Magic Valley communities show mix of trends

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Welcome to Twin Falls, population 34,469.

The region's largest city grew by about 25 percent between 1990 and 2000, according to U.S. Census Bureau statistics released Friday.

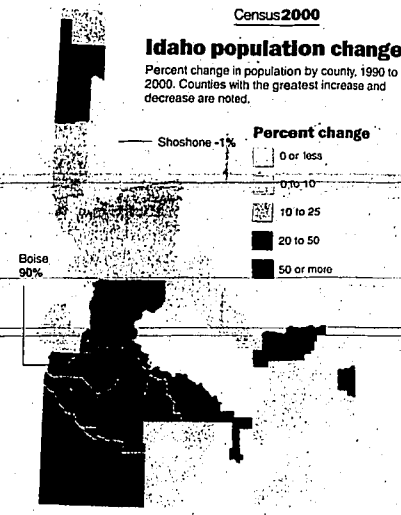

Population growth throughout the Magic Valley was a mixture of strong growth and increases below 10 percent over the 10-year period. Single-digit growth typically indicates outward migration; any numerical increase is attributed to the natural cycle of births outpacing deaths.

The state's total population grew by 28.5 percent. It was the largest growth rate in Idaho's history, and the fifth-highest in the nation behind Nevada, Arizona, Colorado and Utah, the Idaho Department of Commerce said. Nearly two-thirds of the state's counties experienced population increases above the national average of 13.2 percent.

But Ada, Canyon and Kootenai counties claimed two of every three new residents who came to Idaho during the last decade - a sign of the growing gap between economically diversified counties and those still almost completely reliant on agriculture.

Growth in Twin Falls documented by the 2000 Census is consistent with local estimates, which in 1999 projected Twin Falls' population at 34,316, said Dave McAlindin, the city's economic development director. It's been a decade of manageable growth for a city that in 1990 still was largely considered a small, quiet southern Idaho town. Average growth during the decade was about 2.5 percent a year.

1990 to its seventh-largest, as Coeur d'Alene's population shot up at breakneck speed. The northern Idaho city grew by 40.5 percent, or nearly 10,000 people, to reach a total population of 34,514 in 2000.

Idaho's skyrocketing population in the 1990s was concentrated in the Boise and Coeur d'Alene metropolitan areas. Meridian grew by 264 percent. From a population smaller than Twin Falls' in 1990, Meridian's population exploded from 9,951 to nearly 35,000 in 2000. Eagle experienced similar growth.

"It would have killed us to have those kinds of increases," McAlindin said. "Our ability to keep up with services would have been just impossible."

Population in Ada and Canyon counties each jumped 46 percent, and Kootenai County was up 55 percent. By contrast, two counties, Butte and Shoshone, lost population, and 10 more, including Cassia and Minidoka counties, had single-digit growth.

Policymakers were well aware of the urban concentration long before release of the details from the April 2000 census because of

Hispanics lead in growth rate

The Associated Press

WILDER - In a community boasting a cornucopia of crops from hops to cherries to sugarbeets, Idaho Hispanics who labor over them hope the fact their population nearly doubled from 1990 to 2000 means they have more say over how the state is run.

All across the Snake River plain, in places such as Burley, Rupert, and Twin Falls, the growth in the Hispanic population far outpaced the overall population growth.

Hundreds of Hispanic families make up two-thirds of Wilder, a town on a bluff overlooking the Snake River, and some live in small houses at the Chula Vista labor camp. Many want their burgeoning population to gain more clout.

"I don't think we're getting recognition," said Susana Villarreal from neighboring Homedale, who used to live at Chula Vista. "Only 10 percent of Hispanics say something, are outspoken. We're learning we can say things. Ninety percent are afraid, but we're educating ourselves and I think that's positive."

"With the increasing number, there is more opportunity for justice," agreed Elexia Rodriguez, project coordinator for the Terry Reilly Health Services, providing medical care in southwestern Idaho's agricultural communities.

Some oppose a recall

Supporters find no cause to oust Jerome sheriff

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME - Not everyone wants Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver gone, say some county residents.

"For what it's worth, I voted for that man," said Leona Rogers of Eden. "I know him, not personally, but as a person. I know what he does for the community and the things he's done for us."

Recall efforts - A4

Weaver now faces a recall election, in the wake of a Jan. 3 gunfight that left two of his deputies, and an Eden man dead. Cpls. James Moulson, 30, and Phillip Anderson, 23, led a drug warrant raid on George Timothy Williams' Eden home. A firefight broke out, and Moulson, Anderson and Williams, 47, died inside the house.

The recall election upsets Rogers.

"I don't think it's something that needs to be done," she said. "I think it's just a bunch of noise."

Her husband, Claude Rogers, agreed.

"It was a tragic situation that happened, but why blame Jim Weaver? I think (Williams) instigated the whole thing when he started shooting at the deputies," Claude Rogers said. "All of us make mistakes in our lifetime."

British consider grim options to contain epidemic

The Associated Press

LONDON - As scientists warned that the worst of the foot-and-mouth outbreak is yet to come, Britain considered two highly unpopular options Friday - expanding a massive slaughtering plan and vaccinating animals against the disease.

In further grim news, French agricultural officials on Friday reported a new case of foot-and-mouth east of Paris - the second French farm to be struck. The first was in the northwest village of La Barthe-Gondouin.

In Britain, the nation's chief scientist said the epidemic was "not under control." Desperate officials promised to speed the pace of killing and said they might begin culling all animals within two miles of every infection site in the country.

Chief government scientist David King warned that if officials fail to halt its spread, as many as half of Britain's 10 million livestock may have to be sacrificed to stop it.

Russia responds, expels U.S. diplomats

Pres. Bush considers tense exchange closed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - As Russia dropped the other shoe with mass expulsions of U.S. diplomats, President Bush and Russian President Vladimir Putin sought to move on to normal relations between their countries.

While agreeing that "we are anxious to get this matter behind us," Secretary of State Colin Powell said Friday, "We don't think there was a need for them to reciprocate" for the ouster of Russian diplomats by the United States.

Some of the expelled Russians were linked to a spy scandal; the others were said by U.S. officials to be intelligence agents under diplomatic cover.

"We thought what we were doing was necessary and appropriate," Powell told a news agency reporters.

The White House said Friday that Bush considers the matter closed. The president himself said: "We will be firm and consistent in our foreign policy."

Putin, attending a European Union summit in Stockholm, Sweden, said he did not think there would be "big consequences" from the expulsions, which were rooted in the arrest of a veteran FBI agent on charges of spying for Russia.

Powell, speaking to a newspaper association meeting in Washington, said, "Our relationship continues, and we'll see what we can do to isolate this one incident, but we are waiting to see about the totality of Russia's response."

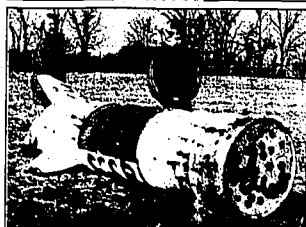

In Washington, Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft said, "We always need to be vigilant that we have security risks not only from foreign intelligence operatives, but we need to make sure that our own organizations are at risk-free as possible."

He spoke on ABC's "Good Morning America" after Russia notified the United States it was expelling four American diplomats and a U.S. official said another 46 will be asked to leave by the summer.

The expulsions are in reprisal for the ouster of four Russians - two others left earlier - implicated in the Robert Hansen spy case. Another 46 Russians assigned to the embassy in Washington and consulates across the country were told to leave by July 1.

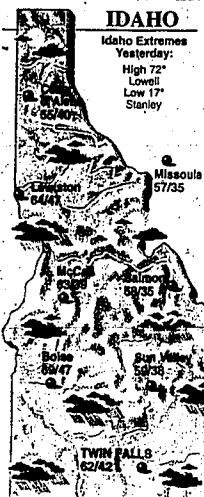

The Kremlin did not specify which Americans would be ousted beyond the four diplomats declared persona non grata. Powell said the number "would probably be in exact proportion."

Jessica and Jacob Evans of Mansfield, Ohio, observe what looks like a piece of space junk in a corn field Friday. A caller to a central Ohio radio station reported the location. The prank played on the Mir space station's demise. After 15 years in orbit, the 140-ton craft was guided to a blazing end over a target area in the South Pacific Friday.

Vehicle might have killed wolf

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP) — A wolf found dead near in southern Montana on Friday may have been killed by a vehicle, the Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks said.

A passing motorist reported the carcass at 7 a.m., and a department biologist later picked it up. The wolf suffered "significant head-trauma" and was found in the ditch along Frontage Road about eight miles west of Livingston, Regional Director Pat Flowers said.

The 90-pound female was fitted with a radio collar and was believed to have been looking for new territory after leaving the Leopold Pack in Yellowstone National Park, he said.

Eden resident Ann Banta, the site manager of the Eden Senior Center's Center, said support for the center is strong at the center. She said she also backs Weaver.

"He has been very supportive of this senior center and the one in Jerome," she said. "I'm sorry (the shootings) happened. I'm sorry it happened to anybody."

the economic problems in rural areas. Gov. Dirk Kempthorne made rural economic development a major priority during this legislative session, and while his tax relief proposals were not entirely embraced, lawmakers have endorsed various grant and other budget programs to help communities such as Rupert.

Duane Grant, who raises grain, sugar beets, beans, and onion seed on his farm just outside Rupert, admits the insistent urban movement poses new problems for agriculture.

"The fact is you can't say the state can stand alone on the growth in the Boise valley or that it can stand alone only on agriculture," said Grant, president of the Idaho Grain Growers Association.

"The two are interdependent," he said. "What becomes harder is communicating to our new urban friends the importance of agriculture to the rest of the state."

Wood River Valley cities experienced rapid growth during the past decade with population increases ranging from 19 percent in Ketchum to nearly 75 percent in Hailey.

More specific demographic information such as levels of educational attainment and income will be released from the U.S. Census Bureau in the coming months.

Tax relief might be too little, too late

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting immediate tax relief to Americans might not be as easy as it sounds, even if Congress and President Bush can bridge political differences and agree on $60 billion in tax cuts this year.

Options that include withholding less taxes from paychecks, mailing more than 100 million rebate checks or even giving taxpayers a holiday all present logistical challenges. Under the best of circumstances, much of the year will slip away by the time the money reaches people's pockets.

"It's hard to do. The year's over very quickly," said Clint Stretch of the DeLoitte & Touche accounting firm.

As the economy falters, Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill are rallying around the idea of tax relief this year. But they disagree on whether to pass cuts for 2001 as a stand-alone bill or attach them to Bush's 10-year, across-the-board income tax cuts.

Traveling Friday in Maine, Bush endorsed the idea of accelerated relief but insisted that Congress pass his entire tax package at the $1.6 trillion level he has insisted upon all along. The Bush income tax bill passed by the House involves less than $6 billion in tax relief for 2001.

"I think we can accelerate tax relief, we should accelerate tax relief, and keep the size of the tax relief package at the same level," Bush said. "I'm confident we can do both."

Democrats, on the other hand, want to focus on just the $60 billion for this year and debate later the other components of Bush's plan, which they consider too large and too skewed toward high-income taxpayers. Sen. Kent Conrad of North Dakota, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said Congress could pass the 2001 relief by early April.

"We have the right idea at the right time," Conrad said. "Let's not hold this stimulus package hostage to a 10-year budget plan, one that is fatally flawed."

Assuming some agreement on a 2001 tax cut is reached, it's likely it would be late May at the earliest — and that would be an extraordinary feat — before a bill was ready for Bush to sign. Then come a whole host of challenges.

Recall organizer says arrest unrelated

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME — An Eden woman pushing a possible recall election against Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver said her drug-related arrest in 1994 before Weaver took office has nothing to do with her recall drive.

Cindy Kopp recently announced that on April 9, she and others will release a petition asking for a recall election against Weaver. By Idaho law, a recall petition can't be distrib-

1. Signatures — reflecting 20 percent of the voters registered for Jerome County's most recent election — must sign petitions to force a recall election. That amounts to 2,022 signatures from the county's 10,107 registered voters.
2. If the Jerome County clerk's office finds the needed signatures are valid, Weaver would have five days to resign. If he chooses not to, Jerome County Clerk Cheryl Watts must call a special election for a recall vote.

3. If a recall election takes place, according to Idaho code, a majority of voters must support the recall for it to pass.

In addition, according to the law, "the number of votes cast in favor of the recall must equal or exceed the votes cast at the last general election for that officer." Simply put, more than 2,992 voters would have to vote to recall Weaver — who received that many votes in November 2000, when he won a three-way race for re-election. Weaver captured 49 percent of the vote in that election.

Family, friends say farewell to film star Ann Sothern

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — No stretch limos pulled up to unload Hollywood celebrities and none of filmdom's intrusive paparazzi were firing cameras at mourners arriving Friday to bid farewell to the glamorous, genuine silver screen star Ann Sothern, who died last week at 92 in her Ketchum home.

As granddaughter Heidi Bates Hogan explained with a smile before the Mass at the presence of Ms. Sothern's peers:

Ann Sothern

"She outlived all of them."

From her first films in the early 1930s until her last Oscar-nominated role in "The Whales of August" with grand dames of film, Bette Davis and than 50 years on stage, in 18 movies and two television series showcased an astonishing variety of talent. She sang, danced, was described by actress Lucille Ball as the finest movie comedienne; hailed by actress Lorena Young as more beautiful than Greta Garbo, and said by studio heads to have Hollywood's sexiest mouth.

Playing a scatterbrained, luckless Brooklyn showgirl, Mavis Ravier, Ms. Sothern launched a series of 10 Mavis-theme movies that made her one of Hollywood's most popular actresses. Although she complained her second-rung films made her the "Queen of the Bs," MGM's legendary boss, Louis B. Mayer, told her that the wildly successful series "pay for our mistakes" on other money-losing films.

She also was shrewd: she produced the TV series, "Private Secretary," and insisted it be shot on film, which she owned and later sold for handsome profit.

Bridge nears completion

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Idaho Transportation Department officials say questions about some paving material on a Burley bridge project did not contribute to the project's delay.

Officials say their questions have been answered. That means the bridge meets specifications, and a dedication ceremony is tentatively scheduled for 4 p.m. on April 6.

The completion date for the $7 million project had been pushed back from January because of cold weather. Burnside said the delay was not caused by necessary follow-up testing of the paving material.

Initial Transportation Department tests of the paving mixture in October showed that pavement poured during the project's second phase was "subject to rejection," unless a remedy could be found, according to a letter from regional engineer Walter Burnside to the Idaho Construction Co. of Kimberly, the general contractor of the project.

Former lawmaker to finish session

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho House Republican leadership will appoint former Twin Falls Rep. Randy Hansen as an interim successor to the late Rep. George Swan, who died at his Twin Falls home Thursday.

Hansen was Swan's predecessor in the seat, and he helped fill in for Swan after complications from liver cancer prevented Swan from continuing his duties at the Statehouse.

He confirmed Friday that he will finish the current legislative session, which is expected to end next week.

Swan died after an 11-month battle with colon and liver cancer. He was serving his first term in the House.

Just last year, it was Swan who filled the GOP's ticket in Hansen's place, after Hansen backed out of his District 23 candidacy in the spring of 2000. Originally, House leaders had thought Swan's death would mean his District 23 seat would remain vacant for the remainder of the session. But an attorney general's opinion revealed that a 1999 amendment to the Emergency Interim Legislative Succession Act allows a successor to be appointed.

Written in 1961, the law was originally designed to keep the state government operating in

Services for the late Rep. George Swan will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the 3rd Ward LDS Chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard in Twin Falls.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and a large contingent of state legislators are expected to attend. Both houses of the Legislature will suspend Tuesday's business.

Bishop Randy Welch will officiate, and interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

Selecting a successor

Legislative District 23's Republican Central Committee will meet at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 3, to nominate a successor to the late Idaho Rep. George Swan.

The meeting will be held at the Twin Falls County Building at 246 Third Ave. E.

A list of three nominees will be selected for submission to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, who will appoint one of the nominees to the Idaho House.

The list will be prioritized, with the top name being the committee's first choice. Kempthorne rarely, if ever, rejects the local committee's top choice.

Any interested Republican candidate should submit a cover letter, and resume to the Legislative District 23 Committee at P.O. Box 1733, Twin Falls, Idaho, 83303. Questions may be directed to District 23 Chairman Grant Loeb at 736-4051.

District 23 covers the eastern portion of Twin Falls County.

TWIN FALLS

George Hutchinson Swan

George Hutchinson Swan, 50, of Twin Falls died Thursday, March 22, 2001, at his home following a lengthy battle with cancer. He was born April 16, 1950, in Salt Lake City, Utah, the son of J.W. and Elizabeth Hutchinson Swan. George was reared and attended schools in Kaysville, Utah and graduated from Davis High School in 1968. He attended the University of Utah where he played football, was a member of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, and from which he graduated in 1973. On June 6, 1973, he married Rebecca Stoddard in Salt Lake City, Utah, and their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple on Oct. 22, 1983. They moved to the House Creek Ranch in Rogerson where they lived until moving to Twin Falls in 2000. George was an active member of the 71 Livestock Association, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association in 1994, president of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association in 1995, and was elected to the Idaho State Legislature in 2000. His greatest love was being with his family, watching his son Hutch team rope, his daughter Jenny dance, or his younger daughters, Ali and Caitie, bow cut, or compete in rodeo queen contests.

In addition to his wife, Rebecca of Twin Falls, he is survived by four children, George Hutchinson (Trudy) Swan, Jr. of Rexburg, Idaho, Jennifer, Allison, and Caitie Swan, all of Twin Falls; his mother, Elizabeth H. Swan of Kimberly, one brother, John W. (Marti) Swan of Jerome; two sisters, Katherine Swan-Jones, Rich Stivers of Twin Falls, and Barbara (Curt) Anderson of Evergreen, Colo.

George was preceded in death by his father, J.W. Swan and by one sister, Diane Marchetti. Funeral services for George H. Swan will be conducted at 10 a.m. Tuesday, March 27, 2001, at the 3rd Ward LDS Chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard with Bishop Randy Welch conducting. Interment will follow in Sunset Memorial Park. Friends may call at White Mortuary Monday, March 26, from 4-8 p.m. and at the church from 8-10 a.m. on Tuesday. The family suggests that memorial contributions be given to Idaho Home Health & Hospice, 200 2nd Ave. N. Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Gilbert Jarolimek

Gilbert Jarolimek, 84, of Filer, passed away March 23, 2001, at his home in Filer. He was born on a farm south of Dorchester, Neb. on Aug. 19, 1916, to Emanuel and Georgia Jarolimek. After graduating from county school he worked at home on the family farm. In 1937, he married Helen Stejskal in Concordia, Kan. He then worked at the Crete, Nebraska Golden Harvest Brewery. In 1939, he went farming for himself.

As the drought kept on and not much was raised, they decided to move to Idaho. There, he did custom farming and hay baling. In 1953, Gilbert and his brother Leo built their own sagebrush machine-ery and began clearing sagebrush of the desert land. Gilbert, son Dennis and brother Leo cleared thousands of acres of sagebrush land in Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Oregon. That land is now rich irrigated farmland. Gilbert was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles 378 of Grand Island, Neb., where he enjoyed dancing to polka music. He will be missed by all who knew and loved him. He loved hunting, fishing and playing his button accordion. Gilbert leaves to survive his wife of 64 years - Helen of Filer; son - Dennis (Patly) Jarolimek of Filer; one daughter - Janice (John) Montagna of Oregon; six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his parents and three brothers - Edward, Robert and Leo. At Gilbert's request no services will be held, cremation was under the direction of Park's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

IMMACULATA, PENN.

Sister Sharon-Marie Gunning

Sister Sharon-Marie Gunning (age 51) was born on July 9, 1949, in Wendell, Idaho. To Jim and Jo Ann Gunning. She attended 12 years of school in Wendell - graduating with the class of 1967. After two years of majoring in biology at the College of Idaho (now Albertson's), Sharon trained for a year at Denver General Hospital and earned a degree in cytotechnology. She worked for many years in the lab at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital (now MVMHC), as her health permitted. Sharon loved Hershey bars and Coca-Cola, animals and nature. "daydreaming" fills like pottery and preserving flowers, water coloring, writing poetry, photography, and music. She loved her family and was always there as a listener/friend. She had "spirit" and a great sense of humor. Sharon worked tirelessly on her spiritual development. She was a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Wendell, St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls and was an oblate of Ascension Priory near Jerome. She participated in the Ministerial Development Program for the Diocese of Boise in 1984-85. Sharon made her temporary profession as a contemplative nun in the Congregation of Jesus Crucified (Benedictine) at Regina Mundi Priory near Philadelphia in 1988 - becoming Sister Sharon-Marie.

She made her permanent vows there in 1988. Sister Sharon contributed in every way possible to her religious community. After suffering a stroke, she spent the last two years of her life at Camilla Hall, a rest home at Immaculata College in Pennsylvania.

Sister Sharon battled her nemesis, rheumatoid arthritis, for 40 years. She died of its ongoing complications on March 18, 2001. Sharon was truly worthy of saying with St. Paul - "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith."

Sister Sharon is survived by her mother, Jo Ann Gunning of Twin Falls; her twin brother, Mark Gunning of Pocatello, her sister, Terry Gunning of Twin Falls; her niece, Jenni Horne and daughters Alyiah and Nachele of Idaho Falls; and her nephew, Ross Gunning of Idaho Falls.

She was predeceased by her father, the same day and hour one week before.

Funeral services and burial were held in Pennsylvania on March 21, 2001.

"We will run and not grow weary, for our God will be our strength, and we will fly like the eagle."

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Monday, March 26, 2001, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., Burley, with Pastor Jerry Schneider officiating.

Friends may call at Rasmussen Funeral Home on Sunday, March 25, 2001, from 6-8 p.m. and on Monday, from 1-4:45 p.m.

The family suggests that memorials be directed to the American Diabetes or the American Heart Associations, in care of Rasmussen Funeral Home.

Abandonment bill wins approval

BOISE, Idaho (AP) - A bill aimed at helping desperate young mothers an alternative to abandoning their newborn babies won final legislative approval in the Idaho House on Friday.

The 67-0 vote sending the measure to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne for his signature came on the heels of a 33-0 Senate vote on the measure that was prompted by the deaths of two abandoned babies in Idaho Falls.

The bill essentially decriminalizes - although in a most complex way - abandonment during the first 30 days of life under certain conditions. It authorizes the leaving of newborns with healthcare professionals without consequence. The parent can volunteer information - name or infant's medical history - but the so-called safe haven is barred from soliciting any information. Advocates say anonymity is the key to convincing women to seek safe havens.

"I'd rather be trying to solve the problems of a live baby than be making criminal identification of a dead one," Democratic Rep. Bert Marley of Pocatello.

The Department of Health and Welfare would be required to "place an abandoned child as soon as possible." The agency would have 30 days to determine whether the child had been reported missing before petitioning for termination of all parental rights. Birth parents could reassert their claim to parental rights before the petition is granted.

House OKs the expansion of prison diversion

BOISE (AP) - Statewide expansion of Idaho's drug court experiment won unanimous approval from the state House on Friday in a vote that sent the legislation to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, who has championed the move.

Backers extolled the program's virtues and the improved drug court has made in the lives of offenders who have gone through it, helping them become productive, contributing citizens.

They also cited the relative bargain it provides taxpayers, costing far less than the alternative of incarceration in a county jail or state prison.

In fact, advocates maintain that diversion of first-time drug offenders from the prison system offers one of the best chances Idaho has to begin checking inmate growth that has already prompted construction of a new $50 million prison and has state officials fearful they will have to build another soon.

The bill carries a $1.5 million price tag to cover the manpower and substance abuse treatment needed to make the intensified judicial supervision of drug offenders work. About 525 offenders are expected to be diverted to drug courts in the first year.

BURLEY — Businesses can lose their regular customers if they take them for granted, Job Service consultant Chet Jeppesen told an audience Friday at the Small Business Expo at the Snake River Plaza.

It was one of three seminars aimed at helping small businesses succeed.

Jeppesen said satisfied customers account for 84 percent of all business sales.

"The purpose of a business is to create and to keep a customer," Jeppesen said. "The biggest mistake is taking for granted their regular customers."

Jeppesen said employers must also treat their employees well. Having the right attitude is vital if businesses want to retain a successful work force.

"Your attitude affects everyone," he said. "If the boss is in a good mood, what happens? The employees are in a good mood."

Everyone you come in contact with is affected by your attitude."

However, Jeppesen conceded that it isn't easy to please everyone all of the time.

Judge releases 16-year-old facing vehicular manslaughter charges

TWIN FALLS — A judge this week released a 16-year-old Twin Falls boy who faces two vehicular manslaughter charges to his parents and opened the boy's case to the public.

Magistrate Judge Thomas Borresen ordered Daniel Martinez not to drive and to have no social contact outside of his immediate family, school and work before releasing Martinez Friday morning to his parents.

Martinez was arrested on the vehicle manslaughter charges this week, and Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebis filed a motion to waive the case into adult court.

Martinez's next court date had not been set as of Friday.

Martinez was arraigned in Twin Falls juvenile court on the vehicle manslaughter charges this week, and Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebis filed a motion to waive the case into adult court.

Martinez's next court date had not been set as of Friday.

Senior center loses money, only computer in burglary

EDEN — A burglar or burglars late Wednesday broke into the Eden Senior Center, stealing about $600 in cash and checks and the center's only computer, the site manager said.

Ann Banta said that sometime between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday, the front doors to the center, located at 203 Wilson in Eden, were forced open.

Jerome County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Nance Strickland said on Friday the case was still under investigation, and no arrests had been made.

Banta said the center hopes to find somebody willing to donate a computer to replace the stolen one, which was worth about $925.

She also said the theft put a dent in the center's budget, because the stolen money was earmarked for payroll and other expenses.

"Like all senior centers, we are on a very, very tight budget. We just don't have a lot of extra money,"

Her dog will be one of 50 figures displayed this summer at a City Critics display in Chicago.

Artist Martine Drackett is undertaking a Labrador Dali, a take on surrealist Salvador Dali. Ketchum photographer Steve Snyder has dubs on Photo Lab. A Ketchum landscape artist plans to do a landscape.

And Stallard and Tischer have a hundred other ideas for themes, including Labadabadoo, Celabarity, Labrinadoro d'Vinici, Dental Lab, Labracadabra, Dear Labbie and Labotomy.

Money raised from the sale of the labs will go towards the Animal Shelter of the Wood River Valley, which Stallard founded about 30 years ago, and other charities such as Canine Companions, which trains dogs to assist people with visual, hearing and other impairments.

The public will get a chance to watch a lab being painted today, when Sun Valley artist Lisa Holley, best known for her "You Are What You Eat" animal series, paints a lab in the window of Sturevans.

And organizers are finishing plans for a "Running of the Labs" parade, scavenger hunts and other events.

"We thought it would be something fun to bring the community together," Stallard said. "Everybody's been so busy complaining about berms and the place on tickets. This is something whimsical that can make people laugh."

Stallard thinks the lab is a good fit in a valley where there are so many retrievers that newcomers are told they need to get one before they can be considered true members of the community.

After all, the Sun Valley resort sports doggie fountains along the hiking trail up Baldy. And famous people with local ties also have ties to labs: Ernest Hemingway hunted with black labs, and Averell Harriman, founder of the Sun Valley resort, introduced labs to the United States in the early 1900s for hunting purposes.

Stallard conceived the idea for Sun Valley's outdoor art display nearly two years ago at the urging of a niece who had seen the cows in Chicago.

The 300 cows that cropped up in Chicago pumped $200 million into the local economy, lured a million visitors to the city and raised $35 million for local charities. Since then, Cincinnati has chosen to honor its meat packing industry with pigs; New Orleans has reeled visitors in with fiberglass fish; Lexington, Ky., has put up horses; Buffalo, N.Y., has put up buffalo; Toronto, Canada, has been decorated with moose; and Los Angeles was adorned with angels.

The displays have boosted city economies, boosting individual businesses by as much as 20 percent.

"People who never thought much about art were talking about it in Chicago," Stallard said. "And the cows even lured people into art galleries who had always thought of galleries as stuffy before."

its. The role also made her something of a feminist icon before the feminist movement even began.

But it was Ms. Sothorn's human side that was lionized during her services at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church, where 100 mourners from her circle of local friends gathered and were reminded of the glamorous actress's career by two large-framed photos flanking the altar. The Rev. John Morgan spoke of her deep religious convictions and her generosity in buying and donating handsome, hand-carved wooden religious statues to the church, including the crucified Christ mounted high on the stonewall behind the altar.

With a twinkle and a smile, Father Morgan also said he suspected Ms. Sothorn's entrance into Heaven was as grand and theatrical as those known around Ketchum when she arrived to meet friends.

Standing at a podium and grasping the hand of her grieving mother, Tisha Sterling, Ms. Hogan told through tears how her grandmother was an guiding hand and model in her life, and a tender, consoling friend during times of stress—"my rock and anchor."

She was the producer of "The Whales of August," Michael Kaplan, who first saw Ms. Sothorn in a film when he was 10, recalled in his eulogy how, despite Ms. Sothorn's lofty star status, she'd pull up a chair and play poker with workmen on a set between film takes.

She was born Harriette Lake in Valley City, N.D., but changed her name to Sothorn after a famous English theater family. Her talent was obvious early on. While only 20 years old and playing a part in Florenz Ziegfeld's "All Smiles" on Broadway, she was let go when the star, Marilyn Miller, complained she was too much competition.

Twice divorced, Ms. Sothorn was among the Hollywood glitterati that discovered Sun Valley in the 1940s. She became a crack trapshooter and skier, and returned to live here permanently in the early 1980s after breaking her back when stage scenery collapsed on her in Florida. With great physical effort, she made "The Whales of August" despite obvious difficulty that producer Kaplan said revealed Ms. Sothorn's qualities of courage and spirit.

In Ketchum, she briefly owned a sewing shop and found a home from which she could see both Dollar Mountain and Mt. Bald, the area's two principle ski summits. But for the remainder of her life, Ms. Sothorn was essentially confined to a wheelchair, if not confined to her home. She still made regular luncheon dates, however.

The spectacular arrangement of roses and lilies on Ms. Sothorn's ivory-colored casket was arranged by her daughter, Ms. Sterling, a Ketchum florist. After the services, she was buried in the Ketchum Cemetery, not far from the grave of the cemetery's only other foreign celebrity, Ernest Hemingway.

ject. But later tests by the department and by the company's independent laboratory showed the material was in compliance, Burnside said.

Scott Malone, assistant district engineer in Shoshone, said he is comfortable with the test findings and confident that the project meets overall specifications.

"I reviewed that with Walter during the process," Malone said. "I reviewed this at the time. It's not a totally unusual situation."

Because of the varying results from the laboratories, Burnside said he looked at the averages and standard deviations of the lab results to determine whether the project met overall specifications.

Differences among test results can be caused by varying test samples, equipment calibration, human error and the different standards among laboratories, Burnside said.

Burnside has accepted the specific materials used in the project, but he will not sign off on the entire project until well after the project is complete, he said.

Evaluating the materials for acceptance involved ITD officials in the Rupert, Shoshone and Boise offices, Burnside said.

"I went to great lengths to make sure it's proper," Burnside said.

Should U.S. allow oil drilling in Alaskan refuge?

Yes

When we look at America's energy policy for the last eight years, it seems we have become a tightrope walker with vertigo. We are alone on the tightrope with the wind picking up. Our energy security is at risk.

Last year there was a 50 percent increase in the cost of gasoline and home heating oil, making us worry about the supply for this spring's driving season. Our growing reliance on natural gas to produce electricity has caused prices to quadruple, helping to trigger California's electricity crisis.

Republicans and Democrats in the U.S. Senate have introduced a rational energy policy that will encourage the production of environmentally friendly energy in America while promoting energy conservation and the development of alternative and renewable fuels.

The bill will help low-income families deal with the escalating cost of energy, so that America gains time to develop new energy sources for the 21st century, increasing both production and efficiency. The bill also will launch an informed debate over whether we should develop more of our own domestic energy.

Some have contended that oil exploration in a tiny sliver of the Arctic coastal plain will only yield a six-month supply of oil - and only at the cost of the destruction of a pristine wilderness. In reality, this assertion is at best misleading and, at worst, dangerous. According to the latest estimates of the U.S. Geological Survey, what is really at stake is 16 billion barrels of oil - an amount sufficient to replace all of our imports from Saudi Arabia for the next 30 years.

But just as important is the fact that this oil can be moved to consumers in the Lower 48 without harming the wildlife that inhabits the coastal plain only during the short Arctic summer.

Over 25 years of experience at nearby Prudhoe Bay has shown

It won't harm nature's treasures

SEN. FRANK MURKOWSKI

that energy production and the environment can successfully coexist.

At the time Prudhoe Bay was discovered, some claimed that oil development would destroy the Central Arctic Caribou herd. Today, that herd has more than tripled in size.

It is clear that we have created the technology that will develop the oil and protect the environment. The 19-million-acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge is the size of South Carolina.

In 1980, Congress declared 8 million acres of the refuge as strictly protected wilderness, and an additional 9.5 million acres as refuge lands. Mindful that the remaining 1.5 million acres represents North America's best hope of a super-giant oil discovery, Congress designated the coastal plain as a "special study area" that "could be opened to oil and gas leasing.

In the intervening years, a federal environmental impact study has shown that exploration can occur during the winter - when animals are not present and when absolutely no habitat disturbance would occur - to determine if any recoverable oil is even present.

In the event that a super-giant oil field is found, the oil can be developed using advanced directional drilling technology that would disturb less than 2,000 acres of the flat tundra.

In other words, we can determine if the oil is even there with no environmental impact. The sad fact is, at present, we aren't even allowed to look.

I believe the winds of change are blowing as Americans realize that we must straighten out our energy policies. We can balance

After less than eight weeks in office, President George W. Bush has declared he will reverse his campaign pledge to control emissions of carbon dioxide, the most

Ruin it for five months of gas?

JOHN PASSACANTANDO

protect your assets for the long term is to diversify your portfolio.

America has spent the past 25 years failing to apply this wisdom to our energy policy. Despite clear signs that continued dependence on oil, gas and coal are causing increasingly extreme and unpredictable weather patterns worldwide, not to mention disruptive price fluctuations and periodic wars in the Middle East, Bush has endorsed a policy destined to hurt many Americans.

Bush claims that drilling in the Arctic Refuge can solve the current California energy crisis. Keep in mind that California doesn't make its electricity with oil and only 1 percent of oil from Alaska finds its way into California's cars.

In short, Bush led. The U.S. Geological Survey estimates 2.6 billion barrels of oil is economically recoverable from below the Arctic Wildlife Refuge - enough to run our cars for five months, and it will take the oil boys eight years to get it down here anyway.

Bush and Vice President Cheney walked into this so-called crisis that has been manufactured by their former oilmen colleagues who have successfully lobbied and paid politicians to keep our offices, homes and cars from achieving high levels of energy efficiency like our competitors in Europe and Japan.

If we embraced efficiency and a clean energy future, the very notion of punching holes in the Arctic Refuge would seem preposterous. The administration has leaned on Alaska's Republican Sen. Frank Murkowski to champion its dirty energy agenda on Capitol Hill, which has met harsh examination in the Senate and has already spurred massive public opposition.

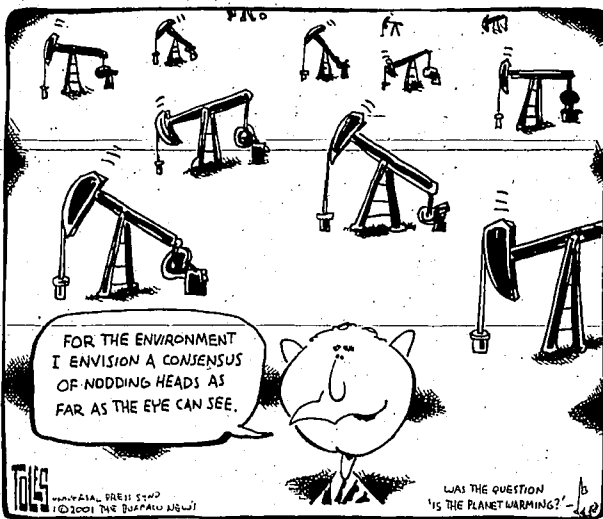

Furthermore, Bush has now backed off of granting a pledge to curb greenhouse gas emissions from coal-burning power plants. He has failed to realize that energy policy is global warming policy. He has failed to realize there is opportunity, both economic and political, in leading the country to a diverse energy plan that frees us from still more devastating oil exploration to power our economy.

But on the positive, these retrograde policies have sparked long-needed debate. I say let the carbon wars begin! The country's energy woes are begging for long-term, innovative, clean solutions like solar and wind power. Meanwhile, Bush is trying to answer with a page out of his failed oil company's playbook - keep drilling and never mind the global impact of burning fossil fuels.

Bush's broken campaign promise is sure to haunt him for his entire term and may be even more hazardous to his re-election than breaking the "No new taxes" pledge was to his father.

As for his oil promises to "lead our country into the 21st century, he is currently heading toward the early 19th century. Let's hope Bush turns it around before he proposes bringing back the Pony Express.

Read my lips, Mr. President - serving the oil companies instead of the Americans you are supposed to represent will be a short ticket back to Texas.

Santa makes a welcome visit

I am writing to let Simerly's and the people of Wendell know about a great person we have in our midst, Don Novak.

In October, Health and Welfare removed my youngest daughter's four children from her home, and we were unable to spend Christmas with them. We decided that we would have a second Christmas with them when they came home. I was talking to Don at Simerly's one day and told him how upset we were not to have the kids for Christmas and what we had planned. Don offered to be our Santa no matter when as soon as we got them home. Well, that happy day arrived on March 5, and on March 15, Santa came to see seven (my other three grandchildren were there) very excited kids. It was a very special time for us adults as it was the baby's first Christmas and his mommy got to see him sit on Santa's lap. It was a real joy to see the 4-year-old and her 7-year-old cousin's eyes light up and think Santa came all the way from the North Pole just to wish them a Merry Christmas!

So the next time you see Don in Simerly's or on the street, just take a minute to say hi and thank him for being such a great guy! A big thank you, Don, from our whole family!

Love of coffee is killing migratory birds

A spring announces its arrival. 63 million U.S. bird lovers will clean out their feeders and dust off their binoculars. Within a month's time, the jewels of spring - migratory songbirds - will arrive. But North American breeding bird surveys show songbird numbers in continuing decline.

Such beautiful birds as Baltimore orioles, western and scarlet tanagers, indigo buntings and blackburnian warblers winter in the tropical rainforests of the Caribbean and Latin America. But they have lost much of their habitat to deforestation.

Traditional coffee plantations, which cultivate shade-grown and organic varieties, are quickly becoming a songbird's best friend.

"There aren't many products which we consume daily that have an impact on the rainforest a thousand miles away. And coffee is that product," says David Griswold, president of Sustainable Harvest, a shade-grown organic coffee importer based in Northern California.

Until 20 years ago, almost all coffee in northern Latin America was grown under the canopy of the rainforest. It's a shade-loving plant, which naturally thrives in the understory of the tropical forest. But in the 1970s, large farms changed the way they grew coffee in order to produce higher yields and to protect against fungal disease.

As a result, hundreds of thousands of acres were clear cut, many of them with the help of funding from the U.S. Agency for International Development. In their place, a sun-grown variety was planted on large farms.

"We put in programs that taught people in Central and South America how to take out the forest," says Griswold. "And put in rows and rows of coffee plants that look more like the corn farms in Iowa."

And herein lies the problem for songbirds and coffee lovers.

After implementing these modern methods, clear-cut, sun-grown coffee did produce higher yields. But it required massive doses of fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides to keep the plants going.

Smithsonian's policy specialist Robert Rice has dubbed sun-grown coffee plantations the equivalent of "green deserts," since they are essentially barren of bird activity.

On traditional shade-grown plantations like those in Chiapas, Mexico, Smithsonian biologists recorded more than 150 songbird species. But on "technified" farms, where clear-cut coffee was planted, the numbers dropped by 90 percent.

Fortunately, the small family farm was not often included in the push to "technify." These farms, which often have fewer than 25 acres, are rich in biodiversity. Their canopies are lush with fruit and wood trees. They serve as shade to coffee and as home to birds, insects and plant life. And they produce alternative crops that small farmers depend on when coffee yields and market prices are low.

For the coffee-drinking consumer, organic and shade varieties mean a better-tasting cup. It's an arabica bean that thrives in the natural mulch of the rainforest canopy. It is aided by beneficial insects, not pesticides, and has minimal chemical fertilization. Not only does this produce a richer and more favorable brew, it reduces the farmer's risk of pesticide exposure, prevents pollutants from running off into the waters, and keeps songbirds singing.

Over the past decade, the specialty market for gourmet coffees has grown into a $7.5 billion industry, says Mike Ferguson, marketing communications director for the Specialty Coffee Association of America. He estimates that organic and shade-grown varieties make up 10 percent of that market.

And growth potential is limited only by consumer demand.

Embracing environment-friendly blends should be easy. Just knowing our morning ritual can help the planet, songbirds and small growers alike should perk up any coffee lover's day.

Dixie falls to Wabash

In Jucio semifinals

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Dixie State College’s dream of a national championship ended in a 76-73 loss to former No. 1 and once-beaten Illinois’ Wabash College Friday. The Rebels (34-2) play three-time juco national champion Indian Hills, Iowa (32-4) for third place today. Wabash faces Allegany, Md., who beat Indian Hills 75-66, for the title.
At the women’s national tournament in Salina, Kristen Saliby scored 16 points and hauled in 12 rebounds as No. 9 Utah Valley State College eliminated Southwest Tennessee 68-62 on Friday. The Wolverines will play for the consolation championship today against No. 11 Louisville, N.C. at noon. UVSC held a 51-31 advantage in rebounds and outscored the Saluigs 28-2 in bench points.

Twin Falls baseball team holds training camp

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School baseball team will conduct a two-day baseball camp Friday, 10-11 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday at Bruin Field.
Campers in grades 4-7 are eligible to attend with a cost of $30 per player. T-shirts will be provided.
For more information, call coach Matt Rasmussen at 735-5966.

Copus Cove hosts team roping today

BOUHL — Two team roping events will be held at Copus Cove Arena in Buhl today at noon. The competition includes a No. 8 with five incentive and a No. 6 with four incentive.

Michigan St. ends Zags’ run

The Associated Press

Michigan State is getting used to playing this deep in the NCAA tournament.

The Spartans, the defending national champions, are just a win away from their third straight trip to the Final Four.

Charlie Bell scored 21 points and led a stellar defensive effort by the Spartans, who ended another memorable tournament run by tiny Gonzaga with a 77-62 victory Friday night in the South Regional semifinals in Atlanta.

Michigan State will play Temple, which beat Penn State 82-74, in Sunday’s regional final. In the Midwest Regional in San Antonio, second-seeded Arizona beat Mississippi 66-56, and Illinois beat Kansas 80-64 in the late game.

NCAA tournament

“It’s been a long year and we’re just happy to be playing another game,” Bell said. “A lot of people didn’t think we could get this far, but we came into this season thinking we could win another national championship.”

Top-seeded Michigan State (27-4) was simply too big, too quick and too deep for No. 12 Gonzaga (26-7), which led 44-41 with just under 16 minutes remaining.

“Until somebody knocks them off, they’re the champions,” Gonzaga coach Mark Few said.

Michigan State turned up the defensive pressure and held Gonzaga without a field goal for 8:02.

“We made run after run at them,” Few said. “But they kept coming at us, coming at us, coming at us.”

Andre Hutson had 19 points and 10 rebounds, and Jason Richardson had 12 points and seven rebounds.

Gonzaga reached the round of 16 for the third straight season even though the Bulldogs are continually kept down by the NCAA selection committee.

Temple advanced to the regional final, led by 21 points from Lynn Greer and a defense that left Penn State looking helpless.

Canyon Springs Amateur kicks off season

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The biggest concern going into the Canyon Springs Amateur is never the level of competition.

Some of the best amateur golfers from Idaho, Utah and Oregon annually make the trek to the Canyon Springs Golf Course during the last week of March. And this year 31 golfers in the championship flight sport a handicap of 3.9 or below.

The real problem is the weather, and whether or not it will cooperate for two days.

“The weather is always a concern,” said Canyon Springs professional Del Ericson. “Right now the course looks great and the greens are good.”

Bobby Knight returns to coaching at Texas Tech

The Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Bob Knight is back in college basketball, ending a six-month exile to coach a Texas Tech team that hopes he can build a winner and control his temper.

After missing his first college season since 1963-64, the former Indiana coach signed a five-year, $1.25 million deal with Tech. With other incentives, the salary comes to about $400,000 annually, athletic director Gerald Myers said Friday.

Big 12 womens’ teams make a splash

League has best chance ever to turn heads at Final Four

The Associated Press

The Big 12 has been clamoring for attention in women’s basketball ever since it was formed in 1996. Now, the league has its best chance yet to get noticed — and to put a team in the Final Four for the first time.

Four Big 12 teams are still playing in the NCAA tournament, one in each regional. No other league, not even the mighty Southeastern Conference, will have more than two teams in today’s regional semifinals. Oklahoma, Texas Tech and Iowa State all advanced as No. 2 seeds. OIU in the West, Tech in the Midwest and Iowa State in the Midwest. Nothing surprising there. But to have the fourth Big 12 team be Missouri, now that’s something no one expected. The 10th-seeded Tigers are in the East Regional semifinals after upsetting second-seeded Georgia, one of the SEC’s heavyweights.

“I’ve told people in the last couple of weeks, I think we knew it was a really tough conference when we were playing in February,” Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. “We played about six ranked teams in a row in our six games. We knew we were in for a battle every night.”

The SEC, generally considered the top conference in women’s basketball, has just two teams left — top-seeded Tennessee in the Midwest and third-seeded Vanderbilt in the Midwest.

Duke and North Carolina State are still playing from the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Big East has Connecticut and Notre Dame, both No. 1 seeds.

“I hope that somebody can get to the Final Four,” Sharp said. “Until you get that done as a conference, you’re not looked at on the national level the way you want to be looked at.”

All four Big 12 teams face stiff challenges to get out of their regional, starting with Texas Tech. The Lady Raiders play third-seeded Purdue, which has two starters from its 1999 national championship team, in Birmingham, Ala. Tennessee, a six-time national champ, faces fourth-seeded Xavier in the other game at Birmingham.

Oklahoma, the regular-season Big 12 champ, has to get past sixth-seeded Washington in Spokane Wash. If the Sooners do that, they might have to play top-seeded Duke, which plays fifth-seeded Southwest Missouri State.

Iowa State, which won the conference tournament, will try to advance in Denver against a third-seeded Vanderbilt team that beat Tennessee in the SEC tournament. Missouri, the fifth-place finisher in the Big 12, plays third-seeded Louisiana Tech in Pittsburgh.

In the other games Saturday, Connecticut continues its quest for a second straight national title against North Carolina State in the East and Notre Dame plays fifth-seeded Utah in the West.

Knoblauch stays wild in new spot

The Associated Press

Playing his new position for the first time against major leaguers, Knoblauch backed up to the warning track and caught the ball without a problem Friday.

And then he threw to the wrong base.

"I'll learn from that," Knoblauch said.

Knoblauch plans to catch on quickly. He had only one play in six innings of the New York Yankees' 6-5 loss to Texas at Port Charlotte, Fla.

Cal Ripken, meanwhile, hopes to make his spring training debut today. The 40-year-old Baltimore star has been slowed by a fracture in his right rib cage.

The Seattle Mariners found out Jay Buhner will miss at least the first month of the season because of his strained left arm.

Hal Morris, however, decided he'd had enough and told the Cincinnati Reds that he was giving up his comeback attempt. Morris, 35, was a career .304 hitter for 14 seasons.

Knoblauch is hoping for the best in his career switch.

With runners at first and third, Rodriguez hit the sacrifice fly.

Knoblauch was supposed to throw the ball back into second base. Instead, he saw shortstop Luis Sojo way over on the left side spring to throw seven innings and Larry Walker hit a two-run homer. Rangers 6, Yankees 5. At Port Charlotte, Fla., Ivan Rodriguez hit two solo home runs and Doug Davis pitched five hitless innings for Texas. White Sox 7, Cubs (ss) 6

At Tucson, Ariz., David Wells gave up two solo homers to Ron Cramer.

Diamondbacks 6, Giants 4

At Scottsdale, Ariz., Luis Gonzalez's third double of the game drove in the go-ahead run in the top of the ninth inning.

Brewers 3, Mariners (ss) 1

At Phoenix, Richie Sexson hit his sixth home run of the spring and Jamey Wright allowed one run in six innings for Milwaukee.

Cardinals 8, Orioles 1

At Jupiter, Fla., Darryl Kile pitched six scoreless innings. St. Louis' opening-day starter held Baltimore to two hits.

Cubs (ss) 9, Mariners (ss) 8

At Peoria, Ariz., Ichiro Suzuki hit his second home run of the spring for Seattle.

Marlins 7, Tigers 2

At Lakeland, Fla., Alex Gonzalez, Cliff Floyd and Rich Berg homered for Florida.

Twins 8, Blue Jays 4

At Dunedin, Fla., Carlos Delgado hit a home run and a line drive off Minnesota pitcher Mark Redman's left-shoulder. Redman sustained a bruise.

Astros 10, Devil Rays 2

At Kissimmee, Fla., Craig Biggio twice was hit by pitches for Houston. Coming back from season-ending knee surgery, the Houston star has been plunked seven times this spring.

Athletics 12, Padres 1

At Phoenix, Johnny Damon singled, doubled and tripled and Jose Ortiz and Jason Giambi hit consecutive home runs for Oakland.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Johnson remains in coma after ski crash

WHITEFISH, Mont. — Bill Johnson, the boastful Olympic ski champion in 1984, is in a coma after crashing during a comeback attempt at age 40.

Johnson, trying to win a spot on the team for the 2002 Olympics, sustained severe head trauma Thursday during a downhill warmup to the U.S. Alpine nationals that opened Friday.

His condition was unchanged overnight, said Jim Oliverson, a spokesman at Kalispell Regional Hospital.

"He is stable, which is encouraging, but still critical," Oliverson said Friday.

Stars call up Utah rookie goalie

DALLAS — The Dallas Stars called up rookie Chad Alban from Utah of the International Hockey League to serve as their backup for Friday night's game against the New York Islanders.

No. 1 goalie Ed Belfour experienced stiffness in his back following the morning skate, and the coaching staff decided to rest Belfour as a precaution. Belfour is listed as day-to-day.

Alban, 24, a former star at Michigan State, is 3-4-3 in 10 games in the IHL this season.

Chmura cleared to sign contract, play in NFL

Mark Chmura, the former Green Bay Packers tight end acquitted on sexual assault charges, can sign an NFL contract and resume his career, commissioner Paul Tagliabue ruled Friday.

Tagliabue decided punishment wasn't warranted but said Chmura should be evaluated under the league's substance abuse policy.

The 32-year-old Chmura was found innocent last month of sexually assaulting a teenager at a post-prom party in April 2000.

Kelly beats the wind, takes lead at TPC

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Jerry Kelly is a former hockey player whose aggressive nature is not always a good fit for golf. He also is 6-foot-175 in his career on the PGA Tour, another reason he was an unlikely leader Friday in the Players Championship.

What he had in his favor was an early wake-up call.

Playing before the whipping wind began to terrorize the Stadium Course, Kelly kept the ball in play and finished with a 6-under 66, giving him a one-stroke lead over Paul Azinger heading into a weekend that should prove to be quite a test.

It was a case of a nuisance to Tiger Woods, who made double bogey for the second straight day by hitting into the water. This time it was an 8-iron on the island-green 17th, although he still managed a 69 in the morning and was six strokes back.

Azinger also got an early start and, while he was not nearly as crisp as he was in the opening round, avoided significant disasters and had a 70 to reach 136.

Hurst heads field at Nabisco Championship

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — A lot has changed in Pat Hurst's life since she first played what was then the Nabisco Dinah Shore as a 17-year-old amateur in 1987. She's gotten married, had a baby and found success on the LPGA Tour.

What hasn't changed is how much she feels at home on the Mission Hills Country Club course.

That showed again Friday when Hurst, playing a course that holds a special place in her career, shot an almost trouble-free 4-under 68 to take the mid-way lead in the Nabisco Championship.

Her 138 total gave her a one-shot lead over Karin Koch, who bogeyed the first hole and then played nearly flawless in shooting a 69. Four others were four shots back, including Annika Sorenstam, who shot a 59 last week and is trying to win her third straight tournament.

Schroeder edges ahead at Emerald Coast Classic

MILTON, Fla. — John Schroeder, winless in six seasons on the Senior PGA Tour, shot a 5-under-par 65 on Friday to take the first-round lead in the Emerald Coast Classic.

Mike Smith was a stroke back, and Gary Player, Bobby Watel, Mike McCullough and Andy North opened with 67s on The Moors course.

Squiggly, Wiggly Worms

Ever notice how you find worms in the yard after it rains? When you dig in the dirt you might run into them, too. But did you know they're good for more than fish bait?

They actually make the dirt good for growing healthy plants and food by increasing the amount of water and air that gets into soil. They break down leaves and grass so plants can use them, and they leave behind castings, which make a great fertilizer.

It's hard to tell one end from another when you see a worm. Even though they don't have a head like other animals, they have a head end, called the anterior. Their tail end is called the posterior. At the front end, the prostomium, a flap of skin, hangs over the worm's mouth to keep out stuff the worm doesn't like.

In between the ends, worms' bodies have a lot of rings called segments. A full-grown worm has 120 to 170 segments. Worms also have a band around their bodies called the clitellum. The clitellum helps form cocoons.

and baby worms hatch from the cocoons. Worms move with the help of their muscles. Circular muscles tighten to make their bodies long and thin, which moves the front end forward. Then long muscles squeeze together to move the rear end of the body toward the front end.

Even though worms have five hearts, they don't have lungs. Instead they breathe through their skin. In order for oxygen to get in though, their skin has to stay wet. But too much water can drown them.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Supervision series continues at CSI

TWIN FALLS - The Small Business Development Center at the College of Southern Idaho is offering another installment of its Basic Supervision series of workshops for area managers.

Basic Supervision IV includes the basics of budgeting. Participants will learn how to effectively inform, persuade and sell their ideas. They will also understand the importance of outstanding customer service, develop a business-ethics framework and determine the supervisor's role in continuous improvement, the college said.

CSI is encouraging students who have taken Levels I through III to complete the training with level IV. Cost is $350 for each level of the Basic Supervision series. That includes all instruction and program materials.

CSI instructor and financial aid director Colin Randolph will teach the course from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays from April 17 through May 8. Classes will be held in the Taylor building's room 276. Call the Small Business Development Center at 733-9554, Ext. 2450.

Wells Fargo will buy tax expert H.D. Vest

NEW YORK - Wells Fargo & Co., which has bank branches around the Magic Valley, said it will buy H.D. Vest Inc., a Texas-based financial services firm that delivers money management tools to tax professionals, for $127.5 million.

Wells will pay $21.03 per share of H.D. Vest common stock, a 200 percent premium to its closing price Thursday.

The relatively small acquisition for the nation's seventh-largest financial holding company is another move by the San Francisco-based company to build up its financial services client base.

Two weeks ago, it announced it was buying Accordia, the largest private insurance broker in the nation, as part of its goal to increase to 25 percent the amount of revenues generated from insurance, trust and brokerage businesses.

With 6,000 tax and financial advisers managing $16 billion in assets, H.D. Vest will add several Web-based products that Wells can leverage to its growing number of online customers. H.D. Vest will remain a separate unit within Wells Fargo.

Wal-Mart will construct Supercenter in N. Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE - Wal-Mart has confirmed plans to begin construction of a 220,000-square-foot Supercenter.

Spokeswoman Amy Hill said Wal-Mart - which has Magic Valley stores in Jerome and Burley - has approved plans to build a Coeur d'Alene Supercenter, which will be more than 40,000 square feet larger than the Post Falls store, which is under construction.

Hill said the Coeur d'Alene store will be one of the largest. She said it will employ close to 500 people when it opens in spring 2002.

The 184,000-square-foot store the company started in Post Falls this week will employ about 450 people and open at the beginning of next year. "We plan to start on the Coeur d'Alene store sometime this summer, and construction should take about nine months," she said.

Bank of America gets out of retail used-car business

ORLANDO, Fla. - Bank of America, the nation's largest bank, said it is shutting lots in New York, New Jersey and California, spokeswoman Jerri Franz said.

The lots sold former lease cars that had been financed by Bank of America. Franz said the bank had been pressured by car-dealer customers to stop competing with them.

The company lost money in the used-car business because it overestimated the residual value of the cars coming off of leases, Franz said. The company has changed its car-lease strategy, shifting to leases with terms longer than the two- and three-year leases it has been financing, she said. That means fewer low-mileage, late-model cars to sell at retail.

SUN VALLEY - This may come as a surprise not only to other Idaho cities but to the people of Twin Falls as well.

Twin Falls may have more international overnight visitors than any other city in the Gem State.

But the challenge, according to Karen Ballard, a tourism development specialist for the Idaho Department of Commerce, and Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, is to turn those overnight stays into longer sightseeing visits.

Right now, busloads of international visitors stop overnight in Twin Falls en route from Nevada to Yellowstone National Park, or en route from Yellowstone to Nevada and

MOTIVATION THROUGH ADVENTURE

The Associated Press

SEATTLE - Lisa Holliday is a tiny woman with big dreams. One of them has always been to climb Mount Rainier.

So, on a Saturday night, instead of going to a movie, Holliday - a 38-year-old Renton, Wash., resident who works for Alaska Airlines and sells Mary Kay cosmetics - took her first try on the walls at Seattle's Vertical World, an indoor climbing club.

Around her, her husband, Abbo, and a dozen other people - some experienced climbers - also roped up to prepare to scale the oddly shaped, rocklike knobs on the club's 35-foot walls.

But first they had to take a sheet of paper and write down the answers to two soul-searching questions: Why do I want to climb the wall? And, what do I have to achieve next in life?

The climbing event, and its little mental exercise, were the work of John Chen, a former software programmer who retired after nine years at Microsoft Corp. to start Playtime Inc.

The 2-year-old company takes people on real-life adventures such as climbing Mount Rainier or flying in Russian MIG fighter jets - both planned this year - to help break down the mental barriers that keep people from reaching goals. Think of it as a boot camp for radical personal and professional change.

It's an approach that the 33-year-old Chen, a "big kid" with a gentle demeanor and an utterly infectious laugh, is aiming at executives and business people such as Holliday, who wants to excel in her sales for Mary Kay Inc.

To help make that happen, Chen - who, like Holliday, has walked on her coals at the seminars of business self-help guru Tony Robbins - has created a climbing, skydiving and even parachuting off buildings has taken hold with high-tech executives in recent years.

The difference is that Chen bookends the adventure with a year of online counseling and conferences aimed at helping each person in the group meet a specific goal, be it professional or personal.

"It's about setting big, hairy goals. But it's also about what happens in between, what it takes to actually make it happen," Chen said. "Most of all, it's about how to enjoy the process, regardless of whether you summit or not."

Last August, on rope teams led by the experienced climbing guides of Rainier Mountaineering Inc., Chen took up his first group of 24 - several of them high-tech executives from companies such as Nokia, Sony and Sun Microsystems in California.

In a two-day ascent across glaciers and over seemingly bottomless crevasses, 12 people reached Rainier's 14,400-foot summit, nine went as far as Camp Muir at the 10,000-foot level and three turned back before then.

"It's a grueling trip that tries both physical and emotional stamina," said participant Bobby Ruiz, an investment banker in Dallas with J.P. Morgan.

"Anyone can run a marathon and you'll eventually get to the finish line," Ruiz said. "That is not the case with Mount Rainier. They woke us up at 1:15 in the morning, and we started at 2:45," he said of the ascent from Camp Muir. In order to climb safely, while the ice is cold and hard, Ruiz said, "there's a sense of urgency. There's no time to relax, no time to catch your breath."

"In the meantime, you're crossing crevasses and walking up almost vertical faces in the dark with a head lamp on, trying to keep your balance and your focus."

Firm plans pipeline expansion to help California

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY - The Williams Cos. plans to expand its Kern River pipeline, which runs through Utah, to provide more natural gas for generating plants in California.

Williams' gas pipeline unit in Salt Lake City said this week that it plans to construct nearly 700 miles of additional pipeline that will run parallel to its existing Kern River line.

Construction on the $1 billion project is expected to begin next year and is scheduled for completion in May 2003, said Kirk Morgan, director of business development for Kern River pipeline.

"Shippers are seeking more access to natural gas from the Rocky Mountain basin, where producers are aggressively stepping up production," Morgan said.

The new pipeline is expected to deliver about 900 million cubic feet of natural gas per day to markets in Utah, Nevada and California.

Most of the gas will be used for generating plants planned in California. If all of the pipeline's capacity were used to generate electricity, it could produce about 5,400 megawatts. "That is enough to light around 4.5 million homes," Morgan said.

The original Kern River line was completed in 1992. It enters Utah from Wyoming then crosses into the Salt Lake Valley near Bountiful.

"It turns south near the Salt Lake City International Airport then runs the length of the state before passing into southern Nevada and winding up near Bakersfield, Calif."

It currently transports 700 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. Williams - which also has the major natural gas transmission lines running through southern Idaho - recently filed an emergency application with federal regulators to install additional pumping stations on the Kern River line to increase its capacity by 135 million cubic feet per day. That $81 million pumping station project should be completed by July 1.

During the 2002 construction period, the Kern River project will employ between 1,500 and 1,800 people. The company estimates annual property taxes it pays to Utah counties will increase from $3.5 million to about $7 million.

Quarter will be one of the customers on the new pipeline, Morgan said.

The utility wants to supply additional gas to southern Utah cities, including St. George and Cedar City.

"Our own pipelines serving southern Utah are at full capacity so this is an opportunity to transport additional gas into those areas from company-owned supplies in Wyoming," said Questar Gas spokeswoman Audra Sorensen.

Micron to shed PC business

Firm will merge with Web hosting company

The Associated Press

NAMPA - Micron Electronics Inc. announced Friday that it is selling off its personal computer manufacturing components and merging with an Atlanta-based Web hosting company to focus its future on that niche in the high-technology sector.

The announcement came with release of the Idaho-based company's second-quarter earnings well below Wall Street expectations. The company reported a net loss of $168.9 million, or $1.75 per share of common stock for the quarter ending March 1, but that included the impact of shedding its PC Systems and SpecTek components. A year ago the company made $5.7 million, or six cents a share, in profits.

The loss on continuing operations was limited to $9.7 million, or 10 cents a share, compared with a loss of $3.8 million, or four cents per share, a year earlier.

The company reported net sales of $14.7 million during the quarter, more than double the $6.6 million for second quarter 2000.

Micron Electronics Chairman Joel Kocher said plans to sell off the two non-hosting businesses and merge with Interland Inc. have been under discussion for some time. There was no indication what impact the transactions will have on the company's 2,700 employees in southwestern Idaho.

"With the recent drastic downturn in the economy and the PC industry, we have decided to focus our resources exclusively on growth opportunities in the hosting business," Kocher said in a statement.

He said a nonbinding letter of intent has been signed to sell the personal computer business to a "large, private, technology-equity-investment firm." The potential amount of that transaction was not disclosed.

Under a previous agreement with Micron Technology Inc., which owns controlling interest in Micron Electronics, the assets of the subsidiary's SpekTek operation will be transferred April 6. Micron Electronics will net about $42 million in cash when that deal is completed.

Kocher said the merger will position Micron Electronics as a leading provider of business-class hosting solutions for small and medium enterprises. Total hosting revenues rose 16 percent in the second quarter to $10 million. It had over 138,000 paid hosted Web sites, 72,000 paid hosting accounts and 40,000 Internet access accounts.

Interland has more than 86,000 Web sites.

The merger must still be approved by shareholders in both companies and federal regulators. It is expected to close this summer.

The merged company will be headed by Kocher as chairman and chief executive officer, and Interland Chief Executive Ken Gavranovic will become vice chairman.

The two-day delay in releasing its earnings report also delayed release of Micron Technology earnings until next week. Analysts expect the big computer chip maker to report a penny-a-share loss.

Adventure

At the Vertical World event in February, Chen announced two new climbing trips for "Journey 200." The mountain uses for the Mount Rainier program.

At a cost of $3,495, the five-day trips - set for July and August - both include the therapy-like online sessions, two days of team-building exercises before the trip, and copies of "Breathwalk," a book on physical pacing by meditation expert Gurucharin Singh Khalsa, and "Slow Burn," a conditioning manual by fitness expert Stu Melman.

Middleman is also personally coordinating exercise programs for each participant.

In a coup for Chen, the August trip will be led by Peter Whittaker, co-owner of Rainier Mountaineering. The nephew of ### John Chen first started using climbing as a metaphor for success after he summited Mount Rainier on a climb for charity in 1997.

Jim Whittaker, the first American to scale Mount Everest back in 1963, Peter Whittaker has led expeditions all over the world, including nearly 200 climbs of Rainier.

The ascents are only part of what Chen has in mind. In October, through a Florida-based company called Incredible Adventures, he plans to take up to 12 people to Russia's Zhukovskiy Air Base. There, for a cost $30,000, pilots will take them up to try a hand on the joystick of an actual MIG-25 or MIG-29 that can fly at twice the speed of sound.

Chen envisions similar challenges as a metaphor for success after he summited Mount Rainier on a climb for charity in 1997. Close to the top, when he desperately wanted to pack it in, Chen said, he had an epiphany.

"At about 13,000 feet, I really started to struggle," he explained. "I thought how nice it would be to go back to the shack and have some hot chocolate - screw this summit thing. I don't need to go to the top."

"At that point, it occurred to me, oh, no, I'm 1,000 feet from the top. I'll do whatever it takes. So I finally got in the rhythm. Then I turned around a blind corner - and boom - I was at the summit. I was ready to do another 1,000 feet."

After the trip, Chen brought the experience to Microsoft as part of an experimental (and controversial) climbing program aimed at employee retention. Though it got mixed, the project made it possible for him to interview 125 people who were about to leave the company.

What he learned is that the bright-employees-at-Microsoft often run out of challenges to make it worth staying on. But finding a new challenge, he said, often requires an employee to move to a new group - something most managers work to thwart, regardless of the company.

Tourism

Mountain International, of Cheyenne, Wyo., founded in 1990 by Chuck Rasmussen, a former Wyoming state tourism official.

The four states contribute $166,000 each to RMI, which also receives money from private vacation operators, for a total budget of $2 million.

RMI is stepping its annual "Roundup" in Sun Valley at the Elkhorn Resort, where some 35 tour operators from France, the Benelux countries (Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg), Italy, Germany and the United Kingdom meet once one with more than 80 representatives of vacation spots in the four states over two days.

RMI rotates its annual meetings among the four states.

In typical 10-minute meetings with the Europeans, western resort operators provided pictures of facilities as well as spectacular scenery, prices and activities for guests and answered questions peculiar to needs of nationals from the different countries.

In one such session, for example, Hervé Durieux of France asked Lynn and Lana Tomlinson of the Silver Spur Ranch in Dubois whether a French group could reserve the entire ranch for its visit. The answer was yes. The Tomlinsons also gave vivid accounts of the horse drives in which guests take part. They projected photos of eye-popping Idaho mountain landscape to back up their sales pitch.

One of RMI's European office representatives, Olga Mazzoni of Rome, said Europeans have a fas-ination for the American West, largely because of U.S. movies and television. "And Hemingway, too," she said, alluding to the late author Ernest Hemingway, who was a longtime Idaho resident.

RMI president Bob, 42, said Europeans are a top market for western resorts. Germans, for example, spend as much as $5,000 each while in the West, not including airfare.

U.S. national parks and their grandeur are the major images that attract Europeans.

But the West isn't usually their first trip.

"Their third trip is to the Rocky Mountains, after California and Orlando," Box said.

Ballard, of the Idaho tourism office, said Idaho isn't as well known among Europeans as, for example, Jackson Hole, Wyo., and needs to intensify its marketing.

Sun Valley, she said, is the best-kept secret that needs to be exploited.

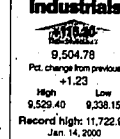

Average visitors to the West attracted by RMI's efforts are 30 to 60 years old, executives and professionals, singles and couples, interested in camping and enjoying recreational vehicles.

In its 1999-2000 annual report, RMI estimated that 271,323 international visitors came to Idaho during the year - third to Montana (462,000) and Wyoming (2.9 million). Figures weren't available for South Dakota.

For Idaho, the visitors spent $83 million and helped create jobs for 2,200 workers, according to the marketing report.

Dow extends Thursday rebound, gains 115 points

NEW YORK (AP) - Wall Street ended a horrific two weeks with a show of strength Friday, boosting the Dow Jones industrials by 115 points and extending Thursday's late rebound from a nearly 400-point drop. Technology stocks, now seen as some of the best buys in the market, led the advance.

But while the Dow's rise was encouraging, analysts said it was unlikely the stock market's slide had indeed hit bottom on Thursday.

"Let's not mistake this for a beginning of a bull market move," said Charles White, portfolio manager at Avatar Associates. "It's a Friday with no economic reports and little news in the marketplace. There's not too much to be made of what's going on today." The Dow rose 115.30 to close at 9,504.78, wiping out the remaining damage from Thursday's slide, which saw the average fall 380 points before finishing 97 points lower.

But the Dow remained quite wounded. Coming into the day, the index had lost 1,468.77, or 15.5 percent, over the prior 10 trading sessions, including its biggest-ever weekly point decline, the 821.21-point, or 7.7 percent, slide it suffered last week.

The measure of 30 blue-chip companies even slid to bear market during Thursday's selloff, reaching a 20 percent drop from the index's high of 11,722.98 on Jan. 14, 2000.

Is integrity relative?

The problem, when it came right down to it, was towels.

And sheets. And pillows. And telephones. The stuff just kept ... appearing.

Of course, there was no great mystery about where it was going. Mark knew perfectly well that his guests were taking it home. The problem was getting it back.

Mark had been in the hosting business for a long time. He studied hotel management in college, and worked his way through school at one of the city's finest hotels. He was accepted into a management training program with a prestigious hotel chain and began climbing the corporate ladder. After six years his company offered him the chance of a lifetime: an executive position, with the kind of fringe benefits you only see on "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

VALUESPEAK
Joseph Walker

It was a dream job, but it wasn't his dream. So he turned it down. His dream was finally realized when he was able to purchase a beautiful, well-kept motel near a busy tourist attraction. Running his own motel was all he hoped it would be — except for one thing. Experience had taught him that people sometimes take things that don't belong to them. But he didn't realize how personally it would affect him when the towels guests were taking were his towels.

"It was a slap in the face," he told me. "I mean, I did everything possible to see that my guests had a pleasant stay, and they rewarded me by stealing from me. I couldn't understand it."

Mark tried writing letters to gently ask guests to return motel property that may have "accidentally" found its way into a suitcase. But it was just an additional expense, with no return. The only time he ever went after someone legally was when a couple of young guys slipped a television into the back of their truck. Mark found himself taking such overblown delight in their arrest and subsequent conviction that he decided it was time for him to get out of the business.

"It got to the point where I didn't like people very much," he said. "It's kind of hard to be a good host when you consider your guests to be latter-day Huns and Visigoths."

He's been behind a desk in an unrelated business for a few years now, and he's had time to become more philosophical. Most people value honesty, he reasons, and they consider themselves to be honest. But for some reason, they don't think there's anything dishonest about taking towels from a motel or silverware from a restaurant or, as one news report indicated, bathrobes from an aircraft carrier upon which they are the President's guests.

"I guess they think it's OK," he said, "or else they think it's a little dishonesty that doesn't matter. But it does matter, and not just in terms of dollars and cents. The way I see it, there's no such thing as relative integrity. Either you're honest or you're not. It's as simple as that. If you're honest — really honest — it doesn't occur to you to take something that doesn't belong to you."

But aren't there degrees of dishonesty that have become sort of acceptable in our society? You know — like little white lies? Or switching a grape from the grocery store's produce department while shopping? Or fudging a little on a tax return? Or making a copy of a rented videotape?

"Sorry," Mark says, "but I don't see it that way. Unless everyone has to decide for themselves if they're going to allow circumstances to dictate the degree of their integrity. For me, that's too complicated. Maybe it's just the way my mind works, but I can't see the difference between snitching a grape and snitching a watermelon. So for me, it's just easier to keep my hands off stuff that doesn't belong to me."

Even if it means packing up after a trip without throwing in the towel.

WITH DOORS WIDE OPEN

Buhl Calvary Chapel finally becomes a reality

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Brent Huether said he felt God calling him to plant a Calvary Chapel in Buhl four years ago, but the timing wasn't right.

"I felt like I'd like to start something in Buhl, and the doors weren't open at the time," he said. "Even though my desire was there, the doors weren't open."

Huether said it's hard to describe how God called him, just that he felt a need to get the church started there.

"I think Buhl has a need for a church like this," he said. "This is different than any kind of church over there."

He now has the support of a large group of people who wanted a Calvary church in Buhl, he explained, and those people were willing to help make it happen: "People have just come alongside and said, 'Let us help — we'll do whatever it takes.' I've got a good group of people that are sharing the load. My wife and I couldn't have done it by ourselves."

With the available help, Huether rented what was once a pawn shop and converted it into a house of worship. He said the work involved some painting, putting in a couple of doors and building a stage.

The church, which holds a little less than 100 people, opened its doors Feb. 11. Huether said the congregation is already at capacity, so he's looking for a larger facility. The idea is to keep the newly remodeled building, too, and possibly use it for youth activities.

Huether said he helped Pastor Mike Kessler start the Twin Falls Calvary Chapel in 1978. The Twin Falls church moved to a new facility on Falls Avenue earlier this year.

"I could see a freshness, a willingness to learn about God, a wanting to follow what Jesus had for us," he said of his work with Calvary chapels. "It wasn't as structured or ceremonial as some of the other churches that I've gone to."

Growing up, Huether attended the Methodist church, but said he is not "that hung up with one group or another." He said he just wants to serve God. He explained that Calvary Chapel churches are non-denominational, but are a group of independent churches bound together by similar beliefs and teaching methods.

No fees are paid to a head church, Huether noted, comparing the arrangement to a co-op — with everyone serving God together.

Calvary Chapel churches have been cropping up all over. Huether said. (In 1999, a new one opened in the Wood River area.) He attributed this growth to the Word of God, with nothing added or taken away. In a Calvary Chapel, he said, the Bible is taught line by line, chapter by chapter, book by book.

"I can't skip what I don't like. I have to go through it; I have to teach on it," Huether said, "and that's the way the Word of God should be when it's taught, is right on through. We don't jump around."

Kessler said he belonged to a Calvary Chapel in Costa Mesa, Calif., and brought what he learned there to Twin Falls. Then, some of the people he influenced here went on to work for God in Idaho Falls, Hootello, Burley, Buhl and LaGrande, Ore.

Calvary Chapel has no membership lists.

"We don't keep track — it is a family and we know each other, and people within the church make friends within the church," Kessler said. "I believe God knows who belongs to him and he keeps track of them a lot better than any manmade organization ever could."

Internet becomes central to religious experience

By Matt Slagle
The Associated Press

GRAPEVINE, Texas — Bandwidth. Streaming media. Web portals. Terms once exclusive to money-hungry Internet startups now are entering a non-profit region of cyberspace: dot-com churches.

Many are offering more than just an e-mail address, including Fellowship Church in Grapevine. The 12,000-member church recently overhauled its Web site to take a Net-centric approach to spreading the Gospel, Senior Pastor Ed Young says.

"This is a great tool to bring them to our message in a not threatening environment," Young says. "If Jesus were in the flesh today I think he would say, 'Go online.'"

"Church leaders envision fellowshipchurch.com as a Web portal — a one-stop shop for stock quotes, news and sports updates, and Scripture. The site includes a virtual bookstore where patrons can purchase Bibles, videotapes and DVDs, and music in CD and MP3 formats. There's a library of digitized sermons delivered by Young that can be viewed for free from a home computer, as well as a classes and intramural sports. To market fellowshipchurch

.com, two building-sized, backlit metal signs were erected on the side of the church and adjacent administration office. The signs are in view of a nearby highway.

Preston Mitchell, the church's pastor of spiritual development, calls such high-profile advertising "Marketing 101," adding, "We think of dot-com as dot-community. Really, what the Internet does for us is it gives people the opportunity to check out the church in a safe environment."

Martin del Rey, Calif.-based Internet religion expert Mark Kellner says churches are taking a cue from businesses and aggressively defining their Net presence.

"Many churches are making the Internet part of their public image, including their Web site addresses as part of church signs, billboards and print ads, as well as television and radio programs," he said via e-mail.

Other churches have pushed even deeper into the virtual world.

Mark Mann, pastor and founder of Edmund, Okla.-based CyberChurch.com, has delivered the Gospel entirely via the Web since 1995. About 75 people subscribe to his church, and another 30 take classes on his Web site, he says.

Those '40 days' of Lent are difficult to count

By Susan Hogan/Albach
The Dallas Morning News

Christians know where Lent is headed. They, they pray, they repent. When it's over, they celebrate Easter. But when, exactly, does Lent end?

Roman Catholics say it ends just before the Holy Thursday service, what Protestants call Maundy Thursday. That's three days before Easter. Some Protestants, namely Lutherans, are coming around to that perspective, too.

But do the math. If Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and ends on Maundy Thursday, then the season doesn't last 40 days. It lasts either 38 days or 44 days, depending on whether you count Sundays (some traditions don't count Sundays because the more festive event of resurrection is being commemorated.)

But isn't Lent supposed to last 40 days? After all, one of the most popular hymns of the season begins "Lord, who throughout these 40 days for us did fast and pray"

"The number 40 is to be understood symbolically, not literally," said the Rev. Michael Driscoll, who teaches liturgical studies at the University of Notre Dame.

The idea that Lent had to be literally 40 days started with monks in the fifth and sixth centuries, who imitated the 40-day fast of Jesus in the desert, he said. Before that, the period before Easter was seen as a time of preparing adults for baptism. By the fifth century, infant baptism had become common so the church began to view Lent as a time of penitence. The liturgical reforms of Pope Pius XII in 1956 restored the baptismal connection to Easter, while keeping Lent's penitential character.

Most Christians are still taught that Lent mirrors the 40 days Jesus spent fasting and praying in the desert after his baptism. Just this month, on Ash Wednesday, the kickoff of Lent, Pope John Paul II spoke of the 40 years of Israel's pilgrimage in the desert and the 40 days of Moses' stay on Mount Sinai.

Most Protestants still say that Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and ends on the Saturday before Easter. That counts 40 days, if you subtract the Sundays. Catholics used to count it that way, too, until the reforms. Now, half of Holy Week — the week leading up to Easter — is in Lent, and the other half is outside of Lent. Some Catholic liturgy experts count the Sundays, others don't.

Former Wendell resident to autograph books today

—RELIGION LETTER— Churches fall under Utah liquor laws

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twenty years ago, Beverly King read about romance writer Janet Dailey making $2.8 million in three years and decided a writing career was for her. She may not have reached the $2.8 million mark, but she's having a lot of fun.

The former Wendell resident will be in Idaho today autographing her sixth book, "Picture Perfect."

She started out editing the school newspaper at Wendell High School and went on to sign up for writing classes and conferences. Eventually, she took second place in the Romance Writers of America Golden Heart Contest, with a book titled "Raven's Cry." The book is set in a Haida Indian village on Prince of Wales Island in Alaska, where King spent three years teaching school.

Harlequin Books is currently considering "Raven's Cry" for publication, King said, in a phone interview from her Salt Lake City home this week. Her romance novels are Christian-based, she said, adding that people have likened them to "Picture Perfect."

"Picture Perfect" is the story of the prodigal son. Set on a sheep ranch in the Salmon River area, the book's heroine is Jillian Taylor, a rich and famous model who has squandered her money and her looks and is forced to return to her home town.

The book is published by Covenant Communications Inc., a company that publishes Christian material. It's not owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, but it does publish lots of LDS books, King said.

King is now hard at work on a book about a woman who is a member of the "sandwich generation," with an aged grandmoth-

Quad to hold book signing

Beverly King will be autographing her new book, "Picture Perfect," from 2 to 3:30 p.m. today at Crowley's The Quad in the Magic Valley Mall. The book is also available at Bell's Family Books and at the Book Plaza in Burley, where King will be some time earlier today. The price of the book is $14.95.

er and her deceased sister's children to care for. Of course, King said, there is also a romance in there somewhere.

King, who is single, said she may live in Utah but she is rooted in Idaho. Her grandparents, the R.W. Kings, settled in Wendell in 1919. And her mother's family, the Dunns, were early-day ranchers at Three Creek. In the 1930s and early 1940s, King's father, Clair King, was sheriff of Gooding County.

Her mother was a writer and newspaper editor.

Joseph Smith would not have hidden polygamy

Joseph Smith did not write the revelation on polygamy, Brigham Young claimed Smith dictated it to William Clayton, a secretary. Brigham claimed Emma Smith burned it. Joseph Smith received a "revelation on marriage" called "The Document of 1843." We know this because it was given to the Standing High Council on July 12, 1843. It was never printed; the original is not extant, so it's not known what its contents were.

Emma declared there was no revelation that taught polygamy or spiritual wifery. Emma must have been correct; the Utah Mormon authorities took the original (document of 1843), or a copy of it, to Salt Lake and later destroyed it. We know this because Heber J. Richards, secretary in the church council (Utah), said he came into possession of this document and they destroyed it. Why? It did not teach polygamy nor celestial marriage; if it had taught either one, it would have been the most highly prized document in Utah today.

Now, did Joseph Smith ever hide anything? History tells us if he received such a revelation, he would have brought it forth. Think about how much he was persecuted through his lifetime; would he really hide polygamy?

No.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) —

The state's liquor control board may be tough on bars and restaurants that bend Utah's alcohol rules, but goes easy on churches, according to a copy-right story in The Salt Lake Tribune.

Churches that use wine in their services are required to get a sacramental-wine license from the Utah Alcoholic Beverage Control Department. But the state has issued only about 30 of the $50 annual permits — a small percentage of the churches that use wine in services statewide.

"I don't think anybody is out there going after the churches," says Tom Zdanick, state compliance officer.

Attorney Brian M. Barnard, who has fought the state over alcohol regulations, said that's in part because churches have always been given some leeway, even when they allow minors a sip of wine during communion.

"That follows their religious beliefs and the state of Utah would really trip over the First Amendment if it started prohibiting that kind of stuff, with or without a permit," he said.

Only a handful of the other 17 states that regulate alcohol sales require churches to get a permit for sacramental wine.

Anti-Catholicism report fails to distinguish between silly, serious

By Ken Garfield
The Charlotte Observer

Having just read the Catholic League's "2000 Report on Anti-Catholicism," I have this sudden urge to tell you the one about three priests who arrive at St. Peter's Gate and one says to the other:

"Before someone gives me a rimshot, let's stop right there. We shouldn't goggle over the hundreds of potshots taken last year against our Roman Catholic friends and institutions. We should rise up in anger at the offensive things aimed at a blessed religion."

But then I turn the page and there's the one about comedian Ray Romano making noises in church on "Everybody Loves Raymond." I smile — and think we ought to reconsider what to take seriously and what to laugh at.

Every religion and ethnic group needs a watchdog like the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights in New York.

Commentary

Whether it's vandals tearing up 73 crosses in Maryland or prison officials confiscating rosary beads from inmates in Massachusetts, the Catholic League stands on guard against prejudice, hatred and stereotypes.

But included among the very serious offenses is a reference to an N.C. bakery called Immaculate Consumption. And a New Jersey party store that sold priest and nun costumes for Halloween. And a joke that singer Engelbert Humperdinck told during his show at the Westbury Music Fair in Westbury, N.Y.

That's the problem with the 55-page report. There's not enough distinguishing between the serious and the slapstick. When we're finished reading about Cher, Marilyn Manson and the Manhattan nightclub that offered free admission to women wearing their old Catholic school uniforms, we don't know whether to howl in protest or in laughter.

League president William Donohue addresses the issue of overkill: "Some will say that we are overly sensitive and should pare back in our criticisms. Fair enough. My only retort is to ask whether the same advice is given to other groups in society that compile evidence of bigotry aimed at their group."

As someone who lost relatives in the Holocaust, I embrace Donohue and everyone else devoted to fighting evil. We can't have enough soldiers in this army. I just think we need to pinpoint the enemy so we know exactly who to wage war against.

My response: The Anti-Defamation League's report of anti-Semitic acts is due out this month. I want them to report on swastikas painted on synagogues. I don't want them wasting their time on comedians who tell Jewish mother-in-law jokes.

Billboards take aim at stopping gossip

By Oshrat Carmel
The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA — The message, splashed on a couple of billboards across town, teases the curious and torments the meddlesome.

"Tom is such a..." the billboards read, with the last word smudged to the point of being illegible. Rabbi Yakov Covenhoven hopes you never hear what Tom really is. And if you do, he hopes you don't tell anybody. In fact, he hopes you never hear, or tell, another bit of gossip again.

"The rabbi is serious — 'tens of thousands of dollars' serious. He has enlisted the help of Madison Avenue to launch a campaign to stop petty prattle, hold the line on hearsay and make water-cooler calumny as publicly unacceptable as cigarette smoke."

In effect, he is trying to turn the Philadelphia region into one huge gossip-free zone.

That might require some hefty divine intervention. Still, his outreach group, Aish HaTorah Philadelphia, has spent those thousands of dollars on a crusade that has reached as high as two billboards along the region's major highways.

Rabbi Chaim Feld, of the Cleveland branch of Aish HaTorah said, "The idea is to create this social movement where gossip and negative speech is not acceptable."

It's a pretty quixotic concept, however, in an Internet society in which gossip — national or local, celebrity or political — is easily passed.

Some examples: A newspaper in Westchester County, N.Y., is encouraging residents to share inside information — no proof necessary, of course — about Bill and Hillary. The grand gossip net is $500.

And in December, an explicit e-mail sent by Claire Swire to a male friend meant to around the world within hours, telling all who read it about the intimate encounter the London couple had shared the night before. The friend, Bradley Chait, passed her e-mail to his friends, and his friends passed it on to theirs. When her indiscretions made international headlines, Swire was so embarrassed that she went into hiding.

Quakers' beliefs center on God, inner light

By Art Jester
Lexington Herald-Leader

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The singing of four standard hymns ends, and Maryretha Morelock clasps her hands and bows her head. It has begun.

The silence. Lots of silence. Other than a baby's cooing, it is quiet. Some worshippers bow their heads. Others gaze in meditation.

It is the Sunday service of the Lexington Friends Meeting, better known as the Quakers.

For 15 minutes, no one speaks. A child fidgets. A mother leaves with her restless child. A father does likewise. There is a cough. Then Morelock, who as co-clerk shares the meeting's top appointed office, is the first who feels the Holy Spirit leading her to rise to speak: "Dear God, we do thank thee for the light of those who have lived. May we use that light to direct our paths."

It will be seven more minutes until another of the 25 or so congregants feels called upon by the Spirit to speak.

This is a quiet and waiting for the "Inner Light," a practice foreign to many other faiths whose worship is filled with speech and song — is at the heart of the Quaker experience.

Morelock, a Quaker since the 1950s, explains it this way: "Some Quakers would say they are seeking to know Jesus. Some Quakers do not have a creed and, historically, have not wanted clergy. There are 92,000 Quakers in the United States and more than 280,000 worldwide.

Quakers also shun the use of symbols and ornamentation, such as the crucifix and icons. They are known for their belief in simplicity, for their practice of non-violence and opposition to war, and their deep commitment to social justice.

But Quakers are not pacifists, as often assumed.

"If you look at Quakers in the 20th century, about half of all the Quaker young men fought in World War II," says member Richard Mitchell.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Do you wish people to believe good of you? Don't speak."

— Pascal

"Well bid and well played," effused an elated North. "They will make four spades unless I score a club ruff."

Not satisfied with North's compliment, South added a modest and misplaced self-reproach. "I could have won the trump finesse," he said.

South won his spade ace and led a diamond toward dummy, preparing for a minor-suit cross-ruff. West won his ace and led another spade, ruffed by South. Leaving the trump king at large, South led a trump to dummy's ace, crossed to his club ace, and began his crossruff in clubs and diamonds. In dummy, his fifth club ruff in South's hand was established, and he lost only a diamond and the trump king for a sensational result.

What about South's comment regarding the trump finesse? South would have retained more respect had he not spoken, accepting North's compliment in silence.

Since South's main aim was to ruff three clubs, he could afford a trump loss when trumps were 2-1. Therefore a trump finesse would be an irrational move, losing the game if East held K-x. Had East held K-x, a trump return would have eliminated one vital club ruff for a disastrous result. With only two club ruffs available in dummy, South could have lost a diamond, a trump and a club for one down.
