Bridge diving causes concern

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The promoters of an annual parachuting contest off the Perrine Bridge near Twin Falls want the event to grow, but one police official said he hopes it won't become a free-fall into chaos. "If they want to go jump, it's legal and they have the right to do it," said Lt. Rob Storm of the Idaho State Police's Twin Falls office. "But I wish they'd keep the hoopla to a minimum."

Weekend event could spark traffic tie-ups, accidents, officer says

Storm said this week that he had received no official notice of the "BASE jumping" contest - planned for June 21 and 22. Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousley and Jerome County sheriff's spokeswoman Nance Strickland said they hadn't been told about it, either. "I have not been contacted, and at this point, I haven't made any specific plans about it," Tousley said.

Tousley said he wasn't overly concerned about the contest yet. But organizers should be prepared to make sure the event is safe - and put up the money to do so, he said. BASE stands for "Building, Antenna, Span, Earth," and is the buzzword for the increasingly popular sport of parachuting from fixed structures or geological features.

The international pro-BASE circuit plans to hold the "2001 BASE games" at the Perrine Bridge on June 21 and 22. The event's chief organizer, Florida resident Harry Parker, said his group doesn't want to make trouble. "It will be in the morning during the week, so we hope it won't cause too many problems," he said. Parker said he's also hoping to build local support for the event, so Twin Falls and surrounding towns can get attention and a boost in business from it. But the Ice crystals, sun put on show in afternoon sky

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Wandering why the sun was wearing a halo Thursday afternoon?

In sky-watcher circles it's known as a 22-degree halo - a multicolored ring that develops when light is refracted by the crystals in the atmosphere, much in the way rainbows are created by moisture in the air at lower altitudes.

It's not an uncommon sight in our midlatitude skies, said Chris Anderson of the College of Southern Idaho's Faulkner Planetarium.

Interested?

For more information and photographs of rings similar to those seen here Thursday, see this story on our website at: www.magicvalley.com. More information can also be seen at: http://www.weather.photography.com/Atmospheric_Optics/circumscribed_halo.html

"We might see a dozen or so of those a winter," Anderson said.

But if you looked a little closer Thursday, you might have seen a much more nebulous sight - a circumscribed halo. The phenomenon - splits in the ends of the main 22-degree circle the eventually join back in with the main circle, making it appear oblong - is very rare.

"That's pretty uncommon," Anderson said, as he watched the changing scene throughout the mid-afternoon. "I've never seen one before."

Another not-so-common sight in Thursday's skies was a parhelic circle (set just to the north of the sun and bisecting it on the circle's southern edge). That kind of halo is a little more uncommon than a 22-degree circle, Anderson said.

Halos are a ring of light surrounding the sun or moon that usually appear as bright white rings, like Thursday's parhelic circle. But in some instances, like the 22-degree halo, the dispersion of light as it passes through ice crystals in upper level cirrus clouds can cause a halo to have color.

Thursday's sights were caused by sunlight refracting through or reflecting off of hexagonal, pencil-shaped ice crystals in the atmosphere.

Idaho Power parent considers blackouts

The Associated Press

BOISE - The president of IDACORP Inc., the corporate parent of Idaho Power Co., told shareholders Thursday that rolling blackouts, like those seen in California, are possible in Idaho if power prices become unaffordable. "There are prices you wouldn't be able to afford," Jan B. Packwood, the president and chief executive officer of IDACORP, said. "Turning out the lights is being seriously discussed. We may be talking about blackouts."

California has been struck by six days of rolling blackouts since January and officials predict more as temperatures rise this summer.

Similar action in Idaho could not be taken without regulatory review. Packwood said that drought is reducing Idaho's amount of hydro-generated power, forcing the company to buy expensive electricity on the open market. Idaho Power expects about 2.38 million acre-feet to flow into Brownlee Reservoir this year compared to 4.1 million acre-feet last year.

This month, state regulators approved an immediate 25 percent rate increase for Idaho's largest electric utility. The one-year record increase will allow Idaho Power to generate $168.3 million in additional revenue, primarily to offset the higher prices it has been paying for electricity on the open market.

Packwood told about 100 shareholders - whose stock is down slightly from last year - that long-term solutions are needed to increase the supply of power and decrease demand.

He touted Idaho Power's energy buyback programs as well as a new plant. Despite objections from some Middleton residents, the company is planning to build a new gas-fired generating plant about a mile from town.

Bush energy plan's hot issues

Four major parts of President Bush's newly announced energy policy that are raising the most opposition:

Nuclear fuel reprocessing
Build more nuclear power plants and revive plan to process radioactive nuclear waste into new nuclear fuel.

✓ Reprocessing has been examined and rejected several times since 1970s for cost and safety reasons and fears that enemies could use it to make nuclear weapons

Power lines on private property
Give federal agency power to force citizens to sell their land to the government to speed construction of new power lines

✓ Western property rights advocates, who are Bush supporters, say this is unwanted federal intrusion

Drilling on public lands
Begin oil and gas drilling in Alaska, Rocky Mountains, Gulf of Mexico, Calif. coast, Outer Continental Shelf

✓ Biggest objection to opening 2,000 acres (800 hectares) of Arctic National Wildlife Refuge

Easing pollution laws for power plants
Change clean air laws to allow older, mostly coal-burning, power plants to increase much needed capacity without cutting smog-causing emissions

✓ Environmentalists say current laws have forced power companies to eliminate thousands of tons of pollutants from the air

Analysts see modest Bush energy plan

By Richard T. Cooper
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - With fuel prices soaring, supplies tightening and the nation's energy infrastructure tottering, President Bush says it's time for bold action.

"If we fail to act, this great country could face a darker future, a future that is unfortunately being previewed in rising prices at the gas pump and rolling blackouts in the great state of California," Bush declared Thursday.

Yet the energy plan he unveiled in St. Paul, Minn., is a blueprint for a relatively modest effort by the federal government -

Larger slice of the pie

The 2.2 million households of single fathers raising their own children in 2000 now make up 3 percent of all family households. The number of single father households rose 82 percent in the last decade.

NOTE: A family household is made up of people living together who are related by birth, marriage, or adoption. In 2000, there were 71.8 million family households.

Senate debates tax breaks for wealthy

WASHINGTON — The Senate opened debate Thursday on the proposed $1.35 trillion, 11-year tax-cut bill, which would slash the top marginal rate to 25 percent.

The Senate rejected an amendment that would have scaled back cuts in tax rates for the upper-income taxpayers.

...much faster than in the past, Jackson says — with about 30 plans queued up to move through the same expedited process.

...Indeed, some economists question whether today's energy problems merit the term "crisis" at all. Shortages on higher prices, they say, exist because a decade of prosperity and economic growth finally pushed demand for energy beyond immediately available supplies — a deficit that market forces are beginning to correct.

...Why not just sit back and let the markets respond, as they do for everything else? Why do you think we have a crisis? asked Tim Brennan, an energy specialist at the University of Maryland Baltimore County.

...If Bush's approach is modest, and premised on the unstated assumption that relatively little government action is needed, even critics applauded him on two counts:

...He presents a comprehensive view of the energy issue, tying together supply, demand, conservation and the environment.

...He is focusing public attention on the need to address important problems and policy decisions that were ignored in the years when energy was plentiful and cheap.

Census: Families with single dads grow more common

WASHINGTON (AP) — More fathers are going solo in raising kids.

A's change that single fathers shows greater acceptance by American families and courts that sometimes the best place for children is with Dad.

Single fathers say the numbers help tear down a long-standing conviction that fathers tend to abandon their kids, or at least not take as good care of them as single moms, said Vince Regan, an Internet consultant from Grand Rapids, Mich., who is raising five kids on his own.

"In time, it goes a long way to helping society think that single fathers do help their kids and want to be part of their lives," he said.

Thomas Coleman, executive director of the American Association for Single People, attributed the rise to a variety of reasons, including more judges awarding custody to fathers in divorce cases and more women choosing their jobs over family life.

The percentage increase in single-father households far outpaced other living arrangements. The "Ozzie and Harriet" household, where both parents raise the children like on the old TV show, increased by 6 percent, and single mother homes were up by 25 percent.

Father-headed households are still only a small percentage. Married couples with children make up 24 percent of all households.

...Rogers, made up their minds to exchange the climate and urban population of Irving, Texas, for the valleys, mountains and high desert of Idaho.

The couple had decided to change lifestyle and settled on the Northwest. Rogers used her marketing experience to research which town would be the best and concluded Idaho had the best economic climate. Further research led Rogers and her husband to Twin Falls since then, she said, she never tires of telling friends back in Texas how idyllic life is in Magic Valley.

"This is a Shangri-La," Rogers said. "I have made many people from the other side of the mountain jealous. To be able to do the kind of work you enjoy and live in such peace and in such beauty is hard to believe."

Times-News publisher Stephen Hartgen, who was on the hiring committee, said he would rather not lose Rogers. But she said he is convinced she is the right person to help diversify and expand Magic Valley's economy.

"She loves the area and is committed to the area," Hartgen said. "She is a transplant that has taken root here. She has lived in other places and can articulate what we have here."

...BASE jumpers don't want to step on toes, he said.

"I believe it would be a good event for the community," he said. "But if it's something the community is not really interested in, we'll just go somewhere else."

A press release from Parker's group says the jumpers plan "a no holds barred parachute competition as individuals and teams."

The press release also encourages local businesses to flip into the sales and marketing surrounding the event.

A low-key version of the BASE games was held at the bridge last June and went largely unnoticed, said Keith Baines, Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce executive vice president.

Promoters of the event have told the chamber there will be about 40 jumpers on hand this year, and they hope to turn the contest into a major yearly event. Just said.

"They would like to have some local promoters," just said. "The are going to set it up a notch this year."

The chamber will not get involved this year, just said. But if the event goes well, the chamber will consider stepping in to help promote a contest in 2002, he said.

But police might get more headaches than thrills out of a big event at the bridge, Storm and other law-enforcement officials said.

The bridge sits directly over the Jerome-Twin Falls county line and is on a state highway. So the ISP, Jerome County Sheriff's Office and Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department share jurisdiction over it, Storm said.

"It would be something we'd all have to take on jointly," he said.

To avoid an "at-risk" situation, their departments in the past have taken a mostly hands-off approach to BASE jumping from the bridge.

"We have just asked them to let us know beforehand the names of next of kin for anybody who is going it jump," Strickland said.

She also said the department has never kept its search and rescue team on alert for BASE jumpers. "It's something that's wrong, the understanding is that it's up to jump organizers to call for help, she said.

Twin Falls county ordinances say any group promoting a large event must put up a bond to cover the costs of crowd and traffic control, property damage and rescue services, Tousey said.

"If they create large crowds, or they block traffic, or they create problems in terms of sanitation, they will be cited and fined according to local regulations," he said.

Protester hits Clinton with egg during visit to Warsaw

WARSAW, Poland - Former President Clinton was jeered by anti-globalization protesters and hit by an egg Thursday while visiting Poland's capital as part of a European speaking tour.

The egg struck Clinton's sleeve as he walked through Warsaw's Old Town district. Police detained a 19-year-old man.

The president laughed at the smatter, saying, "It's good for young people to be angry about something," spokeswoman Jennifer Palmieri said. He was not injured.

The incident came one day after Deputy Prime Minister John Prescott was targeted by an egg-throwing heckler in Wales.

The British politician's response, however, was less mild. He punched the man in the face.

About 150 young Poles protested outside the hotel where Clinton was giving an address on globalization to business people.

Some of the demonstrators held banners reading "Globalization kills our planet" and "Yes to people, no to profit."

The former president generally is a popular figure among Poles and got warm receptions in 1994, when he addressed Poland's parliament, and in 1997, when he spoke to 10,000 people in Warsaw's Royal Square.

Powell announces aid program for Afghanistan

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Colin Powell announced a $4.5 million assistance package Thursday for Afghanistan, declaring that the nation is in crisis.

Nation in brief

The aid will include 65,000 tons of wheat and $5 million in complementary food commodities. With nearly 4 million Afghans at risk, there will be "countless deaths and terrible tragedy" unless the aid materializes immediately, Powell said.

He noted that U.S. assistance to Afghanistan is donated through international agencies of the United Nations and non-governmental organizations. He added that the aid goes directly to the people and bypasses the ruling Taliban militia.

GSA says there's no truth to White House scandal

WASHINGTON - Without a hint of fanfare, the General Services Administration found that the White House vandalism flap earlier this year was a flop.

The agency concluded that departing members of the Clinton administration had not trashed the place during the presidential transition, as unnamed aides to President Bush and other critics had insisted.

Responding to a request from Rep. Bob Barr, a Georgia Republican, who asked for an investigation, the GSA found that nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. The vandalism scandal was the hottest story in town during the early days of the Bush administration.

- compiled from wire reports

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States is abandoning an unpopular 11-year campaign to deny Iraq consumer goods in the hope that the plight of the Iraqi people would cause them to turn against President Saddam Hussein.

Lining up with Britain, which had virtually alone with the United States on maintaining harsher sanctions, the Bush administration also is urging tighter controls on export to Iraq of arms and weapons-related items.

The policy shift took four months to crystallize as Secretary of State Colin Powell vied with the Pentagon and other sectors of the administration over imported items with potential application to Iraq's military.

Sec. of State Colin Powell

Even now, as American diplomats consult with their governments on a prospective U.N. resolution to be introduced next week to lift the economic sanctions, administration officials are debating privately which so-called dual-use items to ban and which to approve for export to Iraq, a senior U.S. official told The Associated Press.

"We're working toward what will be a significant change in our approach to Iraq in the United Nations," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Thursday. "The focus is on strengthening controls to prevent Iraq from rebuilding military capability in weapons of mass destruction while facilitating a broader flow of goods to the civilian population of Iraq."

Powell is inclined to take a lenient view of such items as water pumps and refrigerated trucks, which theoretically could be used for military purposes but are much more likely to lessen the pain of the Iraqi people.

HHS opens grant program to secular groups

EDITORIAL

Don't let gambling spread into Idaho

A recent poll of 1,200 Idaho residents purports to show "significant" support for electronic gaming at Indian casinos. Maybe so, but an Election Day poll of all Idaho voters probably would reveal significant opposition to the idea—maybe even a sizeable majority.

The poll was commissioned by the Coeur d'Alene, Kootenai and Nez Perce tribes. It clearly sets the stage for a statewide push to place electronic gaming on next year's ballot.

It also may set the stage for a resounding defeat.

There's some history here, and it doesn't bode well for the tribes' chances. In 1988, Idaho voters narrowly approved a constitutional amendment to create a statewide lottery. The vote was 212,877 to 198,062.

But the door seemed to be opening for games of chance in Idaho. But the door slammed shut in 1992, when another constitutional amendment—to clarify limits on gambling—was resoundingly approved. Idaho residents banned casino gambling on a vote of 273,496 to 198,883. Authorized gaming was limited specifically to the state lottery, pari-mutuel betting, and bingo and raffle games for charitable purposes only.

Pressure to authorize the spread of gambling in Idaho comes largely from tribes at the northern end of the state. As such, it's tempting to view this as an "Indian gaming" issue—but that's a euphemism for "gambling."

Idaho voters will have a simple question to decide if an electronic gaming measure appears on the 2002 ballot: More gambling? Or not?

For practical reasons, it probably won't fly in southern Idaho. That's because Jackpot, Nev., is easily accessible, yet it's still in another state.

For philosophical reasons, the measure probably wouldn't fly in conservative eastern Idaho. The objection to gambling, or "Indian gaming" isn't rooted in racial prejudice. It's a matter of social policy. That's because gambling creates more problems for society than it solves. It's irresistible to many people who can ill-afford to lose what they've got. But lose it they do, day after day, in Indian-run casinos from Connecticut to the Oregon coast.

Mortgages go unpaid and houses get repossessed. Family food budgets get squandered and children go hungry. Wives beg their husbands not to gamble away their paychecks, and they get smacked around for their trouble. Many Idaho legislators recognize these evils and have steadfastly tried to resist them. The way we read this issue locally, Idaho voters probably would reject another electronic gaming measure.

Sliding into the moral abyss

A U.S. Airways contest invites children to write an essay about their father or "father figure" for Father's Day. The divorced Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson, tells a young girl in a TV commercial about "Prince Charming" and the ideal marriage: "Of course, if it doesn't work out," she says, the child will have to become familiar with stocks and bonds to secure her own future.

these figures are the social implications.

This image of marriage, parenthood, conditional love and the modern family reflects reality. According to new Census Bureau figures, the American nuclear family has exploded and the traditional families of the past are becoming more difficult to find.

While slightly more than 51 percent of us live in married couple households (down from 55 percent a decade ago), the number of single parent households has jumped 25 percent to 7.5 million. There was a 72 percent increase in the number of cohabiting couples—from 3.1 million in 1990, to 5.4 million in 2000. Most troubling of all, the statistics show that nearly 30 percent of children do not live with any two parents, including stepparents.

Some analysts have concluded from these findings that tax policies should be adjusted to make it easier for one parent to stay at home with children. Others say the changing face of the American family calls for the elimination of special considerations for married couples and the extension of government benefits to homosexual and heterosexual people who do not conform to the nuclear family model.

Beyond the policy considerations of

In her book, "The Divorce Culture" (Alfred Knopf, 1997), Barbara Dafoe Whitehead writes that divorce has been both evolutionary and revolutionary. The revolutionary part consists of a barrage of ideas unleashed against the notion of family as we have known it. Beginning in the 1960s and continuing today, the social stigma that argued against divorce has been removed, replaced with the nonjudgmental attitude that no human relationship is to be preferred over any other.

In the past, the expectation that people should do what is "right" served as a powerful impetus for people to do right things. It also discouraged them from doing wrong things, while reinforcing moral and ethical norms. Societal disapproval of certain behavior thought to be bad for individuals and culture and its promotion of other behavior deemed to be good for the promotion of the general welfare. The new Census Bureau statistics reveal what two generations of "doing your own thing" and immediate gratification, rather than self-control and putting others first has produced.

Social scientists who have studied the move away from the nuclear family model during the last four decades conclude what common sense tells us: Children need both parents. Lately, though, the idea of a two-parent household has been seen as one of many options, and not a particularly good one at that. Children take time. They infringe on the monetary goals of a two-income household. There is the cost of day care and the orthodontist and clothes and college. It's "self gain, precisely the attitude that has led to family breakup or families that never start in the traditional sense.

Perhaps the traditionalists have spent too much time criticizing the unraveling nuclear family and not enough time promoting its benefits. A generation lost to such notions as objective truth must be sold on an idea the way television appeals to them to buy products. Author Maggie Gallagher and Linda J. Waite do that in their book, "The Case for Marriage: Why Married People Are Happier, Healthier, and Better Off Financially" (Doubleday, 2000). To the self-centered, the writers make their case based on self-interest: Married people live longer, are better off financially and are generally less likely to be depressed or lonely, or to abuse drugs or alcohol.

What the Census figures reveal is beyond the power of legislators or a president to fix. Politicians can tinker at the edges with tax policies, but it will take something, or someone, more powerful if the notions of family which have served us well since our founding are to be restored.

Analyzing the Minidoka levy

Since the recent flyer put out by the Minidoka County School District pertaining to the upcoming levy provides no information of value, here are some facts to consider.

Plans for Minico High School include a new high school building for $3.51 million and a new multipurpose athletics room (in other words, gym) at a cost of $2.4 million. Remodeling the high school building includes corridors, toilets, etc.; demolition and reconstruction; and cosmetic at a total of $910,860. Remodeling the ninth-grade wing at the high school also includes corridors, toilets, etc.; demolition and reconstruction; and cosmetic at a total of $336,800. Add to this, for the high school, the following: site work, $150,000; utilities extensions, $500,000; bleachers at high school gym, $150,000; fire sprinkling at existing building, $286,980; fire alarm system at existing building, $116,310; furnishings for new construction, $200,000; testing, fees and contingencies, $1.2 million. Grand total for the high school is $9.76 million.

Plans for the other schools are as follows: East Minico Junior High—replace fascia panels, $50,000; West Minico Junior High—replace fascia panels, $40,000; Heyburn Elementary existing north building—restroom remodel and sidewalks, $13,000; Memorial Elementary—structural repairs, $250,000; Pershing (MCO) structural repairs, $125,000; and Acequia—a facility improvements, $45,000, and restroom remodel, $75,000.

Grand total for these six schools is $698,000. Grand total for all projects is $10.46 million.

Consider further: There is a difference in interest rates between a bond and a levy. At a December meeting, Dr. Hallett and committee member Dan Lloyd were very evasive in answering what that difference is. From information that I have gathered, the difference is about one-half of 1 percent more for a levy. Thus, this $10.5 million levy will cost taxpayers more interest than would a $10.5 million bond. What will the final cost of this levy be?

Though the district tax rate has decreased, our taxes have not due to increased property values.

If this levy does not pass, our taxes will decrease. The administration has previously complained about the deplorable condition of Acequia and Heyburn schools. But in the plans for this levy, the high school gets all the attention and these two schools get next to nothing. Are they really concerned about the education of the children and spending taxpayer dollars wisely?

Students make a difference

I was recently invited to attend an assembly at Heyburn Elementary School where the entire student body took part. The assembly was held to announce the total dollars raised by the students from a walk-a-thon that was held the prior week. The students were raising money for the American Cancer Society's Mini-Cassia Relay for Life.

Students received pledges for each lap walked during a 45-minute period. An award was given to a student who completed 23 laps in 45 minutes (nearly five miles). Gift certificates were presented to all students who raised $50 or more. One student raised $200 and received a large stuffed Sylvester the Cat and Tweety.

The excitement in the room was so intense as these young students realized that they are making a difference in the fight against cancer. Students were reminded that one in four Americans will have cancer in their lifetime.

As the banner was unrolled to reveal the total dollars raised, you could hear a pin drop (and remember this is a roomful of kindergartners through sixth-graders). I was consumed in emotion when the total amount read $5,792! Wow!

I can't begin to express my thanks to the students, teachers and parents at Heyburn Elementary for the compassion they have shown for this cause. We need to realize that these are the doctors, nurses, scientists and possibly cancer researchers for the next generation. A special thanks to Mrs. Jolene Yeppep-Higley for her dream that became a reality.

LETTER

Man had ties to movie star
I watched the television movie on Channel 11 (CBS), first installment Sunday night on the life of Marilyn Monroe. I would like to make an observation because it involves a local Magic Valley family who lived in the Hazelton-Murtaugh area in the early 1900s. It was mentioned in this movie that until Marilyn was 18 years old, she was a ward of Los Angeles County in California. A large part of her childhood days was spent in foster homes. In the 1960s, my parents owned rental property near Eureka, Calif. They rented a house to a Roy and Jesse Freeman, a couple at the time in their late 50s. Mrs. Freeman showed my family many pictures of Marilyn between about the age of 8 years old and 14 years old. They knew Marilyn as Norma Jean Baker. I mention this because I thought anyone who knew the Freeman family who lived south of Hazelton might be interested. When Roy Freeman left the Hazelton area, he was a young man. He and the lady he married, Jessie Foote, loved children but never had any of their own. Over the years of their lives, they were considered Mom and Dad by many children who, otherwise, may have grown up with very little love.

Judge delays murder trial of Buhl man

MOUNTAIN HOME—A trial has been delayed until September for a Buhl man charged with first-degree murder in connection with the shooting death last year of another man. A trial was set to begin this week for Fred Featherston, 51. But Featherston recently dismissed a court-appointed defense attorney and hired his own lawyer, said Elmore County Prosecutor Arron Sazdovitch. A judge rescheduled the trial Sept. 10-13 to allow Featherston's new attorney to prepare for the case, Sazdovitch said.

The murder charge against Featherston stems from the Nov. 4, 2000 shooting death of William Kenner, 38, at Kenner's Glens Ferry-area home.

CSI graduates more than 700 students

TWIN FALLS—About 425 students will join in the College of Southern Idaho's graduation ceremony at 8 tonight in the gym.

There are 727 total graduates this spring—374 academic program graduates up from 364 last year, and 353 technical school graduates up from 296 last year, CSI reported.

Tonight's speaker is Joan Edwards, founder of the CSI Foundation and former vice president of CSI planning and development. Edwards worked at CSI for 27 years and recently left the Twin Falls college for a new opportunity as the executive director of the State Center Community College District Foundation in Fresno, Calif. She attended CSI as a student when the college first opened in the 1960s.

Graduation for students earning General Educational Development diploma (GED) will be 7 p.m. Saturday in the gym. Between 150 and 200 graduates are expected.

The Idaho Judicial Council will spend about a three-hour interview with each of the candidates, starting at 10 a.m. The interviews will be held in courtroom No. 6 at the Theron Ward Justice Center in Twin Falls.

Members of the council include the chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, a district judge, a magistrate judge, attorneys and some at-large members from around the state.

Police plan gathering to honor fallen officers

Memorial is part of National Police Week

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—Law officers from all over the Magic Valley will gather Saturday in Twin Falls City Park to honor officers killed in the line of the duty in Idaho since 1904.

The memorial, which starts at 11 a.m., is part of the local observance of National Police Week—May 13-19, said Twin Falls police Sgt. Mark Marvin, who has organized the yearly event since 1992.

The event is open to the public and is expected to draw officers from departments all over the Magic Valley, as well as from the local offices of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, the FBI and other agencies, Marvin said.

Speakers during the ceremony—which is expected to last about an hour—will include Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tootley and Times-News Features Editor Steve Campbell.

The ceremony will also include a reading of the names off all 53 law enforcement officers killed since 1904, Marvin said, including Jerome County sheriff's deputies James Moulson and Phillip Anderson, who were killed Jan. 3.

There will be no other special observance dedicated to Moulson and Anderson at Saturday's ceremony, but Jerome County Jim Weaver is planning a dedication to them later this summer, Marvin said.

After the ceremony, there will be a barbecue lunch, which is also open to the public, Marvin said.

PICTURING THE PAST

A Boise-based photographer came across this photo when a friend who collected antiques gave him a box of aging negatives and photographic glass plates from the early 1900s. The photographer cleaned two of the plates—one of the woman and one of the Falls—and made a composite reproduction. The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce would like to find out more about the photograph, including the identity of the woman and the photographer. Anyone with information is asked to call the Chamber office at 733-3974.

Early photograph captures pristine splendor of Shoshone Falls

By Julie Pence
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS—Romance and power make an early-1900s photograph of Shoshone Falls a prize worth having, said Boise-based photographer Joe Fackler. "The mist in the background and the 'mystery' of the woman—who is she, what is she thinking—makes it soft and romantic," Fackler said. "Then on the right side there is the power of the Falls."

Fackler happened upon the pre-weathered photo not long ago when a friend who collected antiques gave him a box of aging negatives and photographic glass plates.

In the late 1800s photographers used glass plates covered in dry chemicals to capture images, Fackler explained. Right on top of the collection Fackler found two plates—one with the image of the mystery woman, and another with the image of Shoshone Falls. Fackler recognized the location and understood the value in reproducing the picture for Falls fans. He went to work cleaning up the plates and then made a composite reproduction.

"Either image by itself would be OK, but together they are fantastic," he said. "It has kind of a Maxfield Parrish feel."

Parrish was a well-known American painter and illustrator in the early 20th century.

Fackler said he's pretty certain the photographer was more lucky than professional. Still, he's the first to point out

Highway repair season opens in Idaho

SHOSHONE—Bird-watchers and other motorists should keep their eyes open for a perennial harbinger of spring: the orange-vested flagger.

The season for road work has arrived, and the Idaho Transportation Department has begun repaving highways, replacing bridges and coneing roads. The department says its 2001 season will emphasize Interstate 84, with safety improvements also planned for Idaho 75 in the Wood River Valley.

"This construction season will result in safer highways, bridges and interstates in Southern Idaho," said District Engineer Devin Rigby.

Speaking of safety, Idaho boasts one of the nation's lowest rates of work-zone fatalities. But Rigby urges drivers to be alert, because Idaho has nearly dou-

Bruce Willis to perform in Hailey production

"True West" will kick off with previews at 8 p.m. June 29 and 30 and 2 p.m. July 1 at the Liberty Theatre on Main Street. The show will officially open July 5 and run through July 29. Showtimes are 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays.
Tickets for the June 29 preview are $10, available only at the theater box office beginning at 6 p.m. The two other preview dates are $15. Tickets to other performances cost $30 to $40. Tickets on-line June 1.

HAILEY—Bruce Willis' sixth sense told him he might be out of work this summer due to a writer's strike.

The Wood River Valley will be the richer for it, even though it appears that the strike won't materialize after all.

Willis, who has been touted by this year's celebrity mags as Hollywood's hottest male actor, will return to Hailey this summer to star and direct the dark comedy "True West." The play is scheduled to run June 29 through July 29 with a few days off here and there.

The play will be done under the auspices of Company of Fools, a professional theater company Willis lured to Hailey from Richmond, Va., in 1997. Willis is a board member of the company. "True West" was written in 1980 by actor/playwright Sam Shepard, who starred in "The Right Stuff," "Country" "Crimes of the Heart" and other movies. It was made into a movie in 1986.

Like many of Shepard's other satirical plays, the play involves a loner caught between a romanticized past and the gritty reality of today's high-tech world.

Willis will play Lee, a drifter who unexpectedly shows up on his estranged brother's doorstep just as that brother is on the verge of realizing his dream.

Chad Smith, a likable young man who turned in a fun performance as crotchety old Ebenezer Scrooge in the company's "Christmas Carol," will play Willis' brother, a Hollywood screenwriter.

Willis, who lives north of Hailey when he isn't on a movie set somewhere, starred in another of Shepard's comedies, "Cool for Love," in Hailey in 1997. Willis' presence in the play drew a number of visitors to the area, boosting the restaurant, lodging and other businesses. It's hoped his upcoming appearances will do the same, Kowsey said.

Ketchum resident K. Kludt said she missed Willis' last go-around but thought she might be able to catch him this time, what with a month's worth of appearances.

"Having lived here as long as I have I'm not star struck anymore because I see so many celebrities in the coffee shop, about town, everywhere," she said. "But this will be a good opportunity for my out-of-town friends to come and be guaranteed of seeing a celebrity."

Simpson says feds should stay out of hog issue

POGATELLO (AP) - States are legitimately putting up a stink as the federal government tries to gain oversight over industrial cattle and hog farms, U.S. Rep. Michael Simpson said.

The Idaho Republican heard testimony from cattle producers and state agencies Wednesday in a House Water Resources and Environment Subcommittee hearing on "confined animal feeding operations."

As environmental groups like the Sierra Club call the large livestock operations the growing public health threat, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is formulating new regulations on the farms.

"The concern that we have in Congress is the EPA is trying to take over what is now being monitored by the states," Simpson said.

"I certainly know that Idahoans want clean water," Simpson said. "I believe it is appropriate for the Division of Environmental Quality to work together and establish rules with the industry so it can have the least impact to industry and still protect water."

Filer might get new track

By John Swartz
Times-News correspondent

FILER - Filer High School might be getting a brand new track this summer.

The Filer School Board Wednesday set aside $90,000 toward the construction of the track.

Approval came with the stipulation that an additional $50,000 be raised through community support by May 2002. Otherwise, state funds will be allocated to other projects in the district.

"If the community won't support it, we don't need it," said board member Gerald Orthel.

In other action Wednesday, the board approved a request from the Hollister Parent Teacher Organization for matching funds of $3,150. The money will go toward the construction of playground equipment at the Hollister Elementary School.

"We really don't have a lot of equipment that's safe for small children to use," PTO member Susan Courtney said.

Also Wednesday, the board changed the honor society requirements for valedictorian and salutatorian candidates.

The number-of-credits will remain the same but the candidates will have to earn those credits in more rigorous honors classes. The policy requires honor candidates to take eight credits in advanced math and science courses such as statistics and physics. Honor candidates are also required to have three years of foreign language and two credits in advanced speech.

Times-News correspondent John Swartz can be reached in Filer at 326-1199.

Loved for whom she was, the best mother, wife, sister, and friend imaginable. Taka thought and acted in the best interest of others. She will be missed by all whose life she touched. She made great sacrifices for her children and husband being the model mother and wife providing unconditional love for all. She worked endlessly hours providing for and raising her children with a stern hand and open heart. Idaho legislators to study aid plan

BOISE (AP) - Legislative leaders have organized a task force of two senators and five representatives to study the state's newest effort to fix crumbling school buildings and determine whether lawmakers have done enough to solve the problem.

Senate President Pro Tem Robert Gaddes of Soda Springs and House Speaker Bruce Newcomb of Burley appointed Sen. Darrel Deide of Caldwell and Rep. Lawrence Denney of Grangeville, both Republicans, to review the response to legislation that provides state grants to pay some or all the interest for school districts on loans approved by voters to address health and safety problems.

The bill, passed last winter and already in effect, augments the year-old law that lets districts borrow money from the state to take care of pressing safety issues. No school districts used the law when it was a loan-only program.

Liza Carberry of the state treasurer's office said she expects to get grant applications from at least two school districts soon.

The task force creation surprised some lawmakers who expected the Legislature to do nothing to evaluate school needs before next year's legislative session.

Fourth District Judge Deborah Ball has been watching the state's response to her February ruling that lawmakers have shirked their duty to help keep school buildings in good repair.

Sen. Betsy Dunklin, a Boise Democrat who found out about the task force at a Legislative Council meeting Wednesday, said the task force's creation may be meaningless.

"It seems to me that decision is ultimately in the judge's hands," Dunklin said.

During the last legislative session, the House rejected a Senate-passed measure sponsored by Deide that would have created a legislative interim committee to continue studying school health and safety issues.

Newcomb said the task force is not meant to pull Ball or do the work of a full study committee. He said the school safety issue has been studied endlessly and that he just wants to know if school districts are willing to help themselves by using the new funding scheme.

Authorities look to curb death rate

BLACKFOOT (AP) - For decades, Hispanic workers have come to Bingham County and helped make it the state's most productive potato-growing region, but it has proven to be dangerous for some.

Hispanics in the eastern Idaho county are about 10 times more likely to be slain than anyone else in Idaho. If the current rate holds, two Hispanics will die in Bingham County every year, and authorities are trying to learn why.

Hiring the right person for the job isn't easy

By Dan Fields
Times-News Writer

HEYBURN—Hiring the right person not only is good for continuity among existing employees, it's also in the company's best financial interest.

That's the message of the Burley Job Service office said Thursday that hiring the wrong employee can cost a company between $17,000 to $20,000 in lost revenue.

Jeppesen said one way companies can nurture its employees is to keep them in the loop — not only about their own jobs, but also about what's going on in their organization.

Not many people know everything that goes on in their operation, Jeppesen said during the breakfast seminar held at Connor's Cafe in Heyburn. The talk was part of the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce.

Rupert man's venture draws criticism

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News Writer

BURLEY — A Rupert-area resident would like to start a boat rental business on his property, but some of his neighbors aren't happy with the idea.

The Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission had not made a decision on Ron Kane's request for a conditional-use permit at press time Thursday.

Kane, who lives in the Jackson Area of Cassia County, is asking for a conditional-use permit so he can rent out kayaks and two-seater paddle boats from a one-acre plot of land on his 80-acre farm.

But some neighboring residents objected to the commercial venture in an area zoned agricultural and residential.

Commissioners a petition signed by residents, who oppose Kane's project. Nelson said she was concerned that boat renters might not respect the river as much as residents do.

In addition to her concern about trash in the river, Nelson is concerned about the additional noise that more river traffic would bring. She said she was also concerned because Kane has only one portable toilet on his property.

The river has more appropriate locations for such a business and an area that had been established for residences is not one of them, said Cheryl Stevenson.

But Kane countered that all farmers have portable toilets on their property. He also pledged to run "a clean, businesslike operation," with no alcohol sales and with boat rentals available by appointment only between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"(There) won't be into-the-night parties," Kane said.

Several other residents, including Kane's mother-in-law, spoke in favor of the operation.

Dave Tester, who said he owns property downstream, said Kane's proposal is probably one of the cleanest tourism ventures that anyone could ask for.

Commissioners seemed to be leaning toward approving Kane's proposal. They said the venture would not significantly affect the character of the community, or prevent future homeowners from building houses in the area.

Commissioner Dale Pierce, one of four commissioners who visited the site May 9, said Kane's operation would be no different than if he had personal boating "Is your idea of the job description the same as the person seeking the job?" Jeppesen asked. Once the candidate is hired, Jeppesen said, retaining employees is always a task in itself. One way to maintain employee loyalty is paying them well.

"Retaining employees is not only a problem in our area, it's a problem nationwide," he said, noting that lack of pay is the primary reason why people leave their jobs. "They need to make a living and pay is the top priority to retention."

Employees also need to be flexible with their workers, especially when it comes to work schedules. In return, Jeppesen said, workers will do their best when given the chance.

"The more flexible the company is with the employee, the longer those employees will be with the company," Jeppesen said. "The more opportunities you give this person to excel, the more loyal this person will be to the company."

Magic Valley Regional opens learning center

TWIN FALLS — Knowing more about your health plays an important role in keeping yourself and your family healthy and safe. That's why Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has opened a new Learning Center.

"Our mission is to educate our patients and the community to assist them in making the best health care decision for themselves and their loved ones," said Kathy Browning, a registered nurse and patient education coordinator at MVRMC.

"This Learning Center is the only one of its kind in southern Idaho and provides information on health topics from A to Z."

The new Learning Center is located on the second floor of MVRMC. It is stocked with current handouts and brochures covering a wide variety of health topics. A catalog is available to order additional educational videotapes from the MVRMC medical library, and a VCR and TV are provided to view these tapes. Also, a computer and printer are available at the center to give the public access to the Internet and health-related Web sites.

The MVRMC Learning Center will be staffed by a MVRMC volunteer from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday to provide assistance to users. It will, however, be open 24 hours per day seven days a week for self-use.

A special open house for the MVRMC Learning Center will begin at 11 a.m. Tuesday. MVRMC staff will provide more information about the center and will be available to answer questions. Refreshments will be served. The public is invited.

Missing Burley man returns home

BURLEY — A man who family members reported missing earlier this week returned to his home Wednesday evening.

Neighbors saw Ralph Curtis, 21, return home around 11:15 p.m., according to Cassia County Sheriff Jim Higgins.

Neighbors alerted police, who then interviewed Curtis. Curtis told police he had just gone to Twin Falls with some people and didn't tell anyone where he was, Higgins said.

Curtis reported Curtis missing Wednesday after he failed to show up for school. He was last seen Monday night and his home was reportedly left unlocked with the lights on.

Columbine panel faults authorities for failure to act

SENIER (AP) — Authorities failed to recognize and act on numerous signs that two teens were planning their attack on Columbine High School, the head of a gubernatorial task force said

There were a number of red flags, said William Erickson, a former state Supreme Court justice and chairman of the Columbine Review Commission.

Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold told fellow students that something would happen, recorded video tapes outlining their plan and showing off their weaponry, and Harris posted threats on a Web site that had been reported to the sheriff's department, Erickson said.

Jefferson County Sheriff John Stone, who oversaw law enforcement's response to the 1999 attack, declined comment until he has read the report.

The report details events before and after the attack in which Harris and Klebold killed 12 students and a teacher before committing suicide. It recommends various steps schools and law enforcement agencies should take to prevent other incidents, including threat assessment.

Colorado's high school and middle school. It says all threats should be taken seriously and calls for increased emphasis on law-enforcement training in preparation for big emergencies.

"Like any tragedy, there may be questions that are never answered and for which there are no answers because the killers themselves killed themselves at 12:08 that day," Gov. Bill Owens said. "I'm not sure what else we need to know. We know the sheriff dropped the ball in the pre-tragedy investigation."

Erickson said the sheriff's deputies had prepared a search warrant for Harris' home after receiving reports of threats and bomb-making activity.

"If the search warrant that was originally proposed had been issued, this probably wouldn't have occurred," Erickson said. "As a result, we had one of the greatest school shooting tragedies since then."

The search warrant was proposed about a year before the attack. Stone became sheriff in January 1999.

Randy and Judy Brown, who tried to warn authorities about Harris and Klebold after their son Brooks received threats, said they were angered by the report.

"If I thought there would be a little more," Judy Brown said. "When is the police department going to investigate? They are not investigating over there, they are simply regurgitating the facts as designed."

Brian Rohrbough, whose 15-year-old son, Daniel, was shot outside the school, said: "The commission was set up under a bad premise, which was not to point fingers."

Owens formed the 15-member commission in January 2000. It heard from law enforcement officials, medical professionals, law-enforced, law-agents and victims' relatives.

The commission did not have subpoena power. Stone declined to speak to the panel, citing the investigation and pending litigation.

Victims' families have filed nine lawsuits claiming the sheriff's office blocked the response to the attack and didn't follow through on reports beforehand that Harris made threats over the Internet and was making pipe bombs.

"With the benefit of hindsight, it's clear that the police response needs improvement," Owens said. "It's really going to be up to the schools and the law enforcement authorities in terms of how quickly they choose to address these recommendations."

of construction, crews will build new ramps in the northwest and northeast quadrants of the interchange. Install a new traffic signal and replace the westbound I-84 bridge with a three-lane loop ramp. The third lane will be used for acceleration as motorists enter I-84.

Currently, motorists traveling north from Twin Falls on U.S. 93 must turn left at a traffic signal to enter I-84, causing congestion on the highway. Work on the eastbound lanes will be done during the second stage of construction, which will begin in 2002 or 2003. The cost for the first stage of construction is $8.2 million. Phase I is expected to be completed by early 2002. A contractor has not been selected yet.

U.S. 93 in Rogerson — Improvements will increase safety for this well-traveled highway connecting Twin Falls to Jackpot. Work began in June to build a southbound passing lane at the Nevada border and a climbing lane between Rogerson and the Nevada border. Crews also will widen the highway from two lanes to five in Rogerson.

Western Construction of Boise is the contractor for this $3.1 million project. Work will be completed in July.

Idaho 75 between Alturas Drive and Timber Way — Work started on March 1 to build a new, three-lane bridge over the Big Wood River, about five-and-a-half miles south of Ketchum. The new bridge will replace a two-lane structure built in 1934.

Other work includes the construction of a bicycle tunnel and the addition of a traffic signal and other intersection improvements at East Fork Road and Idaho 75. Nelson Construction Co. of Boise is the contractor for this $5.6 million project. Work is expected to be completed by September 2002.

Idaho 75: Yankee Fork Bridge — Work to replace the concrete rails on this bridge began in June 2000. The bridge has historic significance, and the concrete rails were rebuilt to resemble the originals. All replacement work has been completed. The bridge joints will be required by the end of June. Work on this $250,000 project is expected to be completed in late spring. The contractor is DePac Inc. of St. Anthony.

I-84 from the Sublett to Sweetzer Interchange — Repaving started in April on the interstate near the Utah border. This project uses a process called Cement Recycled Asphalt Base Stabilization (CRABS). Crews grind the existing roadway down to the gravel base while adding cement and compacting it into a new road base. This is then covered with a new layer of pavement. Work is expected to be completed by July. Granite Construction of Emmet is the contractor for this $3.2 million project.

U.S. 30: Deep Creek Bridge — Crews started building a new and wider Deep Creek Bridge on U.S. 30 about 4.5 miles west of Bull in October 2000. The $735,000 project will be completed by mid-June. The concrete bridge replaces the old timber structure.

The new bridge has two lanes, like the original structure, but is wider — 44 feet rather than 30 feet. The Deep Creek Bridge is located along the Thousand Springs Scenic Byway. The contractor is Universal Construction of Emmet.

Idaho 24 and Idaho 25 Junction in Rupert — Improvement work at the area known as Cameron's Corner started in September. The improvements include realignment, construction of a new bridge and installation of traffic signals at the intersections of Idaho 24 and 100 West and Idaho 24 and 100 South. The realignment will ease congestion by widening the road from two lanes to four and adding a turn lane. The new bridge will be located south of the existing bridge over the Lower B Canal. Crews will make the bridge wider than the original two-lane structure. It will have two lanes and a turn lane.

The bridge also will have a bicycle and pedestrian pathway. The contractor for this $1.68 million project is Kloeffer Inc. of Paul. Work is expected to be completed this summer.

Idaho 50 Interchange to Ridgeway — Resurfacing work started in August 2000 and is scheduled to be completed in July. This project resurfaces 13 miles of I-84 and replaces guardrail. Boise Paving Inc. of Boise is the contractor for this $8.2 million project.

Idaho 77: Albion Hill in Cassia County — Work will begin this fall to improve this stretch of highway. The highway has a steep grade, and a truck lane will be added to the two-lane road to accommodate truck traffic. The highway also will have a new guardrail. The contractor for this $7.2 million project has not been selected yet. Work is expected to be completed in late 2002.

Sanchez-Way, director of the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention, an arm of the federal government.

The latest model program designations are part of a federal effort to bring together a National Registry of Effective Prevention Programs that should be copied by other prevention-oriented organizations. For example, the agency said, All Stars in North Carolina was effective in character development by youths ages 11 to 15. The program increased the bonding between youths and their families, potentially averting substance abuse. In Tuscaloosa, Ala., Coping Power was targeted at 9-year-olds who are overly-aggressive and focused on helping parents with their approach to discipl-plined. In Denver, the Nurse-Family Partnership program was a home-visitation effort for low-income, at-risk pregnant women having their first children. The program addressed the dangers of cigarette smoking during pregnancy, among other things.

"Our investment has shown that substance abuse prevention is possible and that models of excellence are available," said Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy G. Thompson.

The federal seal of approval, he said, was designed to send "a message to communities that they should insist upon and work toward the same level of excellence in substance abuse prevention. As a nation, we can settle for no less."

Preliminary cleanup plan focuses on homes from Mullan to Enaville

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Cleanup of lead contamination around homes in the Coeur d'Alene River Basin likely will focus on the area from Mullan to Enaville, according to preliminary plans for ridding the basin of mining pollution.

But cleanup efforts in recreational areas could extend throughout the basin.

The first version of the cleanup plan will not be released until July. But members of the Coeur d'Alene River Basin Commission got a briefing at their monthly meeting Wednesday on what the plan might look like.

The 10-page report provides a preview of one of the most extensive cleanup studies in the nation. It costs $10.5 million and years in the making.

The plan, developed by a consortium of federal, state and tribal agencies, will focus on how best to protect human health and the environment from Mullan to Washington's Lake Roosevelt.

And while the progress report states that involved parties are in agreement on how to address human health issues in the upper basin, there remain some differences on how to handle the lower portion.

The study is "not gospel at this point," said Environmental Protection Agency community liaison Dick Martindale. The agencies involved are seeking public comment at every step of the way, he said.

The progress report suggests that yards with lead levels greater than 1,000 parts per million in soil could be tagged for cleanup. Yards with 700 to 1,000 parts per million could be candidates for planting vegetation to contain the contamination.

The plan, developed by a consortium of federal, state and tribal agencies, will focus on how best to protect human health and the environment from Mullan to Washington's Lake Roosevelt.

The second part of the cleanup will focus on ecological concerns. Those will be prioritized and completed over many years as money is available.

The governments involved have singled out three separate areas of concern: dissolved metals in rivers and streams; lead in wetlands and floodplains and small particles of lead in surface water.

The progress report also underscores recent news that Lake Coeur d'Alene could be removed from a basinwide Superfund cleanup plan.

"People using the beach areas for swimming, wading and sunbathing, etc., do not need to be concerned about health effects from exposure to mining contamination," the report says. "Because the beaches were found to be safe, no cleanup will be needed in these areas."

But there may be risks to the fish who inhabit the lake, the progress report says, and so the Coeur d'Alene lake management plan already in place should be maintained.

Another possible Fallon leukemia case appears

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) - An unconfirmed report of a 15th case of childhood leukemia involving a small farming and Navy town in northern Nevada was disclosed Thursday by state health officials.

The state Health Division said Fallon residents who are relatives of a child living outside Nevada reported the child was diagnosed with leukemia, but there's no medical confirmation.

Dr. Randall Todd, the state epidemiologist, said the Health Division is seeking more information but hasn't been able to determine whether the child fits into the known group of victims.

The confirmed victims include a girl with acute myelogenous leukemia or AML, a less commonly diagnosed leukemia in children; and 13 other cases of acute lymphocytic leukemia or ALL, the most common.

ALL destroys bone marrow.

pected triggers include radiation exposure, electromagnetic fields or volatile organic compounds, such as benzene, solvents and fossil fuels. Arsenic has not been linked to a acute lymphocytic leukemia. AML is similar, although a different class of white blood cells are affected.

The latest development follows complaints by a group of independent doctors about the state's handling of the probe into the leukemia cases linked to the Fallon area.

Nevada sees growth in 'pre-retirees'

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Nevada might have to wait a few years before it lives up to its growing reputation as a retirement mecca.

Fewer than 10 percent of the state's booming population are 65 or older, according to 2000 census figures released Friday. However, those aged 45 to 59 nearly doubled their ranks.

"The pre-retirees are people moving here for their last job," said Jeff Hardcastle, state demographer.

Overall, Nevada's population during the last decade jumped by 66 percent, tops in the nation. The state added nearly 800,000 people for some 2 million last year.

At the center of the explosion was the Las Vegas area, which ballooned to more than 1.3 million people. Its 62 percent boom was the largest for any metro area in the country, and two suburbs - Henderson and North Las Vegas - were the fastest-growing cities with at least 100,000 population.

Dennis Fuller, a married father of two, moved to the Las Vegas area a decade ago from Tucson, Ariz. The pharmacy specialist said he stays because there's no state income tax and he likes the varied entertainment.

"You get draws you wouldn't get in other towns of this size," he said.

Half of the state's 751,165 households were made up of married couples like Fuller's, a slight drop from 1990. The number of unmarried partners living together more than doubled, while nearly 25 percent of state residents live alone, about the same as the national average.

"Increasingly, Nevada is becoming much more like the nation, or the nation is becoming like Nevada," said Keith Schwer, director of the Center for Business and Economic Research at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Nevada's average family size is the same as the nation's, 3.14 people. Schwer said a slightly younger population - Nevada's median age is 34.7, slightly below the national figure - means a greater number are in the child-bearing stage.

Defense: Polygamist tries best to provide for his family

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Polygamist Tom Green broke down on the stand Thursday as he described the hardships his family underwent as they pursued their unconventional lifestyle.

In his final testimony in the first major Utah federal trial in decades, Green described being evicted from a Salt Lake City trailer park and moving his five wives and their dozens of children into a homesteaders' barn on a barren patch of land in the west Utah desert.

He also explained that he had become a polygamist after studying "my history, the history of my family, the history of my faith and the history of my state."

Green, 52, is charged with four counts of bigamy and one count of criminal failure to pay back child support. If convicted, he faces up to 25 years in prison and $25,000 fines.

He cried as he described a 1997 fire that burned down his family home and killed his 3-year-old son. He broke down again as he described the accident to television reporters outside a courtroom and was comforted by three of his wives.

Green's care of his enormous family has been at the center of his case. Over two days of testimony, prosecutors tried to paint the family's life as their compound, called Greenhaven, as one of such desperation that they were forced to accept hundreds of thousands of dollars of public assistance.

On Thursday, defense attorney John Bucher tried to show that Green, who sells magazines for a living, did his best to provide for his wives and children.

He put Green's eldest son, Melvin, on the stand and propped up a picture of the family Boy Scout troop showing six of the boys in their uniforms.

"In your life, even before Greenhaven, have you always had shelter and a place to live?" Bucher asked. "Have you been able to have schooling? ... Have you been able to engage in scouting and sports?"

The 14-year-old, who has his father's wavy red hair, answered yesterday. "Yes."

Green's business partner and Melvin's namesake, Mel Poulsen,

Framed by a lawyer's hand, Shirley Green testifies Wednesday during the trial of her husband, Tom Green, in Provo, Utah. Green, 52, who has five wives and at least 29 children, faces charges of bigamy and failing to pay child support.

was less supportive. Although he tried to explain that the family was forced onto welfare by the regular ups and downs of the magazine business, Juab County Attorney David Leavitt brought up previous testimony in which he criticized the Greens for "taking advantage of" public assistance.

"It's interesting because I'm kind of like trying to have your cake and eat it, too," Leavitt said, quoting testimony Poulsen gave during earlier in the case.

Green said afterward that his own persecution drove his family onto welfare.

"If we could live in Salt Lake like everybody else, we wouldn't have had all these problems and need all that assistance," he said.

Earlier in the day, Green's former attorney testified that his client never thought he was legally married and thus couldn't have been a bigamist. To make its bigamy case, the state must show that Green was married to one woman and lived with the others.

"He asked me, how in the world can I be accused of bigamy?" William Morrison said on the stand. "He acknowledged to me that he was married and he didn't believe he was married in the eyes of the state. He had no paper, no solemnization."

Assessment finds system inadequate

BOISE (AP) — The state parole system's practice of keeping data on handwritten index cards, stenonotebooks and paper ledgers should be scrapped in favor of computers and records, a study conducted for legislative watchdogs said.

The Joint Legislative Oversight Committee received a 27-page report on Thursday detailing problems in the Commission for Parole and Pardon's tracking of inmate and parole data and how it shares information with the Department of Correction.

The absence of an integrated computer system for the agencies

"may jeopardize public safety; duplicate data entry, contain unneeded data, lack querying ability, increase paper-handling costs and decrease response times," auditors concluded in the study.

The Office of Performance Evaluations also found, in studying the potential for collaboration, that the Department of Correction could risk cost overruns and other problems if it proceeds with the proposed purchase of a new information system developed by the state of Utah.

Olivia Craven, executive director of the parole board, welcomed the recommendations, agreed with many of the findings and said communication with the Department of Correction has improved. But she also defended her office's spending priorities and its performance with existing data-handling methods.

The addition of an information technology specialist to the commission's staff was among the reports' recommendations. Craven said that would be fine, but that new money approved by lawmakers in recent years has been used primarily to hire hearing officers to provide better information for parole commissioners.

Judges: Woman can seek damages again

BOISE (AP) — Idaho law does not bar the winner of a small-claims judgment for property damages from seeking compensation for personal injuries suffered in the same traffic accident, a divided Idaho Court of Appeals ruled.

The three-judge appellate court, in a 2-1 opinion issued Thursday, reversed 7th District Judge Richard T. St. Clair's summary dismissal of a personal injury claim filed by Connie L. Hindmarsh for a June 10, 1998, automobile collision in Bonneville County.

St. Clair ruled that Hindmarsh's claim was barred since she already had won a small-claims court judgment for the maximum amount possible — $3,000 — against Martin L. Mock for property damage from the crash. The judge said Hindmarsh could have raised the personal injury claim in that case, but did not.

Chief Judge Alan Schwartzman, writing for the Court of Appeals majority, acknowledged the public's interest in ensuring certainty and finality in such cases. But he said exceptions should be made for small claims proceedings, "under which procedural rights provided in the regular trial courts are sacrificed in favor of cheap and speedy resolution."

What are the big nationwide banks going to automate next?

There's nothing wrong with a little technology in our lives. But sometimes there's just too much of it. Like in your banking relationship. When it comes to dealing with your money, you want real people involved. But at most of the megabanks, you get recorded voices. Remote loan approval systems. Impersonal account verifications. Even electronic fingerprinting to cash your own check. You've got to think it's only a matter of time until there are no real people left in their branches. At most banks, we've embraced technology too. But only when it enhances our ability to give you even more personal service, or replace it. So when you come to our bank, expect to see real people. Never some department store dummy.

Wallace levy bid fails, signaling school closure

Wallace patrons have rejected a supplemental levy for the second time in as many months, which could mean the closure of one school building and the loss of staff.

Southern Idaho districts fared better on Tuesday. While more Wallace voters turned out, the $1.25 million levy failed by an even greater margin with only 44 percent approval.

of the simple majority needed. "We can all speculate, whether it's the economics of the area or something else, about these kinds of things," district Superintendent Reid Straabe said.

The original levy was intended to maintain current programs. After it failed, the school board decided to reduce the measure by proposing closure of the Wallace Elementary School, resulting in savings in custodial staff and elimination of a bus route. After Tuesday's defeat, officials said they will cut needed teaching positions and support staff and close yet another school building.

Straabe said the board will decide whether to run the $1.25 million levy a second time, or to make further cuts and attempt a third version. Nampa patrons approved a $40 million bond issue to build new schools, with 77 percent approval. "The people saw the need. Their kids are in crowded schools, and that got them out to vote," board member Bob Henry said. The bond is not expected to increase property taxes.

Nampa's school enrollment has climbed recently. The measure will pay for three new elementary schools, a middle school, a vocational-technical building, remodeling projects and $1.5 million in property acquisition.

Police charge Boise man in murder, attack

BOISE - A 25-year-old man was arrested Wednesday after his mother-in-law was fatally shot and his estranged wife held against her will and sexually assaulted, police said.

James Lee Morrison of Boise is being held in the Ada County Jail on charges of first-degree murder, kidnapping and rape.

Police dispatchers said a man called and reported a shooting at 12:40 p.m. They confirmed Morrison made the call.

Police Lt. Jim Tibbs said when officers arrived on the scene, the man inside the home voluntarily surrendered. Inside, they found 49-year-old Catherine Austin, shot multiple times. They also found Heather Morrison and her 2-year-old son.

She had been assaulted, but the child appeared to be unharmed. Morrison is the boy's father.

Caldwell man faces charges for cafe slaying

CALDWELL - Javier Vargas-Ramos faces a May 30 preliminary hearing in the shooting death of a man in a restaurant.

Vargas-Ramos, 27, was arrested Wednesday on a first-degree murder charge and ordered held without bail. He is accused of shooting Hugo Baez-Aburto, a Farmway Village resident who was dining with friends Monday evening at the Las Hadas cafe.

Vargas-Ramos allegedly entered Las Hadas, engaged in conversation with the group, and then pulled out a handgun and started firing. Baez-Aburto, 33, died at the scene after being struck by four bullets, according to preliminary autopsy information.

SJC sides with Mormon temple in steeple ruling

BOSTON - The steeple of a Mormon temple is essential to its religious mission and cannot be regulated by zoning laws, the Supreme Judicial Court said Wednesday in allowing a controversial steeple to be added to a temple in Belmont.

Neighbors claimed the steeple would be an eyesore, and said the temple shouldn't be exempt from zoning requirements that would limit its height.

The dispute hinged on whether the steeple was critical to the religious mission of the temple. Otherwise, state law allows zoning restrictions to be imposed against religious buildings to govern such features as height and parking.

"The steeple we really believe is an integral part of the symbolism of the building," Grant Bennett, a spokesman for the church, said after the ruling. "The purpose of the building is to draw the soul upward, and that's exactly what the steeple does as well."

Officials launch rescue effort to save students stuck in cave

CHARQUEMONT, France (AP) — French officials mounted a rescue effort Thursday to save eight Swiss students trapped inside a cave that has been inundated with water after days of rain.

More than 100 French and Swiss rescue workers, including divers and civil defense personnel, were working to pump water from the cave and locate the spelunkers — students — from Wattenen, near Zurich, officials said.

The cave near the French-Swiss border in France's Doubs region is not considered very deep but is some 450 yards long.

Rescuers began arriving at midnight after an alert was sounded, said Herve Tonnaire, a top aide at the Doubs prefecture.

A pump was brought in to lower the water level in the cave so that divers could enter.

"We're concerned because we have no contact with the spelunkers," Tonnaire said in an interview. "It's important now to stop the water from rising — to get divers in to sound the cave and locate eventual air pockets."

Unidentified rescue team members look on near the entrance of the Blaf Peroux cave in Doubs, France, Thursday, where eight Swiss students are trapped.

Mother of American Fulbright student visits him in Russian jail

VORONEZH, Russia (AP) — The mother of an American Fulbright student serving a 37-month jail sentence in Russia visited her son for the first time Thursday, saying he was "in good spirits" despite having contracted Lyme disease in prison and being held in poor conditions.

Alyce Van Etten flew to the central Russian town of Voronezh to meet her 24-year-old son, John Tobin, who was arrested Jan. 26 for possession of a small amount of marijuana and sentenced last month to 37 months in prison on charges of illegally obtaining and distributing drugs.

Jack is fine. He's in good spirits, he's in really good spirits. It was great to see him," she said with a wide smile after a two-hour visit. "He feels good. He looks pale, he's thin, he doesn't get to see the light of day very much, but he's in good spirits and it was very comforting for both of us."

Van Etten and her husband, Jan, had pinned yellow ribbons to their chests during the four-hour plane ride to Voronezh, an industrial city about 300 miles south of Moscow to signify their hope that the son they call Jack would soon return home.

Agency denies Israeli settlements

JERUSALEM (AP) - Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza are "a war crime," the head of the International Committee of the Red Cross in the area said Thursday, triggering a harsh Israeli response. The remarks were the latest chapter in the ongoing friction between Israel and the international agency. The Israeli Foreign Ministry called the comments "inappropriate." At a news conference, Rene Kosirnik, who heads the Red Cross delegation to Israel and the Palestinian areas, said the settlements violate the fourth Geneva Convention, the treaty intended to protect civilians in areas of conflict. "The installation of a population of the occupying power in occupied territory is considered an illegal move, it is a grave breach (of law)," said Kosirnik. "In principle it is a war crime." About 200,000 Israelis live in 144 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, established in territory Israel captured in the 1967 Mideast war. Israel defends the settlement policy, maintaining that the West Bank and Gaza Strip are disputed territory, not occupied land, and therefore the Geneva Convention does not apply.

It also says that the Oslo interim peace accords of 1993 call for Israel and the Palestinians to discuss the fate of the settlements in peace negotiations. Israeli Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Yaffa Ben-Ari said the government was dismayed by Kosirnik's comments. "It is quite inappropriate for the ICRC to prejudge the outcome of such negotiations by offering such loaded statements," Ben-Ari said. "By taking a public position on these issues, the ICRC compromises its ability to effectively work with the sides to serve its humanitarian mission."

President: U.N. ignores conflict causes

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) - Rwandan President Paul Kagame is worried that in its haste to secure peace in Congo, the United Nations is ignoring the real cause of the conflict, setting the stage for continued strife in the heart of Africa. An extraordinary foreign mission by the U.N. Security Council got started Thursday in its effort to help end a devastating 2 1/2-year-old war in Congo. The 12-member delegation plans to push leaders of the warring parties to withdraw through an agreement to follow foreign forces and start reconciliation within the central Africa nation.

"I don't doubt their knowledge or their intelligence ... what I doubt is their sincerity in addressing the real issue," the Rwandan leader said Wednesday in an interview with the Associated Press. "They know what they are looking for, and they know what they want. Some of them simply don't want to understand what the problem is. It's not that they have not been told. They simply don't want to see it as a problem and solve it." For Kagame, the 43-year-old former head of the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front that put an end to the 100-day genocide in Rwanda in 1994, the problem is the continued presence in neighboring Congo of remnants of the former majority Hutu Rwandan army and members of the Interahamwe militia. These armed groups, now numbering about 50,000, carried out the meticulously organized slaughter of at least half a million minority Tutsis and politically moderate Hutus and later found sanctuary in what was then Zaire. Kagame is worried that the Security Council is forgetting that the genocide is the root of the Congo conflict, and rather than address Rwanda's legitimate security concerns is seeking to make Rwanda the scapegoat.

Theater troupe presents 'Man of La Mancha'

By Karen Bossack
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Bill Nagel dreamed what he thought was the impossible dream.

Tonight it comes true when he stars as Don Quixote, the wishful middle-aged subject of the musical "Man of La Mancha."

It's a production of the Laughing Stock Theater Company, and will be on stage tonight through Wednesday at the nextStage Theater.

"I'm not a singer by trade," the Sun Valley man said. "So I've had a few singing parts as the devil in 'Damn Yankees' and the king in 'The King and I' but nothing in comparison with the singing involved in this play. I've been working real hard at it with (musical director) Patty Parsons, though, and I think it's close enough that it won't offend anyone."

If not, you could just fantasize that you're as good as Favarotti, Bill. After all, that's what Don Quixote would do.

The musical, which boasts such familiar songs as "The Impossible Dream," injects a contemporary twist into the beloved age-old story of the Knight of the Windmill Countenance. Written by Dale Wasserman, with music by Mitch Leigh and lyrics by Joe Darion, it opened on Broadway in 1965, ran for 2,328 performances and made a star of Richard Kiley.

It's a play within a play, one in which we see Spanish novelist and poet Miguel de Cervantes and his dungeoned mates assuming the roles of the characters in his novel.

Cervantes, a contemporary of Shakespeare, had his own share of real-life adventures—living during the time of the Spanish Inquisition where people accused of heresy, blasphemy and other such nonsense were regarded as enemies of the Roman Catholic Church, he was wounded in a naval battle, captured by Barbary pirates, sold as a slave and ransomed. He was imprisoned several times for his inability to pay debts or, perhaps even, accusations of heresy.

Despite such personal tribulations—or perhaps because of them—he endows Don Quixote with a sense of eternal optimism and hope against all odds.

Filled with a sense of idealism from reading too many novels of knights and chivalry, Quixote

Bill Nagel is Don Quixote and Jennifer Perry is Dulcinea in the Laughing Stock Theater Company production of 'Man of La Mancha,' which opens in Ketchum tonight.

dons his own suit of armor, engages trusty squire Sancho Panza and sets out to do good in the name of his imaginary love Dulcinea.

In his mind, the ordinary becomes extraordinary. He mistakes a windmill for a giant, fantasizes a prostitute as a princess and confuses an inn for a castle.

But his visions end up changing the lives of those around him, even those who initially took him for a fool. A knight born 300 years after the age of chivalry, he still manages to rescue prisoners, reunite lovers and uphold the downtrodden.

"The play focuses on reality vs. illusion with the idea that illusion can sometimes be a better choice," Director Kathy Wygle said. "Reality is often cold, harsh, despairing. But the play ventures that maybe a man should be able to choose what he wants to see who cares what others think as long as you're happy."

It explores the idea that we shouldn't necessarily accept life for what it is," Nagel added. "We should dream the big dream and go for it, no matter whether people think we're crazy or not."

Jennifer Perry, a newcomer to the Wood River Valley from Los Angeles where she was active in a variety of community theater groups, plays Dulcinea. She has long had her eyes on the role of the tall, blonde fair woman.

"She's so outwardly different from the type of person I am. I'm a churchgoing Mom and she's a pathetic, outwardly hard, rough whore," Perry said. "Portraying her is a vocal challenge. I get to use the full range of expression and color from a low belch to beautiful lyrical high notes."

Steve Pruitt plays Sancho Panza and Keith Waller, the Knight of the Mirrors. Other cast members include Scott Creighton, Sue Noel, Sara Bradshaw, Tobias Wilson, Austin Anaya, Anne Brunocher, Ben Caruth, Wiley Ellis, Matt Garby, Collett Pruitt, Bill Gray, Ben Scheppe, Peter Ahrens, Mark De Casembroot and Janet Perry.

Patti Ahrens and Heidi Albrecht, who are forever transforming the Sun Valley area with their stage sets, have transformed the stage of the nextStage Theater into a dungeon and medieval kitchen.

"It's amazing what they've done with pieces of Styrofoam and a little bit of imagination," Perry said. "It's as good as any off-Broadway set."

So, for that matter, is the musical, Perry said.

"It's a musical with depth," she said. "Most musicals revolve around the song and dance and the story's incidental. The Man of La Mancha has beautiful, even a variety of musicals, but it's not about the song or dance. It's about the story. And it's one of those transcending stories where everyone is transformed due to the main character's goodness."

BLISS — Dangerous Baja adventure and passionate romance mix in "Renegade with a Badge," the latest Silhouette Intimate Moments novel by Claire King, also known as Bliss writer Suzanne Huxhold.

Internet book reviews at www.theromancerreader.com describe Claire King as "gifted," and say, "People are talking about her talent."

Huxhold said "Renegade with a Badge" centers around some of her favorite people in one of her favorite places.

"It's about two Latino Americans in Baja California who fall in love, of course," Huxhold said. "She is an oceanographer and he is a drug agent working on a 20-year vendetta against the man who killed his brother."

"I grew up in San Diego County with a lot of people from Mexico and was exposed to a great story," she said. "I've always liked the Latino culture and have always admired the Latino people... My goal was to expose some of the Latino culture."

Latino men tend to have a good sense of humor, Huxhold said, and the women are "just sweet." The desert terrain of Baja is similar to

'Transformers' to race at the TF fairgrounds

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Heard of toys for big boys? Here's the real deal. For years, Transformers and Power Rangers have been cartoon fantasy creatures that have kept kids transfixed in front of the television, until Utah motorsports promoter Olie Anderson decided to upsize them.

Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance suggested because of material; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Along Came A Spider'

There are both mysteries-and surprises in this reasonably diverting, albeit frequently improbable thriller, but the biggest mystery of all is hardly a surprise: How does star Morgan Freeman manage to give a master class in acting every time he appears on screen? The film tries its hardest to outsmart us, yet in general outline and rhythm it's fairly standard. With Monica Potter. Directed by Lee Tamahori. (143. R, for violence and language).

'Angel Eyes'

A curious concoction with its fingers in way too many pies: Urban malaise, buddy-cop drama, family estrangement, the torment of guilt and promise of new romance. Jennifer Lopez and Jim Caviezel star as emotional cripples who take steps toward intimacy amid the odd circumstances of their meeting. Lopez plays a Chicago cop who comforts an injured, injured man lying near death. A year later, she's rescued from a gunman by a mysterious stranger (Caviezel). Three guesses on their past connection. Director Luis Mandoki's film has brooding atmosphere, but just because something's dark and pensive doesn't mean it has substance. R for language, violence and a scene of sexuality. 103 minutes.

'Bridget Jones's Diary'

A cheerful and cheeky concoction that survives its excesses and the liberties it takes with the best-selling novel about the comic goddess of being single in a married world by smartly mixing knock-about farce with fairly tame romance. Cleverly written and, with Hugh Grant, Colin Firth and the appealing Rene Zellweger in the lead roles, it's a good one. (134. R, for language and some strong sexuality).

'Crocodile Dundee In Los Angeles'

The 'g'day' man wears out his welcome with a flat and listless visit to the City of Angels. Dundee and his creator, Paul Hogan, are stuck to tour him. With Linda Koslowitz, Paul Rodriguez. Directed by Simon Wincer. (135. PG, for some language and brief violence).

'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon'

A film by Ang Lee that transcends categorization and reminds us simply, powerfully, indelibly, why we go to the movies for a delightful one-of-a-kind martial arts romance where astounding fight sequences alternate with passionate yet idealistic love duets. 'Crouching Tiger' is a top film from top to bottom. Starring Chow Yun Fat, Michelle Yeoh and Zhang Ziyi. (159. PG-13 for martial arts violence and some sexuality).

'Driven'

An earnest, formulaic, unintentionally silly motion picture set on the international racing circuit. But director Renny Harlin's visuals (shot by Mauro Fiore and edited by Stuart Levy and Steve Green) are crisp, slick and kinetic enough to make this movie look like a thriller. Written by and starring Sylvester Stallone, with Bert Reynolds and Kip Pardue. (157. PG-13 for language and some intense crash sequences).

'Enemy at the Gates'

'Enemy at the Gates' lumbers

Shrek, voice supplied by Mike Myers, picks up the feisty Princess Fiona. Cameron Diaz, with the Donkey, Eddie Murphy, in tow.

'Just Visiting'

Americanized version of a 1993 French comedy about a medieval knight (Jean Reno) and his grubby servant (Christian Clavier) magically transported from the 12th century to the 21st. Strictly for the naughtily 12-year-old in all of us. With Christina Applegate, Matthew Ross, Tara Reid and Malcolm McDowell. Directed by Jean-Marie Gaultier from a script by Clavier, Gaultier and John Hughes. (128. PG-13 for violence and crude humor).

'Kingdom Come'

A rare and rich pleasure, at once uproarious and serious, about a roundly dysfunctional family gathering for the funeral of an unloved patriarch. Fable piety is demolished in place of simple dignity while tradition and community are held in a warm, loving embrace. A stellar cast is headed by LL Cool J, Robert Patrick, Loretta Devine, Vicke A. Fox and Whoopi Goldberg. (129. PG, for thematic elements, language and sensuality).

'A Knight's Tale'

Writer-director Brian Helgeland's idea for marrying modern rock music to 14th century jousting was a good one, but he's too parsimonious with it. As a result, we get to spend too much time watching a tedious romance between Heath Ledger and newcomer Shannyn Sossamon. Love may be grand, but this ain't. (212. PG-13 for action violence, some nudity and brief sex-related dialogue).

'The Mummy Returns'

Writer-director Stephen Sommers, co-stars Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz plus a lot of key creative personnel prove that the second time is the charm as they combine for a sequel that is much improved over the 1999 version. An old-fashioned sensibility plus computer-generated special effects have no trouble gaining and holding our attention. (209. PG-13, for adventure action and violence).

'One Night at McCool's'

If Liv Tyler is your idea of a dream girl, then you might buy into this comic 'Rashomon,' about three men (Matt Dillon, Paul Reiser, John Goodman) whose lives get very complicated when they project their various sexual fantasies on Tyler's fleshy femme fatale. The jokes and the performance are all over the place. Douglas gets a laugh just by showing up in a big lacquered wig and buck teeth. Rated R; violence, sexual situations, language. 1 hour, 33 minutes.

'Shrek'

More a series of pop culture references than a movie with a plot, 'Shrek' is just one punch line after another. The animation is impressive, with tremendous detail to light and texture. Mike Myers is clearly having fun as the voice of an ogre who rescues a princess (voiced by Cameron Diaz) with the help of a talking donkey (Eddie Murphy). It's loud and colorful and bright, and the riffs on fairy tales are good for a laugh, but there's no there there. And the film's message about beauty coming from within rings hollow. No matter - it's all about the kids' meal toys and product tie-ins, anyway. PG for mild language and some crude humor. 89 minutes.

Bruins lead region tennis corps to state

By Joe Sumner
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — It took 43 years to bring the Class A state high school tennis championship to the Magic Valley. And now that they have it, the Twin Falls Bruins don't want to let it go.
The defending state champions are reloaded and ready, with 13 athletes headed to Boise intent on bringing home another title. The A-1 Division I tournament starts today at the Boise Racquet and Swim Club, Capital and Borah high schools.

What was once a two-tournament showcase for tennis has expanded to a three-tournament extravaganza, thanks to the addition of a new classification.
The A-1 Division II tournament, which includes Burley and Jerome will be contested at Valliuve and Caldwell high schools and Jefferson Junior High School. The former Class B tournament has been renamed the A-2, A-3 and A-4 schools. It'll be played at Boise's Timberline High School and Ivywild and Williams parks.

"I think we have a really good chance to repeat," first-year Twin Falls coach Travis Jensen said. "We have some kids that have played very well this season. We have a returning girls' singles state champ in Ashley Dille and a boys' doubles team of Mark Fuller and John Fieb that's been on fire."

If the girls' singles bracket goes according to plan, Dille, a surprising second seed, appears to be on a crash course for a title match with good friend and No. 1 seed Please see TENNIS, Page D2.

Twin Falls senior Ashley Dille will try to defend her girls' singles state championship today and Saturday at the A-1 State Tennis Tournament in Boise.

Bruins, Spartans bow out of title chase

By Joe Sumner
Times-News writer

BOISE — It's the matchup the Magic Valley wanted to see, just not in the consolation bracket.

It took only 14 innings for Twin Falls and Minico's chances at a state title at the Class A-1 Division I State Baseball Championship to disappear, now the two Region III foes will meet one last time.

Capital scored three runs in the first inning and Cody Jones took a no-hitter into the fourth inning, as the Eagles beat Twin Falls 6-1 in the opening round of the tournament at Eagle Field in Boise on Thursday.

In the nightcap, Lewiston defeated 2000 state runner-up Minico 4-0. The Bengals' Julius Smith pitched a no-hitter, striking out 13 in seven innings. The game was a rematch of last year's opening-round game that the Spartans won 4-3.

The losses dropped the Bruins and the Spartans (20-9) into the consolation bracket and out of championship contention. Twin Falls meets Minico in a loser-out game at 4:30 p.m. today at Eagle Field. Twin Falls swept the season series with the Spartans 3-0.

"We want to come out and play hard," Minico coach Russ Wright said. "Obviously there are some scoring rights to be fought for from the same region. Of course, there's going to be a rivalry, but there's no revenge motive."

Capital (20-8) faces Lewiston (22-4) at 7 p.m. today in the semifinals. In other games, defending state champ Timberline was defeated by Coeur d'Alene 7-6 and Borah defeated Idaho Falls 3-1. Coeur d'Alene (23-3) meets Borah (14-14) at 7 p.m. at Timberline High School in the other semifinal game.

For Twin Falls, the loss came after a 10-day layoff following its run through the Region III tournament. The time off took its toll early and often. The Bruins committed two errors in the first innings, including a booted ball by junior Jake Asher to start the game, and finished with four total errors.

"The things that got us here, solid defense and coming through with guys in scoring position, didn't take place," Twin Falls coach Matt Kasumson said. "We had plenty of opportunities to get back in the game and didn't do that."

The Eagles took a quick 3-0 lead in the top of the first on three singles and a pair of errors. Twin Falls senior Vonnice Lopez stole home in the third to cut the lead to 3-1, with one out and two on, but Asher flew out to right field for the second out and Brandon Salinas popped out to end the inning.

Bucks beat Hornets to stay alive

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Down 15 points and on the brink of elimination, the Milwaukee Bucks never panicked. Instead, they turned it to their "Big Three," and forced a seventh game.

Sam Cassell scored 33 points, Glenn Robinson had 29 — both career-playoff highs — and Ray Allen added 23 to rally the Bucks to a 104-97 victory over the Charlotte Hornets on Thursday night to send the Eastern Conference semifinal series back to Milwaukee. Game 7 is Sunday.

"There was never any pressure on us," Allen said. "We know that when we play together we play our best and that brings a calm to us. We know that all we have to do is get together and everything will be fine."

After struggling through three straight losses, the Bucks' shooters finally broke out when it mattered the most by lifting Milwaukee back into the game.
Cassell, bolstered by four ribs the entire series, was 10-for-16 from the floor and scored 14 points in the fourth quarter.

Robinson had 13 in the third quarter to help the Bucks climb back into the game, and Allen drained a 3-pointer with 27 seconds to play to break a 97-97 tie and give Milwaukee the lead for good.
"We controlled at least one of those guys in each of the three games we won, but when all three are scoring like that they are awfully tough to beat," Charlotte coach Paul Silas said. "We just couldn't find a way to stop any of the three guys and that gave them the victory."
David Wesley led the Hornets with 27 points. Jamal Mashburn scored 24 — but had only six points in the second half, all on free throws.

Charlotte center Elden Campbell and Milwaukee's Darwin Ham scramble for a loose ball in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference semifinals at the Charlotte Coliseum in Charlotte, N.C., Thursday.

Filer's Lenington joins CSI staff as volunteer

By Kevin Hall, Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — At the age of 33, a high school basketball coach decides it's now or never to pursue his dream of coaching in the college ranks.

So Bruce Lenington is making the leap, albeit with baby steps, by volunteering this coming season for the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team.
"It's a great opportunity for me and my family," he said. "It's not about money. It's the chance to get my foot in the (collegiate) door."

Lenington resigned last month after four years as the Filer boys' basketball head coach. He'd already turned over the softball program to his wife, Paula, and remained behind the scenes this spring.
Even so, he's keeping his day job as a high school economics and government teacher.

Last year, Filer went 15-10 to win its first district championship in 11 years. But the Wildcats struggled to a 6-16 mark this year.

Lenington, who originally hailed from Michigan, said he saw the writing on the locker room door.
"It was time," he said. "I know the kids are disappointed but I had to ask myself what I wanted. I'm looking at a college career."
Lenington said he has followed the high-profile CSI program under third-year coach Derek Zeck and assistants Brian Hancock and Jay Cyriaq for the past couple of seasons — attending practices, asking questions and picking up pointers.
He decided it was time to approach Zeck about the possibility of lending his talents to the team.
"I want to talk to coach and told him I want to be a college coach," Lenington said. "He's made some room for me."
Zeck is careful to point out Please see COACH, Page D2

COEUR D'ALENE - Nine errors sent the Twin Falls Bruins softball team to a 7-2 defeat to Lewiston in the first round of the Class A-1, Division I State Softball Tournament at Ramsey Field in Coeur d'Alene on Thursday.

In the double-elimination tournament, Twin Falls has its work cut out for itself. The Bruins must first get by Madison today in a loser-out game at 11 a.m. Win, and the Bruins are looking at two more games today just to stay alive. "We were very tight and came out and just made mistakes," said the coach Nick Baumer.

The Bruins got only five hits off Brittain West in the game. Twin Falls two runs came in sixth on a wild pitch to score Paige Allen and a sacrifice fly by Temple Levings to plate Debbie Dodds.

Otherwise, the offense was nonexistent. "We haven't played that way all year long," Baumer said. "Now we have to win six games."

In other games Thursday, Lake City defeated Highland 1-0, Centennial ripped Idaho Falls 7-0 and defending champion Eagle blanked Madison 4-0.

Jury appears deadlocked on two issues

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The jury deciding the case between the Oakland Raiders and the NFL sent the judge a note Thursday stating it was deadlocked on two issues in the lawsuit.

The panel first began deliberations on April 30, then had to begin again on May 4 after the jury foreman was excused to take a long-planned vacation. He was replaced by an alternate.

The Raiders claim the NFL forced them to abandon their plans in 1995 to build a new stadium at Hollywood Park in suburban Inglewood, and also that the team still owns the rights to the Los Angeles market. The league denies both claims.

Tribe advance, Wood River falls to Bear Lake

ONTARIO, Ore. - Buhl needed only two runs to win, while Wood River put up nine and still fell short.

In first-round action at the Class A-2 Idaho High School Baseball Championships at Elks Memorial Field in Ontario, Ore., the Indians advanced with a 2-0 win over American Falls. But the Wolverines fell to tenacious Bear Lake 10-9.

In other games, St. Maries (22-4) fell to Teton (17-5) in Game 1 on Thursday. The Wolverines face the Lumberjacks in a tough loser-out game this morning at 11 a.m.

Middleton played Lakeland in the late game. Buhl plays the winner of that game today at 6:30 p.m.

Despite struggling at the plate, the Indians (24-1) showed they are more than an offensive dynamo. Using solid defensive behind ace pitcher Jeff Walker.

"Our defense played well," Buhl coach Gary Krumm said. "But frankly, it was Walker's show today."

"We really didn't come out and hit the ball the way we are capable of hitting it. We're going to have to hit a lot better than that if we want to find ourselves back here in a championship game on Saturday."

After a hitless first inning from both teams, senior Sean VanElderen began the second inning with a single. Cody Chandler was hit by a pitch and a Ryan Wagner single put runners at the corners for Cody Owen.

Owen dropped one into center field to score VanElderen. Then Beaver catcher, Cameron Nelson, took the bait when Owen took off for home.

The teams consistently produced runs throughout the rest of the game, but the Bears just had a little more steam in the end.

The Eagles scored two more runs in the fourth to take a 5-1 lead on a single by Capital's Jeff Rayborn off Seth Merritt. The Bruins ace went five innings, allowing eight hits, in the loss.

"In the first I was a little nervous," Merritt said. "A lot of their base hits were little dinkies ones, through the infield. They weren't hit hard, they just went to the right place. They had a couple good hits, but mostly they were just timely and they cut us down."

"Twin Falls' best chance to get back in the game came in the sixth when the Bruins loaded the bases with none away, but they failed to plate a run. The Bruins pushed again in the seventh with two on and none away, but came away empty.

"We kicked a ground ball on the very first batter of the game," Rennie said. "I think we were a little nervous coming in. We hadn't pitched in 10 days and I think it showed. We had our chances in the fifth, sixth and seventh and didn't get it done."

The Spartans managed only three base runners on three walks against Lewiston. Smith walked a batter in the third and walked two to start the seventh but settled down to record the next three outs and finish the game. Smith held the Spartans to just 30 at-bats in the game and no major baserunner got past second base.

"You have to tip your cap to the kid," Wright said. "There's no excuses. We just didn't solve him. He was very good."

Fennell beat Smith last season in the opening round of the state tourney, but couldn't find a groove against the Bengals this year. Lewiston plays Capital today at 7 p.m. for a berth in the championship game.

Track

her freshman season title. "Not as much competition really," Jensen said.

In the next heat of the 100 hurdles, Jensen won by more than 6 seconds. She set the 100 hurdles in the best time in the 300 hurdles by almost half a second.

Luck did a better job of stopping Jensen's competition. Centennial freshman Capree Bell, the favorite in the 100 hurdles by a one-hundredths of a second, tripped over the second hurdle and fell, failing to qualify for the finals.

"I was a little nervous," Jensen said. "I started slow and was trying to catch up when she fell. I just focused on the finish line."

Bell won the high jump event by more than 10 inches. Strunk also qualified in the 300 hurdles.

Minico speedster Creola Wiggins is poised to battle for the title of fastest sprinter easily winning her heats in the 100- and 200-meter dashes. Her main rival is April Gutierrez of Madison. Bruin Amy Conover pulled the first surprise of the day with a fourth-place finish in the 3,200-meter run. Her time was more than 30 seconds better than her personal best.

"It was all guts and desire," said Conover, after the race. "In the girl's shot put, junior Kaitlyn Forde took top fifth in 34 feet to go with her fourth-place finish in the discus at 113-6. The Spartans continued to score points when Bodenheimer tied for fifth in the high jump at 5-0 and Kathryn Dwyer took sixth in the triple jump at 33-7."

It wasn't as easy for the Twin Falls boys, who finished the field events without scoring a point. But the Bruins will have athletes set to compete for a title in the finals tonight. Orlin Clements will represent Twin Falls in the finals of both hurdles events, while Chris Herzinger will run in the 100-meter dash.

Minico also was held scoreless after the first day. Brian Hansen should change that today in the 300 intermediate finals. Spartan Chuck Fleming qualified for the open 100-meter dash final.

Highland (45) and Eagle (40.5) hold the lead after the first day of events.

Jerome girls lead A-1 Division II track

The Lady Tigers are in familiar territory at the A-1 Division II State Track Meet at Bronco Stadium.

They head into today's final day with a chance to walk away with a state title after a solid Day 1 performance.

Jerome is tied with Skyview of Nampa with 44 points, well ahead of third-place Mountain Home (26). The Tigers have the sprinters, while Skyview will look to take the distance events for points.

"We have performed well so far on the first day, a little better than expected," Jerome girls' coach Elmer Musgrave said. "Jerome added some unexpected points in the discus and pole vault events and placed several runners in position to score during today's finals in the dashes."

The Tigers continued their three-day dominance of the medley relay with a victory in the final event of the night. Kim Madsen, who has been a member for all three-title teams, got Jerome off to a fast start with the first 100-meter leg.

"You have to get mad and run fast," said Madsen.

Next up was Jamie Palmer with another 100 meters, followed by Sara Lot with a 200-meter leg. Lot handed the baton to Melissa McLimore with teams from Bishop Kelly and Century on her tail-but they would never catch her.

"I just wanted to stay ahead of them," McLimore said. "In winning the shot put title as a sophomore, Jerome's Jennifer Pond left herself some room to get better during the remainder of her high school career."

Pond threw 40 feet, 1 inch - her personal best by more than a foot - even without using correct positioning on her throw.

"It felt good, but I kind of did it wrong. I dipped," Pond said. "We'll have to work on that next year."

She trailed Skyview's Jessica Parker by more than a foot after two throws, but was never challenged after her third throw bested 40 feet.

Pond played softball as a freshman and started this season on the Tiger diamond crew, but switched sports midway through the season.

McLimore will again lead the Tigers in the sprints. The senior dominated in the 100-, 200-, and 400-meter dashes. In the first two, she will have to face Tiffany Anderson of Burley who swept the sprints astronauts. "I do want to try to avoid last year's false start in the open 400 finals."

"I don't want to do that again. I am just trying to relax," she said. "It was a great run from Burley, Jessica Taylor, who walked away with the title in the high jump - using some unique methods."

The junior would listen to pop songstress Britanny Spears' "Stronger" in between jumps to pump her up. Then before she started her approach, Taylor would lean back once, still farther twice, and even farther again before beginning.

"I have to get comfortable, it helps me to remember to lean back," said Taylor, who also competed in the medley and will run the 4x200 relay today. "I am happy to come to have fun and do my best."

A pair of sisters from Jerome finished third and fourth in the discus. Senior Kendra West, who will attend Lewis Clark State College on a basketball scholarship this fall, held off freshman Vanessa West.

"It was fun to compete with my little sister," Kendra West said. "This is one of the highlights of my senior year."

Jerome's Jamie Palmer earned a personal best placing fourth in the pole vault.

Boys' events

Jerome's Ryan Erquiaga hit a personal best by about half a foot on his third throw to place third in the boys' shot put at 49-11. He threw 46-11 at district to raise his personal coming into the state meet.

"The competition was a lot better (at state). That really helped," Erquiaga said. "I was able to get my technique improved."

It would turn out to be a disappointing day for the Tigers, who struggled in the pole vault, high jump and triple jump competitions - events where they expected points.

Jerome's Josh Capps took fourth in the pole vault with teammate Troy Egbert finished sixth. Another Tiger, Nathan Capps, finished sixth in the high jump. The Tigers ended the first day with 23 points and sit in ninth place.

Burley's Roman Van Tassel scored the Bobcats' lone points with a fourth-place finish in the pole vault as he cleared 13-6. The Bobcats are in 13th place.

Tennis

Lindsay Bennion of Idaho Falls Bennion finished third last season and split with Dille in two matches this season.

"Dille is playing really well," Jensen said. "She's hitting the ball, moving around, and doing what she needs to do. She lost to Bennion early in the year and then beat her at the Capital Invitational. It just shows that the competition is out there."

Dille, who is headed to Northern Arizona University in the fall on a tennis scholarship, said regardless of where anyone is seeded in the tournament, she is looking to bring her best game to Boise.

best shot at a boys' doubles title in two years. Fuller finished third at state last season in the singles competition. Hieb took fourth as a doubles partner. Together this season, the two have been nearly unbeatable.

"We know each other's games, mostly," Fuller said. "And we can depend on each other. That's the most important part. If you can't depend on your partner then there's nothing. We can count on each other to hit the ball, and that's about as good as it gets."

Also heading to the A-1 Division I tournament is Minico's Ryan Hepworth. The Spartan junior won the Region III district tournament in boys' singles for Minico's only state berth last year.

At the A-1 Division II tournament, Jerome will be gunning for its first team title since 1997. The Tigers are sending 12 athletes and have a strong chance at a title in the doubles partner. Escobar and Katie Prescott earned won the district title and have the experience in Escobar, to take home a title. "Our girls doubles team has the best chance of anybody," Jerome coach Ken Wright said. "They've more experienced this year. They've done nothing second or last year in doubles, and they've seen most of the best competition around the area."

Burley will also be well represented at the tourney. The Bobcats qualified 13 athletes for the event and could finish in the top four in team standings with several strong finishes.

The Bobcat best chance at an individual title might be in the boys' doubles team of Dehan Kim and Jonathan Barker. The duo took the district title from Jerome's Ben Newman and Tim Davis, another pair of Tigers headed to the tourney.

The biggest problem for Burley might just be a case of nerves. The Bobcats didn't qualify any athletes for state last year and for many will be new to go and have fun. "The kids just need to go and have fun," Burley coach Shane

Ogden said. "I'm already getting a little sick to my stomach. I have some kids that I wish would take things a little more seriously and some that I wish would take it less seriously. We can't find a happy medium."

With perennial powerhouse Bishop Kelly at the Division II ranks, teams from Wood River and Kerchum-Sun Valley are looking to rule this year's A-2 tournament.

To begin with, the Kerchum Community School sibling pair of two-time singles champion Lauren Drew and boys' runner-up Ryan Drew may finish their state titles together. Both No. 1 seeds bring exquisite baseline games and should challenge for titles.

The Cuthroths send 13 players to the tourney. Wood River, which sports district doubles champions for boys, girls and mixed teams, sends 14 players to Apple. Ned Flanagan pairs with Kristina Hagglouf at mixed with Casey Werth partnering with Vince Nagashima in boys doubles and Erin Bahoshy and Jesse Woodley for girls.

In all, the Wolverines send a district-high 14 players to state. Declo's best hope at a state title may lie with the boys' doubles team of Jacoby Fox and Caleb Meyer. The Hornets are sending 11 to state while Gooding sends six, all doubles players.

Devils blank Pens for 2-1 series lead Coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lots of odd-man rushes, plenty of break-aways and scoring chances. This was exactly how the Pittsburgh Penguins envisioned the Eastern Conference finals — only not the New Jersey Devils generating all the offense. Brian Rafalski and Jason Arnott scored as the Devils opened an early two-goal lead for the second consecutive game, then avoided the 'leaden' game that cost them the previous game as they seized the series lead with a 3-0 victory Thursday night in Game 3.

New Jersey's Bobby Holik looks for the puck after crashing into Pittsburgh goalie John Haberek in Game 3 in the third-round Stanley Cup playoff in Pittsburgh on Thursday. New Jersey won 3-0.

Jaromir Jagr, hockey's two most dangerous scorers, could solve the Devils' trapping defense or prevent the Penguins' first shutout defeat in home playoff game since a 1-0 loss to the Islanders and goalie Glenn Resch on April 26, 1975. Resch is now a Devils broadcaster. It was the 11th career playoff shutout for goalie Martin Brodeur, tying him with Ed Belfour for seventh on the NHL list, and his third this spring. He had consecutive shutouts against Carolina in the first round. "We played really, really well," said Brodeur, who often struggles against the Penguins. "We didn't break down at all. It's important for us to keep dominating because they needed only six minutes to beat us in Game 2. If we don't keep doing the little things, Game 2 will happen again." The Devils' top line of Patrick Elias, Arnott and Petr Sykora came out fast and dominated a depleted Penguins defense, which badly missed agitator Darius Kasparaitis, who sat out with a broken toe sustained in Game 2. In that game, the Devils opened a two-goal lead they have in all three games of the series — only to squander it as the Penguins scored four consecutive goals off giveaways, defensive breakdowns and Lemieux-generated plays to win 4-2 Tuesday night.

This time, the Devils went into a shutdown mode after seizing the 2-0 lead at 12:31 of the first. Arnott's power-play goal six seconds into a 5-on-3 advantage, created by a pair of ill-advised Pittsburgh penalties in open ice.

The Devils tried to build on the lead — and ultimately did, with Elias scoring 1:27 into the third period — but were equally efficient at shutting down a Penguins attack that was without second line forward Robert Lang, who sat out with a strained back muscle.

Continued from D1 that Lenington is a volunteer and not an assistant coach. "Bruce will be working for us on a strictly volunteer basis," Zeck said. "He came to me and said he wanted to get his foot into the door into college coaching. He asked if he could try much of our program, help out practice, help out at practice, things like that."

Zeck said he saw it as a win-win opportunity for both sides. "Although it would be a good practice for him and good for us to have a guy like him around," Zeck said. "He's a good guy, a good basketball coach who knows a lot about (the game). He'll be a good addition to help us out."

Zeck said this is the first time a high school coach has inquired about volunteering. "I don't have a problem with anybody if they want to come and follow our program," Zeck said. "I remember when I was at the University of Kansas, there was a guy who would come and watch every single game and watch every single practice. He was like Bruce. He didn't help out but he would come to every practice and meet with the coaches and talk with the coaches. He ended up being a volunteer."

Lenington said he'll be able to help scout, analyze game film and assist with planning strategies for the team.

Zeck said Lenington will travel with the team during the season. "I easily could have said 'no,'" Zeck said. "But anytime a guy wants to help and help himself and wants to be involved, I have no problem with that. I've told any high school coach to come watch our practices. Our practices are open to anybody if they want to talk X's and O's, please do."

Because Lenington is considered a volunteer, the addition doesn't affect any Title IX concerns with equality to the women's program. "If we hired someone else, then the women's program would hire someone else," Zeck said. "But we don't have a position open. Everything has to be pretty much locked when it's a pay-aside deal. This is not a paid position."

Strawberry averts prison sentence

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A "very sick" Darryl Strawberry was given yet another chance Thursday when a judge sent the former baseball star to rehab instead of prison for going on a four-day drug binge.

"You are at bat in the bottom of the ninth with two strikes against you. You are a proven winner on the field. Now you must prove you are a winner off the field," Circuit Judge Florence Foster said.

Strawberry, 39, was ordered into a treatment program, as he had requested. He is to serve two years there, then a year of probation.

The eight-time All-Star, who has battled colon cancer and depression along with drug addiction, has five times violated the terms of his release on a 1999 conviction for drug possession and solicitation of prostitution.

Strawberry violated his release again, he faces 18 months in a Florida prison under the judge's order.

Strawberry showed no emotion upon hearing his sentence, handed down after he pleaded for leniency.

"This case is not about Darryl Strawberry, the baseball player," Strawberry said. "This is about a person who is very sick, who's been very sick for a very long time and needs a lot of help. I just thank God I'm alive today to be in front of you to deal with the situation."

Strawberry is battling colon cancer and has mental problems more severe than previously known, his doctors said.

Psychiatrists said there are signs of brain damage from years of cocaine use.

Prosecutors and Strawberry's probation officer had wanted the one-time slugger sent to prison for 18 months.

Darryl Strawberry is sentenced to rehab vice speaking to young people. Dozens of supporters, including Strawberry's wife, Charisse, asked Foster not to send Strawberry to prison, saying he is a typical addict who will relapse many times before overcoming addiction.

Charisse Strawberry, who recently was appointed the head of an anti-drug organization in Tampa, cried as Foster announced her decision.

"We are very relieved and very happy with the results we were able to achieve," said Joe Ficarotta, Strawberry's lawyer.

Thursday, some of Strawberry's former teammates with the New York Yankees said they were continuing to support him.

"We're just hoping he gets the help he needs," shortstop Derek Jeter said. "It's not like he's a danger to society, at least I don't think like that."

Manager Joe Torre said Strawberry's troubles have turned into a lesson about the realities of addiction.

"Hopefully he can resurrect his life," Torre said. "He's got a lot to live for. He's got a wife and young kids. He had every reason not to do this. It's obviously bigger than him. It's just sad."

Last year, Foster placed Strawberry under house arrest after he left the Tampa drug treatment center where he had been living.

Strawberry returned to the center and stayed clean for five months until March 29, he disappeared with a woman who was supposed to be taking him to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. He surfaced four days later.

Strawberry, who played for the Mets, Giants, Dodgers and Yankees, was ordered from major league baseball last year for his cocaine-related suspension in five years.

In a formal hearing Thursday, Strawberry was also sentenced to 43 days in jail for violating his probation on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. The charge stemmed from a case in November where Strawberry, driving under the influence of pain killers, hit another car and a street sign.

Hillsborough Circuit Judge James Dominguez gave Strawberry credit for the time he has spent under a warrant at the psychiatric ward of St. Joseph's Hospital.

Ficarotta said one advantage of sending Strawberry to Phoenix House is that many of the traps and temptations of his celebrity life will be gone.

Former roommates of Strawberry at the Tampa treatment center have said not a day went by when someone wasn't trying to contact him for an interview or for some reason related to his status as a baseball star.

Strawberry will initially live in a dormitory that houses 15 men, sleep in a bunk bed and must work at the facility.

"Strawberry won't be able to see his family at first, and once he earns visitation privileges there will be tight controls over who comes to see him," said Finn Kavanagh, regional director for Phoenix House.

"It's a tough program," Kavanagh said. "People are surprised how hard it is."

Batters rock Smoltz's first start

ATLANTA (AP) — John Smoltz struggled in his first start for the Atlanta Braves since 1999, giving up five runs in three innings to the Colorado Rockies on Thursday night.

David Cone's abbreviated Boston debut was spoiled Thursday by Brad Radke, who became baseball's first seven-game winner as the Minnesota Twins beat the Red Sox 5-3 Thursday.

Smoltz, the winningest playoff pitcher in baseball history, missed all of last season and the first 6.5 weeks of this year recovering from ligament replacement surgery in his right elbow.

After a couple of rehab starts in the minors, Smoltz threw 70 pitches — 45 strikes — in his return to the majors. He was replaced by Kerry Ligtenberg at the start of the fourth inning with the Braves trailing 5-2.

Cone allowed two runs, two hits, four walks and a hit batter in his first major league start since Sept. 30 for the New York Yankees. He threw only 37 strikes in 76 pitches.

"I need to fine-tune some things and throw more strikes," Cone said.

Smoltz needed 30 pitches in each of the first two innings to retire the side. He finally had a 1-2-3 inning in the third, striking out Mike Lirio with his 70th and final pitch of the night.

Jeff Cirillo had a two-run homer in the first, a 367-foot drive that barely cleared the wall in left. In the second, Todd Walker worked the count full before lining a two-out, two-run single to center, making it 5-0.

In all, Smoltz allowed six hits — five singles — walked two and struck out two.

Smoltz is the first player out of the dugout at the beginning of the game, running to the mound while a larger-than-normal weight crowd gave him a standing ovation. His first pitch was a 93-mph fastball to Juan Pierre for a called strike.

The right-hander got as high as 98 mph, similar to his velocity before the injury. But Smoltz didn't throw many breaking pitches, allowing the Rockies to hone in on his fastball.

The Braves hope Smoltz can bolster a rotation that also includes Tom Glavine and Greg Maddux but has been hampered by injuries as past years. Another starter, Kevin Millwood, remains on the disabled list with a cyst in his shoulder.

Smoltz rejoined a team that was below .500 and hoping to put together its first three-game winning streak of the season — the longest it has started with-out one since 1988.

Smoltz won his 1996 NL Cy Young award and has a 2-4 record in the postseason, where he made his last start in Game 4 of the 1999 World Series. He struck out 11 but took the loss to the New York Yankees, who completed a sweep of the Braves with a 4-1 victory.

After Cone went 4-14 last season, the Yankees did not make an order to re-sign the 38-year-old right-hander in the offseason. Cone signed a minor league deal with the rival Red Sox on Jan. 11. He has been on a minor league rehabilitation assignment since injuring his right shoulder in spring training.

Coach: Mac could play early June

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mark McGwire could be back in the Cardinals' lineup as early as June 5.

St. Louis manager Tony La Russa said McGwire, sidelined with a knee injury, could come off the disabled list on that date.

"When asked if McGwire might be ready to serve as a designated hitter when the Cardinals begin interleague play June 12, La Russa told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, "I think he'll be playing before that."

"Based on what I saw (last weekend), I think he'll be ready to play soon," La Russa said. "He's really doing a lot of stuff, and he's feeling pretty good."

McGwire is working to regain strength in his right knee after having offseason surgery. He started the season as a regular but was being pushed to take the physical demands of daily play. He went on the disabled list April 16.

He played in only six games, going 2-for-24 with one home run, before being sidelined by soreness in the knee.

He's seventh on the career homer list with 555, eight behind Reggie Jackson.

McGwire has been working daily at Busch Stadium, the trainer's room and on the field with Mark O'Neal, the Cardinals' medical rehab coordinator. He was hitting from a batting tee in the cage before a game against the Pirates last week.

"They're pushing him," La Russa said.

Dr. George Paletta, who performed the surgery on McGwire's knee, said from the beginning that McGwire would be unable to play with regularity until at least June.

Once McGwire is activated, how much he plays would depend on how well his knee reacts to the rigors of play.

"But hopefully he will be strong enough to play a significant amount of time not long after he starts playing," trainer Barry Weinberg said.

Spurs shrug off war of words

SHAUN O'NEAL (AP) - Shaquille O'Neal... Spurs shrug off war of words...

Spurs center David Robinson hauls in a rebound over Mavericks' Greg Buckner during the second quarter of their Western Conference semifinal game - May 9 in Dallas.

The Western Conference finals showdown everyone was waiting for is finally here. If was a war of words, it would be no contest. All the salvos have been fired from Los Angeles.

"That's how they roll, that's what they do," the Spurs' Tim Duncan said. "That's great for them. If it works for them, they keep on doing it, I guess. It doesn't work for us. We just go out and play."

All week long, as the Spurs prepared for Saturday's Game 1 at the Alamodome, they have been asked about O'Neal's flustering references to Robinson in Shaq's autobiography, about the asterisk remark, about the zone defense.

Asked what intimidates him most about O'Neal, Robinson said, "His writing," then laughed.

"That's as close as the Spurs get to a counterattack on Thursday. "There won't be any war of words. I don't waste my time on it," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "I guess you've got to retaliate to have a war, and I don't see any reason to retaliate because I don't feel attack. Words don't mean a whole lot."

"It does matter is the 1993 champion Spurs, with the NBA's best regular-season record, against the 2000 champion Lakers, on a 15-game winning streak.

"We didn't really get a chance to do it, it's the way we wanted to last year," said Duncan, who was out with a knee injury in last season's playoffs. "It's just been coming. We've got two very good teams and a very good coach. It's going to be a 15-game series."

Even though the Spurs don't show much emotion, they are fired up about this long-awaited NBA Finals series. "Maybe we just handle things differently. Maybe we come at it a little bit differently, but for us, it's huge," Robinson said. "It's exciting. It's everything. It's what you look forward to growing up as a basketball player. You say, 'Man, this is it. We're on the center stage. The two top teams in the regular season are going at it.'"

"They do play a zone defense," O'Neal said. "It's no secret. Horace Grant is going to have to hit some shots to open up the middle."

Added Jackson: "We have to get San Antonio out of their zone. If they can sit back in their zone and play Duncan and Robinson on Shaq, that's two seven-on-seven." "The Lakers, meanwhile, have to defend San Antonio's twin towers."

"It's two talented 7-footers against one," O'Neal said. "Jackson doesn't like to double-team anybody, even though Duncan will have a big advantage one-on-one against either."

Western Conference Finals

Los Angeles Lakers vs. San Antonio Spurs Game 1, Saturday, 4:30 p.m. TV: NBC

Grant or Robert Horry. "They're going to need to double him," Sean Elliott said. "If you try to guard him, I think you'll see what can happen real quick. Everybody's been talking about how we're going to match up with Shaq and Kobe. Well, we have the best record in the league."

If Duncan is doubled, he can go to Robinson or to the perimeter, where the Spurs have shot 42 percent (59-for-139) from 3-point range in the playoffs.

"I've got shooters all over the court," Duncan said. "The outcome could come down to the supporting cast. Derek Fisher has averaged 13.7 points in the playoffs for Los Angeles. Grant, Horry and Rick Fox can do some damage, too."

Antonio Daniels, Anderson's replacement, has had 11.1 points-per-game and shot 54 percent from the field in the post-season. He and Elliott will be the primary defender of Bryant, who averaged 37.7 points against San Antonio in the regular season.

Among the other Spurs, Terry Porter can still bury the 3-pointer, and Avery Johnson is a threat on drives to the hoop.

Bryant and O'Neal are coexisting to the tune of 30 points per game apiece in the playoffs. Any squabbling those two did during the season, seems a dead issue for now.

"I feel like we're tested. We're more together than we've been," Fisher said. "I say we've been tested, not just in the playoffs, to survive the turmoil we've been through this season."

"That's what makes the Lakers so fearsome now," Elliott said. "What scares me most is that they're playing like a team right now. I think they have a play like a team whenever they play like a team. They're going to be tough to beat. It's when you catch them and they're not playing well and guys are fighting, that's when you really want to face them."

Toronto's Chris Childs, left, reaches in on NBA MVP Allen Iverson as Toronto guard Vince Carter defends during the first half of Game 3 of the Eastern Conference semifinals in Toronto, last Friday.

Iverson's 52 points puts him in an elite group

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Allen Iverson looked over to the bench, caught Larry Brown's attention and signaled for a substitution.

The NBA's Most Valuable Player had such a dominating performance that, for the first time anybody can remember, he actually took himself out of a game. And there was 4:25 left to play.

"I just knew I had to come out and play basketball. Just take my time, not try to do too much, try and catch a rhythm. And once I got a rhythm, stay in it," Iverson said after his 52-point performance Wednesday night lifted the Philadelphia 76ers to a 121-88 victory over the Toronto Raptors.

The Sixers took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals. Game 6 is today in Toronto.

Iverson, who scored 54 points in Game 2, joined Michael Jordan as the only players to reach 50 twice in the same series. Jordan did it against Cleveland in 1988.

With Chamberlain and Jerry West as the only other players to score 50 more than once in the playoffs.

He's one of those exceptional players. Sixers forward Tyrone Hill said. "Everything he does and everything he touches turns to magic. He's a great player. He's a warrior."

Iverson had perhaps the finest shooting game of his career. He was 21-of-32, including 8-of-14 from 3-point range. He also had seven assists and four steals.

The most surprising aspect of the scoring outburst was that Iverson only went to the foul line twice. He averaged 11.8 foul shots in the series before Game 5 and 10.1 per game during the regular season.

Eastern semifinals

Philadelphia vs. Toronto (Sixers lead series 3-2) Game 6: Tonight, 6 p.m. TV: TNT, CR 31

"I've always felt 15 feet and in, he's a phenomenal shooter. But when he got it going, he's proven me wrong a lot," Sixers coach Larry Brown said after practice Thursday. "It's like to see him take a bunch of 3-pointers. I don't think that's always in his best interest."

"He's so effective going to the free-throw line, and putting people in foul trouble and getting us in the bonus. But when he's having a special night like he did, that's something you live with."

Iverson's performance didn't surprise teammate Aaron McKie, who said he sees it all the time in practice.

"Allen is playing smart basketball, taking what the defense gives him," McKie said. "When the shots are falling, you just better believe there is something about basketball. Everything appears to you-in-game is there. It's just a matter of when it's there."

After Iverson scored 54 last week, Raptors forward Charles Oakley said he wouldn't reach 50 again this series. Oakley, who just collected an overdue gambling debt from Tyrone Hill, is lucky he didn't bet on it.

"I would never make a comment like that," Iverson scoffed. "I don't know what a person is capable of doing. I can't say that they might have been trying to boost their team up, or trying to get in my head or something. That's crazy to say somebody won't do something again."

Draft lures undergrads, but not All-American star

NEW YORK (AP) - In the latest exodus of underage players filing for the NBA draft, Duke All-American Jason Williams resisted temptation. Coach Mike Krzyzewski is grateful he did.

Today, the NBA will announce the number of top applicants. Those who have said they were willing include the four underclassmen who starred for Arizona and lost to Williams and Duke in the NBA's side game.

Last year, a record 56 underclassmen, including four from high school, filed for the NBA draft, although 19 later withdrew.

This year, 27 players, including six high school players who filed, have filed applications. That step prevents them from turning back. All of them decided the cold, hard cash offered by the generally more attractive than the generally college environment that Williams enjoys so much.

"My dream has always been a college degree," Williams said Thursday. "When I want something, I do what I have to do to get it."

With the NBA lottery draft set to begin, Williams is thinking instead about summer school as he continues studies aimed at completing his degree in sociology, with a minor in business, in three years. He will leave Duke with his diploma next month.

Williams would please former Georgetown coach John Thompson, who preaches staying in school for ambitious players. He explained his reasoning in a column published in Sunday's New York Times.

"When asked by those opposed to the NBA's proposed rule that would deny entrance to anyone younger than 20 years old by what I think is a very good reason (for those 15-year-olds) his immediate thoughts at the NBA, I answer by the right society has to improve itself by encouraging education," Thompson wrote.

"The impact of not drawing the lines goes far beyond the 58 players selected in the NBA draft. The impact of denigrating the importance of education will be felt in the thousands of young people who strive to emulate their heroes."

Jason Williams stonier David Thompson said. "I'm on record as wanting an age limit for his league, yet has been unable to prevent a torrent of teen-agers arriving each year."

"I really do believe that kids are now bouncing the ball in schoolyards saying, 'Just get to 17 and that's where I'm going.'" Stern said last week. "School is an irrelevance. Where is the mandate to play, bad for the kid's development, bad for the college game, bad for the business of the NBA as well."

Krzyzewski noted Stern's position.

"I love the fact that David Stern says kids should stay in school," he said. "Could he provide a forum about how that might be accomplished? Where is the mandate to play, bad for the kid's development, bad for the college game, bad for the business of the NBA as well?"

Williams said he would like to see a forum about how that might be accomplished.

Woods sits seven back in rain-plagued Germany

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) - New Zealand's Michael Campbell took the spotlight from Tiger Woods on Thursday, shooting a 10 under 62 in the rain-plagued Deutsche Bank-SAP Open.

Woods, the 1999 winner making his third straight appearance in the event, opened with a 69 in the tournament that was delayed by rain for seven hours. More than half of the players were unable to finish the round on the St. Leon-Rot course.

Campbell's bogey-free round was three strokes better than the course record of 65 set two years ago by Nick Price, but does not count as a record because players were allowed to lift, clean and place their balls in the fairways because of the soggy conditions.

Campbell had a four-stroke lead over two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els of South Africa, defending champion Lee Westwood of England, Lucas Parsons of Australia and Eduardo Romero of Argentina.

Mickelson, Furyk share opening-round lead

FORT WORTH, Texas - Defending champion Phil Mickelson shot a 5 under 65 for a share of the first-round lead with Jim Furyk in the Colonial.

Mickelson and Furyk, who had their best opening rounds of the year, were a stroke in front of Bryson DeChambeau, 201995 winner Tom Lehman, David Toms and Mark Brooks.

Mickelson, trying to become the only player other than Ben Hogan to win the Colonial in consecutive years, birdied the final three holes on the historic 7,080-yard Colonial course.

Mickelson made a 35-foot birdie putt on the 427-yard 18th. He holed a 20-foot par on the 168-yard 16th, then hit his 9-iron approach on No. 17 within 8 feet to set up a birdie.

Tiger Woods looks over his putt during the first round of the Deutsche Bank-SAP tournament in St. Leon-Rot, Germany Thursday.

Olympic medalist pleads no contest to drug dealing

VENTURA, Calif. - Olympic archery champion Justin Huish pleaded no contest to a felony charge of selling marijuana, and is expected to be sentenced to six months in jail.

Huish, 25, faced up to three years in prison if convicted of dealing drugs out of his Simi Valley home. The 1996 gold medalist made no comments to the court Wednesday after entering his plea.

He will be sentenced June 13. Huish's roommate and co-defendant, Brian Mastrangelo, 24, also appeared before Superior Court Judge Herbert Curtis and agreed to waive a jury trial. Curtis convicted Mastrangelo on three misdemeanor charges for allowing drug sales at the home and for possessing martial arts weapons.

Huish was arrested Feb. 15, 2000, after police witnessed an apparent drug deal outside the home. A detective stopped a man leaving the home and found a plastic bag of marijuana in his pocket.

The man told to Huish he bought the pot from Huish and officers, returning with a search warrant, finding a briefcase containing several half-ounce plastic bags of marijuana.

Huish originally pleaded innocent, arguing that he was providing the marijuana for an HIV patient. Huish was later ordered to stand trial on possession and drug sale charges.

IOC official sees no return of 'bad old ways'

LAUSANNE, Switzerland - A new investigation related to the Salt Lake City scandal and the upcoming trial of two IOC leaders will not affect the success of next year's Winter Games, a top IOC official said Thursday.

"I think the preparations and the leadup to the Salt Lake City Games are now on such a firm footing and being so professionally done, I don't see it as a major issue," IOC vice president Kevan Gosper of Australia said. "I would hope and expect these other issues are really on the side. I don't see a return to the bad old ways. We've been through that."

Salt Lake bid chief Tom Welch and deputy Dave Johnson are scheduled to go on trial July 16 on charges of lavishing $1 million on members and their relatives during the successful bid for the games. The scandal led to the expulsion or resignation of 10 members.

IOC president nominates son for membership

LAUSANNE, Switzerland - While in the U.S. - Juan Antonio Samaranch is bowing out, another looks set to join the International Olympic Committee.

Samaranch, who steps down in July after 21 years as IOC president, nominated his own son Thursday for committee membership in a move sure to produce charges of nepotism.

Juan Antonio Samaranch Jr. was one of seven candidates - including two sons - proposed for membership by the IOC's ruling executive board.

There have been previous cases of sons of IOC delegates becoming members, but this is the first time a president's son has been nominated.

Derby effort still baffles Baffert

By Dave Joseph
South Florida Sun-Sentinel

BALTIMORE Early Thursday morning, Bob Baffert was standing under the shed row of the Preakness barn when Monarchos walked toward him. The roan colt approached Baffert, stopped and stared at the trainer, then continued his way around the shed row.

"Go ahead," Baffert said to the colt. "Rub it in."

It's been two weeks since Monarchos galloped by Baffert's Derby favorites Point Given and Congaree at Churchill Downs, and Baffert is still disappointed and slightly confused about what happened that day in Louisville.

"They were so ready," Baffert said, sipping a cup of coffee while preparing both horses for Saturday's Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Race Course. "Usually, when my horses are ready they run huge."

Baffert won't argue that

Wood Memorial winner Congaree ran a big race on Derby Day. Despite running close to a record-fast pace, the colt gamely held together down the stretch and was nosed for second in the final few yards.

"But Point Given," the colt many considered a Triple Crown candidate, before the Derby, is a different story. Yes, he had the tough No. 17 post, and yes, he was live-wide down the backstretch. But after making a threatening move around the final turn, Point Given flattened out and finished a dull fifth. Clearly, this wasn't the same horse who crushed his competition in California earlier in the year in the Santa Anita Derby and San Felipe.

Baffert, who thought Point Given and Congaree could finish 1-2 in the Derby, still doesn't have a simple answer for Point Given's disappointing performance, although it's not from a lack of trying.

"But I can't analyze it anymore," Baffert said. "I've given up. We still don't know what happened. I've tried to figure it out, but we couldn't find anything wrong physically. All we have is theories."

The most popular theory is that jockey Gary Stevens had Point Given too close to the pace. While Stevens won the Santa Anita Derby after pressing the secret weapon Congaree, he was demanding a pace as the one set in the Derby. "He got away with that," Baffert said of Stevens' ride in Santa Anita. In Kentucky, Baffert added, Stevens was "supposed to take it easy, after leaving the gate."

But Baffert isn't pinning Point Given's disappointing Derby performance on just the pace. Instead, he says, "I think maybe it was a lot of little things."

For instance, the Churchill surface on Derby Day was not only incredibly fast but incredibly hard. Point Given, a huge horse, doesn't just hit the ground, "he slaps it," Baffert said.

Baffert, who watched both horses gallop across Pimlico Thursday morning, believes Point Given, under a better trip by Stevens, will run a much-improved race. While Congaree did run a better race at the Derby, the lightly-raced colt had an incredibly hard race in Kentucky and there's every reason to believe he could bounce off that effort.

Baffert, however, said both horses are doing well and have acclimated to the Pimlico track. So if Point Given gets a trip and can handle these tight turns — and Congaree doesn't bounce — Baffert could find redemption here Saturday afternoon.

Or even further disappointment.

Hewitt reaches quarterfinals at Germany

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Seventh-seeded Lleyton Hewitt of Australia needed five set points to defeat compatriot Andrew Ilie on Thursday and reach the quarterfinals of the German Open.

Eighth-seeded Juan Carlos Ferrero of Spain also advanced, defeating Ecuador's Nicolas Pietrangeli for his 14th consecutive victory.

Hewitt, seeking his seventh career title, beat Ilie 6-2, 7-6 (2). Ferrero, fresh off winning the Italian Open, defeated Lapentti 6-4, 6-3.

Ferrero is seeking his third straight title after winning at Rome and Barcelona. He is also trying to become the first player in nearly 30 years to win back-to-back clay court events at Rome and Hamburg. The last player to achieve that was Spain's Manuel Orantes in 1972.

Meanwhile, France's Fabrice Santoro, who beat Andre Agassi on Wednesday, defeated Germany's Nicolas Kiefer 6-3, 6-3 to reach the round of eight. Albert Portas of Spain defeated 12th-seeded Sebastian Grosjean of France 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, and Sweden's Thomas Johansson downed No. 14 Jan-Michael Gambill 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Hingis advances in Italy

ROME — Following a visit to the ancient Colosseum, Martina Hingis beat her third-round opponent in the Italian Open Thursday with all the speed and power of a modern gladiator.

Hingis rallied after losing the first three games in the final set for a 6-4, 6-3 win over Russia's Elena Likhovtseva on Foro Italico's center court.

"We had long rallies, back-and-forth," the top-seeded Hingis said after her sixth win in six matches against Likhovtseva. "It was very physical."

Other third-round winners Thursday were No. 3 Conchita Martinez, No. 4 Amelie Mauresmo, No. 7 Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, No. 14 Jelena Dokic, Paola Suarez, Joannette Kruger and Francesca Schiavone.

CRAFTSMAN TRUCK
DARLINGTON, S.C. Bobby Hamilton, who won a Winston Cup race at Talladega a few weeks ago, drove his Dodge pickup truck into victory lane in the first such race hosted by fabled Darlington Raceway. Hamilton led 125 out of 135 laps in the rain-shortened Darlington 200. Ken Schrader finished second in a Chevrolet, followed by points leader Scott Riggs in a Dodge. Dodge Rams have won all six races this year, and Riggs has finished in the top five in every event.

Date	Track	Location
Saturday	Low's Motor Speedway (The Winston)	Concord, N.C.
May 27	Low's Motor Speedway	Concord, N.C.
June 3	Dover Downs International Speedway	Dover, Del.

FEUD OF THE WEEK
Kevin Harvick vs. Greg Biffle
Early in the CVS Pharmacy 200, Harvick let Randy LaJoie get back on the lead lap when a caution flag waved. But he stopped Biffle, who is in contention for the points championship, from beating him back to the start-finish line. That strategic move came back to haunt Harvick late in the race. Biffle and race winner Jason Keller beat Harvick into turn one on a restart, and Biffle kept Harvick at bay as Keller sped away. Harvick blamed the loss on Biffle, and the two had to be separated by track officials after the race.

■ NOT: A year after winning the Winston, Dale Earnhardt Jr. seems ready to win again.

■ NOT: Bill Elliott hasn't finished in the top 10 since Daytona.

PROFILE

Jeremy Mayfield

Jeremy Mayfield's crew services his No. 12 Ford Taurus in the season-opening Daytona 500. Mayfield, who has won three times in his career, will take part in Saturday's Winston all-star event at Lowe's Motor Speedway.

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

In terms of winning, Jeremy Mayfield has been quite successful. The challenge Mayfield still faces is finding the consistency necessary to contend for a Winston Cup championship.

Mayfield finished seventh in the 1998 points race, but he fell to 24th in the 1998 standings and 24th in 2000, when he missed a pair of races due to injury.

Still, Mayfield followed up his 1998 victory at Pocono with two more wins, at Fontana, Calif., and again at Pocono, last year. The latter Pocono victory was particularly memorable for Mayfield because he nudged past Dale Earnhardt on the final turn.

Age: Will turn 32 on May 27
Marital status: Single Hometown: Owensboro, Ky., now lives in Mooresville, N.C.
Crew chief: Peter Sospenzo
Car: No. 12 Mobil 1 Ford Taurus, owned by Walter Zarnacki

Career statistics: 220 starts, three wins, 31 top-5 finishes, 52 top-10 finishes, $10,052,824 money earnings

First: Start (Oct. 10, 1993, at Charlotte), pole (July 26, 1996, at Talladega), win (June 21, 1998, at Pocono).

What distinguishes The Winston from other events? "Winning is everything in this sport, but it really shows this Saturday night. You want to win! You want to win it bad. You have to win it, but, with no points on the thing, your attitude changes. Winning is everything. Second place means nothing in these races. With the huge difference in money, second place means even less than it ever did, and it's usually meant next to nothing in these races. In the Winston Open, second place means you pack your stuff up and go home maybe even before the Winston starts.

How far will you go in order to win? "It's not exactly a 'win or don't bring the car back' type of deal, but it's probably closer to that than anything else we run. It must be. Look at all the Winstons that have been run and how many guys didn't bring the car back. There has been a lot of controversy, but the race is set up for that. The way it's designed, there is probably going to be controversy and people mad. That's not necessarily bad. Just the way things are. There are no points. All there is winning."

Is this stock car racing's all-star game? "Every major league sport has an all-star game. It's all part of being major league. Yeah, I guess baseball did it first and then hockey, basketball or whoever, and football has its Pro Bowl. The only thing any of those have over our all-star game is the fact the Pro Bowl is played in Hawaii. That part wouldn't be a bad deal. But these other all-star games are fun deals, kind of an exhibition. I'm not sure how big a deal winning is in those things. Our all-star game is a 'win at all costs' thing."

On the day before he won his Winston Cup race, at Phoenix in 1988, Alan Kulwicki was asked a saying: "I just have a feeling I'm going to win my first. I've never won and I'm starting but I've just got this feeling tomorrow is when I'm going to take the lead on race." Kulwicki took the lead on race. Alan Kulwicki's radiator hose broke. Collection of wartime letters forms moving testament to honor and faith

DEAR READERS: I'm delighted to tell you about a special book that's hot off the presses this month—titled "War—Letters: Extraordinary Correspondence From American Wars" (Scribner). It features never-before-seen letters from the Civil War, World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, the Persian Gulf and even Bosnia. It is edited by a dedicated young man named Andy Carroll.

DEAR ABBY

faith, courage and perseverance. They remind us that wars are won not by generals and presidents, but by the individual soldiers, Marines, sailors, airmen, Coast Guard and nurses whose voices are so often forgotten. They are our true heroes. "War Letters" lets their voices be heard.

All earnings from this book are being donated to various groups, and Andy has established a Web site — www.warletters.com — that offers free information on how to safeguard your old letters, as well as links to respected organizations that preserve wartime letters, photos and journals.

Future generations of Americans need to understand and appreciate the high cost of freedom. This book is a huge tribute to our men and women in uniform and the enormous sacrifices they have made for all of us. It is available in your local bookstore.

DEAR ABBY: I am a gentleman in my late 70s who prefers wearing athletic shoes because I find them comfortable. I wear them not only around the house, but when shopping, dining out, going to the movies, etc. For some reason, wearing white socks with them causes my feet and ankles to itch (perhaps due to an allergy). Therefore, I wear colored socks — black, blue, brown — you get the picture.

My problem: My children, who are all married with kids of their own, are forever telling me I look like a "dork". They say that colored socks should never be worn with athletic shoes. Please don't advise me to switch to leather shoes, as they are hard on my feet.

How can I make my children understand that I am not trying to be a misfit, but only trying to be comfortable in my "golden years"?

— NO SLAVE TO FASHION IN SAN MARCOS

DEAR NO SLAVE: My "fashion experts" tell me that if people can see your socks, your trousers may be too short. However, if that's not your problem, consider that athletic shoes come in a variety of color combinations, and you can always coordinate your shoes and socks to match your outfit.

P.S. Consult a podiatrist about foot powder to relieve what's itching you.

Wells Fargo will lease part of tower

SALT LAKE CITY - Wells Fargo & Co. has agreed to lease 255,000 square feet of the former American Stores tower, which will be renamed the Wells Fargo Center. The downtown building's new owner, Wasatch Plaza Holdings LLC, has agreed to lease to Wells Fargo parts of the first, second and third floors and all of floors four through 10.

Wasatch completed its purchase of the largely vacant tower for $78.5 million from Albertson's Inc. of Boise. Wasatch plans to open the building's athletic club in July and is looking for restaurants and high-end grocery store to fill space on the ground and second floors, said Dell Lou Hansen, a Wasatch partner.

Most of the 24-story building's 590,000 square feet of available space has been vacant since Albertson's acquired American Stores in 1998.

Albertson's moved the jobs it retained in the acquisition, leaving the tower to swap the downtown real estate market and make developers hesitant to begin new projects.

Wells Fargo's relocation is a sign of the company's commitment to Salt Lake City and will be the crowning moment in its merger with First Security Corp., said Scott Nelson, Wells Fargo regional president and chief executive. The company acquired First Security last fall.

ARTEC snags grant from chamber

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce made good on a promise to give financial assistance to a district-consortium-of-high-schools this week. The chamber board approved a $40,000 contribution requested by the Advanced Regional Technical Education Coalition toward 2001-02 operating costs. The money comes from the chamber's Business Plus II, a campaign in its third year that over five years will raise $1.6 million from local businesses for economic development purposes. Chamber Executive Vice President Kent Just said it is money well spent. "The businesses know that their health is dependent on a healthy economy and job growth, and that includes workforce preparedness," he said. The sum will be used for administration of ARTEC, Just said. He added that funding for ARTEC from the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation is scheduled to decrease over time, so Business Plus II will expect a larger request for support from ARTEC in the coming years. Here's a roundup of other chamber matters at this week's board meetings: • A "reality check" retreat will be held for the board June 26 - "just to make sure we're in tune with what we said we're going to be doing this year," Just said. • The hanging basket project will begin again this year on May 25 along Shoshone Street. Moss Greenhouses assembled and grew the baskets; Kimberly Nurseries will hang and water them daily; and Willis Toyota will supply the watering truck. • The chamber's Business is Blooming Contest will begin in June. It is a competition between businesses using flowers for color. The chamber appointed a task team to look into the possibility of a combined convention/interpretive center of about 30,000 square feet to be near the visitor's center at the Perrine Bridge. An interpretive center would spotlight the Snake River Canyon along with making available information on the area's geology and the history of Twin Falls.

BREAKING DOWN BARRIERS

Disabled workers are becoming increasingly important

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Overlooked in the recent flurry of grim economic reports was this important development: Sonia Jackson, the veteran customer clerk with the dazzling smile at a Hayward Safeway store, has been promoted to the position of general merchandising clerk. It's significant not only because Jackson's hard work was rewarded, but because one more developmentally disabled worker became a self-sufficient, tax-paying contributor to the economy. Their numbers have been growing for years, accommodated by a tight labor market, federal and state training and placement programs, and the enlightenment of employers. Nonprofit groups helping the developmentally disabled are seeing about 800 new clients annually, according to the California Rehabilitation Association in Sacramento, a lobbying group. "More clients, however, are putting financial pressure on these same groups. The directors of programs that place disabled workers, such as the Arc San Francisco and Stepping Stones of San Francisco, which helped Jackson get her job at Safeway in 1997," say the Legislature's nearly $80 million appropriation they rely on is woefully inadequate. The Arc, the largest provider of supported employment services in San Francisco, may be forced to close, as its projected loss for 2001-2002 is $262,000, nearly $1,000 per person for the 270 disabled clients it serves, Patricia Kemering, the executive director, said. "With the current energy crisis and the money they are pouring into it, our chances of getting a substantial increase are nil. But with the program being as cost-effective as it is, producing productive people, the Legislature is being penny-wise and pound-foolish," she said.

Stepping Stones is a case in point. It's in its 25th year helping clients with mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, autism and other organic brain disorders that occur before the age of 18. There are now 73 people working at jobs the nonprofit helped arrange, 86 percent of them earning full benefits. That compares with only 52 percent in November 1998. "In his 15 years at Stepping Stones, Monte Cohen, the executive director, has seen a sea change among employers, and socially, too, in appreciation of the abilities of disabled people. "Our folks are like any other minority group in America in 2001," said Cohen. "They are largely accepted, but there are pockets of hostility, pockets of ignorance, and our job is to minimize that."

"Our folks are like any other minority group in America... They are largely accepted, but there are pockets of hostility, pockets of ignorance."

Kmart posts first-quarter losses

Bridgeline

CHICAGO - Kmart Corp., the second-largest discount retailer in the United States, posted a loss in its fiscal first quarter as it increased spending for customer service, improved inventories and bought new computer systems in order to become more efficient. Excluding a charge for employee severance and an early retirement program, the company reported a loss of $10 million, or 2 cents a share, compared with a net gain of $22 million, or 6 cents, a share a year ago. The per-share results beat by a nickel the consensus estimate of 17 analysts surveyed by First Call/Thomson Financial. Estimates ranged from losses of 3 cents to 10 cents. Including the $15 million charge, Kmart - which has stores in Twin Falls and Burley - had a loss of $25 million, or 5 cents a share, for the three-month period ended May 2. "These results are in line with our plan to fix the business by taking decisive, aggressive, focused steps to transform our company," Chuck Conway, Kmart's chief executive, said on a conference call Thursday. Conway has spent his first nine months as Kmart's chief executive fine-tuning inventories, improving customer service, revamping technologies, and bringing back the company's "BlueLight Special" marketing campaign as part of efforts to revive sales and create customer loyalty. The company's plan to spend $2 billion for improvements has underwritten its profit. Sales rose 1.7 percent to $8.34 billion for the quarter. The company expects sales at stores open at least a year to increase by a percentage in the low single digits this fiscal year. Food and other consumable items helped sales rise, said Jeffrey Boyer, Kmart's chief financial officer. Strength in the food, pharmacy and household goods departments was offset by weak sales of apparel and products such as fans, tools and lawnmowers. Inventories rose 1 percent in the quarter as Kmart stocked more quick-selling food and consumable items. Gross margin, or the amount of profit made on each item sold, edged lower to 20.7 percent of sales from 20.8 percent a year earlier. Excluding the severance and retirement-package charges, selling, general and administrative expenses rose to 19.7 percent of sales from 19.5 percent a year earlier. Troy, Mich.-based Kmart opened 10 discount stores and one supercenter in the quarter. It closed three discount stores, bringing the total number of stores it operates to 2,113.

Roundwood could ignite new Idaho timber industry

The Associated Press

PIERCE - Little logs, measuring 6 inches in diameter and smaller, might offer a lift to Idaho's once-blooming timber towns. Local and state officials, forest experts and potential entrepreneurs met Wednesday to start laying the foundation for production of value-added roundwood products. "Everyone hopes to convert what used to be pulp or waste into bigger cash items. "We have a confluence of opportunities here," said Bob Ford of the Idaho Department of Commerce. "Our interest here, pure and simple, is to create a business. "Such a business would not replace all 200 jobs lost when the nearby Jaype plywood plant shut down last fall. It is aimed at

Governor appeals for trade options

Idaho farmers may see new export opportunities
The Associated Press

BOISE - Idaho farmers soon may find new export opportunities with Mexico, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne said Wednesday. Kempthorne and other delegates in Idaho's trade mission to Mexico met with Agriculture Secretary Javier Usabiega. Key discussions dealt with ways to crack the Mexican market open for shipments of fresh Idaho potatoes, reduced tariffs for shipments of frozen french fries, and ways to give northern Idaho bean growers a better shot at sending their products south. "Things are going very, very well," Kempthorne said as he rode through Mexico City in a motorcade. His voice sometimes drowned out by the sirens of accompanying police. Heyburn-based Wheatland Agribusiness is part of the trade mission along with a couple of companies: The Perennials Commercial Creamery Co. and Davisco Foods International. After a round of meetings with President Vicente Fox, the delegation of representatives from several Idaho companies, state universities and government agencies headed to Guadalajara. Kempthorne said talks with Usabiega led to some possible breakthroughs for Idaho agriculture.

Idaho's processed potato exporters hit their limit of shipments to Mexico around March before tariffs of about 20 percent kicked in. "That becomes almost prohibitive," Kempthorne said, adding Usabiega will recommend the tariff be cut in half, and eliminated by 2003. Fresh Idaho potatoes are not allowed to be shipped to Mexico because of concerns about unwanted pests. Usabiega agreed to send a team to Idaho to observe potato harvests, which could lead to shipments and help Idaho potato growers. Panhandle bean growers now have problems selling to Mexico, which holds only one auction a year for those wanting to enter the market. If they are chosen, they have only two weeks to deliver. Mexican officials told the visitors that they would hold two auctions, give bidders more notice and provide a 90-day period for shipments.

Fed decided against rate cut in April Chip maker begins layoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Reserve policy makers decided against cutting interest rates during the second week of April because of concerns about the "unpredictable reactions" of a volatile stock market.

The announcement of this rate cut triggered a huge positive response that pushed the Dow Jones industrial average up by 399 points to its third biggest point gain ever.

The Fed did not elaborate in its minutes or the reasons officials were concerned during the April 11 discussion about the impact of a rate cut on the stock market.

The Fed did not elaborate in its minutes or the reasons officials were concerned during the April 11 discussion about the impact of a rate cut on the stock market.

PCATELLO (AP) - American MicroSystems, the American's largest private employer, has started laying off workers.

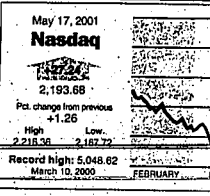

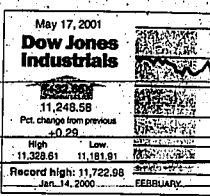

AMI attributed the cutbacks to "the current economic conditions combined with the critical downturn in the semiconductor industry."

Stocks advance on Fed rate cut

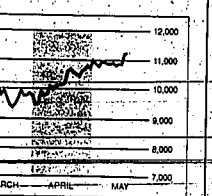

NEW YORK (AP) - Investors maintained their enthusiasm over lower interest rates Thursday, extending the big rally that allowed the Dow industrials to close above 11,000 for the first time since September.

A small increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators helped the stock market widen its large advance of Wednesday, as investors, in response to the Federal Reserve's decision Tuesday to lower interest rates by 0.5 percentage point.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished Thursday's session up 32.66 at 11,248.58. The Dow's moderate gain followed the 342-point climb it made Wednesday, when the blue chip average closed above 11,000 for the first time since Sept. 19.

Investors are going to be in the mood to spend and invest money, said Kevin Caron, associate strategist at Gruntal & Co.

Street's optimism that the economy is starting to recover. The index, an important gauge of future economic activity, rose 1.2 percent in April, gaining after two consecutive monthly declines.

Micron fights Utah power company over electricity rates

Micron Technology Inc. started building its Lehi semiconductor factory at a time when most manufacturers worried little about the long-term cost of power.

Five years after breaking ground on the plant, the Boise-based company is locked in a bitter legal fight over its electricity rates with PacifiCorp, the state's largest power company.

Micron has asked the Utah Public Service Commission to order the utility to provide power to the Lehi plant at the same rate it has been charged the past five years.

"You have to worry about what might happen to the plant down the road," Lehi Mayor Kenneth Greenwood said.

It, too, will need to get the power from the high-priced spot market, then dicker with Utah Power to put the electricity on its grid.

"If we have to serve them, the electricity will flow over Utah Power and right lines to Micron's substation with Lehi sitting in the middle," said Dennis Ashton, power superintendent for Lehi's municipally owned power utility.

The roots of the dispute go back to mid-1995 when Micron started buying land for the plant just outside Lehi City.

"What Micron seems to be saying is that PacifiCorp has the obligation to serve the plant but no right to serve it," said Dave Eskelsen, spokesman for PacifiCorp in Utah.

Safe-to-cut 450 jobs in consolidation move

SEATTLE (AP) - Insurance provider Safeco will cut 450 jobs, or 3 percent of its nationwide work force, as it scales back its commercial insurance operations for large business clients.

The company also plans to close its insurance operations for large businesses in Denver, Chicago, Fountain Valley, Calif. and Atlanta.

Seattle insurance company spokesman said the move was decided on the move because it wants to focus more strongly on insuring small- to medium-sized businesses.

"We have been unprofitable in our large commercial operations, and this decision says that we will do more of what we do best, and that's the small commercial market," Hamilton said.

Continued from E2. Clearly, there is a benefit to the state by this program, for the reliance on public assistance goes down for any person who is able to find a job.

In March, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao launched a Web-based referral service for employers seeking to hire workers with disabilities.

Labor has a 5 percent reduction in discretionary funds. President Bush proposed that spending for disabled programs - begun by President Harry Truman for the benefit of war veterans - be cut by $20 million to $40 million.

There is dedication, reliability and a loyalty to Safeway with these workers," said Lambert. "Their time and attendance records tell the story. Their numbers are far superior compared to those of employees who are not disabled."

Roundwood. Green, is manufacturing uniform parts that go together with the ease of dimension lumber.

But for places like Pierce, LeVan-Green said, the boom must come from within. "There's got to be somebody here in Pierce that's going to make anything happen, but we can lend some of the technologies and an assistance that can help make things happen."

'West Wing' president lashes out at God

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In Wednesday's powerful season finale of the West Wing, a quipped President Josiah Bartlet lashed out at God in two languages.

Martin Sheen as President Josiah Bartlet

The president, played by Martin Sheen, then proceeded to fill the vast cathedral with his anger. The monologue took place in the National Cathedral, just after Dolores Landingham's funeral and before the president appeared on TV to admit he has hidden a disease, multiple sclerosis, from the public.

"She thought her first new car and you hit her with a drunk driver. What? That's supposed to be funny? Bartlet asked, then added bitterly: 'Have I displeased you, you feelless thug?' He wasn't through. The next 20 seconds of his tirade were delivered in Latin, once the traditional language of the Catholic Church. His tirade was clear, even if only Latin scholars could parse the specifics. Here's the translation included with 'The West Wing': shooting script. 'Am I really to believe that these are the acts of a loving God? A just God? A wise God? Bartlet exclaims. 'To hell with your punishments. I was your servant here on Earth. And I spread your word and I did your work. To hell with your punishments. To hell with you.' The scene ended with Bartlet, in a gesture of contempt, crushing a cigarette butt on the cathedral floor. 'You get Hoynes,' he tells God, apparently signifying his decision not to seek re-election and to clear the way for Vice President John Hoynes. (Tim Matheson) to head the Democratic ticket. But the rest of the episode left doubt about Bartlet's intentions. There was a wrenching scene in which he imagines Landingham had reappeared, scolding him for self-pity. 'There are people way worse off than you,' she said. 'I just don't want to run again. I respect that, but you don't run because you think it's gonna be too hard or you think you're gonna lose. Well, God, Jed, I don't even want to know you.' Questioned at a news conference about his plans, the president adopts a look of resolve but doesn't respond before the hour ends — another TV cliffhanger for viewers to ponder this summer. The show won a record nine Emmys during its first season last year, including the first best-drama award. One of NBC's highest-rated programs, it has also been a consistent favorite of critics.
