TF County seeks cash from state

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Twin Falls County's struggle to pay for increasing law enforcement and criminal case work load became a main topic at a gathering of elected officials and business leaders Thursday.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce members, after endorsing Twin Falls County leaders' desire for some of the state's $330 million projected surplus in to the county's coffers before this winter's legislative session, expressed their disappointment on the lack of action on the issue.

"It seems a shame the fight at the Legislature this year was over the surplus and the county has nothing," said Dennis Maughan, a member of Chamber's Legislative Committee.

The committee held an early breakfast meeting Thursday to discuss the successes and failures of the session.

Local lawmakers were present to hear an analysis of the session by Brent Olmstead, lobbyist and vice president for natural resources for the Idaho Association of Business and Industry. IACI is one of the state's most influential lobby groups.

Maughan, a former Twin Falls County commissioner, and current Commissioner Gary Grindstaff told the group that the Twin Falls area's crime rate and increasing financial pressure on the county's judicial system are on a crash course.

The sheriff's department is cutting corners as much as is feasible – and losing employees because of lower salaries – while the prosecutor's office is unable to fill vacancies because of an inability to offer competitive salaries, Grindstaff said.

Pile on a full county jail, which requires inmates be held in other counties' cells at considerably higher cost, and area crime rates that lead the state in some categories, and Grindstaff said the Governor pursues aid for children

Kempthorne counters Legislature's decision to limit assistance

By Bob Fick
The Associated Press

BOISE – With children as the top priority of his administration, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne promised on Thursday that his administration would continue promoting subsidized health care for children from working poor families.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne

The administration is still evaluating the provision of the $1.1 billion health and welfare budget that essentially prohibits advertising the Children's Health Insurance Program or nearly every other service offered by the Health and Welfare Department.

But, the governor said, "There will still be possibilities for outreach."

Following a National Guard awards ceremony in his office, Kempthorne emphasized that the prohibition imposed by the nation's most Republican Legislature was only a statement of intent and not an actual state law.

Kempthorne, who took office pledging himself to "The Generation of the Child," said he also expected key lawmakers to moderate the stark declaration of the budget prohibition in a subsequent letter.

Senate Finance Chairman Dean Cameron of Rupert, a lukewarm supporter of the prohibition, said that letter will not be furnished until Health and Welfare Director Karl Kurtz provides his assess-

Increasingly, meth hits home, experts say

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY – With at least 90 percent of illegal methamphetamine labs now being discovered in homes or motel rooms, owners of property where meth is brewed are increasingly liable for criminal and civil actions.

That was one of many points covered Thursday during the second day of a three-day workshop for some 100 law enforcement, environmental and social services personnel from Idaho, six other states and the District of Columbia involved in dealing with the growing scourge of meth labs.

Environmental laws can be used in civil and criminal actions against owners of property where meth labs have polluted the land, said Kate Kelly, administrator of the air quality division of Idaho's Department of Environmental Quality.

Meth, as workshop participants have been repeatedly reminded this week, is a witch's brew of easily obtained chemicals and household ingredients with devastating health and physical effects.

And therein lie several of the biggest obstacles in he war on meth.

Kelly said that cleaning up the contaminated residue from a meth lab after a police raid is costly. In Idaho, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration has provided $500,000 a year for hazardous waste removal, but with the increase in the number of labs and contamination, costs will spiral upward, she said.

Another issue, according to Tom Turco, director of environmental health for the Boise-based Central District Health Department, is a lack of standards based on what he calls "defensible, sound science."

What is the nature of the risk, he asked, the duration of the risk, the probability of harm and the severity of the harm of contaminants found at a meth lab scene?

Turco said that investigators also suspect that chemicals used in cleaning up meth lab contamination might generate other toxic reactions with adverse effects.

And once the nation's health community develops what may be standards for determining contamination, meth brewers might well begin using different ingredients that evade detection.

Turco cited the alleged effects of secondary tobacco smoke on humans. Scientists have yet to definitely establish the harmful effects of second-hand smoke

With crew home, Bush rakes Beijing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Navy crew members returning Thursday from 11 days of detention disputed China's account of the collision that brought down their surveillance plane, saying a Chinese pilot was at fault. President Bush said "tough questions" would be put to China at an inquiry next week.

His tone stern, Bush said at the White House, "The kind of incident we have just been through does not advance a constructive relationship between our countries."

With clearly different emotions, Bush also spoke by telephone to Lt. Shane Osborn, the mission commander. The rest of the crew listened to the conversation on a speakerphone.

"Y'all there?" Bush asked.

"We're all here, sir. Thank you for getting us here," Osborn replied.

"Welcome home. We appreciate you. You did your duty. You represent the best of America," Bush said. "As an old

American families: More traditional, more complex

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – The nuclear family of yesteryear – mom and dad living with each other and their biological children – may not be as endangered as it sometimes seems. The percentage of children living in these traditional families rose during the early 1990s.

At the same time, other families became increasingly complex, with more stepparents, grandparents and adoptive parents raising children, the Census Bureau says in a report being released today.

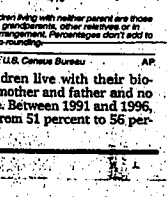
It is the second report on the living arrangements of children, and updates findings from a 1991 study to data from 1996.

The report, based on a survey of 37,000 households, both rejects and builds upon common perceptions of increasingly fractured families. "It's not entirely a clear picture," said the Census Bureau's Jason Fields, the report's author.

Most unexpected may be the rise in the portion of children living in "nuclear families" – where the children live with their biological mother and father and no one else. Between 1991 and 1996, it rose from 51 percent to 56 percent.

Traditional nuclear families rebound

The proportion of children living in traditional nuclear families — with their biological parents and all of their brothers and sisters — increased from 51 percent in 1991 to 56 percent in 1996. Here are the living arrangements of the 71.5 million children in the United States in 1996.



Note: Children living with neither parent are those living with grandparents, other relatives or in another arrangement. Percentages don't add to 100 due to rounding.

F-102 pilot, let me tell you, Shane, you did a heckuva job bringing that aircraft down. You made your country proud."

Through most of the protracted negotiations that freed the crew but not their aircraft, Bush had approached Beijing with diplomatic care, insisting the surveillance was legal but also approving expressions of sorrow the Chinese pilot was lost and the American plane did not seek approval for its emergency landing after the April 1 collision.

But after crew members told debriefers they were on a "fixed course" and had not swerved into the Chinese jet fighter, as Beijing contended, Bush stood in the Rose Garden and let loose. He castigated not only the detention of the 21 men and three women, but also China's record on human rights, religious freedom and stability in the Asia-Pacific region.

"The United States and China will no doubt again face difficult issues and fundamental disagreements. We disagree on important, basic issues," he said.

Referring to a scheduled joint meeting next Wednesday on the collision, the disposition of the Navy plane and related issues, Bush said: "I will ask our United States representative to ask the tough questions about China's recent practice of challenging United States aircraft operating legally in international airspace."

Reconnaissance flights, he said, "are a part of a comprehensive national security strategy that helps maintain peace and stability in our world."

The state has diverted $658,000 from its federal welfare block grant for television and other advertising promoting the health care program through June. Private organizations have also financed advertising.

But when the prohibition kicks in on July 1, some analysts have suggested that the only the state will do is place brochures in some locations statewide.

State lawmakers imposed the restriction on every department program – except the one urging parents to immunize their children – to reduce the state expense for subsidized health care and other services by doing as little as possible to make those eligible aware that the programs exist.

The move was prompted by the success of the Children's Health Insurance Program. Not only has participation by working poor children tripled in two years to 10,000 but the promotional effort has identified four times as many poor children who are eligible, but were not receiving, basic Medicaid services.

The result, however, was a skyrocketing Medicaid budget that increased from $533 million in 1998-1999 to more than $800 million for next 2001-2002 year.

Critics called the prohibition shortsighted, warning taxpayers will just pick up a bigger bill later when children have to be treated for emergencies because of inadequate preventive care.

county is in a crisis

"The money just isn't there," Grindstaff said.

In an attempt to get a little relief, county officials from throughout Idaho tried to get the state to pick up the tab for magistrate judges' law clerks this session. The measure went nowhere with the Legislature.

But key lawmakers at the meeting said that larger solutions than state money may be needed to fix the county's woes.

"I go to a lot of county meetings around the state and this is the one that screams the most," House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley said.

A close inspection of management policies by an outside expert might uncover the inefficiencies, Newcomb said pointedly.

Rep. Celia Gould, R-Buhl, chairwoman of the House Judiciary and Rules Committee, said having the state pay for the counties' shortfall is simply a stop-gap. An overhaul of the entire system is what's needed.

"That's going to take statewide support," Gould said.

Gould also said a balanced approach to law enforcement, prosecution and incarceration is needed.

"If you're putting more money on the front end, you have to be ready for the results on the back end," Gould said.

For example, more arrests by deputies lead to more court cases for prosecutors. More cases mean more prisoners in cells, Gould said.

Here's a rundown of a few other issues discussed by the group:

Dairies

Kent Just, executive director of the Chamber, praised the local delegation for work on passing legislation to help regulated the region's dairy industry.

The Chamber endorsed regulation of the industry last fall, hoping to quell negative effects on business and industry recruitment and tourism in the area.

"I'll tell you we got some heat," Just said. "We almost got in some fist fights with a few dairy people."

On Wednesday, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne signed four measures passed by lawmakers this winter. The bills were mainly directed at odor created by the concentration of large-scale dairies in the western Magic Valley.

The energy crisis

House Speaker Newcomb, told the group that he believes the looming energy crisis could be the single biggest threat to the region's economy.

"This becomes the straw that breaks the camel's back in agriculture," Newcomb said.

Higher energy costs eventually lead to higher production costs in everything.

Technology

Despite advances for technology awareness this session, Just said getting the state to develop a technology strategy will likely be the Chamber's top priority again next session.

"It didn't get the priority it needed, but it certainly got more than it did the year before," Just told the group.

Ken Edmunds, chairman of the Chamber's Legislative Committee, said the state must separate technology from telecommunications in its collective mind to really make progress.

"Technology is a philosophical issue, not a fiscal issue," Edmunds said.

with standards that are "sound science."

But Maj. R. Dan Charboneau of the Idaho State Police seemed unmoved by the lack of legal and scientific standards.

Charboneau, an undercover officer, donned a special multilayered suit of protective fabric – a "flash" suit – to protect the wearer from being burned or contaminated and to demonstrate how officers must dress when entering a dwelling used for brewing meth.

The suit and oxygen mask are absolutely necessary to protect officers from deadly fumes and chemicals when they raid meth labs, he said.

Officers need a break after 15 minutes in the confining attire, and their work becomes even more difficult if they also must enter a meth home with bullet-proof vest, a heavy weapon and other gear used in a raid, Charboneau said.

The conference's final sessions today will focus on problems facing police in their roles as investigators and arresting officers in the war on meth, and on a session about children's welfare.

The conference is being co-sponsored by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Idaho district, the Association of Idaho Counties, the DEA and the state of Idaho.

CORRECTIONS

An article Thursday incorrectly stated the amount of scholarship aid available at the College of Southern Idaho on a yearly basis through the new Idaho Promise Scholarship Program.

Students who qualify for the scholarship can receive up to $1,000 a year in scholarship money because of CSI's decision to match the state scholarship program.

A church-service listing in Thursday's paper gave the wrong times for Immanuel Lutheran Church of Twin Falls' Easter Sunday services. A contemporary worship service is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. and the traditional worship at 10:30.

Gun deaths drop dramatically in '90s

ATLANTA (AP) – Gun deaths in the United States dropped more than 25 percent during the mid-1990s to the lowest level since 1966, the government said Thursday.

Analysts at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention credited stricter sentencing in some areas, new laws that make it more difficult for criminals to get guns, the waning crack trade and low unemployment because of the booming economy.

The CDC reported 30,708 gun-related deaths – 11.4 per 100,000 people – in 1998, the latest year for which statistics are available. The rate is down 26 percent from 1993, when there were 15.4 deaths per 100,000 people.

Gun-related injuries fell by nearly half during the same five-year period, dropping to 64,484 in 1998, or 23.9 per 100,000 people.

Guns remain the second leading cause of injury-related deaths in the United States, trailing only auto accidents.

The drop during the 1990s coincides with a fall in homicides to levels not seen in three decades. The new figures, however, show that gun injuries declined across all three categories of intent – assault, accidental and intentional self-infliction.

The National Rifle Association said the lower death rates are evidence that gun-safety programs are reaching Americans and that gun laws are working.

"This is obviously good news," said Patricia Gregory, an NRA spokeswoman. "There are tens of thousands of firearms laws on the books. Strict enforcement of existing law could reduce these numbers even further."

Gun-control advocates called for tighter restrictions on firearm sales and more money for law enforcement.

"When we have 30,000 deaths a year, that's too many," said Soledad Roybal, a spokeswoman for the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence. "There need to be real, comprehensive laws, not just laws that are there as a show."

Of particular concern, the CDC said, is the striking rate of gun suicides among elderly men – an average of 27.7 per 100,000 people during the five-year period. The rate was just 1.8 per 100,000 for women over age 65.

Gun deaths at a low point

Gun-related deaths and injuries declined substantially from 1993 to 1998, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. There were 30,708 gun-related deaths and 64,484 gun-related injuries in 1998, the latest year for which statistics are available. Most firearm-related deaths were suicides.

Ex-charity exec gets prison term

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) – A former American Cancer Society executive was sentenced to 13.5 years in prison Thursday for stealing nearly $8 million from the charity's Ohio chapter.

"I had six years of exemplary service with the American Cancer Society, all of which has been thrown away by the bad decisions I have made," Daniel Wiant said in federal court. "Because of what I did, I threw my life away."

Wiant, 36, pleaded guilty in August to bank fraud, money laundering, mail fraud and illegal use of a credit card in thefts that began in 1997.

"In the very real sense, he stole the hopes of the donors," said U.S. District Judge Edmund Sargus Jr. "Fortunately, the American Cancer Society is stronger than any one person and the research will go on."

Appliance standards toughen

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Bush administration on Thursday approved efficiency standards requiring new washing machines and water heaters to use less energy.

The standards, proposed in the waning days of the Clinton presidency, will require new washing machines to use 35 percent less energy starting with the 2007 model year and water heaters to use 5 percent to 9 percent less energy beginning in 2006.

The Energy Department estimates the cost of the improvements will add an average $240 to the price of a new washing machine.

Manufacturers said the standards would make the low-end models that most consumers buy too expensive even though lower energy bills over time would more than offset the higher prices.

"We reviewed the regulations as directed by the White House and we found that the benefits to consumers, to the environment and to energy efficiency are pretty clear-cut," said Energy Department spokesman Joe Davis. "Therefore, we're going to move forward as written."

President Bush, upon taking office in January, ordered a review of all proposed regulations and standards issued in the last months of the Clinton administration.

Davis said officials still were reviewing proposed new efficiency standards for new home central air conditioners and heat pumps.

Bush administration decides to implement medical privacy rules

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Bush administration said Thursday that it would immediately implement sweeping rules giving patients their first federal right to guard health records.

President Bush said he decided to let the rules crafted by the Clinton administration take effect, although he directed a change giving parents the right to see their children's records.

"I believe that we must protect both vital health care services and the right of every American to have confidence that his or her personal medical records will remain private," Bush said in a statement.

The rules, issued in the final weeks of the Clinton administration, will take effect in two years. They require doctors, hospitals and other health care providers to get permission before disclosing personal patient information. Patients will have the right to inspect and request corrections to their medical records. And the rules create the first federal fines and prison time for those who improperly disclose medical information.

Tommy Thompson, the secretary of health and human services, put the rules on hold soon after taking office, prompting a flurry of lobbying and more than 24,000 written comments. On Thursday, he said the Bush administration will modify the regulations by issuing guidelines and making changes that are allowed within the first year. These modifications, however, do not appear to change its core elements.

Thompson said the department will make it clear that doctors can share medical information with specialists treating the same patients and pharmacists can fill prescriptions over the phone.

The most substantive change detailed Thursday would give parents the right to information about their children's health, including records on abortion. Disagreement over this issue was one of only a few disputes that prevented the Senate from acting on medical privacy, forcing HHS to take over the issue.

Under the Clinton rule, doctors and hospitals would decide whether to disclose a minor's health information unless state law directed otherwise.

The rules have been attacked by hospitals, insurance companies, drug manufacturers and others as too complicated and expensive to implement and health care industry groups had hoped that the Bush administration would make significant changes before implementing them.

Bush budget charts a new course for ship of state

George W. Bush was elected for many reasons, not the least of which was to rein in spending. He's starting to deliver now, a fact for which America should be grateful.

Bush's $1.96 trillion budget is 4 percent larger than last year's – basically keeping pace with inflation. More significantly, it contains thousands of items that distinguish him from his free-spending predecessor.

Typical of these changes is a Justice Department program for putting more police officers on the streets. Bush's budget request for the Community Oriented Policing Services – yes, the acronym is COPS – grant program contains no money for hiring new officers. That's down from about $228 million previously budgeted for hiring new officers or sending desk-bound ones back onto the streets.

"It's a classic example of when Washington says we're going to fund something for one or two or three years, it's funded forever," says White House spokesman Ari Fleischer. "Programs never go away in Washington, and that's one of the reasons the government is so big."

Though he's trying to slim the COPS program down by 17 percent, Bush isn't turning his back on law and order. He just wants to spend a smaller amount of money more intelligently.

Toward that end, Bush is asking Congress for $180 million to put 1,500 officers in America's schools. That's a big change, because $70 million currently is being spent on 640 school officers.

The upshot is that some community policing programs are declining while others expand.

Now take a step back and look at Bush's budget as a whole. It is filled with thousands of such changes in priorities, like an enormous school of fish changing direction at the same instant.

George W. Bush is not spending more. He's spending smarter. American taxpayers should cheer him on.

Regardless of what his critics claim, Bush isn't a slash-and-burn cheapskate. His budget seeks to boost federal spending on education by 11.5 percent next year – hardly the stuff of Ebenezer Scrooge.

Overall, Bush is spending a bit more. At the same time, he's spending a lot smarter. American taxpayers should cheer him on, because the way our president spends our money is a reflection of our values as a nation.

America's conservative heartland has been waiting too long for a Republican president and a Republican Congress. Bush is plowing fertile soil these days, and everyone will reap the harvest.

Bush would boost domestic spending

CAL THOMAS

During the presidential campaign, George W. Bush said that only in Washington would a reduction in the rate of spending increases be considered a "cut." Now, as president, he is experiencing for himself the stupidity of Washington-think.

The proposed Bush budget for fiscal 2002 would spend a record $1.96 trillion, a 5.6 percent increase over current levels. Conservative estimates of the budget surplus over the next 10 years total $5.64 trillion. Yet, liberals – mostly Democrats but some Republicans – are screaming about "cuts" and the disaster they predict will result if the Bush budget is passed. There is the predictable cry about benefits for "the rich" from the usual congressional Democrats. Their alarm bells ring hollow but they show the problem that big and ever-growing government, fed by career politicians, has become.

Instead of concentrating on spending, we should be examining results. Has our money been well spent, producing the advertised benefits? If not, why are we spending more every year? If members of Congress would act like responsible citizens and exercise fiscal restraint – limiting government growth to the 4 percent Bush has called for – it would (along with tax cuts) provide far more revenue for government and for existing businesses to expand and new ones to start.

The problem is in the tax code, which continues to punish risk-taking and hard work. A healthy and growing economy will produce all of the tax revenue that government needs (not wants, which is another matter). As for our paltry (compared to most other nations) national debt of just over $3 trillion, that figure will continue to decline on its own so long as the economy grows.

Some facts from the National Taxpayers Union (NTU) highlight the budget politics.

According to the NTU's John Berthoud and Jeff Dircksen, non-defense discretionary spending in the Bush budget will actually be 60.8 percent higher (or 25.3 percent after adjusting for inflation) than in fiscal year 1992. Measured against the first Reagan budget, this is a 42.8 percent increase. And, to show how much government spending has grown, the NTU figures show a 99 percent spending increase in real terms over the 1972 budget. The Bush figures still keep spending at record high levels. No entitlement program is cut. Some pork is slashed, which is a major reason some congresspersons are howling like stuck pigs. Most of the budget reflects a slowdown in the spending increases. There is no "gutting" of federal agencies, yet alarmists will again raise the specter of no Social Security checks for retirees, laid-off police and closed libraries. The lie worked before, so why not try it again?

A visit to the NTU Web page recalls that then-House Speaker Tip O'Neill (D-MA) countered the 1981 $1.2 trillion Reagan tax cut proposal over five years with an annual $237.4 billion tax reduction plan of his own. How could the O'Neill plan have been considered responsible by Democrats then and a Bush tax cut proposal of $160 billion over 10 years is irresponsible now?

In 1981, the federal budget was "only" $678 billion. Since 1989 (when Ronald Reagan left office), the federal government's domestic outlays, adjusted for inflation, have grown by an enormous 0 percent per year, according to an analysis by The Heritage Foundation. Domestic spending expanded at a faster rate under President George H.W. Bush than it did under other recent presidents, including such "big spenders" as Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter. Heritage labeled the first President Bush as "the biggest champion of new domestic spending since Franklin Roosevelt."

The current President Bush is right to begin to ease up on the accelerator. Critics say Bush is not only putting on the brakes but also throwing government into reverse. This is a lie, but people who get their news solely from televisionare likely to believe it if liberals in the media and in Congress keep repeating it.

The facts are available on the NTU and Heritage Foundation Web pages if people will take a few minutes to read them and respond accordingly to their elected leaders.

It is said that we get the government we deserve. If we do, shouldn't we be getting what we pay for instead of throwing our money away? Tax time is the best time to consider the answers to these questions.

Treatment, funding must accompany AIDS prevention programs

JOSEPH DOLMAN

I was having lunch alone beneath the winter sun at a crowded snack bar last July in Durban, South Africa. The seat next to me was open, and an affable woman with a tray full of food politely asked if she could sit down.

Big mistake on her part.

She was Dr. Banu Khan, head of the AIDS coordinating agency in Botswana, the country with the worst HIV infection rate in the world.

Our location was the 13th International Conference on AIDS – and if Khan wanted a quiet repast in the middle of a frantic day, she didn't get one.

Every journalist in Durban knew the story. In 1998, according to UNAIDS, roughly 25 percent of Botswana's population between 15 and 49 years old had contracted the AIDS virus. By 2000, that proportion had metastasized into an astonishing 36 percent. Life expectancy was in free fall and Botswana was zooming backward on the human development index – a tool that lets economists chart such matters as wealth and literacy.

As Khan answered, my heart began to sink.

She cited all the usual stuff. Botswana was doing HIV counseling and condom distribution and broader education programs, she said. It was making a strong pitch for the female condom (not what you would call a popular apparatus in most of the world). It was trying to counter the stigma attached to HIV and it was waging war against secondary infections such as tuberculosis.

Botswana's a goner, I thought.

I know. This is an apostasy and it might turn out to be an exaggeration. As we have always heard, prevention programs have helped bring HIV infection rates down in nations such as Uganda and Senegal and Thailand. They have also worked among certain populations in the United States and Europe. Common sense says safe sex and a sound HIV education are the first lines of defense against a disease that could claim up to 80 million lives by 2011. And let the record show: Thanks to its diamond mines, Botswana is better off financially than most African nations, which means some folks have access to drug therapy.

Still, to my pessimistic turn of mind, the good doctor's rosy recitation of public-health programs that day rang hollow with desperation. She talked prevention because she had little else to discuss.

But guess what? That was nine months ago, and today, I'm pleased to tell you, it's a different universe. The World Health Organization is now meeting with international pharmaceutical companies to find ways to offer cheap, life-prolonging drugs to nations that need them.

Sen. Bill Frist, R-Tenn., is making a laudable push to double Washington's ante for global AIDS programs. He's shooting for $1 billion over the next two years. Meanwhile, Harvard economist Jeffrey Sachs and Dr. Bruce Walker have cooked up a plan for a $3.3 billion global trust fund, backed by the world's rich nations, that would initially offer HIV treatment to some 3 million Africans a year.

Suddenly, we're out of Fantasyland and into something real. Well, almost. Treatment only prolongs lives; it doesn't save them. And, yes, treatment in many African countries will require a stronger medical infrastructure – something UNAIDS and WHO and local governments may need to build from the ground up. But the plans – if they happen – will make human lives more productive. They will make human suffering subside. And, for the first time, they will give high-risk Africans a reason to get tested and to care for their health.

Yet one other weird problem remains.

Microsoft potentate Bill Gates and several other foundation heads held a conference call with journalists last week to whine about the focus on treatment. They are worried that all the huzzahs over the emerging availability of cheap drugs will squeeze out their prevention messages.

"We feel that is pretty uninformed on the part of the (Bill and Melinda) Gates Foundation," said Paul Davis of ACT-UP Philadelphia. "You reach a plateau with posters and radio advertisements."

I'll see Paul Davis and raise him one. The news conference was just plain stupid – little more than an old-fashioned turf fight. I'm told that more than a few foundation staffers agree.

The fact is: AIDS prevention is essential, and so is treatment. Without help, 26 million Africans, most of them black, stand to die untreated.

Gates can howl all he wants, but prevention does nothing for the millions of Africans who didn't get the message. It does nothing to relieve current suffering. Gates isn't the only show in town.

I'd like to have lunch with Khan again some time. I'll bet she'd have a whole lot more to say.

OPINION

DAVID PESCI

The Bush administration's so-called resolution (uh, can we have our plane back, too?) of this mini-hostage crisis with China was not only unnecessarily cloying, it was a total cave-in. Yes, the United States should have said it was sorry, several times. However, after hearing the text of the letter, I think President Bush and Secretary of State Colin Powell could have done better.

Dear Mr. Minister,

Hi!

Let us express our deepest regrets as they apply to this situation:

We're sorry your military fighter slammed into our unarmed spy plane when our plane was flying in international air space.

We're sorry this happened after your Mach 2.2 fighter buzzed within five feet of our turboprop, three times. We're sorry our pilot didn't take his chances and ditch the plane in the Pacific instead of landing the "most sensitive weapon in our spy arsenal" in your very unfriendly country.

We're sorry the investment of American business keeps your country afloat economically.

We're sorry you still torture and execute innocent people in your country every day.

We're sorry you censor your news and ban most books, music, movies, art and thought. We're sorry we won't be supporting your sorry Beijing Olympic bid.

We're sorry that any degree of equality, opportunity or freedom occurs in your country about as often as pandas mate in captivity.

We're sorry Jackie Chan likes L.A. a whole lot better ever since you guys took back Hong Kong.

We're sorry that we'll be broadcasting Ricky Martin, LeAnn Rimes and the Backstreet Boys 24-7 on radio-free-China from now until your pathetic despotic regime crumbles under the weight of Levis, Starbucks, Krispy Kremes, Nikes, Julia Roberts movies and Keanu Reeves DVDs.

We're sorry but we need you to give us our plane back now or we'll be returning you to least-favored nation status and directing all U.S. business investing in your country to pull up stakes and move everything to Vietnam. We're sorry, but what in the above don't you understand?

Thanks.

Have a nice day!

Postage keeps going up

There have been a number of paper and TV news mentions lately suggesting that the U.S. Postal Service is finding it necessary to raise the rate for first-class postage again. A month after the last increase, which occurred Jan. 7, they came out with a statement that they were again facing large losses and, by way of warning, that they were considering another rate increase. At the same time, they are now considering also curtailing Saturday mail delivery.

We have been told numerous times about the various things that have been incorporated with in the organization to upgrade the computer systems, automate the sorting process and make more constructive use of the employees, all-in-all increasing the efficiency of the service. With more efficient use of the employees, how come there are four counters in the post office but never more than one clerk to handle the line of patrons? And don't lose sight of the fact that with all these improvements and better use of the employees, they are claiming they are still losing money.

Then considering losses and financial problems, we come across the story about the previous postmaster general who retired after six years in the office. The Board of Governors of this agency had a going-away party for this guy consisting of cake and punch costing $120,300. Then the dinner costing $75,385. More: the invitations and embossed programs priced at $21,113, and another $5,000 for a video of this guy's career. The money to cover this event came from the U.S. Postal Service cash register.

I wonder why the price of a stamp should not be increased 5 cents or even 10 cents more. We must consider that there will be other retirements and the costs of these type of celebrations have increased considerably. Or perhaps we should all go to the computer or get one to send our mail by e-mail express instead of snail-mail express (if there is one).

Buhl parents should know

This is to let the parents of the Buhl School District know how the principals have lied to the sheriff to get rid of a great program and have caused job loss and a lot of hurt feelings. These are the people of the POSSE program (parents, officers = safe school environment).

I think you owe us a personal apology. These volunteers and myself have put in endless hours at these schools to try and make them safer for our children. Our principals have written letters to the sheriff filled with lies, and he has chosen to believe them. Besides myself, there are five other volunteers who work the schools, go to the games and anywhere else the kids hang out.

One of the volunteers has lunch in the elementary cafeteria on a weekly basis and patrols the school grounds when she can. Myself and another volunteer are at the school on a daily basis; she is there up to five time a day. I sit at the pool and watch the kids when they smoke in front of the kindergarten kids, or the kids that make out by the buses. Where are the principals while this is going on?

We're there to see this; the teachers that are on bus duty don't do anything about it. When we're at the schools with our IDs on, the teachers and faculty won't give us the time of day, but when we're there without them, they treat us just fine. Why do you think they do that?

How about April 3 at 12:10 when the city officers were busting kids for smoking by the ag shop. Another volunteer and myself watched this go down. We saw our school resource officer a total of twice at the school this past week. Where were the principals and resource officer while the city was doing their job? We're not around so we wouldn't know this. If the high school had to put a stop to all the kids who come back to school after lunch high or drunk, the consequences would be devastating.

What all this amounts to is the Buhl schools have never accepted our program. Congratulations, you have succeeded in getting rid of us.

I would like to thank all the volunteers for doing a wonderful job.

I don't think we should teach our children to respect these kind of people, do you?

AROUND THE VALLEY

Deadline arrives to file candidacy

TWIN FALLS – More than one-third of the 108 school board members who make policy in Magic and Wood River valley school districts are up for re-election this year.

Incumbents and their challengers have until 5 p.m. today to file their candidacy declarations for the May 15 elections. A judge ruled in August that Idaho's 1994 voter-approved term limits initiative does not apply for city and county officials and school board members. That means school board incumbents who already have served for six years can run again while the term-limits case is wrapped up in appeals.

Call your local school district office for more information about running for office.

Hailey woman gets one to five years in prison

HAILEY – A Hailey woman was sentenced to serve one to five years in state prison for stealing $57,935 from the Hailey Cemetery Maintenance District. She also was ordered by Fifth District Judge James May to pay $42,935 restitution.

Donna Rae Murphy, 64, pleaded guilty to two counts of grand theft and two counts of forged checks. She is believed to have embezzled the money between October 1998 and July 2000 while serving as secretary of the Cemetery Maintenance District where she had been employed since 1993.

Ed department hosts legislative workshop

TWIN FALLS – The Idaho Department of Education will be in town Monday for its annual post-legislative tour to review new education laws.

The department also will host public school finance workshops for school administrators.

8:10 to 9 a.m. – Property tax and school finance with Alan Dornfest, Idaho Tax Commission.

Noon to 1:30 p.m. – Lunch break.

1:30 to 3:30 p.m. – Overview of new education laws with Bob Haley and Bob West of the Education Department; public school finance interactive sessions with department staff; and professional technical education funding, academies, and performance measures with Dan Peterson, Division of Professional Technical Education.

Jerome rec district offers free childbirth classes

Donna Young of Young's Wen Zhong, a certified natural health counselor, is offering a free class on natural childbirth with instruction on diet, exercise and how to avoid common pregnancy and childbirth complications.

The class will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Jerome Recreation Center, 2032 S. Lincoln. Those interested may call 324-3389.

Blaine County makes summer guide available

HAILEY – The Blaine County Recreation District's Spring and Summer program guide is now available.

The guide has information about the Aquatic's Center schedule, the Summer Youth Program and more. The guide is available at the District office on Main Street in Hailey and at local businesses.

Hansen to form committee

Randy Hansen

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Former Idaho Rep. Randy Hansen will form an election committee to explore the possibilities of returning to the Statehouse by 2003.

However, the former one-term House member won't say outright that he'll run against Sharon Block, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's likely appointee to a vacant legislative District 23 seat, when the seat's Republican primary rolls around in the summer of 2002.

"I will form a committee though," Hansen said.

Hansen was passed over last week by District 21's central committee members to be one of three nominees for the seat left vacant by the death of George Swan.

Block, the committee's top choice to replace Swan in the House, was surprised by the news of Hansen's possible candidacy.

"Everyone has a right to run," Block said. "I would still plan to run."

Joining Block on the nominee list sent to Kempthorne were Dave Roper, a Kimberly rancher and pig farmer, and Gale Kleinkopf, a former Twin Falls mayor.

Although Roper and Kleinkopf were included on the list, Kempthorne seldom makes appointments contrary to the local committee's top choice – making Block the favorite for appointment.

Kempthorne is expected to make a selection soon. Whoever he chooses will serve the remaining year left on Swan's unfinished term.

Hansen and former five-term House member Ron Black had also put their names in for consideration, but were passed up by the committee.

Hansen's absence on the list surprised many local politics watchers. His energy and popularity with his former colleagues in the House led many to lobby the committee on his behalf, but without results.

Business reasons, personal concerns and an appointment as bishop of his Latter-day Saints ward in Twin Falls forced Hansen stepped aside as an incumbent candidate for the seat just over a year ago. Local Republicans were left in a lurch to find a candidate before the primary elections a month later.

Some of the committee members said Hansen's withdrawal from last year's race kept them from supporting him last week.

"Why didn't I support Randy? Primarily because he had the job and threw it away," said Marilyn

IT'S GONE DOWNHILL

KAREN BOSSICK/The Times-News

Ski journalist Luanne Pfeiffer, who has a second home in Sun Valley, dressed like her heroine Gretchen Fraser right down to the red, white and blue ribbons wrapped around her pigtails as she and other members of the International Skiing History Association got a sneak preview of these early Swiss ski outfits in Ketchum's expanded Ski and Heritage Museum.

Sun Valley takes a rueful look at the history of skiing

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY – Just as its high-country winter melts away, Sun Valley – already known for its ski history – has gotten more steeped in ski lore.

During the past week, you could have ridden up the chairlift with the man who turned America on to stretch ski pants despite protests that they were "too indecent." You could have rubbed shoulders in the Ram Restaurant with the fella who invented the first rope tow. And you could have said "Hi" to the "father of extreme skiing" in the lobby of the River Run Lodge.

To learn more ...

Corporate head Mason Beekley, a skiing enthusiast for 67 of his 74 years, founded the International Skiing History Association to preserve the heritage of skiing. Beekley has 2,500 books on skiing, including the first book published in 1924, in his the Ski Aerie library at his home in Hartford, Conn. He also owns 600 vintage posters, thousands of periodicals and hundreds of original oil paintings that reflect skiing in some way.

The ski association he founded contributes to the wordage. It publishes four journals a year chronicling skiing.

For more information, contact the International Skiing History Association at 499 Town Hill Road, New Hartford, Conn. 06057.

These and about 80 other folks who share an intimate knowledge of skiing's legends flocked to the nation's first destination ski resort this past week for the 10th annual gathering of the International Skiing History Association.

Luanne Pfeiffer donned pigtails, stretch ski pants and a red Bogner jacket cinched at the waist in an attempt to resemble America's first alpine gold medallist Gretchen Fraser, a Wood River Valley resident whom Pfeiffer wrote about in the book "Gretchen's Gold."

In this high-tech age, it's interesting to note that Fraser raced in the first Olympics timed electronically rather than by stopwatch, Pfeiffer noted. As a matter of fact, Fraser had to wait 20 minutes to start her race because of glitches in the timing system.

To further illustrate how far we've come, Pfeiffer was assigned to cover the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif., by her Southern California editors because none of the other reporters wanted to get out in the cold.

Then, she noted, the media were confined to two small wooden trailers. Compare that to the 2002 Winter Olympics in

Harassment lawsuit against Petro 2, former manager moves to court

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A lawsuit filed by eight former employees of a Jerome County truck stop has moved to federal court, but the man at the center of the case said he's confident the allegations against him won't hold up during trial.

"When it all shakes out, I'm very comfortable that I'll be able to get on with my life," said Joseph Kirchner, the former on-site manager of the Petro 2 truck stop near the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84.

Eight women who used to work with Kirchner as their supervisor claim he physically, emotionally or sexually harassed them at work and elsewhere, according to court documents.

The Texas-based Petro, Inc. last year sold its share of the truck stop to the Flying J Corp., and Kirchner no longer works there.

The women who filed the lawsuit last year in 5th District Court include Twin Falls residents Diana Engmark and Lisa Krear, as well as Margaret Madson, Gayle Bolish, Heidi Craythorn, Linda Mills, Lisa Burton and Venetta Spencer of Jerome.

The suit also names as defendants Crossroads of Idaho Inc., which had holdings in the truck stop – Petro Inc. and Kirchner's wife, Patti Kirchner.

The women's attorney, Cynthia Woolley of Hailey, said the defendants requested that the case be moved to federal court because it involved allegations that federal regulations – such as the Americans with Disabilities Act – had been violated.

Report says Suits may have avoided charge if he had confessed

Burley doctor violates probation

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY – A doctor convicted last year of methamphetamine possession could have spared himself possible jail time if he had confessed last weekend to violating his probation and cooperated with officers, his probation officer said.

Dr. Charles Suits' probation officer, Rich Neu, told Suits that if he was up-front about drinking alcohol in the lounge of a Burley restaurant and was cooperative with police, an arrest would be unlikely, according to a probation violation report obtained Thursday by The Times-News.

Suits was charged early Saturday morning with being in the bar section of George K's restaurant and drinking alcohol, both of which violate the terms of his probation.

Dr. Charles Suits

Suits declined to comment Thursday on the allegations set out the report. He has previously denied drinking any alcohol. He has admitted to sitting in the bar area, but only because the main dining room was closed.

Whether a probationer is charged or merely slapped with a warning depends on a number of factors, said Lynn Guyer, the district manager for the Division of Probation and Parole of the Idaho Department of Correction. In Suits' case, his unwillingness to be forthcoming and cooperate

New law gives PUC authority to study utilities' books up close

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Among the legislation Gov. Dirk Kempthorne signed this week was a bill that gives Idaho utility regulators authority to look a little closer at the books of regulated utilities.

The signing marks the end of an effort that began two years ago when the Public Utilities Commission expressed concerns to the legislative committee on deregulation, said state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who helped push the bill through the Legislature.

The PUC noted at the time that some regulated utilities were unwilling to submit to voluntary audits of their unregulated affiliates. Rather than challenge them in court, the commission went to the Legislature to get its authority clarified, Noh said.

Idaho Power Co. supported the bill, but other utilities raised questions that led to amendments limiting the extent of the audits to dealings that involved the regulated and unregulated parts of the utilities.

The bill passed with strong support in both House and Senate this year.

Noh expects it will give ratepayers more confidence that utilities are not "cooking the books," to hide profits or pass on costs incurred by unregulated affiliates to customers in the form of higher rates.

In the face of Idaho Power Co.'s $227 million rate increase request, some critics questioned the relationship between the regulated portion of Idaho Power and its unregulated affiliates, suggesting that the affiliates profited from recent high wholesale market rates for electricity.

Several skeptics recently have questioned what happens when the unregulated power marketing subsidiary buys cheap power – does it sell it to Idaho Power at prices regulated by PUC or sell on the open market and reap a larger profit?

That's one of the things the PUC checks when auditing a utility's books in considering a rate increase request, PUC staff engineer Keith Hessing said.

Because Idaho Power is a regulated utility, the PUC allows the company to recover prudently incurred costs in higher rates to customers. If the projected costs of providing the power are higher than the normal cost, the power cost adjustment allows Idaho Power to recover 90 percent of the increase.

That's the case with the proposed rate increase – high wholesale power rates and low water levels for generating cheap hydro power have combined to put Idaho Power in the hole, Hessing said.

But how the request is resolved is yet to be decided.

Meanwhile, the new law would not be in force until after PUC has to make a decision on Idaho Power's current rate-hike request, PUC spokesman Gene Fadness said.

But it gives the commission more muscle to look at the books of unregulated affiliates, and Idaho Power is likely to go along with the audits as it has in the past.

Gooding school mulls schedule change

By Aimee Metcalf
Times-News correspondent

GOODING – Parents, students and teachers filled the Gooding Middle School library Tuesday to talk about changing from the current block schedule to a seven-period schedule.

The School Board tabled a decision until January and will form a committee of parents, students and staff members to research the two schedules.

Board Chairman Fineas Hughbanks said the middle and high schools share teachers and aides and it's important they have the same seven-period schedule. District officials also think the district could save money on the power bill by going to a seven-period schedule. Superintendent Darrell Hatfield said with the current budget and rising energy costs, there just won't be enough money to stay on the block schedule.

The school has been on a block schedule for eight years. Students have eight classes, each one hour and 10 minutes long, and attend four classes on alternate days. On the seven-period schedule, students would attend the same 40-minute classes each day.

Some teachers and parents don't want to see the schedule changed.

Teacher MaryAnn Floyd was concerned that students wouldn't have as many class choices on a seven-period schedule. Sixth- and seventh-graders only have one elective class. Floyd also voiced concern over increased class sizes.

"Our goal is to create well-rounded students," Floyd said. "Nobody wants to go back to the seven-period block."

But not everyone was in favor of keeping the block schedule. Residents Dave and Brenda Jenson said they thought the one hour-plus classes were too long and that the seven-class schedule offered more consistency.

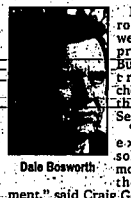
However, the School Board won't be able to please everyone, said board member Martha Oberle.

"Whatever decision is made, we can't make everyone happy," Oberle said.

Forest Service eyes new chief

Lawmakers, enviromentalists praise choice

The Times-News and the Associated Press



Dale Bosworth

WASHINGTON – Dale Bosworth, who built a 35-year career at the Forest Service, will become the agency's chief, Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman said Thursday.

As the regional forester in the Northern Region for more than three years, Bosworth served as the chief executive overseeing 25 million acres in 12 national forests and four national grasslands in northern Idaho, Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Praised by Idaho environmentalists and conservative Idaho lawmakers, Bosworth also served as regional forester of the Ogden-based Intermountain Region that includes southern Idaho, from 1994 to 1997.

Bosworth, 57, will now run the agency – part of the Agriculture Department – that governs some 192 million acres of national forests and employs over 30,000 people.

"Dale Bosworth is a veteran forester who has devoted his career to the Forest Service," Veneman said in a statement. "His background and experience make him a great addition to our team."

Bosworth said he was honored to take the job, calling it "a pleasure to lead an organization whose employees are recognized for their dedication."

The appointment of a University of Idaho forestry graduate drew praise from Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, himself a former student body president on the Moscow campus.

"Dale knows every national forest in Idaho like the back of his hand," Kempthorne said, "so it's a real pleasure to see one of our own at the top."

Idaho environmentalists were a bit surprised by the Bush administration's choice to head the Forest Service.

"We were expecting someone far more hostile to the environment," said Craig Gehrke, Idaho representative of the Wilderness Society. "I think he's a good choice."

John McCarthy, conservation director of the Idaho Conservation League, noted that Bosworth has supported the controversial roadless policy of the Clinton administration.

"Bosworth is well known in the forest conservation community of Idaho, and he knows the importance of healthy ecosystems and watersheds," McCarthy said. "We hope he remains moderate, with a balanced view between protection of natural resources and production of useful commodities."

Bosworth replaces former Forest Service Chief Mike Dombeck, who retired March 31. Dombeck called the appointment "a great choice."

"He is among those I recommended and discussed with Secretary Veneman," he said. "Dale was instrumental in developing key parts of the Forest Service's natural resource agenda and led development of the roads rule."

The rule was a transportation policy evaluating roads in the country's national forests, with an eye toward handling a tremendous backlog in road maintenance. The policy was followed by a sweeping ban on road-building and logging in 58.5 million acres of national forest lands, except in rare circumstances. Environmentalists have cheered the policy, but the timber and mining industry have challenged it in court, where a federal judge has raised questions about its validity.

Republican Sen. Larry Craig of Idaho, who had numerous runins with Dombeck and despised the roadless initiative, continued his moderate statements that began when Dombeck announced his resignation.

"I am confident that Dale will carry on the conservation legacy of Mike Dombeck, Jack Ward Thomas and the previous Forest Service chiefs," Craig said in a statement. "At the same time, having worked with Dale for a number of years, I am certain that he will be sensitive to the concerns of local communities most immediately and directly affected by Forest Service decisions."

Other western Republicans in particular have been critical of the roadless policy, developed by Dombeck during the Clinton administration. They welcomed Bosworth's appointment.

"His solid science background will return us to scientific and professional management of our forests, rather than political management we've seen in recent years," Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, chairman of the House Resources Committee, said in a statement.

Bosworth began his career as a forester in 1966 at the St. Joe National Forest, now part of the Idaho Panhandle National Forest. He has worked on Western forest lands from Washington state to Utah.

In 1990, he was named the Forest Service's deputy director of timber management at its headquarters in Washington and then moved across the country in 1992 to serve as deputy regional forester for the Pacific Southwest Region in San Francisco.

Bosworth was raised in northern California. His father was a forest supervisor. His son, Neil, is a forester in the Black Hills National Forest and his daughter, Christie, works for the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, a major sponsor of elk reintroduction programs.

Castleford plans citywide cleanup day

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD – Weather permitting, beautification day on May 19 could turn into a town picnic.

The City Council Wednesday discussed plans for the big cleanup day.

Hot dogs, chips and sodas will be served to volunteers who help with the cleanup which will begin at 9 a.m. and continue as late as needed.

FFA members will assist with some of the heavier chores and will be available to clean up yards and lots for people who can't do it themselves. Those needing help can call coordinators Brigg Vulgamore at 537-6618 or Patsy Kinyon at 537-6544.

Residents are asked to bring twigs, limbs and paper products to a bonfire pile near the fire station to save space in the trash bins.

Other City Council business:

- FFA members plan to place "Welcome to Castleford" signs at 900 East and 3600 North. The red, white and blue metal signs will have the updated population figure of 214 and read "Home of the Sawtooth Conference Champions," a tribute to the local football champs.
- The city will look into placing fresh gravel in some of the city's alleys.

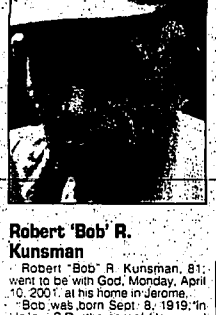
JEROME



Robert 'Bob' R. Kunsman

Bob was born Sept. 8, 1919, in Hailey, S.D., the son of Harry and Ellen May Eslack Kunsman. He proudly served in the Air Force during WWII from 1942 to 1946. When he returned from duty he worked on a cattle ranch in Bowman, N.D. Bob then traveled to Los Angeles, Calif., to attend diesel school where he met his wonderful wife Shirley in May 1949. They fell in love and were married Aug. 6, 1949, in Las Vegas, Nev. Bob then worked as a farm hand in Murtaugh, Hansen and Milner. He then advanced to farm manager at Gallatin and Rogers Brothers Seed Co. Bob and Shirley worked together for 25 1/2 years until he retired and bought five acres south of Jerome. Bob loved to work on machinery, autos and tractors. His favorite hobbies were camping, bowling, golfing and fishing. He loved to have his grandsons with him. Some of his favorite pastimes were watching his grandsons play baseball, basketball, golf and football. Bob liked to be in his garden. He would say, "I will take care of the garden and Shirley can take care of the lawn and her flowers." Bob and Shirley were married for 52 years. They worked, played, traveled, raised children in short they did everything together. Bob was a member of the American Legion Post 7, of the Twin Falls Unit.

Bob and Shirley have three children, Linda Orr of Hazelton, Don Kunsman of Phoenix, Ariz., and Ron Kunsman of Nampa. They have six grandsons, Jeremy Rothermel of Clovis, Calif., David Brown of Twin Falls, Craig and Robert Sirucek of Hazelton and Trinity and Jerico Kunsman of Phoenix, Ariz. They also have two great-grandsons, Jacob and Jordan Rothermel of Clovis, Calif. He is also survived by two brothers, Bill Kunsman of Bowman, N.D. and Dick Kunsman of South Dakota and one sister, Mildred Crawford of Bowman, N.D.

His parents preceded him in death.

Bob's legacy is remarkable. He lived simple yet very loving. His life and beliefs, work hard, do a good job, do the right thing even if it's a tough decision and always take care of your family, he passed to his children and now to his grandchildren. Bob walked the earth as a kind, giving, loving man and now he has transferred that to the heavens above. We are all better for knowing him. He will forever be loved and cherished. Memorial services for Bob will be held at 11 a.m., Monday, April 16, 2001, at Whitter Mortuary-The Magic Valley Area Veterans, American Legion and Auxiliary will give military rites. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

Reading program moves ahead

Cassia School Board approves new curriculum

By Aaron Brock
Times-News writer

BURLEY – New reading programs are headed into the Cassia County schools.

A new curriculum was approved Thursday at the district board meeting. The board heard recommendations from advisory groups made up of teachers and parents from around the district.

The advisory groups were thorough, said Curriculum Director Dan Gillett.

"I don't know, but I believe we've researched every approved book in the state of Idaho," Gillett told the board.

Carolyn Hondo, a teacher at Burley Junior High School, said that much of the new material is geared toward improving test-taking skills. Other material is designed to be used in conjunction with computer programs.

Hondo was applauded by the board for her efforts.

"It's really neat when you're working with people like this," Gillett said. "Basically you just get out of the way."

Presenting an elementary school curriculum, Becky Hunsaker, a teacher at Declo Elementary, said that nothing is more critical to success in the early grades than reading.

"The most important adoption for elementary is reading," Hunsaker told the board. "If the kids can't read, by golly, they're in trouble."

Phonics – reading through sound association – hasn't been in many textbooks lately, but the new curriculum represents a return to this style of learning, she said, adding that the material is designed with the Idaho Reading Indicator and other performance standards in mind.

Karma Archibald, a teacher at Oakley High School, presented a proposal for a high school curriculum of English literature texts.

Students with a wide range of learning capabilities will benefit from the texts, which also have a Spanish component, Archibald said.

The board approved the recommended texts, and also approved a new driver's education curriculum. Textbooks for these courses typically last about five years, according to district Superintendent Jerry Doggett.

In other school board action, Doggett announced that Oakley Elementary School has been recognized by the state for its efforts to improve math skills among students.

Yellowstone roads to open soon

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) – It's a certain sign of spring: roads in and near Yellowstone National Park are beginning to reopen.

Park rangers announced that the highway from Mammoth to Old Faithful through Norris and Madison will open April 20, followed by the opening of the Norris-to-Canyon route April 27.

On May 4, the road from the East Entrance to Canyon via Lake opens, along with the route from Tower Junction to Tower Fall. Most other roads open May 11, including South Entrance to Old Faithful, Old Faithful to West Thumb, and West Thumb to Lake.

Also opening May 11 is U.S. 212 from Cooke City, Mont., over Colter Pass to the Chief Joseph Scenic Highway, Wyoming 296.

U.S. 212 from the intersection of Chief Joseph Highway to Long Lake will open after May 11 as conditions allow.

On May 25, the road from Long Lake over Beartooth Pass to the Montana state line will open, and on June 15, rangers expect to open the highway from Tower Fall to Canyon over Dunraven Pass.

The highway from the North Entrance at Gardiner, Mont., to the Northeast Entrance near Cooke City is open year-round.

Nampa feels impact of teacher shortage

NAMPA (AP) – The increasing national demand for an inadequate supply of quality teachers is starting to be felt in Idaho, where debate still swirls around legislation mandating a minimum starting teachers salary of $25,000.

"I don't believe we are in a crisis mode with our hiring," said Kathleen Hanson, who handles personnel for the Nampa School District. "I do believe we have to be more aggressive in our hiring."

Rapid growth has the district looking for 30 new teachers to handle rising enrollment, and that is on top of the 20 teachers who are leaving the district this summer and must be replaced.

The district is advertising at every college and university campus west of the Mississippi River, and officials have been attending an increasing number of college career fairs. The hardest slots to fill, Hanson said, are in special education, mathematics and science.

Hanson's been selling her community and its commitment to children through organizations like the Healthy Nampa Healthy Youth Coalition in the search for new teachers.

And lawmakers believe they gave Hanson and other school district recruiters another tool when they mandated that all beginning teachers make no less than $25,000 a year. While not exorbitant, advocates contended that it could be one factor that makes a difference in the decision of a young teacher.

According to the National Education Association, Idaho ranks 49th in average starting teacher pay. Only beginning teachers in North Dakota average less.

For the coming school year, the state will cover $23,210 of the salary of a starting teacher, and state officials estimate that 17 of the 113 districts currently do not pay their starting teachers that much.

But the number skyrockets at a starting pay of $25,000, and that has districts statewide concerned because they have to cover the difference from their discretionary money – typically used for books and utility bills – or the property taxes they still collect from patrons.

And possibly of greater concern to some is the prospect of having to boost the salaries of the more experienced teachers a comparable amount to avoid pay scale compression.

In the Madison School District, one of the state's larger districts, officials said being forced to provide commensurate raises to more experienced teachers would increase payroll by $120,000 a year.

"It's not that we think they're not worth it," spokeswoman Janet Goodliffe said. "We'd love to give them as much money as we could. But it comes down to a money game."

A number of advocates had argued that increasing only starting teacher pay was the point because pay raises in the past have gone disproportionately to experienced teachers because they were doled out on a percentage basis.

"We need to reduce the range between starting and top-end salaries," said Republican Rep. Kent Higgins of Idaho Falls, a member of the House Education Committee.

Skiing

Salt Lake City, where 90,000 reporters, broadcasters and technicians are expected to fill the Salt Palace and several other venues.

Bill Briggs, director of the Snow King Ski School in Jackson, Wyo., was happy to recount his first descent story of the Grand Teton in June 1971. His feat earned him the moniker "Father of Extreme Skiing" long before today's extreme skiers were a twinkle in their mothers' eyes.

Briggs waited three years to get the right snow conditions to make the attempt. Two of his support crew chickened out before reaching the top, leaving him to break the trail himself despite a gimpy leg that he had incurred at birth when he was born without a hip socket.

To take his crampon off, he had to raise his leg behind his back. And he had to put on his skis the same way on a mountain top so pointed that his other ski dangled over the edge.

From there he skied down from 13,700 feet to 6,700 feet through hoarfrost the size of softballs and small snow slides coming at him from all sides.

"Actually, the skiing down was the easy part," said Briggs, whose feat has been duplicated only 40 times since.

George Lyons Jr., who oversaw a family ironworks factory, told how he tired of having to climb hills to go skiing and so built skiing's first rope tow at his home in New Haven, Conn., with a 1,400-foot rope and a Studebaker engine he paid $25 for.

At first, it was a portable rope tow that he trailed behind his car and put it up on untracked hillsides of snow. It took a half-day to erect and he charged 75 cents a ticket to use it. Eventually, it became part of Connecticut's Mohawk Mountain ski resort.

"Now I look at these high-speed quads and I think, 'They're pretty amazing,'" Lyons said.

Alan Engen recounted how his dad, Alf, came to Chicago from impoverished Norway, not knowing whether this country even had snow for him to continue his beloved sport of ski jumping.

When he saw people jumping off a tiny hill near Chicago, he quickly showed off his ski-jumping prowess. He went on to become a backcountry ski guide for Sun Valley in the 1930s and coached the 1948 Olympic ski team before going on to direct the ski school at Utah's Alta ski resort for 40 years.

The younger Engen remembers running up and down the halls of the Sun Valley Lodge where he lived as a youngster and jumping off a small ski jump his dad built for him on nearby Ruud Mountain. One of his fondest childhood memories is of actor Gary Cooper giving him a pair of cowboy chaps.

Today Alan Engen is director of skiing at Alta and creator of a new Alf Engen Ski Museum due to open in Salt Lake City in conjunction with the 2002 Games.

Oh, and as for Wolfgang Lert, the man who Bogner ski stretch pants to America? Eventually, they caught on, said Lert, who made his own fashion statement on Baldy this week wearing a one-piece neon pink ski suit he bought for $10 from Ketchum's Gold Mine thrift store.

"Women took up skiing so they could wear the stretch pants," he said. "And men went skiing so they could watch women wearing them."

Hansen

Hempleman, who lobbied for Block's selection. "We can't see that anything has changed. He's still a bishop. He still has little children. And he still has two car dealerships."

But Hansen says the flux in his life last year has settled down enough to allow him return to the Statehouse.

Swan, who died last month from liver cancer complications, was selected last spring to replace Hansen on the ballot.

Both Block and Hansen stepped in for Swan in the House when his health wouldn't let him continue this winter's session.

Hansen was appointed as Swan's official successor after Swan's death. He served in that capacity for the last week of the session.

School Board reviews senior trip

Valley in brief

DIETRICH – The Dietrich School Board this week reviewed a successful senior trip to California, the district reported in its monthly board update.

Board Chairman Jarrett Porter drover the bus to California and also was a chaperone. He reported that the seniors had a full and exciting Spring Break trip.

The board hired Darren Mudge as the new music teacher. He has been teaching music in New Mexico for the past four years. Cleveland Sears was hired as the district's new maintenance supervisor. He has spent may years working in public school maintenance in Oklahoma.

The School Board met Tuesday.

LDS lecture 'Know Your Religion' series concludes

Utility seeks to change sales agreement

BOISE (AP) – Public comments will be accepted by utility regulators until April 27 on Idaho Power Co.'s proposal to change its power sales agreement with J.R. Simplot Co.

The compromise agreement announced on Thursday by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission would change the purchase rates for the energy Idaho Power buys from Simplot's fertilizer plant near Pocatello.

Simplot's cogeneration facility produces between 8 megawatts and 12 megawatts of electricity per year, according to Simplot.

The amendment modifies what Simplot is getting this year to 7.5 cents per kilowatt-hour for the first 240,000 kwh delivered per day, and 50 percent of market price for any sales beyond that.

In 2002, Idaho Power would pay Simplot 9 cents per kwh for the first 240,000 kwh delivered per day and 90 percent of market price for any additional sales. In 2003, Simplot would get 85 percent of market price for any amount of energy sold.

Idaho Power now pays Simplot a base rate of about 2.4 cents per kwh, but that price frequently varies up or down depending on the level of demand on the company's generation and distribution system.

The amounts proposed in the new agreement represent an increase for Simplot. But Idaho Power's customers still would save money because of the significantly higher costs Idaho Power would face for replacement electricity on the wholesale market, regulators said.

Idaho Power wants a commission ruling that amendments to the sales contract would be in the public interest. The company also has asked that all the costs of purchasing the Simplot electricity be covered by Idaho Power ratepayers.

Commissioners said no public hearing would be conducted unless a number of written protests or comments are received.

U.S. Senate panel looks into Nevada leukemia outbreak, promises answers

FALLON, Nev. (AP) – Nevada political leaders promised Thursday to look for answers to a strange leukemia epidemic that has afflicted 12 young residents of this rural community.

The pledges were made by U.S. Sens. Harry Reid and John Ensign of Nevada, Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., Gov. Kenny Guinn and two state lawmakers whose districts take in the Navy and agricultural town of Fallon.

Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., was among those who spoke at the field hearing of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, attended by about 300 Fallon-area residents. Cancer clusters also have occurred in New York, she said, which prompted her to take part in the field hearing.

"I'm aware of how difficult this has to be," she said. "Fallon is in the center of a lot of attention. We hope to make something good of this."

Reid, the ranking Democrat on the committee, scheduled the hearing to learn more about the 12 cases of childhood leukemia diagnosed here.

"We've got information that we didn't have before and it gives us something to take back to Washington, D.C.," said Reid, Senate minority whip.

Reid pressed the Navy, which runs the Fallon Naval Air Station here, not to withhold any information that might help determine the cause of the acute lymphocytic cancer cases.

Rear Adm. R.J. Naughton promised to cooperate, although he added it would be tough to track the medical histories of all the Navy personnel who have been stationed at the air station over the years.

Reid said jet fuel spills or jettisons from Navy planes have been mentioned in discussions of possible causes of the leukemia cases, but Naughton said most flights are over unpopulated areas.

In addition to military fuels, other possible theories for the cases have included viruses caused by the movement of large numbers of people in and out of Fallon; high levels of naturally occurring arsenic in drinking water; and pesticides or fungicides used on area farms.

Judge approves national park Jet Skis ban

WASHINGTON (AP) – Jet Skis and other personal watercraft will be banned in all national parks and recreation areas after two more summers under a settlement approved by a federal judge Thursday.

The gasoline-powered personal watercraft are already banned from 66 of the 87 parks, recreational areas and seashores where motorized boats are allowed throughout the nation. Thursday's order by U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler affects the remaining 21.

Kessler dismissed a challenge from watercraft manufacturers and vendors to the agreement negotiated last December by the Interior Department and the Bluewater Network, a San Francisco-based environmental group. The Bush administration endorsed the accord.

The Park Service agreed that unless it can prove the machines don't harm the environment on a site-by-site basis, each will be added to a list of Jet Ski-free zones by Sept. 15, 2002.

"This Jet Ski settlement is great news for the national parks," said Sean Smith, spokesman for the San Francisco-based Bluewater Network environmental group that had sued the National Park Service. "It will better protect the visiting public as well as park resources and wildlife from these noisy, smelly and dangerous machines."

Last year, the Park Service banned Jet Skis from two-thirds of the national parks. That prompted Bluewater Network to file a federal lawsuit to widen the ban to the remaining 21 parks and recreation areas. The Personal Watercraft Industry Association and the American Watercraft Association tried unsuccessfully to intervene.

with police was the main reason for this arrest, Guyer said.

Neu said an off-duty Idaho State Police trooper alerted him that Suits was drinking in a bar, the report said. Neu and two Cassia County sheriff's deputies approached Suits as he left George K's, the report said.

Neu and sheriff's deputy Antonio Bernad said they smelled alcohol coming from Suits, according to the report. Suits later told officers he had taken two ounces of Robitussin, an over-the-counter cough medicine, before going out that night, the report said.

The results of a breath test showed that Suits' blood alcohol content was measured at .04 and .05 percent.

The report also says Suits was defensive and argumentative when initially confronted by Neu. It also says Suits was uncooperative during the breath test. Neu recommended that Suits receive "a significant period of incarceration in the county jail."

"Mr. Suits has made it very difficult to continue productive supervision of him in the community. If he does not admit that he has done anything wrong, there is nothing that we can do to correct his inappropriate or illegal behavior," Neu said in the report.

The report also says even if Suits is only guilty of consuming Robitussin, that, too, violates his probation because it contains alcohol.

It's made clear to probationers such medications are off-limits, Guyer said.

Suits, a Burley physician, was convicted in February 2000 of methamphetamine possession. He was put on three years supervised probation.

Suits has filed a motion in 5th District Court to be placed on unsupervised probation so he may move to Texas to practice medicine there, according to court records.

Suits' new job contract takes effect May 1, and he said Probation and Parole has told Suits it takes three or four months to approve an interstate probation transfer, court records said.

Judge Monte B. Carlson refused to hear the motion Tuesday until he saw the probation violation report, court documents said. A probation violation hearing hadn't been scheduled Thursday.

District Court in Boise. The defendants have until April 30 to file an answer to the complaint, she said. Both parties can then begin to prepare evidence and seek witnesses. A trial is set to begin July 29, 2002, in Boise, Woolley said.

The women claim Joseph Kirchner while at work would sometimes shout or scream at female employees, frequently using profanity, according to the complaint. They also claim Joseph Kirchner often used intimidation – including mocking some employees' disabilities, grabbing some of the women by their collars during tirades, demanding that employees seek counseling or psychiatric medication and making unwanted sexual advances toward some female employees.

Kirchner said an insurance company is helping to prepare the reply to the complaint, and he doesn't expect the women's allegations to hold up to scrutiny.

"This is unfortunate," he said. "Nobody bargains for something like this when they're just trying to make things work for the shareholders, the employees and the customers."

Community center would bring generations together

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON – Eden and Hazelton leaders are working toward developing a community center to serve the youngest and the oldest residents – and everyone in-between.

Grant writer Susan Riddle told the Hazelton City Council and other community leaders Tuesday about the possibility of getting grants to build a new senior center. She said up to $150,000 could be available if community residents came up with matching funds.

"The point I would like to make is that the dollars aren't here today, but it really can happen," she said.

Besides money, matching funds could include such things as labor, land and materials, Riddle said.

But leaders see a need to serve the young people in Eden and Hazelton, too, and are looking to consolidate efforts by establishing a center for both youth and seniors.

Roby Grant, who chairs the Valley Recreation District board, is interested. The recreation board is considering taking over from Hazelton about 23 acres on the south side of the city. He said if the recreation district takes the property, it will develop ballparks, but he thinks adding a structure on the property to accommodate the entire community is even more appealing.

Mayor Erv VanSickle suggested that all entities involved meet soon to discuss wants, needs and funding.

"Trying to configure it for everyone's best use is the question we have here," he said.

Also Tuesday, John Boling, chairman of the planning and zoning commission, gave the first reading of a revamped building ordinance. Boling pointed out that he created a waiver-of-building-permit process in order for residents to get permission for minor additions such as fences and storage sheds. Permission would be given by either the city building inspector or the Planning and Zoning Committee.

Blaine district finds property for bus facility

By Barb Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY – Blaine County School District administrators breathed a sigh of relief this week after an agreement was reached Tuesday afternoon to purchase property for the district's bus maintenance facility.

After negotiations to purchase property adjacent to the new Wood River High School failed, the district has been scrambling to find a site suitable for the facility. The current bus facility will be displaced by parking lots for the new high school that is slated to begin construction in June.

The new bus facility will be located in an area containing wetlands next to the Lion's Park softball field on the western edge of Hailey. Transients often inhabit the surrounding wooded area.

However, Superintendent Jim Lewis dismissed these drawbacks as opportunities to effect a change for the good.

The district is purchasing the entire 26-acre parcel owned by Bill Simons but will give about 16 acres of the wetlands to the Wood River Land Trust, a nonprofit conservation organization that is working to establish a greenbelt near the Big Wood River.

Land Trust Director Scott Boettger approved of the plan and said it would be good to have hiking and biking trails wind through the wetland area. He also said the maintenance structures would have a minimum impact on the area because of screenings.

The cost for the entire parcel is $264,000 and will be purchased through money allocated within the district budget for land acquisitions. The district was able to purchase the property at a reduced price because Simons liked the idea of the recreational use of the area, Lewis said.

The $1 million bus complex, which includes a fenced off maintenance shop and parking bay, is part of a $40 million plant facilities levy approved by voters this past May.

Through a three-way cooperative effort between the school district, the Wood River Land Trust and the city of Hailey, the proposal to build the bus facility in this area will achieve a "value-added plan" for the area.

With the bus facility adjacent to the area the city uses for operations and maintenance, the added use of the Lion's Park area will dissuade vagrants from camping out in the woods near the park, Lewis said.

Under the plan, the Land Trust will receive 16 acres, the majority of which lies in the wetland. The bus maintenance shop will displace a small portion of wetlands, but that will be exchanged for a wetland area further south on the property.

The district's 19 full-sized buses will park along an area near Croy Creek Road and will be hidden from sight. The district would also like to accommodate a bike path along Croy Creek Road to help establish a safe path for access to the BMX track that is located 2.5 miles west.

Lewis favored this location for the bus facility because it is more centrally located to all Blaine County schools and will improve safety. As buses travel from the bus facility on Croy Street, they will benefit from the traffic light on Main Street.

County eliminates position

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) – An official praised for leading Kootenai County into the 21st Century was fired because commissioners believe his position is no longer useful.

Tom Taggart got a one-page letter informing him that his more than five years on the job would end Friday. He will receive more than $34,000 in severance pay.

"There is a point where you look at what you can get rid of," Commission Chairman Dick Panabaker said on Wednesday. "This, unfortunately, is a budget consideration."

Taggart, 47, said he had no opportunity to argue for his job. The three commissioners called him into their board- room and handed him a termination letter they had already signed.

"You want people to appreciate what you've done," Taggart said. "But, I may be happier not being at the county."

The letter pointed out that Kootenai is the only county in Idaho with a county administrator. "This is a luxury we can no longer afford," the commissioners wrote.

Taggart, a former tax auditor for the Internal Revenue Service, was appointed administrator in October 1995. Before that, voters twice elected him Kootenai County clerk.

His 10 years of county service were summed up in two sentences at the bottom of the letter, signed by Commissioners Ron Rankin, Gus Johnson and Panabaker.

"This action is in no way a reflection on the competence or dedication of the administrator," they wrote. "Tom Taggart has served the county well on many projects over the past five years, and has eased the commissioners' work load."

The decision was blasted by former commissioner Dick Compton, who, along with Panabaker, hired Taggart.

"I found him to be an absolutely essential part of the team," Compton said. "I'd like to think if a guy spent the blood, sweat and tears for the county, that we would treat him with dignity and effective communication."

DEQ study finds safe lead levels at Silver Valley schools

BOISE – A final Idaho Department of Environmental Quality report confirms preliminary conclusions from February that children in Silver Valley schools are safe from lead exposure.

The study was conducted in response to a lawsuit over school safety statewide.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Environmental Quality said samples of dust collected last October from eight schools and a day-care center in Osburn, Mullan, Wallace and Kellogg showed lead levels to be safe in 34 of 36 areas tested.

Fourth District Judge Deborah Bail ordered testing in March 2000 for all 16 schools in the Silver Valley school districts as she considered the broader issue of whether the state was meeting its constitutional mandate to ensure public schools provide all students with a "safe environment conducive to learning."

West in brief

Labor Department alleges safety violations

BOISE – The U.S. Labor Department alleges that the company that operated Boise's bus system last year knowingly risked workers' safety.

The citations – totaling $123,000 in penalties – were issued against Laidlaw Transit Services for job safety violations. The company operated Boise Urban Stages from June 1999 to November 2000, said Kelli Fairless, a spokeswoman for VIAtrans, the company that now runs Boise's bus service.

The three citations range in severity from "willful" to "other-than-serious," Jeannine Lupton, of the U.S. Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said. Some dangerous conditions had the potential to "kill someone," she added.

Laidlaw has contested the citations, Ryan Kuehmichel, the director of the department's Boise office, said. The company declined to comment.

Burning Man festival may face additional regulations

RENO, Nev. – The proposed site for this year's Burning Man festival straddles a new National Conservation Area in the Black Rock Desert and could face additional permitting requirements in the future.

But Burning Man organizers say they don't anticipate difficulty winning Bureau of Land Management approval of the counterculture event that annually draws more than 20,000 people to the desert 120 miles northeast of Reno over the Labor Day weekend.

BLM officials who will conduct an environmental assessment of the site said they don't foresee any immediate hurdles, especially since it is just 1,800 feet northeast of the site approved last year.

Research ties greenhouse gases to warming

WASHINGTON (AP) – New evidence that global warming is caused by man-made gases comes from researchers using computer models that show a temperature increase in the world's oceans.

Two models developed independently by researchers using slightly different techniques both linked rising global temperatures to an increase in atmospheric greenhouse gases, principally carbon dioxide from the burning of oil, gas and coal.

"We think this is some of the strongest evidence to date that human-induced effects are changing our climate," said Sydney Levitus, a researcher at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and co-author of one of two global warming studies appearing today in the journal Science.

The studies appear in the wake of President Bush's decision last month to reject the Kyoto climate treaty, a 1997 international plan to reduce the emission of greenhouse gases in order to curb global warming. Bush said the plan, which calls for a sharp reduction of carbon dioxide emissions, was too expensive and unwise during a time that the U.S. faces energy and economic problems.

Levitus said the model produced by his group is in close agreement with another computer model that was produced independently and analyzed by Tim P. Barnett and two co-authors at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography at the University of California, San Diego. Their work also appears in Science.

Barnett said the "fingerprint" of human influence on the warming climate is "so bold and big that you don't have to do any fancy statistics to beat it out of the data. It's just there."

The results, he said, "are certainly compatible" with the idea that the warming of the Earth "has been caused by anthropogenic (human) sources."

George Boer, a researcher at the Meteorological Service of Canada in Victoria, British Columbia, said the climate modeling work "is a good study."

"This is collaborative evidence" that human activity is causing the global climate to warm, he said.

Global temperatures are thought to have risen by about 1.1 degrees over the last century. The top few thousand feet of the ocean waters have increased in temperature by about a tenth of a degree.

The new studies tie in the observed effects on the ocean temperatures with those of the land and the atmosphere.

Prairies, woodlands are healthier for the Earth, new study concludes

Knight Ridder News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. – As carbon dioxide and nitrogen build up in the Earth's atmosphere, the gradual replacement of native forests and grasslands with monocultural landscapes such as crops and lawns is making the world a less resilient place.

That's the conclusion of a study led by the University of Minnesota that appears in Thursday's issue of Nature.

The study, conducted at the university's Cedar Creek Natural History Area north of the Twin Cities, determined that prairie plots with a more diverse mix of plants grew better when fed higher doses of atmospheric carbon dioxide and nitrogen than did plots with fewer plant species. Because plant biomass is almost half carbon, that's a direct indication of how effectively carbon dioxide is filtered from the atmosphere through photosynthesis.

The relative success of more varied mixes of plants is important because carbon dioxide levels and nitrogen pollution have been on the rise since the advent of industrialization hundreds of years ago and are projected to increase well into the 21st century, according to Peter Reich, a professor of plant physiology and forestry at the university.

"This suggests that we should be a little more concerned about human management of our ecosystem," said Reich, the study's lead investigator.

In 1997, researchers planted 296 separate plots of four square meters each, with one, four, nine, and 16 species of prairie plants. Beginning in 1998, half the plots were given elevated levels of carbon dioxide and half the plots in each of the two carbon dioxide levels received additional nitrogen.

The plants were measured twice in 1998 and again in 1999. When compared with control plots, plots with one species that were fed increased carbon dioxide levels increased plant biomass 7 percent. In contrast, plots with 16 species increased biomass 22 percent. When both carbon dioxide and nitrogen were elevated, the increases were 17 percent for one-species plots and 36 percent for those with 16 species.

New York Daily News

NEW YORK – Mayor Rudolph Giuliani is insistent that the city saves money by occasionally putting up homeless people with AIDS at fancy hotels – even those that charge $329 per night.

If AIDS sufferers were turned away just because no cheap rooms were available, he said, the city would risk huge court fines. The mayor added that building permanent shelters is more expensive than renting rooms.

"Occasionally, what will happen is you've got to pay a lot for a room, but if you went ahead and got all that permanent housing, you pay even more," Giuliani said.

Housing advocates called Giuliani's response a callous and shortsighted stance that denies homeless people with AIDS a stable place to live. They accused the mayor of not doing enough to help the 26,000 people with AIDS who are seeking housing assistance – almost double the number from 1996.

The city "has failed to develop a sensible response to the AIDS housing crisis," said Councilman Stephen DiBrienza, D-Brooklyn. "So we see Page One stories about the city putting up AIDS victims in Sofitel and other luxury hotels."

The verbal fireworks followed a Daily News report that the city is sheltering homeless people with AIDS at luxury hotels that run as much as $329 a night – and some advocates estimate the city is shelling out at least $100,000 a week in hotel bills.

Under a 1999 court order, the city must find shelter for homeless people with AIDS on the day they apply for help.

About 200 people per day seek emergency shelter through the city's Division of AIDS Services.

Tom Green admits he and Drew Barrymore are married

NEW YORK (AP) – After months of rumor and speculation, the word on Tom Green and Drew Barrymore is finally out: They are indeed husband and wife.

Displaying a serious side and some desire for privacy about his personal life, the prank-playing comedian said Thursday that he and the 25-year-old actress eloped three weeks ago.

"We went away on sort of a little trip," he said during an interview about his upcoming movie "Freddy Got Fingered." "We tried to kind of do it under the radar." They opted for an elopement "because we wanted it to be special."

Green and Barrymore, who recently co-starred together in the film adaptation of "Charlie's Angels," got engaged in July.

Communities, other groups offer egg hunts

The Times-News

Twin Falls

● The Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department and the Twin Falls Optimists will sponsor their annual Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. Saturday in City Park. The event is for ages 2 and younger, 3-4, 5-7 and 8-10.

● The College of Southern Idaho Student Senate and Interclub Council will hold CSI's annual Easter egg hunt at 4 p.m. today at the center of the campus.

Prizes will be awarded to four age groups: 0-3, 4-6, 7-9 and 10-12.

● The Twin Falls Police Benefit Association and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Benefit Association are sponsoring an Easter egg hunt for the area's mentally and physically challenged children. The event is planned for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Candle Ridge Golf Course. No age limit.

● An Easter egg hunt will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at BridgeView Estates, 1828 BridgeView Blvd. N.

The egg hunt is for children ages 0-8, and prizes will be awarded.

● Idaho Migrant Council and the Twin Falls Police Department are sponsoring an Easter egg hunt at 11 a.m. Saturday at the El Milagro housing complex, 1122 Washington St. S.

The egg hunt is for children ages 2 and younger, 3-5, 6-8 and 9-12.

● The Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation will sponsor the second annual Easter egg dive at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Twin Falls Municipal Pool.

Plastic eggs will fill the pool. Children will dive and hunt for as many eggs as they can capture. Prizes will be given.

Cost is $3 for all ages. For further information, call the pool at 734-2336.

Burley

● A community-wide Easter egg hunt will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday on the front lawn at Cassia Regional Medical Center.

The lawn will be divided for age groups 0-2, 3-4, 5-6, 7-8 and 9-12.

Appearances will be made by Tigger, the Easter Duck and Vince and Larry, the crash-test dummies. Hot dogs and pop will be available from the junior volunteers for $1. A raffle will be held for a family Easter basket.

Filer

● The annual community Easter egg hunt will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at City Park. The event is organized by the Filer High School Key Club.

Gooding

● The Gooding Recreation District will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 9 a.m. Saturday at West Park for children ages 0-3, 4-8 and 9-12.

Prizes will be awarded.

Hagerman

● The Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. Saturday at Hagerman City Park for children ages 1-3, 4-6, 7-9 and 10-12.

Prizes will be awarded. The Easter Bunny will make a special appearance.

Hansen

● The city will sponsor an Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. Saturday at Rolling Hills Park.

Jerome

● The Jerome Optimist and Rotary clubs will sponsor the annual Easter egg hunt at 10 a.m. Saturday at Forsythe Park on Eighth Avenue East. Prizes will be awarded including three $50 savings bonds.

Shoshone

● An Easter egg hunt will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

Prizes will be awarded for three age groups, 0-4, 5-9 and 10-12.

● An adult Easter egg hunt will be held at noon Saturday at Shoshone City Park.

Proceeds from the fund-raiser will go toward equipment and uniforms for the Lincoln County Ambulance Service. Eggs will contain prizes from businesses throughout the Magic Valley and Wood River Valley.

Cost is $5 per adult. Arrive early to get tickets the day of the egg hunt.

'Sopranos' episode spotlights shrink

By Frazier Moore
The Associated Press

NEW YORK – New Jersey psychiatrist Jennifer Melfi was the focus of a breathtaking moment on a recent episode of "The Sopranos."

No, blood wasn't spilled or glasses raised, as is often the case in this HBO drama's most memorable scenes. Instead, mob boss Tony Soprano simply faced the truth.

"What're you talking about?" he muttered to wife Carmela, who, during couples therapy with Tony, had just voiced doubts that Melfi was doing him any good. "She HAS helped me," Tony countered stiffly as Melfi looked on.

It's something Tony had never wanted to admit to himself, much less say out loud, even after all this time as Melfi's peevish, tough-guy patient. But in that moment of truth, Tony paid his shrink long-overdue homage.

He also reaffirmed the power of Lorraine Bracco, the actress who plays Dr. Melfi so compellingly. ("The Sopranos" airs on HBO on Sunday night.)

Lorraine Bracco gestures in a scene from HBO's "The Sopranos," in this 2001 promotional photo. With the hit drama well into its third season, Bracco reprises her role as psychoanalyst to mob boss Tony Soprano.

"Melfi is the opposite of me," Bracco says. Maybe so. In a session with a reporter at HBO headquarters, she proves sassy, animated and unguarded. "With

Singer Toni Braxton moves from hit records to movies

By David Germain
The Associated Press

Toni Braxton

LOS ANGELES – Forgive Toni Braxton for her unabashed glee when she talks about all the good things in her life.

Hot on the heels of her third hit record and her sixth Grammy, Braxton's working on another album. She's getting married this month and is eager to start a family. And she's making her film debut with the comedy "Kingdom Come," the first step toward what she's hoping will become a side career in movies.

That's a lot to sing about considering the state of her affairs a few years ago. Mired in bankruptcy and fighting with her record label over royalties, Braxton felt uncertain she would re-emerge anywhere in show business.

"I've got a job," Braxton, 32, now says decisively, then corrects herself with a laugh. "I've got jobs. Plural."

Unlike the eye-catching outfits she often wears at events – including her barely there gown at this year's Grammys – Braxton dresses conservatively for an interview at the Four Seasons hotel. She wears a simple but classy ensemble of black sleeveless T-shirt, dark slacks and open-toed shoes with spiked heels.

Early in 1998, though, Braxton wasn't sure when she would work again. After her self-titled debut album in 1993 and the 1996 follow-up "Secrets," Braxton and LaFace Records wound up at odds over her cut.

Sopranos

By "him," Bracco is referring to Tony. That is, unless she means series star James Gandolfini.

"I always have Jimmy go first," says Bracco, describing how the therapy scenes are shot: first, the camera set-up is on him; then, her. "He tells the story and I react to that."

Now consider how. How Melfi's soulful eyes observe Tony from behind those rimless specs. How her sensual mouth droops in solemn concentration. How deliberate and scrupulous she is: an image of composure, albeit with great legs.

Never mind. "It's not about her," declares Bracco.

Except that, in a larger sense, it IS. Melfi underpins "The Sopranos." She provides perspective. She claimed the first line on the first show three seasons back, as she ushered Tony in for his first visit: "Mr. Soprano? Have a seat."

Besides the panic attacks and depression that drove him to her, Tony since then has been grappling with issues about – what else? – his mother. ("Quite a formidable maternal presence," Melfi sized up wicked Livia Soprano in the pilot episode.)

For the Prozac-packing Tony, Melfi remains his best chance for relief not only from his mood disorders but also from the tangled, corrupt life he leads. She serves as "the moral through-line of this project," Bracco says. Melfi is the light.

No matter how painfully a session with Melfi may unfold for him, it's the closest thing to a safe haven he (or, for that matter, the "Sopranos" viewer) has. Says Bracco, "When you find him in therapy, you sigh with relief: 'OK, good! He's supposed to be there.'"

Not that life is safe or in control for Melfi, especially after taking on Tony as a patient. She has been forced into hiding to evade Tony's mobster enemies. Her boyfriend was beaten up by a cop at Tony's misconstrued request.

She had a drinking problem. She was raped by a stalker in her parking garage. She sees her own shrink.

Mostly, Dr. Melfi (and, hence, Lorraine Bracco) is found quarantined in her office opposite Tony. In many of those scenes, she doesn't even budge from her chair.

"I don't need to," Bracco says.

But in a series filled with sex, violence and delicious dirty dealing, she doesn't get much scenery to chew.

"I've done that," says the actress, most notably in the film "Goodfellas," for which she scored an Oscar nomination as the spitfire wife of a Mafia informant.

Can she continue to hold her own against Tony and the forces who would like to take him down?

"She's as strong as he'll ever be," Bracco says proudly. "And I think he's attracted to her because she's so much smarter."

Still, Bracco promises there will never be hanky-panky between them. She and "Sopranos" creator David Chase share "a bigger understanding of what the therapy is all about," she says, "and we want to be honest with that. Besides, I have the experience of going to a shrink and the therapy helping me. To pooh-pooh that would be wrong."

Bracco laughs. "You know how many psychiatrists come up to me and go, 'You're doing a terrific job with Tony'? It's a howl!"

Braxton

Braxton took a six-month stint starring as Belle in "Beauty and the Beast" on Broadway, but the quarrel over royalties left her recording career in limbo.

"I'd be on VH1's where-are-they-now show. And I kept telling myself, I don't want to be a where-are-they-now on VH1," Braxton said. "I can't go out like that. It's a great show, but maybe when I'm 50. Not now."

Compounding matters, Braxton began sensing a split between her parents, whose marriage of more than 30 years ended in divorce last fall.

"I never thought my parents would ever, ever get a divorce," Braxton said. "It was like I was 12 years old again. All the emotions you see on the Lifetime channel, that really happens. With everything else going on, I was a little cuckoo there."

LaFace and Braxton worked out their differences, and she roared back with the best-selling "The Heat" last year, an album that continued her trend toward hipper, sultrier music. The single "He Wasn't Man Enough" earned Braxton the Grammy for female R&B vocal.

After releasing just three albums in seven years, Braxton now is revving up the pace. She plans to release the first single off her next record in August, with a fourth album to follow late this year.

Braxton always had thought about acting, but she really caught the bug doing "Beauty and the Beast." "Kingdom Come" allowed her to ease into Hollywood in a small but colorful role.

The cast includes Whoopi Goldberg, LL Cool J, Jada Pinkett Smith, and Vivica A. Fox in a farce about a dysfunctional family gathering for a funeral. Braxton plays a materialistic relative who has married well and likes to flaunt it.

"I'm not an actress. I don't even want to take the title. But I'm trying to become one," Braxton said. "I need to learn, and this was a great place to learn with all these established actors."

"Kingdom Come" director Doug McHenry said Braxton hurled herself into the part, working with her acting coach on set and developing good rapport with the other actors.

"Toni doesn't act like your typical diva. If everyone has to bend over and scoop up dirt with her hands, she's willing to do it," McHenry said. "She had a respect for the acting profession, and the other actors wanted to give to her, because she was not a diva in the worst sense. In the best sense, she is a diva, and she wanted to work and was hungry to learn."

There was talk of putting Braxton on the movie's gospel-themed soundtrack. But Braxton wanted the focus to be on her acting.

"I wanted people to know I was serious, that I wasn't playing games, Braxton said. "People might be like, 'Oh, she's on the soundtrack; that's why she's in the movie.' My manager said, 'We don't want to be on the soundtrack. People know she can sing. Let's let people look at her as an actress.'"

The oldest of five sisters and one brother, Braxton had a strict religious upbringing. Her father is a Methodist minister, and Braxton was not allowed to listen to secular music or wear anything but simple dresses until her mid-teens.

"We couldn't go to the movies. It was a sin. Even rated-G. It was thought that it promoted witchcraft, certain G-rated movies. We couldn't go roller skating," Braxton said. "We had to wear dresses all the time. Hats a lot. Long dresses, no open-toed shoes. Show no nakedness."

Braxton said she remains deeply spiritual and will always be a "P.K." – preacher's kid. The racy outfits she wears now are not a reaction against her upbringing but an effort to compensate for her 5-foot-2 height, she said.

"Showing skin makes me feel taller," Braxton said. "As a little girl I always wanted to be like the black Marilyn Monroe. She was so sexy. I always wanted to be sexy because I wasn't when I was younger.

"I think when you're short and you show skin it makes you look taller, and it gives you the illusion that you're like Cindy Crawford, that you're sexy and grand like that."

Braxton has been busy planning her wedding April 21 to Keri Lewis of the group Mint Condition, whom she met when his group opened for her on tour in 1996. She said she wants to have children right away.

"I'm very happy," Braxton said. "Financially, things are great. As horrible as I thought things were, they're just as great now. So no bankruptcy, got a great pay raise, got a great guy in my life, my parents unfortunately divorced, but they're here. They're still here.

"And I'm in a movie!"

'Along Came a Spider,' 'Enemy at the Gates' hit theaters

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Associated Press reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Along Came A Spider'

There are both mysteries and surprises in this reasonably diverting albeit frequently improbable thriller, but the biggest mystery of all is hardly a surprise: How does star Morgan Freeman manage to give a master class in acting every time he appears on screen? The film tries its hardest to outsmart us, yet in general outline and rhythm it's fairly standard. With Monica Potter. Directed by Lee Tamahori. (1:43. R, for violence and language).

'Blow'

The problem is not so much that a film was made about a drug dealer as that once the opening section's energy has dissipated, no one could find a way to make the proceedings of even minimal interest. A film where the notion that 'drugs make you lose sight of what's important' passes for a searing insight is more tired than it knows or wants to admit. With Johnny Depp and Penlop e Cruz. Directed by Ted Demme. (2:00. R, for pervasive drug content and language, some violence and sexuality.)

'Bridget Jones's Diary'

Bridget is a cheerfully hapless Londoner who sort of wants it all: a boyfriend, slimmer hips, and a less zany, more supportive mom. And you don't have to have read Helen Fielding's 1996 best seller to tell in advance just how things will turn out. That they do with any degree of delight is due chiefly to the film's two male leads— Colin Firth and Hugh Grant both superbly cast as the duelig Cambridge graduates who lock horns over Bridget's libido. The tle role is gamely filled by a Chirpy Renee Zellweger, who has the accent and the cellulite down pat without ever communicating for a second that she might really be English. The director, Sharon Maguire, is relatively unseasoned, and it shows, as chick flicks go, this one is decidedly choppy. R for frank language and the gentlest of flaunch. 94 min.

'Chocolat'

Lasse Hallstrom's beguiling film of the Joanne Harris novel is one of the year's best, in which a fairy tale embraces the human comedy, observed by Hallstrom with his usual warmth and humor, extending inclusiveness to outsiders as always. A ravishing and brave Juliette Binoche descends upon an ancient French village, ruled by a pious aristocrat (Alfred Molina), to open a chocolate shop. With splendid supporting roles for Judi Dench and Lena Olin, and Johnny Depp as a suitably romantic rebel. (2:01. PG-13, for a scene of sexuality and some violence.)

'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon'

A film by Ang Lee that transcends categorization and reminds us – simply, powerfully, indelibly – what we go to the movies for. A delightful one-of-a-kind martial arts romance where astounding fight sequences alternate with passionate yet idealistic love duets, 'Crouching Tiger' is a fusion film from top to bottom. Starring Chow Yun Fat, Michelle Yeoh and Zhang Ziyi. (1:59. PG-13 for violence and some sexuality.)

'Enemy at the Gates'

'Enemy at the Gates' lumbers clumsily across the screen like one of its own Nazi tanks. This World War II tale of a sniper duel that parallels the bloody battle for Stalingrad has an indisputable visual power but it's nothing you'd want to have a conversation with – or, for that matter, about. Stars Jude Law and Ed Harris. With Joseph Fiennes. Directed by Jean-Jacques Annaud. (2:11. R, strong, graphic war violence and some sexuality.)

'Exit Wounds'

'Heartbreakers'

Sigourney Weaver and Jennifer Love Hewitt are terrific as a world-class mother-and-daughter con artist team who set out for the big score in Palm Beach but are ultimately confronted with their need for love. Their high spirits cannot paper over the feeling that the film is overly labored and overly long. With Ray Liotta, Gene Hackman, Jason Lee and Anne Bancroft. (2:03) PG-13, for sex-related content, including dialogue.)

Movies

'Joe Dirt'

Two words tell you everything you need to know about this movie: Adam Sandler. 'Joe Dirt' is his latest gross-out production, so expect copious amounts of bathroom humor. Then the film, starring David Spade as a red-neck janitor searching for his parents, has the audacity to have a heart. You can't have it both ways. The movie features an all-star cast, including Christopher Walken and Dennis Miller, who have some funny lines but can't save this mindless dreck. PG-13 for crude and sex-related humor, and for language. 92 min.

'Josie and the Pussycats'

It's a bad sign when a reviewer gets in to see a movie for free, yet still wants his money back. Though this movie has a few mildly funny moments, 'Josie' is one of the emptiest films imaginable. Adapted from the comic book and cartoon series, the movie stars Rachael Leigh Cook, Rosario Dawson and Tara Reid as the pop trio. They become overnight stars through the machinations of two scheming record execs (Parker Posey and Alan Cumming), who use the Pussycats as pawns in a mass merchandising scheme. This slim, whisker's-worth-of-plot-is-so-shallow it's like watching a bunch of defanged, declawed felines trying to get at the catnip inside a toy mouse. They'll bat it around quite a bit, but they really won't accomplish anything beyond coating the mouse in cat spit. PG-13 for language and mild sensuality. 97 min.

'Just Visiting'

Director Jean-Marie Gaubert and stars Jean Reno and Christian Clavier relocate their 1993 French comedy 'Les Visiteurs' to the United States, where a 12th century nobleman is accidentally transported. (1:28. PG-13 for violence and crude humor.)

'The Mexican'

A violence-prone screwball farce that has its eye on being a jaunty, picaresque adventure, kind of a updated version of those off-the-cuff road movies of some years back. It wants ever so desperately to be successfully hip and off-beat, but it can't manage to make it happen. Its best performance is not given by its pair of leads – Brad Pitt and Julia Roberts – but by James Gandolfini of 'Sopranos' fame. (2:03. R for violence and language.)

'Pokmon 3: The Movie'

Two Tylenol and a pair of earplugs might be enough to get you through this. The animated world of Pokmon land crystallizes and morphs into one reality after another. The Pokmon themselves screech and roar as they do battle. Sure, it holds kids' attention. The noise alone prevents them from forming any other complete thought. (1:14. G.)

'Someone Like You'

A jaunty romantic comedy that's a comfortable fit for Ashley Judd, who in turn is surrounded by a stellar supporting cast including Greg Kinnear, Hugh Jackman, Marisa Tomei and Ellen Barkin. Adapted by Elizabeth Chandler from Laura Zigman's novel 'Isquolsquo Animal Husbandry,' the film is smart, amiable and well-paced, and director Tony Goldwyn brings to it an all-too-rare buoyancy and breeziness. (1:47. PG-13 for sexual content, including dialogue, and for some language).

'Spy Kids'

An engaging premise (two pre-teens have to rescue spy parents Antonio Banderas and Carla Guigino from the bad guys) is made into a winning family film that's lively, imaginative and possessed of a playful sense of humor. Not what you'd expect from the maker of 'Mariachi' and 'From Dusk Till Dawn,' but writer-director Robert Rodriguez is apparently something of a big kid at heart. (1:28. PG, for action sequences).

'Tomcats'

A raunchy and rowdy comedy targeting young males, stars Jerry O'Connell as a likable guy with a serious problem and a short time to solve it. Raucously energetic and replete with a barrage of graphic sexual humor. Written and directed by Gregory Poirier. With Shannen Elizabeth and Jake Busey. (1:35. R, for strong sexual content including dialogue, and for language).

'Traffic'

Director Steven Soderbergh has once again opted for a change of pace. The film effortlessly intertwines several complex stories across two countries and several cities without ever dropping a stitch. Unfortunately, it's much less secure when it comes to the creation of individualized characters. The film's best performance is by Benicio Del Toro as a Mexican state policeman. With Michael Douglas, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Don Cheadle, Luis Guzman, Ray Castro and Dennis Quaid. (2:27. R, for drug content language, violence and some sexuality.)

WEEKEND

The Washington Post

BOUNCE (PG-13, 2000, 105 minutes, Miramax).

Whether their old off-screen romance has had anything to do with it, real-life exes Ben Affleck and Gwyneth Paltrow share a wonderful rapport in this tale of two lovebirds, each of whom is rebounding from misfortune. Abby (Paltrow) is just getting over the accidental plane-crash death of her husband Greg (Tony Goldwyn) when she meets Buddy (Affleck), a recovering alcoholic. What Abby doesn't know is that Buddy is the guy who gave up his seat on the plane so that Greg could get home to his family. She doesn't know this because Buddy doesn't tell her, any more than he tells her that his original reason for looking her up is his own guilt. Heavy stuff for a light romance, no? Not for filmmaker Don Roos, whose first film, "The Opposite of Sex" dealt with far more twisted behavior. Despite Buddy's ulterior motives and deception, the two end up falling genuinely in love – a love that, for whatever reason, never lets you doubt it for a second. Contains obscenity and a discreet bedroom scene.

– Michael O'Sullivan

Based on the true story of Carl Brashear, this movie covers a lot of narrative ground. Brashear's bid to become the Navy's first African-American Master Diver, including courtship of his soon-to-be wife, Jo (Aunjanue Ellis), a love-hate relationship with diving instructor Billy Sunday (Robert De Niro), and run-ins with military racists and a certain Capt. Hartigan (David Keith), who tries to stall Brashear's career. Unfortunately, director George Tillman Jr. (who made "Soul Food") and screenwriter Scott Marshall Smith have made an earnest but C-plus tribute to an A-grade character. The C-plus is mostly thanks to vigorous performances from Gooding-and-De Niro as his snarling (and fictional) mentor. "Men of Honor" is clearly one part truth and many parts movie hyperbole. It's really up to you, if you're ready to take the plunge. Contains racial epithets, violence and a particularly gruesome tragedy.

College of Southern Idaho

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Most high school graduates spend the summer before college working, reflecting, maturing and hanging out with friends.

Focus on

Matt Gunning
CSI baseball

Gunning and a handful of other high school players rode from Seattle to Kansas City, playing games along the way, to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Negro Leagues. Highlights included playing at Safeco Field and meeting baseball legend Buck O'Neil at the Negro League Hall of Fame.

"It was a great experience," Gunning said. "Some days we'd ride 100 miles, play that night, stay over and get back on the road the next day."

Besides being a traveling classroom of baseball history, the trip taught Gunning some life lessons.

"We had to organize everything," Gunning said. "It taught me a lot about taking care of myself and living on the road."

Gunning has also learned some valuable lessons in his first year as a Golden Eagle. The rifle-armed, right fielder leads the Eagles in runs batted in with 29 and doubles with 11. And in only his first year as an outfielder, he's become the person opposing teams are least likely to run on.

"I love playing right field," Gunning said. "When there's a runner on third and there might be a sac fly, I'm hoping the ball gets hit to me."

Gunning pitched and played first base prior to coming to CSI but the move to right field has been a natural one. He plays extra-shallow to bait runners into trying his arm, but rarely is the ball hit over his head. He's committed only four errors.

"I can see the whole field in front of me out in right," Gunning said. "I can see how the play develops and what people are trying to do. It's different than in the infield."

Gunning learned the game while growing up in Edmonton, Alberta and Victoria, British Columbia. As an 11 year old he played with 12- and 13-year-olds in the PeeWee Nationals with Team Alberta. In 1998 he played in the British Columbia Summer Games. Two years ago he was a member of Team British Columbia in the Baseball Canada Cup.

"It's tougher to play baseball in Canada because of the weather," Gunning said. "There's a shorter playing season and there's no high school teams so everybody has to be on a club team."

Though he's batting only .264 for CSI this season, he delivers with men on base. Gunning's batting average rises to .356 with a runner on and he's 2-for-6 with the bases loaded.

Compare that to the dismal .149 he hits with the bases empty and Gunning might be a prime candidate for clean-up next season.

"We're all just trying to become pro-style hitters," Gunning said. "There were some things that I could get away with in high school with the slower pitching and the metal bats that I can't now. This is really a pitcher's conference."

Question and Answer

Has it been easier for you with four Canadians on the team?

"We get a lot of Canadian jokes but it's nice to have a couple guys from home on the team."

Is there a big leaguer that you model yourself after?

"I wear No. 33 because of Larry Walker. He's a right fielder from British Columbia and I try and pattern myself after him."

Who's the best all-time baseball player?

What's a quirky Canadian thing?

"Everybody's seen some movies that stereotype us. We talk a little different I guess, but other than that nothing really."

NHL PLAYOFFS

Super Mario can't overcome Caps

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Not only didn't Mario Lemieux score in his first playoff appearance in four years, he didn't even manage a shot on goal.

The Washington Capitals, fighting a decade-long Pittsburgh Penguins jinx, put a hex of their own on the unretired great, kept a body on him all game and shut him down.

Peter Bondra scored the only goal early in the second period, and Olaf Kolzig made 16 saves for his fifth playoff shutout in Thursday's 1-0 victory in Game 1 of their first-round series.

In the seventh playoff meeting between the teams in 11 seasons, the Capitals avoided the disastrous start that led to a 7-0 defeat in Game 1 and a five-game series defeat a year ago. The closest the Penguins came to a goal came when Washington defenseman Calle Johansson just barely cleared Jan Hrdina's shot before it crossed the goal line in the first period, a call so close it had to be reviewed by the video replay judge.

Eagles meet North Idaho

CSI baseball team has conference placement in mind

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Only one game separated the College of Southern Idaho and North Idaho College in the final Scenic West Athletic Conference baseball standings last season.

With 16 games yet to play this season, one game again separates the sister schools.

But instead of battling for seeding in the SWAC tournament, the Cardinals and Eagles are battling just to make it in.

"We're still fighting to be in the tournament," said CSI coach Jim Walker. "We can't worry about being a second seed right now. We need to worry about being one of the top six teams at the end."

From up north
Today: CSI vs. NIC (2), 4 p.m.
Saturday: CSI vs. NIC (2), noon

After winning eight of their last 10 games, the Eagles are finally starting to come together after a slow start. CSI's split with Dixie State College last weekend moved the Eagles back into sixth place in the league and gave a glimpse of a team with great potential.

"We've manufactured some runs and that's been successful for us," Walker said. "I'd like to have a couple of innings where we could bunch some runs. Our pitchers won those games against Dixie. We didn't win them at the plate."

On paper and in the standings, CSI and NIC are very similar. The Cardinals, 16-14 overall and 10-10 in SWAC play, are holding opponents to a .242 batting average. The Eagles, 21-17 overall and 11-9 in the SWAC, have held hitters to .239. NIC's staff earned run average is 4.29. CSI's ERA is 4.02.

"Overall I think our staff is better than their staff," Walker said. "Then it's a toss up at the plate."

The Eagles played NIC only two times last year because poor weather canceled two games. CSI lost the first game 3-2 in a pitchers' duel but out-slugged the Cardinals 8-2 in the second game.

Both teams have faced Snow College and Salt Lake Community College this year with mixed results. The Eagles swept the Badgers while NIC dropped a game to Snow, but CSI lost 3-of-4 to the Bruins as the Cardinals split.

CSI is the more dominant team at the plate, batting 13 points higher than North Idaho while scoring 71 more runs, but NIC has the conference's leading hitter in Joe Bisant. The Cardinals center fielder is batting .451 in the SWAC with 10 doubles and three triples. He's also third in stolen bases with 16.

"If you take away (Bisant), overall their averages aren't really any better than ours," Walker said. "If we can score some runs we should win."

The deciding factor might be whether CSI can get as excited about playing NIC as it did about facing Dixie. The Eagles had

Heyburn soccer player to kick it in Europe for United States

The Times-News

But Brody Johnson will do just that. The 16-year-old Minico sophomore recently was selected by the People to People Sports Ambassadors Program to represent the United States on the under-17 boys' soccer team in Germany this summer.

Brody Johnson

He'll fly to Amsterdam July 17 before transferring to Dusseldorf, Germany where he will attend a four-day training camp.

"This will be my first time off the continent," Johnson said. "I'm excited to see what the people are like and to try the foods.

"I've always dreamed of going to Europe and seeing what it was like."

That dream became reality when Johnson was notified by the organization that he had been selected as part of the team.

But to this day, neither he, nor his family, know how he was recognized.

"We've asked a couple of times and the only thing they could tell us was that they had either read in the paper when he had done something or that one of his teachers had nominated him," said Johnson's mother Kristie. "But we don't even have a clue."

Back in December, the Johnsons attended an informational meeting in Pocatello that outlined the program after receiving a letter in the mail.

"We went to a meeting and they just gave us a letter to fill out, kind of like an application," Kristie Johnson said.

Johnson listed three references – Minico coach Dennis Haynes, and his high school English and math teachers, but neither of them had nominated him.

Despite having to fund the entire trip, Kristie Johnson said it is worth the expense.

"We felt it would be a very wonderful opportunity for him," she said. "He's been playing soccer since he was about 6 years old. He was playing when nobody else wanted to play."

As a freshman last year, Johnson played center forward for Minico's varsity soccer team and was selected to the Idaho under-15 Olympic Development Team.

The People to People Sports Ambassador's Program was founded in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Between games and training sessions, Johnson will spend much of his time touring, sightseeing, and learning about German culture.

"There were other programs available in Australia and New Zealand," Johnson said. "This one is shorter than the others but we play more games. (It) means a little less touring and more soccer, which is what I wanted."

The trip runs from July 17-July 30.

Johnson's parents are Don and Kristie Johnson.

NBA votes to end ban on zone defense

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS – In perhaps the NBA's most radical rule change since the 24-second clock was introduced in 1954, league owners have lifted a 54-year ban on zone defenses.

Zones, starting next season, will be permitted with only one restriction, defenders won't be allowed to stand in the lane more than an arm's length away from an offensive player for more than three seconds.

The rule was changed by virtue of "yes" votes Thursday from 22 of 29 teams. That's two more than the minimum required for passage, with Mavericks owner Mark Cuban providing the only abstention.

Houston and San Antonio voted against four proposed changes, which were presented in an all-or-nothing package. Cuban said he abstained "because the measure was already passed by the time it got to me."

Zones were outlawed in the NBA halfway through its debut campaign in 1946-47. They have been controversially resurrected in an attempt to restore player and ball movement, and violating the defensive three-second rule will be punished by a technical foul – as opposed to the mere change of possession that accompanies offensive three-second calls.

"Nobody can tell you exactly what will happen here," said NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik. "But, much as the no-zone (rule) is identified with the NBA in this day and age you can't adopt a position that we're never going to change something."

Zone supporters believe that eliminating the complex illegal-defense restrictions will generate more old-school passing and cutting and curtail the increasing emphasis on isolation play.

The league's many high-profile detractors, however, worry that zones will stifle the individual flair of the most marketable stars and reduce the game to a procession of jump shots. Michael Jordan has been among the most vocal protesters, saying he could never have achieved as much as he did had zones been allowed.

Kimberly blanks TF sophs in the cold

The Times-News

KIMBERLY – In bitter-cold conditions, Kayla Lundy tossed a one-hit shutout and Mindy Woodhall went 3-for-3 with an RBI and run scored as Kimberly blanked the Twin Falls sophomores 2-0 Thursday at Kimberly.

The Bulldogs scored all their runs in the first on a Woodhall triple to plate Zan Mickelson before a Lundy ground ball scored Woodhall. Lundy had four strikeouts for Kimberly (7-2, 3-0 conference), who hosts Buhl on Wednesday.

"I don't think anybody was wanting to be out there," said Kimberly coach Ritch Bishop. "It was pretty bad."

Gooding sweeps track meet

GOODING – Despite windy, cold conditions the Gooding boys' and girls' track teams swept their Gooding Invitational meet Thursday at Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind.

Senator senior Ryan Etchart broke a six-year school record in the pole vault clearing 14-feet, "in about 40 mph wind," said Gooding coach Kent Siefert.

Besides taking the girls' 400-meter relay, the Senators got wins by April Homan, who upset teammate and state cross country champion Carin Patterson in the 1,600-meter run and Patterson, who won the 3,200-meter event.

The Senators travel to Boise today for the annual Boise Relays at Bronco Stadium at Boise State University.

Bobcats outlast foul weather, Jerome squad

By Jeff Behlman
Times-News writer

BURLEY – It would be difficult at the very least, to find weather conditions in which the Burley Bobcats will not play tennis.

Through all of the wintry-ill weather this season, including howling windstorms and near-blizzards, Burley has yet to cancel a practice.

That hardy resilience showed Thursday when the team defeated Jerome 9-3 in less than optimum conditions.

"I believe the wind played to our advantage today," Burley coach Shane Ogden said. "We consistently practice in bad weather so that we can come prepared for days like this."

But Bobcat doubles player Lindsay Wallis, a South African exchange student, said the wind played havoc in her and teammate Catherine Fuller's 6-2, 6-0 loss.

"It's difficult to play in conditions like this," Wallis said, "but I suppose if you're really into the game you can play in anything."

It's hard to say if it was the wind, but something played a factor in the 6-4, 6-2 comeback win the boys' doubles duo of Dehan Kim and Jonathan Barker produced Thursday.

The team came out sluggish in the first set, finding themselves in a 1-4 situation.

"We came out super slow today," Barker said. "But we had a little talk with the coach. (We) stopped concentrating on winning and losing as much as just trying to hit the ball well."

The advice worked as the Bobcat duo went on to take five games in a row for the 6-4 set.

"It was way too windy," Kim said. "It definitely threw both teams off a little."

Finding ways to predict the wind and play along with it was key. By the second set, Kim and Barker had it figured out, winning the first four games before trading games with Jerome en route to the 6-2 win for the match.

In mixed doubles play, Jessica Thompson and Chris Lancaster of Jerome conquered the elements winning 6-4, 6-3 over Philip Whipple and Bethany Anderson.

"We got on a roll right off the bat and took an early lead," Thompson said. "But it was definitely a lot harder to play in the wind."

For Ogden, it was the first time he had taken a win over Jerome in his three years as coach of the Bobcats. But Ken Wright, the veteran Tiger coach of 26 years, wasn't quick to make a big deal of it.

"These dual meets really mean very little," Wright said. "District means nothing because once you get to state everything changes. I've seen teams that take third in their district go on to win state."

MILWAUKEE (AP) – Ray Allen scored 30 of his career-high 43 points in the first half as the Central Division champion Bucks ran away from Utah.

Allen matched the Milwaukee record of eight 3-pointers, set earlier this season by Tim Thomas against Portland.

The Bucks (50-29), who clinched their first division championship since 1985-86 by virtue of Toronto's loss at Detroit on Wednesday night, secured their first 50-victory season since 1986-87 and improved to 30-10 at home, a mark they last achieved in 1988-89.

NBA

Magic 101, 76ers 77

ORLANDO, Fla. – Tracy McGrady scored 25 of his 31 points in the first half to lead the Orlando Magic to a 101-77 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers on Thursday night.

Troy Hudson added 21 points and Bo Outlaw grabbed 14 rebounds for Orlando, which had lost two straight games since clinching a playoff berth last week.

The Magic remained a half-game behind Charlotte in the race for the sixth seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Hornets beat New Jersey 88-78 Thursday.

Tyrone Hill's 16 points led Philadelphia, which suffered its worst loss since a 25-point defeat to Houston on Feb. 7. Allen Iverson, the league's leading scorer, was held to 12 points on 5-for-15 shooting.

Hornets 88, Nets 78

The victory was Charlotte's first since a 103-88 win at New Jersey last week and completed a four-game sweep of the season series over the injury-depleted Nets.

Campbell, who shot 6-for-9 from the field and 10-of-11 from the line, scored 15 of his points in the third quarter.

Reserve Eddie Robinson scored 18 points for the Hornets. Baron Davis added 16, Jamal Mashburn 12 and P.J. Brown had 12 rebounds.

Kings 107, Spurs 105, OT

SAN ANTONIO – Peja Stojakovic hit a short jumper in the final seconds of overtime as Sacramento set an NBA record for overtime victories in a season.

Sacramento won its ninth overtime game and extended its winning streak to five games despite a season-high 42 points by San Antonio's Tim Duncan and the overtime absence of Chris Webber, who fouled out at the end of regulation.

The Kings trail the Spurs by 1.5 games in the race for the best record in the league. San Antonio has the league's best record at 56-23 and three games remaining. Sacramento is 54-24 with four games remaining.

Duncan had 11 rebounds, four blocks and five assists as the Spurs' five-game winning streak was snapped.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

TF's Horner catches for Triple-A Tacoma

Horner, who was assigned to minor league camp during spring training, is batting .222 in three games for the Rainiers. He has two hits in nine at-bats with one RBI and three strikeouts.

Space is limited for 'Fly Like an Eagle'

TWIN FALLS – Only two spots remained out of 30 entries for the fifth annual "Fly Like an Eagle" golf tournament April 28 at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Entry fees are $50 per person or $250 per five-person team for the 18-hole scramble, which begins with a shotgun start at 2 p.m. Besides greens fees, the entry fee includes a vest windbreaker and a steak and chicken barbecue.

Proceeds benefit the College of Southern Idaho athletic department. For more information, call 733-9554, Ext. 2486, or stop by the CSI athletics office inside the CSI gymnasium.

Buhl youth baseball holds signups Saturday

BUHL – Buhl Youth Baseball will hold final baseball and softball signups for boys and girls aged 6-15 on Saturday at Buhl Elementary. Registration will be from 8:30-10 a.m. on Saturday. For more information, call Vince Hamilton at 543-6201. For girls' information, call Leanne Montgomery at 543-8619.

Baseball camp reschedules for Tuesday

BUHL – Bad weather forced the Buhl High School baseball team to reschedule its baseball camp for all boys and girls in grades K-8 on Tuesday from 4-7 p.m. at Clint Faux Memorial Field.

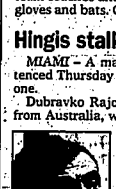
The fundamentals of baseball will be taught during the camp by team coaches and players. Campers must bring their own baseball gloves and bats. Cleats are optional.

Hingis stalker receives two-year sentence

MIAMI – A man convicted of stalking Martina Hingis was sentenced Thursday to two years in jail but will be freed in less than one.

Dubravko Rajcevic, a 46-year-old Croatian-born naval architect from Australia, will get credit for 375 days he has already served since his arrest at the 2000 Ericsson Open near Miami.



Dubravko Rajcevic

He will be on probation for two years after his release, but he will be subject to deportation to Australia at that point, and it is uncertain whether the legal reach of probation will extend there.

Prosecutors had asked for the maximum four-year term but told the judge that Hingis' family would accept two if the sentence included an order that he stay away from her.

Rajcevic says he will sign a court order promising to stay away from Hingis for 150 years because he's no longer interested in her.

"This is like the final day. I definitely don't have to worry about that anymore and I won't be questioned about it," she said.

Jays postpone game after roof panels collide

The retractable roof was being opened when two of the three panels collided, causing a tear of about 20 feet.

"Some very big pieces of metal fell on to the field," Blue Jays President Paul Godfrey said. "We're very, very thankful there was no one on the field that could have got hurt."

Godfrey said about 10 pieces of the roof remain loose, and that it would take at least 10 hours to secure them.

The collision occurred at about 1:30 p.m. (MST) while some Royals players were taking extra batting practice.

Mariners sweep Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) – Edgar Martinez hit a three-run homer to help end Tim Hudson's winning streak, and the Seattle Mariners completed their first three-game sweep at Oakland by beating the Athletics 7-3 Thursday.

Hudson (1-1) was 20-6 for the A's last season and had been 8-0 in nine regular-season starts since losing to Cleveland last Aug. 23. He allowed five runs, six hits and four walks in 2 1-3 innings, matching his second-shortest outing in the major leagues.

American League

Jamie Moyer (1-0) gave up three runs and 10 hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Red Sox 8, Orioles 2

BOSTON – Troy O'Leary went 3-for-4 with four RBIs and Shea Hillenbrand singled in a run in the fourth inning to extend his season-opening hitting streak to nine games, one behind Ted Williams' team record.

Tomokazu Ohka (1-0) allowed runs in the first two innings but struck out the side in the third and retired 12 of his last 14 batters.

Jose Mercedes (0-2) gave up eight runs and 10 hits in 4 1-3 innings and made an obscene gesture at fans as he exited. He then took out his anger on a couple of dugout water coolers.

Indians 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT – Juan Gonzalez was 1-for-3 with two RBIs in his first game back in Detroit since leaving the Tigers to sign with the Indians.

Gonzalez, heckled before the game and booed repeatedly,hit an RBI double in the first off Chris Holt (1-1) and a sacrifice fly in the ninth off Todd Jones. Roberto Alomar added a three-run double.

Bartolo Colon (1-1) struck out eight for Cleveland, which took a 4-0 lead as it ended a three-game losing streak and extended Detroit's skid to four.

Rockies break no-hit bid, hold off Cards 6-4

ST. LOUIS (AP) – Dustin Hermanson took a no-hit bid into the seventh inning but the Colorado Rockies rallied to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4 Thursday on Mark Little's two-run single in the ninth.

Hermanson didn't allow a hit until Larry Walker's one-out, two-run homer in the seventh. Todd Helton homered two pitches for a 3-2 lead.

National League

Steve Kline (0-1) didn't get a batter out and allowed three runs in the ninth. The tying run came home on Mike Timlin's wild pitch.

John Wasdin (1-0) got two outs in the eighth and Jose Jimenez finished for his second save.

Members of the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago White Sox line up on the baselines as the national anthem is played before an exhibition game March 30 in Milwaukee. The game was the first played at Miller Park, the Brewers' new stadium.

Brewers 12, Astros 4

Tyler Houston and Luis Lopez hit two-run homers for Milwaukee, which had been 0-5 against the Astros this season.

Jeff D'Amico (1-0) allowed three runs and six hits in six innings and struck out six. Octavio Dotel (1-1) gave up six runs and seven hits in four-plus innings.

Padres 8, Giants 3

SAN DIEGO – Adam Eaton (2-0) survived solo homers by Barry Bonds and Jeff Kent as San Diego stopped its seven-game losing streak against the Giants.

Eaton allowed three runs and seven hits in six innings. Livan Hernandez (1-2) gave up five runs – four earned – and eight hits in six innings.

Mets 1, Braves 0

Todd Zeile drew a leadoff walk on four pitches from Kerry Ligtenberg (0-2) and Tsuyoshi Shinjo sacrificed. Atlanta challenged Ordonez, and the No. 8 hitter lined a drive down the left-field line.

Armando Benitez (1-0) sailed a wild pitch to the backstop in the 10th while issuing an intentional walk to Chipper Jones. Rafael Furcal scooted to third with one out, yet was stranded when Brian Jordan hit a shallow fly ball and Javy Lopez grounded out.

Reds 11, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH – Sean Casey hit a long home run and went 2-for-5 with two RBIs. The Pittsburgh native finished 9-for-14 with two homers, three doubles and eight RBIs in the first series in PNC Park.

Omar Olivares (0-2), whose ERA climbed to 8.18, allowed seven runs and eight hits in five innings.

Pete Harnisch (1-1) got the victory – his eighth in his last 11 decisions against Pittsburgh – despite allowing four runs in six innings, including the first of Brian Giles' two homers.

COMMENTARY
Jim Litke

CHICAGO – Make no mistake: Michael Jordan is more serious about a comeback than anyone suspects.

The first bite of a pork chop is poised at the end of his fork. An unlit cigar sits next to an ashtray, set there to follow the meal. Jordan never looked less like the savior of the NBA than in those few moments late Thursday afternoon.

Read between the lines of his answers, see the gleam in his eye that withered hundreds of battle-tested opponents, and you understand what Jordan's father meant when he talked about his son's "competition problem."

Whether he will admit it or not, James Jordan's most famous son is beginning to plot every detail of the journey back.

For two hours, Jordan sat at the bar of a restaurant he owns, thinking about feeding himself, not his competitive drive. He took care of that in the previous two hours, playing pickup basketball at a West Side gym.

While his meal got cold, Jordan patiently answered questions, still wearing sneakers and a gray sweatsuit, topped off by the mischievous grin upon which a franchise, a sport and the Nike empire once rested.

He keeps insisting there is no more news today than the day before, or the day before that. Ask him a dozen times whether all the speculation about a comeback the past few weeks has made him any more serious, and the response is the same every time:

No.

But a moment later, he lets slip that he is keeping up with public opinion.

"I got that stuff on my refrigerator," Jordan said. He is referring to articles written by a handful of sports writers, including myself and Jay Marriotti of the Chicago Sun-Times, the only other writer at the lunch.

Then Jordan makes clear that what worries him least of all is the one thing everybody seems most concerned about – that a comeback with less-than-spectacular results would somehow tarnish his legend.

"They can't take away my six rings," he said.

Ask him to go further and he refers you to his recent denials. The only way he is coming back, he says, is at the same level he left and he is nowhere near that now. There is no equivocating on either point. The glare that accompanies that message shouts it. Jordan is not about to embarrass himself.

He will not say if there is a timetable, but there is definitely a checklist: He would have to be able to run the court at full speed for an entire game.

He would have to be able to score in the clutch, the way he did before, with every defender on the floor and a packed arena knowing he will take the final shot. And he would have to be able to stop the NBA's new generation of high-flying young guns at the other end. Jordan has too much pride to show up in the background of another player's highlight film.

Asked how he plans to make up the difference against younger, fresher legs, Jordan cracked another mischievous grin.

"I'm smarter," he said.

Now 38, he's preparing better than most accounts would have us believe. He's no longer posting up options traders in half-court games to 11. He's playing full-court against real competition.

Former Chicago Bulls teammate Bill Wennington was on the invited list for Thursday's games, as were Northwestern assistant coaches Craig Robinson and Mitch Henderson, who played college ball together at Princeton.

Another player leaving the gym an hour before Jordan said he's watched some of the games the past few weeks from adjoining courts. "He's really picked up the intensity the last couple of times," he said.

The man never lacked for motivation, but this goes beyond a couple of clippings tacked to a refrigerator. He owns a piece of the Washington Wizards and oversees their basketball operations, but it's clear his departure from the Chicago Bulls has left a bad taste in his mouth.

Right now, when Jordan talks about a payback, he is still in full general-manager mode. Any plans about ruling the NBA again are confined, at the moment, to the team the Wizards put on the floor.

He scouts players already in the league and those about to join it with a passion and knowledge that belies how little time he spends sitting behind a desk. But Jordan won't go into specifics – he can't. To do that would be tampering, a subject that hints at the next set of obstacles in Jordan's path.

A host of official roadblocks exist. Coming back as a player would require Jordan to sell his share of ownership in the Wizards (he also owns a piece of Washington's NHL franchise, the Capitals). He would have to reach an accommodation with NBA commissioner David Stern on when and where he makes a return, and how much he would be paid.

There were plenty of chuckles earlier Thursday, when Knicks general manager Scott Layden said in a reference to Jordan, "I think 29 teams would be interested in him." But that's because no one thought Jordan was serious about coming back as a player, let alone coming back somewhere besides Washington.

Yet, when a questioner lays out the problems and possibilities of reshaping-his-own-team-or-moving somewhere else, Jordan's response is a coy smile.

The permutations are fun to ponder. Phil Jackson, the only coach Jordan said he would play for, has perhaps the league's most talented team in Los Angeles.

Former sidekick Scottie Pippen is playing in Portland. Charles Barkley might have blown the lid off the comeback talk by letting it be known he wanted to play again – but only if he could persuade Jordan to join him.

Who's to say Jordan couldn't put the band back together, add a few different players, or start a new one altogether? His name is still magical, even if his game has plenty of rust on it. That's the one thing he will admit, over and over.

It will be months before even he knows if he can play. That much is certain. Meanwhile, Jordan soothes his competitive urges by watching a kid who reminds him how precious a gift like his can be.

"I love Tiger," he said, happy to switch to a subject he can discuss freely. "I see the same thing in him I had."

Jim Litke, a Chicago-based national sports columnist for The Associated Press, has covered Jordan since his first practice with the Chicago Bulls in 1984. Write him: jlitke@ap.org

NHL

The powerful Pittsburgh line of Lemieux, Jaromir Jagr and Hrdina was on the ice nearly half the time in the first two periods, but Hrdina's no goal was the only shot taken by the trio until the third period. Coach Ivan Hlinka, coaching his first NHL playoff game, split up Lemieux and Jagr for several shifts in the third period, with little success.

Lemieux, who ended a 3.5-year retirement in December, didn't come close to adding on to his career totals of 70 playoff goals and 85 assists – failing to record a shot for the first time in his 44 games this season.

Jagr managed two shots, his first with 4:33 remaining, as part of a flurry of late chances stopped by Kolzig and the Capitals defense.

The Capitals have lost five of six series against the Penguins. Needless penalties caused last year's series to get off to such a bad start, and they missed the perfect chance to turn the tables when they failed to score – or even take a shot on goal – during 40 seconds of a 5-on-3, disorganized power play that expired around the seven-minute mark.

Then, shortly after both Pittsburgh penalties expired, Hrdina nearly put the puck in the net. On a counterattack down the right wing, Hrdina passed to Wayne Primeau, whose shot by blocked by Kolzig.

Bondra's goal came after Janne Laukkanen was sent to the penalty box for holding 28 seconds into the second period. Bondra scored seven seconds later with a one-timer from the blue line through traffic to rookie goalie Johan Hedberg's glove side.

Devils 5, Hurricanes 1

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – Bobby Holik scored twice and Martin Brodeur had to make only 17 saves as the New Jersey Devils opened their Stanley Cup title defense with a 5-1 victory over the Carolina Hurricanes on Thursday night.

Sergei Brylin, Petr Sykora and Patrik Elias also scored as the Devils outshot the Hurricanes 36-18 in Game 1 of the best-of-7 Eastern Conference first-round series.

Blues 3, Sharks 1

ST. LOUIS – Pierre Turgeon, with a goal and two assists, and Roman Turek, who made 21 saves, led St. Louis past San Jose in the opener of a Western Conference first-round series.

Turek, widely blamed for the Blues' stunning first-round exit last spring at the hands of the Sharks after St. Louis won the Presidents' Trophy, had a very strong game after allowing one goal in his last two starts.

Scott Young and Al MacInnis also scored for the Blues, who also took a 1-0 series lead before dropping the next three last spring against the Sharks.

Patrick Marleau, who led the Sharks with 25 goals in the regular season, scored in the third period.

Sweden's Annika Sorenstam hits the ball out of the sand on the first hole of the LPGA Office Depot Tournament Thursday. A victory in the tournament would tie Sorenstam with Hall of Famers Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth as the only LPGA players to win four consecutively scheduled tour events.

Dementieva catches injury bug

Tennis

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) – Elena Dementieva took two long strides and lunged for a drop shot, barely reaching the ball to hit a winner and close out the first set Thursday.

Within moments, a trainer was looking at the Russian's left heel. A few hours later, she officially joined the list of injured players at the Bausch & Lomb Championships.

"I went on and tried to forget about it," the third-seed Dementieva said after her 6-4, 6-2 victory over countrywoman Elena Likhovtseva.

She worked her way gingerly around the court during the second set, but that simply delayed the inevitable.

After the match, Dementieva was walking on crutches, and went to a hospital to have the heel checked. Doctors diagnosed her with a partial tear of a tendon running down the bottom of her foot. She was listed as questionable for today's quarterfinal against sixth-seeded Amelie Mauresmo, a 7-6 (3), 4-6, 6-3 winner over Lisa Raymond.

If the injury is as bad as it looked, it will further ease top-seeded Martina Hingis' road to a title in her first appearance on the green clay at Amelia Island.

Hingis defeated 15th-seeded Henrietta Nagyova 6-1, 6-3 in a hard-hitting, back-and-forth match that was much closer than the score indicated. Hingis pulled ahead 2-0 in the second set but Nagyova tied it at 2 by winning a game that went to five deuces.

"I wouldn't say I got lazy, but maybe a little cocky out there," Hingis said. "I felt very confident. Then, all of the sudden, it was 2-all."

She advanced to play in the quarterfinals against Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, who defeated ninth-seeded Paola Suarez 6-2, 6-4. Hingis leads the series 15-1.

Before the tournament began, Monica Seles and Anna Kournikova pulled out with foot injuries. On Monday, Mary Pierce tweaked her back throwing a medicine ball, and she had to withdraw. Second-seeded Conchita Martinez lost her first match, leaving very few well-known names outside of Hingis.

After her match, Hingis learned that the man convicted of stalking her, Dubravko Rajcevic, had been sentenced to two years in jail during a hearing in Miami.

In a night match, fourth-seeded Amanda Coetzer defeated 13th-seeded Jelena Dokic 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 to spoil Dokic's 18th birthday.

Coetzer will advance to play 10th-seeded Meghann Shaughnessy, who defeated Melien Tu 4-6, 7-5, 6-0.

Sorenstam trails Hurst at Depot

Golf

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Pat Hurst birdied four of the first nine holes en route to a 5-under 67 in Thursday's opening round of The Office Depot. Annika Sorenstam, going for a record-tying fourth consecutive victory, ran into trouble immediately.

Hurst rolled in a 20-footer for birdie on the first hole and saved par with a 10-footer on the 18th to take a two-shot lead. In between, she bogeyed the 11th and 17th, both par 4s.

The 54-hole event ends Saturday to avoid a conflict with Easter Sunday.

Sorenstam stumbled out of the gate with a double bogey on the 385-yard first hole at Wilshire Country Club. She hit left into one of the two bunkers that guard the green and three-putted.

Sorenstam is trying to join Hall of Famers Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth as the only LPGA players to win four consecutively scheduled events.

Nike Tour phenomenon leads WorldCom Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. – Doug Dunakey, best known for his 59 on the Nike Tour, shot a 6-under 65 on Thursday for a share of the lead with Vijay Singh and Billy Mayfair in the WorldCom Classic.

Dunakey, the 37-year-old player in his third full tour season, had seven birdies and one bogey on the touched-up Harbour Town Golf Links after averaging 74 in his eight first rounds this season.

Tewell records a 66 in The Tradition; Kite shoots a 72

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. – Doug Tewell, a three-time winner on the senior tour after winning four times on the regular tour, shot a 6-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead in The Tradition.

Mike McCullough and Tom Wargo were second, and Bob Gilder, Jim Holtgrieve and Terry Dill opened with 68s in the first major championship of the senior season.

Two-time former champion Gil Morgan bogeyed the last two holes to join John Jacobs, Jim Ahern, Jim Thorpe and Jose Maria Canizares at 69. Defending champion Tom Kite shot a 72.

DAR-ES-SALAM, Morocco – Ireland's Paul McGinley eagled the first hole en route to a 6-under 67 and a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Moroccan Open.

McGinley hit a 5-wood within 20 feet to set up his eagle on the par-5 10th – his opening hole – and added five birdies and a bogey on the Dar-es-Salam Red Course.

Yes, she is the most famous female soccer player in the world. Yes, a huge poster of her scoring a goal, fist raised in celebration, drapes the exterior of RFK Stadium. Yes, it is her name and marketability that will help determine whether her new team, the Washington Freedom, succeeds or fails.

But that doesn't make giving a speech, or giving an interview, any easier.

"I call it Mia Hamm's burden," said John Hendricks, chairman of the WUSA, which opens Saturday with the Freedom facing the Bay Area CyberRays at RFK Stadium. "But she's taken up that burden, I think, quite well. Some of us are naturally shy. Mia loves to play the sport. That's her favorite place in the world to be, out on the field in competition. But she knows the visibility of the founding players is critical to this league."

When Hamm is playing for the U.S. national team at the World Cup or the Olympics, she can always defer some attention to camera-friendly naturals such as Brandi Chastain or Julie Foudy. But the World Cup heroes are spread throughout the eight-team WUSA, and Hamm has been essentially the lone star-in-demand in Washington.

Her reputation precedes her. She doesn't play the soundbite game, and she can seem an ocean away when speaking to reporters. After a recent exhibition game at the University of Maryland, her green eyes darted this way and that as she fielded questions, as if she'd rather be anywhere else.

Then, for perhaps the 100th time in the past month, she was asked whether she can overcome her aversion to the spotlight and do whatever is necessary to promote the new league. It's a remarkable question considering she has worked tirelessly to promote her sport in general for the last decade.

"The best way I can promote a game is by what I do on the field, for my team," Hamm said. "That's the most important thing."

But there's obviously more, and there has been more: a rally at Union Station, an appearance on a morning news show, autograph sessions and visits to hospitals. Hamm has turned down many requests, but it would be hard to question her effort.

As Hamm spoke, scores of teen-age girls were screaming and chanting her name, waiting for her to walk to the fence to sign autographs. The posters, commercials, hospital visits and other promotions are working: More than 2,000 fans paid to watch the exhibition game against the Terrapins, more than some skeptics said the league would draw for regular season games.

"A lot of times when I'm out there I don't hear it," said Hamm, referring to the chants. "And that's probably good."

Hamm said she hopes that by the end of the season the fans will be chanting her teammates' names: Krista, Skylar, Amanda, Tracy and others.

Hamm's shyness is often mistaken for snobbishness, but her teammates from the national team are quick to set the record straight. Hamm is intense, competitive and very self-critical, but she's also an ultimate team player who will not let the league down.

Former Olympic downhill champion Bill Johnson, who has been in a coma since a crash at Big Mountain ski resort last month, is wheeled out of the ICU unit at Kalispell Regional medical Center Wednesday. Johnson was moved to a Portland hospital to be closer to his family. Johnson, 41, remains in a coma, but has improved enough that doctors felt it was safe to move him.

South Africa to investigate deadly soccer stampede

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) – Weeping relatives identified victims of a stampede at a soccer match between two of South Africa's top rivals and officials promised a judicial inquiry into the disaster that killed 43 people.

Fans and some officials said security at Wednesday's match between the Kaizer Chiefs and the Orlando Pirates was inadequate, not enough tickets had been sold in advance, and the game should not have been held on a weeknight, when people rush to the stadium after work.

"We had our plans and were confident, based on our previous experiences, that those plans were adequate. However, clearly, something went wrong," said Robin Petersen, chief of the Premier Soccer League, which organized the match.

It was the second time in a decade that a matchup between the two rivals had led to a fatal stampede. In 1991, 42 people were killed and more than 50 injured when a fight touched off a stampede at a Chiefs-Pirates exhibition game.

In Wednesday's tragedy, an estimated 15,000 people had gathered outside the perimeter of the Ellis Park stadium after its 60,000 seats had been filled, Petersen said.

Fans died in two stampedes – one of people pushing through the outer gates to get into the stadium, and one of people in the stands trying to get closer to the field. The outer fence broke in four places, and a fence surrounding the field collapsed.

Two of the 43 victims were children. Another 160 people were injured, and 89 of them were admitted to the hospital, said Molefi Oliphant, president of the South African Football Association.

The chaos was well under way when the game was called off 34 minutes into play with the score tied 1-1, said Roy Nation, who sobbed after identifying the body of his 11-year-old son, Roswell, at the morgue.

"We were shouting, 'Stop the game' and everything, and nobody reacted," he said. "After 45 minutes, they started to react."

Some have questioned whether there was enough security.

George Stainton, Ellis Park manager, said 1,232 security guards were on duty. In addition, several hundred police officers were there, and more were called out after the trouble started.

"This incident should not divide us now but rather bring us even closer to ensure that this horror story does not repeat itself," former President Nelson Mandela said.

Vikings win Snake River Classic

A team from Hazelton, comprising players from the 2001 Class A-3 boys' state championship Valley Vikings basketball team, edged Acequia 67-61 to win the 2001 Snake River Classic Basketball Tournament March 24 at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

The tournament, sponsored by the Snake River Chapter of the Boy Scouts of America, began with 49 teams from throughout the Magic and Wood River valleys. Of the five districts within the region, each held a double-elimination tournament with the top four teams advancing to the cross district single-elimination playoff.

The top two teams from both the east and west tournaments then advanced to the Council Final Four March 23 and 24. Besides champion Hazelton 1st, Crew 183 and runner-up East Side Acequia 1st Ward, Crew 53; the other two teams were Rupert 1st Ward, Crew 80 and Wendell 1st, Crew 175.

In the semifinals, Acequia downed Wendell 64-48. Christensen, a Declo High sophomore, led all scorers with 23 points. Cory Chandler scored 14 leading Wendell. Hazelton needed triple overtime to beat Rupert 66-60 in the other semifinal. Clark Wyatt paced Hazelton with 24 points. Taylor Duncan led Rupert with 22 points.

Rupert finished third with Wendell in fourth. Sponsors for the tournament included Mason's Trophies, Uptown Bistro and Eduardo's Restaurant.

LET'S GO BOWLING
Thelma Tucker

Jerry Miller has always been one of the leaders in bowling in Twin Falls. As a member of the professional circuit from 1979 to 1990, he bowled in many tournaments. But his marriage, which produced two daughters Lacy, 13, and Megan, 10, and farming took over his life. Bowling, however, remains a hobby.

Miller bowls on a team in the Valley League at Magic Bowl on Wednesday nights. Recently, he started a night with eight-straight strikes, finishing the game at 244. Game 2 started the same way but ended perfectly for the 16th 300 game of his bowling career.

At this point, Miller said, his focus changed because more important to him was rolling an 800 series. When he reached the 10th frame of the third game he knew it would take a spare and eight pins to reach the elusive 800.

The first ball was a strike, making him happy he didn't have to pick up the spare. He eventually rolled a 244 for an amazing 811 series. It was his eighth 800 series – 827 is his highest. He rolled his first 800 in 1977.

Miller is a very competitive bowler when it comes to championship tournaments, saying, "It's a release for me."

Though he admits to being highly competitive, Miller always finds time to visit with fellow bowlers, giving encouragement and helping them when he can. But most important to Miller is wife Patti Miller, who works at Thursday's, and his daughters.

Megan is into soccer and volleyball and Lacy plays soccer and basketball. Both attend school in Filer.

"I truly appreciate all my family and friends and all they have done for me," Miller said. "It is so great to be around them. Especially my mom and dad, Jean and Paul Miller."

Jerry Miller, you are a true asset to the bowling world and may you roll many more 300s as well as plenty of 800s.

In other bowling news: Summer registration is being taken as many events are now in the planning stages at area centers.

How about a family night with the kids? In most centers when a Young American Bowling Alliance (YABA) event is going on there is no smoking or drinking allowed, so bring those kids out and have a great time. And for you Bingo fans? Have you ever tried Bingo bowling? If you haven't you are really missing a lot of fun. Give me a call and I will tell you about it.

If you feel you need lessons on where to stand, how to roll the ball, or how to read the lanes, lessons are available as well. Call Kathy at 733-0369.

Rapids run dry against Boise teams

Rapids 2, Vallivue 2

Nicholas Jayo celebrated a birthday with the first goal of the match for Vallivue answered with two quick goals.

The Rapids (3-2-2) pulled out the draw with a successful penalty kick by Adam Kolojejchick. Coach Zak Martinez made the necessary second-half defensive changes with Nick Hoffman, Laton Stange, and Adam Russell registering outstanding defensive showings.

Caldwell 1, Rapids 0

Nampa 5, Rapids 0

In a defensive battle, Caldwell slipped by the Rapids with a late goal past keeper Janna Lively. Rapids defenders standing out included Mercedes Reeves, Emilee Williams and Megan Miller.

Against powerful Nampa, the Rapids (3-3-0) were no match, despite getting strong play by Risa Casperson, Madison Fisher, Katie Krumm and Katelyn Fjeld.

(Girls 13 and under)

Rapids 3, Weiser 2

Rapids 7, Meridian 0

The Rapids (4-1-0) beat pesky Weiser in Oregon with a pair of scores by Lacey Miller and Randi Fischer. Coach Vince Gibson cited the defensive work by Hannah Evan, Lauren Kolojejchick-Kotch, Kristi Grindstaff and Beth Howell in the win.

The second match became a goal-scoring clinic with the Rapids booting seven scores by Adrianne Browning, Miller, Abby Waters (2), Danielle Willetts (2) and Bea Wunderlich.

By Kevin Hall
The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – All's quiet on the asphalt now, but come Saturday, the rumble of motors and squeal of rubber will reverberate across the valley.

Magic Valley Speedway opens its 15th season Saturday with one of the biggest races of the season, the Bud 100, with as many as 20 Intermountain Late Model Super Stocks expected to attend. Also on hand for the first of 22 NASCAR Weekly Racing Series weekends will be the Budweiser Grand Nationals, Grand American Modifieds, NAPA Auto Parts Pony and Dairy Queen Thunder stocks.

"I can hardly wait," York said. "We've got more Modifieds, quite a few special events, many of the drivers back from the Grand Nationals and Pony classes ... I tell you we're pretty excited about the 2001 racing season."

"It's great, it went by quick," Meads said. "It feels good to be a champion, but it's not any different than any other season."

Meads, who besides driving the No. 1 Plymouth 'Cuda and the No. 1 Modified part-time this year, said his ultimate priority this season is helping pit for wife Michelle.

"It was finally nice to achieve something, and a big sigh of relief to not have to go out and chase a goal," he said. "Now it's about helping her to achieve a new goal. Everybody better be a little scared of her."

One person who never drives scared is defending Modifieds champion Steve Jones. Jones, who finished no less than third in every race last season and has moved to Twin Falls, won't be behind the wheel of his familiar No. 3 this season. The "wild-haired" one opted to buy a sleek, new 2001 racer.

Joining Meads in the Modifieds rookie pool this season will be Grand National runner-up Thomas Powell, of Gooding, and former Twin Falls resident Rob Best, 34, who purchased Jerome driver Brett Thompson's No. 27 car.

"I heard it was a good one so I thought I would get it," Best said.

Best, who moved back to the area from Coeur d'Alene said he may be considered a rookie, but he has plenty of track time behind the wheel of a 1979 Chevy Camaro Street Stock.

"I raced up there at Stateline Speedway and I did pretty well," he said.

Best won two track championships in street stock up north. He moved back to Twin Falls after his father recently passed away.

"I've been doing it for about 10 years now and I love it," he said. "It keeps me busy every night." He is married and has two children.

Among the local drivers appearing in the Bud 100 Saturday will be Jerome newlywed Brett Thompson, the most improved driver of 1999 who is now running a pro tour car on both the Northwest and Southwest series. After racing Saturday, Thompson hopes to run in Irwindale, Calif. April 21. Bad weather has cancelled three races in a row for Thompson, who finished fifth in Las Vegas earlier this spring.

Burley's Scott Lynch, who also is on the Southwest Tour, is scheduled to race in the Bud 100 as is 1996 Modifieds champion Eddy McKean of Jerome. Two-time track champion Travis Metz is also rumored to appear in the season opener Saturday.

Because of the recent bad weather, the track has had to cancel two hot laps sessions the past week. York said poor weather has plagued tracks around the region, so the result will be a relative fresh run for all drivers in the Bud 100.

One of the more interesting nuances at the track this season is the introduction of the Hornets class June 2. Anyone with a four-cylinder car painted yellow and black and sporting no larger than a 103-inch wheelbase is eligible to join this class.

"I expect race fans to really enjoy the Hornets," York said. "It allows people to race without spending a lot of money and who want to keep racing as a hobby."

Speedway race director Randy Kerr said he's putting a Hornet car together for son Chris.

"It's a Chevy Spectrum," Kerr said. "They'll be racing five times. It'll never change and the reason is it gives a guy that wants to play with it a chance without spending a lot of money."

"That's going to be a blast."

One sure blowout of the season will be the ultra-loud, ultra-cool Motorcycle Moto-Music Madness festival, which will feature a local battle of the bands along with several stunt motorcyclists. The third annual stunt motorcyclist show, which is slated for June 7, has become a starring spectacle at the track.

"That thing is getting huge," York said. "It used to be that the first year we were the big show. If you look at it now, Boise and Twin Falls are the small towns on the tour."

Other special events this season include the annual fan favorite July 3 Eve of Destruction trailer race, the Supermodified Racing League, headed by Boisean Davey Hamilton, plenty of midget racers, the American truck series, two appearances by mini-cups, and the granddaddy of events: the fifth annual NAPA 150 as part of the Raybestos Brakes Northwest Series Sept. 15.

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,

Dale Earnhardt was always the first to apologize if he wrecked someone and never badmouthed anyone who wrecked him. That's why I was a fan of his. For anyone to find fault, or send death threats, because of his fatal crash is an insult to his memory. Those idiots should go watch professional wrestling and leave us NASCAR fans alone.

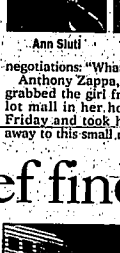
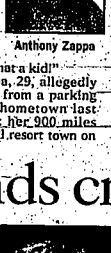
ROLLINS, Mont. (AP) – A man accused of abducting a 17-year-old girl from a Nebraska mall last week surrendered at a lakeside cabin Thursday after the teen-ager calmly helped police end a 10-hour standoff.

Anne Sluti, an honor student from Kearney, Neb., had a black eye but appeared otherwise unharmed. She ran into the arms of a deputy and was later reunited with her parents in nearby Kalispell.

"We have a miracle that happened," Sluti's father, Don, said by telephone from Kearney before leaving for Montana. He said he was able to talk with his daughter during the overnight negotiations: "What a kid!"



Ann Sluti



Anthony Zappa

He had eluded authorities since February for failing to appear in a Minnesota court on a burglary charge.

Zappa, also known as Anthony Wright, is also wanted on charges that include assault, theft and illegal gun possession in Nebraska, Louisiana, Iowa and Wisconsin.

A landlord who spotted a car outside the supposedly empty cabin tipped off authorities Wednesday evening. Negotiators said Sluti was their only contact for hours, acting as a go-between with Zappa, who would not come to the telephone until the very end.

"There's no doubt in my mind the role she played in ending this," said Undersheriff Mike Sargent, one of the negotiators.

"The way she handled herself when dealing with me was very calm and cool and collected."

Sheriff Bill Barron said Sluti was "very clever and very brave."

The standoff ended shortly after 3 a.m. when Zappa walked out and surrendered, authorities said. Sluti followed close behind. Zappa was taken off to jail.

EPA chief finds critics at every turn

By Laurence Arnold
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Some honeymoon.

Not three months into the Bush presidency, chief environmental official Christie Whitman already has upset industry executives and conservationists, disappointed moderates who like her and angered conservatives who don't.

Whether clashing with Bush over carbon dioxide emissions or supporting him on arsenic in water, Whitman has found critics at every turn.

The conservation group Friends of the Earth has urged her to resign, saying decisions by President Bush had undermined her credibility as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Not a chance, Whitman replied.

"A lot of what I've read is wishful thinking by some people who would be just as happy to see me not a member of the Cabinet," Whitman, the former governor of New Jersey, said in an interview.

Nancy Risque Rohrbach, who served in the Reagan and elder Bush administrations and has known Whitman for decades, said her friend is accustomed to taking fire from all sides.

"Frankly," Rohrbach said, "you have to believe there was a reason for picking Christie for a job that is notoriously difficult."

Whitman's big-tent Republicanism and middle-of-the-road governing style should, in theory, keep her from being a polarizing figure. But because so many competing constituencies have high expectations for her, she invariably angers some of them.

As governor, she pleased Republicans by cutting numerous taxes but calmed Democrats by boosting spending on many state programs – covering the gap with a borrowing plan assailed by members of both parties.

Her outreach to black leaders collapsed in an uproar over racial profiling by state police. A libertarian candidate backed by abortion opponents and gun supporters nearly won enough votes to spoil her re-election bid in 1997.

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christie Whitman speaks at the South Florida Management Office in Miami in February.

"Conflict goes with the job," said former EPA administrator William Reilly, who butted heads with senior White House officials while serving under Bush's father. "The job is part overseer of the regulatory process and part advocate of progressive environmental priorities. That balance is not one that's totally under the control of the administrator."

Rohrbach and other friends insist Whitman has not exhibited any frustration, even after a leaked memo showed she tried but failed to steer White House policy on global warming.

Whitman in many ways takes after her politically active parents, who were centrist "Rockefeller Republicans" but never let ideology get in the way of party unity.

"She's always been a Republican team player," said Raymond Bateman, a former New Jersey state senator who helped recruit Whitman into local politics in the 1980s. "She's a party loyalist. She knows Eastern moderate Republicans aren't exactly loved around the country."

In her first month at EPA, Whitman pleased environmental groups – and startled industry groups – by saying the administration was considering limits on carbon dioxide emissions from power plants to combat global warming.

In March, Bush backed down from the idea and aides said a campaign pledge on the topic had been a mistake. Whitman took much of the heat when conservation groups and some congressional Republicans protested.

Whitman then announced the administration would rescind a Clinton administration rule to slash the acceptable level of arsenic in drinking water. Leaders in Western states, which have the highest arsenic levels and would have faced the greatest costs to comply, applauded the move. Whitman promised the administration would come up with a new standard.

By then, however, even some of her supporters were questioning whether Whitman was helping to craft administration policy, or just defending it.

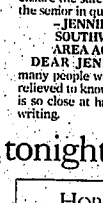
"The president's decision on carbon dioxide really cut the legs out from under her and damaged her credibility," said Frank O'Donnell, executive director of the Clean Air Trust, which praised Whitman after Bush nominated her in December.

In an interview, White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card called Whitman "candid, strong, and a team player." He said Bush's choice to treat her like a member of the Cabinet – not something automatically afforded the EPA administrator – was a sign of his respect.

Card also made clear the limits of her authority.

"She is not the least bit bashful about offering advice to the president," Card said. "But she's also good at implementing decisions the president makes."

Wedding shower proposal brings gloom to co-worker



DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: One of my co-workers is being married next month and has invited most of the office to her wedding. I had planned on buying her a gift, but probably won't attend. We are not close. She has been very difficult to work with. She's possibly the most two-faced person I have ever known.

I have overheard this woman putting me down to co-workers, clients and vendors during the entire 4 1/2 years we have worked together. I am seriously considering leaving this company because of her. My supervisor has told me on several occasions that I am "on my own with her."

Today she had the nerve to drop a very broad hint that she would like an office wedding shower. I am this company's office manager, and organizing such an event would be up to me.

I am almost 50 years old, have worked at several other companies, and have never heard of an "office wedding shower." Aside from my strong dislike for this co-worker, I want to do what is correct. What do you recommend?

– AWAITING ADVICE IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR AWAITING: Since your heart isn't in it (and with good reason), don't allow yourself to be maneuvered into arranging a shower. To get yourself off the hook, see if someone she's closer to would care to host a shower for her outside of office hours.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to tell "A Friend in Chicago," who was concerned because a family refused to take their 92-year-old grandmother to the doctor, that there is an agency serving people over 60.

In 1965, the Older Americans Act was enacted by Congress. It allocated funding for numerous "Area Agencies on Aging" across the United States. They are listed in local phone books. They provide resources for transportation, home-delivered meals, respite care, income tax preparation, medication assistance, flu shots, heating and cooling assistance, homemaker services, housing, legal assistance, where to report suspected neglect or exploitation of elderly persons, and more.

They also help coordinate recreational activities, such as senior games: bowling tournaments, track, basketball free throw, golf, shuffleboard, and more. Senior centers across America provide numerous activities and services for both active and homebound seniors. They will, if asked, also provide daily telephone reassurance calls and/or weekly visits to ensure the safety and well-being of the senior in question.

– JENNIFER E. RABALAIS, SOUTHWEST TENNESSEE AREA AGENCY ON AGING

DEAR JENNIFER: I'm sure many people will be surprised and relieved to know that so much help is so close at hand. Thank you for writing.

Education Secretary Rod Paige stresses President Bush's education agenda as he speaks to students, parents and teachers Thursday at the Jack Elementary School in Portland, Maine.

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Bush and his Education Secretary Rod Paige pushed their education proposals Thursday in Washington and Maine. Bush met with charter school and voucher proponents saying the government needs to give parents more power over their children's education by applying "pressure from above and competition from below."

"We must challenge schools with higher standards and arm parents with better options," Bush told a receptive crowd of about 200 parents, children and school-choice advocates in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building.

"I think that we have a real shot at making sure that our children get a quality education with this administration," said Howard Fuller, president of the Black Alliance for Educational Options, based in Milwaukee.

Bombing survivors will watch closed-circuit telecast

WASHINGTON (AP) – Survivors and relatives of the Oklahoma City bombing victims will be allowed to watch Timothy McVeigh's execution on closed-circuit television, Attorney General John Ashcroft said he wanted to help them "close this chapter of their lives."

"The Oklahoma City survivors may be the largest group of crime victims in our history," Ashcroft said Thursday. "The Department of Justice must make special provisions to assist the needs of the survivors and the victims' families."

Ashcroft also said he would allow two additional public witnesses – beyond the eight already cleared for watching the execution firsthand on May 16 at a federal penitentiary in Terre Haute, Ind.

The attorney general also said the Justice Department and the Bureau of Prisons would work closely with the FBI to thwart any attempts to record or pirate the closed-circuit broadcast. He described the broadcast as a "state-of-the-art video conferencing."

Ashcroft said he determined that the broadcast should be permitted after meeting this week in Oklahoma City with some 100 victims or relatives of victims of the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Building there.

In Oklahoma, Priscilla Salyers, a bombing survivor who accompanied Ashcroft on a tour of a victims' memorial Tuesday, said she knew the attorney general would agree to their requests as long as they were legal.

"I felt like he truly listened to everybody who spoke," she said. "He repeated what they said so he understood what their needs were. When he left here, I felt he would do everything possible to accommodate us."

Salyers said she has never wanted to travel to Terre Haute for the execution, preferring to watch it with the rest of the survivors and victims' families.

"That is more what I need, to be with my support," she said. "We are a strong group, a strong community."

Some states have allowed closed-circuit telecasts of executions to accommodate witnesses, though the broadcasts have tended to be aired at prisons, not across the country, as will be done for Oklahoma City witnesses.

In Tennessee last year, for instance, closed-circuit TV was used so a victim's family could watch in a separate prison room away from the inmate's family and media witnesses.

McVeigh was convicted of the bombing, which killed 168 people, including 19 children, on June 2, 1997. He was sentenced to death, and Ashcroft noted Thursday that McVeigh had exhausted all appeals.

Oregon firm to study Blaine economy

SUN VALLEY – The Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce has hired the Portland, Ore., research firm of Dean Runyan and Associates to conduct a comprehensive economic analysis for the Wood River Valley.

Data will be aggregated for Blaine County and segmented for each city market area. Key comparisons to regional and national data averages will be incorporated, as well.

The study, to be completed by May, will identify and quantify the direct and indirect effects of main economic sectors including tourism, professional services, agriculture, manufacturing, construction and real estate.

It also will identify changes in the valley, such as employment earnings; average price of real estate relative to average wages paid; number of employed versus nonemployed residents; valuation and amount of property owned by nonresidents; and employee residence versus location of employment.

Chamber director Carol Waller said the information will be compared with 1990 data to help city leaders understand how things have changed over the past decade and help provide a framework for community leaders' decisions.

National rates approach Idaho gas average

BOISE – The average price for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline in Idaho heading into the Easter weekend is $1.51, up a little more than a penny in the past month, the AAA of Oregon/Idaho reported.

The motorist group said in its Fuel Gauge Report that recent price spikes in the Great Lakes and Midwest regions have boosted the national average price by seven cents in the past month to $1.50 per gallon. That's slighly ahead of last year's $1.49 mark and closing in on Idaho's average pump price.

"It's premature and inappropriate to speculate about $2- and $3-a-gallon gas," AAA Idaho spokesman Dave Carlson said. "Still, the dynamics of the marketplace suggest higher prices are more likely than ones going the other direction."

Idaho's average price is the same as Utah's, above the $1.49 average in Montana and Wyoming and below the averages of $1.56 in Washington and $1.57 in Oregon.

States with the highest average prices are Hawaii, $1.95; California, $1.80; and Nevada, $1.76. Those with the lowest average prices are Georgia, $1.34; New Jersey, $1.38; and South Carolina, $1.39.

In Idaho, average prices ranged from a low of $1.44 in Pocatello to $1.46 in Coeur d'Alene to $1.51 in Boise. The statewide average is $1.60 for mid-grade gasoline, $1.64 for premium and $1.56 for diesel.

Regulators approve Avista buyback plans

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission approved a May-through-September program that will pay irrigators who save 50,000 kilowatt-hours or more 10 cents per kilowatt hour.

Irrigation customers who save between 25,000 and 50,000 kilowatt-hours will be paid 5 cents per kilowatt hour.

Avista estimates there are about 68 Idaho customers eligible to participate with the potential to save about 2.5 million kilowatt hours.

The commission contends the plan will help reduce the amount of wholesale electricity Avista will need to purchase this summer.

Commissioners have asked Avista to record the costs and benefits of the program to help determine the company's next power cost adjustment.

Trustee will oversee potato processor's restructuring case

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO – Unsecured creditors, many of them potato farmers, saw their chances of being paid by a local fresh-pack potato processor improve after a court decision this week.

Judge Jim Pappas, of U.S. Bankruptcy Court's Idaho District, Wednesday granted the unsecured creditor committee's request that a trustee be appointed to manage the estate of Arkoosh Produce Inc. of Gooding.

A trustee assumes management and control of the business' assets. It is not standard practice to appoint a trustee in Chapter 11 reorganizations, but bankruptcy law provides that option.

Chapter 11 proceedings allow a business a limited time free from creditors' collection efforts to restructure its finances while operating under a court-approved plan. Creditors may vote on the plan.

According to court documents, Arkoosh Produce had assets of $3.6 million and liabilities of $7.9 million when it filed for Chapter 11 protection Oct. 24. Four farmers and several small businesses from Magic Valley were included in the list of creditors.

Secured creditors held $5.5 million worth of the liabilities, while unsecured creditors – those without liens or collateral against property owned by Arkoosh Produce – held $2.4 million.

Craig Christensen, a Pocatello lawyer representing the unsecured creditors, told Pappas his clients thought having a disinterested person manage the estate and work with creditors would be helpful.

Although Arkoosh Produce agreed to the appointment of a trustee after negotiations with the committee, William Thurman said the consent was not an admission of improper management of the company's assets. Thurman, a Salt Lake City attorney, is representing Arkoosh Produce.

While Pappas commended the unsecured creditor committee for its involvement in the case, he said bankruptcy law provides compensation for the trustee, and trustees are usually paid before creditors. That reduces the potential amount available to pay unsecured creditors after the trustee and secured creditors are paid.

Christensen said his clients understood but still believed appointing a trustee was in their best interest.

"There is not a good feeling on the part of the unsecured creditors about the plan," he said.

One difficulty Jeffrey Howe, assistant U.S. trustee for the U.S. Department of Justice, will have in appointing a trustee for this case is identifying how the trustee will be compensated. He told Pappas he was apprehensive about finding a trustee.

Sluggish economy takes toll on retail sales

Combined wire reports

WASHINGTON – Wholesale prices fell in March, led by a record drop in the price of natural gas used in homes. Retail sales were lackluster, fresh evidence of the weak economy.

The Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach store shelves, edged down by 0.1 percent last month, the first decline in seven months, the Labor Department reported Thursday. That followed a 0.1 percent rise in February.

The Commerce Department reported retail sales fell by 0.2 percent in March, a worse showing than analysts expected. And most of the nation's largest retailers said March sales were disappointing.

Sears said sales at stores open at least a year fell 5.3 percent, while Wal-Mart's same-store sales rose 3.5 percent and sales at Target Corp. rose 2.4 percent. Kohl's, which has been one of the industry's strongest performers, wasn't immune to the weak economic climate. Sales there fell 1.9 percent.

Wal-Mart said its profits would be below its original view of 32 cents per share. Sears, the largest U.S. department store company, is forecasting earnings of 53 cents per share for the first three months of the year. Wall Street analysts expected earnings of 57 cents per share.

James Zimmerman, chairman and chief executive officer at Federated Department Stores Inc., summed up the situation facing his company and the entire industry.

"We are very disappointed with March sales," he said. "Weather was a factor in many parts of the country, but we think deteriorating consumer confidence in the wake of the current economic uncertainty is also having a significant impact on our sales."

Consumers, whose spending accounts for two-thirds of all economic activity, have been feeling less inclined to spend, given stock market volatility, lower confidence in the economy and a weaker job market. However, cold weather during the month also was a factor.

The March PPI, however, provided a brighter reading on inflation than many analysts expected. They were forecasting wholesale prices would actually increase by 0.1 percent.

With inflation posing little current risk to the economy, the Federal Reserve has plenty of room to lower interest rates again in an effort to rejuvenate weak economic growth, analysts say.

In a third report, the number of Americans filing new claims for state unemployment insurance last week climbed to its highest level since March 30, 1996, further evidence of a weakening labor market.

Jobless claims rose by 9,000 to a seasonally adjusted 392,000. Government officials said layoffs in the automobile industry, which has cut production in the face of slumping demand, accounted for part of the unexpected rise.

Trying to stave off recession, the Federal Reserve slashed interest rates three times this year, totaling 1.5 percentage points. Economists expect another rate reduction either before or at the Fed's next scheduled meeting May 15.

Wholesale inflation outside the volatile energy and food sectors – which can swing widely from month to month – edged up an expected 0.1 percent in March, after falling by 0.3 percent the prior month.

Energy prices, which rose 1.4 percent in February, actually fell by 2.6 percent in March, the best showing since April 2000.

Costs for residential natural gas declined by a record 4 percent, surpassing the previous all-time drop of 3.8 percent in April 1997.

After peaking in December, natural gas prices have eased, and economists expect prices will continue to moderate or fall in coming months.

Heating oil prices declined by 9.2 percent in March, the biggest drop since April, and costs for liquefied petroleum gas, such as propane, plunged 16.4 percent, the largest decrease in four years.

Gasoline prices, however, rose 0.5 percent in March. Prices at the pump are expected to go up as the nation enters the peak summer driving season. Supply also is expected to shrink given production cuts by oil-producing nations.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries last month decided to cut crude production for the second time this year, hoping to halt the recent slide in oil prices.

Food prices, meanwhile, rose 1.1 percent in March, the biggest increase since April. Pork prices rose 7.8 percent, the largest gain since August 1999. Beef and veal prices climbed 3.2 percent. Dairy products went up by 2.2 percent, fruit prices rose by 2.7 percent and vegetable prices increased by 7 percent.

Prescription drug prices rose 0.9 percent, the biggest gain since July 1999. Economists say the introduction of expensive new drugs along with strong demand by aging baby boomers accounts for the continued rise in prescription drug costs.

A penny a pound

Agriculture payments could help struggling spud farmers

The Associated Press

BLACKFOOT – It may not mean the end of low potato prices, but the federal government will pay farmers a penny a pound for the spuds they give to charity or ethanol processors, feed to cattle or bury in the ground.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service said it will pay $10.25 million to help russet potato farmers reduce supplies, which are at a record high.

Because of the glut, the result of record production last year, potato prices are about one-quarter to one-fifth of what it costs to produce and store them.

The government estimated average prices in March at their lowest level in four years. Analysts said record crops in Canada and Europe have only compounded the problems.

Details of the new assistance program will be published in today's Federal Register. Potato Growers of Idaho executive director John Thompson predicted it could reduce supplies by a billion pounds.

Even at that, growers and shippers still have huge stockpiles. On March 1, Idaho still had just over half of the 2000 crop in storage.

The government estimated the stockpile at 19.8 billion pounds compared with 16.9 billion a year earlier. The diversion program applies to farmers across the nation, but is aimed at reducing stocks of russets.

Thompson said perhaps the greatest benefit could be clearing the cellars for this year's crop.

Since last October, the government has also purchased over 270 million pounds of potatoes worth $35.5 million.

Potato Growers and a spinoff organization, the Potato Management Co., held a voluntary diversion drive earlier this year that took nearly 500 million pounds off the market, much of it as donations.

The federal program is aimed at reducing stocks of lower-quality potatoes. Potato Growers president Keith Esplin said.

INEEL announces early-retirement offers

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS – The Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory announced details of incentives it hopes will entice at least 400 employees to retire early.

The offer, released Wednesday, would sweeten monthly retirement checks, but the contractor is not offering cash payments like Lockheed Martin did six years ago.

Bechtel BWXT Idaho will add three years of age and three years of service when calculating benefits paid from the retirement plan. The amount fluctuates for each person but on average would add $279 to a monthly retirement check.

Employees 55 or older who have worked at the INEEL for more than five years are eligible to sign up for early retirement.

Bechtel recently announced plans to trim up to 1,200 jobs, almost 20 percent of its work force. Site managers assume future budgets will be flat, while the costs of cleanup projects are escalating.

Numbers released Wednesday, however, show the Bush administration budget would actually cut INEEL's funding by 15 percent next year. The contractor also wants to adjust its work force as the nature of the work changes.

Certain jobs to move spent fuel and package plutonium-contaminated waste are scheduled to end, reducing the need for those workers.

There will be as many planners needed to write schedules. But Bechtel wants to hire more experts to study how pollution moves through the ground.

Mill closures, Chilean write-off plunge Boise Cascade into red ink

The Associated Press

BOISE – Mill closures and the write-off of a canceled Chilean-oriented strand board plant and port erased any hint of profit during the first quarter and plunged Boise Cascade Corp. into red ink for the first time in two years.

The Idaho-based wood products company – whose Corrugated Container Operations plant in Burley is a major Mini-Cassia employer – on Thursday reported $35.5 million in losses for the January-March quarter, or 68 cents a share, compared with a profit of $39.6 million, 60 cents a share, a year earlier.

"The economic downturn and higher energy costs are affecting all of our businesses, but particularly building products and paper," Chairman George Harad said in a statement.

It was the first losing quarter since the October-December period of 1998 when the compa-

Energy watchdog foresees tight gasoling supplies in summer

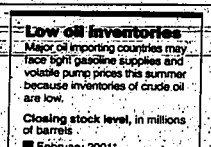
LONDON (AP) – Crude oil inventories are so low that major importing countries could face tight gasoline supplies and volatile prices at the pump during the peak summer driving season, a respected study said Thursday.

This month's cuts in production by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries are likely to exacerbate the problem, causing uncertainty for refiners who must buy crude to process gasoline and other refined products, the International Energy Agency said in its monthly energy report.

"It is widely expected that the U.S. gasoline markets will be tight again this summer ... Consequently, price spikes through the peak demand season are a possibility to contend with," the IEA said.

The Paris-based IEA is an agency of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a club of the world's wealthiest nations.

Its forecast comes as somber news for North American motorists, who endured a sharp increase in prices at the pump only last summer. The U.S. is the world's largest consumer of petroleum products.



"We foresee not total shortages of gasoline but the possibility once again of regional supply imbalances and a lot of volatility in the market," said the report's editor, Klaus Rehaag.

"Ultimately, we'll have enough supply but it could end up in the wrong place at the wrong time, especially if there are unforeseen circumstances" such as problems with pipelines or refineries, he said from Paris.

Lawrence Eagles, head of commodity research at London brokerage GNI Ltd., said the agency's prediction of potential trouble in gasoline markets was no surprise.

"It's a valid point," he said, noting that many refineries have temporarily curtailed production due to the need for seasonal maintenance.

"There's not enough capacity producing gasoline at the moment," he said from his office in Northern Ireland.

Last spring U.S. refineries were so busy making heating oil that they were slow to shift to producing gasoline. Regional shortages of gasoline were the result, causing retail prices to spike in several parts of the United States.

However, Peter Gignoux of Salomon Smith Barney said fears of a gasoline shortage this time around were not yet justified.

"There are some legitimate worries, but I think some advocates of higher gasoline price are a little overzealous," he said.

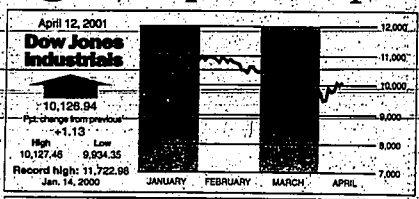
Stocks close higher on positive spin

NEW YORK (AP) – Investors gave a positive spin to disquieting economic news Thursday, bidding technology and blue chip stocks solidly higher amid hopes for another interest rate cut. The advance gave the Nasdaq composite index a four-day winning streak and its best week so far this year.

The market recovered from moderate losses earlier in the session, and analysts attributed its resilience to optimism that the Federal Reserve will lower interest rates for a fourth time this year when it meets May 15.

"There are no inflationary pressures like a year ago," said Gary Thayer, chief economist at A.G. Edwards & Sons. "They do think it leaves the door open for a rate cut."

The Nasdaq rose 62.48, or 3.3 percent, to 1,961.43, the first time since early September that the index has had a four-day winning streak. With the markets closed for Good Friday, the gain meant the Nasdaq ended the week up 241.07 or 14.01 percent, its best weekly percentage gain since it rose 18.9 percent in the week ended June 2. That week contained five days, compared to the four in this holiday-shortened week.



The Dow industrial average closed up 113.47, or 1.1 percent, at 10,126.94. For the week, the Dow gained 335.85 or 3.4 percent. And the market's broadest measure, the Standard & Poor's 500, rose 17.61, or 1.5 percent, to 1,183.50, ending the week with a 55.07-point or 4.9 percent gain.

As the day started, traders looking for good news were disappointed as the nation's biggest retailers generally reported weak results for March due to unusually cold weather and the slumping economy.

Sears, Roebuck said its lackluster sales would cause it to miss first-quarter earnings projections. And Wal-Mart Stores, the nation's largest retailer, said its results came in at the low end of expectations and that it might also miss first-quarter estimates.

The contractor plans to start trimming jobs with the early retirement deals. That may be followed by a voluntary separation program this fall, in which younger workers could receive incentives to willingly quit.

Layoffs could follow in the first half of next year if the site's headcount is still too high.

Lockheed Martin chopped about 3,000 jobs without layoffs after it took over. More than one-third of that was accomplished through early retirement and voluntary separation offers; the rest was through attrition.

Lockheed, however, also offered lump sum cash payments to the early retirees. Those ranged from one to eight months' salary, depending on how much the employees made.

Cascade

Without the pretax charge of nearly $70 million, primarily for the closures of mills in Emmett and Cascade and the canceled project in Chile, the company reported only $7.1 million, or seven cents a share, in earnings on basic operations. While anemic compared to the year-earlier results, the profit exceeded Wall Street expectations at six cents a share, according to Thomson Financial/First Call.

In mid-February, the company announced it was closing the two mills, idling 375 workers in the two small towns, because of the decline in available federal timber. Harad blamed environmental groups and Clinton administration federal forest managers.

First-quarter sales dropped 5 percent to $1.9 billion from a year ago as building product sales dropped 15 percent, reflection of prices running 12 percent to 50 percent lower than during winter 2000.

Revenue from paper production was off 2 percent as costs rose three times more than prices during the quarter. That left operating revenue at barely half of the nearly $49 million posted during first quarter 2000.

Only office product sales were up during the winter, rising 3 percent to just under $1 billion. Operating income rose $5 million to $41.2 million.

"Significantly weaker wood products markets and higher energy costs in our paper business offset solid performance in office products distribution and continued progress in our moving to value-added products," Harad said.

But, he added, "we believe wood products markets are near a cyclical low point and expect a gradual improvement during the spring building season, helped by lower interest rates."

The company expects a seasonal second-quarter decline in office product sales, he said, and high energy costs will likely hamper increasing revenues from the paper segment.

Philippines military rescues U.S. hostage from rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) – Troops and police stormed a jungle hide-out on Thursday to free a U.S. hostage from Muslim rebels who had threatened to behead him as a grisly "birthday present" to the Philippine president.

The hostage, 25-year-old Jeffrey Schilling of Oakland, Calif., was in good health Thursday after the raid on Jolo island, 580 miles south of Manila. Marine commandos and police killed some Abu Sayyaf rebels and wounded others, said Brig. Gen. Diomedio Villanueva.

After the rebels threatened to behead Schilling last week, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo responded by declaring "all-out war" against the group, pouring 3,000 troops into the island's steamy jungles, then sending in another 1,800 reinforcements early Thursday.

Schilling's relieved mother, Carol Schilling, said she was told by the U.S. embassy that her son would return home this weekend.

Schilling, a Muslim convert, was taken by the rebels after he visited their camp in Jolo on Aug. 31. He was accompanied by his wife, Ivy Osani, the cousin of a rebel leader, Abu Sabaya. Osani was freed after the rebels seized Schilling.

The strange circumstances of his kidnapping led some local military officials to speculate that Schilling might have been cooperating with the rebels.

The Abu Sayyaf, the smallest of the three major insurgency groups in the Philippines, shot to notoriety after seizing dozens of hostages. It released most for reported multi-million-dollar ransoms.

The Abu Sayyaf claims it is fighting for a separate Islamic state in the southern Philippines, but the government regards it as a bandit gang.

Pubs, patrons fear Guinness might run dry

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) – Brian Cloyne lifted a pint of smoldering black stout to his eye, contemplated its murky mystery against the light, then took a dramatic gulp.

Things aren't quite that dire yet, but Thursday's strike by workers at Guinness breweries throughout Ireland had pub owners and patrons alike wondering when the stocks of the country's most famous drink might run dry. The guess is sometime next week.

More than 1,000 workers shut down plants in Dublin, Waterford, Kilkenny and Dundalk, a border town to the north where Guinness plans to shut a packaging plant later this month. The strikers are demanding that the Dundalk plant remain open, saving 150 jobs.

AP photo

Guinness workers walk picket duty at one of the main Guinness Brewery entrances at St. James' Gate in Dublin, Ireland, as Guinness workers across the country went on strike for the first time in 25 years.

Guinness executives suggested the closure might be delayed – but also warned that if the strike goes on for long, the strikers' own jobs might be in danger.

Pat Barry, the company's chief spokesman, said Guinness could lose up to $18 million in sales per week if the strike lasts more than a week.

Such losses, he said, would "call into question the need for certain operations in Ireland, because if we don't have the business to put into those breweries, then we have to question our position."

A Guinness-less Ireland seems hard to imagine for those who most love the drink, a sweet brew based on roasted barley and Wicklow Mountains water. The company founded by Arthur Guinness in 1759 today runs breweries in more than 50 countries, and sells some 20 variants of the stout in 150 countries.

But those closest to the tastes of modern Dublin pub-goers predict that Guinness stands to lose more than the fickle public. Some pubs have stockpiled extra kegs to last them several days without fresh supply, but after that?

Doctors say Milosevic's health is OK

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia – Physicians examining Slobodan Milosevic on Thursday found no evidence of heart disease after the former Yugoslav president was rushed from his jail cell to a military hospital complaining of chest pains.

Milosevic was taken from Belgrade's Central Prison under police escort after falling ill on Wednesday. The transfer came hours after his Socialist Party released a statement claiming his health was jeopardized by his imprisonment.

World In brief

Justice Minister Vladan Batic of Serbia, the dominant Yugoslav republic, said a 10-member medical team at the hospital found nothing other than high blood pressure and that the former president's condition is "not alarming."

Serb officials said on Thursday that Milosevic's health would not affect his trial for wrongdoing while in office and predicted he would be sent back to prison soon.

Israeli prime minister threatens more reprisals

RAMALLAH, West Bank – Fresh clashes erupted Thursday between Israelis and Palestinians after unsuccessful U.S.-sponsored cease-fire talks, and Prime Minister Ariel Sharon threatened to send troops into Palestinian-ruled territory if attacks on Israelis do not stop.

The tone on both sides hardened a day after Israeli tanks and bulldozers razed a neighborhood in a Palestinian-controlled refugee camp in Gaza. Two Palestinians were killed in the assault, which Israel said came in response to persistent Palestinian mortar attacks on Jewish settlements.

On Wednesday, talks between the two sides at the home of the U.S. ambassador to Israel, Martin Indyk, failed to end the latest outbreak of violence. Abed Rabbo said the steps Israel agreed to were considered inadequate by the Palestinians.

Poland's last communist leader to stand trial

WARSAW, Poland – Poland's last communist leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, is to go on trial in May for the deaths of 44 shipyard workers shot by state forces in 1970, PAP news agency reported Thursday.

Warsaw's Provincial Court rejected defense motions that Jaruzelski, who was defense minister in 1970, and another communist-era leader, Stanislaw Kociolek, be tried by a special State Tribunal empowered to try top officials.

The trial before the Provincial Court is to begin May 15.

French midwives take protest to prime minister

PARIS – Some 1,000 French midwives marched to Prime Minister Lionel Jospin's residence Thursday to demand higher wages and increased recognition of their status and qualifications.

The midwives had declared Thursday a "day without midwives" in maternity clinics. Most babies in France are delivered by midwives, but the slogan was mostly symbolic because the strike affected mainly consultations, not births.

The protesters, clad in pink and white medical smocks and some carrying plastic babies, chanted: "Push! Push (up) our salaries!"

PUBLIC NOTICE

South Central Idaho Works! pursuant to the Workforce Investment Act (WIA) of 1998 is hereby requesting comment on the Plan for Title IB Employment & Training Program. The program will be operated in the eight counties of South Central Idaho through contracts with Idaho Department of Labor-Job Service, Magic Valley Youth & Adult Services and CSI-Center for New Directions. Estimated funding available are $325,000 for adult services, $363,000 for youth services and $245,000 for dislocated worker services.

We are seeking public input on the plan. The significant difference from the current plan is a 35% reduction in funds available to provide dislocated worker services. Both adult and youth services also have a reduced funding level. Copies of the plan are available for review at the Region IV Development Association office at the College of Southern Idaho, Evergreen Building, Twin Falls, Idaho between 8 AM and 4:30 PM, Monday through Friday. Individuals wishing to comment on the plan must submit comments to: South Central Idaho Works!, PO Box 5079, Twin Falls, ID 83303-5079 by April 27, 2001.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®
Bobby Wolff

"American People like to have you repent; then they are generous."
Will Rogers

"Sorry, partner, it was a match-point double," offered an apologetic West. "Of course, I would never have doubled at rubber bridge."

"There was nothing wrong with your double," consoled East. Then he dropped the other shoe. "It was our defense that did us in."

West's heart lead was a welcome sight for South. Quickly, he won his queen and ace, dummy discarding spades, and the third heart, ruffing in dummy when West discarded a medium spade (a diamond discard may have been better). A low diamond from dummy went to South's queen, and South led another heart, again ruffing in dummy as West discarded his diamond jack. With five tricks already scored, South led a spade from dummy, West taking South's queen with his ace. Too late now, West led a trump to dummy's ace, and South ruffed a spade to lead another heart. Frustrated, West ruffed high and led another trump, but to no avail. South took two more trump winners to score 470 points.

West was unlucky to find the adverse heart layout after East had rebid the suit. Nevertheless, he should have led a trump instead of a heart. Against a trump lead, South would have no chance to make his contract. And if South slips and allows West to play several rounds of trump, South will suffer a penalty of at least 300 points.

The lesson? When the opponents are bidding on distribution rather than high cards, a trump lead is usually best. Defensive high-card tricks can wait — cutting down ruffs becomes the top priority.

COME CELEBRATE WITH US!

55 Years in Business!

35 Years with Toyota!

At Wills Toyota, we've seen a lot of things, and dealers come and go. People tell us we must be doing something right to be in business 55 years. We always have had a "customer first" philosophy. The years and decades have gone by and we're proud to be able to adopt the slogan "55 years of treating you, the customer, right!" If you haven't experienced buying a car from Wills, give us a try – you'll be glad you did!

We're proud to announce we just received Toyota's Prestigious President's award for the 5th consecutive year! We were the only dealer in our district to win all of the following awards: Sales Excellence, Customer Relations Excellence, Service Excellence, and Parts Excellence. For a Toyota Dealer, this is like sweeping the Academy Awards! In the year 2000 our truly fine service department was rated number 6 in the nation for service satisfaction out of more than 1200 Toyota Dealers!

"Quality is remembered long after low price is forgotten". Folks—think about it! It's hard to beat Toyota! Great quality, great satisfaction, great enjoyment, great peace of mind and great resale value! Be sure the brand of car you buy will be around 5 years from now!

When you read or hear about discounts of—$7,000-$9,000-$11,000 on new or used cars—do you wonder about it? You should! Most new cars don't have that much markup from the factory, and if a used car is being discounted that much, it must have been priced way too much in the first place! See us for real discounts from real prices!

"You're so ready for a Toyota!"

At Wills, you don't need 10% or 20% down to get a low payment!
Choose from nearly 100 New Toyotas on hand and coming – all slashed in price for our Birthday Sale!
