not grow as fast as the number of Hispanics but it surged at more than twice the rate of general population growth, according to figures obtained by The Associated Press.

The growth in the number of blacks did not quite keep pace with the overall increase, and the number of American Indians grew half as fast as the general population.

The federal census figures show the state population at 3.84 million people compared to 3.42 million in 1990.

The number of blacks increased to nearly 56,000 statewide in 2000. That amounted to just over a 17 percent increase, slightly off the 20 percent pace of the overall population growth.

She was twice divorced, from actor-musician Roger Pryor and actor Robert Sterling. Her daughter Tisha Sterling, granddaughter Heidi Bates Hogan and grandson-in-law Greg Hogan, all of Ketchum, were with her when she died. Sothern also is survived by her sister, Sally Adams, of Boise.

Workshop helps farmers keep records on pesticide applications

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

RUPERT - It's not only improper pesticide use that can get farmers in trouble with agricultural regulators. Failure to keep proper application records can, as well.

Both private and professional applicators are invited to a Thursday workshop that may prevent them from being unnecessarily fined.

Officials will give lessons on record keeping. "This is an important topic ... I want to see our farmers and professional applicators get the information they need to be compliant with the law," said Matt Schuster, the Minidoka County Extension Office's agricultural extension agent.

Private applicators may have to keep two types of records required by U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Worker Protection Standard, depending on the type of pesticide used and who applies it. And the Idaho Department of Agriculture requires that commercial applicators keep records for all pesticides applied.

The workshop is a joint effort between the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension System and the state Agriculture Department.

Lincoln County extension educator Ron Thameret will explain the types of records the state and federal agencies require both private and professional applicators to keep.

Dean Smith, a state Agriculture Department senior water quality analyst, will discuss pesticide safety and labels and how to comply with the Worker Protection Standard.

Schuster will offer a hands-on workshop for sprayer calibration. These pesticide application credits will also be offered.

Commercial applicators who don't keep proper records face an initial warning and then fines upon subsequent violations, said George Robinson, manager of the state's pesticide registration program.

Fines can reach several thousand dollars unless applicators opt to have their licenses suspended instead, Robinson said.

Vic Mason, a program manager with the state Agriculture Department, said that under federal rules private applicators receive a warning letter after the first offense and face fines if an inspection the following year shows a violation.

Mason said he has not had to fine a private applicator in the state.

Kimberly Board mulls gym's future

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - To keep or raze was the question presented to the Kimberly School Board Thursday, as it discussed the future of the old gymnasium.

Superintendent John Garner said the issue didn't need immediate attention, but would have to be decided within a year. He said it would be nice to have the gym available for elementary students and community use, if it was affordable.

The gym would need a restroom with handicapped access, because its current restrooms are downstairs, maintenance supervisor Dale Vawser said.

Meanwhile, windows would need work within five years.

In other business:

• Two School Board spots are on the ballot this year; candidates must file by April 13 in order to run.

The seats are now held by Bev Shewmaker, Zone Four, and Jill Berry, Zone Five.

• The board voted to complete two classrooms in the new high school, which were roughed in for completion at a later date. The work will cost $19,800.

• The board awarded a $60,000 contract to pave the new parking lot.

• The board will pay Idaho State University students $1,400 to realign School Board zones, to reflect new Census Bureau numbers.

• Physical science teacher Gene Eagler will retire at the end of this school year, after 31 years of service.

House approves registry requirements

BOISE - The Idaho House on Friday gave final legislative approval to two bills aimed at toughening sex offender registration requirements and making the registry itself more accessible to the public.

A 46-20 vote sent Gov. Dirk Kempthorne a measure authorizing placement of the central registry of sex offenders on the Internet.

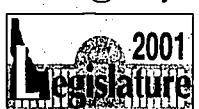

Rep. George Eskridge questioned the possible impact of additional public access to the list on offenders who have reformed and are trying to get their lives back on track.

House Judiciary Chairman Colin Gould, however, said the bill was an attempt to address the problem of newspapers sometimes having only outdated registry information, unintentionally identifying someone already removed from the list.

"You will get instant, reliable information," the Buhl Republican said.

A 63-0 vote sent Kempthorne a bill exempting people convicted of an "aggravated offense" from the opportunity to be removed from the registry 10 years after released from prison, probation or parole.

Repeat offenders and violent sexual predators already are barred from ever petitioning a district court for an exemption from the registration requirement. The change would add people convicted of such crimes as lewd conduct of a victim under 12, murder committed in the perpetration of rape, male rape and forcible sexual penetration by use of a foreign object.

Committee kills measure on sex education content

BOISE - The Senate Education Committee essentially killed House-passed legislation on Friday mandating local control sex education content but stating unequivocally that "abstinence is the only safe method to combat unwanted pregnancy, HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases."

The committee split 3-3 on attempts to open the bill up for amendment and to kill it outright. Chairman Gary Schroeder of Moscow said the issue was dead for this year.

Attempts to modify the measure by declaring abstinence the safest, rather than the only, way to fight disease or prevent pregnancy failed in the House.

Utility bond legislation wins Senate committee approval

BOISE - Legislation authorizing utility bonds to cover the cost of power in emergency situations won overwhelming approval today from the Senate State Affairs Committee.

The panel sent the bill to the full Senate for action. It also still needs House approval.

Backed by the Public Utilities Commission, the bonding scheme is intended to prevent the kind of power crisis that occurred in California earlier this year.

Utilities would float bonds to avoid having to dramatically increase consumer rates in crisis periods.

Rates would go up but by smaller amounts because the price of the emergency power would be paid off over five years.

While bonds will probably not be needed this year, utility officials say the authority to issue them will make it viable for companies to invest in new generation.

Pipeline safety program bill reaches governor's office

BOISE - House-passed legislation creating a pipeline safety program won final approval on Friday and was sent to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne.

"It's important to get this program going for the safety of our state," Sen. Mel Richardson of Idaho said before the unanimous vote.

It makes Idaho the 48th state with a safety operation.

Currently federal agents handle pipeline inspections in Idaho, but officials say their work is inadequate.

The new bill creates the Office of Pipeline Safety within the Public Utilities Commission. Legislative budget writers have already earmarked more than $140,000 to support the inspector.

Idaho consumer watchdog dies at 78

BOISE (AP) - Al Fothergill, a longtime Idaho consumer watchdog and founder of the Idaho Citizens Coalition, died on Thursday. He was 78.

Fothergill created the citizens coalition in 1974 and successfully intervened on behalf of consumers many times before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Fothergill, who lived in Boise, continued as the group's executive director until his death.

In the 1970s he was a leader in a successful effort to stop an Idaho Power Co.'s coal-fired power plant proposed for 20 miles southeast of Boise, arguing that the plant would increase regional air pollution and electricity rates.

In later years, Fothergill and the coalition also intervened before the Public Utilities Commission to oppose Boise Water Co. water rate increases, and worked against telephone and electric deregulation in Idaho.

Fothergill devoted himself to learning the intricacies of utilities regulation and also helped other citizens learn utility issues.

Men settle suit against city for $12,000 each

LEWISTON (AP) - Two men who say their civil rights were violated when they were taken into police custody during an annual celebration each received $12,000 in a settlement with the city.

Demauriee Nolan and William Chance Dickey each asked for $50,000 in a lawsuit filed last year. But in the settlement, they agreed to release the city and the Lewiston Police Department from all liability in exchange for about one-quarter of their original demand.

In the lawsuit, Nolan and Dickey alleged they were victims of a racially motivated attack by Dustin R. Rudolph and others during the night of the annual classic car cruise.

When police arrived on the scene, Dickey and Nolan were handcuffed and taken into custody.

Police Chief Jack Baldwin has said Dickey and Nolan were taken from the scene because officers believed that was the easiest way to deal with the incident.

"It was down there, and regardless of color we would have done the same thing," he said.

Two felony charges of malicious harassment were filed against Rudolph and then dismissed. Second District Judge Ron Schilling ruled Rudolph violated probation by being involved in the fight, so he imposed his original sentence of one to three years on a grand theft charge.

LETTER

Harry Potter's unfit for kids

This letter to the editor is to any parent who is even considering letting their child read Harry Potter books. I was disappointed to see that this woman, J.K. Rowling, writes children's favorite books and, according to the March 3 newspaper, a favorite of children, too. A friend of mine said that her child's teacher was reading from these books to fifth graders.

If upset this child so much that she asked if she could leave the room, I am quoting from the Reader's Digest, December 2000, on an article written about the author and her books and why children have been attracted to these books.

"Harry discovers that on his 11th birthday that he is a wizard. He has inherited magical powers from his parents who were slaughtered (actual word used) by the evil wizard, Lord Voldemort. Harry also bears a lightning scar on his forehead (also Voldemort's handy work). This is a series of white-knuckled adventures at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry."

To me, this alone is enough that my grandson will not be reading these books. I am glad that they were not written when my children were in school. I realize that children love to fantasize and, to many kids, maybe they can tell the difference between right and wrong. But some kids can't.

Some parents don't realize how subtle things like this can influence a child, especially younger children. These books can encourage kids to try their hand at witchcraft and the powers that it has, and it is a power but power of a demonic influence.

I am writing this letter to encourage parents of kids of all ages to monitor what their children read or the games they play. Reading books of this nature can encourage children to want to play games like Dungeons and Dragons, which is a very harmful and destructive game.

Vaccinations are best tool for protecting children's health

Vaccinations are the single most effective tool Hispanic parents can use to ensure the health of their children, and protect their communities from outbreaks of life-threatening diseases.

All of the medical facts clearly show that immunization is necessary to ensure that our children remain healthy and disease-free. The weakest link in the chain of protection is the unvaccinated child.

Sadly, Hispanic children are especially at risk of contracting preventable diseases, since immunization rates within the Hispanic community are among the lowest for any demographic group in the country.

The good news is that we—as parents and health-care practitioners within the Hispanic community—can work together to swiftly raise these rates.

The immunization rates for Hispanics are alarming. Only 75.3 percent receive the recommended childhood vaccinations compared with 82.2 percent for Caucasians and 79.2 percent for the non-Hispanic white population. The rate is only slightly higher than the rate for African-Americans, which is the lowest at 72.9 percent.

In addition, Hispanics have the lowest health insurance rate in comparison to other ethnic groups. As we work to increase health care coverage among Hispanics, one of the best and least expensive ways to protect our children's health now is to immunize them. Vaccination may be the difference between life and death if adequate health care is not available.

Diseases such as polio, smallpox, diphtheria, and tetanus used to plague millions of children, and cause crippling injuries and untimely deaths.

Thanks to the development of vaccines, these debilitating diseases are now very rare. In fact, smallpox has been completely eradicated, which is a true success story. Unfortunately, polio, diphtheria and tetanus still exist, both in this country and abroad.

People unprotected by vaccines are susceptible to the bacteria and viruses that cause these diseases. No one should have to suffer from a vaccine-preventable disease—especially a child. Of course, every parent should make informed decisions regarding their child's health.

Local health centers and physicians are more than willing to discuss the importance of immunizations. Parents should seek out health care professionals to help guide them and answer their concerns about vaccines.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration extensively test vaccines to ensure effectiveness and safety prior to their approval. Severe reactions are very rare, while the risk of contracting an illness if not immunized is far too great to ignore.

"Scare-stories" about the negative effects of vaccines are not backed by scientific evidence and only endanger our children more. Although it has been argued that vaccines are linked to autism, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the FDA both confirm that the vast body of scientific evidence shows no link between autism and vaccines.

Electing not to vaccinate your child can have long-term consequences that go beyond just your child's illness: unvaccinated children can collectively rejuvenate long-dormant diseases and trigger lethal epidemics. Make no mistake.

The consequences of ignoring safe and effective immunizations are real and can be lethal. Fortunately, several organizations are working hard to help raise the rate of immunizations for Hispanics.

There is no reason to delay vaccinations. If cost is a concern, there are a host of resources to help. For example, the Vaccines for Children Program provides free vaccines to eligible children. Approximately two-thirds—more than 65 percent—of the vaccinations delivered in the United States today are available free of charge.

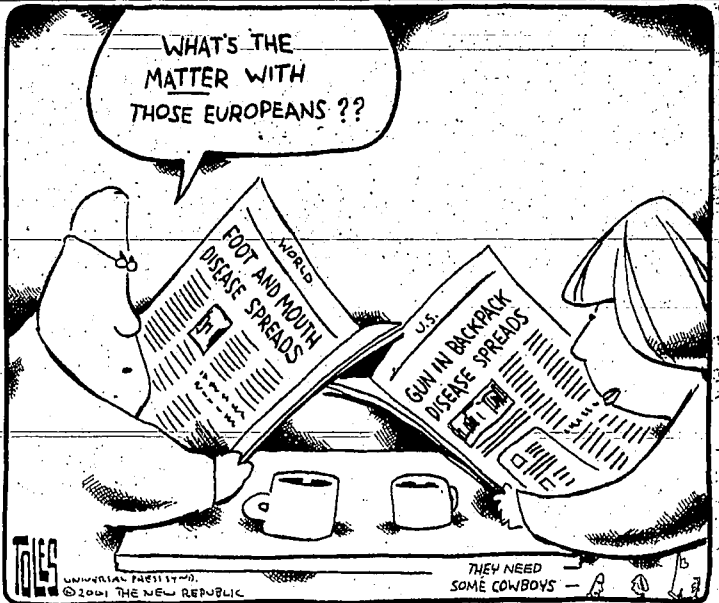

Hispanic children are projected to be the largest minority population under age 18 by the year 2005, which makes our children a vital part of the future of our community. As a badge of community pride, we should strive to make sure that Hispanic children have the highest vaccination rate by this decade's halfway mark.

It is a wonderful way of showcasing to the world the strong family values that the Hispanic population of more than 33 million people.

Community groups can play a major role in this effort, but parents must assume prime responsibility for their children's well-being. Remember that there is no better way for you to protect your children from disease than by immunizing them.

The need is great, the time is now.

Women's health: Is there room for men?

DAVID A. SHAYWITZ

It's 2 p.m. I am spending the afternoon in mammography clinic, as part of an effort by my medical training program to ensure that all residents develop a familiarity with breast cancer and the breast exam. Michelle, the nurse who runs the clinic, tells me that the first patient has arrived. "Let me just check with her and make sure she's OK for you to come in too," Michelle says before entering the room.

I wait. A discussion follows; I can hear only bits and pieces of the conversation. Mostly, I hear Michelle's responses. "Yes, that's right... male physician... wants to learn... no, no need to explain... understand... that's completely OK."

Michelle emerges. Apologetically, she tells me that the patient prefers to be seen by her alone. I assure her that this is not a problem, and ask her to pass this along to the patient.

But is this really not a problem? For male medical students and young physicians, adequate training in women's health seems increasingly hard to come by; in large measure because many female patients prefer to be seen by women and only by women.

In medical school, for example, male medical students traditionally have a much more difficult time receiving permission to observe pelvic and breast exams so they can learn how to do them proficiently.

Even now, as an intern, I see relatively few female patients in my weekly clinic, since many women specifically request to see female doctors. Consequently, I have probably done fewer pap smears in seven months than some of my female colleagues do in a typical afternoon.

Not surprisingly, as a result of these sorts of experiences, fewer male medical students than ever are choosing to go into obstetrics and gynecology—mostly because of concerns that they will have trouble building a practice when they graduate. And almost no men are choosing to go into women's health, which is generally considered to be a specialty offering care for women and by women.

Perhaps this is only fair. After all, for generations, women were excluded from medicine entirely, and even today, there are many areas that still seem to be male bastions. As an example, there's a corridor in my hospital that features pictures of each of the chief residents in cardiovascular surgery for the past 30 years, including such luminaries as Tennessee Sen. Bill Frist. Remarkably, there is not a single picture of a woman, prompting many to dub this display, "the wall of shame."

Yet this may also highlight a major difference between the experience of women in some areas of surgery, and of men in OB-GYN and women's health: the absence of female cardiologic surgeons is typically perceived as worrisome, while the absence of men in women's health is generally looked upon as an affirmation of the accomplishments of women, a sign of emancipation, progress and power.

The difficulty, though, is that if we are to take the goals of diversity seriously, we would believe that it is important to have a plurality of perspectives, important to give as many different people as possible the opportunity to think about important problems.

The fact that men are turning away from OB-GYN and women's health means that about half the doctors who might otherwise spend their careers thinking about ovarian or breast cancer, or about difficulties with labor, or about uterine bleeding, are instead encouraged to turn their attention elsewhere.

The strength of women's health as a medical discipline will likely rely on its ability to recruit the best clinicians and investigators available. If female patients consistently decline to see male physicians, and exclude male medical students, the discipline is more likely to become marginalized, its worthy goals less likely to be realized. And this would be a loss for us all.

Bush flip-flops on power-plant emissions

From the Philadelphia Inquirer

Once again, President Bush has taken the short view on energy policy. This week, he reneged on a campaign promise to reduce power plants' carbon-dioxide emissions, which scientists say contribute to global warming. While the fossil-fuel industry is delighted, this turnaround endangers the environment and vexes the international community.

It also humiliates Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christie Whitman, who, with Mr. Bush's blessing, spent the last month trumpeting his support of emissions cuts. Explaining his about-face, the president said Wednesday that emissions cuts would be too expensive during the nation's current "energy crisis." He claimed, "We need more sources of energy. We need more power plants."

No mention of conservation or alternative fuels. His plan is to feed America's insatiable appetite for energy, whatever the cost to the environment or health.

Far different were his words Sept. 29, when candidate Bush promised to establish mandatory reductions for emissions of four major pollutants, including carbon dioxide. He even bragged about going further on the issue than environmental darling Al Gore. The White House now calls the campaign promise "an error."

OTHER VIEWS

Mr. Bush says tighter standards might cause a dramatic shift away from coal-fired electric plants. But that's exactly what's needed.

Power plants produce one-third of the world's carbon dioxide; a greenhouse gas many link to climate change. Internationally, hundreds of scientists have warned that higher temperatures could have devastating consequences: rising sea levels, coastal flooding, drought, spread of infectious disease. Mr. Bush is correct that many questions remain about the risks posed by pollution from carbon-dioxide emissions.

But the questions aren't about whether there is a threat; they're about when, where and how bad. He is wrong to ignore the problem until all the answers are conclusive. That's like denying treatment until the patient is dead.

Mrs. Whitman, who touted emissions reductions at a recent meeting of environmental ministers in Italy, looks foolish—a rude reminder to the former governor that she's no longer a chief executive but a mere staffer. It's the kind of disrespect that could drive this needed moderate from Washington.

European leaders, far ahead on efforts to curb global warming, lament the White House's retreat. Some progressive multinational businesses are disappointed, too.

They counted on the United States championing reasonable market-based incentives over the stringent mandates sought in Europe.

Mr. Bush claims he wants a "balanced national energy policy that takes into account the importance of improving air quality."

Yet he's packed his administration with oil men and now has bowed willingly to the utility lobby.

Better find a new scale, Mr. Bush, because as you demonstrated against this week, there's not much balance so far.

Panel endorses changes to abortion consent law

BOISE (AP) — A divided Senate leadership committee on Friday endorsed House-passed legislation intended to solve problems that prompted a federal magistrate to partially block enforcement of the state's 2000 law requiring parental or judicial consent before minors can obtain abortions.

The State Affairs Committee split 5-4 for the bill that the American Civil Liberties Union did nothing to correct the issues it raised in the lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the measure.

"Enacting this bill will not stop the litigation," ACLU spokeswoman Marty Durand told the committee. "It leaves most of the unconstitutional provisions unchanged."

The bill responds to last summer's ruling by U.S. District Judge Magistrate Mikel Williams that several provisions of the so-called parental consent bill were overly restrictive.

A trial is scheduled for July on those provisions and on the broader constitutional challenge from Planned Parenthood of Idaho.

Williams blocked enforcement of sections requiring all women seeking abortions to provide documentary proof of their age and allowing the criminal prosecution of physicians who perform abortions without parental or judicial consent.

He also cited the potentially undue burden imposed by the so-called judicial bypass in the absence of parental permission because it limits the application to a girl's home judicial district.

Sen. Judi Danielson of Council grided Deputy Attorney General Clinton Minor about the provisions of the bill against the back-draft of the guarantees lawmakers received last year that the original bill would withstand judicial scrutiny.

Minor refused to provide the same kind of guarantee for the corrective bill, admitting that "I would not gamble on what would happen in a federal court."

Danielson pointed out that she and other critics of anti-abortion legislation that the original bill had legal problems only to see that the state has invested nearly 800 hours of attorney and other staff time in fighting the legal challenge.

That is nearly quadruple the time the state spent since July 1 on the lawsuit involving school building safety, one of the highest priority issues for the state right now.

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley mono-skier Duffy Davis has claimed the overall World Cup disabled title in women's mono-skiing for the 2000-2001 season.

Davis grew up living against Sun Valley's Picabo Street until she broke her back in a training accident at age 16. She learned to ski in a mono-ski, which resembles a bucket seat affixed to a ski, with the help of Sun Valley's adaptive ski teacher Marc Mast.

Davis won the crystal globe at the conclusion of the World Cup finals at Kimberley, British Columbia.

TWIN FALLS — Simpler is always better. Just ask the College of Southern Idaho baseball team.

After an 0-4 start to the scenic West Athletic Conference season, the Eagles spent the week re-dedicating themselves to the fundamentals, making practice fun and working hard.

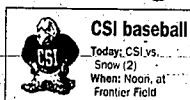

The results were 14 innings of two-hit ball and a doubleheader sweep of Snow College Friday at the second game 7-0. The victories moved CSI (12-12) back to .500 for the season and more importantly breathed life into a team that had been struggling to keep their heads up. "It's real nice to get a couple of wins," said CSI coach Jim Walker. "But we have to get back on the horse tomorrow. We need to build on this and create a good situation for our guys to build some confidence."

Sophomore Craig Kilshaw threw a seven inning one-hitter to pick up his second win of the season in the Eagles, first victory.

The Badgers, lone hit came on a bloop single down the third base line in the fourth inning. Kilshaw finished with eight strikeouts and four walks.

In Game 2, freshman Brad Burrow picked up where Kilshaw left off, hurling another one-hitter. Burrow's submarine sidearm delivery baffled Snow's lineup through four innings before a single up the middle by Mike Cox ended his no-hit bid.

Burrow tallied seven strikeouts in seven innings and walked five to earn his first win of the season. The Please see CSI, Page B2

Area track and field teams start-up season

The Times-News

That time of the year has arrived for sprinters, jumpers and throwers to stretch out the legs and work out the kinks of a long dormant winter. Track season has arrived and now the best of the valley can show what they have to offer en route to district pride and state titles.

At the Class A-1 ranks the Jerome Tigers are perhaps the valley's teams to beat. Both boys' and girls' teams appear strong and ready. The Lady Tigers, led by University of Idaho-signee Duane Schvaneveldt, are the defending region champions and should be the team to beat. And the boys are just as dangerous, with both squads expecting serious challenges from local rival Burley and eastern foe Century. Blackfoot and Bogerville, Division II.

Twin Falls are looking to regain Region III title after a strong finish to last season. The Bruins plan to do it with good depth, and some great athletes, such as returning state finishers Orin Clements and Amber Waymont. But don't count out Minico, who'll come in the back door with an improved team to challenge both the Bruins, Pocatello and Highland.

The stiff competition comes from the Class A-2 ranks where every team has a chance to take the title in either boys or girls. The big news is Declo — the defending Class A-3 boys' state champions and girls' state runners-up — join the fray this year. The Hornets field yet another great

Her 59 was two shots better than the record of 61 she shared with Karrie Webb and Se Ri Pak. Her 20-under 124 total at the midpoint was three strokes better than the 127-and-a-half Webb shot last

Bruin girls, Jerome boys win at Twin

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—In the first major track meet for area A-1 teams, the Twin Falls girls and Jerome boys showed who has the early season advantage with wins at Bruin Stadium on Friday.

In compiling a high score of 134 points, Jerome swept the 400, 800, 1,600 and 3,200-meter events while grabbing long and triple jump wins by sophomore Cory Musgrave.

"That was a nice win," said Jerome coach Tim Dunne. "We're pretty happy with our field."

Chilly conditions kept times and results relatively low, but Bruin coach Larry Lewis was impressed with the way his team performed.

"It was pretty good considering the weather," he said. "We're still trying to do a lot of combos and work out skills, but this is a pretty big meet at this time of the year."

Erin Clements led the Bruins with wins in both hurdles events while the girls' team won eight of

Canucks lose Naslund, game at Buffalo

Sosa shoots up salary list

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Steve Heinze, in only his second appearance for the Sabres, had the game-winning goal among his three goals as Buffalo beat the Vancouver Canucks a costly 4-2 loss Friday night.

Vancouver left captain and leading scorer Markus Naslund, who broke his right leg with 11:09 remaining. He will be out for the rest of the season.

Doug Gilmour had a goal and assist for the Sabres, who have won 10 of their last 14 and are 6-2 in their last eight home games.

Goalender Dominik Hasek stopped 20 shots to reach his 30th win plateau for the fourth time in his career, and first time since the 1997-98 season.

Matt Cooke, with a goal and assist, and Henrik Sedin scored for the Canucks, who are winless in six games (0-3-3).

OTTAWA—Magnus Arvedson assisted on Marian Hossa's 30th goal and ended a 10-game scoreless drought as Ottawa moved two points ahead of the New Jersey at the Eastern Conference standings.

Alexei Yashin scored his 33rd goal and Mike Sillinger added an empty-net goal for Ottawa.

Blue Jackets 3, Thrashers 0

recorded his second straight shutout and Tyler Wright had his first career hat trick as Columbus won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Tugnutt, coming off a 3-0 shutout of Calgary on Wednesday, made 34 saves, including 10 in the third period. The shutout was the fourth of the season for Tugnutt, who has 19 shutouts in his 13-year career.

Penguins 6, Panthers 3

SUNRISE, Fla.—Mario Lemieux had two goals and an assist, and John Hedberg stopped 41 shots in his first career start for Pittsburgh.

Florida's Pavel Bure also had a pair of goals, increasing his league-leading total to 51. Dan Boyle also scored for the Panthers, who have given up 44 goals in their last 41 games.

Darius Kasparaitis, Josef Beranek, Alexei Kovalev and Jaromir Jagr also scored for Pittsburgh.

DALLAS—Mike Modano's goal midway through the second period off lifted the Dallas Stars into a 1-1 tie with the Phoenix Coyotes on Friday night.

Dallas had a two minute power play in the overtime and outshot Phoenix in the extra period. Coyotes goalie Sean Burke made six saves in overtime and preserved the tie.

Summy Sosa's salary is back in line with his home-run production.

Sosa, who could have become a free agent after the season, agreed Friday to an extension through 2005 that is worth up to $72 million for four years.

"I'm very happy. I always said I wanted to finish my career here and Chicago has been great to me," Sosa said, surrounded by his family at a news conference at the Cubs' spring training camp in Mesa, Ariz.

If Sosa puts up big numbers, he would get $32.75 million over two years and have the chance to negotiate a new contract again. With an average salary of $18 million a year, Sosa will have the fourth-highest average salary in baseball, trailing only Alex Rodriguez ($25.2 million), Manny Ramirez ($20 million) and Derek Jeter ($18.9 million).

In games it was New York Yankees 9, Atlanta 9; in 10 innings; Texas 3, Toronto 2; Detroit 5, Cincinnati 4; Boston 2, Pittsburgh 6; Los Angeles 1, Montreal 2; Baltimore 5, New York Mets 4; Philadelphia 9, Minnesota 6; Tampa Bay 4, Cleveland 4; St. Louis 10, Kansas City 5; Oakland 7, Anaheim 2; Arizona 18, Chicago White Sox 4; and San Francisco 12, Seattle 2.

ROAD TO THE FINAL FOUR

Temple handles Longhorns; Spartans finish strong

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — John Chaney is tough to please.

Temple upset Texas 79-65 in the first round of the NCAA South Regional on Friday, playing short-handed and holding the Longhorns to 39 percent shooting.

The Temple coach, however, wants more.

"To me, this isn't as good of a defensive team as we've had in the past," Chaney said. "At one point, we began to play an attack-like type of defense, but we couldn't stay with it very long because they started to penetrate against us. But when we shot the ball well, like we did today, it cures a lot of ills."

Quincy Wadley got hot early and the Temple's defense played well enough to send the Owls into the second round for the second straight year.

Wadley scored 23 points — 20 in the first half, when he made 4-for-5 from 3-point range — to carry the 11th-seeded Owls.

Penn St. 69, Providence 59

NEW ORLEANS — The Crispin brothers sure know how to play nice together.

Joe Crispin scored 13 points, brother John Crispin added 11, to lead seventh-seeded Penn State to a 69-59 victory over Providence on Friday night in the NCAA South Regional.

The Crispin brothers also had nine rebounds and five assists and were 6-for-7 from the free-throw line.

Gyasi Cline-Heard had 16 points and 10 rebounds, and Titus Ivory added 13 points.

Erron Maxey led Providence with 16 points, and Karim Shabazz had 13 points and nine rebounds.

Florida 69,

Western Kentucky 56

NEW ORLEANS — Once Udonis Haslem and Brett Nelson

South Region

found their favorite spots, Florida was OK.

The Gators, who reached the NCAA championship game last season, settled down after a shaky start against Western Kentucky to win 69-56 Friday in the first round of the South Regional.

With Nelson bombing away from outside and Haslem taking over inside, third-seeded Florida rallied with a 14-0 run early in the second half and pulled away.

Haslem finished with 24 points and 11 rebounds and Nelson scored 19. The Gators (24-6) advanced to play Temple on Sunday.

North Carolina 70,

Princeton 48

NEW ORLEANS — Brendan Haywood, Joseph Forte and North Carolina made themselves right at home in the Superdome.

The Tar Heels, returning to the site of their last two NCAA championship victories, quickly ended any thought of another Princeton upset with a 70-48 win Friday night in the first round of the South Regional.

Haywood finished with 15 points, Forte, an All-American, had 13 points, 12 rebounds and a fifth behind-the-back drive for a layup.

Ed Persia led Princeton (16-11) with 16 points.

Gonzaga 86, Virginia 85

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — An upset or two by Gonzaga is becoming routine at the NCAs.

Cassey Calvary put back a blocked shot with 9.2 seconds left as Gonzaga beat fifth-seeded Virginia 86-85 in the South Regional in Memphis, Tenn.

With Virginia ahead 85-84 and 21.4 seconds left, Cavaliers freshman J.C. Mathis was fouled but missed the front end of a one-and-one, giving Gonzaga another chance.

After falling just a game short of the Final Four as a No. 10 seed in 1999, and reaching the regional semifinals from the same slot last year, Gonzaga (25-6) is hardly an unknown.

"We weren't crazy about playing them," Virginia coach Pete Gillen said. "They are much better than a 12 seed. It's not the committee's fault. They hadn't seen Gonzaga. These guys are tremendous."

The Zags knocked out second-seeded teams in the second round each of the past two years. Now they'll face No. 13 Indiana State, which edged Big 12 tournament champion Oklahoma 70-68 in overtime.

Fresno St. 82, California 70

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Demetrius Porter scored a career-high 27 points and helped stem three second-half comebacks by California as ninth-seeded Fresno State beat the Bears 82-70 on Friday night in the first round of the South Regional.

The victory gave coach Jerry Tarkanian a 17-1 record in the first round of the NCAA tournament and set up a second-round matchup with top-seeded Michigan State on Sunday.

It was Tarkanian's first NCAA win at Fresno State (26-6) and the second in school history. He won four first-round games at Long Beach State and 12 at UNLV, including the championship season of 1990.

Shantay Legans had 15 points to lead the Bears, while Fac-10 player of the year Sean Lampley had 13, six below his average.

Indiana St. 70,

Oklahoma 68, OT

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Kelyn Black's reward for leading Indiana State to another of this year's first-round upsets in the NCAA tournament was an emergency trip to the dentist.

The junior had three teeth either knocked out or chipped late in regulation, then found a way to help the 13th-seeded Sycamores beat No. 4 Oklahoma 70-68 in overtime Friday in the South Regional.

Black scored five of his 17 points in overtime after he dramatically returned from the locker room just before the tipoff of the extra period.

Indiana State (22-11) became the latest double-digit seed to advance in this year with their first tournament victory since Larry Bird led the team to the 1979 championship game.

Michigan St. 69,

Alabama 65

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Michigan State's Jason Richardson and Andre Hutsun made sure 16th-seeded Alabama State didn't make NCAA tournament history with a victory.

After a poor first half, Richardson and Hutsun got the defending national champions rolling in a 69-65 victory Friday night in the first round of the South Regional.

The Hornets made their own history by matching Wake Forest's record-setting first-half production on Friday against Butler.

Alabama State scored just 10 points in the second half, and Wake Forest fell behind 43-10 at halftime in the Midwest Regional. It is the lowest-scoring half in any NCAA tournament game since the introduction of the shot clock in 1985-86.

Charlotte trumps Tennessee; Butler wallops Wake

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Jobey Thomas scored Charlotte's last six points, including four free throws in the final 25 seconds, as the 49ers beat Tennessee 70-63 Friday in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

Ninth-seeded Charlotte (22-10) will make its fourth trip to the second round in the past five years when it plays top-seeded Illinois, a 96-54 victor over Northwestern State in an earlier game.

The game might have been the last at Tennessee (22-11) for coach Jerry Green, whose job reportedly is in jeopardy despite 20-win seasons and trips to the NCAA tournament in each of his four seasons.

Syracuse 79, Hawaii 69

DAYTON, Ohio — Career win No. 600 couldn't have come at a better time for Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim.

Damone Brown had 20 points and 10 rebounds and Preston Shumprut added 18 points as Boeheim reached another coaching milestone with a 79-69 victory over Hawaii on Friday night in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

Kansas 99,

Cal State Northridge 75

DAYTON, Ohio — Pesky Cal

Midwest Regional

State-Northridge came up short by inches and points — in an attempt to win its NCAA tournament debut against Kansas.

The Jayhawks' towering front line dug in and dominated Friday night, mauling their way to a 99-75 victory that marked Kansas' 18th straight first-round win in the NCAA tournament.

Illinois 96,

Northwestern State 54

DAYTON, Ohio — A bank shot, a dunk, a pair of 3's, a 10-point lead in the blink of an eye. All Illinois (25-7) needed was 100 seconds to demonstrate the difference between a play-in team and a premier team.

The Midwest Region's top-seeded team swatted away the NCAA tournament's lowest Friday, using size and savvy to beat Northwestern State 96-54 in a first-round game.

Marcus Griffin scored 16 points, leading six players in double figures for Illinois.

Arizona 101, E. Illinois 76

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Loren Woods was a self-described "nervous wreck." The long-armed Arizona center didn't want the points to lead Arizona and Michael Wright also added 17 for the Wildcats (24-7), who had five players in double figures. Eastern Illinois (21-10), making its second-ever NCAA appearance, rushed out to an early five-point lead before the Wildcats got going.

Butler 79, Wake Forest 63

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The NCAA tournament, a dream come true for most teams, was far from it for Wake Forest.

The seventh-seeded Demon Deacons (19-11) had the lowest scoring half in any NCAA tournament game since the introduction of the shot clock in 1985-86, hitting only 3-of-25 while falling behind Butler 43-10 in the Midwest Regional Friday.

Mississippi 72, Iona 70

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — In everything but their seeding, Mississippi and Iona were oh, so close.

With 1.8 seconds to go, Rahim Lockhart stripped Iona's Courtney Fields of the ball in the lane and Jason Holmes then hit a free throw, lifting third-seeded Ole Miss to a 72-70 victory over the No. 14 Gaels on Friday night in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

In the late game, Notre Dame held a 59-47 lead at press time.

"We can't change anything from what got us here," said Mandi Carver, Idaho State's leading scorer at 14.4 points a game. "Anderson will obviously be a big part of their offense. We'll just do the best job we can."

The Vanderbilt-Idaho State winner will play the winner of today's other game in Nashville between Colorado and Siena on Monday night.

Also in Kansas City, No. 2 Arizona had no trouble with Eastern Illinois, winning 101-76. The day's last game there had Notre Dame against Xavier.

In Dayton, Ohio, Charlotte, the ninth seed, beat Tennessee 70-63, after the Midwest Region's 11th-seeded Northwestern State 96-54. Kansas beat Cal State Northridge 99-75, while Syracuse beat upset-minded Hawaii 79-69.

Second-round play starts today in the East and West.

The 21 straight wins is the longest current winning streak in the nation, men or women.

The Bengals must first deal with being Vanderbilt's home floor, in front of possibly the biggest crowd of the season.

want at the beginning, we'll have to stay together. We know it's important to try to stay close early."

The Commodores haven't won two games in the NCAA tournament since 1997, but they haven't been at home the last few years. Vanderbilt is 10-0 in NCAA first- and second-round games played in Memorial Gymnasium.

Health fair serves record numbers

By Coren Hart

Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - An annual health fair served twice as many people as last year with screenings and information.

"All I know is we were inundated," pulmonologist Cecilia Wilson said about the March 3 event at Burley High School. "It was huge."

Computer specialist and lab tech Mike Wilkerson was a part of the Intermountain Health Care team sent from Salt Lake City.

"I know they drew blood from over 1,000," Wilkerson said. The low-cost blood tests for kidney disease, heart problems, liver-disease-and-blood-sugar abnormalities was classified as a complete metabolic chemistry. For about $25, people obtained tests costing much more under normal circumstances.

"We realize that a lot of people can't afford medical insurance and they put off going to the doctor until things get serious," Wilson said. "This puts it within the reach of many more people."

The event also signaled the forming of an on-going study group. About 200 people with no known heart disease volunteered to join. The study is being conducted in Salt Lake City at LDS Hospital.

"We're looking for c-reactive proteins," said Dave Gibbons of Cassia Regional Medical Center. "We want to know the role of c-reactive proteins in heart disease."

Also offered during the six-hour fair were free dental and oral health screenings, an informational booth about early heart attack care, vision screenings by the Lions Club and other health-related booths. Everything was free except for the blood work.

Volunteers also collected donations for Jed Anderson of Burley, who is readying for his second kidney transplant.

"The first one did fine until a few months ago, when it just failed," said Jerald Anderson, his grandfather. "We're doing what we can to raise money for another kidney. His mother gave him one of hers last time, so we're looking for another donor, too."

The Mini-Cassia Health Fair Committee consists of Cassia Regional employees Rick Dayley, Nancy Gerrard and Dave Gibbons, who worked late the night before and then got up at 5:30 a.m. for the final touches.

"I just want to say that we absolutely could not do this without the volunteers," Gibbons said. "There are many, many hours volunteered to get this fair into reality."

Former 'Antiques Roadshow' appraisers face charges

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two antique dealers have been indicted on fraud charges for allegedly staging phony on-air appraisals for the PBS-series "Antiques Roadshow" in order to lure customers whom they later cheated.

Russell Pritchard III of Bryn Mawr and George Juno of Allentown were accused by a federal grand jury Thursday of faking the televised appraisals by arranging for friends to come to the 1996 tapings with swords the two men had provided beforehand.

The men concocted the scheme to enhance their reputations and attract customers to their Philadelphia business, American Ordnance Preservation Association, which appraised and sold military artifacts, according to the indictment.

The men are also accused of defrauding two owners of Civil War artifacts by buying the items for far less than their fair value and reselling them for large profits.

"Mr. Pritchard maintains his innocence of these charges and we will vigorously defend him," said Pritchard's attorney, Kirk Karaszewicz. Juno's attorney, John Weidner, also said he would dispute the charges at trial.

Last year, "Antiques Roadshow" producer WGBH-TV severed ties with Juno and Pritchard, claiming they staged a 1997 segment in which a man was told that a Civil War sword he found in his attic was worth $35,000. The station said that Juno and Pritchard had known the man "beforehand," and used the pair of "extraneous deception" that violated the popular show's premise — providing on-the-spot appraisals for people who bring in their old or unusual items.

Juno at the time denied taking part in fake interviews and blamed the controversy on competitors.

Saudis storm hijacked aircraft, freeing more than 100 hostages

MEDINA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi commandos rushed up ladders and broke through the windows and doors of a Russian plane Friday, freeing more than 100 hostages and ending a hijacking by Chechen rebels. Three people — a flight attendant, a hijacker and a passenger — were killed.

Two other hijackers were arrested on the tarmac as the hostages streamed past them to safety after 22 hours in captivity. Witnesses said there were three hijackers in all and that they wielded knives and claimed to have a bomb.

Necati Ates, a Turkish passenger, told Turkey's NTV television he watched the Saudi forces put a ladder against the plane, adding: "I saw them through the window and they signaled to me to keep quiet."

Several people were injured in the rescue, which came after the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane, the Saudi Interior Ministry said.

The "Chechens seized" the Moscow-bound aircraft on Thursday after it took off from Istanbul, Turkey, and diverted it to the holy Saudi city of Medina.

Paramedics said the hijackers knifed and shot to death the female flight attendant during the commando raid and that the hijacker and passenger — both men — were killed by gunfire. The Russian Interfax news agency identified the flight attendant as Yulia Fomina, 27. Turkey's Anatolia news agency said the dead passenger was a 27-year-old Turk Cursel Kambal.

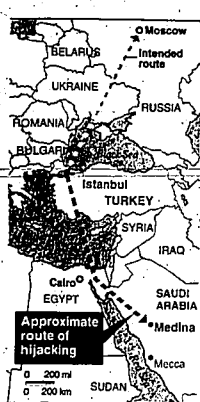

A Chechen representative in Jordan told The Associated Press that two brothers hijacked the plane, one of whom was a former Chechen security minister. She said their demands included a halt to the Russian "genocide" in the breakaway Chechen republic.

Human-rights groups have called for investigations into alleged atrocities against civilian Chechens by Russian troops, especially following the discovery of at least 50 bodies in a mass grave near the town of Zhdorovye. Russian officials have said the dead were men of fighting age, dressed in foreign-made fatigues. They said the men died fighting Russian troops or were killed during conflicts among the rebels. Chechens claim many of the bodies were those of women.

Chechen separatists' violent campaign often has spilled over the republic's borders in hijackings, with Turkey a frequent site. In November, a gunman seized a Russian airliner with 58 people aboard and diverted it to Israel.

In footage of Friday's rescue operation, Saudi state television showed more than a dozen commandos surrounding the plane as others ran up ladders, kicked in the cockpit and broke through the windows and doors.

Explosions kill at least 18 in northern China

SHIJIAZHUANG, China (AP) — Three explosions within an hour tore through workers' dormitories in this northern Chinese industrial city Friday, killing at least 18 people and prompting a massive security clampdown.

The blasts struck dormitories for workers at two cotton mills and a railroad company, said the city's fire official, who gave only his surname, Liu. The three five-story dormitories are several miles apart, and one building housing 48 families was reduced to rubble, Liu said.

The explosions in Shijiazhuang came 10 days after an explosion at a village schoolhouse in southern China killed at least 42 people, mostly children.

Police blamed illegal fireworks production at the school. But Premier Zhu Rongji said there was no evidence to support that, and he blamed a lone madman who he said carried explosives into the school and detonated them.

The blast embarrassed communist leaders attending the annual session of the Chinese legislature in Beijing this week. They have called repeatedly for efforts to tackle China's safety problems.

On Thursday, Zhu warned local officials to learn from the school blast. He said he was ordering an inquiry and that city and county leaders would be criminally liable for safety lapses that cause deaths.

The official Xinhua News Agency said 18 people were killed in the explosions in Shijiazhuang, a city of 7 million and the capital of Hebei province about 170 miles southwest of Beijing.

No cause was reported, but explosions are common in China, both accidental and intentional. Industrial safety is poor, and in a country where guns are rare, easily available explosives are often used in attacks blamed on gangsters, jilted lovers, blackmailers and others.

Frozen toddler might keep all her fingers, toes

TORONTO (AP) — A feeding tube running from her nose, 13-month-old Erika Nordby babbled and played with a microphone Friday as her mother said the toddler may not lose any fingers or toes, despite being frozen and having her heart stop for two hours.

Leyla Nordby wept and thanked all who helped her daughter make what doctors call a miraculous recovery since she was found lying face down in the snow, clad only in a diaper, after wandering into the frigid night.

Erika sat on her mother's lap during a news conference in Edmonton, Alberta, wearing a pink and white dress with a pink heart in front. She behaved like any 1-year-old, pulling tissues out of a box, chewing on a doll and trying to wriggle out of her mother's arms.

Despite fears of brain damage, problems with internal organs and severe frostbite, Erika has made an almost complete recovery.

"What an incredible journey we've all been on," Nordby said, reading from a prepared statement. "At this point in time, Erika will require some rehabilitation and there's a good chance she'll keep all her fingers and toes."

OPEC leans toward 4 percent cut in oil output

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC delegates have agreed to pump less oil in an effort to buttress crude oil prices, but they started Friday meeting without disclosing the size of their planned cut.

The Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries is seeking to keep prices from falling despite a seasonal weakness in demand and an overall decline in global economic growth.

OPEC oil ministers refused to say how many barrels of oil they have decided to remove from global markets. Several delegates have suggested that OPEC's production cut would equal at least 1 million barrels a day, or 4 percent of the group's targeted output.

Fighting rocks outskirts of Macedonian city

SHIPKOVICA, Macedonia — The army mounted a heavy artillery attack Friday to push ethnic Albanian rebels northward, but the scene in this hill town above Macedonia's second-largest city reflected a rebel force ready to stay put and step up their fight.

The sound of detonations from government artillery pieces were ignored by armed lookouts lurking in the woods. Weapons were loaded and ready in nearby every home. Ethnic Albanian insurgents, with pistols peeking out from camouflage uniforms, confidently strode along the only paved road.

Police late Friday claimed a "successful offensive" pushed the rebels back from Tetovo. But the hills southwest of Tetovo remained in rebel control.

Bus driver says he killed to avenge Palestinian deaths

TEL AVIV, Israel — A Palestinian who rammed his bus into a crowded bus stop last month, killing eight Israelis, told a court he wanted to avenge the deaths of Palestinians shot by Israeli troops.

Khalil Abu Olbeh, from Gaza City, was charged with eight counts of murder.

Abu Olbeh, who was injured in the Feb. 14 attack, was brought into Tel Aviv District Court in a wheelchair on Thursday, his left arm bandaged to the elbow. He was guarded by seven police officers. Abu Olbeh said he had no regrets. "You (Israelis) killed many Palestinians, my family, my people," he told reporters at the start of the hearing.

Abu Olbeh's relatives have said the driver has taken anti-depressants for about a year, and was upset about the growing Palestinian death toll in fighting with Israel. Since the unrest began at the end of September, 428 people have been killed, including 352 Palestinians, 57 Israeli Jews and 19 others.

Petrobras platform P-36 tilts in the Atlantic Ocean in the Campos Basin offshore oil field about 150 miles east of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Thursday. Early Thursday morning two explosions rocked the platform killing at least one and injuring dozens.

Brazil attempts to save crippled rig, prevent spill

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A crippled oil rig slipped down the south Atlantic on Friday, as federal petroleum giant Petrobras weighed the risks of trying to go aboard to prevent a spill of the 400,000 gallons of oil on board.

"We want to be sure it won't sink suddenly, and that if experts go aboard there is no risk," said Irani Varela, the company's director of security.

Three explosions on Thursday damaged a pillar supporting the rig, Brazil's largest, 75 miles off the Atlantic coast.

The rig was the top producer in the rich Campos Basin, 120 miles northeast of Rio, which accounts for most of the 1.5 million barrels Brazil produces daily.

One worker died of burns and another was hospitalized in serious condition. Nine others were missing and presumed dead, Varela said.

The rig was listing at a 30-degree angle and had sunk between 20 and 40 inches since Thursday, Varela said. But it had not tilted any further.

"We are working to recover it," Varela said. "We are trying to remove part of the water (from flotation tanks) so it will return to a horizontal position."

Thirteen ships with floating anti-oil barriers were stationed around the rig, he said. Some 400,000 gallons of crude oil and diesel fuel were still aboard and could spill into the sea.

Petrobras Chief Executive Henri Philippe Reichstul said Thursday there was no spill from the accident and that all the underwater oil and gas wells had been sealed.

Faith rests on forgiveness

I slithered away from my normal routine on Sunday morning to worship in a big evangelical church that is getting bigger by the minute. The congregation has just opened a new worship facility that holds about 1,600 people. The church is called Woodland Hills and it's on the East Side of St. Paul, in a middle class neighborhood. Here the congregation could make a solid connection to the people who live around the church. The church building is a beautifully renovated former discount department store.

One of the draws is a marvelous band that drives about a half-hour of worship music and warms the congregation for the big, big show. That would be Greg Boyd, a Ph.D. in theology, an author of five or six respected books, and a husband and father. Boyd is a wonderful theologian who teaches classes at Bethel Theological Seminary in New Brighton. He is also a clear communicator and a guy with a truckload of energy. He was an ultra-marathoner, running beyond the traditional marathon distance. So, in Greg Boyd, we've got a high achiever, a good writer, a clear thinker and a hard worker.

Clark Morphey

But he has another dimension—honesty. He talks about himself: early experimentation with drugs, physical abuse as a child, a wild drive to excel, his foray into Pentecostalism and encounters with Jesus Christ. He is a totally transparent human while still being a respected pastor and scholar.

He fascinates me, because for so many years, mainline church clergy have done their best to keep all of their past encounters with life a secret. Clergy have made secrecy an art form. People look at them in the pulpit and think that man or that woman must be perfect. They've never—never—talked of falling in love with the wrong person, no confessions of stealing or lying or coveting.

Yet, I know so many of my best friends are just the opposite kind of person. They are people who harbor anger, who wonder about past loves, who covet houses, cars, travel, who sometimes swear against God, who say hurtful things and who have not always honored their elders.

I remember a young fellow who came to me one day. When he was a college student, he and a car full of other students went for a crazy ride—laughing, singing and not paying much attention to the road. At an intersection, his car struck and killed an older man. The young fellow had been thinking about going into the ministry. But he feared this incident ruined his chances of ever being accepted. I told him that was the case, we might just as well shut down the entire Christian enterprise. Because faith rests on forgiveness.

I also told him the only way to escape from that terrible incident was to be brutally honest about it for the rest of his life. Just tell people what happened and they will accept you. Try to keep it a secret and you will be tortured.

I've heard it all, confessions of broken brothers and sisters who don't know where to begin the long search for forgiveness. Certainly we can run away from our past but we will always be running—and eventually, it catches us unaware and beaten. I wonder what it would be like if clergy bowed their heads at the beginning of a sermon and simply made a tiny confession. What if they just leaned on their elbows and said, "This is really the kind of person who stands in your pulpit every Sunday." Then it would be up to the people to reject or accept, to forgive or condemn.

And that would become the test of the faith.

Nazarene churches sponsor crusades

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS—Jesus' love is cool—and one way for children to discover this is by taking an icy polar expedition. That's the idea behind this week's Children's Crusade, sponsored by the Magic Valley Nazarene churches. Kim Nolan, children's pastor at the Twin Falls First Church of the Nazarene, said the Arctic theme will be evident even in the church fellowship hall, which will be decorated with snowy crafts.

The children will study polar animals and will watch a video presentation of puppets, games and food. Nolan said it's kind of like a spring vacation Bible school.

"Chatterbox Theater," about a chipmunk who visits the Arctic. "He learns how to survive in the Arctic, and he learns about the animals there." Nolan said. "The application is that Jesus' love is powerful; Jesus' love is refreshing."

There will also be music, Bible stories, puppets, games and food. Nolan said it's kind of like a spring vacation Bible school.

"They get to see friends that maybe they get to see at camp during the summer," she said. "So it's an exciting time when you can see old friends and meet new ones."

While the children are participating in their crusade, adults will participate in one of their own each night. Dr. Bill Burch, an evangelist from Eagle Ministries in Tempe, Ariz., will speak on the "Divine Connection" in the fulfillment of the Great Commission and the Great Commandment.

The event is sponsored by the Nazarene churches in the Magic Valley, but everyone is invited.

Come to the crusades

The Magic Valley Crusade and the Children's Crusade are set for 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday at the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, 1231 Washington St.

Children age 4 through grade six will attend the Children's Crusade. Child care for infants through age 2 will also be provided, as will special classes for 2- and 3-year-olds.

Admission is free. For more information, call 733-6610.

Architect tells students to create 'sacred spaces'

By Bill Broadway
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The desire to feel safe is as basic as eating and drinking, loving and being loved, says Travis Price. That's why most people carve out safe spaces where they live, work and play—some as simple as carefully arranged pillows, others as elaborate as garden houses.

As an architect and teacher, Price helps clients and students identify the kind of space they need, put their idea into words or pictures and find a way to make it real. Children, he finds, grasp the concept more quickly than adults.

"Children have the innate ability to create space and understand it," the 52-year-old Takoma Park, Md., designer said in a room filled with seventh- and eighth-graders at National Cathedral School in Washington. Around him, students at tables conceived, designed and built models for a schoolyard meditation space—all in 90 minutes.

Price, whose current projects include the renovation of Explorer's Hall at National Geographic, was leading workshops with the theme that mirrored a course he teaches at Catholic University. Called "Spirit of Place/Spirit of Design," the course stresses the interplay of environment, culture, history and natural materials in creating "sacred spaces"—safe environments with a spiritual dimension.

Students design projects for remote parts of the world, then travel to those locations to build them over a 10-day period. Past projects include a fishing lodge on Lake Eralue in British Columbia; a church on the Amazon River in Peru; and a stargazing shrine in Machu Picchu, Peru. In May, Price and his students will construct a suspended bridge and platform over a horseshoe-shaped gorge near Katmandu, Nepal. The project is sponsored by Catholic University and nine artists, explorers, doctors and import-export specialists.

Secured by cables, the platform will allow visitors to hover 50 feet above a swampy abyss filled with leeches and snakes. In Nepalese culture, these creatures represent "potential" and transmit great powers and energy, said Price, who described himself as a "broad-minded Christian" whose spirituality is influenced

Study: Religious affiliation is not dropping

By Bill Broadway
The Washington Post

Nearly two-thirds of U.S. congregations maintain strong ties to their religious denominations, debunking the widely held belief that affiliation with major religious groups has declined, according to the largest study ever of congregational behavior, which was released Tuesday.

Such identification, the researchers said, defies the claim of many sociologists that American faith groups have entered a "post-denominational era" in which personal spirituality and needs have preempted loyalty to a single religious heritage.

"The (overall) vitality of these congregations is pretty stunning," said Carl Dudley, who with project co-director David Rothenberg determined that 62 percent of all congregations have strong denominational loyalties.

The interfaith survey, "Faith Communities in the United States Today," involved 14,301 congregations in 41 denominations or faith groups and confirms that the growth of less hierarchical, more charismatic congregations and smaller U.S. faiths such as Islam and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is "rapidly putting a new face on American religion" and diminishing the dominance of traditional churches.

Findings have been posted on the institute's Web site at <http://harr.hartsem.edu>.

The 68-page report verifies the rapid growth of evangelical Protestant congregations and the declining membership of Episcopalians, Lutherans, Methodists and other mainline Protestant groups. But Dudley and Rothenberg said religious "trend trackers" have not adequately noted the corresponding slowdown in new church development among Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox populations, and the surge in new congregations of Bahá'ís, Muslims, Jews and Mormons in the last 20 years.

Newly organized Catholic parishes at mid-century represented about 10 percent of all new churches, Dudley said. That portion has dropped to 5 percent.

Going home Lutheran church looks to the future

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS—A sign on the corner of Carriage Lane and Filer Avenue reads, "Future Home of Our Savior, Lutheran Church."

Pastor Dan Riecke said the land has been purchased, and a building is in the planning stages.

"We have a footprint that we laid out there," said Riecke, explaining that the church has a conditional use permit for 6 1/2 acres at the intersection. "That footprint covers an L-shaped property on the corner, and we'll be developing one part of that footprint."

He said the tentative date for a kick-off fundraiser is May 20. The goal will be to raise about $350,000 to build a multi-functional building on the land.

Riecke said he hopes to have at least three, perhaps four, phases of development. The church architect is designing a master plan so that phase two can fit into the first phase, and so on until completion.

It's a long-range plan that might take years. Originally, the church had purchased land on Madonna and had planned to build there. But that land has been sold. Riecke said the church would have been bid away there, and this new location will have much more exposure.

Before the congregation can transfer entirely to a new facility, arrangements must be made to vacate the building it now shares with Valley Christian Church—on Heyburn Avenue East. Riecke said completely vacating these premises must be determined by whether or not another church leases or purchases the Lutherans' part of the property. Or Valley Christian could choose to purchase the entire building.

None of that has been settled yet.

"We'll be looking at what options come about during the next few years," Riecke said. "But right now it's impossible to say exactly when or how our departure from this location will take place."

With a baptized membership of about 390, Riecke said he would like to be able to grow the church to a larger size. And to do that, he sees a need for more flexibility in scheduling services on Sunday mornings.

In the meantime, he said, there could be a change in the church's worship time, by holding one service in the existing church and one in the new building, for example.

"Flexibility options become quite interesting," Riecke said. "We've got to think creatively, because we're in an unusual situation."

Church ushers find there's a lot to learn

By Collette M. Jenkins
Akron Beacon Journal

AKRON, Ohio — Charles Brown thought on-the-job training was all he would need when he decided to become an usher.

"I had no idea there was a school to teach you how to be an usher and that you could actually be a certified usher," he says.

Brown, of the United Baptist Church in Akron, is among the 35 students currently enrolled in the school, sponsored by the Interdenominational Church Ushers Association of Akron. The school term runs from October through May, with sessions held twice monthly.

During each class, students are required to practice exactly what they would do during a worship service and rehearse signs included in the Usher's Signal Code.

For example, the instructor announces, "Sunday Morning Worship." The student ushers assume the service position, with the left hand and forearm across the back with the hand at the small of the back and the right arm straight down the side. Three student ushers take a synchronized bow at the rear of the sanctuary — one down the middle aisle, one down the outer left aisle and one down the outer right aisle. They all stop simultaneously.

ously at the same point in their respective aisles, facing the rostrum.

The key or lead usher, usually stationed in the middle aisle, looks to the left and the three ushers on the floor simultaneously make a right about-face, so that all are facing the rear of the sanctuary and a fourth usher, who is stationed inside the sanctuary at the door. As a guest approaches, the doorkeeper directs him toward one of the ushers stationed on the floor of the sanctuary.

The usher on the floor makes a polite gesture, inviting the guest. The gesture is made with the right arm close to the body, at or near the waist, with the forearm extended toward the guest. The fingers are held close together, the palm of the hand is upward, and there is an inviting look on the usher's face. The usher, staying about two paces in front of the guest, finds a seat, turns facing the guest and directs the guest to that seat with an outstretched arm.

Once all student ushers are back at their stations, facing the rear of the sanctuary, the instructor announces, "Scripture reading."

Students are also required to learn universal usher signals. Signals are also used to ask and answer questions, such as, How many seats are available in your section?

U.S. Protestants reach a turning point on gay issues

By Richard N. Ostling
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's possible that someday U.S. mainline Protestants will look back upon mid-March of 2001 as a turning point in their seemingly insoluble dispute over homosexual behavior.

At a strictly guarded secret convocation last week near Hendersonville, N.C., 34 top world leaders of Anglican Christianity agreed to utter no complaint and take no steps to block increasing tolerance in America's Episcopal Church. That appeared to remove the last obstacle to U.S. dioceses that ordain actively gay clergy and allow blessing rituals for same-sex couples.

Then on Wednesday, liberals in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) won a parallel triumph, defeating a ban on same-sex blessings. They will now work to repeal a four-year-old prohibition on actively homosexual clergy and lay officers at the nationwide church assembly in June.

For the moment, at least, uneasy compromises have been reached: Both denominations still officially uphold Christianity's traditional teaching against same-sex relations. While the Episcopal church takes that formal stand, it lets dioceses do what they wish. Presbyterian conservatives won a 1997 ban on actively homosexual clergy, but now liberals have gained the right to bless same-sex couples.

Last May, the United Methodist Church decisively reaffirmed bans on both rituals and clergy, although dissenters plan to continue same-sex ceremonies.

These three closely related denominations, with 42 million members and 54,215 local congregations among them, have struggled with this quandary for a quarter-century. Elsewhere in U.S. Protestantism, the United Church of Christ has followed an open policy on homosexual practice. Most other denominations are opposed.

Why wasn't polygamy revelation made public?

In his letter of Dec. 9, Scott Davis asserts that Joseph Smith never taught or practiced polygamy and that polygamy is an invention of the Utah Mormon Church. Absent the doctrine in the possession of the Utah Mormon Church, that indicates that Smith was married for time and eternity to more than 30 women, Davis has a point.

The Book of Mormon, the only claim of "Commandments," and every edition of The Doctrine and Covenants up to but not including the 1876 edition, forbids polygamy. Also, Smith always denied that he was a polygamist and spoke out against it. The 1876 edition of The Doctrine and Covenants, published 32 years after Smith's death, replaced Section 101, which forbade polygamy, with Section 132, which permitted it.

The church hierarchy said that Smith had received the revelation permitting polygamy in the early 1830s, but that he had not written it down until July 12, 1843 — sloppy work for a supposed prophet of the Lord, wouldn't you say?

The question: Is the revelation in Smith's handwriting, and if it is, why wasn't it made public during his lifetime and not until the church was ensconced in Utah?

Man-made religions can be a divisive force

Throughout the history of man, there have always been men who wanted a more peaceful world. But as long as there are people who believe their religion is better than other religions, things will stay pretty much the same. Nothing divides people more than man-made religions, for people will believe anything unless they know better. The Middle East, like many other places, gives a good example of what religion can do and has done to the peace of the world.

Buddhists feel the pain of statues' destruction

By Paul Moses
Newsday

There is a tradition that when the Buddha went to heaven to preach to his late mother, the king so missed his presence that he had artisans create a replica in sandalwood. The statue was put in the place where he had sat and, when the Buddha returned, it stood and saluted him. "Sit back down, take your place," the Buddha was said to have told the statue. "After my departure from this world, you will serve as a guide to my followers."

Max Moerman, an expert on Buddhist images who teaches at Barnard College in New York, told this ancient story when asked about the Islamic fundamentalist Taliban's wanton destruction of Buddha images.

and other statues in Afghanistan — which resumed last week after being suspended during the Muslim festival of Eid ul-Adha.

There is an outcry around the world, including among many Muslims, against an order by Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar to destroy such cultural treasures, because "these idols have been gods of the infidels."

But there's a special hurt for Buddhists, who use such images to help put the Buddha's teachings at the center of their lives.

"The Buddhist tradition, in its canonical texts, greatly reveres and sees it as an important religious practice to create and respect and venerate and make offerings to images of the Buddha," Moerman said. "They would see this (destruction) as more than an act of sacrilege. According to the Buddhist scriptures themselves, this is one of the things that sends you into the deepest hell."

The Taliban's shelling of the two colossal Buddhas of Bamiyan, which may date to the 5th century and are hewn from a rocky mountainside along a route used in the silk trade, is especially disturbing to Buddhists. Buddhist teachers point out quickly, though, that despite the images' importance, Buddhists do not worship them.

"There is a misunderstanding that Buddhists try to worship idols," said Guoyuan Fashi, abbot at the Chan Meditation Center in New York City. "The main thing is that we respect the Buddha because we understand his teachings."

The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York offered to buy some of the more portable images in Afghanistan and to display them as works of art rather than as religious objects.

But there was no response from the Taliban.

while the combined percentage of new Bahá'í, Muslim, Jewish and Mormon congregations has increased from about 3 percent to more than 20 percent, he said. Evangelical Protestant congregations make up the largest portion, 58 percent.

The study found that many of the healthiest congregations offer alternative worship styles that appeal to younger worshippers, with electric guitars and keyboards rather than pipe organs and pianos. Such congregations are likely to be evangelical Protestant, with authority based "in the Holy Spirit" rather than in creeds or reason.

David Wallace, dean of Presbyterian-affiliated Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary in Atlanta, said traditionalists will have to accept that many potential members, particularly families with children, "will expect the church to be more sensitive and more concerned about contemporary expressions of worship."

After years of bad behavior, All-Star turned to God

By Terry Pluto
Akron Beacon Journal

This is one man's journey of faith, only this man happens to be the All-Star third baseman for the Cleveland Indians.

Listen to Travis Fryman tell his story—about the bats he smashed, the walls he dented, the coolers he kicked. There was an exhibition game where a coach told a couple of front-office people about how young Travis Fryman was taking control of his temper.

years old in a backyard Bible study," he said. "At that point, the Bible says I became a new creation in Christ."

But hardly a finished product. He went to Olive Baptist Church every Sunday in Pensacola, Fla. "But that was more like a cultural thing in the South," he said.

The son of a high school basketball coach, sport was Fryman's God. He was a top draft pick by the Detroit Tigers in 1987, at the age of 18. By the time he was 22, he was in the big leagues. He was an All-Star from 1992 to 1994.

"At 25, most people would think I had everything," Fryman said. "I had the million-dollar contract. I was married to a beautiful woman. I had the job I always wanted."

He said, "When I struck out, guys moved to the other end of the dugout because they knew I was likely to explode."

He continued, "I had also gotten married. I was tough to live with. I'd bring the game home with me, and Kathleen wouldn't know how to deal with my moods."

During the summer of 1992, Kathleen Fryman became close friends with Cathy Tanana, wife of Detroit pitcher Frank Tanana.

"Cathy led my wife to the Lord in the parking lot of Tiger Stadium," Fryman said.

If it made Kathleen happy to go to a few Bible studies, that was fine. But he wasn't especially interested. Kathleen Fryman was smart enough not to leave Bible verses or spiritual books out for her husband to read.

continued to smolder, and he wasn't always sure what was making him so mad. He began to go to church with his wife, and realized that he had never made a real commitment to Christ.

"I finally realized that I had to stop playing baseball for me, and realize that my talent was a gift from God," he said. "I was playing for Him."

He seriously read the Bible. He realized he couldn't be a godly man and talk like the average ballplayer. When baseball resumed in 1995, players immediately noticed a difference. Fryman was calmer.

And for the first 10 weeks of the season, he couldn't hit.

"It was the worst slump of my career," he said. "Now, I know it was a real time of testing. (Detroit teammate) Kirk Gibson asked me, 'When is it gonna happen?' He meant, when was I going to blow up? I told him that I wouldn't."

player losing the respect of his teammates.

That 1995 season was probably the least productive of Fryman's career. He was batting .275 with 15 homers and 81 RBIs—respectable, but not up to his usual standards of 20-home homers and 100 RBIs.

"I see that as a time of testing," he said. "I made me stronger."

That's because Fryman's faith didn't waiver, even though there were times when his confidence did. He returned to the All-Star team in 1996 and was traded to the Tribe in 1998. Now the leader of the Tribe's baseball chapel, Fryman has a Bible study once a week. As for the anger, it still simmers, but it doesn't boil over.

"You will feel it, and that's OK," he said. "It's how you react. The Bible says to be angry, but don't sin. God has cleaned up my language and taught me a lot about self-control."

Religious leaders fight death penalty Portable facilities are the answer for some churches

By Maria Sammlatelli
The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Religious leaders in the South and around the nation are speaking out against capital punishment more loudly than ever, emboldened by a shift in public opinion and cases of innocence on death row.

"We may be finding the courage we didn't have before, given the climate," said the Rev. Joe Vought, a Lutheran minister based in Harrisonburg, who has served as chaplain to seven executed inmates.

The leadership of many Protestant churches, the Roman Catholic Church and Reform and Conservative Judaism have been on record opposing the death penalty for decades, but many in their congregations didn't share their views.

"People in the pews had fairly strong views for the death penalty, so a lot of (clergy) just didn't want to push the issue for fear of alienating their parishioners," said Davidson Douglas, a professor of law at the College of William & Mary.

But improved DNA testing has proven some capital convictions were mistakes, shifting public opinion and increasing churches' activism.

A Harris poll in July found 64 percent of people supported the death penalty, down from 75 percent in 1997. An NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll in July found that only 42 percent of people believed the death penalty is applied fairly; another 42 percent said it isn't.

Last month in Virginia, which has the second-highest rate of executions after Texas, 33

Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and Muslim leaders released a statement calling on the General Assembly to abolish capital punishment.

In North Carolina, the People of Faith Against the Death Penalty launched a statewide campaign last year to get the state to put capital punishment on hold. In Mississippi last month, religious leaders testified before a legislative committee, asking lawmakers to put the death penalty on hold. And last April, even conservative religious broadcaster Pat Robertson endorsed a short moratorium on the death penalty nationwide, saying it is not always applied fairly.

Besides the release of wrongly convicted prisoners following DNA testing, Moratorium 2000 (a Louisiana-based lobbying group), spokesman Robert Jones cited other factors eroding support for the death penalty: reports of racial and economic inequities in how capital punishment is applied, and lack of proof that the death penalty deters crime. And according to Amnesty International, between 1973 and 2000, 87 people have been released from death rows across the United States after they were found to have been wrongfully convicted.

Vought said he plans to propose a resolution opposing the death penalty to the Virginia Synod of Lutherans, 10 years after the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America passed a similar one.

"After all, we worship an executed savior," Vought said. "A man who cried out, 'Father, forgive them. They know not what they do.'"

A trailer bearing the logo of North Star United Methodist Church, pulls up to a Liberty, Mo., elementary school early one Sunday morning. Several men roll large storage boxes down the trailer ramp and into the building. Other men arrive to help unload containers—materials for the altar and platform, backdrop curtains, a screen, projector, sound equipment, musical instruments, children's church supplies, even a coffee maker.

Each week core groups of new congregations converge on rented facilities and transform a school cafeteria, a gym, theater or auditorium into a worship setting. After setting up, they worship, break down, pack up and do it all again the next week.

Estimates are that each year 3,000 to 5,000 or more new congregations are started each year. Some find temporary homes in religious facilities; others say the majority also rented space in other buildings. And they could rent anywhere from an average of four to five years to eight or 10 years. Some new churches move two or three times.

"One of the most difficult parts of being a portable church is hauling all the equipment overland," said the Rev. Bruce Emmert, pastor of the United Methodist Church of the Servant in Overland Park, Kan., which meets at Sunset Ridge Elementary School.

Faced with the challenge of moving what could amount to a three-room house each week, congregations try a variety of solutions.

Emmert was attending a church leaders conference in California when he overheard a conversation about portable church facilities, which provides advice and customized equipment for outfitting portable congregations. Founder Pete van der Harst came and consulted with the church leaders. They ended up spending about $40,000, saving what they needed to hold church, with each piece of equipment custom-fit in storage containers and marked.

"The consultation fee was the best money we spent," Emmert said. "Pete went to the place we were going to use and measured everything and even mapped out traffic flow to show us where to put the signs ... They supplied every item we need, down to the baby wipes and Scotch tape."

Emmert said the $40,000 may seem expensive, but they plan to use some of the equipment in their permanent location, and another church can use the storage containers and trailer.

"The big trend is that portable churches are no longer looked upon as being a second-class way to operate," said Van der Harst. "Congregations don't have to wait until they have a pile of bricks sitting somewhere ... My home church started out with 12 people and grew to 3,000 as a portable church."

Pastors find online help for sermons

By Susan Hogan/Albachi
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Not long ago, two pastors preached at the same suburban Dallas church during the same hour. Each opened his sermon with the same story about a movie that neither had seen. Coincidence? Not entirely. The pastors had taken the story from Celebration, a preaching resource.

Worshippers expect clergy to draw material from a variety of sources. But do they expect them to pass that material off as their own?

No, says Dr. Cleophas LaRue, who teaches homiletics — the study of preaching — at Princeton Theological Seminary. For him, it boils down to integrity.

Yes, says the Rev. Mark Link, a Jesuit priest and writer living in Plano, Texas, who's published books of homilies. For him, it boils down to good storytelling.

The answer is critical because the temptation for preachers to take shortcuts has never been greater. The demand for books with ready-made sermons is at an all-time high. The Internet is a virtual flea market for sermon swapping. And sermon preparation time is easily swallowed by the ministry demands of a 24/7 world.

With the click of a mouse, pastors can cruise through history and download the sermons of Martin Luther and John Wesley. Or they can compare notes at sites such as www.preacher.com. They can even purchase sermons on the Internet.

With today's resources, lightweight preachers can sound like brilliant scholars, quoting Kierkegaard without ever having cracked any of his books.

The pressure to entertain is part of what's fueling the scramble to borrow sermons and illustrations, said LaRue. He blames the rise on megachurches and televangelists, whose outreach is built on the backbone of media-savvy preaching.

Pastors who stop to make attributions such as "I read this here" or "I saw this movie," often interrupt the flow of their story and undermine the impact, said the Rev. David Smith, of New Hope Church in Duncanville, Texas.

And St. Augustine, a North African bishop who lived in the fourth century, wrote in "On Christian Teaching": "There are indeed some people who can give a good speech but not compose one. If they borrow from others something composed with eloquence and wisdom and commit it to memory and then bring that to their audience, they are not doing anything wrong."

But today, most pastors are expected to do their own homework. Seminars have classes devoted to training students to be preachers. Students learn the different types of sermons: doctrinal, devotional, expository and so forth. And they learn purposes for preaching: to comfort, warn, inform and encourage.

When preparing sermons, sometimes they're advised not to look at other preachers' sermons, particularly contemporary ones. The logic: They'll short-circuit their own thinking and be tempted to shape their sermon to match the one they read.

Some professors teach that it takes at least 10 hours of study to prepare a good sermon.

Washington couple to take over Galena Lodge

SUN VALLEY - A Bellingham, Wash., couple was chosen to take over operations at Galena Lodge Nordic and mountain bike center.

Charles Savage and Carlin Thompson will take over May 1 for Tom and Amy Downey, who wish to pursue other opportunities.

Savage manages a restaurant and catering business in Bellingham, while Thompson works as a shipping manager with a Bellingham firm. Both have worked at Savage's family ski shop at a Mount Baker ski area.

Savage's parents met and married in Sun Valley and have a home there.

Galena Lodge grew to become a popular wedding and event center under the Downeys' operation.

State to hold hearings on rate hike request

TWIN FALLS - Workshops and public hearings on Idaho Power Co.'s request for emergency rate increases are scheduled across Idaho Power's territory this month and next month to answer customers' questions and get public feedback, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission said this week.

The Twin Falls event will be April 5 at Best Western Cavanaugh's Hotel, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Public workshops are set at 5 and 6 p.m., and the public hearing at 7:30 p.m.

The "emergency energy charge" request comes after a rapid increase in the cost of wholesale power nationwide, some of it caused by electric shortages in California.

During the same workshops and hearings, the commissioners will consider Idaho Power's annual power cost adjustment, which it does every May.

Under Idaho Power's proposal, the PUC said, residential rates could increase by 24.3 percent, irrigation rates by 32.8 percent, small commercial rates by 19.9 percent and industrial rates by 44.5 percent.

This year's dry conditions could result in even more increases on top of the emergency charge. At this time every year, the commission annually requires Idaho Power to account for annual increases or decreases in its power supply costs, based on water availability. Due to low snowpack this year, there may be a rate increase beyond Idaho Power's emergency charge, the PUC said.

"Snowpack estimates likely won't be available until after April 1, but the commission decided to combine the two requests into one hearing and use projections to estimate water levels."

"We don't want to confuse customers by having one process come on the heels of another increase," Commissioner Paul Kjellander said.

CSI offers financial planning courses at Mini-Cassia Center

BURLEY - The College of Southern Idaho's Mini-Cassia Center is offering two courses to address stage-of-life financial planning in April.

Participants will learn how to determine whether they can retire early, to reduce taxes, to save and invest, to create a plan to achieve financial objectives, to reduce insurance costs and to properly allocate assets, CSI said.

Successful Money Management Seminar - from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays from April 3 to 17 - focuses on issues most important for people ages 20 to 50. The content is appropriate for any income or occupation. Topics include maximizing income, diversifying investments, minimizing potential taxes and counteracting negative effects of inflation.

Financial Strategies for Successful Retirement - from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays from April 2 to 16 - provides essential strategies and information to people who are close to retirement or 15 years from retirement. Participants will learn to systematically assess financial needs, define long-term goals and apply practical information immediately, CSI said.

Instructors Clay Esplin and Brett Robinson are licensed financial, investment and securities professionals. Participants will receive a comprehensive workbook with exercises and examples of information presented in the seminar, the college said. Each registered participant can bring a guest at no extra charge.

Advance registration is required, and organizers recommend early registration for the popular courses' limited seating. Advance cost is $49, and payment at the door is $69.

Association plans to raid Silicon Valley

The Times-News
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - For the first time, economic development agencies across the state have banded together to attract California's jobs to Idaho.

The newly-formed Idaho Economic Development Association, led by Bob Potter of Jobs Plus in Coeur d'Alene, has raised about $50,000 to lure high-tech companies from California's Silicon Valley.

March 28 and 29, the association will host two informational seminars in Santa Clara, Calif., to introduce potential companies to the state's business-friendly environment.

Members include economic development groups in Twin Falls, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Boise and Coeur d'Alene. Each of the members has, in the past, competed to recruit jobs into their individual communities, Potter said.

Representing a joint Twin Falls-Jerome marketing effort, Twin Falls' city Economic Development Director Dave McAlindin will be among the Idaho speakers at the California seminars.

This week he and his counterparts around the state laid out their 40-minute pitch, which starts with general Idaho information and leaves three minutes to each participating region of the state.

"You don't want to spend two hours - you'll lose them," McAlindin said.

He's collaborating with Bob Richards, the Jerome Chamber of Commerce's economic development specialist, and with Times-News marketing director Jan

Rogers, whose time was donated by the newspaper, to put together Magic Valley marketing materials and the local portions of the Santa Clara presentation.

On Monday, McAlindin's office will mail invitations to some of the 547 companies in northern California - predominantly the Bay Area and San Jose area - that fit the list of industries an Atlanta

Ski shop garners Business of the Year award

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - When Sturtevant's opened in 1948, it was one of only two shops supplying skis to vacationers who rode the Snowball Express train from Los Angeles and points east.

Today, the store, known then as Helm of Sun Valley, still supplies skis. But the store, now a Ketchum institution, also supplies an abundance of things you might not think of, such as volunteers for the Sun Valley Summer Symphony and wine auction, and contributions for families in financial straits.

At one point Sturtevant's even joined Atkinson's Market and Chateau Drugs in passing the hat to keep the free KART bus shuttle system running in the community.

Sturtevant's willingness to throw its support behind the community - and encourage its employees to do likewise - earned it the Business of the Year honor this year from the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce. The business, which follows previous honorees Sun Valley Co., Power Engineers and Atkinson's, will be honored at a banquet March 28.

"It just comes with the territory," said Rob Santa, who became sole owner this year after buying out co-owner Alex Orb. "In bigger cities there isn't always the recognition of community needs. Here there are so many good causes it's hard to say no."

The shop was begun by Twin Falls native Chuck Holt, who professed wooden skis with cable bindings and leather boots at a time when Pete Lane's was the only other ski shop in the area.

Fred Sturtevant bought the business and moved it from the Sun Valley Lodge area to its present location on Main Street. When Alex Orb and Santa bought it in 1982, it featured Warren Miller murals on the wall and served as the valley's fly-fishing connection in summer.

Today the emphasis is on downhill skiing and snowboarding in winter and mountain biking, luge, inline skating and dirt-bicycle racing in summer.

Orb and Santa opened a second store at the base of Warm Springs in 1987 and converted the Burger Haus to Sturtevant's snowboard shop three years ago. They opened a store in Hailey at the same time. The four shops maintain a staff of 25 during slack season and 70 during the busy winter and summer.

Sturtevant's has long supplied skates and other contributions to the Sun Valley Junior Hockey league and the Hailey Ice Rink - a throwback to Santa's days in Minnesota, where he was a hockey player.

It provides employees to help time racers and man aid stations during the 18-mile Boulder Mountain cross-country ski race.

Adaptive ski instructor Marc Mast said Sturtevant's has always been willing to tweak outriggers and other equipment for World Cup mono-ski champion Muffy Davis and other disabled skiers coming up through the ranks. The shop also provides discounts to ski and snowboard instructors and coaches and makes sure no child is turned away from the ski hill because he or she can't afford rental skis.

Former Blaine commissioner receives Citizen of the Year honor

The Times-News

KETCHUM - Recently retired Blaine County Commissioner Len Harlig will be honored as Citizen of the Year at the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce's 4th Annual Community Awards Banquet March 28.

Harlig came out of retirement to serve 16 years on the county's board of commissioners and planning and zoning commission, working to protect hillside from development, establish riparian setbacks, protect scenic corridors, prevent commercial sprawl in the county and ensure public access to public lands.

He joins his wife, Carol, an avid volunteer who was named Citizen of the Year in 1998, as well as a host of other people including former Sun Valley mayors Tom Pragassis and Ruth Lieder, Floyd McCracken and Blaine County Recreation District Director Mary Austin-Crofts.

Heather Thompson, who helped create the Romanticism of the Bear-Cat-House-for-Teens, is this year's Youth Advocate of the Year.

Will Caldwell, a painter who was volunteer chairman of last summer's Ketch-em Alive! Concert series, was named Arts Advocate of the Year. Caldwell also helped pick 250 pieces of art for the new hospital, which opened in November.

Fourteen-year-old Jessica Jaskowski, a straight-A student at Wood River High School, received a new award: Youth Citizen of the Year. She volunteers up to eight hours a day, four days a week, with physically challenged people at Sagebrush Arena's horseback therapy riding center.

Phil Dolberg is this year's Chamber Volunteer of the Year. Winners will be recognized at the River Run Lodge. To reserve tickets, call 725-2103.

"I've lived here eight years, but it wasn't until I started working here a year ago that I realized how much they did for the community," said Sturtevant's bookkeeper Joey Carr. "I've never worked at a place that does so much for the community. Definitely, a lot of that stems from the owner who leads by example - it encourages you to want to do the same."

Employee Jeff Davis particularly enjoys the free in-line skating, fly-fishing and skate-skiing clinics that Sturtevant's offers the community.

"That is why we live here - to be able to enjoy the great outdoors all around us," he said. "And it gives me great satisfaction knowing that a customer can come in here, try rental gear, and then we turn around and help them get off on the right foot with lessons."

ClearTalk to get TF wireless license

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - San Diego, Calif.-based Leap Wireless International Inc., an innovator of wireless communications services, on Friday said it has signed an agreement to contribute portions of two wireless operating licenses in Idaho in exchange for a noncontrolling 30 percent interest in a wireless venture formed by NTC/ClearTalk.

The 15-megahertz licenses cover about 371,000 potential customers in Twin Falls and Idaho Falls.

ClearTalk will contribute its license in Pocatello to the venture and provide capital to build out, launch and operate the three markets, Leap said. The agreement is subject to Federal Communications Commission approval.

NTC Inc. - a privately held company formed in July 1999 as an independent PCS carrier deploying complete networks in rural, underserved markets - will manage the venture's operations. "By contributing these licenses to the venture, Leap expects to utilize these licenses without diverting our deployment team for efforts from more mainstream markets," said Harvey P. White, Leap's chairman and chief executive. "We also believe that the venture will give our shareholders as the new venture provides service in these markets."

NTC has a handful of markets in various stages of development under its ClearTalk and Rio-Tel brand names and now has licenses to serve 2.1 million potential customers, Leap said.

Leap said the venture with ClearTalk plans to build out wireless networks in the three Idaho markets and offer traditional wireless service marketed under the ClearTalk name by summer. ClearTalk, which launched its first service in Grand Junction, Colo., in February 2000, offers a variety of traditional wireless plans, which include roaming and metered service.

"Residents of southern and eastern Idaho will be able to choose a community-based carrier with a larger calling area than currently available. Our agreement with Leap is expected to create new jobs in the area and provide more affordable wireless service in these three markets," said Glenn W. Ishihara, NTC's president. "We appreciate the opportunity to work with Leap to bring new technology to smaller markets."
