Board denies parole to Dallas

The Associated Press

BOISE — An unrepentant, defiant Claude Dallas was denied parole Thursday for the 1981 slayings of Idaho game wardens Bill Pogue and Conley Elms. Dallas, who addressed the Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole by telephone from a Kansas prison, expressed no remorse. He scorned restrictions such as drug testing or electronic monitoring as a condition of early release.

He said he would rather serve another four years behind bars than be freed under close supervision. "By God, I will not submit. I've set my mind on this," Dallas said. "I see more threat from the damn government than from all the drug lords on the face of the Earth."

After hearing from Pogue's son, an Idaho Department of Fish and Game officer and a friend of Elms' widow, the five-member commission said Dallas should remain imprisoned until his 30-year sentence — minus administrative reductions — ends on Feb.

6, 2005. He could have been eligible for parole on Sept. 22.

He is serving his time in Kansas' El Dorado Correctional Facility, about 25 miles northeast of Wichita.

Friends and relatives of the victims said they were pleased by the commission's ruling, but subdued by the thought that the saga would resume when Dallas is released in less than four

LEARNING BY DOING

Students play role as economic advisers

By Kelly Bryant
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The cacophony was deafening, as frenzied voices competed to be heard.

In a scene reminiscent of a stock exchange trading floor, roughly 200 students representing 58 countries dickered and debated Thursday at the Twin Falls Boys and Girls Club.

The valley's first "International Economic Summit" brought together high school students from all over the Magic Valley. Their assignment: to improve their adopted countries' standard of living through international trade.

The all-day simulation aims to help students understand global economics. Students participated in alliance building, debate, quizzes and trading. Each activity was worth points to be tallied at the end of the day.

The Idaho Council on Economic Education developed the event on behalf of economics teachers. Council member Jody Hoff, who travels throughout the state training teachers, said 5,500 students have participated in the program since it began four years ago. It helps students meet 13 of Idaho's 20 high school exiting standards for economics, she said.

"It really becomes a home run for the teacher," Hoff said. "The students are getting excellent instruction."

Before the summit, students in each team adopt a country and then study its economy and its people.

Terry Waitely, economics teacher at Jerome High School, took two teams to the summit.

Unlike students from most other schools, the Jerome students did all their work outside of, regular class time.

"They studied during lunch hours and after school to prepare," Waitely said. "It really taught them about commitment and gave them a sense of ownership in their own education."

Waitely also said the project helps teachers as well. Teachers trade instruction ideas via e-mail.

Jerome team members, described the event as fun and exciting. Tawny Anderson, a junior, said representing Russia helped her understand how governments operate, as well as Russia's history and geography.

The Jerome students also experienced a situation with real-life parallels: Military hardware commanded premium prices on Thursday.

Bliss students, representing Peru, agreed. As a poor country whose main exports are food products, the Bliss team struggled to reach its international trade goals.

"The summit was really an eye opener for how trade works and how crazy it can be," Bliss senior Samantha Allen said.

Sen. Crapo won't seek judgeship

The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BOISE — Following much speculation, U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo announced Thursday that he does not intend to seek a federal judgeship.

"I don't usually hold a press conference to announce what I'm not going to do," Crapo said from Washington, D.C.

Rumors had been circulating since U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge let it be known several months ago that he intended to semi-retire at the end of this year, leaving a vacancy on the bench.

Lodge's announcement started a rumor mill, spawning speculation and several scenarios.

The target to replace Lodge

Arbor Day has shady history in the valley

"Arbor Day which has already translated itself to every state in the American Union, has even been adopted in foreign lands... is not like other holidays. Each of those repeats on the past, while Arbor Day proposes for the future."

J. Sterling Morton
Founder of Arbor Day

By Kelly Bryant
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It all started 120 years ago when a man named Julius Morton suggested Nebraska residents set aside one day each year devoted to planting trees in that state's treeless landscape.

The lack of shade in the southern Idaho desert couldn't have been far from the minds of the first pioneers who came to this area either.

Peruvian site could be 'birthplace of civilization in the Americas'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — About the time that pyramids were being built in Egypt, a civilization in Peru was building the Americas' first urban center, a complex of stone pyramids, plazas and intricate irrigation canals, researchers say.

A site called Caral, 125 miles north of Lima, "may actually be the birthplace of civilization in the Americas," said Winifred Creamer, a Northern Illinois University professor and co-author of a study appearing today in Science.

Jonathan Haas of Chicago's Field Museum, Creamer's husband and a co-author of the study, said that Caral has been aged-dated to as early as 2,627 B.C. and excavations show it once covered some 160 acres on the floor of Peru's Supe Valley.

The people living there created a civilization of farmers, craftsmen and fishermen. Haas said there was a central government or organization strong enough to induce hundreds of workers to labor hard to build a sprawling complex of six pyramids, apartment-like buildings, open stone-cobbled plazas and irrigation canals that tapped a nearby river.

Researchers say that the site, some 125 miles north of Lima, shows evidence of being a thriving inland metropolis that lasted for hundreds of years and then declined into oblivion. It was rediscovered in 1905, but is only now being studied in detail.

"What we're learning from Caral is going to rewrite the way we think about development of early Andean civilization," said Haas.

Caral's civilization was age-dated from woven reeds and other material extracted from a 60-foot high pyramid. Haas said the people used reed bags to carry stones to put inside the pyramid as it was being built. They filled the reed bags with stones, carried them on their shoulders to the building site and then dumped them in, bag and all," said Haas.

Peru's dry climate, the reed material survived the ages and scientists used it to age-date the site, he said.

Haas said that the people of Caral years. The case of the 50-year-old Ohio native and gun enthusiast was the subject of two books and a made-for-television movie.

"We are certain he will never feel the need to follow our nation's rules and regulations and will kill anyone who gets in his way," Steve Pogue, Bill Pogue's son, told the commission. "We believe it won't take long before he does what he has to do again in order to live the lifestyle he believes he's entitled to."

After being informed of the commission's decision, Dallas said simply: "All right."

The former ranch hand and trapper shot Pogue and Elms to death on Jan. 5, 1981, at a remote high-desert camp in extreme southwestern Idaho rather than be taken in for poisoning. He has maintained he acted in self-defense, despite an additional shot to the head of each victim after they already had been gunned down and efforts to hide or destroy the bodies and other evidence.

A jury acquitted Dallas of first-degree murder but convicted him of voluntary manslaughter, concealing evidence and using a firearm.

Glitches hit space station again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For the second day in a row, astronauts aboard the linked space shuttle Endeavour and international space station had to put off critical robot-arm operations Thursday because of computer problems.

The trouble prompted NASA to extend the shuttle's space station visit by two days. That second

He eluded capture for 16 months after the slayings, then escaped from an Idaho prison during Easter weekend of 1986 and was on the run for 11 months before being recaptured in southern Florida.

Oliver Craven, the parole board's executive director, said correspondence received this year on the case from throughout the country was the most he had seen on any inmate in 17 years. Only a handful of letters supported parole. Opposition to his release filled the rest of three large three-ring binders.

During the hearing, commissioners asked Dallas why anyone should believe he would not pose a threat to law officers if released early, a fear voiced by many of the estimated 2,000 people who wrote or e-mailed the panel.

"I don't see that as being a problem," he replied. "As long as I'm approached in a reasonable manner, I respond in a reasonable fashion."

Dallas refused to say whether he felt any remorse about the slayings.

"We're looking for that concurrence, and folks down here are working real hard ... to make sure that everything is coordinated," Mission Control informed the shuttle and station crews. "But right now, that's our plan."

Caral lived on vegetables — squash, beans and root crops — and seafood. They did not grow grains or make pottery, both of which are common to other ancient civilizations.

Instead, Haas said, the Caral people grew cotton and wove it into nets used for fishing. The researchers found evidence that the people ate lots of seafood — anchovies, sardines and shellfish. He said there were no large animals in the area to provide food so they depended on the sea. The

The judgeship would have brought Crapo back to Idaho permanently, ending the weekly commute between Idaho Falls and Washington that he has made since being elected to Congress in 1992. His wife and children have stayed in Idaho Falls.

Crapo said his wife and two children who still live at home would continue living in Idaho. He said the decision to forego his chance at the judgeship was a family decision.

"It was very easy for us, after we evaluated it, to recognize that my heart is in the United States Senate and that's where I desire to stay and serve," Crapo said.

The 49-year-old lawyer and one-time Republican leader of the state Senate has made no secret over the years that he would like to be a federal judge.

Caral thrived for more than 600 years and was home over the centuries to thousands of people, although Haas said the peak population of the city is still not known.

Eventually, the Caral society faded, replaced by new complexes in other civilizations built to the north and to the south. It's believed that descendants of the Caral people became the Incas, who were ruling the Andes when the Europeans arrived in the 16th century.

Trees

Today, Arbor Day a largely American tradition beginning to be observed in other nations, is still a day of celebration. Idaho residents mark with fervor knowing a hot summer is just around the corner.

A number of Arbor Day events are scheduled for today and tomorrow in Twin Falls, Burley, Jerome and Gooding.

The College of Southern Idaho will celebrate Arbor Day Saturday with a community tree planting party at 8 a.m. Volunteers of all ages are invited to gather on the west side of the CSI gym, adjacent to the circular drive and parking areas. Volunteers are asked to bring shovels, rakes, gloves and wire cutters if possible.

CSI grounds supervisor and master gardener Dave Kiesig said CSI President Jerry Meyerhoeffer and Twin Falls Mayor Elaine Steele will welcome volunteers before everyone pitches in to add 50 new trees to join the 180 trees already planted around the campus.

Steele said she will talk about the important role trees play in the environment at the ceremony. "CSI has a wide variety of trees that are just wonderful. Dave does a great job," Steele said.

Steele and CSI were key players in the ongoing Twin Falls Tree City USA in a program sponsored by the Idaho Department of Lands and U.S. Bank.

"We're planting some trees that are pretty unusual in this region," Kiesig said. "We're hoping for a real show of color in the fall with these trees."

Tree varieties include Norway spruce, red sunset maple, red-jacket oak, pin oak, and a number of flowering non-fruit bearing trees. These trees are more native to the eastern United States and Kiesig said he hopes they will adapt.

"We're hoping they do well in southern Idaho soil and with the wind we get here," Kiesig said.

Kiesig said the college's goal is to improve and increase the "forest" at CSI with another 50 trees during the summer.

The Idaho Department of Lands in conjunction with U.S. Bank offer grants to Idaho cities to help them hold Arbor Day celebrations. The grants are awarded to communities to help them meet the standards of the Tree City USA program. Communities must show an ongoing commitment to encourage awareness and appreciation of trees.

U.S. Bank is giving away blue spruce seedlings in observance of Arbor Day at branches throughout the state. The seedlings were provided by the Idaho Forest Products Commission. For more information about Idaho forests, see the website at <http://www.idahoforests.org>.

Pentagon: China obtained some secrets from spy plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. secrets were lost when a Navy surveillance plane made an emergency landing in China, despite the best efforts of the crew, the Pentagon said Thursday.

"We feel there was a loss of secret information," Rear Adm. Craig Quigley told reporters at a Pentagon briefing. He declined to characterize the size or type of damage done.

"Our understanding is not complete," Quigley said, adding that the plane's 24 crew members will be questioned again after they return from their leaves of absence next month.

The crew of the EP-3E plane, following procedures, attempted to destroy data and equipment after it was damaged in a collision with a Chinese plane.

China has refused to release the damaged aircraft, which landed on Hainan island on April 1, after colliding with a Chinese F-8 fighter jet over the South China Sea. The American crew members on board the reconnaissance plane were released 11 days later. U.S. officials debriefed them for two days to glean information about the incident.

The National Security Agency, the government office responsible for collecting electronic intelligence, is conducting a review of the potential damage done by the loss of the top-secret aircraft, said two government officials familiar with the study.

House OKs bill, worrying pro-choice advocates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with the support of the White House, abortion foes moved their first bill of the year through the House on Thursday — legislation that would make it a federal crime to harm a fetus.

The House, by a 252-172 vote, passed the measure after a lengthy and charged debate. Moments earlier, Republicans held off a Democratic amendment that would have stiffened penalties for assaulting a pregnant woman but not made harming the fetus a separate crime.

Idaho Republican Reps. Mike Simpson and Butch Otter voted with the majority in approving the measure.

In the end, 53 Democrats, more than one-fourth of the party's members in the House, joined Republicans in voting for the bill.

"Life and death should not be subsumed beneath a semantic fog," said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas.

Republican sponsors who brought the bill to the House floor Thursday shunned the word abortion. Rather, they characterized the measure as an effort to get tough with criminals who harm "unborn children."

"This is not an abortion bill," said Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. "Without this bill, crimes against these innocent victims will go unpunished."

Abortion rights advocates derided the GOP measure as a bid to get a fetus declared a separate person — an idea they say was rejected by the Supreme Court in its 1973 Roe v. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Annan calls for AIDS war chest

ABUJA, Nigeria (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan called Thursday for a huge boost in global spending to halt the AIDS pandemic and prevent the disease from striking the rest of the world as hard as it has hit sub-Saharan Africa.

Annan said a "war chest" of $7 billion to $10 billion annually would be needed to combat the disease and prevent a catastrophic spread through major developing nations like India, China and Russia. Current spending on AIDS in developing countries totals around $1 billion annually.

"It sounds a lot, and it is a lot," Annan said during opening remarks at a two-day African AIDS summit in Abuja, Nigeria's capital. "But it is not at all impossible, given the amount of wealth in the world. In fact, it is little more than 1 percent of the world's annual military spending."

He proposed the creation of a global fund to fight the spread of AIDS and other infectious diseases; improve health care systems and provide research, education, testing, drug treatments and condoms, as well as care for orphans. The money would come from governments, foundations, academics and the private sector. U.N. officials said in New York.

Klansman's ex-girlfriend tells of attacks

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An ex-girlfriend of a former Ku Klux Klansman accused in a 1963 church bombing that killed four black girls testified Thursday that he once tried to run over a black pedestrian and claimed to have attacked others with acid.

But Wayne Vaughn, who dated Thomas Blanton Jr. in the early 1960s, said he never talked about participating in the bombing.

Blanton, 52, is on trial for murder in the Sept. 15, 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, a rallying site for civil rights demonstrators. The blast killed Denise McNair, 11, and Addie Mae Collins, Cynthia Wesley and Carole Robertson, all 14. They died in a basement room of the church while preparing for Sunday services.

Vaughn, a prosecution witness, testified that a black pedestrian dove to avoid being hit by Blanton's car. She said Blanton commented: "All I wanted was a chance to kill one of those black bastards."

She took the stand on the third day of testimony in Blanton's trial, which appears to be moving quickly toward a conclusion.

Rain helps douse wildfire; roads to Florida Keys open

MIAMI (AP) — Crews monitored a 12,000-acre wildfire on Florida's marshy southeastern tip Thursday, a day after heavy rain helped douse enough of the flames to allow the reopening of the only two roads to the Keys.

The fire, which was not threatening the area's few structures, was 55 percent contained Thursday morning.

Through Wednesday, 2,252 fires statewide had charred 178,758 acres since Jan. 1.

Ex-senator doesn't care about medal

The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Former senator Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., said Thursday he doesn't care if the military takes away his Bronze Star awarded after he led a squad which killed more than a dozen unarmed women and children during the Vietnam War.

"I've never worn that damn medal," Kerrey said in an interview. "I never campaigned and said, 'Vote for me, I'm a hero.'"

"If they want to take it away, I don't care."

Kerrey's comments come after a congressional news conference and a two-day blur of interviews with television networks and newspapers in which he wrestled with his shifting memories of the Feb. 25, 1969 raid in the Mekong Delta. But his decision to talk was not of his own making. On Sunday, the New York Times Magazine will publish an article that offers a far more disturbing account of the 1969 killing than Kerrey's own.

Kerrey said he could not justify this Vietnam action militarily or morally and begged the people of Vietnam for forgiveness, even while insisting that his Navy SEAL squad had committed no crime. "It may be that I did nothing wrong," he said, appearing drawn and tense as he stood atop a ballroom stage at the Sheraton Hotel. "But I felt like I did something wrong. Here's what happened, and I cannot justify it."

He said his squad was fired upon at night, that it returned fire, and that children and women died. At the same time, he conceded that their bodies were found dumped together in the middle of the tiny village of Thanh Phong, in a manner suggestive of an execution. Another member of his unit, Gerald Klann, has said that Kerrey ordered his men to round up and kill the villagers.

Asked if the grouping of the bodies contradicted his account of a fire fight with enemy forces, Kerrey, a former candidate for the 1992 presidential nomination, nodded. "I can't explain," he said. "I do not have an explanation for that."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mythical "Star Wars" spacecraft took the name of a real jet fighter. And the ongoing fiction that now features the imaginary craft has furnished a nickname for a real anti-missile project.

There used to be a real "Starfighter" — the F-104, sometimes called the "man in a missile," that gave the U.S. Air Force its first fighter with twice the speed of sound in the 1950s. An F-104 is normally on permanent show at the Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum, in a section now temporarily closed for repairs.

The 35-foot chrome-and-yellow Naboo Royal N-1 "Starfighter" came nearly half a century later, from the imagination of filmmaker George Lucas, for use in his most recent episode of "Star Wars" called "The Phantom Menace."

Out of Antarctica: Rescue plane flies sick doctor to South America

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) — A twin-engine propeller plane carried a sick American doctor out of Antarctica on Thursday, winging him to safety in Chile from the icy South Pole research station where he was stricken with a gall bladder ailment.

The Twin Otter aircraft carrying Dr. Ronald S. Shemanski landed at Punta Arenas airport under gray clouds at 1:52 p.m. MDT.

"It's great to have them home," said a jubilant Tom Yelvington, general manager at Raytheon Polar Services, the U.S.-based company heading the rescue effort.

Noting that Shemanski's illness was potentially life-threatening, he added, "There's no greater reason to go in than that."

The five-hour flight across the Drake Passage to Chile marked the last leg of Shemanski's long journey out of Antarctica. The airlift was one of the riskiest efforts ever by a small plane to the South Pole, with the pilots of the eight-seat craft braving snow, cold of minus 65 degrees, high winds and the darkness of the long polar winter. Weather makes any flights to the station extremely hazardous from late February until November.

For the sake of the West, divide the 9th Circuit Court

Idaho's two congressmen deserve support in their quest to cleave the federal 9th Circuit Court into two separate entities. It is the right thing to do — and now is the right time to do it.

That's because the 9th Circuit has grown too big, too unwieldy, and too ideologically fractured to operate as a single entity. Reps. Mike Simpson and Burch-Orter recognize this, which is why they've introduced legislation to split the court in two.

"Oh, brother," you might be thinking as you read these lines: "Here comes another dull civics lesson."

But, before you start hunting for the Sports section or the horoscopes, consider this: The 9th Circuit is the end of the road for all but the most exceptional federal court cases in the American West. It is where appeals of U.S. District Court cases are heard — and the only higher court is the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lots of people would like to have their cases heard by the U.S. Supreme Court, but only a few get their wish. For the vast majority of Westerners, justice in the federal court system ends at the 9th Circuit Court.

Here's another reason why this matters: The federal court system is where hot-button issues — such as abortion, civil rights, and endangered species — typically are decided.

The 9th Circuit Court serves an area that stretches from the Mexican border all the way to Alaska. Nearly 50 million people live in its jurisdiction, with the bulk of them in California, Oregon, and Washington. Too often, its judges echo the political tenor of the region they serve — which, unfortunately, is heavily populated by West Coast liberals.

Thus, the court often is out of touch with the hard-scrabble miners, ranchers, farmers and others who populate the Intermountain West.

Splitting the court in two would be a good first step toward restoring some balance in Western courts.

In a related vein...

We are elated that Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, has announced he's not interested in becoming Idaho's next federal district judge. Nor because Crapo wouldn't be a good judge — indeed, he is admirably suited for the post — but because of the messy scramble for succession inevitably would have triggered.

Rep. Mike Simpson was the odds-on favorite to succeed Crapo, but the question of who would fill Simpson's shoes was far from settled. The contestants reportedly included House Speaker Bruce Newcomb of Burley, former state Rep. Mark Stubbs of Twin Falls, and Idaho GOP Chairman Trent Clark of Soda Springs.

It was shaping up as a real horse race, but there was a nag trying to nose its way to the starting line. Helen Chenoweth-Hage, the former congresswoman from North Idaho, reportedly was interested in becoming southern Idaho's congressional representative.

As we noted earlier this week, Chenoweth-Hage already has served three terms as a House member from Idaho. Boy, did she distinguish herself.

Now that she's married to a Nevada resident, she should offer her political talents to voters in the Silver State. Idaho shouldn't be the only state blessed with such riches.

Common sense: Is it illegal now?

MARC FISHER

Thursday was John Thoburn's 70th day in the Fairfax County, Va., jail, and although it is the law that keeps him inside, it is his basic rights that will eventually get him out.

For a time last week, it looked as if Fairfax's lawyers were finally backing down from their adolescent obsession with minutiae. To win the county's permission to operate a golf driving range in Reston, Va., Thoburn had to wall his business off from the houses on two sides of his property. So he shelled out $125,000 for hundreds of trees and bushes and — as the county ordered — a berm, a massive wall created with 5,000 truckloads of dirt.

Not good enough for Fairfax, which insisted that Thoburn hire aerial surveyors and topographical mappers to make certain that the berm was precisely 365.9 feet above sea level. After years of fighting, Thoburn refused the county's directive to shut his business or spend another $30,000 to move misplaced trees. For his trouble, he found himself tossed in jail in February on contempt of court charges.

Last week, the county conceded that the berm was OK. But in Circuit Court on Tuesday, the county insisted that Thoburn must still move or plant 146 trees and 124 shrubs.

"I feel as if neither side will be satisfied unless the other offers unconditional surrender," said a frustrated Judge Michael McWeeny.

But would it really be to surrender for the county to take another look at the golf range on Hunter Mill Road and see what any normal person sees — a range completely walled off from its neighbors?

Ah, but complying with the spirit and purpose of rules is not enough for zealots on either side of this dispute. The county lawyers are the sort of folks who have brought us a world of zero tolerance, college speech codes and other such official attempts to shoulder aside the informal codes of behavior that were good enough for most of the history of civilization.

And now, on the other side of the battle, a group called Defenders of Property Rights has joined Thoburn's team.

We've long since become accustomed to national politics as blood sport; now, get ready for Zoning Board smackdown!

The last time I wrote about Thoburn's case, he had defended Fairfax on two grounds: 1) Thoburn is a nasty jerk who picked a fight with the county. 2) Thoburn didn't follow the letter of the law, therefore he gets what's coming to him.

Well, let's say Thoburn is a difficult person. You know what? You don't have to be his friend. And let's say he didn't install precisely the right number of shrubs. The only thing that should matter is that the golf range is screened from its neighbors, which it is. The berm Thoburn built is so high, he should charge visitors to hike to the top. (The 64-person county attorney's office, whose lawyers earn up to $135,000 a year, needs to find something better to do.)

The rest is what Jonathan Rauch of the Brookings Institution, writing in the current New Republic, calls Bureaucratic Legalism, an "outcome-blind" ideology that "pushes inexorably toward extremes."

Rauch laments the rise of a mentality that has steamrolled the Hidden Law, the unspoken rules that most people followed until the lawyers took over everything from schoolyards to workplaces.

In another courtroom Tuesday, the Supreme Court ruled that even if a Texas woman was humiliated and mistreated when police stopped her for driving without a seat belt, that's no reason to gin up a whole new set of rules about how police should behave in the face of a minor offense. Justice David Souter dared to suggest that "good sense" should be enough to handle any problems. Instead of creating new laws, Souter proposes that the authorities simply follow this notion: "If in doubt, do not arrest."

Is anyone in Fairfax listening, or are they paralyzed without reason to give comfort and their guide, the county code?

LETTERS

Thank you for waiting, T-N

On April 19, the Buhl Police Department received a direct dispatch of a man with a gun in a hostage-barred situation. This ordeal turned into a nine-hour standoff with a 37-year-old local male.

Several law enforcement agencies, along with other emergency services, were activated to respond to the scene. This potentially dangerous standoff ended peacefully.

This was brought about primarily by the professionalism and cooperation of all the dedicated personnel at the scene. With this situation being resolved the way it was with the suspect finally giving up, no loss of life, limb or property resulted to anyone, including the suspect.

I am writing this letter to extend my sincerest appreciation to your reporters, who were at the scene, for their patience and understanding in waiting for us to provide information to them. Their realizing that we were extremely busy during this ordeal and waiting for our information releases was highly appreciated. I, as well as many others, were very glad for their understanding. We were grateful for their participation in helping us to return the Buhl community safely back to its citizens without major incident.

Let's go back to the good old days

Read Mr. Dunlap's comments on criminals not contemplating the consequences of their criminal acts.

In order to ensure that they are unlikely to re-offend, I suggest that we use more Western-style justice: one horse, 10 fathoms of five-eighths inch manila and a stout oak tree. May not deter anyone, but sure cuts down on the repeat offenders. Do it quickly, like trial on Monday, appear on Wednesday, hanging on Saturday.

Violent protesters are democracy's real enemies

ROBERT SIBLEY

OTTAWA — Quebec City, one of North America's oldest cities, was once known as the Gibraltar of America.

Established in 1608, it was the gateway to the Great Lakes and the heart of North America; whoever controlled the city pretty much controlled the continent. Small wonder that its French-speaking population saw a fair share of violence — everything from bombardments by the British navy to invading American armies.

"Plus la change, plus c'est la meme chose," as the saying goes. This past week Quebec City was again the scene for shaping destinies as the leaders of 35 countries, including President George W. Bush, met at the Summit of the Americas to lay the ground work for a free-trade zone stretching from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego.

Not unexpectedly, there were those who objected. They believe the would-be trade arrangement will harm democratic principles, threaten the environment and undermine social programs.

To show their concern for democracy, some summit protesters thought it appropriate to turn Quebec City's narrow streets into a battle zone, hurling chunks of cement and ball bearings at police.

We've seen all this before, of course. Violence between protesters and police is now the norm at international economic gatherings. It's a dirty trick put on end to World Trade Organization negotiations in Seattle in 1999.

Somehow, it is justifiable to destroy other people's property if your cause is pure. This is a dangerous attitude to tolerate because it breeds the conditions that ultimately undermine democracy.

Consider the comments of protest poster child, Naomi Klein, the thirty-something author of "No Logo," a best-selling anti-business screed, who was most visible for the camera crews at the summit.

She drew an incoherent distinction between vandalism and violence. "Breaking windows is vandalism," she said, implying that it isn't real violence. Then there was Maude Barlow, the co-chairwoman of the Council of Canadians. She blamed the violence on the existence of a security fence the Canadian government placed around the conference site.

"The provocation started with that damned wall," she told the TV cameras. "The real violence lies behind the wall." You can infer from both Barlow's and Klein's remarks that any demonstrator who saw the "wall" was somehow excused from the ethical obligation to conduct themselves in a responsible manner.

To be sure, civil disobedience has an honorable history. Martin Luther King used non-violent civil disobedience in his fight for civil rights. Mahatma Gandhi did the same in opposing British rule in India.

But in both cases they were "disobeying" authorities whose conduct itself reflected the absence of democracy.

No such justification can be made by the Quebec City protesters. Canada and the U.S. are democratic societies. Latin American and South American countries are becoming democratic.

If so, the protesters, who claim to accept the principles of democratic rule, have no right to disobey the law even when they disagree with government policies.

Violence in the name of change is not justified in democratic societies. The Canadian prime minister, Jean Chretien, said when he said protesters had the right to "go from one summit to another," but "we will not tolerate breaking the peace."

Indeed, there is nothing so threatening to democratic order as violence being tolerated by well-meaning people for ostensibly worthy ends.

If our freedom should be threatened in the 21st century, it will not be by transnational corporations. Governments will be the ones to watch.

Citizens who resort to violence when they don't win democratic debates are trying to hijack state power and eliminate democratic debate from human affairs. In doing so they show a totalitarian impulse. The essence of totalitarianism is transforming human life by making people conform to some overriding idea of society. But idealists tend to turn violent when they discover that people are unsuitable material for one-size-fits-all social orders.

The anti-globalizers are right to be concerned about the inequities of capitalism. But when they use violence to impose their view of the world they reveal themselves as totalitarian, not democrats.

Robert Sibley is a member of the Ottawa Citizen's editorial board.

New test for breast cancer shows early promise

LONDON (AP) — An experimental technique of analyzing milk duct cells might one day be able to detect breast cancers that mammograms miss in younger women, according to preliminary research.

Nearly all breast cancers start in the milk ducts. The method, which involves flushing the ducts to dislodge cells by injecting saline solution through the nipples and drawing it back out again, is described this week in The Lancet medical journal.

While mammograms are good at detecting cancer in post-menopausal women, spotting tumors in the breasts of women under 40 is more challenging because the breast tissue is so dense.

Scientists have therefore been trying to develop new surveillance strategies for women at high risk of developing the disease, hoping to detect earlier-stage tumors, when they're easier to treat.

This technique seems to hold promise for detecting early changes in duct cells and could eventually identify pre-malignant conditions," said Robert Smith, director of cancer screening at the American Cancer Society.

"It is not clear that just detecting precancerous cells means they will go on to develop breast cancer," said Smith, who was not connected with the research. "But in high-risk women, it could give them the choice earlier of how to handle it."

Independent Meat shop catches fire

TWIN FALLS—An early morning Thursday charred a mechanic's shop at Independent Meat in Twin Falls. The Twin Falls Fire Department responded to a structure fire at 5:12 a.m. at Independent Meat at 2072 Orchard Drive. The shop suffered about $150,000 in damages, according to fire department Capt. Gary Earl. The fire is still being investigated, but it appears to have started by a water heater, Earl said. Nobody was injured. "It was controlled in probably about 10 or 15 minutes," Earl said. Representatives of Independent Meat refused to comment Thursday.

Deadline nears for time-of-use program

BOISE—Tuesday is the deadline to apply for participation in a time-of-use energy conservation program. The Idaho Power Co. pilot program would allow irrigators to save up to 50 percent on their energy bill by power they use at night. The program is limited to 300 participants. Interested irrigators may call (800)488-6151 and ask for an irrigation representative. The program splits the day into three periods: Peak from 1 to 9 p.m., off-peak from 9 p.m. to 9 a.m., and mid-peak from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The off-peak rate would be about 50 percent of the base rate. The mid-peak rate would be the same as the base rate, and the peak rate would be 75 percent more than the base rate. The current base rate is 5 cents per kilowatt hour. The program is part of the utility effort to reduce power demands during peak use periods. Irrigators participating in the buy-back program are not eligible to participate in the time-of-use program.

Hot springs shooting case heads to district court

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY—Despite efforts to impeach the credibility of two witnesses and portray himself as simply defending himself, 37-year-old Brian Tempel was bound over to Fifth District court Thursday on a felony aggravated assault charge of opening fire on sunbathers at Carey hot springs on March 17 with a semi-automatic Chinese battle rifle.

Tempel will appear at a plea arrangement in a week or two, then scheduled for trial in an estimated two months.

Magistrate Robert J. Elgee sat through two hours of testimony before ruling that sufficient cause exists for charges.

Tempel, of Bellevue, is under court order not to consume alcohol and not to carry any firearms.

In an odd twist, one of the prosecution witnesses, Steven John, 23, showed up in court in a bright orange inmate's jumpsuit, brought to the preliminary hearing from Idaho State Prison in Boise where he's being held on a parole violation for leaving the state to attend a brother's funeral in Utah.

John testified he was at the Carey hot springs with his fiancée, Tina Hyde, another couple, Vern and Wanda Walczak, and his mother, Jenny Otley, when Tempel's Labrador Retriever got into a fight with another dog.

John testified the identified man left the hot springs with his dog and children, while Tempel shouted threats and obscenities, eventually exchanging blows with Jenny Otley. At one point, he was shoved or stumbled into one of the pools.

John said an enraged Tempel went to his pickup truck and returned with a Chinese SKS battle rifle assault rifle that he fired at John and the other witnesses. Vern Walczak said Snyder, a certified therapist, attempted to impeach John's credibility by having him confirm a string of arrests, felony convictions and guilty pleas for grand theft, assault on police and a corrections officer, escape

TF schools hire new administrators

Minidoka teacher to replace district curriculum director

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The Twin Falls School Board this week hired new administrators to replace a retiring school principal and the district's outgoing curriculum director.

LaVonne Peterson from Minidoka County School District will replace Mary Ann Ranells as district director of curriculum and instruction. Ranells is taking a job with the State Department of Education.

Peterson is a National Board Certified teacher and was recognized as the 1999-2000 teacher of the year for Minidoka schools. In Minidoka, she has been the district's curriculum development liaison, an instructional leader in the district's efforts to implement strategic change, chairwoman of the Minidoka High School Math Department, and a math teacher. She has held leadership roles in local and regional efforts to adapt curriculum to new state standards. Peterson begins July 1. Her salary will be $52,655.

Mary Lee Roberts will replace retiring Bickel Elementary School Principal Gordon Armstrong. Roberts joined the district in 1992 as a junior high social studies and physical education teacher. She was enthusiastic director for Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School. In 1999, she became vice principal of Morningside and Sawtooth elementary schools. The district describes her as an enthusiastic supporter of school improvement efforts.

She earned her master's degree in education administration from the University of Idaho in 1997. Her salary will be $50,995.

Both salaries are based on the district's 2000-2001 pay scale determined through contract negotiations. Negotiations for the 2001-2002 school year continue.

Each month during the second half of the school year, principals from two or three district schools share school progress with the board.

Sawtooth Elementary School Principal Randy Rutledge said his Wednesday board presentation focused on improved test scores.

Sawtooth saw results well above average at all grade levels and in all subjects, and students at various grades were able to maintain strong performance again this year. Results in some subjects dipped but remained well above average. The school also is focusing on improved student reading results.

Twin Falls High School Principal Ben Allen said high school students saw dramatically improved math computation scores on the Tests of Achievement and Proficiency. In fall 2000, the high school devoted 10 minutes of every third period class to math computation exercises. Additional time was added to the class period to accommodate the drill.

The high school also added an advisory period for teachers. It's a time faculty members can voice their concerns to school administration.

Expert emphasizes violence prevention programs at work

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

RUPERT—Every workplace needs a violence prevention program, one local expert says.

"Most people won't often find themselves in violent situations, but anyone—a client, coworker, student or vendor—can be a source of aggression," Faye Snyder said. Snyder, a certified therapist, recreation specialist in Twin Falls, spoke at a recent Rupert workshop on dealing with aggressive behavior and violence in the workplace.

According to a 1996 report by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, roughly 1 million workers are injured by workplace violence each year. Of the total non-fatal workplace assaults, 64 percent occur within the service industries, mostly in health care or social services. Twenty-one percent occur in retailing.

The NIOSH report also found that workplace homicides increased in number in the 1990s after decreasing substantially in the 1980s. Homicide has surpassed machine-related injuries as the second most prevalent cause of death on the job, after motor vehicle accidents.

A raising of hands at this week's workshop showed that few employers have prevention plans. In addition to implementing a plan, Snyder urged employers to recognize signs of violence and mitigate their risk of being confronted. Snyder also encouraged people to document incidents. "Violence typically escalates gradually."

By acknowledging warning signs and various forms of intimidation, and by eliminating the elements that may lead to aggressive behavior, "your potential for violence goes down drastically," Snyder said.

Language, body language, attitude and tone can all be used to de-escalate violence. People should be aware of whether they are acting in a way that heightens a problem, Snyder said.

Snyder recalled one conversation in which a person reported that a co-worker remarked that Timothy McVeigh was justified in the 1995 bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City.

"That, in my mind, indicates that employee is at risk," Snyder said.

MV scouts to gather tonight

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—Bike races, knot tying, a Pinewood Derby, campfires and sleeping under the stars.

Three groups of Magic Valley Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts gathered tonight for their annual Scout-O-Rama will have a full Saturday of scouting activities awaiting them.

"There will be all kinds of demonstrations," said Dan Arters, a local district executive for Boy Scouts of America.

A climbing wall, an Iron Man race from Albion to the Cassia County Fairgrounds, building rope bridges, and an obstacle course are just a few of the scouting activities that will be found at the three regional gatherings in Shoshone, Burley and Twin Falls.

Each one of them are kind of unique in their own right," Arters said.

Scouts from the Falls District will gather at the College of Southern Idaho this evening for a campout near the lake on the north side of the campus.

The next morning, Scouts will have a number of booths set up to display their knowledge on a variety of subjects. The Scout-O-Rama begins at 10 a.m. Shoshone, North Side District and Wood River District Scouts will arrive at the fairgrounds at 10 a.m. for their campout.

Saturday will include demonstrations of archery, rope bridge building and flag folding. Scouts will also have an opportunity to explore emergency vehicles from area agencies.

Minidoka and Cassia district Scouts will gather at the Cassia County Fairgrounds. After the Friday night campout they'll compete in a Pinewood Derby beginning at 10 a.m. Registration for the race begins at 9 a.m.

An Ironman competition for older Venturians Scouts will begin in Albion at 11 a.m. The finish line will be at the fairgrounds in Burley.

Throughout the weekend, Scouts will sell $3 discount cards donated by area businesses to raise funds for scouting activities.

Times-News politics and state government reporter Michael Journeay can be reached at 735-3231, or by e-mail at mjournem@magicvalley.com.

Scout-O-Rama

Magic Valley Scouts will gather this weekend at Twin Falls, Shoshone, and Burley for their annual Scout-O-Rama. Scouts will camp out Friday night to prepare for the Saturday demonstrations of scouting skills. Saturday's events begin at 9 a.m. and continue through 3 p.m.

MAGIC VALLEY/WEST

Agency recommends some water for fish

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Despite the drought and power shortage, a limited amount of water should still be spilled from John Day, The Dalles and Bonneville dams on the Columbia River to help migrating fish, the Northwest Power Planning Council recommended Tuesday.

Members of the four-state planning agency also recommended that water spills from other Columbia and Snake river dams be eliminated this summer, to leave more water for hydropower generation. The dams are operated by the federal government.

The council, which includes representatives from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, said that reduced spills from the dams, plus conservation measures and emergency generation of hydropower that would lower reservoirs more than normal, should provide benefits to migrating fish while ensuring a reasonably reliable power supply this summer.

"Even with these actions, there remains about a 20 percent chance of power supply problems this winter as a result of the drought," the council said.

In a normal year, there is enough spring snowmelt to allow water to be spilled through all the dams to help salmon and steelhead migrate to the ocean, while keeping enough in storage to meet summer power needs. That is not the case this year, when the mountain snowpack that feeds the Columbia and Snake rivers is around 50 percent of normal.

At the same time, the California energy shortage is placing severe demands on the electrical supply and dramatically raising the wholesale price of power.

The National Marine Fisheries Service last year issued an opinion calling for spilling water over the dams in spring and summer to help threatened and endangered fish species.

The council wants to work with federal, state and tribal agencies to develop a plan for the dam spills.

The eight council members are appointed by the governors of the four Northwest states. The council is supposed to set policy that balances electricity production with the needs of fish and wildlife.

GOP wants roadless proposal rolled back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western Republicans are urging President Bush to revise the Clinton administration's ban on road-building in a third of the national forest lands so decisions are made on a forest-by-forest basis.

The Bush administration has been reviewing the rule, which is supposed to take effect May 12. The results of that review, and likely a decision about whether to set aside the rules, could come next week, when the Justice Department will file a brief in a lawsuit by the state of Idaho challenging Clinton's action.

The rule prohibited road-building on 58.5 million acres of national forest land, except in rare circumstances such as to protect an endangered species. "Adequate protection for roadless areas is a priority for this administration. We have not finalized any decisions regarding that particular rule," said Kevin Hengler, spokesman for the Agriculture Department, which oversees the Forest Service.

Western Republicans consider the policy, announced by President Clinton on Jan. 5, to be a "sweeping mandate from Washington, and that proper administrative procedures were not followed."

Under an expected revision from the Bush administration, they want states to have more participation in land management decisions because they best know the land. "What I would hope they would do is go back to a forest-by-forest plan basis so that we can look at these roadless areas (and) determine whether they ought to be wildernesses or not," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

Environmentalists have been critical of moves by the Bush administration to delay the rule's implementation and say the Justice Department has not adequately defended it in the Idaho case.

The roadless rule would allow roads to be built to access current mineral lease boundaries, but prohibit roads for new leases or to expand existing ones. The petroleum industry said it needs access to federal lands to meet demands as the nation faces high power prices and an energy crunch in the West.

Canadian firm mistakenly markets poison plant as 'tasty'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is warning people not to eat a poisonous plant mistakenly labeled as "tasty."

The plant, known as Autumn Monkshood, remains poisonous even after it's cooked.

It was distributed by a company labeled as being "tasty in soup" to nurseries in Washington state, Idaho and British Columbia.

Poisoning could cause irregular heartbeat or direct paralysis, leading to death, the FDA and the Canadian Food Inspection Agency said Thursday. Other symptoms include tingling limbs, burning or tingling mouth or tongue, muscle weakness and stomach problems. Anyone who eats the plant should go to a doctor immediately.

People with concerns may call Valleybrook Gardens at 604-855-1177 or the Canadian Food Inspection Agency at 1-613-225-2342.

Woman claims baby was poisoned

The Times-News

BURLEY — No arrests were made Thursday in connection with a report of a possible baby poisoning.

A woman told the Cassia County Sheriff's Department Thursday that she was suspicious about the contents of a baby's bottle.

The state Department of Health and Welfare took the month-old baby to the Cassia Regional Medical Center, according to a sheriff's report.

The baby's formula is being analyzed at a state laboratory in Pocatello, the report said.

The witness reported that she had been in her apartment, along with another woman and the woman's baby. According to the report, the witness told police the baby's formula appeared to have a brown substance in it, and after the baby finished drinking, the baby began crying as if in severe pain, the report said.

The witness discovered that the seal had been broken on a can of cleanser in the kitchen, the report said. When she examined the baby's bottle, she saw a powdery substance in the formula, and the formula smelled like cleanser, the report said.

A neighbor who tasted the formula said it seemed to contain a foreign substance, the report said. Because it appeared the baby was in imminent danger, police alerted Health and Welfare officials, the report said.

Delta flight attendants look at union

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Flight attendants for Delta Air Lines, emboldened by a tentative contract signed by the carrier's pilots, said Thursday that they, too, are looking for union protection.

"That could be bad news for Delta, which has been in a dispute and a slumping economy."

The Atlanta-based airline has had to reduce its flights by up to four percent in response to those pressures, chief executive officer Leo Mullins told shareholders at their annual meeting Thursday in Salt Lake City. A continuing strike at Delta's regional subsidiary, Comair, is costing it $3 million a day.

Delta, which lost $130 million last quarter, has to come up with $2.4 billion over the next four years to meet the contract signed Sunday with its 9,800 pilots, even as travel budgets shrink nationwide.

The deal still requires union approval, but it kept the pilots from picking Thursday's meeting.

Charles Giambusso, chairman of the Delta pilots' unit for the Air Line Pilots Association, said he's ready to "start a new chapter in management/pilot relations."

Mullins said the money for the contract will come from new efficiencies within the company, including a greater focus on Internet bookings and the use of 100 new Boeing planes, expected over the next two years, that will use less fuel.

He also said Delta is planning promotions to get strike-weary passengers back on its planes but would not divulge specifics.

"There's a lot that's going on in the company ... that's going to help us absorb those costs," Mullins said.

Yet margins may get even tighter if United Airlines' plan to buy USAirways for $11.6 billion is approved.

"That would likely push Delta, which would fall to a distant third behind United and American Airlines, toward buying another airline."

And that has some of Delta's 22,000 flight attendants — who say they're the only major air crew without a union — nervous about their future.

"We want protection in case of a merger," said Maryellen Moore, a Salt Lake-based flight attendant who is trying to encourage her colleagues to join the Association of Flight Attendants. "Having a contract, hopefully that would help us stay more protected and at least have some kind of a voice negotiating our future."

Although Moore didn't have exact figures, she said there was still work to do before getting the necessary proportion of employees — at least 35 percent — to sign union cards.

University moves to make school safer for minorities, homosexuals

FULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State University will take steps to make its campus safer for minority students and homosexuals, President V. Lane Rawlins said Tuesday.

The steps include creating a better system to report violence, recruiting more minority faculty and hiring an administrator to educate students about the perils of drinking.

Recent incidents in which black students were beaten at fraternity parties have raised the impression that WSU is not a safe place, Rawlins said Tuesday as he announced a plan to improve the racial climate on campus.

"Things may be worse, more dangerous, and oppressive in other places. That doesn't matter. We need a quality of life here that is supportive of all people."

— V. Lane Rawlins, president of Washington State University

"Things may be worse, more dangerous, and oppressive in other places. That doesn't matter. We need a quality of life here that is supportive of all people."

— V. Lane Rawlins, president of Washington State University

In addition to racial minorities, the actions seek to create a safer environment for gays and lesbians, who often suffer from overt but little-reported discrimination, said Melinda Huskey, of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Allies program.

"There has been no physical violence, but we are on the verge of that," said Huskey, who called homophobia perhaps the last acceptable bias for some people.

Last fall, a black student from Seattle was beaten during a fight between members of two fraternities. That brawl raised fears among minority students and led to the creation of the Council on Campus Climate, whose recommendations were released Tuesday.

Earlier this month, a black member of the WSU football team was severely beaten during a brawl at a fraternity party.

The 18,000 students at WSU make up two-thirds of the population of Fullman, and administrators acknowledged that the school is under greater scrutiny than it might be in a larger urban area.

"There are things in Seattle all the time that don't get reported," said Milton Lang, who chaired the council. "Those are the cards we were dealt."

Alcohol abuse is considered a key factor in much of the violence, especially in the widely publicized fights at the fraternities.

National immunization director commends Idaho

BOISE (AP) — The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's immunization director said this week that Idaho is on the right track with efforts to increase the state's infant immunization rates.

"Idaho is to be congratulated in the efforts being made to help Idaho's children," said Dr. Lance Rodewald, who is traveling the state to promote immunization. "I am sure the impact of the investment Idaho is making to improve infant immunizations will be realized in the near future."

Rodewald and a number of parents, children and health workers joined Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in the Statehouse rotunda for the signing of an Idaho Infant Immunization Month proclamation.

Kempthorne said even though Idaho's immunization rate is the nation's lowest — 69 percent compared with the national average of 78 percent, according to a recent Idaho Kids Count report — the state is making strides.

The governor's most children under 2 are only missing one of the eight required shots. The one being missed — and skewing reported percentages — is the last in a series of four vaccinations for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis.

"Idaho immunization rates jump dramatically by the time children are school age. Ninety-two percent enter school appropriately vaccinated," Kempthorne said. "I know the goal of 90 percent immunization for 2-year olds is attainable."

To help parents remember the last DPT vaccination, Idaho has implemented a voluntary immunization registry program that will send reminders to parents when shots are due.

Keri Perriogot, a working mother of two from Rupert, said those reminders are very important to busy parents.

"I kept writing 'John's shot' in my planner, then I'd get busy and move the reminder to the next day and it would continue," Perriogot said. "But when you get a reminder in the mail, that makes you get in there, that makes you get in for your child's immunization."

Perriogot said the service the registry offers is invaluable even beyond the first two years because she can more easily review her children's immunization records and get copies of them for child-care providers.

As of last week, Kempthorne said, the records of 75 percent of Idaho children under 2 had been added to the voluntary immunization registry.

College works overtime to conserve electricity

POCATELLO (AP) — Supplying heating and lighting for the Idaho State University campus is a worrisome task for physical plant director Darrell Bufallo these days, with Idaho Power Co.'s monumental rate hike request before state regulators.

Bufallo estimates the cost for power at the university could increase by up to $1 million by next year.

Energy bills are a concern at every Idaho school.

Last week, the state Board of Education approved an 8.73 percent increase in fees for Boise State University students. University President Charles Ruch told the regents that much of that will go to higher power bills.

Idaho State University's fees will rise 8.6 percent, keeping it the most expensive institution in state at $2,800 per year.

For the last fiscal year, Idaho State paid almost $12 million for electricity, $549,000 for gas, and $171,000 for coal, which Bufallo said is much more cost-effective than using natural gas. About 90 percent of the school's heating system is run by coal, which he estimates saves more than $150,000 each year.

Bufallo said a major concern for his department and administrators is the electricity cost.

While the staff at the physical plant can control natural gas and coal use, Bufallo said it is harder to rein in electrical use because it depends on how people do changing habits.

Efforts to do so include having faculty turn off lights and computers when they are not in use, and have lights and air conditioning systems shut off at night.

Outside lights will remain on at night for the safety of those on campus.

Other ways to conserve include having physical plant staff tour the campus to determine if less lighting could be used in offices and other rooms.

The university has also retrofitted most of its lights with more cost-efficient models, which Bufallo estimates will save about $100,000 a year.

Group: Family trees could help prosecute polygamists

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — By the time Joanne Palmer escaped from the polygamist clan she was raised in, her father had three wives and her grandfather had wed her stepmother.

The 17-year-old has charted her tangled family tree in the hopes of bringing the group's secret practices to light. Now anti-polygamist activists plan to use and expand upon her data to help prosecutors bring polygamists to justice.

"I'm here to show people that there are young girls being married off and we will hopefully have enough evidence to stop this incest and child abuse," said Palmer, who spoke Tuesday at a news conference given by Tapestry Against Polygamy.

Tapestry and the anti-child abuse group For Kids' Sake are trying to build family trees for members of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, based in the twin cities of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz. Palmer, who is from Lister, British Columbia, fled the Canadian branch of the group with her mother and siblings when she was five.

FLDS leaders, who rarely speak to outsiders, deny allowing underage women to marry.

The groups hope to expand their research to other families who make up the estimated 35,000 polygamists living across the West.

That information could be useful when it comes to going after crimes alleged in those secretive societies, said Ron Barton, a special investigator in Utah's Attorney General's office charged with investigating polygamist groups.

"It would be helpful because oftentimes, those relationships are hard to determine without some information," Barton said. "Of course, before we can use it in a court case we have to validate the information" through birth or death certificates or specific testimony, he said.

For now, advocates are still working to gather the information by interviewing and e-mailing former members of the FLDS group.

They began in December and expect to have about 75 percent of the genealogies complete by this fall, said Jay Beswick of For Kids' Sake.

"Some of this is so complicated it hurts my mind to try to deal with it," Beswick said, pointing at the poster-sized genealogy on display. Some assign as many as five wives to each man — some as young younger than 15 — and 10 children to each mother.

The group has also gathered published and taped sermons from church leader Ron Jeffs and, perhaps most revealing, yearbooks from Colorado City schools that show page after page of nearly identical children, all wearing the same hairstyles and homemade dresses. There are 20 Barlows pictured in the 1988-1989 high school yearbook — and that's just the freshman class.

Shooting

from jail and breaking and entering as a gang member.

He also dwelled on discrepancies in the testimonies of John and Walczak — such as how many shots were fired by Tempel (John said eight, Walczak said 10), how close bullets struck (John said 10 feet, Walczak said 40 yards), Tempel's condition of sobriety (John said the defendant was drunk, Walczak said Tempel had been drinking), how many children were with the identified man whose dog fought Tempel's dog (John said three, Walczak said two).

In response to questions from deputy county prosecutor Marilyn Paul, Blaine County sheriff's deputy Matt Springer testified he intercepted Tempel between the hot springs and Carey after receiving a radio alert, and had to give Tempel commands several times before he complied, although he did not resist.

Attorney Elkins told the judge that his client shot over the heads of John and Walczak because they threatened to fight and were throwing rocks at him, and the charges should be dismissed.

Walczak said he threw one rock after Tempel shot at him.

Elkins tried one final strategy: he said the prosecution had not developed any testimony that the shooting occurred in Blaine County.

Judge Elgee rejected the effort, explaining the geographical location of the Carey hot springs.

Students in Hawaii return to class

HONOLULU (AP) — Thousands of elementary and high school students returned to class Thursday after a strike by Hawaii's public education system was shut down by a pair of strikes.

The state's 13,000 public school teachers, who set up picket lines April 5, had returned to work Wednesday after ratifying a four-year contract that includes higher pay for those with advanced degrees.

The strike cost 182,000 school children 14 days of instruction. A separate strike by University of Hawaii faculty that also began April 5, ended with a two-year contract agreement last week.

Under their new contract, public school teachers will receive more than 16 percent in salary increases, plus bonuses, according to Hawaii State Teachers Association President Karen Ginoza.

Teachers with masters degrees and professional diplomas will get a 3 percent differential.

Teachers who earn doctoral degrees will receive a 6 percent differential.

Teachers, who earn between $25,000 and $58,000 a year, had argued they should be paid more because of the state's cost of living, estimated at nearly one-third higher than on the mainland.

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - A new gold rush of sorts is under way as escalating electrical prices are prompting hydropower developers to seek permits for new projects on Idaho rivers.

"I watched it die for a decade, just wither up and blow away," said Brent Smith, a Rigby businessman who developed projects on the Island Park Reservoir and the Buffalo River. "Now we've watched this come around full circle again."

After an energy crisis in the 1970s, there were tax incentives for new plants and developers had the run of the rivers. Then the ensuing power glut dropped prices. Conservationists opposed new projects.

Now — with heating bills soaring — there is a scramble to stake claims on sites for hydropower plants, oil rigs and natural gas wells alike.

Since Jan. 1, companies have BOISE (AP)—The Elmore County Commission has approved changes to zoning regulations that will allow Idaho Power Co. to build a natural gas-fired power plant north of Mountain Home.

"We're adding 90 megawatts of capacity that can produce electricity at significantly lower cost than we would incur by purchasing from the current wholesale market," said John Prescott, Idaho Power's vice president of generation.

applied for 13 permits to investigate building new plants on Idaho rivers. That includes placing turbines at the existing Ririe, Blackfoot, Mackay and Chester dams in eastern Idaho.

That typically meets less resistance than damming up rivers to generate power. They are relatively small, generating enough power for about 1,000 homes.

Applications have been filed on the mid-Snake and Bear rivers, and Big Creek in Custer and Lemhi counties, for new dams or diversion structures.

Environmental groups have already vowed to halt the projects, which might harm water quality, kill fish and eliminate some boating opportunities.

"Wholesale power prices are going through the roof right now and I think these guys are seeing dollar signs," said Sara Denniston with Idaho Rivers United.

Symbiotics LLC, which Smith formed with his partner last year, has flooded the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission with applications for preliminary permits on Western rivers.

It has laid claim to 110 sites, about 10 times more than any competitor.

"What we're doing is looking at a lot of projects that may not have been financially feasible before," Smith said. "A lot of these projects won't survive the first round. I think we would be doing awful good if there were 50."

Brewery apologizes for using name

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — With horses, blankets, tobacco and sweet grass — plus an apology — a brewery is settling with American Indians who sued over its marketing of Crazy Horse Malt Liquor.

John Stroth III, chairman of SBC Holdings Inc., formerly Stroth Brewery Co., was to read the apology at a ceremony in South Dakota Thursday with descendants of the legendary warrior. SBC sold its brewing business in 1999 and no longer markets the beverage.

Crazy Horse Malt Liquor was produced at seven breweries and distributed in 32 states, said Christina Kirk-Kazhe of San Francisco, a lawyer for the Crazy Horse estate. Thus, the ceremonial gifts: 32 Pendleton blankets, 32 braids of sweet grass, 32 twists of tobacco and seven thoroughbred race horses. All have value in Indian culture. The settlement does not include money.

"We've always felt that this case hasn't been just about the money," Kirk-Kazhe said.

"It's a step toward clearing the name for Crazy Horse and his descendants and restoring the spirit of Crazy Horse as a strong Indian leader."

Crazy Horse was an Oglaia Sioux warrior who led the defeat of Lt. Col. George Custer at the Battle of the Little Big Horn in 1876.

'It's a silent outrage we have had to endure. It's been a long journey, but who will do it for him if not the relatives?'

—Seth Big Crow Sr., administrator of the Crazy Horse estate

The suit was filed in 1993, a year after Crazy Horse Malt Liquor went on the market.

"It's a silent outrage we have had to endure," said Seth Big Crow Sr., administrator of the Crazy Horse estate, whose grandfather was a cousin to Crazy Horse. "It's been a long journey, but who will do it for him if not the relatives?"

Lawyer Robert Gough of Roschard, S.D., who represents the Crazy Horse estate, said his clients were outraged the Crazy Horse name was attached to liquor, a product he said "has killed" more Indians than Winchester or Remington combined.

Under Lakota culture, it is disrespectful to speak of dead relatives, Gough said. Crazy Horse's family did not want his name used by strangers, much less printed on a label without his permission to sell 40-ounce bottles of malt liquor.

George Kuehn of Detroit, SBC's lawyer, said his client "is thrilled it is able to resolve this matter in a way that is fair and more importantly, culturally significant to the estate." SBC "believed it was the right thing to do under the circumstances," Kuehn said.

The Indian lawsuit continues against another company, Hornell Brewing of Brooklyn, N.Y. Hornell is accused of using the Crazy Horse name without permission.

Astronomers look for telescope funds

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Astronomy officials are scrambling to find money to keep a pioneering 12-meter radio telescope at the Kitt Peak National Observatory from being scrapped.

The National Science Foundation refused a joint request from the University of Arizona and the University of Massachusetts to provide $800,000 annually for the telescope, considered by many astronomers to be the most significant instrument of its type.

It has discovered at least 50 to 60 percent of all known interstellar molecules or chemical compounds, which are considered the building blocks of life, and of new stars and planets," said Lucy Ziurys, the telescope's acting director and a University of Arizona astronomy professor.

The 12-Meter Telescope is one of 23 telescopes at Kitt Peak, a major complex operated by the National Optical Astronomy Observatories.

Southern Arizona is considered the nation's best mainland location for astronomical observations because of low humidity and light pollution.

Tucson's growth, however, has increased the amount of light in Kitt Peak's eastern horizon. That has affected its optical telescopes and caused clashes with business interests over a stringent ordinance aimed at keeping night skies dark.

To study the physical and chemical processes of new stars being formed, scientists must observe the regions at millimeter-length radio wavelengths, said Kitt Peak director Richard Green. Those regions are nearly invisible in optical light, he said.

The 12-Meter Telescope is the only millimeter-wavelength radio astronomy facility open to all U.S. astronomers.

A 30-meter radio telescope in Spain is basically closed to the U.S. scientific community, Ziurys said. Other 14- and 10-meter telescopes owned by universities in Massachusetts and Hawaii have limited public use.

Two much larger instruments planned in Mexico and Chile won't be completed for a number of years.

About 150 U.S. and foreign researchers use the 12-Meter Telescope now, Ziurys said. It's also the only one in the country that covers the complete range of high-frequency millimeter bands, he said.

"It's been one of the most fruitful fields over the last 30 years in the formation of stars," said Peter Strittmatter, director of the university's Steward Observatory.

The 12-Meter Telescope was built in 1967 by the National Radio Astronomy Observatory. NRAO operated the telescope until last year, when it said it would close it in July to save $2 million a year.

Utah works to improve immunizations

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah has reached a milestone of having 500,000 child immunizations in the state's vaccination registry, and the state's ranking on that issue has improved dramatically in the past several years.

Nationally, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says immunization levels are at record highs, and Utah's national ranking for immunization moved from 49th to 22nd.

The help keep track of immunizations, the state has established a database of all the shots children receive.

Utah was one of the first states that received funding from the Centers for Disease Control for the project launched in 1995, which has been met with mixed reviews nationally. Opponents had said the system might be a way for insurance companies and others to discriminate against people who have opted not to get immunized or who have not completed the required series of immunizations.

But Utah First Lady Jackie Leavitt, who has adopted immunization as a cause for the last eight years, said Tuesday there is no reason to fear.

"It is important for parents to understand it's an information sharing system. The purpose is to be helpful and give parents information," Leavitt said.

Sometimes, it is the immunizations themselves that parents shy away from. Even though it is state law that every child entering kindergarten be fully immunized, many Utah residents take advantage of exemptions for medical, personal or religious reasons.

Opponents of immunization have long believed that having children vaccinated against childhood illnesses like diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, measles, mumps and rubella can be dangerous to their health.

Medical experts have strongly disputed those claims.

But often, Leavitt said, parents simply have a hard time remembering to complete their children's immunization series.

"The biggest challenge is not to start, but to finish," Leavitt said.

According to the state Department of Health, children need 80 percent of their immunizations in the first two years of life to protect them against disease, disability and even death.

Assembly approves lands measure

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The Nevada Assembly voted 38-3 Thursday for a "Sequestration Rebellion" bill that lets local district attorneys jump into legal disputes over public lands if the state attorney general won't.

AB391, now moving to the Senate, was amended to delete criminal penalties that could be sought against anyone who interfered with the state's rights to manage public lands.

"I feel it's workable now," Assemblyman John Cargill, R-Elko, said of the amended version of the bill. "It gives the counties a tool if they really need it."

Under the revised measure, county commissioners can adopt ordinances dealing with public lands within their boundaries; and local district attorneys can get involved in legal actions involving public lands if the state attorney general refuses to do so.

In its original form, the bill applied to public lands controlled by both the U.S. Forest Service and federal Bureau of Land Management. The amendment took out the Forest Service and left in the BLM.

Opponents included Assemblywoman Barbara Buckley, D-Las Vegas; Chris Coughlin, D-Las Vegas; and Sheila Leslie, D-Reno.

"It's bad public policy," Leslie said in explaining her opposition to the measure.

The bill states that Nevada has a "strong moral claim" and a legal claim to public lands still in

South Salt Lake bans all-nude dance clubs

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — Totally nude clubs have been banned in this city.

The City Council voted unanimously Wednesday night to repeal South Salt Lake's all-nude dance club ordinance.

Part of a larger overhaul of the city's sexually oriented business ordinances, the new law could take effect as soon as next week and would close South Salt Lake's three totally nude establishments — Leather & Lace, Paradise Adult Entertainment and American Bush — barring a court injunction.

"We need to see now what the process will bring," said South Salt Lake City Attorney Craig Hall, who has been crafting the new ordinance since last year's Supreme Court ruling that upheld an Erie, Pa., law requiring exotic dancers to be minimally attired.

"We need to see what the Erie case means in application with local governments and individual cases," he said.

The no contest, federal hands within the state's borders — about 86 percent of the state's land mass.

The measure also says the state is subject only to the jurisdiction of the U.S. Supreme Court in enforcing its constitutional rights in public land matters.

The measure stems in part from long-standing hassles over public lands in the West, including a recent dispute over a washed-out road in extreme northeast Nevada.

The battle, which included court-ordered mediation and a citizens' attempt to reopen the road, gave rise to the Shovel Brigade and became a symbol of some Westerners' dissatisfaction with federal land use policies.

Utah was one of the first states that received funding from the Centers for Disease Control for the project launched in 1995, which has been met with mixed reviews nationally. Opponents had said the system might be a way for insurance companies and others to discriminate against people who have opted not to get immunized or who have not completed the required series of immunizations.

Court: Gun makers can't be liable

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Hand-gun manufacturers cannot be held liable for deaths and injuries suffered by seven people because of the supposedly negligent way the weapons were marketed and distributed, the state's highest court ruled Thursday.

The 7-0 decision by the Court of Appeals probably dooms what lawyers said was the first verdict to go against gun makers sued over their marketing practices by a shooting victim.

In addition, it will probably influence courts in other states with similar lawsuits, said Lawrence Greenwald, a Baltimore lawyer who represented Beretta USA and American Arms before the Court of Appeals.

"Other courts will not be bound by New York's decision, but I think will respectfully consider it," he said.

The Court of Appeals decided that the chain linking gun makers with the seven victims is too tenuous to hold the manufacturers responsible.

At the least, the links in that chain also include federally licensed distributors or wholesalers and at least one retailer, the court said.

"The chain most often includes subsequent legitimate purchasers or even a thief," Judge Richard Wesley said.

With every gunshot victim or their survivors a potential litigant against gun manufacturers, more evidence of negligence on the part of gun makers must be established, Wesley said.

U.S. steps up Mideast effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is quietly picking up the pace of U.S. diplomacy in the Middle East and detects "a little bit of progress" in stemming violence, Secretary of State Colin Powell reported Thursday.

"We're doing it quietly, without a billboard announcement every day," Powell told a House panel as he hinted at potentially productive secret U.S. contacts.

President Bush intervened with a telephone call to Prime Minister Ariel Sharon of Israel. Shedding little light on their conversation, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said they talked about "ways to secure peace in the region."

On another front, Lebanon's prime minister, Rafik Hariri, who saw Bush on Tuesday and Powell on Wednesday, said his "impression is they are as committed as much as President Clinton was, but they want to use different tactics."

Probe: Blunders led to errant bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon investigation of a U.S. bombing accident that killed six people in Kuwait last month found that it had been preceded by similar, though nonfatal, training blunders at the same bombing range, officials familiar with the investigation said Thursday.

The inquiry, its findings still not officially released, revealed there had been three previous cases since last fall in which U.S. Air Force and Marine Corps aircraft had dropped bombs near an observation post rather than their intended targets, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Ashcroft says he won't seek more funds for tobacco suit

attorney general

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General John Ashcroft said Thursday he doesn't plan to ask for extra money to support the government's lawsuit against tobacco companies, despite a request from Justice Department lawyers for an additional $57 million.

Ashcroft, in his first appearance before Congress as attorney general, denied that he was planning to drop the lawsuit or transfer lawyers off the case. "I have not made any indication about any reassignment of any attorneys," Ashcroft told the Senate Appropriations subcommittee. "I have not made a decision about the case."

The Bush administration has requested $1.8 million to pay salaries and staff costs for the tobacco litigation team in the department's civil division, Justice Department officials say. Department budget writers did not seek money for legal work, such as gathering and analyzing millions of documents that tobacco companies have asked to see, leading critics to wonder whether the litigation is being abandoned.

President Bush on Wednesday expressed reservations about continuing the lawsuit, opposed by Republicans and members of Congress from tobacco-producing states. He said he has not decided whether to drop the suit.

Senators who favor the litigation immediately wrote letters to Ashcroft asking him to keep after the tobacco companies.

"The tobacco industry continues to evade its responsibility for its actions," said Democratic Sens. Patrick Leahy of Vermont and Dick Durbin of Illinois in a letter to Ashcroft Thursday. "We should not compound the damage by relinquishing our federal responsibility to enforce the law and protect the citizens of this nation."

New Japanese leader names five women to reformist cabinet

Junichiro Koizumi

TOKYO (AP) — After being elected prime minister, Junichiro Koizumi wasted no time Thursday surpassing expectations of change, installing a cabinet that includes a record five women — all in key posts — and filling his roster with committed reformers.

Makiko Tanaka led the list of women on Koizumi's team, given the crucial portfolio of foreign minister at a time of tummy ties with the United States and Japan's Asian neighbors.

Koizumi, who was elected prime minister by parliament after winning a ruling party mandate for change, also put women at the helm of the ministries of justice, transport, health and education.

That represents almost a third of the Cabinet, in a nation where women represent only one-tenth of lawmakers and where only a few have made it to the top of corporations.

"It's a revolutionary Cabinet."

Tanaka declared.

As foreign minister, she will have to ease ties with Asian nations angry about Japan's recent approval of a history textbook written by nationalists. Relations with Washington have also been hurt by the submarine accident off Hawaii that killed nine Japanese.

Koizumi spent his first day in office polishing his reformist credentials. He snubbed the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's biggest clique, giving only two, relatively low-profile posts to its members.

"There are forces that are against reform, but I'll fight hard for it from the very beginning," Koizumi said.

After hearing of the fresh faces in the new government, many people abandoned the cynicism that has prevailed in recent years.

"I've been secretly supporting him since he announced his candidacy," said Miki Yokokawa, 22. "When he left his faction, I thought maybe we can trust him."

But experts were more cautious: Many wondered if Koizumi's team has the experience, resilience and cunning to change the LDP from within.

"The LDP is such a formidable bureaucratic system," said Shigenori Okazaki, a political analyst at UBS Warburg. "Can this young Cabinet really challenge the bureaucrats? Can they challenge the senior politicians?"

Crowd rallies for president held in jail

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 50,000 supporters of ousted leader Joseph Estrada rallied into the night Thursday to demand he be freed from jail and restored to the presidential palace.

Encouraged by a statement Estrada issued from his cell and a parade of speakers, the peaceful but boisterous crowd swelled after dark, waving banners of support for the former action film star and urging his successor to resign.

Massive protests on the same site — the monument to the "people power" revolution that toppled dictator Ferdinand Marcos in 1986 — pressured Estrada to leave the presidential palace Jan. 20 amid a corruption scandal.

Estrada was jailed Wednesday, charged with the capital offense of plunder, theft from the state of more than $1 million.

There have been questions about reaction among the poor — Estrada's core of support — and how much backing he could muster. Before the arrest warrant was served, police dispersed thousands who surrounded Estrada's home in Manila for three days.

If the protests persist — and remain peaceful — President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo will be faced with the ticklish question of how to deal with disruption at a major intersection. Her spokesman said there were concerns about possible vandalism or other crime.

Estrada's lawyers moved Thursday to get him released from jail at Camp Crame, the national police headquarters, and put under house arrest. The Sandiganbayan, the anti-graft court handling the case, gave lawyers until Tuesday to submit arguments.

Prince reaffirms Saudi law against women driving

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Interior Minister Prince Nayef reaffirmed that his government has no intention of allowing women to drive, the official Saudi Press Agency reported Thursday.

Saudi Arabia is the only Persian Gulf state that bans women from driving.

"It is not possible, and there are no studies on the subject at all," Prince Nayef said, referring to government inquiries on changes to the law.

At a news conference, Prince Nayef was noncommittal when asked about another goal of Saudi women: identity cards, which currently are reserved only for men.

"As I've said before, everything comes in its own time," Nayef said.

Saudi women must cover all but their hands, eyes and feet when in public. They cannot travel, pursue higher education or get a job without the written approval of a male guardian.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kind love and sympathy during our recent loss of husband, father, and grandfather. We also extend grateful thanks for the beautiful floral attributes to our loved one.

Since 1989, TM - the bilingual touring company of Miracle Theater - has traveled throughout the West Coast, Mexico and Canada, bringing original plays about global issues. This is TM's fifth year of performing and touring in Idaho.

MCT, cast of locals present 'Treasure Island'

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It takes more tolerance than most folks have of Jack Hawkins.

"Really, it's a lot a fun, and it doesn't get old," said Tory Seiter, one of the touring actor/directors of the Missoula, Mont., Children's Theater production of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island." "But by the end of a year, yes, you're ready for another play."

The MCT, with a local cast of 51, will present two performances of "Treasure Island" Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center. The play is highly formatted, but many of the principal characters are locals - at every production the MCT does.

"We visit more than 800 communities a year with 24 teams of tour actor/directors," Seiter explained. "A tour team arrives in a town with a set, lights, costumes, props and makeup, everything that it takes to put on a play - except the cast."

The team holds an open audition - it was Monday in Twin Falls - and casts 50-60 local students to perform. The show is rehearsed throughout the week.

Seiter is on a year-long tour with "Treasure Island," then will re-up for another year, of "Little Red Riding Hood," the next production. All MCT shows are original adaptations of children's classics, but all with a twist.

"It wouldn't be fun if you didn't love the story," Seiter said. "And I do."

Premiere

premiere. New Line arranged only limited publicity interviews with cast members, and there were no screenings for reviewers till just two days before the opening.

"Town & Country" is Hollywood's latest "problem" film, a production plagued by delays, script troubles and rumors of strife on the set. None of that means it will turn out to be a bad movie, but the caliber of the cast has made it a bigger target than other films that have been sitting on the shelf awhile.

"What went wrong with what was intended to be a light comic riff on musical infidelity?" wrote entertainment writer Kim Masters in a profile in Inside magazine last year. "One thing's for sure: Almost everyone involved, from (cashiered New Line chief Michael) Deluca to the producers to the publicists to the star himself, doesn't want the arrow to be pointed at (Beatty)."

Beatty, producer, writer and director on many of his projects, "points out repeatedly and patiently that he was only an actor for hire," Masters told The Associated Press this month.

Responding to news accounts, Beatty publicist Pat Kingsley sent a letter to entertainment reporters spelling out that the actor had "no responsibility for production, writing or directorial decisions" on "Town & Country."

It seemed simpler somehow — "Town & Country" was supposed to be released in April 1999 — when director Peter Chelsom showed up here with a small army of technicians, Beatty and actor Garry Shandling 31 months ago.

He hired 300 extras, closed down Bellevue's Main Street for a day, and made all kinds of artificial snow to simulate Beatty's philandering character and Shandling on holiday in a ski resort.

There's even a shot in the film of Beatty and Shandling, in waders and fishing gear, standing in the Big Wood River talking about women. Other local shooting locations — not all of which made it into the movie — included the Harriman Cottage, the ice rink and welcome sign at the Sun Valley Resort, the North Fork State Forest of Ketchum and the Warm Springs access to Bald Mountain.

It was the first major shoot in the Wood River Valley since Clint Eastwood completed "Pale Rider" here in 1985, and came on the heels of Bruce Willis' production of "Breakfast of Champions" in Twin Falls. But since it left Idaho on Nov. 7, 1998, "Town & Country" has been through three scriptwriters.

According to Masters, New Line's explanation is that Deluca, under pressure to get rolling so that Beatty would be finished in time to meet other commitments, took a losing gamble on a script that was not ready. When the picture failed to gel, New Line had a long wait before a cast could get together for reshoots.

"As a producer, I don't start movies until I have a finished script," Beatty told Inside magazine. "I also, as a producer, have never given a stop date to an actor. I don't want to be negative on Mike Deluca for taking that gamble. Because really, Diane is gold and he was able to get a cast together that is so good, I can understand taking a gamble."

Chelsom, who directed "Funny Pants" and "The Magnificent Seven," has been blamed by co-producer Andrew Karsch for the long delays. "The choice of Peter Chelsom became increasingly disconcerting," Karsch told Masters in the Inside magazine profile. "At a certain point, Peter took it upon himself to do work on the script, and what he wrote, I think, left everyone somewhat less than comfortable. There was a sense that maybe we're going out to sea and the right guy didn't have his hand on the rudder."

"It is a mess," Chelsom told a British newspaper in 1999, blaming Beatty and others for many of the film's problems. "I have never seen so much money wasted. I am just a kid from the North of England so you go from being nervous with these big stars to being bored by their behavior."

For its part, New Line is sticking to the script that "Town & Country" is worth the wait.

"New Line is completely supporting the film, New Line fully believes in the film. It's a funny romantic comedy, and the talent is supporting the film. We're very happy for the weekend."

PREVENT SEWER BACKUPS

Although the City of Twin Falls has an excellent sewer maintenance program, the City has no control over what may be placed in sewer lines. Occasionally items will be put in the lines that can cause City lines to clog and back up. On such occasions homes with basement floor drains or shower drains may get sewer water backing into their basements if a back water check valve has not been placed in the homes' sewer service lines. City code section 7-7-12(H) requires back water check valves. If you have had drains in the basement, have your plumber check your home to determine if it has a check valve. If it does not, have one installed and maintain it regularly.

Heartbreakers

Sigourney Weaver and Jennifer Love Hewitt are terrific as a world-class mother-and-daughter con artist team who set out for the big score in Palm Beach but are ultimately confronted with their need for love. Their high spirits are contagious yet cannot paper over the feeling that the film is overly labored and overly long. With Ray Liotta, Gene Hackman, Jason Lee and Anne Bancroft. (203) PG-13, for sex-related content, including dialogue.

Joe Dirt

Lewdness, scatology and David Spade's hairdresser rule in this farcical ode to the basic goodness of white trash. Spade is a janitor who searches for his long-lost parents and gets a lot of funny things dumped on his head along the way. (128) PG-13, for crude and sexual humor, language.

Josie and the Pussycats

A sweet-natured bubble-gum movie about the escapades of an all-girl band, and like those venerable Frankie and Annette tales of its kind, it gets a lot of mileage out of its spirited performers and their peppy music. Written and directed by Deborah Kaplan and Harry Elfont and based more on a notion than an actual plot, it's all about girls having fun and saving the day. With Rachael Leigh Cook, Tara Reid, Rosario Dawson, (138) PG-13 for language and mild sensuality.

The Mexican

Brad Pitt and Julia Roberts team up for the first time, and then spend most of the movie in separate countries - in this sun-bleached, Maltese Falcon-like caper about a lot of people looking for a legendary antique gun. It's too self-consciously wacky and Tarantino-ish for its own good, but the two stars - especially Pitt - still pull off some engaging stuff. R (violence, sexual situations, profanity)

O, Brother, Where Art Thou?

Brothers Joel and Ethan Coen's latest takes its title from one of Preston Sturges' greatest satires and its basic story line from Homer's "The Odyssey." Set in Depression-era Mississippi, it sends a chain-gang escapee (George Clooney) and the two cons (John Turturro and Tim Blake Nelson) he's chained to on a search for mythical treasure. Rated R for comic violence, language. 1 hour, 43 minutes.

'Someone Like You'

A jaunty romantic comedy that's a comfortable fit for Ashley Judd, who in turn is surrounded by a stellar supporting cast including Greg Kinnear, Hugh Jackman, Maria Tormel and Ellen Barkin. (147, PG-13 for sexual content, including dialogue, and for some language.)

'Spy Kids'

An engaging premise (two preteens have to rescue spy parents Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino from the bad guys) is made into a winning family film that's lively, imaginative and possesses of a playful sense of humor. Not what you'd expect from the maker of 'Marachi' and 'From Dusk

Till Dawn' (1.28, PG, for action sequences).

'Town and Country'

Romantic comedy concerning a New York architect (Warren Beatty) at a crossroads in his life. Diane Keaton plays his wife, with Gerry Shandling and Goldie Hawn as their friends.

UP College of Southern Idaho CLOSE

By Joe Sumner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — From the occasionally wacky wardrobe, to the hair that defies gravity, College of Southern Idaho sophomore Craig Kilshaw is the type of guy with personality-plus.

"You can get your work done and still have fun doing it," Kilshaw said.

Focus on

"If you work the right way and have fun, it just goes by that much quicker. And I think the guys who are having a little bit of character and having some laughs every once in a while."

Craig Kilshaw
CSI baseball

opposing teams haven't been laughing.

As the Eagles' top man in the pitching rotation, Kilshaw has a 2.58 earned run average over nearly 60 innings and grabbed four wins this season.

"It doesn't matter to me where I start in the rotation," Kilshaw said. "I just try and go out and do what we can every game and that's help the team by shutting down the other team."

Kilshaw's consistency and an ability to mix good control with a solid fastball helped the lefty from Victoria, British Columbia lead the Eagles staff in ERA last season and he has a chance to do it again this season.

He pitched back-to-back two batters against Dixie State and North Idaho, going 1-0 and striking out the Rebels 3-1 while beating the Cardinals 9-5. He has only been hit hard once in the Scenic West Athletic Conference in a 9-2 loss to Salt Lake Community College early in the season.

"My low point would probably be when I threw against Salt Lake," Kilshaw said. "I didn't have enough control and I kept the ball up and got hit pretty hard. That's probably the only game I've really been disappointed in myself."

Kilshaw is second on the team in strikeouts with 60 and has allowed only six extra base hits, though two of those were for home runs.

"When we played Dixie I left a fastball up and in and that was the first home run I've given up in nine years," he said. "Then the weekend after another one got hit off me. But it happens. A pitcher makes a mistake and the ball gets hit hard."

The next stop for Kilshaw will be Winthrop University in South Carolina where he recently signed a national letter of intent. But before he starts pitching for the 28th-ranked Eagles, he hopes to help CSI to a SWAC title, something he was able to do as a freshman because tendonitis in his left elbow late last year kept him on the bench.

"This season he might get the chance."

"At the end of last year I was really disappointed," Kilshaw said. "I was so unhappy when we went to regionals just to sit there and watch us struggle. I wish I could have done something."

1. How would you describe yourself?

"Easy going. I just go with the flow and like to hang out with the guys."

2. What's in your CD player right now?

"Dance music or Tim McGraw. I like dance music because it gets you going and puts you in a rhythm."

3. Do you have any rituals?

"I always drink two energy drinks before I pitch. I always have one right beside me on the mound when I'm in the bullpen when I'm warming up."

4. Also try to focus and get into a zone. All I need is a good week to be in that zone."

5. What's your favorite pitcher?

"Change-up."

6. What's the most interesting thing you own?

"I don't know. Can we come back to that one?"

Eagles enter the home stretch

Four-game series with CEU could solidify playoffs

By Joe Sumner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dressed in shorts and a gray T-shirt, planting shrubs in the flower pots around Frontier Field, Jim Walker hardly looks the part of the coach of the hottest baseball team in the Scenic West Athletic Conference.

After a slow start, College of Southern Idaho is streaking toward the season's finish line, mere percentage points out of second place in the race for the conference's second seed. Winners of 15 of their last 18, the Eagles are 28-18 overall and 18-10 SWAC, still within dreaming distance of first place with eight games left to play.

"What it's all about is second place," Walker said. "But I don't know if we can do it or not. Winning the next eight ball games sounds pretty tough to me. Can we do it? Yeah, we can do it. Is it possible? Yeah, it's possible. Is it probable? No. But if we're in the right frame of mind anything can happen."

Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles aren't the only Golden Eagles playing at Frontier Field today with designs on a playoff berth, however. Hard-hitting

College of Eastern Utah, 23-20 overall and 14-13 in the SWAC, rolls into Twin Falls for a four-game series today and Saturday. "Everyday when we come into the clubhouse we look at the wall and see all the regional titles," said CSI sophomore Kevin Sytko. "To come here for two years and not get one would kind of be a bitter reminder."

A CSI sweep would virtually seal a spot in the SWAC tournament, while seventh-seeded CEU

Conference leaders clash in Buhl

Long ball lifts Tribe past Wood River

By John Derr
Times-News writer

BUHL — After an early season loss to Kimberly, the pressure was on the Buhl Indians if they wanted to claim the top seed in next month's district tournament.

Facing Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference rival Wood River Thursday, the Tribe responded with the long ball en route to a 9-2 victory.

Seth Mathews and T.J. Cline hit a pair of home runs and the Indians played solid defense as Buhl (4-1 SCIC, 20-2 overall) pulled even with previously undefeated Wood River (4-1, 16-6) atop the standings in the first game of a doubleheader.

Only Game 1 counts in the league standings.

In the nightcap, Buhl used a four-run third to pick up the 7-5 win and sweep the Wolverines for its 20th win. In the third, Mathews, Jeff Walker and Cline hit consecutive doubles and Sean Van Elderen singled before eventually scoring in the frame.

"That was the big inning, but we also got a big run in the fifth on a double by Ryan Wagner," said Buhl assistant coach Lee Cline.

Tim Bournier earned the win while Walker got the save.

The teams now battle Tuesday in Halley for the right to host the tournament.

Lee Cline said it may come down to a scenario eerily similar to the end of the American Legion season last summer when the teams met three times in over a week.

"We have the possibility of seeing these guys for three days in eight days," Lee Cline said. "I don't think there's any gives. Everybody has got one arm but all were thinking about it Tuesday and then we'll see."

In the opener, Mathews limited the Wolverines to just three hits, going into the third inning before allowing a base runner. He helped his cause with a two-run home run in the fourth.

"Seth threw well," Buhl coach Gary Krumm said. "It was a nice time to throw well and grab his first home run. We kept the pressure on with base runners and had some timely hits."

Cline got the two-out walk in the first, then scored on a single down the third base by Cody Chandler. The Wolverines tied it in the third with Riley Nash getting aboard with a single. Max Paisley blasted a high shot that hit the wall in center to score Nash.

The Buhl bench congratulates Seth Mathews after the senior hit his first career home run to open up a big lead against SCIC rival Wood River in the opener of a doubleheader Thursday at Clint Faux Memorial Field in Buhl. The Indians swept both games 9-2 and 7-5.

Ten batters came to the plate during the fourth inning for the Indians. Rob Walker got a free pass, then with two outs, Mathews sent one over the fence in left center. It was his first career homer.

"I'm a pitcher," Mathews said. "I don't know how it got out."

The two-out rally wasn't through, however. Jeff Walker nearly missed back-to-back dingers, hitting the fence. Van Elderen and Chandler followed with RBI singles as Buhl

Pittsburgh beats Sabres, loses Jagr

The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Mario Lemieux and Johan Hedberg teamed up for another heady victory in a game that could prove costly for the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Jakomir Jagr, the regular-season scoring champion, meted by third period with a leg injury as Pittsburgh beat the Buffalo Sabres 3-0 on Thursday night in the first game of the Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Penguins would say only that Jagr had a "charley horse" injury, and gave no information on his status for Game 2 on Saturday.

Jagr limped off the ice after being checked hard into the boards by defenseman Alexei Zhitnik late in the second period. Little-used forward Josef Beranek took Jagr's spot on Pittsburgh's top line the rest of the way.

Pittsburgh still managed to find a way to win. Jagr did manage to set up Lemieux's goal 5:07 into the game. Jan Hrdina, set up by Beranek, sealed the win by scoring with six minutes left. Former Sabres forward Wayne Primeau, set up by Lemieux, made it 3-0 with 2:20 remaining.

Pittsburgh's Mario Lemieux blasts a shot past Buffalo goalie Dominik Hasek during the first period of Game 1 of the Eastern Conference semifinals in Buffalo, N.Y., Thursday. The Penguins won the game 3-0.

Tonight's game

Hedberg, in only his fifth week in the NHL, then did the rest, stopping 25 shots to record his second shutout of the playoffs.

The Penguins are 3-0 in the postseason at Buffalo, after eliminating the Sabres 2-1 in a best-of-three 1979 first-round series — the only other time the two teams have met in the playoffs.

Game 2 is in Buffalo Saturday afternoon.

It was a fitting goal for Lemieux, who four years ago to the day, had thought he had played his last game, retiring after Pittsburgh was eliminated by Philadelphia in the first round of the 1997 playoffs.

With the teams playing four-aside, Jagr set up the goal when he attracted all four Sabres defenders to the left boards in the neutral zone. Jagr then spun the puck and fed a perfect pass to Lemieux, who was fresh off the bench coasting up the right wing.

Crossing the blue line, Lemieux blasted a 30-footer that

Carter, Raptors claw to 1-1 tie with Knicks

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Vince Carter finally became a playoff performer Thursday night, turning from a timid player to a tough one as the Toronto Raptors beat the New York Knicks 94-74.

Carter, coming off a poor performance in Game 1 that dropped his career postseason record to 0-4, went on an offensive tear in the second half to help the Raptors turn it into a rout.

Carter scored 22 points and got the better of Latrell Sprewell several times when they were matched one-on-one to lead the Raptors to the first playoff victory in franchise history.

Tied 1-1, the series resumes Sunday at Toronto with the Raptors now holding homecourt advantage. They'll also be secure in the knowledge that Carter can perform under pressure and coach Larry Brown isn't too old to try something new.

Toronto's Vince Carter drives past New York's Latrell Sprewell in the second half of Game 2 of the Eastern Conference playoffs Thursday in New York. Carter scored 22 points.

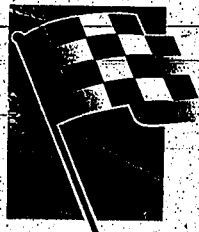

Toronto threw a different look at the Knicks, moving Chris Childs into the starting lineup, sliding Alvin Williams over to shooting guard and sending rookie Morris Peterson to the bench. Williams tied his career-high

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP

TALLADEGA, Ala. — It doesn't take a rocket scientist or a magician to win a superspeedway race. It takes a racer, pure and simple. Bobby Hamilton didn't have to "see the air." He just had to find a way to the front.
To Hamilton, a tough, no-nonsense race driver from Mount Juliet, Tenn., winning the Talladega 500 was a matter of simple arithmetic.
Early in the race, Hamilton figured out that he could work his way to the front of the field in approximately 15 laps. When 15 laps were left on Sunday, he put his plan in motion. Literally. The result was the fourth victory of his career and the first for car owner Andy Petree.

BUSCH GRAND NATIONAL

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Mike McLaughlin guarded the bottom of Talladega Superspeedway's banking faultlessly, and the result was a fiercely contested victory over Jimmy Spencer in the Subway 300.
McLaughlin, driving a Pontiac owned by Joe Gibbs, traded sheet metal to resist Spencer's dogged pursuit in the final laps.

Fan Tips

Talladega race weekend was also the occasion of the annual induction ceremonies for the International Motorsports Hall of Fame and Museum, housed on the grounds of the 2.666-mile track.
This year's induction was held April 29, and the new members of the hall of fame were the NASCAR star Neil Bonnett, open-wheel champion Jimmy Bryan, motorcycle superstar Mike Hallwood and engine builder Fred Offenhauser.
The Motorsports Hall of Fame is open each day from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Talladega race weekends, and from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day the rest of the year.

Winston Cup Series

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

Before the start of the 2001 season, veteran driver Bobby Hamilton moved from Larry McLucie's Kodak-sponsored car to Andy Petree's No. 55 Square D Chevrolet. And Hamilton has found instant success. He won the 500-mile race Sunday at Talladega Superspeedway and sits fourth in points.

NASCAR This Week

First: Start (Nov. 5, 1989, at Phoenix), pole (June 21, 1996, at Michigan), win (Oct. 27, 1996, at Phoenix)

Car: No. 55 Square D Chevrolet Monte Carlo, owned by Andy Petree

How important was it that the Talladega 500 was a safe race? "I think we need to know ourselves that we can do this and not wreck, and I think this race proved it. The fall race proved it. NASCAR knows that Daytona is a little different animal. Seven or eight years ago, Daytona and Talladega were identical. So I think they're going to start testing and probably come up with different rules for there (Daytona) or maybe new rules for both tracks. ... (This) just lets us know that we don't have to run over each other on the third lap."

How important was it for you to win this race after not winning in three years? "Without stepping on anybody's toes, I like going somewhere, I mean, we get paid a lot of money to do this. I want to earn my keep, and I thought it would be cool to win Andy (Petree's) first race. Not to take anything away from (teammate) Joe (Nemeche) or anything like that, because if Joe had won Andy's first race, I would have been proud for that, too. But it's the same thing for Richard Petty. It made me feel good to win Richard Petty's first race as a car owner (at Phoenix in 1996). That was pretty special for me."

proving his mettle at the restrictor-plate tracks, in the Talladega 500.

The victory was the fourth of Hamilton's career but his first on a track longer than roughly a mile. Incidentally, the 2001 season has been kind to Hamilton in more ways than one. He owns a Craftsman Truck Series team, and one of his two drivers, Joe Ruttman, has emerged as one of that series' championship contenders.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Mike McLaughlin vs. Jimmy Spencer

A verbal battle, much of it unsolicited for publication, broke out following the running of the Subway 300, a Busch Grand National race held at Talladega Superspeedway and won by McLaughlin on Saturday. After the bruising finish, Spencer called the race winner all manner of names and said he'd get him "somewhere down the road." Spencer added: "I can race like that, too, don't forget. He put me into the grass twice. Then I went to the outside, and he tried to put me in the wall. I won't forget. He better be glad he don't drive a Winston Cup car."
"Through a lot of bad experiences, I've learned a lot about restrictor-plate racing," McLaughlin said. "Once I got in front, I did what I had to do to protect my line at the bottom of the track. Jimmy said dirty racing? That's the pot calling the kettle black. ... He ran me hard. I thought it was a good race."
NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "One thing no one can say about Jimmy Spencer is that he doesn't want to win every race he competes in."

Teachers appreciate, need volunteer help

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, I discovered I had a need for teachers. The day after school ended, I had a couple of free hours and impulsively stopped by the school and volunteered to help my daughter's teacher pack up for the summer. You would have thought I donated an organ! What I did was not hard: We took down bulletin boards, picked books, etc. It was quite enjoyable.

Before school began in the fall, I offered my services again, but this time my 18- and 15-year-old daughters joined me. The teachers nearly named a day after us. We cleaned cubbies, arranged desks, cut out shapes and set out supplies. It doesn't matter if you have one hour or four. It makes a difference.

The most wonderful part was my daughters telling the teachers they had no idea how much work teachers devote to preparing for their pupils.

I recommend this as a wonderful volunteer opportunity. The added benefit was exposing my teen-agers to the "behind-the-scenes" activities of these energetic, committed professional teachers.

KAREN WARREN, GAINESVILLE, FLA.

DEAR KAREN: A terrific idea. Everyone's a winner when everyone chips in, but why stop there? Schools welcome the continual involvement of parents in their children's education, and that involvement results in more diligent students.

DEAR ABBY: I read in this morning's paper the letter from the paramedic who was called to the home where the little boy drowned.

It was a sad letter that made my heart ache.

We have a fence around our pool and the gate securely locked. Our son knows how to swim and follows the safety rules we have established.

I thought I was a responsible pool owner - until last Mother's Day. We had invited friends over for a cookout and swimming party. We ate in shifts so an adult would always be with the children as they swam. My friend and I were eating poolside; her husband was in the pool with the children. All four of the little ones (under 5) had taken swimming lessons and were good swimmers.

My friend's son was floating on a kickboard. We looked away for a moment, and when we looked back, he was nowhere to be seen. We moved the kickboard, and there he was, trying to come up for air! Somehow, I managed to reach in and grab him. We were lucky. He had been holding his breath. In a few more seconds, he would have drowned. All this happened in 3 feet of water, 3 feet from me, and with five adults in the pool area.

Since then, we have added new rules: We now have at least one adult watcher for every three children.

This person must be alert at all times and watch the children. We rotate so the same adult isn't always the watcher. If a child cannot swim, he or she must wear a life vest, and the parents are responsible for their children the entire time they are in the pool.

Abby, a fence around a pool and a locked gate are mandatory. We had a close call we will never forget. Safety rules must not only be established, but strenuously observed.

LIFEGUARDING MOM IN PHOENIX

DEAR LIFEGUARDING MOM: There is no telling how many lives you may have saved today because you took the time to write.

Thank you for pointing out that it is not enough to be the vicinity of a pool - or other body of water - when children are in it. The children must be watched closely at all times.

Auction house finds support for Madonna's conical bra

LONDON (AP) - One of Madonna's eye-popping conical bras sold for $21,150 on Thursday at a pop memorabilia auction, snapped up by a Chilean fashion museum.

The memorabilia fashion statement, a fixture of the pop diva's 1990 Blond Ambition Tour, evoked a page of handwritten lyrics by Beatles legend Paul McCartney, which was bought by an unidentified private collector for $29,950, Christie's auction house said.

The auction featured more than 200 pieces of memorabilia, including an autographed letter sent by John Lennon to a fan and a suit worn on stage by Eric Clapton.

The Museum of Fashion and Textiles in Santiago, Chile emerged the winner of unexpectedly high bidding for Madonna's black and fuchsia Jean-Paul Gaultier bra. A Christie's spokeswoman said the bra was expected to fetch only $4,500.

The seller, who was not identified, won the bra in a British radio contest, the spokeswoman said on customary condition of anonymity.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

AIG first-quarter earnings rise

NEW YORK — American International Group, the world's largest insurance company, said its first-quarter operating earnings rose 15.2 percent as the insurer benefited from higher premium rates for its commercial property and casualty business and increased sales of overseas life insurance.

New York-based AIG reported operating income of $1.57 billion, or 67 cents per share, beating analysts' estimates by a penny. A year earlier, AIG earned $1.36 billion, or 58 cents per share.

"AIG had a solid first quarter, benefiting from a continuing strengthening of pricing in the commercial property and casualty insurance market and financial services businesses," Chief Executive M.R. Greenberg said in the earnings report released Thursday.

Revenue for the first quarter rose 11.6 percent to $12.5 billion, from $10.8 billion a year ago.

Compared to its other business segments, AIG's domestic life business could be a lot bigger. Attempting to multiply its life insurance presence in the United States, AIG has offered to buy American General Corp., which has an American General Finance office in Twin Falls — the third largest life and annuity insurer in the United States, for $23 billion. The bid was made April 3 and competes with Britain's second largest insurer Prudential PLC. Prudential announced March 12 that it had agreed to buy American General.

American General reported its first-quarter earnings Wednesday (net income rose 13.3 percent to $323 million), and Chief Executive Robert Devlin said outright he would not talk about the two outstanding bids.

Wells Fargo launches new tools for Web site

TWIN FALLS — Wells Fargo & Co. on Thursday launched two new tools for its Online Brokerage site aimed at helping its self-directed online investing customers manage their capital gains tax liability and reduce the amount of time spent preparing tax forms.

The new Portfolio Tracker and Tax Tracker tools will make it easier for customers to manage their portfolios based on tax considerations and their personal preferences, allowing them to more effectively manage their ongoing capital gains tax liability throughout the year, said Wells Fargo, which does banking business in the Magic Valley.

Portfolio Tracker enables customers to monitor their investments and receive alerts based on their personal gain/loss percentage targets, their tax rates, realized and unrealized gains/losses for their accounts and potential upcoming tax-related events.

Court: Costco members can sue tax commission

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Court of Appeals ruled Thursday that members at discount stores Costco and Sam's Club can sue Utah's Tax Commission.

The stores' members argued that sales tax should not be added to their membership dues.

A district judge dismissed the suit, saying the decision is up to the Tax Commission, not the courts, but the Court of Appeals ruled the court has jurisdiction over the question.

At stake is about $2.50 per member per year.

Attorneys for the Tax Commission argued that the members first must exhaust their options within the commission's administrative procedure before going to court.

The Appeals Court disagreed, saying the courts have a right to determine whether the taxing decision is legal. The matter will now go back to District Court Judge John K. Iwasaki for further hearings.

Meanwhile, the Idaho State Tax Commission in January said it was issuing refunds to more than 100,000 members of Costco stores in Idaho for sales tax paid on memberships.

Workplace deaths drop

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Workplace deaths in the United States have dropped by nearly half over the past two decades, the government said Thursday, crediting new technology, stricter safety regulations and a shift in the economy toward safer service-industry jobs.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said 5,285 workers died from on-the-job injuries in 1997, the latest year for which figures are available. This is a rate of 4.1 deaths per 100,000 workers — down 45 percent from 1980, when it was 7.4.

"The hazards workers face are considerably different," said Suzanne Marsh, a statistician at the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. "We're moving from an industrial country to a more of a service-oriented country."

The CDC also credited new technology and stricter safety regulations. Car crashes have accounted for one in four on-the-job deaths since 1980, the CDC said. Homicides accounted for 14 percent and machinery accidents for 13 percent.

Mining was easily the most dangerous sector, with 30 deaths per 100,000 workers over the two decades. Agriculture and forestry followed at 19 per 100,000.

The CDC cautioned that its numbers probably underestimate the number of deaths in the workplace because the agency measures them using a nationwide survey of death certificates.

The Labor Department issues its own set of statistics on workplace deaths, "tracking them" with a more comprehensive method that also scours federal regulatory reports and news clippings.

Those numbers go back only to 1992 but have shown a similar

Hispanics find success outside packing plants

The Associated Press

LIBERAL, Kan. — When newcomers wrinkle their noses at the coppery smell of blood from the National Beef Packing plant, they are told: "That's the smell of money."

So it is for Hispanic immigrants who come to Liberal — or to towns in states as far-flung as Delaware, Georgia, Nebraska and Washington — seeking jobs and paychecks to help build new lives.

The nation's Hispanic population jumped nearly 60 percent during the past decade, according to 2000 Census figures, and much of the attention has been given to immigrants flocking to communities with agriculture plants like Liberal.

But an increasing number of Hispanics are finding success far from the killing floors, in middle-class jobs. And while Hispanics are rarely found in corporate boardrooms, the number of Hispanic-owned businesses has exploded over the past decade. In California alone, there are more than 300,000.

"They come here for the same reason non-Latinos come here — jobs," said Rudolfo Perez Jr., director of the Phoenix office of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund. "Whether you are a professional or an immigrant, you come here for economic opportunity."

"We are emerging as business leaders, as community leaders, in this country," said John Avila, whose runs an Albuquerque jewelry business with his wife.

In the 1970s, the Avilas peddled jewelry at flea markets. Now, the business has grown to $9 million in annual sales and 100 employees.

"The purchasing power of Hispanics has gone up significantly," from $208 billion in 1990 to $328 billion seven years later, said Cici Rojas, president of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce in the Kansas City area.

Carlos Cruz points to the Carlos Boots label on a cowboy boot in his store in Liberal, Kan., last month. Cruz, a former beef packing plant worker, is in his tenth year of business selling Western clothing.

According to the Selig Center for Economic Growth at the University of Georgia, Hispanic purchasing power will pass $450 billion this year.

In southwestern Kansas, immigrants from Mexico used to come to work on the railroad and then arrived in ever-increasing numbers when meatpacking plants opened in the 1960s.

Victor Limon and Carlos Cruz

both worked at National Beef when they arrived from Mexico, but have prospered on their own. Limon, a baker and Cruz is celebrating his 10th year as a Western wear merchant.

"I made shoes from when I was 10 years, 11 years old," said Cruz, who came to the United States from Juarez as a teen-ager 30 years ago. "This is my life."

He started his business while still working at National Beef, selling handmade boots out of his garage. Now, he estimates his annual sales at $200,000; he opened a second store two years ago in nearby Dodge City.

Limon's display cases are full of sweet Mexican cookies, pumpkin-filled turnovers and coconut-sprinkled cakes. No doughnuts.

"We make different things, things the Mexican people are used to," Limon said.

According to the Census Bureau's latest figures, 1.2 million Hispanic-owned firms — most of them sole proprietorships — employed 1.3 million people and generated $186 billion in 1997.

The U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce says the count is too low. But regardless, Hispanic-owned businesses clearly have skyrocketed — up from 490,000 in 1987 and 860,000 in 1992.

Jack Taylor, executive director of the Liberal Chamber of Commerce, said immigrant entrepreneurs are a boon to small towns where family owned stores have given way to discount superstores or closed as

E-mail addresses will change with company sale

The Associated Press

BOISE — More than 25,000 Internet dial-up customers, including many in the Magic Valley — will have to change their e-mail addresses as the HostPro business of Micron Electronics sells its subscriber base to Atlanta-based EarthLink.

The deal means the domain suffixes of home users will change from microneutral and hostpro.net, and customers will be part of the third-largest Internet service provider in the country.

EarthLink will assign the new customers a domain suffix of either mindspring.com or earthlink.net, a decision made later this spring. The microneutral dial-up service is provided by HostPro, the Web hosting business of Micron Electronics, which is selling its subscriber base.

"The dial-up business is primarily consumer customers with different needs from our target market of small- to medium-sized businesses," said Barbara Gibson, a spokeswoman for HostPro. "The consumer dial-up market is the lower end, with lower margins, of what we do. We didn't have the scale for that to be a significant driver for us. That business doesn't make sense unless you're going to be a major player."

HostPro will continue to offer high-speed Internet connections to its business customers who will continue to use either microneutral or hostpro.net suffixes. It has up to 30,000 dial-up customers, primarily home users. EarthLink has about 4.5 million.

Aside from the inconvenience of having to notify contacts of a change in e-mail address, customers will only benefit in the switch to EarthLink, industry analysts said. Both companies charge $19.95 per month for unlimited Internet access, and EarthLink offers a menu of additional services, at tiered prices, geared toward the home market.

"EarthLink is very well known for its customer service," said Rob Lancaster, an analyst for The Yankee Group research firm in Boston.

The service was started in December 1994 by Micron

Internet Services and was acquired by Micron Electronics 1.5 years ago. The switch could occur as early as June, said EarthLink spokeswoman Carla Shaw. Before that, customers will receive notification and then a start-up kit in the mail.

It will contain their new username, password and the local dial-up number, along with software, which will automatically load their new e-mail address. But customers can also use their dial-up network to configure their new e-mail themselves.

Marketers use census to target consumer demands

Knight Ridder News Service

CHICAGO — When marketers combine a scanner at the checkout counter with data from the U.S. Census, they have a marketing tool that can plan everything from the location of a new store to how many slots in their CD shelves carry Latin titles.

The deal means the domain suffixes of home users will change from microneutral and hostpro.net, and customers will be part of the third-largest Internet service provider in the country.

Now, once a Target or other marketer is itching for a fresh batch of census data to plug into their computers. The Census Bureau released race and ethnic statistics last month following the disclosure of state population totals in December.

"The biggest market for the findings is the federal government itself, which uses the data to determine congressional boundaries and the distribution of taxpayer dollars. Companies, meanwhile, will be looking to the census to monitor the latest trends and predict tomorrow's. Using more sophisticated forecasting software, many companies and their advertising agen-

Outback Steakhouse unit gets a sizzling plug on public television

Knight Ridder News Service

TAMPA, Fla. — Carrabba's Italian Grill has discovered an advertising gold mine in a most unusual place: public television.

Many already know the nephew-and-uncle team of Johnny Carrabba and Damian Mandola from their buoyant television commercials for Carrabba's, a fast-growing unit of Tampa-based Outback Steakhouse Inc. that plans to build its 100th restaurant this year.

Now, the two founders are moonlighting as the hosts of Cucina Amore, a 26-episode Italian cooking show on PBS. The half-hour show recently began airing in more than 25 markets, including New York and Chicago.

It's not just great advertising for Carrabba's; it's free.

Carrabba's and Outback aren't paying PBS a bloomin' penny. The show's production company, West 175 Enterprises of Seattle, headhunted the hosts and is paying them a salary.

"It's a gift," Carrabba's marketing director Andi Jacobs said.

"It's going to help our sales tremendously," Carrabba's president Steve Shilemon said Wednesday after Outback's annual shareholders meeting in Tampa.

Among other news from the shareholders meeting, Outback — which this spring opened a Twin Falls steakhouse — said it plans to open about 100 new locations this year among its five themed restaurants, which include Outback Steakhouse, Carrabba's, Fleming's Prime Steakhouse & Wine Bar, Roy's and Zazzara.

Lee Roy Selmon's, which opened its first restaurant last year in Tampa, will open a second by early 2002 in North Tampa. Cheeseburger in Paradise, a planned joint venture with singer Jimmy Buffett, was touted at the meeting but has not scheduled any restaurant openings.

The company's curb-side, take-away business continues to grow. In the quarter ended March 31, take-out accounted for 7 percent of total sales, versus about 4 percent a year earlier.

Chief financial officer Bob Merritt downplayed Outback's floundering stock, which closed Wednesday at $28.06, up 56 cents, or 2 percent. He characterized the 1999 high of $40 as a temporary blip and said Outback's stock had outperformed the overall market in the past six to eight months.
