Sheriff pulls off deputies

Six children with guns, dogs are locked in standoff with police near Ruby Ridge

Los Angeles Times

SEATTLE - Six children were holed up in a rural north Idaho house Wednesday, armed with guns and 27 dogs in a bizarre standoff that police vowed to keep from turning violent. "It seems like an absurdity to enter into an armed confrontation with children, and I'm not willing to allow the situation to escalate," Bonner County Sheriff

Phil Jarvis said as the incident entered its second day. After a 15-year-old boy inside the house released a pack of snarling dogs at approaching officers and yelled at his siblings to "get the guns out," Jarvis pulled all sheriff's deputies off the property except for two posted on the end of the street. He said he was determined to negotiate an end to the situation. The incident was unfolding

A sign outside the home of JoAnn McGucklin near Sandpoint warns visitors about dogs on the property Wednesday. McGucklin's six children refused to cooperate with sheriff's deputies who had arrested their mother Tuesday. about 25 miles from Ruby Ridge, the scene of a 1992 standoff involving the family of white separatist Randy Weaver that led to the death of Weaver's wife and son and a federal agent - and became an anthem for the anti-government movement in the United States. ## Twin Falls cops can stop you for not wearing seat belt

By Mark Heinz Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Drivers who think they won't get pulled over for not wearing seat belts could be in for a surprise in Twin Falls. Police here follow a local judge's ruling that lets them do just that. "In the last two years we've used it extensively," said Twin Falls police Sgt. Bill Hanchey. "We've made a lot of stops because of it."

The National Safety Council, an advocacy group, recently gave F's to Idaho and seven other states in its seat belt safety report card, because those states classify failure to wear a seat belt as only a secondary offense.

That means a driver can't be ticketed for not wearing a seat belt unless there's another offense, such as speeding.

In Twin Falls, however, that's not the whole story.

Twin Falls officers are free to stop an unbelted driver. Though they won't issue a ticket if there's no other infraction, they can lecture the driver about safety and look for other offenses.

A 1996 ruling by 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl gives that power to police throughout the Magic Valley. But the brass in some departments outside Twin Falls don't follow suit. Please see BELTS, Page A2

Treasury tries to speed up tax-cut checks

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Let the mailbox vigil begin. Millions of tax-cut checks should be arriving by the end of summer, if not sooner. Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill said Wednesday he'll do everything he can to speed delivery of the checks - up to $300 for individual taxpayers and a maximum $600 for couples - in the government's first mass tax refund in a quarter century.

Congress authorized the rebates in the $1.35 trillion, 10-year tax-cut package approved last weekend. As it now stands, most of the estimated 95 million taxpayers Please see CHECKS, Page A2

Magic Valley farmers brace for another bankruptcy

Cisco Seeds owner says he aims to make things right

By Julie Pence Times-News writer

MURTAUGH - Lifelong Magic Valley farmer David Moyes is still waiting for payment on the beans he grew for Twin Falls-based Cisco Seeds of Idaho Inc. in 1998 and '99.

It looks as though he'll wait a while longer. The company contracts with farmers from Declo to Caldwell to grow proprietary seed. It filed in bankruptcy court for Chapter 11 reorganization earlier this month.

Affected are 47 growers and about 20 landlords owed about $1.25 million, according to owner Chris Jancik, for the bean seed they produced for the company up to three years ago. That's in addition to another 41 unsecured creditors. "This is just the worst time of year for this to happen," Moyes said, taking a break from bean planting Tuesday. "This couldn't have been done at a worse time for farmers."

Cisco's owner said he aims to make things right for the farmers. "I realize I owe them," Jancik said. "What I'm trying to do is get the bank paid off, and I'm trying to recoup as much money from the inventory as I can so I can pay the growers back as soon as possible. The growers have been very good to me."

He said the purchase of the company two years ago was a mistake. "I probably took on more debt than I could handle - all the '98 crop and part of the '99 crop - and that is what is outstanding," he said.

Jancik purchased the company, formerly Bakker Brothers, from a Netherlands-based bank. At the time he was vice president, after working his way up in the company over 18 years.

Murtaugh bean farmer David Moyes says he hasn't been paid for the 1998 and 1999 growing seasons by Cisco Seeds of Idaho Inc.

"You try and prepare yourself for what you are about to do," he said, "but sometimes you can't see everything. I did not see the agricultural climate would continue to go down for three or four years in a row. Everybody is having a tough time in agriculture." But growers want certain answers now. ## Belts

Falls said they don't take advantage of it.

So whether a driver gets pulled over for simply not wearing a seat belt could depend on where that driver is.

Meehl's ruling says police have the right to pull a driver over if an officer can clearly see the driver isn't wearing a seat belt.

The ruling stemmed from a case against Arizona resident Jose Hernandez, who was pulled over after a Twin Falls officer noticed Hernandez's seat belt hanging from the car door, court documents say.

After pulling Hernandez over, the officer found materials and equipment that could be used to forge Social Security and immigration cards, and Hernandez was subsequently charged with forgery, according to court documents.

Defense attorneys challenged the forgery charges, partly on grounds that not wearing a seat belt is a secondary offense in Idaho. They argued that officers should not have pulled Hernandez over simply for not wearing his seat belt, court documents say.

Meehl rejected that argument. He affirmed that officers, in the absence of another offense, can't ticket drivers for not wearing seat belts. But that doesn't keep them from pulling people over, he ruled.

"When an officer observes that an individual sitting in the front seat of a moving vehicle is not wearing a seat belt, he is observing a traffic violation and may stop that vehicle," Meehl wrote.

Meehl on Wednesday said judicial ethics prevent him from discussing the case. But he did say he knew of no similar rulings elsewhere in Idaho.

Hanchev said Meehl's ruling has helped his department take a tougher stand.

"It's about as close to a primary law as we're going to get," he said.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Capt. Dan Hall said his department is following the same policy.

"We will use it for probable cause to pull somebody over," Hall said. "We do leave a lot of it open to the patrol officer's discretion, but we have been assisting the city on their seat belt emphasis."

Hanchev said Meehl's ruling applies to the entire 5th Judicial District, which includes Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Blaine, Camas, Minidoka and Cassia counties. But not all police agencies.

Idaho State Police won't pull people over for not being buckled up, said Capt. David Neal of the Twin Falls office.

"The ISP must act consistently all over the state and so far has relied solely on the letter of the seat belt law, not any particular judge's interpretation, Neal said.

"We feel that was the legislative intent—that it was a secondary offense, not a primary offense," he said.

In Jerome County, sheriff's deputies are simply spread too thin to spend much time on seat belt infractions, said Capt. Gerald Brown.

Manpower is also an issue in Burley, said Cassia County Sheriff's Capt. Cary Bristol. Though the department sometimes conducts special seat belt patrols, officers on regular duty don't use a missing seat belt as the sole reason for pulling someone over.

Filer Police Chief Cliff Johnson said his department hasn't yet taken advantage of Meehl's ruling, but he likes the idea.

"I know that Idaho is not a real leader in seat belt safety," Johnson said. "I'd like to see that improve, so maybe we'll start doing that at some point."

But that probably won't happen in some of Idaho's other cities, some police commanders said.

"What we were taught and told by our lawyers is that it's a secondary offense only," Lewiston, police Sgt. Don Blair said.

Moscow Capt. David Duke said his police in his city follow the same policy.

Boise police Sgt. Rich Fuhrman said officers in his city also don't make a habit of stopping drivers for unbuckled seat belts.

"They typically stop them for speeding or running stop signs or whatever else," he said.

That doesn't mean somebody driving around Boise without a seat belt should feel immune to getting pulled over, Fuhrman said.

"Not wearing a seat belt is a violation of law and officers can pull you over for not obeying the law," Hanchev said seat belt stops in Twin Falls have led to some arrests on drug charges and other crimes. They can also help officers spread a message of safety.

"It gives us a chance to educate people," he said.

Bankruptcy

They're wondering why they aren't on Cisco's list of unsecured creditors filed with U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

Jancik said Wednesday he doesn't know why the farmers are not listed as creditors, because as far as he knew they had filed liens.

"The only thing I know is that the growers and myself are second behind KeyBank, and we're unsecured creditors," he said.

Officials—documents don't, apparently, tell the whole story yet.

A document filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court indicates that only 42 creditors are on the list. And it says Cisco's assets are less than $50,000 with estimated debts listed between $50,001 and $100,000. That's a lot less than the amount Jancik said his company owes; and much less than farmers are expecting.

Earlier in the year, farmers organized and met with Jancik to negotiate some form of payment. Then in March, Jancik received a letter from Jancik warning a decision was imminent about a possible bankruptcy. The letter, Moyes said, also stated that the good-faith payments Jancik had made for a while stopped some time ago because the bank, a secured creditor, had demanded to be paid first.

The next news Moyes received about the bankruptcy came May 15, when paperwork arrived telling him the bankruptcy had been filed. An emergency meeting was scheduled the following morning in Boise.

Jancik said that meeting was simply to ask the court to allow him to use some of Cisco's cash flow to keep everyday bills paid so he could keep operating to pay creditors.

Moyes said he wanted to attend but didn't have enough notice.

Moyes said he's tired of waiting and would have liked a chance to say so in court. He said he's ready to move on to a Chapter 7 filing, which would shut down the business, sell off the assets and give farmers a shot at some compensation.

Jancik said, however, he has honorable intentions by filing for Chapter 11 protection. That proceeding, under federal bankruptcy law, allows a business a limited time free from creditors' collection efforts to restructure finances while operating normally under a court-approved plan. He said he'll do whatever he can to pay the farmers.

Idaho farmers in similar situations might get some assistance from the state next year.

Crime rate levels off after decade of decline declined 0.7 percent, while the numbers of rapes and assaults edged up slightly, according to statistics collected from more than 17,000 police departments nationwide.

The biggest increase came in auto thefts, which rose 2.7 percent from 1999 to 2000. Burglaries, by contrast, dropped 2.1 percent.

Nationwide, murders remain increased just 0.1 percent, while the general number of property crimes was unchanged, the FBI said.

The flat crime trend for 2000 makes a dramatic departure from the previous decade.

Criminal justice experts have attributed the previous decade's historic drops to a variety of factors, from improved police tactics to the aging of the Baby Boomer generation.

The tough times for another seed company, AgriBioTech Inc., but enough growers in spirit to spur an attempt at legislation. A proposal for a $10 million indemnity fund for growers who contract to produce a company's patented seed varieties was introduced in the House Agricultural Affairs Committee in the final days of the 2001 Legislature. Discussions were postponed, but Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, said to look for it again at the opening session.

But even if the measure pass, it will not apply retroactively. Cisco growers won't see any of the money should the company ultimately win its case in Chapter 7 proceedings, Jones said.

Moyes said he looks forward to some new legislation.

"We need some help out here," he said. "But we need these compromises. These contracts are sought after: Banks loan on them."

For now, he continues to worry about the $70,000 principal owed to him by Cisco.

"All I know is that I cannot take to the another hit like this," Moyes said.

eligible for rebate checks probably will see them in their mailboxes in September. But O'Neill said he is pushing officials at Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service to explore all options for getting the checks out before then.

"We may not be able to do better than that, but I am not satisfied that we can't get it done," O'Neill said during a brief interview session at the Treasury Department. Neither O'Neill nor Treasury officials elaborated on the possibilities.

The hope is that people will spend the money, thus providing a boost to the sagging economy.

Prosecutors ask jury to condemn two embassy bombers to death

NEW YORK (AP) — Backed by testimony from independent relatives, federal prosecutors asked a jury Wednesday to condemn to death two men convicted of mass murder in the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa.

"Justice is not done yet," Assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald told jurors. "Each of you will be convinced in the end that the only just punishment that does justice for the victims is the death penalty."

Sue Bartley — whose husband, the U.S. consul general in Nairobi, Kenya, and son were killed — later took the witness stand.

"There isn't a day that goes by that I don't think about my losses," Bartley said as family photos flashed across video screens positioned in front of the jury.

The testimony came on the first day of a penalty phase in the trial of Mohamed Rashid Daoud Al-Owhali, 24, of Saudi Arabia. A separate proceeding will follow for co-defendant Khalafan Khamis Mohamed, 27, of Tanzania.

Defense attorney David Baugh pointed at Al-Owhali and told jurors: "That young man will either be killed by you, or he will spend the rest of his life in prison in a country that is not his own."

On Tuesday, the same anonymous jury found the defendants guilty of other men guilty of plotting the Aug. 7, 1998, bombings in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, killing 224 people, including 12 Americans.

Taliban vow not to hand over billionaire

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan's ruling Taliban on Wednesday said the conviction in New York of four men for the bombing of U.S. embassies was "unfair" and vowed never to hand over Osama bin Laden, accused by the United States of masterminding the attacks.

"He is a great holy warrior of Islam and a great benefactor of the Afghan people," Abdul Anan Himat, a senior official at the Taliban information ministry, said of bin Laden, a Saudi billionaire-dissident who remains in hiding in Afghanistan.

"We won't hand him over to America under any circumstances. It is our stated policy," Himat told The Associated Press in the Afghan capital of Kabul.

A New York jury on Tuesday convicted four of bin Laden's followers of a global conspiracy to murder Americans, including the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa — that killed 224 people and injured thousands of others.

The United Nations has imposed stiff sanctions on the Taliban — a fundamentalist Islamic militia that controls 95 percent of Afghanistan — for their refusal to hand over bin Laden either to the United States or a third country for trial.

"America is using the issues of terrorism, drugs and human rights as an excuse against Afghanistan," Himat said.

Prosecutors say the bombings were ordered by Osama bin Laden, the exiled Saudi millionaire and reputed leader of the al-Qaeda terrorist organization.

Only Al-Owhali and Mohamed could face the death penalty because of their direct involvement in the bombings. Al-Owhali rode in the bomb-hauling truck in Kenya, while Mohamed helped build the Tanzania home.

No sentencing date has been set for co-defendants Wadh El-Hage, 40, of Arlington, Texas, and Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, 36, of Jordan, who could face life in prison.

Osama bin Laden

U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand said it was the first time a Manhattan federal court that a jury had been asked to decide directly whether someone should be put to death.

"It is impossible for me to overstate the importance of this decision," Sand said. In past death penalty cases in the court, dating from the 1950s and earlier, the sentence was automatically imposed upon conviction.

Powell talks about missile defense, Iraq

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Bush administration has "everything we want at this stage" from NATO allies on a contentious missile defense program, Secretary of State Colin Powell's spokesman asserted Wednesday.

"We didn't come out here with a plan, we didn't come out here for approval of a plan," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher.

NATO allies declined the day before to rally behind President Bush's plan for a national missile defense system, despite a push by Powell and other U.S. administration officials to win support for strong language acknowledging a "common threat" from missile attack on Wednesday.

Powell attended final NATO sessions on Wednesday before heading home to Washington.

The secretary of state discussed missile defense plans briefly in a 30-minute meeting with Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov, Boucher said. But the conversation was in terms of Bush's meeting in June with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

"The whole idea of missile defense will be discussed by the presidents," Boucher said.

"He didn't come with any new proposals," Boucher said, referring to reports that the Bush administration is prepared to offer Moscow a series of incentives in an attempt to win its support for the U.S. missile defense plan.

These include the U.S. purchase of Russia's S-300 surface-to-air missiles and co-operation in upgrading Russia's early warning systems.

Ivanov and Powell also talked about the Middle East, Afghanistan, and efforts by the United States and Britain to win Russian support for a series of sanctions on Iraq.

The current phase of the U.N. humanitarian "oil-for-food" program expires Sunday. So far, Russia has opposed proposed revisions in the sanctions program sought by the United States and Britain.

No agreement was reached in Budapest, but Boucher said Powell was hopeful negotiators at the United Nations in New York could reach an agreement.

Powell also talked by phone to the new U.S. envoy to the Middle East, William Burns, Boucher said, to discuss peace talks. A U.S.-

mediated meeting of Israeli and Palestinian security chiefs ended Wednesday without result.

The Bush administration failed to win NATO's support the day before for stronger language in a statement pledging to continue talks with Washington over Bush's plan for a shield against missile attack.

How Taste Works

Scientists believe the senses of taste and smell evolved to give animals the ability to detect energy-rich foods, which taste sweet or succulent, and to avoid poisonous foods, which taste bitter.

Genetics could provide flavor clues

The Washington Post

LA JOLLA, Calif. — A computer locksmith named Michael Richards punches a keyboard to search a database of chemicals kept at a biotechnology company here. With a few keystrokes, he calls up one of the more unusual inventories lists in corporate America.

"Harsh but sweet, floral-hay odor, sweet cherry-berry taste," reads the entry for a chemical called 1-acetyl-4-methyl benzene.

"Fruity-floral, weak, vanilla-like odor and taste," says another entry, for 4-methoxybenzyl acetate.

to perceive nasty smells. Some are interested in developing artificial sweeteners for use in cooking, as some of today's popular ones cannot.

In the near term, scientists envision medicines, diet sodas and coffee that have no bitter aftertaste because they would contain compounds that momentarily block the tongue's perception of bitterness. The first product from the industry might well be a cough syrup that babies can stand.

The scientists believe that they can eventually not only make ordinary products better but also — starting with compounds like those in the Senomyx stockroom — use the tools of genetics to create smells and tastes never before encountered by the human race.

Researchers foresee a time when genetics can explain precisely why one steak tastes better than another, why some people hate broccoli, but others love it, and why most of mankind goes crazy for chocolate. They envision a day, moreover, when those responses can be precisely manipulated by adding smells or tastes or suppressing old ones.

As word spreads of the potential of this work, start-up capital is flowing, and genetics companies that previously focused entirely on disease are making deals to use their knowledge in service to the new field.

Some groups that monitor food safety worry that the discipline will spur greater industrialization of agriculture and food production, separating consumers even further from real food grown on real farms. And they say new ingredients produced by molecular techniques will face major safety concerns.

Parents share son's spirit, ashes

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: The letter about a loved one's ashes touched me personally. Please accept one more letter on the subject.

Our 39-year-old son died a few years ago. Most of his ashes are buried in a veterans cemetery near his father's.

My daughter wanted some of his ashes, and I have a little container of them on my shelf, along with a ceramic guardian angel.

We returned to our home state and, like the other mom, I scattered a few of his ashes on his beloved grandmother's grave. Then we went to the river where he loved to fish as a youngster, and I dropped some of the ashes along the river's edge. Abby, I'll never forget how they sparkled like diamonds as they settled to the bottom. We were amazed at the sight.

I was a bit conflicted about dividing the ashes, but after reading your columns and seeing those "diamonds" from my son, I knew it was OK. Thanks for letting me express my thoughts.

HIS MOM IN LAS VEGAS
DEAR MOM: You're welcome. I have received some terrific letters on the subject. If other grieving families can gain comfort from your letter, it was worth the space in my column.

DEAR ABBY: Driving was my father's greatest joy and source of pride. He founded, chaired and belonged to several local sports car clubs.

His wish upon his death was to donate every usable organ, including his brain, to Parkinson's disease research, then to be cremated.

His sister (my aunt) asked to bury his ashes on their parents' gravesite. Although I knew this would not be his preference, I agreed in order to bring her some comfort. But first, I spread a few of his ashes near every exotic and sports car dealership — Ferrari, Mercedes-Benz, Alfa Romeo, etc. — in our area. I also keep a small vial of his ashes in my glove compartment. I'm nowhere near the driver he was, but at least he's still spending a fair amount of time on the road.

HUB WHEELMAN'S DAUGHTER
DEAR DAUGHTER: From your description of your father, he was also a driving force while he was alive. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When my beloved wife died at a young age, I couldn't bring myself to have her placed in a box and dropped in a hole. We were truly few spirits. Our love developed while sky-diving. We were married in a hot-air balloon. She went on to receive her own pilot's license to fly balloons, and then broke a world's record. Less than a year later, she died — not from parachuting or ballooning, but from cancer.

I had her cremated and watched the process, for it was best for closure. Her ashes were divided in two — one half released in front of our home off Marma Del Rey.

The other half was released from her balloon in the high desert where she broke the record. Whenever I see the desert or the ocean, I see her, and she is smiling.

— GEORGE E. CARMEL BY THE SEA
DEAR GEORGE E.: I'm sure she's smiling because you did exactly what she wanted. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter about the widower who wore his wife's ashes in a vial around his neck while making love to his subsequent ladyfriend, my response was, "I wish I could be married to a man that devoted to me."

My female co-worker's response: "At that age, she should be glad she's getting sex."

She should IGNORE the vial!"
— DEVOTED READER, ALTOONA, PA.
DEAR DEVOTED: Fun-ee! How little your co-worker knows about mature women — I wonder if she'll still feel that way when she's a little older.

Actor narrates anti-nuke video

OA RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Martin Sheen, a veteran anti-nuke activist, has narrated a video that encourages demonstrations against nuclear warhead production at the Y-12 Plant.

"Coming to the gates of Y-12 makes a stand for peace," Sheen says in "Stop The Bombs," a video produced by the Oak Ridge Environmental Peace Alliance.

"It helps to spread the word and create pressure to convert from nuclear weapons work to cleanup and restoration. Everyone has an important role. We can stop the bombs, but we cannot do it without you."

The Y-12 Plant, 20 miles west of Knoxville, makes parts for the MX missile system and stores highly enriched uranium used in warheads.

Exploring hospital options makes sense for county

Twin Falls County commissioners are moving in the right direction in forming their own hospital advisory group.

Commissioners first approached members of the county's Hospital Board for help in exploring all the options for leasing Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The Hospital Board voted unanimously to "respectfully decline."

Whoa, that! Hospital Board members seem to have forgotten they were appointed by the commissioners to watch out for the interests of the people of Twin Falls County - the people who occupy those hospital beds, who utilize hospital services, and who pay hospital administrators' salaries.

The board's refusal to help county commissioners in exploring all the options is an abdication of its duty. And it begs an obvious question of what, if any, role board members expect to play in the future.

Board members seem determined to look at one option only - to lease the hospital to a proposed nonprofit entity, known as a 501(c)3 corporation, for a nominal sum, and to extend negotiations with Boise's St. Luke's Regional Medical Center.

County commissioners still see that as one of the options, but they want to explore other options as well. And they want to hear from the public about what direction they'd like to see their hospital take. That doesn't seem too much to ask.

The only thing county commissioners and members of the Hospital Board seem to be able to agree on is the need to change the hospital's governance structure so that the hospital can better compete in the health care market. But they disagree on several points, including the lease payment. Hospital leaders favor a small payment, so that hospital revenue won't subsidize other county services. Commissioners say they want to know the hospital's market value before making a final decision.

Some say using hospital revenue to subsidize other county services would be like implementing a "sick tax" - that the county would be taking money from the pockets of sick people.

But let's not forget that the hospital has long been a profitable (though legally nonprofit) entity. Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has aggressively raised its rates over the years and its annual net profit margin is typically between $3.5 million and $3.8 million, which is reinvested in hospital operations.

The question isn't "whether" that profit should be returned to the public, but "how" it should be returned to the public.

County commissioners are moving to protect the community they serve. They formed their own advisory group to help create criteria for lease proposals from outside companies and nonprofits, and to help evaluate those proposals.

They also want to hold public hearings to hear more from the people who really matter and they've indicated they may put the issue to an advisory public vote.

On all these measures, we think the commissioners are on the right track. If the Hospital Board does not wish to participate in that process, the commissioner should move ahead anyway.

Leave our medical center as it is

In my opinion, the Twin Falls County commissioners are about to "kill the Goose that Laid the Golden Egg." The commissioners, though well meaning, seem motivated purely by the prospect of developing a revenue source for the county. Two of them have not been in office long enough to really grasp the complicated business of running a hospital.

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center exists to provide a facility with services to the community. The hospital, by law, is entitled to taxpayers' support through an annual mill levy. In truth, the hospital's management hasn't accepted any of this entitlement since 1979. Even without taxpayer support the hospital has been able to accumulate a cash surplus which has been necessary to cover bond requirements. This surplus exists as a result of superior management - past and present.

Why don't the commissioners seek income from other county services? The reason is they don't have a surplus. The public, if polled on the question of management, will have a variety of opinions - most of them negative as the information they have has come from The Times-News which does not support the issue.

It is interesting that the same voices that object to the proposal of placing the hospital under a locally managed, nonprofit corporation, a 501(c)3, are the same that objected to the development of our Cancer Center. 10 years ago, or would like to point out that this center was developed and paid for from the hospital surplus without a cent from the taxpayers.

The hospital is a $115 million dollar business. It has been run at approximately 2 to 3 percent profit from operations. That money has, and should be, used to maintain the facility and equipment. It's becomes necessary to spend any money to satisfy the commissioners' wants, it can come from only two sources:

READER COMMENT

- 1) The surplus, and
- 2) The patients.

What happens when the surplus is gone? Why should the sick and injured have to pay more to generate income for weed control and other county expenses? The hospital is the second largest employer in this community. Last year it provided $6 million dollars worth of services to the community, plus paying $80 per call to SIRC/COMM for a total of $94,000. In addition, they wrote off $37.9 million not collectable from Medicare, Medicaid and other third-party payers. Yes, the county commissioners paid some $2 million for indigent care, but not to MVRMC. This was paid to multiple providers such as Salt Lake City and Boise hospitals, pharmacies, etc.

Let us suppose the hospital is under lease to a for-profit XYZ company. If they have an annual lease obligation to the county, can they be expected to continue providing medical services to the community and indigents in addition, or will they be billing the county for these services? One can only assume any organization that would be involved in such a lease agreement would have intent to develop a profit. This will not be done by an altruistic attitude toward the issues. If the county expects to collect market rent, it has to expect that the company leasing the property will expect market rate for medical services it gives to the county wards.

The medical climate in Boise is an absolute nightmare. St. Al's and St. Luke's have been in increasing competition for years and this has resulted in a seriously divided medical community. Because of this, decisions for patient care are too apt to be made on the basis of allegiances rather than what is best for the patient. Now that St. Al's has a foothold in this community, I foresee Twin Falls becoming embroiled in their mess.

It has long been my contention that this community does not and has not appreciated the high quality of medicine available to them through the medical staff and employees at MVRMC. Unfortunately, the hospital does not get the same amount of attention for its accomplishments as it does for its problems.

With a nonprofit corporation, under local control, the administration will not be obligated by some of the archaic laws that limit county hospitals. As such they will be better able to compete in this ever-changing and competitive climate. County hospitals nationwide are a thing of the past. MVRMC being successful and in the "black" is one of the few exceptions. Judging from their past performance and success, why do we want to change its administration? (If it ain't broke, don't fix it.)

If a lease is required for buildings and property, I'd like to suggest the sum of $1. Please... don't kill the goose!

Hospital board wants control

The first words that came to mind after reading the most recent comments from a member of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Hospital Board were "petulant children."

You can't help but want to put them over your lap and spank some of them; or, to be more politically correct, have a severe time-out session. Not only do these folks seem to be in control of the toys, they also want control of the playground.

I support Mr. Grindstaff's efforts as an elected representative of Twin Falls County in taking the time to consider everyone's interests in his deliberations. TOM FRANK

Officer protects those on the road

I am 16 years old. I was one of Officer Ron Kirtland's Drug Awareness Resistance Education students when I was in sixth grade.

I have known him for a long time, and all the while I have also known him to be a very caring individual. I don't believe for a second that his intentions were to harass those boys.

A couple of years ago, I had a good friend of mine killed in a car accident not more than a mile from that location. Officer Kirtland was the first officer there.

He has seen what can happen to people if they don't follow the rules of the road. I'm sure you don't know how difficult it is to tell a family that someone has died in an accident. All he was doing was bringing to their attention that they could have gotten themselves and others hurt or killed. The only reason somebody might get pulled over is if they are endangering their lives or the lives of others.

The motto of all law enforcement agencies around the world is "To Serve and Protect."

That is what I believe Officer Kirtland was doing - protecting them as well as others on the road. I also believe that any officer of the Twin Falls County sheriff's department would have done the same because they care, all of them. I know none of them like to respond to a crash and see a child or teen-age dead because of a foolish mistake like not stopping.

Speaking as a youth, I can say that we (the youth) are the future and, without protection and guidance by officers of cities, counties, the state and all adults, we will not amount to much.

It is the duty and responsibility of the officers of the Twin Falls County sheriff's department to assure the safety of all citizens.

I think you have exaggerated. I don't think Officer Kirtland would have thrown himself in front of a vehicle going 50 mph to stop them in the middle of the road.

Bush acts as American dictator

Americans love a dictator. Now we have one of our very own. The Shah, Samozza, Marcos, Noriega and Pinochet, all fattened U.S. corporate greed with blood; what we laughingly call "exporting democracy."

Milosevic stole his election, gave it to his cronies to "certify" while claiming his opponent's win "unconstitutional." When courageous citizens filled the streets, he fled, his fraud revealed.

Bush's thugs used Slobo's tactics; briefs, intimidation, death threats and a media power blitz to slow and halt a legal recount. Jeb Bush and Katherine Harris fraudulently violated the U.S. Voting Rights Act and Florida law to disenfranchise 200,000 legal voters. They were either not allowed to vote or had their votes not counted. Blacks were kept from "voting while black" institutionalized racism is a crime.

to vote for their own personal agenda; their own personal gain. Two, Thomas and Scalia, had family members working for the Bush campaign. O'Connor was the most honest; "a Gore win is a disaster!" Seems she would be forced to live four more years to retire to Arizona, forget fairness and justice. Never in our 200-year history had this court ever questioned voting standards. Gore won Florida, Gore won the national vote; the court's corruption made a mockery of our "democracy" by turning our election into their "selection."

The so-called Bush "mandate," like the man himself, is a fraud, stolen from the majority of American voters.

While some Republicans with integrity protested this theft, we hear a loud silence from Idaho's super patriots - wrapped in the complacent ignorance of the flag, bible, buck; some of whom claim to have once fought for "democracy." Living this lie, they insist they "won," that this theft of our constitutional right to vote and

So dictator-loving America now has its very own in-home right-wing dictator! Seems what goes around comes around - home.

CALDWELL — Reagan Rossi, an assistant coach at Kentucky's Morehead State, was named head women's basketball coach at Albertson College on Friday. She replaces Todd Corman, who resigned to become an Oregon State assistant.

Rossi was an assistant coach for the Coyotes from 1995 through 1997 before taking the Morehead State job. The Mukwonago, Wis., native also spent a season as an assistant at Georgetown College in Kentucky.

Basketball Hall of Fame adds three new faces

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Moses Malone, among the first to go straight from high school to the pros, and college coaches Mike Krzyzewski and John Chaney are joining the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The three — one of the smallest groups in years — will be inducted Oct. 5, Hall of Fame President John Doleva said Wednesday. Malone, among the most dominating centers in the game, jumped from Petersburg (Va.) High School to the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association in 1974 at the age of 19. He went on to play 21 years in the ABA and NBA.

Moses Malone, Mike Krzyzewski, John Chaney

“It is an honor to think people consider me a great player,” Malone said. “I never considered myself a great player. I considered myself a hard worker.”

The 6-foot-10 Malone became the third leading rebounder in NBA history — behind Wilt Chamberlain and Bill Russell — with 16,212, and the NBA's fifth leading scorer with 27,404 points. He also ranks third in games played with 1,321, second in free-throw attempts with 11,090, and first in free throws made with 8,531.

A 12-time NBA All-Star, he led the Philadelphia 76ers to the 1983 NBA championship and was selected the MVP of the NBA Finals.

He also played for Houston, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Washington and San Antonio.

Krzyzewski won his third national championship at Duke this spring. He has amassed a 606-223 record in 21 seasons of coaching at Duke, where he also won NCAA titles in 1991-92, and four seasons at Army.

The 68-year-old Chaney has coached 29 years.

He won a Division II national championship with Cheyney State in 1976. Since taking over Temple in 1982, he has led the Owls to 18 postseason tournament appearances and five NCAA regional finals.

Coaches are eligible for induction after 25 seasons of coaching, while players must be retired for at least five years.

A person needs 18 of 24 votes from the Honors Committee to be inducted.

Eric Snow leads team over Milwaukee despite broken ankle

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — After finding out earlier in the day that his sprained ankle was actually broken, Eric Snow decided to take a huge risk and play anyway.

Without him, the 76ers couldn't have won. Snow, obviously limping at times, hit two jump shots in the final two minutes for Philadelphia's final four points and the 76ers overcame another poor shooting performance by Allen Iverson to beat the Milwaukee Bucks 83-69 Wednesday night in Game 5 of the Eastern Conference finals.

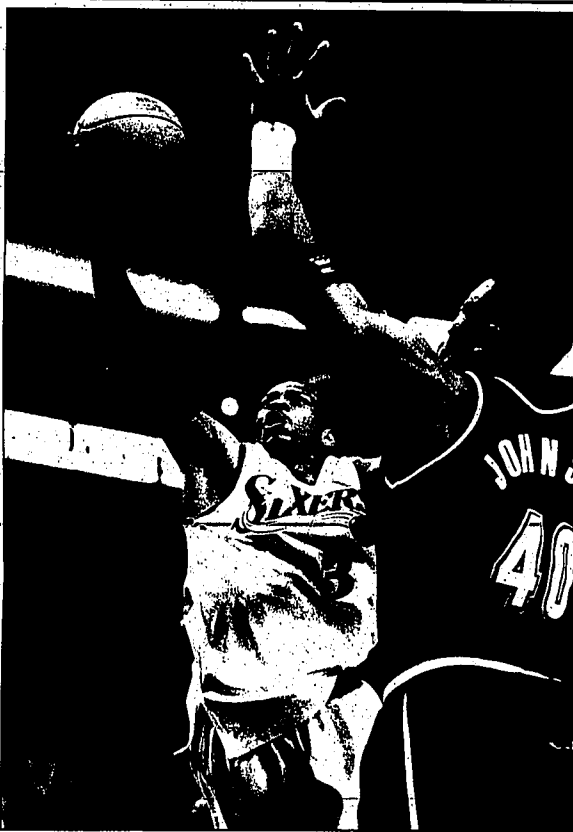

The victory wasn't assured until Glenn Robinson missed a 10-footer from the baseline and Ray Allen missed a tip-in at the buzzer. Iverson finished just 5-for-27, but Snow shot 7-for-9 in scoring 18 points as the 76ers added another chapter to their season-long story of overcoming whatever problems might occur.

The series resumes Friday night at Milwaukee, where the 76ers will try to advance and face the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Finals.

Dikembe Mutombo of the 76ers had his best game of the series with 21 points, 13 rebounds and 5-for-5 shooting from the foul line, while Aaron McKie added 15 points and had four of Philadelphia's 13 steals.

The Sixers, who trailed by as many as 16 points in the first half, needed all they could

Trapping Devils upset Avalanche

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — There's a team that's spitting mad in the Stanley Cup finals and it's not the New Jersey Devils.

The Devils, embarrassed at how easily Colorado took them apart in Game 1, came out with their customary attitude and intensity Tuesday night to even the series with a 2-1 victory that saw them play their style of hockey, not the Avalanche's.

Now it's Colorado that's angry, with itself for blowing a chance to take control of the series.

There were no end-to-end rushes, no open ice, no sequence of odd-man rushes.

As in Colorado's 5-0 romp in Game 1, instead, the Devils got goals from role players Bob Corkum and Turner Stevenson to take their first lead of the series, then shut down the Avalanche for the next 40 minutes with their dreadfully effective neutral zone trap.

It may be painfully dull to watch, but it can't be denied that the Devils are as difficult to score against as any team in hockey when they are in their full trapping mode. It's a mode the Avalanche know they will see again in Game 3.

Martinez returns to winning ways

Red Sox take second marquee pitchers duel

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez is back to his winning ways against the New York Yankees.

More than a year after he last beat Boston's biggest nemesis, Martinez struck out 13 in eight innings to lead the Red Sox over Mike Mussina and New York 3-0.

The difference this time wasn't so much Martinez (7-1) — or Mussina (5-5), who allowed just four hits and struck out 11. Instead it was timely hitting by the Boston batters, who supported their ace with more runs than they had scored in five of his six starts against the Yankees since he last beat them last May 28.

Brian Daubach's two-run double in the second was the big hit for Boston.

Miguel Tejada also hit a three-run homer as the Athletics pounded Albie Lopez (3-6), who lost his fifth straight decision, and the Devil Rays' bullpen for 17 hits.

Mark Mulder (7-2) won his fifth straight decision despite allowing nine hits in five innings. Oakland stopped a three-game losing streak.

FAMILIAR FRENCH DRAMA

Roddick defeats compatriot Chang in marathon match

The Associated Press

PARIS — Andy Roddick overcame cramps that had him jerking in pain between points and won a dramatic five-setter over Michael Chang in the second round of the French Open on Wednesday.

Roddick's 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-7 (5), 7-5 victory came on the same court where Chang had to battle severe cramps himself when he beat Ivan Lendl in the fourth round on his way to becoming the youngest French Open men's champion in 1989 at 17 years, 3 months.

“That's one of my first memories of tennis, that match against Lendl,” Roddick said after beating Chang. “It definitely crossed my mind. I thought that was pretty ironic.”

“It was like a fairy tale,” the 18-year-old Roddick said.

After Chang's backhand sailed wide for the final point of the 3-hour, 50-minute match, Roddick threw his clay-stained baseball cap into the crowd, then ripped his shirt apart in what has become the trademark of his skyrocketing career.

Court says search was legitimate

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls police detectives were within their rights to search a drug suspect's garbage cans in 1998, according to a ruling handed down Wednesday by the Idaho Supreme Court.

Detectives did not violate the rights of Michael McCall of Twin Falls by searching garbage cans that McCall had set out for collection by his home, according to a statement released by the Supreme Court.

Defense attorneys for McCall, who was subsequently charged with felony drug possession, argued that the garbage can search violated his rights according to the Idaho Constitution.

District Court Judge Roger Burdick later ruled that the search was not unconstitutional, and the evidence found during the search could be used against McCall.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday affirmed Burdick's decision.

Companies seek old cell phones for donation

TWIN FALLS - Some local companies have teamed up to gather old cellular phones to be donated for emergency use for the elderly or disabled.

The cell phones will be passed along to the office of the Twin Falls County sheriff and the Crisis Center of the Magic Valley, according to a press release from Stevens Pierce & Associates. That company, along with Verizon Wireless, Business Account Manager Brenda Lawler and the Jerome radio station Mix 103 will be accepting donated phones.

Phones can be dropped off at the Mix 103 tent near the bandshell in Twin Falls City Park during the Western Days celebration on Saturday. Phones also can be dropped off at the Stevens Pierce & Associates office at 600 Main Ave. N. in Twin Falls. Call the office at 734-8662 or Lawler at 420-2007 for more information.

The sheriff's office trains people in the proper use of emergency cell phones before giving the phones, said department spokeswoman Nancy Howell.

The proper use of the phones is important, because emergency dispatchers cannot track the location of a cell phone call if the caller is in a city-wide clean-up day Saturday.

Nearly all types of unwanted items may be deposited in dumpsters that will be parked at the city maintenance yard on Highway 20. Items that will not be accepted are tires, toxic materials such as garden chemicals and refrigerated units that have not had the compressors and refrigerant removed.

Kimberly residents are also being reminded that the summer water conservation program begins Friday.

Hearings that were scheduled for Kimberly's last regular city council meeting, which was canceled, will be heard at the June 12 meeting, which is scheduled for 7 p.m.

O'Leary teachers take top honors for program

TWIN FALLS - Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School seventh-grade teachers Marjorie Atkins and Marita DeBoard have won the 2001 Teams That Make a Difference Award, sponsored by Prentice Hall and the National Middle School Association.

They were honored for their "Awesome Advisory" program that serves as a model to assist teachers in better connecting with and advising students.

As part of the award, Atkins and DeBoard will present the program at the NMSA conference in Washington, D.C., in November and will be honored at a luncheon. A $3,000 honorarium will help pay for travel and program expenses, according to a Twin Falls School District press release.

AT&T has been working with Jerome Development a little over a year to construct the kind of system needed to bring the type of companies the city wants to draw.

The company will officially announce the opening of the new system today at a ceremony in the Con Paulos car dealership conference room. AT&T technicians and local officials will be on hand to discuss the PoP and its implications for the region. The gathering begins at 10 a.m. and should last until noon.

Although the PoP will increase the telecommunications capability of businesses in the region, typical household Internet access will not be noticeably different.

PULL OVER (FOR A REWARD)

Twin Falls police officer Craig Stotts gives Kallie Blackwood a gift certificate as a reward for driving safely in a school zone. Blackwood said, after being involved in a crash last week, being recognized as a good driver 'felt great.' The police department plans to give out prizes once more this summer.

T.F. officers offer kudos to good drivers

By Mark Helz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Kallie Blackwood of Twin Falls said, when she first spotted a motorcycle cop's flashing lights behind her, it scared her.

"I was thinking, 'No way, you've got to be kidding,'" she said.

Still a little shaken by her involvement last week in a fender bender, Blackwood said she was worried when Twin Falls Police Sgt. Matt Hicks approached her car. "Until she found out Hicks was there to reward her for wearing her seatbelt and driving well in front of Twin Falls High School."

Hicks, the commander of the department's traffic division, and officer Craig Stotts pulled over several drivers near the high school Wednesday afternoon. But instead of handing out tickets or warnings, they congratulated the drivers for following the rules. Hicks and Stotts also rewarded the good drivers with passes to local golf courses or certificates for food at local restaurants. "Through some drivers were surprised or a little worried at first, the rewards program seemed to be working well as a public relations tool for officers," Hicks said.

"A couple of people have looked at us kind of funny at first, but once they figure out what's going on, they are very receptive to it."

Driver Cheryl Lowman of Twin Falls said getting a reward was a pleasant surprise for her.

"I wasn't worried when I got pulled over because I was doing everything right anyway." Hicks said officers Wednesday were mostly looking for people wearing seatbelts and obeying the school zone speed limit, because people not buckling up and going too fast near schools seem to be chronic problems in Twin Falls.

Two other major problems officers often see are drivers making sudden, improper lane changes and tailgating, he said. Those infractions are the cause behind most traffic accidents in Twins Falls. "I wasn't worried when I got pulled over because I was doing everything right anyway." Hicks said officers Wednesday were mostly looking for people wearing seatbelts and obeying the school zone speed limit, because people not buckling up and going too fast near schools seem to be chronic problems in Twin Falls.

Neighbors try to keep hikers' vehicles out

KETCHUM - Neighbors considered posting a sign warning "Active Rifle Range." Maybe even a "Beware of Bears" sign would do the trick, considering bears have been known to help themselves to the goodies in neighborhood freezers.

But instead, it's going to be Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling and his posse riding to the rescue to prevent a small enclave north of Ketchum from getting overrun with hikers, bicyclists and other tourists.

Femling has sworn to enforce parking restrictions to protect

Ranger district

The Ketchum Ranger District partnered with the Sun Valley Company to trim out another public access dispute earlier this year.

The Sun Valley Company agreed to pony up half of the $50,000 needed to put a second bridge over Trail Creek so that hikers and bicyclists will not wade through weddings and other functions at the Trail Creek Cabin to use the bridge there. The ranger district was awarded a grant to cover the rest of the project from the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department two weeks ago and is putting the project out to bid.

Ranger Kurt Nelson said he hopes to have the bridge in place by next spring.

He tried the voluntary route, putting notices in people's windshields. But that hasn't worked, so we're going to have to try a new route."

The epicenter of the dispute is the end of the trail - or, rather, the beginning of the hiking and bicycling trail - on Chocolate Gulch Road, a few miles north of Ketchum.

When the Forest Service proposed constructing a hiking trail in the area in 1985, residents were told there would be no parking there, said Prudence Blake, who has lived in the gulch for 26 years. Residents of the eclectic neighborhood, which features artist Rod Kagan's sculpture forest and a number of unusual homes, agreed to a limited amount of parking five years ago.

The result: An unobtrusive parking lot. Please see HIKERS, Page C3

Police remember former Cassia sheriff; funeral to take place today

By Ruth Streater
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Former Cassia County Sheriff Ray Mitchell is still being remembered for his service to the public, long after he retired from his post.

Mitchell, 89, died Sunday at Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

Those who knew him in law enforcement circles say his enthusiasm for serving the public and working with people was always obvious. "He always had the best interest of the people in mind," said Cassia County Under-Sheriff Cary Bristol, who worked under Mitchell the last four years of his tenure.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. today in the chapel of the First LDS Church, located at 96 S. 200 W. in Burley. The interment will be at Pleasant View Cemetery.

Friends may call at the church from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Mitchell was elected sheriff in 1961 and served for 23 years, until he retired in 1984.

He was a good man to work for and a good sheriff, Bristol said. "I'm sure if he ran again, he could've got voted in," Bristol added.

Mitchell had a good rapport with the public, recalled Cassia County Sheriff Jim Hignens, who worked for the Burley Police Department while Mitchell was sheriff. Burley police and county law enforcement did not merge until 1986.

"Ray was really a great guy, was outgoing, really friendly," Hignens said. Originally from Shelley, Mitchell moved to Burley when he was 8 and later graduated from Burley High School.

Gooding to send disaster letter

By Almee Metcal
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Gooding City Superintendent Todd Bunn asked county commissioners at Tuesday's meeting to sign a drought disaster declaration. Bunn said it would be beneficial to farmers, as well as to the city of Gooding.

Lori Capps, Gooding County Disaster Services representative, was asked to type a letter to the governor so the commissioners could sign it as soon as possible. Commissioner Tom Faulkner moved to have the declaration written and signed.

In April, Capps requested a declaration letter be sent to the governor concerning the water shortage in Gooding. At that time the commission said a declaration could not be declared before an actual shortage, and advised a wait-and-see attitude.

Trial begins in detective's suit

DENVER (AP) - A former detective who is suing the Boulder Police Department mislabeled the JonBenet Ramsey investigation and then asked her bosses to publicly defend her, the department's attorney said Wednesday.

"The department could not lie to the public because the department was quite well aware she had made mistakes," attorney Ted Halaby said in his opening statement in a civil suit filed by Linda Arndt.

Arndt, 40, filed a lawsuit alleging two police chiefs violated her rights by prohibiting her from challenging media reports that implied she bungled the investigation. Neither chief disputed the false reports, she claimed. She is seeking unspecified damages.

Other investigators also made mistakes after 6-year-old JonBenet's death, Halaby said. He said will take up to a year before he has concluded the successful prosecution of a suspect.

Arndt's attorney said the department prevented her from defending herself against lies in the media about her handling of the investigation, irreparably harming her reputation.

"Because she was forced to stand mute, a woman who was known for her compassion, competence and credibility now trims trees for eight bucks an hour and will never be a cop again," Judith Biggs, Arndt's lawyer said.

Biggs said Arndt was a devoted public servant but police made her a scapegoat. She said Arndt's name eventually became associated with "the bungler of the Ramsey investigation."

While the department defended others in the case, it never spoke out for Arndt, Biggs said. That caused her health problems and emotional suffering as well as damaging her career, she said.

Halaby said the police department could not defend Arndt in the media because she had made mistakes in the investigation and because the department did not publicly defend what individual investigators were doing.

He said he would show that Arndt failed to protect the crime scene and evidence - in part by moving the body after it had been moved once before - and made other mistakes.

He said he would argue that Arndt's "personality shortcomings," including difficulty participating in teamwork, were at the root of the reasons she was taken off the investigation and reassigned.

Arndt was the first detective at the Ramsey home on Dec. 26, 1996, after Patsy Ramsey called 911 and reported her daughter was kidnapped. For nearly three hours, Arndt was the only detective at the home, watching the parents and their friends.

Arndt was criticized for allowing John Ramsey to search the home without an accompanying police officer and for placing a blanket over his daughter's body, possibly contaminating evidence. She also was criticized for not taking statements immediately from the Ramseys.

Jeremy is happiest when busy

Personality: Jeremy is a fun and likable boy who is happiest when he is busy. His foster mother has helped him find confidence in his abilities through lots of sports activities and hobbies.

Last year was his first year of playing baseball. He received a trophy for most improved player. Jeremy also sold the most candy in his league, winning $100 in prize money. He is proud of reaching his goal of buying an electronic game with hard-earned savings. Goal-setting, encouragement and rewards are what this young man needs and deserves.

Interests: Besides baseball and playing third base, Jeremy enjoys basketball, bowling, Legos, Pokemon, biking, Nintendo and going to movies.

Needs: Jeremy's life has been filled with many disappointments. His parents struggled with substance abuse, before and after his birth. After numerous foster care placements and disruption from an adoptive family who kept his sister, Jeremy has struggled with self-esteem and anger. Although Jeremy has worked through many behaviors related to grief and loss, his adoptive parents will need to maintain flexibility and patience during adoption transitions. He needs and wants someone who will encourage his abilities and stay the course with him. Jeremy has made tremendous strides in communicating his feelings, working towards goals and following directions. He needs a single parent or couple who will set clear boundaries and earn his trust. Oregon's services to children and families has agreed to provide mediation for maintaining limited contact with important family members. Adoption assistance and purchase of service are available.

Generosity of couple helps build up Valley class funds

We, the Sophomore Class of Valley High School, would like to take this time to express our gratitude to Mike and Wendy Standley. They provided us with the opportunity to sell concessions at Agri-Service Equipment on their property on April 24. They then generously donated hamburger and other supplies to our cause, and all members of their family worked with us to make the sale a great success.

Without their generosity, first of all, we wouldn't have the option to participate and, without their contributions, we would not have made the money that we did for our class fund.

Blaine County school program teaches material in Spanish and English

By Pat Marracontino Times-News writer

KETCHUM - "This is the height of what you can achieve as a bilingual teacher, teaching a class like this," Heidi Copeland said.

She described a new program in the Blaine County School District that focuses on teaching youngsters English and Spanish for a higher proficiency in both.

The school district wrote a federal Title VII grant for $169,000 for three years to implement the two-way dual-language-immersion program, said Copeland, an English-as-a-second-language teacher at Hemingway Elementary and the school's program coordinator. The district was the only one in Idaho to receive a grant.

The program will start this fall in one kindergarten class at Hemingway and two in Bellevue. Each class will have English- and Spanish-speaking students. Parents had to sign up their children for the classes, which are limited to 20 to 22 students per teacher.

"We've just had incredible response. It's very gratifying in a way," Copeland said. In fact, the classes are closed to new applications, and there is even a waiting list.

The program is academically and linguistically rigorous, she added. Lessons are taught either in Spanish or English for maximum concentration of the student. If a lesson is taught in English, for example, teachers rarely translate in Spanish, allowing second language to occur naturally. However, the lesson review might be taught in Spanish.

The goals are for the child to reach a high level of proficiency and high academic expectations in both languages, in addition to implementing positive cross-cultural attitudes and behaviors.

Benefits include children becoming bilingual and biliterate and gaining a sense of cultural awareness for their own and other cultures, the district says.

The program also prepares young people to contribute to a complex and diverse society, and challenges them academically.

The dual immersion program will start next fall in a kindergarten class like this one in Bellevue. The program focuses on teaching students in English and Spanish so they can master both languages.

Numerous studies have documented the cognitive benefits of learning a second language at a young age, Copeland said. Bilingual students perform better on tasks calling for divergent thinking, pattern recognition, logic and problem solving.

Spanish speakers derive the same cognitive and developmental benefits of learning a second language, plus start out with a solid academic base, the district said. "For my kids, the ESL kids, it raises their confidence in their own language," Copeland said.

Native English-speaking children become English-language models for native Spanish speakers and vice-versa as the children work side by side to master both languages, the district said. Being bilingual is a wonder and should be treated as an asset, not a problem, Copeland said.

In another year, the district will continue the program into first grade, and then second grade and eventually, through the fifth grade, she said.

CAMP student finds balance at Boise State

By Pat Pyke Boise State News Services

Mayra Calderon balances between two worlds.

In the world of her heritage, she hoed beans and harvested potatoes with her family and other migrant farm workers in fields around Burley. In the world of her future, she envisions herself as a businesswoman for a multinational company, providing a cultural bridge between the United States and Mexico.

For Calderon, a junior major-

ing in international business and minor in Spanish and American studies, Boise State is the fulcrum providing her balance point.

"When I was looking to go to school, Boise State was the only one that offered international business here in Idaho," she says.

Another draw to Boise State was CAMP (College Assistance Migrant Program), which provided a scholarship along with social and academic support to help her make the transition from struggling immigrant to urban college student.

Calderon's family emigrated to the Burley area 10 years ago from the Mexican state of Michoacan, in search of educational opportunities and a better life for their children.

Calderon has made the most of her opportunities and helped others along the way. Her extensive community service earned her the first annual Meredith Burris/Martin Luther King Jr. scholarship.

In addition to carrying a full course load, Calderon works full-time as a teller at First Security Bank, serves as president of Boise State's active Latino student club (Organization de Estudiantes Latino-Americanos), participates in numerous activities at the Boise State Multi-Cultural Center and is married to Ricardo Calderon, a junior majoring in civil engineering at Boise State.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Ameristar Casinos Inc. offers exchange

LAS VEGAS - Ameristar Casinos Inc., a major Magic Valley employer, announced it has commenced its offer to exchange up to $380 million principal amount of newly issued 10 3/4 percent senior subordinated notes due 2009, for a like amount of its outstanding privately placed 10 3/4 percent senior subordinated notes due 2009.

The offer and withdrawal rights are expected to expire June 25, Ameristar said.

The Las Vegas-based gaming company this week also said W. Bruce Turner, chairman of the board for GTECH Holdings Corp., was appointed to Ameristar's board of directors and to the board's audit and compensation committees.

GTECH is a leading supplier of online lottery systems and services. Prior to serving as GTECH's chairman, Turner was a widely recognized and highly respected analyst in the gaming and leisure industry, Ameristar said. Institutional investor magazine recently ranked him as the preeminent global analyst in the field. Gaming & Wagering magazine called him one of the "25 most powerful people in the gaming industry."

"Ameristar has recently entered a period of dynamic growth. As a result, the company has been searching for a director with outstanding financial credentials," said Ameristar Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer Craig H. Neilson.

Carpenter brotherhood signs multiyear contract

BOISE - The United Brotherhood of Carpenters signed its first multi-year contract in 15 years Wednesday, and both carpenters and contractors said it sets a standard for future working relationships.

The contract between 150 union members and four building contractors holds wages steady for the coming year but adds 90 cents an hour to the fringe benefit package for workers. That includes a 50-cent-an-hour contribution to individual savings plans that workers can use anyway they want. A journeyman union carpenter currently makes $15.50 an hour plus $4.60 in fringes. The contract can be renegotiated next spring for review of wage provisions.

Union officials said nonunion carpenters in the region make between $8 and $16 an hour with little or nothing in the way of fringe benefits. The contract with LOMBAC Construction Services, Precision Steel & Cypson, S & T Drywall and Superior Interior comes less than a year after the union reopened its training facility in Boise after a 15-year hiatus.

A dime of the 90-cent increase in fringe benefits under the new contract will go to support apprentice and journeyman training.

"There is a growing shortage of trained skilled construction workers in this region, and our agreement with the UBC will go a long way toward creating the work force we need," Chris Lombardo of LOMBAC Construction said.

American Skilling Co. to sell resort, cut jobs

PORTLAND, Maine - American Skilling Co. announced Wednesday it will sell Colorado's Steamboat resort and cut jobs to reduce its debt load and operating costs.

Under the restructuring, 70 full-time jobs will be eliminated and another 160 full-time jobs will be converted to seasonal jobs company-wide in an attempt to save $5 million a year, said William "B.J." Fair, the company's chief executive officer.

It was not an easy decision for the company to put Steamboat on the market, Fair said. "Steamboat is an outstanding property and a premier ski resort destination. The decision to sell the resort was very difficult," Fair said in a statement issued from the company's headquarters in Newry, Maine.

American Skilling has invested heavily in the Canyonlands area in Utah. The decision to sell Steamboat underscores a resolve to maximize resources and create shareholder value, Fair said. Credit Suisse First Boston has been retained to assist in the sale.

In addition to Steamboat and The Canyons, American Skilling holds Sugarloaf and Sunday River in Maine; Altitude and Bear River in New Hampshire; Killington, Mount Snow and Sugarbush in Vermont; and Heavenly in California and Nevada.

ADM to build near Eden

By Diane Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The Eden-Hazelton area will get a badly needed financial shot in the arm soon, local economic leaders say, because the Archer Daniels Midland Co. plans to build a transfer facility near Eden.

David Squires, representing ADM, headquartered in Decatur, Ill., received a special-use permit from Jerome County's planning and zoning commission Tuesday evening.

Squires told the commission ADM plans to build a 100-by-600-foot, totally enclosed warehouse on 125 acres about 150 feet north of Idaho Highway 25 on the 1700 East Road, behind a sugar beet dump, just east of Eden. The location was selected because it has railroad access. The proposed facility will house chemicals and ingredients used to make ADM products, Squires said.

Although best known for its animal feed, ADM makes ingredients used in food, fuel and feed - such as amino acids, sweeteners, chocolate and nutraceuticals.

Most of the product to be stored in the Eden warehouse will be in powdered form, not liquid. The warehouse will be strictly for storage; there will be no processing of feed at the warehouse. Products will be shipped to other destinations, he said.

ADM said it has manufacturing, sales and distribution facilities in 26 states and offices worldwide.

A railroad spur long enough to park 25 railroad cars at a time will be built in the warehouse's yard. Railroad cars will be brought in in the morning, loaded with product and shipped out in the evening. Trucks will also be used for the shipping, the company said.

ADM has four employees for the Eden warehouse and plans to employ about 10 by the time the warehouse opens for business. "Hopefully by January," Squires said.

Planning and zoning commissioner Xenia Williams expressed concern about dust and increased traffic in the rural area.

Squires said enclosing the warehouse will help keep dust down for neighbors.

ADM will work with the Hillsdale Highway District to bring the 1700 East Road from Highway 25 to just past the warehouse yard's entrance about 250 feet - up to industry specifications to handle the increased truck traffic in and out of the warehouse, Squires said.

AAA ranks Idaho as a good bargain

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Idaho has become an even better summer travel vacation bargain than it was a year ago, slipping from 41st to 43rd in the American Automobile Association's 50-state ranking in the daily lodging and accommodation costs for a family of four.

On average, U.S. travelers will need to budget 5 percent more for vacations this year, the highest increase in the daily lodging and accommodation costs for a family of two adults and two children can expect to pay an average of $223 per day for food and lodging. Lodging rates will average $113 a night, up 55 from last year. Meals will cost $110, also up 55 percent.

But in Idaho, that same package costs $189, up just a dollar from a year ago, and $34 less than the U.S. average tab. By essentially maintaining its already low per-day price tag, Idaho slipped two spots in the annual 50-state ranking. Two years ago, Idaho ranked 39th.

"Idaho is a great travel bargain as a destination both for out-of-staters and locals hoping to get more value for their travel dollars," said Dave Carlson, Idaho/Oregon AAA spokesman. "Magnificent scenery and abundant recreation make Idaho a picture-perfect vacation destination."

In the past 10 years, the average cost of meals and lodging nationally has increased by 24 percent. That figure is modest, compared with previous decades. From 1981-1991, those costs rose 105 percent; from 1971-1981, the increase was 167 percent.

Idaho's lodging costs average $92, down a dollar from a year ago; food costs rose $2 to $97 for a family of four.

The least expensive vacation in the United States, unchanged from last year, is in North Dakota, where food and lodging will cost an average family of four $167 per day.

The most expensive, also unchanged from 2000, is Hawaii at $417 per day.

"We recommend that vacationers traveling by car should budget $7.50 per gallon, Idaho slipped two spots on a national basis, said Carlson. That's based on an average price of $1.70 a gallon and a vehicle traveling 23 miles per gallon.

Counseling center expands

The Times-News

HAILEY - Canyon View Psychiatric and Addiction Services of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Wednesday announced expansion of its services to the Wood River, Valley Falls and Twin Falls center said it has purchased Project Respect Substance Abuse and Addiction Services in Hailey.

"Canyon View has been providing outpatient psychiatric and addiction services to the residents of Blaine County for more than 15 years," said Bill Southwick, MVRMC's administrative director for mental health services, in a statement. "This is an important step to improve the access to mental health and substance abuse services. It will expand the effectiveness of MVRMC's coordinated effort with the mental health providers in the area."

Project Respect Substance Abuse and Addiction Services, under MVRMC, will continue to provide substance-abuse treatment services including drug and alcohol evaluations, individual counseling, intensive outpatient programs and other services for adults and adolescents, the company-owned Twin Falls hospital said.

Kevin Boender, director of Project Respect, said in a statement that the joint venture will help expand the scope and effectiveness of services to complement the current outpatient treatment programs for people with substance-abuse and mental health problems and their families.

Plans for the counseling center call for an extension of community needs in the Wood River Valley. Counseling center staff will then design additional programs and services to meet those needs.

Project Respect is at 317 S. River No. 1 in Hailey and can be reached at 788-2204. An open house will be held soon.

Study: Construction drives Blaine economy

Analysis shows that tourism is as important as ever

By Karen Bosack
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - It's official. Tourism and construction are still the engines that drive Blaine County, according to an economic analysis for Blaine County unveiled Wednesday.

A third of the county's total employment is tourist-related. Project Manager Leon Alisk said 100-plus Sun Valley-area business owners and others.

Visitor spending directly generated 4,260 jobs or 26 percent of the total employment in 2000, compared with 3,960 jobs or 25 percent of total employment in 1991. An additional 290 jobs were related to construction of vacation homes.

A total, visitor spending contributed directly and indirectly to nearly 6,000 jobs and $120 million in earnings in 2000, or 37 percent of all employment, the analysis said.

"We have thought the percentage of the economy influenced by tourism might have gotten smaller over the past 10 years. We had people saying we're becoming a retirement community. But the study showed that tourism is, in fact, as important as ever," said Carol Waller, director of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce.

The study also shows the Sun Valley area is a little more balanced than its competitors and less affected by fluctuations in the national economy, said Sun Valley Co. General Manager Wally Hoffman.

The economic study was prepared for the chamber by Dean Runyan Associates, a Portland, Ore., research firm that has done travel research for 15 years. The complete study, expected to be available early next week, was commissioned to analyze how Blaine County's economy has changed over the past 10 years.

Among the findings:

- Employment has kept pace with population growth. Blaine County has grown to about 19,000 people, an increase of 40 percent over 1990. There are about 17,000 full- and part-time jobs, up from 12,000 in 1990. That's an increase of 3.5 percent per year.

The bulk of jobs are in personal-trade and services - goods and services purchased by tourists - and construction.

- Per capita income in Blaine

Construction employment, such as that shown here in Golden Eagle, generated $75 million - or 49 percent of all earnings - in Blaine County last year.

For copies of the study

The full 88-page "Economic Analysis - Blaine County" is expected to be available by early next week. For a copy, contact the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce or Dean Runyan Associates' Web site at www.deanrunyan.com

County increased substantially over the past decade, growing from $25,000 to more than $40,000. It grew from $16,000 to $23,000 statewide.

The average annual earnings per job also overtook and surpassed the Idaho average during that time.

The average employee in Blaine County made $28,007 in 1999, compared with $26,802 in the state.

Blaine County residents earned $259 million, or 36 percent of their total, in the form of interest, dividends and rent during 1999.

The average Idahoan made just 19 percent from such sources. Earnings from self-employment amounted to $109 million in 1999. That's 23 percent of all earned income in the county, compared with 17 percent for the state.

Personal trade and services generated $125 million or more than one-fourth of all earnings in Blaine County in 2000, compared with one-eighth for the state. Construction employment generated $75 million or almost 19 percent of all earnings in Blaine County in 2000. It generated 8 percent for the state as a whole.

Manufacturing, mining, agriculture and other non-service-oriented employment accounted for only 15 percent of Blaine County earnings, compared with 36 percent for Idaho.

As expected, about 70 percent of all jobs in the county are in Ketchum and Sun Valley. Half - or about 6,000 - of the workers commute from Hailey, Bellevue and points south.

Fifty percent of the commuters hail from Hailey and Bellevue; 28 percent from Ketchum; 10 percent from Sun Valley; 6 percent from other communities and a predominantly-resident work force from outside the county, predominantly from the Twin Falls area.

Fifty-six percent of the businesses are in Ketchum, 27 percent in Hailey, 12 percent in Bellevue, 3 percent in Sun Valley and 2 percent in other parts of Blaine County.

Housing is getting less affordable even in Hailey and Bellevue. The average sale price of a new home has increased at a higher rate than earnings or personal income, even though between 200 and 400 new housing units were constructed each year during the past decade.

The average sale price of a new home increased between 8 and 9 percent per year, compared with a 4.8 percent increase in average earnings per year. It took five times the average earnings to buy a home in Hailey or Bellevue a decade ago; it takes seven times the average earnings now.

The average price of a new residence in 2000 was $1 million in Sun Valley and Ketchum, $715,000 in midvalley and a $218,000 in Hailey and Bellevue.

Blaine County has a relatively diversified local economy compared with other resort communities such as Park City, Utah; Jackson Hole, Wyo.; and Aspen, Steamboat Springs and Vail, Colo.

Blaine County is the only one of the resorts with both a high proportion of personal income derived from investments and a predominantly-resident work force.

About 80 percent of the local option taxes collected in Ketchum and Sun Valley are visitor-related. Thirty-five percent of all property tax receipts are derived from visitors, primarily vacation homeowners.

Aliski promised to review the study one more time before casting it in cold print after Rep. Wendy Jaquet, Huffman and a few others questioned some of the numbers.

"It doesn't matter whether the information is accurate or not - it will be the source of all our discussions for the immediate future," said Huffman, stressing the importance of the survey as a tool.

Zilog Inc. plans to sell Nampa fabrication facility

The Associated Press

NAMPA - Semiconductor maker Zilog Inc. has informed the Securities and Exchange Commission it intends to sell its Nampa fabrication plant, which it has revalued from $9.9 million to $3 million.

Zilog, based in Campbell, Calif., warned the filing with federal regulators that it is considering selling or closing "one or more product lines, business units or other assets."

An industry analyst said the report indicates the company may be on its last legs.

"Zilog was struggling even when times were good," said Tom Starnes, an industry analyst with Carman & Texas. "The industry's having a tough year, but Zilog is having a tougher year than a struggling company is caught in a backdraft, the question is will they come out of it at all."

The report, filed earlier this month, acknowledged that cost-cutting measures might not steer the company toward profitability, but simply keep a grim situation from getting any worse.

"We have a history of net losses, we expect future net losses, and we do not expect to achieve profitability in the near future," the company told the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Zilog has its only wafer fabrication plant along with a design center in Nampa. A company spokeswoman said no negotiations were under way to sell the plant, and she declined to say how many employees worked at the site. In earlier reports, the company said about 500 people work at the two Nampa facilities. Spokeswoman Kimberly Malanczuk said Zilog employs nearly 1,100 people worldwide.

Malanczuk declined to comment on how the Idaho operations could be affected by any cost-cutting measures, which she said were prompted by the economic downturn.

Starnes said Zilog was making outdated technology anyway, and it probably was a good idea to sell its plant. He characterized Zilog as an industry has-been that has failed to keep up with the times.

"They were somebody back in the '80s," he said. Zilog said in its Securities and Exchange Commission filing that cash-flow problems could mean significant reductions in planned capital spending, more layoffs, loan defaults, legal action by creditors and a restructuring of financial obligations.

Plans were announced in mid-April to reduce Zilog's workforce by 10 percent and to implement one-week companywide shutdowns in July, November and December.

Shutting operations also were being cut back, from a seven-day to a five-day work week. Non-manufacturing employees were asked to take off every other Friday from June 8 until the end of August.

Zilog posted losses of $58.2 million in its fiscal 2000 year. It just made a profit, $11.9 million, in 1997.

Fish & Game OKs So. Fork salmon season

The Associated Press

BOISE - The Fish and Game Commission approved a sport hatchery salmon fishing season for the South Fork of the Salmon River on Wednesday, subject to federal approval.

The commission set June 10 for the latest season prompted by one of the strongest returns of chinook salmon in years. That opening date could be pushed by if approval is not received by then from the National Marine Fisheries Service.

In addition, the commission voted to truck surplus hatchery chinook from the Rapid River Hatchery south of Riggs to the North Fork of the Payette and Boise rivers for a sport fishing season that begins on each river on Thursday.

The drought precluded planting any of the fish in the Weiser River. Anadromous Fisheries Coordinator Bill Horton said flows in the river were inadequate to keep water temperatures cool enough or provide cover for the fish.

A daily bag limit of two fish and a possession limit of four will apply on all three rivers. The season limit of 40 fish remains unchanged.

Earlier this spring, the commission approved chinook seasons on the most river mileage in a generation. Fishing was authorized on the Clearwater River; the North and South forks of the Clearwater; the Little Salmon River; the lower Salmon River from Hammer Creek to the mouth of the Little Salmon; and the Snake River in Hells Canyon from Dug Bar to Hells Canyon Dam.

Because of the presence of endangered wild salmon, fishing on the South Fork of the Salmon River from Goat Creek six miles upstream to the fish trap and weir will be limited to between 6 a.m. and 9 p.m. and barbless hooks are required. Check-in will be mandatory.

The season will end Aug. 5 unless the federal fisheries service orders it closed sooner because the quota is reached faster than expected or too many wild fish are caught.

The fishing and hook restrictions were not imposed on the North Fork of the Payette and Boise rivers. Fish and Game officials moved 200 hatchery chinook to the Boise and 130 to the North Fork of the Payette on Wednesday in preparation for the seasons, which run through Labor Day.

Fishing is authorized on the Boise from the mouth upstream to Barber Dam and on the North Fork of the Payette from Cabarton Road to Cascade Reservoir.

All about Idaho's ground squirrels

By Stu Murrell
Times-News correspondent

Idaho has three types of ground squirrels with a number of subspecies and variations. Southern Idaho residents will commonly find the tiny Townsend and larger Richardson ground squirrels in the desert or lower elevations. The large, red-nosed Columbian ground squirrels are located at higher elevations and in mountain meadows.

Many people refer to the desert species as "Picket Pins" since they will sit up ramrod straight to view their surroundings. Others mistakenly call them "gophers" which have different habits and live underground most of their lives.

The 5-7 inch long Townsend ground squirrel has a grayish color tinged with red and a short tail. They can be found in sagebrush or open desert areas.

There may be several thousand in a colony (such as those found near Mountain Home) and the mounds are readily visible in the open terrain.

As with many desert mammals, they are above ground when green vegetation is available. Once their food supply dries up they go underground, usually by July. This summer hibernation is called aestivation and results in a deep sleep for about seven months of the year.

Their 7-10 young are born early in spring. Please see SQUIRRELS, Page D2

- 2) The Columbian ground squirrel is 14-16 inches tall with a long tail and reddish nose. They live in a wetter environment at higher elevations.

Youngest Everest climber returns to less lofty pursuits

Temba Tsheri, a 15-year-old Sherpa boy, seen in this recent photo, reportedly reached the top of Mount Everest on May 22, becoming the youngest person ever to scale the 8,850 meters (29,035 feet) peak.

By Binaj Gurubacharya
The Associated Press

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) - A crowd of 2,000 classmates cheered teen-age Sherpa Temba Tsheri on Wednesday as he returned to Nepal's capital after becoming the youngest climber to conquer Mount Everest.

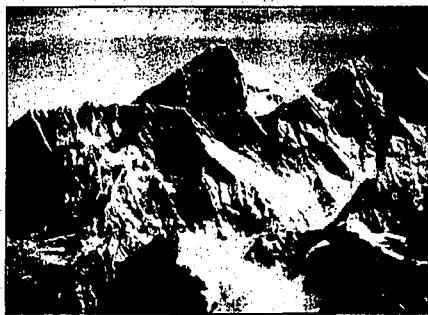

The eighth grader, who lost five fingers to frostbite in an earlier climb, said he was now aiming for something a little less extraordinary: finishing school. "I have lived my dream and I don't have any plans to climb," the 16-year-old said. "Now I am going to concentrate on studies."

Tsheri was greeted by students from his Sidartha Vanasthali school at the Katmandu airport. Tsheri waved at them from the back of an open truck.

Tsheri and a Sherpa guide were among more than 100 people who reached the summit of the 29,035-foot mountain last week, taking advantage of a break in high winds and heavy snow that for days had forced climbers to delay.

"We were beginning to think that the weather was not going to clear up and we would not be able to climb at all this season," he said.

"But luck favored us and the skies were suddenly clear just enough for us to make the climb," he said.

Tsheri said he reached the summit on May 23 and not May 22 as announced by his sponsors. Since they did not have their own satellite phone and had to use a set belonging to another expedition, they could not relay the news clearly.

"It was like a big party on the summit. There were at least 30 climbers on the summit that day," he said.

Tsheri's guide, Thilen, who uses one name, already has climbed Mount Everest five times.

"It was luck and the determination of the boy that made him successful in reaching the summit," Thilen said about Tsheri's second attempt to summit

Everest. Tsheri turned 16 just before making his successful climb last week. He broke the record set by another Nepalese climber, Shambu Tamang, in 1973 when he climbed Mount Everest at age 17.

Last year, Tsheri stopped just 160 feet short of the summit, overcome by frostbite, exhaustion and deteriorating weather. He opened his gloves to tie his shoes and left them open for nearly 45 minutes, resulting in frostbite.

When he returned from the mountain, doctors amputated five fingers - three from one hand and two from the other.

Sherpas, who live at the foot of the Himalayas, are renowned for their mountaineering skills. They were mostly yak herders and traders until Nepal opened its borders to tourism in 1950. Their stamina and knowledge of the mountains make them expert guides and porters.

Since Mount Everest was first conquered by New Zealander Sir Edmund Hillary and Sherpa Tenzing Norgay in 1953, the mountain has been climbed more than 1,000 times. Authorities say 180 climbers have died on its unpredictable slopes.

Climbers give up summit to aid others

SEATTLE (AP) — An American-led group of climbers, on Mount Everest to determine whether a 1924 British team was the first to make the summit, gave up reaching the top themselves to assist the other parties in trouble on the world's highest peak, the expedition's leader says.

Jason Tanguay of Tacoma, and Sherpa guides Phu Nuru and Phu Dorje. They had settled in for the night — "psyched, strong and hoping to be on top by about 7 a.m.," Simonson recalled — when they were awakened by "one of Russell Brice's guides" from the Himalayan Experience team.

Simonson said he had no choice but to pull and dragging. Simonson wrote. "Then tragedy," he wrote. "The group came across 'one of the Russian climbers who had collapsed.'" Politz tried to help, "but the man died in his arms."

The group put their personal goals on the back burner and saved four out of five people with virtually no assistance.

Grizzlies bear unwanted criticism, ecologists say

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Grizzly bears have an undesired reputation for attacking humans, a bear ecologist said. Too often, a grizzly bear encounter is exacerbated by people who do not know how to respond, Stephen Herrero said during a conference on bear research and management.

Pepper spray should not be doused on tents as a repellent — bears are attracted to pepper, he said. "Dogs can be a liability in the backcountry because they can provoke a bear, he said. "A good dog is one that can be called back ... One that is properly trained," he said.

Grizzly bear encounters are usually about territory and space, he said. If a grizzly bear charges, back away. If that doesn't work, lie face down and cover your head with your arms, he said.

Squirrels

Continued from D1. and usually start feeding above ground by April or early May. Both adult and young squirrels store fat quickly to survive the long sleep. One study showed a squirrel ate 17 percent of her weight daily. It was calculated that she had 23 percent of the food to eat enough food to support her for the remaining 77 percent. Because of their food habits, a large colony can cause considerable damage in agricultural areas.

hair was burned off and the charred skin was peeled away so the fat flesh underneath could be eaten. The second species, Richardson's ground squirrel, is bigger at 10 inches, with a grayer color and very small ears. It is similar to the Townsend's ground squirrel in its life history, but prefers wetter areas near water. Both species have been observed in the same colony. They may be above ground a longer period with the wetter spring areas.

Mexico's leader presents his vision for the country

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Vicente Fox, whose election ended an era in Mexico's political history, revealed his vision for the next one Tuesday, declaring an end to big government and a drive for balanced budgets and more jobs.

President Vicente Fox

Fox's six-year National Development Plan also seemed to promise a more active role abroad. Reluctance to intervene in other countries' affairs has been a cornerstone of Mexican foreign policy, but Fox's plan replaced it with a commitment to "promote human rights and democracy abroad."

"There will no longer be a paternalist government, but one that shares responsibility," Fox said during a nationally televised speech announcing the plan, which set goals far beyond the end of the president's six-year term.

Fox's 25-year projection sticks to his free-market ideals, with education, balanced budgets and job creation by private companies leading a list of priorities.

But Fox noted his administration "cannot leave everything to the market, nor everything to the state."

Fox's July 2000 election ended a 71-year hold on power by the Institutional Revolutionary Party. While calling for sweeping changes, Fox also seemed to try to mollify PRI loyalists: "We are not trying to erase the past," he said.

But he also declared that "we will not allow anyone to block the road of democracy."

The plan's No. 2 foreign policy goal is protecting Mexican immigrants abroad. Fox's top adviser on the issue promised to create a new special prosecutor's office to protect immigrant rights.

The adviser, Juan Hernandez, said it was unclear whether the new office would try to hire U.S. lawyers to bring suits in the United States against those accused of abusing immigrants. Mexico has done that only once in the past.

"The experts are going to tell us exactly where the prosecutor's office could operate," Hernandez said.

Rivals to Fox's National Action Party responded cautiously to the plan, which he submitted to congress for its approval Tuesday.

Indonesian Parliament: President must go

JAKARTA, Indonesia — A near-unanimous Parliament censured Indonesia's democratically elected president on Wednesday and demanded his impeachment, ignoring raucous protests from legislators of his followers who encircled the heavily guarded legislature.

Humiliated by the 365-4 vote, President Abdurrahman Wahid could be ousted within two months by the People's Consultative Assembly.

If Wahid is toppled, the assembly would also certainly endorse Vice President Megawati Sukarnoputri as his successor. She is his main rival and the daughter of the nation's founding leader, Sukarno.

Germany clears payments to Nazi-era slave laborers

BERLIN — After two years of intricate negotiations, the German parliament voted Wednesday to free payments from a $4.6 billion fund for surviving Nazi-era slave laborers, providing compensation in what the nation's leader called "the last great open chapter of our historical responsibility."

Parliament unlocked the government-industry fund by passing a motion that says the dismissal of a series of U.S. lawsuits seeking compensation from German companies constitutes "legal peace."

More than 1 million aging survivors of Nazi labor, most of them in Eastern Europe, are expected to benefit.

Fund officials say payments from the fund should start reaching survivors in mid-June.

Former slave laborers will receive one-time payments of up to $6,700.

Police claim success

In quieting riot-torn town. LONDON — The riot-torn town of Oldham awoke Wednesday to more broken glass, but police said they were able to prevent the street battles and firebombing that had raged the previous three nights.

Hundreds of extra officers patrolled the fire-scattered northern English town overnight, maintaining a tense peace in a diverse community now split along racial lines.

Anger erupted into violence several times, but it was mild compared to the scene over the weekend.

IRA allows inspection

of secret weapons dumps

DUBLIN, Ireland — The Irish Republican Army has permitted an inspection of arms dumps for the first time in seven months, inspectors announced Wednesday. The surprise announcement by the international disarmament commission, welcomed by some as a potential break in the impasse over IRA weapons, came eight days before Northern Ireland elections that will put the British-linked province's 1998 peace accord to the test.

Board replaces head of

Russian gas giant Gazprom

MOSCOW — The board of Gazprom, the world's largest natural gas company, tightened the Kremlin's grip over the business Wednesday by replacing its chief executive officer with an associate of President Vladimir Putin.

Gazprom's directors voted unanimously to replace Rem Vyakhirev, whose contract expires Thursday, with Deputy Energy Minister Alexei Miller. Gazprom's roles include politically sensitive tasks such as keeping inefficient but influential industries running with cheap gas and extending Russia's sway in countries it supplies with energy.

In the past, it has enjoyed considerable independence from the government, which owns 38 percent of Gazprom's shares.

"Gazprom is more than just a company," Putin said as he met with Prime Minister Mikhail Kasyanov, Miller and Vyakhirev at the Kremlin. "It provides a quarter of all budget revenues, and the entire national economy depends on the gas and energy industry."

Gazprom is a key export earner for Russia. But its management has been accused of insider dealings and diversion of cash flows.

Japanese cultist receives

prison sentence for murder

TOKYO — A former member of the cult that attacked Tokyo's subway with poison gas in 1995 was convicted and sentenced Wednesday to life imprisonment for crimes including murder.

The Tokyo District Court convicted Noboru Nakamura, 34, of slaying a fellow member of the Aum Shinri Kyo cult, abducting and killing the relative of another member, and helping the group build a factory to produce the lethal sarin gas, a court spokesman said.

Car bomb explodes outside school; U.S. brokers talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — A car bomb exploded outside a high school in the northern coastal city of Netanya on Wednesday, lightly injuring six people. The bombing and other violence threatened to undermine U.S.-mediated talks that were the Bush administration's first attempt at Mideast shuttle diplomacy.

The militant Palestinian group Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for the attack in a statement faxed to The Associated Press.

Police spokeswoman Sivan Kedmi said the injured were treated for shock. At least four of them were teen-agers, hospital officials told Israel radio.

The blast went off a bus stop outside the entrance to the Ort high school, about 20 miles north of Tel Aviv. The car exploded at the time students would normally have been pouring out of the school. But classes ended 10 minutes early because students were taking exams.

Earlier Wednesday, two Israeli vehicles opened fire on stone-throwing Palestinians at the Rafah refugee camp in southern Gaza, injuring four people, witnesses said.

The United States condemned the attack Wednesday. A meeting of West Bank security chiefs was arranged at the urging of the new U.S. envoy, William Burns. He shuttled between Israeli and Palestinian leaders earlier in the week to discuss how to implement the recommendations of an international panel on how to stop eight months of violence.

Weed Watch: Scotch Thistle

Eliminates this Giant Thistle

This biennial plant is Idaho's largest thistle. It produces solely by seed and can grow over 8 feet tall. The plant leaves are hairy with a wool-like covering. Colonies are often impenetrable. Scotch thistle can be found in pastures, range, roadside, and drainage areas. These plants can not tolerate tillage; therefore is not considered a problem in most crops.

Keep this plant from going to seed!

• Dig or cut plants below the crown to keep them from producing seed.

• Apply herbicide in the spring when the plants are in the rosette stage. Assume that your herbicide choice is labeled and appropriate for your particular situation.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Do not speak of secret matters in a field that is full of little thieves."
—Hebrew proverb

If you sit behind capable declarers, you will note that they are careful to reveal as little as possible about their holdings. Examine how this principle was applied in today's no-trump game played in a recent Internet tournament (<http://www.okbridge.com>).

At most tables, South ducked the spade lead in dummy, winning the finesse with the 10. Intent on developing at least one club trick, South led a club to dummy's jack and East's ace. Seeing little reason to return West's suit (dummy's A-Q), East tried a switch to hearts. His imagination paid off. Regardless of how South maneuvered, he could not develop a club winner without conceding three hearts and two clubs for one down.

When Pat Norman of Houston played the game, she also took the spade finesse at trick one. However, she was careful to create an illusion for East. Instead of ducking in dummy and winning her 10, she inserted dummy's queen. When Pat led a club from dummy, East topped up with his club ace at trick two, eager to return partner's suit. Pat's J-10 trapped West's king, and she now had time to knock out the club king to post an overtrick.

Was East guilty of poor defense? No, he was the victim of deceptive declarer play. Had West's spades been sturdier, a spade return at trick two would have been the only way to beat the game.
