Officials want answers before ruling on moratorium

By John T. Huddy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Caught in the middle of an emotional battle over the proliferation of dairies locally, county leaders are considering yet another emergency dairy moratorium, which would be the fourth moratorium since July 2000.

But the county's elected officials question if an emergency moratorium that restricts the number of animals, as they would like to have, is legal.

"We talked about that with the legal people yesterday, and there is a difference of opinion whether we can enact an emergency moratorium restricting certain animal numbers or not," Twin Falls County Commissioner Bill Brockman said Thursday.

The county's commissioners, Brockman, Gary Grindstaff and Marvin Hempleman, said they want to impose an emergency moratorium that could allow only a certain number of cows into the county, and continue to restrict the development of large dairy operations locally until problems with current operations are controlled.

According to state law, an emergency moratorium can be imposed for no longer than four months. An interim moratorium - used while a governing board waits for a plan, such as an ordinance, to be prepared - has no set time.

But there is no language in the moratorium section of state law dealing with restrictions on the number of animals.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Leuchs said Thursday that his staff was working to determine if an emergency moratorium restricting animal numbers was legal.

As of Thursday evening, that question remained unclear. County leaders agree that question needs to be answered by

Attorney blasts AG for delay

John T. Huddy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The lawyer for the widow of a slain Jerome County sheriff's deputy blasted Idaho Attorney General Al Lance and the state Board of Examiners Thursday for delaying payment of a death benefit to his client in the wake of her husband's death.

Jason Miciak, attorney for Amy Moulson, said Lance and his fellow state Board of Examiners members - including Gov. Dirk Kempthorne - seem to be punishing him for filing a $2.4 million tort claim against Jerome County.

State lawmakers last winter approved cash awards for law-enforcement officers killed in action.

"The Legislature could not have been more clear, this is not a Mensa test, the Legislature specifically defined the limited discretion and role of the Board of Examiners. Nonetheless, the Board of Examiners, at the behest of the highest law-enforcement officer in this state, has taken it upon themselves to add their own caveat to the law," Miciak told The Times-News Thursday.

Lance this week raised questions about how the state payments fit in with any judgment stemming from Moulson's tort claim against Jerome County.

"The decision to 'withhold' the death benefit seems like a slap on the wrist for having the audacity to file a claim against Jerome County seeking accountability for the actions that led to this tragedy," Miciak said. "It is ironic that it was this sort of systematic heavy-handed exercise of authority that caused this loss in the first place."

McVeigh asks judge to delay execution

The Associated Press

DENVER - Timothy McVeigh asked a judge Thursday to delay his execution, accusing the government of withholding evidence in a "fraud upon the court" that denied him a fair trial in the Oklahoma City bombing.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch scheduled a hearing for Wednesday and ordered prosecutors to respond by Monday evening. McVeigh is scheduled to die June 11.

The request was a sharp reversal for McVeigh, who had abandoned his appeals in December and asked for an execution date for the 1995 bombing that killed 168 people and injured hundreds of others in the nation's worst act of domestic terrorism.

A few hours before the hearing, McVeigh met with his lawyers at a federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind., and decided to go ahead with the request. Attorney Robert Nigh said it

Children hold off authorities

Deputies make little headway in standoff

The Associated Press

Family life - B3

SANDPOINT - Deputies hunkered down Thursday on a dirt road, waiting for six frightened and well-armed children to accept help from an outside world they fear and distrust.

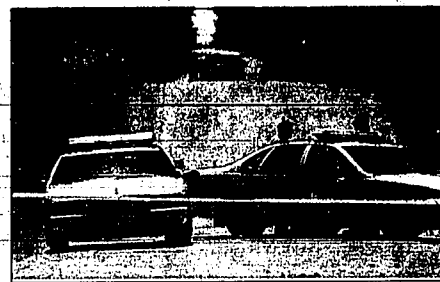

Their father was buried last Friday and their mother was arrested Tuesday. The six kids - ages 8 to 16 - have each other, rifles they know how to use and 27 half-wild dogs in a run-down Garfield Bay home without water or electricity.

And they apparently have enough food to hold out for a while, a local relief worker says. A family friend picked up a 200-pound box of staples for them at the Bonner Community Food Center last Friday, director Alice

Wallace said Thursday. The family routinely received food from the center, she said. Of reports that the children had been subsisting on lily-pod soup and lake water, she said: "They weren't existing on that and that alone."

Wallace characterized the family of JoAnn and Michael McGuckin as "a normal family that has fallen on hard times." The children are "great kids. They're well-mannered, they're polite, they're respectful."

Now, she said, "They're scared, I'm sure. Your dad dies a couple of weeks ago, and then your mother's taken away from you - that would be a little unerving, don't you think?"

Bonner County sheriff's deputies had no luck trying to negotiate with the children Thursday.

"We're trying but we haven't been able to establish contact," said sheriff's Sgt. Rob Rahm. The children won a new ally

Thursday, but they weren't talking to him, either.

Sandpoint lawyer Edgar Steele, who represented Aryan Nations founder Richard Butler in the recent federal trial that cost the organization its Idaho compound, called a news conference to blast sheriff's officers for their arrest of

Turning farm produce into furniture - and big losses

Program to find alternative markets turns up in the red

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The idea was to "invest" government money in agricultural start-ups to turn sugar cane into furniture, sunflower seeds into motor oil and milkweed into comforters - with taxpayers reaping the returns.

But some $40 million later, the Agriculture Department's muchhyped experiment to create the government equivalent of a venture capital firm has delivered hardly any return, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press. Congress has given up and shut the doors to spending.

Investment money to 16 companies has been written off as a total loss, and an additional 28 companies have failed to produce any significant returns - although there's still hope for some of them. All told, investments totaling $40.3 million have brought just $1.2 million in returns since 1993, the documents show.

Federal auditors who looked into why the government-run Alternative Agricultural Research and Commercialization Corp. wasn't more successful found that officials invested in companies with little chance of success and that many recipients misused the money, the documents state.

Jeffrey Gain, the board chairman for the government investment company, acknowledged that in hindsight the venture made some bad decisions. But he said the experiment also was hindered by a lack of vision among lawmakers who refused to provide more money.

"Venture capital is hard to get, and when you say it's for agriculture, they don't walk, they run from you," he said. "If it had been funded properly and we had flexibility, we could have done a better job of monitoring."

Sen. Tom Harjup, D-Iowa, the program's top congressional supporter, said "We were hoping there would be some winners on this." But since there weren't, the program "could never get the critical mass needed, and that was the end of it," he said.

Cooper said, "The board has to make a formal determination that the deputies died in the line of duty, though, which they have not yet."

Williams, who the claim said was known to be carrying a gun and paranoid, and when serving the warrant at his home. Weaver, who said he was backing up Moulson and Anderson during the raid, told news reporters in a press conference eight days after the shoot-out that Williams fired first. Weaver said Williams was part of an ongoing sheriff's department narcotics investigation. Only about four grams of marijuana - equal to about a joint - were found in Williams' home after the raid. "The Board of Examiners will meet again in June. Cooper said Lance is acting in the best interest of the slain deputies' families in questioning any possible legalities that could arise.

Moratorium: today or Monday morning at the latest. The county's existing dairy moratorium, approved in February, ends Sunday. The commissioners have scheduled a 10 a.m. meeting Monday to decide whether to approve a new moratorium. The existing moratorium was imposed to give a county-appointed livestock committee time to draft a new county livestock ordinance - which was finished in May. County leaders are reviewing the ordinance and contend that, until it is approved, a moratorium must remain in place. "We're going to start pushing real hard on this ordinance," Brockman said. "We have to get state Department of Agriculture, is working to curb his dairy's odors. His efforts have failed thus far, though, according to many of his neighbors. Signs reading "Hank, your dairy's rank" have been posted near Hafliger's dairy, a serious reminder of the pending issue. And while county leaders try to answer pending legal questions, the fate of the new county-wide livestock ordinance also remains unclear. Ed Smith of Filer, a member of the committee that helped draft the ordinance and a critic of Hafliger's dairy, said he would be discussing his and other ordinance supporters' concerns about the new ordinance with the commissioners this morning. He declined further comment. Local dairymen, under the leadership of Idaho Dairyman's Association Director Lewis Eilers, met with the county's commission in May. At that meeting, Eilers and local dairy-

Standoff: Continued from A1. McGuckin and their plan to disperse their children into foster care. "This is exactly what she was afraid of and that's exactly what they're trying to do," Steele said. He said he had been to the house, but the children would not speak to him. He planned to try again Friday. He did spend two hours with the mother on Wednesday, said Steele, who added that he is working pro bono as one of the woman's lawyers and is representing the children's interests. McGuckin also has a court-appointed lawyer. "This woman is perfectly capable of taking care of the kids and herself," he said, though he conceded the family had become recalcitrant since the father's illness. Steele suggested the stalemate could be resolved by bringing the mother to the house, but said he would not have any part in such an effort if the goal was to separate the children into foster care. He said family and friends stand ready to care for them. He disputed the state's charges against McGuckin - that the children are hungry, dirty and living in primitive conditions. "This is all pure rumor," Steele said. "I'm not sure why she was arrested." He described the children as loving, well-adjusted, with enough food to last a month. They're thin because they eat healthy food and lead a healthy outdoor lifestyle, the lawyer said. "The real crime these people perpetrated is that they are poor," Steele said. He noted that no weapon had been displayed by the children, and no shots fired. Steele said he is demanding that bail for McGuckin be reduced, a matter to be taken up at a bail hearing Friday.

McVeigh: Continued from A1. Attorney General John Ashcroft said none of the FBI documents raise doubt about McVeigh's guilt or establishes his innocence. He has said the FBI produced "every relevant document in its possession" and turned them over to the defense. Ashcroft also said the Justice Department would propose efforts to overturn McVeigh's conviction or death sentence, or to force a new trial. "Based on the overwhelming evidence and McVeigh's own repeated admissions, we know that he is responsible for this crime and we will continue to pursue justice by seeking to carry out the sentence that was determined by a jury," said Ashcroft, who cut short a European trip and plans to return to Washington on Saturday. McVeigh had faced lethal injection May 16. But the execution was postponed by a "shroft" after the Justice Dept. admitted it had kept material from McVeigh's defense, a mistake discovered by an archivist. Outside the courthouse, prosecutor Sean Connolly said, "We categorically deny there was any fraud on the courts."

Minnesota teen wins National Spelling Bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Equipped with nerves of steel and an inner dictionary that just wouldn't quit, a 13-year-old Minnesota boy won the 74th Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee, surviving 16 rounds and outlasting 247 other young competitors.

Sean Conley of Shakopee, Minn., who finished second in last year's contest, won by spelling "succedaneum," which means, appropriately, "one that succeeds to the place of another."

Sean went word-for-word for five breathless rounds with Kristin Hawkins, a soft-spoken Virginia eighth-grader who, like Sean, was participating in the national bee for the third time.

Kristin coolly competed with Sean, rattling off such words as "hamartia" as if she were spelling her own last name. The word means "a defect of character."

But then she stumbled over "resipiscence," meaning a change of mind or heart.

Sean, who attends a private school in Anoka, Minn., will take home $10,000, while Kristin will get $5,000.

The three-day competition began Tuesday, and by the end of the fourth round, the original group of 248 spellers had shrunk to 34. Sean won in the 16th round.

It probably didn't help that the final day of competition was broadcast on live TV. In fact, as soon as the broadcast began, the first seven students misspelled their words.

The group included diminutive Sara Brand, 11, a sixth-grader from Knoxville, Tenn., who mullered over "Australopithecus" for so long the judges asked that she please get to the spelling. She began it with an "O" and never recovered.

A few minutes later, Abhijith Eswarappa, 13, of Memphis, Tenn., broke by carefully spelling "fimbriate," a word meaning "bordered with a minute fringe."

Eve Vokes, a fifth-grader from San Antonio, Texas, her blonde hair pulled back into tight, matching braids, stared at the judges, her hands pinned behind her, as she puzzled over "nisei," an American-born Japanese person. She spelled it "nesae."

Many of Thursday morning's words were smaller, but no less difficult than the tongue-twisting, polysyllabic standards.

Stephen Hou, 12, of Fort Mill,

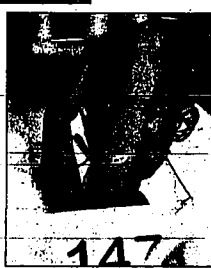

S.C., missed "arnica," an herb used to soothe bruises and sprains.

Apollo Stacy, 12, of Jonesboro, Ark., replaced the "k" in "kudize" with a "ch."

It means to "praise" or give someone kudos. Melanie Kidder, 14, an eighth-grader from Bellaire, Ohio, endured nearly five minutes on stage as judges wearing headphones listened to a taped play, back of her spelling "void," referring to bones at the base of the tongue.

Finally the head judge looked up and said, "That's correct, Melanie," to cheers and applause from the crowd.

Like last year, Italian food knocked Lauren Fowler, of Fort Pierce, Fla., out of competition.

Mitesh Shridhar, 11, of Denver, Colo., waits to take his turn during the 74th annual National Spelling Bee.

Spy suspect pleads innocent

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Veteran FBI agent Robert Hanssen pleaded innocent Thursday to charges of spying for Moscow, setting the stage for a fall trial that could deal with some of the nation's most closely guarded intelligence secrets.

Looking haggard in a green jumpsuit with the word "prisoner" on the back, Hanssen stood next to his lawyer in the federal courtroom here, just across the Potomac River from Washington. He said "not guilty" when asked how he pleaded to the charges, and plans were set for an Oct. 29 trial.

Thursday's arraignment followed futile plea discussions between Hanssen's lawyers and prosecutors. The long lead time for a trial could permit a new round of plea bargaining.

Robert Hanssen

The federal indictment accuses Hanssen of 21 counts of espionage. "We will be filing motions in federal court attacking this indictment," his attorney, Plato Cacheris, told reporters on the courthouse steps after what he estimated was a two-minute court session. "We've just set a new modern record for arraignments."

"That not-guilty plea entitles him to a presumption of innocence," Cacheris said of Hanssen.

He declined comment on the possibility of further plea discussions.

Pentagon requests extra money

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will ask Congress for an additional $5.6 billion to pay for military health care, higher energy costs and other Pentagon expenses through September, officials said Thursday.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said the president will submit a $6.1 billion supplemental budget for the current year's Pentagon spending, and other officials said $35 million of the total is money to be removed from the existing budget. Thus the net increase would be $5.6 billion.

The $505 million is included because any removal of money already budgeted must be approved by Congress.

Fleischer said the $5.6 billion will meet the military's most urgent needs through the current budget year, which ends Sept. 30.

"They do not have enough money in their budget to make it through fiscal 2001 in good shape, and the supplemental the president is focused on is addressed at completion of the Department of Defense mission for this year," he said.

Some members of Congress say the extra money is too little and will not fully cover the Pentagon's current expenses. The Washington Post reported Thursday.

The supplemental budget request was submitted to the White House on May 21, the Post reported, and officials said it could be sent to Congress any day. The largest single item in the Pentagon request is $1.9 billion for military personnel benefits, including salaries and housing. Of that total, $1.4 billion is for defense health insurance costs authorized by Congress last year but not funded in the federal budget for the current fiscal year.

Study: Poor Americans get no tax rebate

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — For millions of Americans, the check's not in the mail.

Since Congress passed President Bush's tax plan last week, news reports have focused on one of its most striking features — a late-summer mailing of rebate checks to 95 million taxpayers. But a study released Wednesday suggested that millions of Americans will get little or nothing.

Citizens for Tax Justice, a non-profit research organization with the only nongovernmental computer model able to calculate the distribution of taxes, reported that almost half of those Americans in the bottom 60 percent of income earners — more than 32 million individuals and families — will receive no rebates. Nearly 35 million Americans who earn income and file a tax return will receive nothing, the group said.

"The people who are excited, about this rebate aren't going to get it," said Robert McIntyre, director of the group, citing news stories for which poor workers and students are interviewed about what they would do with the checks. "And the people who aren't excited about it are going to get it."

How is this possible? About one-third of income earners pay little or no income taxes — after exemptions, deduction and credits — though they may pay substantial payroll taxes or sales taxes.

A single person will receive $300 if he or she has at least $6,000 in annual taxable income, while a couple will get $600 if they have at least $12,000 in taxable income. But taxable income is very different from income. For instance, a family of four would be able to deduct at least $18,500 in standard deductions and personal exemptions from their income before they pay income taxes, so they would need to earn at least $30,000 to get close to a $600 rebate.

According to Citizens for Tax Justice, 25 percent of married couples earning between $27,000 and $44,000 would receive no rebate. Among couples who qualify for a rebate in that group, the average rebate would be $479.

Shortage spurs more nurse strikes

The Associated Press

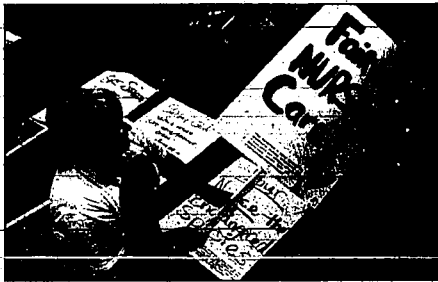

It was a scenario that nurse Linda Warino had come to dread: Too many patients. Not enough nurses. No volunteers to work overtime.

About once a week — and she only works three days a week — she said she was required to work beyond her 12-hour shift. It led her and her colleagues in Youngstown, Ohio, to walk off their hospital jobs to demand better conditions and pay. They have been on strike now for 31 days.

Warino, a nurse for 28 years, said it wasn't just long hours or salary issues that prompted the 770 nurses at Youngstown's Forum Health hospital system to act. They feared patient care was suffering.

"Let's be real. In your 14th or 15th hour you are not as good as you are in your first, second or third hour," she said.

Dissatisfaction with pay and increasingly stressful work conditions, aggravated by a shortage of nurses at hospitals across the country, is spurring job actions and the formation of nurses' unions.

Fayline Hondrickson, a nurse at Fairview Riverside Hospital in Minneapolis moves one of the finished picket signs Wednesday as more than 7,700 registered nurses in the Minneapolis area prepare for a possible strike against 12 hospitals.

Minneapolis this week faced the threat of 7,700 nurses striking at a dozen hospitals. By Thursday, agreements were reached at five of the hospitals, but 5,400 nurses at the remaining seven hospitals still were set to strike today.

The hospitals were flying in more than 3,000 replacement nurses to cope with the strike.

"A strike of this size shows this isn't one woman with a gripe. It shows this is a very serious problem," said Cheryl Johnson, president of United American Nurses, which represents more than 100,000 nurses. "If nurses don't have safe and good working conditions, no one gets the kind of care they deserve."

There have been seven nursing strikes so far this year, with two still under way. There were 10 last year and 21 in 1999. By comparison, there were just four strikes in 1995.

Last year, 19 percent of the country's 1.3 million hospital nurses were unionized, up from 17 percent in 1999 and 16 percent in 1990. The UAN is campaigning to unionize nurses in 18 more hospital systems.

The increased union activity comes as hospital finances are being squeezed by lower reimbursements from both private and government insurers. A third of all hospitals operate at a loss, according to the American Hospital Association.

On 20th anniversary of AIDS, new concerns arise

ATLANTA (AP) — Social worker Anthony McWilliams says he sees it every day — a new generation of gays and bisexuals numb from years of endless AIDS statistics and warnings about the epidemic.

"It becomes blah, blah, blah — noise to them," said McWilliams, a counselor for AID Atlanta. "It's just not getting through to them. They need to hear it a new way."

Two decades after the discovery of AIDS, a new government survey suggests gay men and bisexuals too young to remember the disease's explosive first years are contracting it at alarming rates.

The survey shows 4.4 percent of gay and bisexual men ages 23 to 29 are newly infected each year with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. For blacks in that group, the figures are staggering: One in seven becomes HIV-positive each year — roughly the same infection rate currently found among adults in South Africa.

"The numbers we're publishing right now are more like the findings you see in the '80s than the findings you see in the '90s," said Linda Valleroy, who led the survey for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Left unchecked, the infection rates could lead to a resurgence of AIDS after years of progress to control it.

"We have to stop and take a look at the devastation that potentially could occur among these young men," said Dr. Helena Gayle, the CDC's AIDS chief. "These are precious and important lives."

AIDS prevention groups called the figures extremely disturbing, saying the country needs to devise new ways to reach young adults at risk.

"These are young people who didn't see their friends dying, didn't lose lovers and friends and people who were important to them," said Marty Algreen, a spokesman for Gay Men's Health Crisis. "It's very scary. This is a new generation of people who should know better, but don't."

Florida doctors settle HMO dispute

Knight Ridder News Service

About 10,000 BlueCross BlueShield of Florida members won't have to change doctors thanks to an agreement reached last week between a local physicians' group and the state's biggest insurer.

GMS of Southwest Florida, which administers the practices of 35 primary-care physicians in Hillsborough and Pinellas counties, voted to accept new contract terms with the Blues' Health Options HMO after several weeks of deadlock.

For the past nine years, the doctors had been represented in their contract negotiations by Florida Affiliated Physicians, an independent physician association that represented about 140 general and family practitioners.

This year, the Jacksonville insurer refused to deal with the association. In addition, the Blues changed its method of reimbursing doctors.

Though the insurer said the change would not mean less pay, physicians claimed they could lose 30 percent of their income under the new reimbursement plan.

Dr. Daniel Frazier, president of GMS and a family practitioner in Tampa, said about one-third of the group's doctors voted against the new contract, which passed with a simple majority.

"We gave up," he said. "The power of the insurance company reigned supreme."

Census finds more senior citizens still working

WASHINGTON (AP) — More senior citizens are working during what might have been their retirement years, as older Americans help fill a need for employees in low-skilled fields while also seeking cash for health care.

The number of Americans 65 and older working or seeking work increased, 10 percent between March 1999 and March 2000 to 4.5 million, the Census Bureau said in a report being released Friday.

There was a 22 percent increase in seniors in administrative support positions, including clerical jobs, and an 18 percent increase in sales jobs.

The figures are from a survey separate from the 2000 census. Data from the latest head count on older Americans will be released over the next year.

Healthier, more active seniors today are helping to fill low-skill job openings in offices and fast-food restaurants. The increase also points to a need for the federal government to address rising prescription drug costs that have forced some older Americans to work, said Betty Cooper, spokeswoman for the labor-backed Alliance for Retired Americans.

The surge was primarily due to a 16 percent increase between 1999 and 2000 in men 65 and over in the work force. Overall, there are 32.6 million people in that age group, 1 percent more than the previous year.

Other findings:

- 83 percent are non-Hispanic white.
- Women account for 57 percent of those 65 and over, and 67 percent of those 85 and older.
- Two-thirds in poverty are women, due largely to the fact that women live longer than men, analysts said.

Official: Going digital will be worth it

The wild ride will be scary at times, he says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like leaving the comforts of a car, Americans will find the shift to new digital technology frustrating and scary at times, says the new head of the Federal Communications Commission.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Michael Powell, shown talking with reporters in February, says Americans will find the radical shift to now digital technology frustrating and scary at times.

"It will be messy and it will be confusing, and we will get a lot of it wrong and we'll have to start over," Powell said in an interview with The Associated Press. "But that's the creative process, that's the evolutionary process." People already have increasingly broader options to get in touch with each other, he said. They can e-mail, instant message, call on a wireless phone, send a two-way page or — as always — call on a regular landline telephone. "With all those choices, consumers are trying to figure out how to use technology to best serve their needs, he said. "The average family is not a little bit behind in terms of being almost starting to have to be," Powell said. "I.T." stands for information technology. "In his own household of four, Powell has two computers, three cell phones, two phone lines, a satellite TV and a fax machine — not to mention the chairman's own gadgets, among them a handheld computer and two-way pager.

Having such a communications array brings unwanted consequences, too. People now are reachable at all hours. "I actually find it's harder to get my life cut off from work because I'm on all these electric dog leashes that ring and buzz and grab me every time I head out the door," Powell said. As consumers make this switch — one that can be compared to the Industrial Revolution in Powell's view — government will play a role as well. However, the FCC has taken a more hands-off approach in recent years to its oversight of emerging technologies, such as high-speed Internet access delivered over cable lines. While Powell favors market-place solutions over government intervention, he said the commission won't ignore the changes happening in these markets. "It's going to be a key place for helping be a forum and a voice and even a regulator for Internet infrastructure evolution on the way to the all-optical world," he said.

In the wide-ranging interview, Powell also said: "On Internet service: Phone and cable companies offering high-speed Internet access — called broadband — are still trying to figure out a price and business model that lets them recoup the heavy investments they've made."

"Everybody wants broadband yesterday, but people aren't that thoughtful about what the incentives are for building it, paying for it, and deploying it," he said. Companies originally priced their service to entice consumers to sign up quickly but are now having to reassess those charges, he added.

"On obscenity on the airwaves: Americans have a right to be 'pretty outraged' about the content they hear and see from various media sources."

Powell, 50, has two boys, 7 and 12, said "the problem is always definitional." How would the government differentiate between the violence in the mob drama "The Sopranos" versus that in a cartoon? he asked. "We're careful in this area because our Constitution tells us to be."

White House trade goals are at issue in wheat fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — How the Bush administration handles a trade dispute between wheat farmers in North Dakota and Canada may help determine whether Congress approves a free trade pact for the Western Hemisphere.

The White House is expected to send Congress a bill later this year that would authorize President Bush to negotiate a free-trade pact with 33 other nations in the hemisphere, called the Free Trade Area of the Americas.

Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., and other lawmakers say before moving ahead on that issue, the Bush administration must show its commitment to backing U.S. interests in the wheat fight.

"I'm someone who feels we should be enforcing our existing trade laws before we rush off to develop new ones," said Dorgan, the incoming chairman of a Senate Commerce, Transportation and Science subcommittee that oversees foreign trade.

Thea Lee, assistant director of public policy for the AFL-CIO, called it "an important dispute at an important moment." "It's a test, to some extent, of how vigorously the administration will enforce the existing trade laws," said Lee, whose labor federation is worried a broader trade agreement would move U.S. jobs overseas.

At the heart of the wheat complaint is the Canadian Wheat Board, a government-run monopoly that insulates Canadian growers from the ups and downs of the market.

The board acts as a marketing and export agency for Western Canadian wheat farmers. Farmers sell their harvest to the board for about 75 percent of the expected sale on the market. After the wheat is sold, the board pays the farmer the difference between the initial payment and whatever it sold the wheat for.

The complaint, supported by wheat farmers in states from Oklahoma to Washington, claims the board has an unwritten policy to undersell U.S. wheat in foreign markets, even at a loss. If proved, it would be a violation of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The Clinton administration accepted the complaint in October. In April, the Bush administration asked the International Trade Commission to conduct a fact-finding inquiry.

In papers filed with the commission, lawyers for the Canadian board dismiss the complaint as misleading, absurd and inflammatory.

FBI won't pursue hoax case

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The FBI said Thursday it will not further investigate an Internet hoax in which a 40-year-old woman invented a young woman, began an online diary of her battle with leukemia and then killed her off.

Hundreds of people sent cards and gifts as they followed the fictitious Kaycee Nicole's nearly two-year-long fight with cancer through an online diary dubbed "Leaving Colours."

The saga of the optimistic high school basketball player ended May 15 when Debbie Swenson, of Abadly, Kan., announced Kaycee's death on the Web site. "Thank you for the love, the joy, the laughter and the tears. We will love you always and forever."

FBI spokesman Jeff Lewis said the bureau would not probe the case further because it doesn't meet the agency's threshold for financial crimes.

For fraud cases, the loss has to be in the thousands of dollars. In one case only a few hundred dollars, at most, were sent to the fictitious woman by people who believed the story, he said.

"Our understanding of the facts is there was no active solicitation," Lanzetta said. "So at least in a federal level it would be hard to prove a crime occurred."

The hoax started unraveling when several readers noticed irregularities in Kaycee's story and started making calls. Computer experts traced the postings to Swenson's Internet account.

Officers cite Bush daughters

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Police cited President Bush's 19-year-old twin daughters for violating state alcoholic beverage laws Thursday.

It was the second offense for Jenna Bush and the first for her twin, Barbara.

Police accused Barbara Bush of being a minor in possession of alcohol and Jenna Bush of misrepresenting her age for identification by using false identification to buy alcohol, according to a statement from the Austin Police Department.

Both are Class C misdemeanors under the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Code and carry a fine of up to $500, attendance at an alcohol awareness course, community service and 30-day driver's license suspension.

Idaho Power shouldn't leave customers in the dark

If Idaho Power Co.'s CEO thought the prospect of rolling blackouts would get everyone's attention, he was right. But Idaho Power and the state's Public Utilities Commission should exert every effort to keep that grim possibility from coming to pass.

Jan Packwood, chief executive officer of Idaho Power and its parent company, warned last week that Idaho could face power outages and rolling blackouts this summer, just like that Golden State to the south, if wholesale power prices become unaffordable for the company.

Such an event could be economically devastating. Turning off the lights would damage some of Idaho Power's biggest customers and this area's largest employers - including cheese companies, potato processors and local manufacturers.

Blackouts are trouble for industry, especially if they come without warning. Keeping idled workers on the clock is expensive. So is the wear and tear caused by repeatedly restarting equipment after blackouts.

An unreliable power system eventually could force manufacturers to move production elsewhere. That could mean local layoffs - and Idaho Power should remember that people without paychecks can't pay their power bills.

Idaho Power says drought is reducing Idaho's available hydropower, forcing the company to buy more expensive electricity on the open market. Packwood notes that the region is "in the midst of an unprecedented energy crisis, and during such times it is essential that rates for customers not be set artificially low."

Fair enough. But we have to hope that the idea of rolling blackouts is not truly on the company's agenda. Businesses and workers need to know the lights are going to stay on.

Idaho Power has rightly questioned the fairness of the PUC's new three-tiered rate plan. Implemented last month to encourage conservation by consumers, the plan may have been approved too hastily, without adequate public discussion.

The plan charges progressively higher rates for higher consumption. That might benefit people living in urban areas like Boise, who have access to alternatives such as natural gas, but it's unfair to rural people who don't. People in rural areas are stuck paying the higher rates.

In our view, the PUC needs to give further thought to its tiered rate structure. At the same time, Idaho Power should think at least twice before pulling the plug - even for brief periods - on the customers who fuel its success.

Idaho's leading power company and the state's regulatory agency owe Idaho's businesses and citizens a stable, fairly priced power supply.

An unreliable power system eventually could force manufacturers to move production elsewhere. That could mean local layoffs - and Idaho Power should remember that people without paychecks can't pay their power bills.

Shedding light on Bush's energy plan

CHARLI COON

If the opponents of President Bush's energy policy were as quick and creative about finding solutions to our energy woes as they are about criticizing the policy, we'd be exporting kilowatts to every corner of the globe by now.

Depending on whom you talk to, the president is pandering to the oil lobby, masquerading as a conservationist, focusing too much on long-term solutions, destroying the environment, or creating an artificial crisis. They're wrong. The plan makes a good deal of sense largely because the president understands basic economics. His plan takes a giant step toward allowing the market to correct the current imbalance between supply and demand.

Some people urge more conservation. That's fine, and conservation should be encouraged on a personal level (no need to run the home air conditioner on a 74-degree day). But conservation can't solve the problem by itself.

The other 49 states can learn a lot from California, where the recipe for blackouts has been perfected. Just add excessive federal regulations that by the cost of electrical production and discourage new production to a flawed deregulation plan.

Mix in price controls, and you've got a market for flashlights.

Burris is not just California. Bad energy policies have affected the whole country, with consumers elsewhere experiencing higher gasoline prices and rising utility bills.

Failing to deal with these problems will threaten America's prosperity.

President Bush's energy plan is designed to increase supply through a variety of measures, including improvements to the nation's aging energy infrastructure. While not perfect, his plan would move America past an energy policy-based-on-crisis management to one that can meet the needs of future generations.

Consider some highlights. More Electricity: Since 1973, U.S. energy consumption has increased by about 30 percent - roughly the same as our population growth. Simply put, there are more people using energy to power their homes, cars, air conditioners, televisions and computers. But the number of power plants and lines hasn't increased in proportion to the population surge, so prices have risen.

President Bush wants to increase the energy supply by building new power plants, doubling a tiny portion of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge oil and gas development (a move supported by trade unions such as the Teamsters) and developing new technologies for alternative fuels. The president supports this because he knows price controls don't work. They encourage consumption and impede investment.

Nuclear Power Now: President Bush also would increase the energy supply through nuclear power. Opponents are quick to raise the specter of Three Mile Island or even Chernobyl. But the Three Mile Island accident involved only a tiny amount of leakage in the first place and no loss of life or widespread increase in disease. As for Chernobyl, no plant in this country ever has or will operate with so little regard for safety.

Besides, nuclear power plants already supply about 20 percent of U.S. electricity, and hardly anyone complains. Yes, more nuclear power means more nuclear waste - which is why the president urges the use of a centralized waste site far from population centers.

More Trade for Oil: President Bush wants to trade with more nations for oil, and his proposal couldn't come at a better time. About 56 percent of the oil the United States uses is imported, mostly from the Middle East. In contrast, when we had our first energy crisis in 1973, only 35 percent of our oil came from foreign sources. The president would expand oil and gas trade agreements with Canada and Mexico, and he wants to trade more with oil-producing countries other than those in the Middle East, such as countries in Africa, the Caspian Sea region and South America. In short, oil is a global - not a regional - commodity, and we should shop accordingly.

The president's plan has its weak spots. For example, it would throw even more federal money at alternative fuel sources, such as clean coal technology, wind, solar, hybrid gas-electric cars and organic waste. But despite the billions of taxpayer dollars that have been spent so far on alternative energy, we've developed enough affordable power from those sources to meet only 3 percent of our energy demands.

For the most part, though, the president's plan represents a responsible approach to the energy crisis. Let's hope Congress gives it the serious consideration it deserves. To do otherwise could carry long-term consequences. Any response that isn't market-based can't help but leave everyone in the dark.

Charli Coon is an energy policy analyst at The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy institute.

Car washes slow down traffic

I want to write to relate an experience that I observed over the past couple of weeks. While waiting at the Five Points light (Blue Lakes, Addison, Shoshone) a couple of Saturdays ago, I noticed that there was a car wash going on in the Rite Aid parking lot. Young adults provocatively dressed were washing cars, sitting around and standing on the corner with signs. Unfortunately, as I looked around me, I noticed that every head was turned, looking at them. Traffic slowed and accidents almost happened. I drove by that intersection several times that day and every time heads were turned looking at them.

The other morning as my husband and I were going to work, we were driving by the same intersection and saw a man duct taped to the light post. We saw the radiation's van, so we turned to that station, curious as to what was happening. I looked around and some people were watching, but most were just driving, paying attention to traffic, what they should be doing. When my husband stopped to see what was going on, a police officer also stopped. He said that the man had to be cut down because it was slowing down traffic and there could be accidents. It was very disappointed in this action because it was nearly as distracting as the provocatively dressed young adults that were on that same corner only a few weeks previous. I know that there were police officers that drove by that intersection that day who are responsible to keep traffic safe, but maybe they were too busy staring to notice the congested traffic.

Use dollars to resolve issues

My family has lived south of Filer for 25 years without any complaints with the local dairies, and I bought the "Gor Milk" campaign hook, line and sinker. Now all that has changed because I despise being forced indoors due to a horrendous nauseating smell as the local sink flies off the Department of Environmental Quality charts. In addition to this, concerns of water quality are a serious health issue with the threat of phosphorus and nitrogen contaminating our water supply.

Local dairymen are quoted as saying the proposed dairy ordinance is too restrictive. Well, obviously, the current one is not sufficient or there wouldn't be a controversy. Besides, weren't local dairymen represented on the committee that wrote them? Furthermore, local dairymen had a choice to take the initiative and regulate their industry as it grew. I can't imagine that someone didn't have the presence of mind to recognize that significantly increasing the number of dairy cows in Twin Falls County by adding these large confined animal feeding operations wouldn't have an impact. Though the fault may lie with only a small number of local dairymen, as the saying goes, "it only takes a few bad apples."

If the dairymen's association had been proactive through self-regulation, outside involvement wouldn't be necessary. But that is not the case. No one likes to be told what to do and change is never easy, but as far as I can see, the Idaho Dairymen's Association seems content with the status quo. It has not demonstrated that the health and happiness of their neighbors is a concern and problem dairies are not inclined to make necessary changes in their practices without the use of stricter regulations. Instead of threatening to sue if the proposed ordinance becomes law when the root of the problem exists with the dairy industry, wouldn't it be wiser to accept responsibility and use those dollars to resolve the issues?

Have a little faith in officers

Regarding Ken Stoker's letter: Your comments were very contradictory, stating that you can't pass judgment on either party, then accusing Tim Green of abusing his power by shooting David A. Smith. I, too, was not at the scene of the incident, and I, along with a lot of people in this community, can raise to the opinions we form against the "new" police officers. In some sense, we all feel a little harassed by their rookie attitudes at times. The only people aware of what actually happened that day are the people who were present. Thank goodness we have a legal system to sort out all the other stuff, so we don't have to make it our own personal lawsuit like what is happening all over the Magic Valley now.

I met Officer Green as a fellow student in my psychology class at the College of Southern Idaho. I heard him speak in class and I have spoken with him outside of class. I couldn't imagine by his nature him being a police officer, let alone shooting someone. Being an officer takes a certain kind of intelligence - you have to be thinking at all times.

But in certain instances where there is a threat, sometimes shooting someone is what it takes. If you don't think a person with a butter knife could pose a threat, then you're sadly mistaken. You have already placed yourself in danger by thinking it; therefore, you should never consider a career in law enforcement.

Regardless, Mr. Green did what he had to do in this situation for the sake of himself and others around him. I am not denying that there may be some bad officers out there, but I for one do not believe Mr. Green to be one of them. I would say he is probably one of the last of the good ones. I think it is sad that we question the people who are trained to help us in situations like this. If Mr. Green was not needed at the time, I don't believe he would have been called. Your letter implied he took this man there and shot him for no reason. So you're right, let's not pass judgment, have a little faith in the few last good officers out there, and pray for the new ones who are rapidly changing the public's opinion of policing the community.

Letting some steam off

We just came from the Buhl Cemetery where we had gone to pick up the flowers we left for Memorial Day. We are appalled and upset that someone would take a plant off one of the graves that they had not put there.

I hope whoever you are that you are enjoying my geranium plant that was on the grave in honor of Jack Hart, our uncle who had recently passed away.

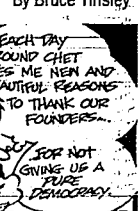

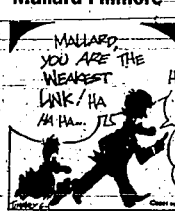

What upsets us is that the canopy was still over his grave and so it showed it had been a recent funeral. Just hard to believe someone could be so thoughtless. Did you think we didn't want the plant back? After all, it was the day after Memorial Day.

Just had to let off steam over someone else's thoughtlessness.

Dream man backs away from marriage

DEAR ABBY: I am a 45-year-old divorced mother of three. "Jeff," the man I am seeing, is kind, patient, understanding and generous. He is a gentleman. There isn't anything I want or wish for that he does not get for me. Jeff sends me flowers several times a month. He loves my children dearly. I could not ask for a more perfect man.

The problem is: HE'S STILL MARRIED. Jeff and his wife have been separated for 10 years. He refuses to see a lawyer, even for consultation, because he says he can't afford a divorce. He's convinced his wife will take "everything." How can he be certain if he doesn't talk to someone?

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

I love Jeff with all my heart, but quite frankly, I am tired of waiting. I want to be his wife. I know Jeff loves me with all his heart, mind, body and soul - but maybe not enough to get married. Abby, how much longer do I wait?

-EVERYTHING EXCEPT THE RING

DEAR EVERYBODY: This gentleman you are seeing may love you with his heart, mind, body and soul - but he loves his current economic status more. Ask yourself: Can I live like this indefinitely, or should I push for a commitment with the risk of "losing" him? Only YOU can answer that.

lending their credit cards to a new friend or neighbor. Normally, it's done because the older person can't pick up his or her own prescription or run an errand, so he or she gives a credit card to the new acquaintance.

My friend's mother gave her credit card to a woman who, in one afternoon, ran up a tab for $10,000 in charges and then took off. The police can do nothing about it because the "kind person" had written permission to use the card. The poor trusting victim had to declare bankruptcy because she could not pay off the debt on her small pension.

Abby, please warn your readers never to blindly trust a person they do not know well.

DEAR WANTS TO HELP: What a horror story! The lesson here is that people who blindly trust get robbed blind. A safer way to handle such a situation would be for the credit card owner to call the pharmacy (or store) and give the card number when the item is being picked up.

Actor hits trooper's car on Utah freeway.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Actor Wilford Brimley collided with a Utah state trooper's car as it crossed a highway to help make an arrest after a high speed chase Wednesday.

Brimley and the state trooper were not seriously injured, KTVX television reported.

The trooper was on his way to help another officer who had pulled over a speeding driver. He crossed four lanes of traffic and pulled in front of Brimley's truck. Brimley ran into the back of the patrol car.

Brimley, 66, was wearing his seat belt and was not cited.

The speeding driver failed a field sobriety test and was arrested on suspicion of drunken driving.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Man dies in crash on Highway 75

KETCHUM — A man died Thursday morning when the pickup in which he was riding rolled on state Highway 75 near Ketchum. Craig Alan Getman, 27, died at the scene of the crash, which occurred at about 11:25 a.m., the Idaho State Police said. The ISP late Thursday did not know Getman's home town.

Nader Steven Jallad, 26, of Saw Pt., Colo., was driving a 2000 Toyota pickup with Getman and Eric David Hatfield, 28, of Los Angeles as passengers. Jallad apparently fell asleep at the wheel near mile post 97, and the pickup drifted off the east side of the road and rolled, the ISP said.

Jallad and Hatfield were taken by air ambulance to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. Jallad was in serious condition and Hatfield's condition was still being evaluated late Thursday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Congressman Simpson to visit Twin Falls today

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Congressman Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, will be in Twin Falls today to meet with local business people and the Twin Falls Housing Authority.

Simpson will speak to the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce from noon to 1 p.m. at the Turf Club, 734 Falls Ave.

He will also meet with veterans and members of the Housing Authority at 3:30 p.m. at 200 Elm St.

Coalition promotes seat belt use with pig kissing

TWIN FALLS — In an effort to improve local seat belt use, the SAFE KIDS Coalition persuaded the directors of three public service agencies to allow their employees' seat belt use to be observed during May. The directors also agreed to have a representative kiss a pig during Western Days if their agency had the lowest seat belt use.

Participating in the friendly competition were the South Central District Health, the city of Twin Falls and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. District health employees had the highest seat belt usage, Cheryl Juntenen, District Health director, will now get to watch Capt. Jim Munn, representing Twin Falls city and Kyla Kelly, director of Magic Valley SAFE KIDS, kiss a pig on Sunday.

Employees from the agencies were secretly observed twice during May to see who was wearing their seat belts and who wasn't. After the first observation, agencies were encouraged to implement strategies to improve seat belt use. The second observation showed the improvement or decline in seat belt usage and determined which agency representatives must pucker up.

The pig kissing event will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday across from the main stage in Twin Falls City Park.

Idaho National Guard Conference set today

BOISE — The annual Idaho National Guard Officer and Enlisted Associations' Joint Conference will take place today and Saturday at the Boise Center on the Grove. The theme is "At Home, At Work, At Arms: Idaho's Citizen Soldiers."

The conference is both an annual planning and coordination event for Idaho National Guard leadership and an opportunity for the public to see what they do. The intent is to enhance the effectiveness of the Idaho National Guard by promoting knowledge and understanding of the guard and its contributions to national defense, state missions and community partnerships.

There will be information booths, National Guard equipment and briefings open to the public. Public briefings will take place in the Golden Eagle Eyrre Room of the Boise Center on the Grove. Topics include: "The Historic Militia National Concept," "Homeland Security" and "The Idaho National Guard in the Total Force." Public briefings times are at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. today and at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Singer praises wilderness corridor act

KETCHUM — When singer Carole King got behind a pretend-mike at a Ketchum pizza parlor Wednesday night, it wasn't to tout her upcoming CD.

Instead, she sang the praises of the Northern Rockies Ecosystem Protection Act (NREPA).

to move along the spine of the Rockies, said King, who has a ranch east of Stanley. "People on both sides have looked at the bill and found it unassailable science. It's politics they usually argue about," she said.

King was one of several members of an environmental group leading Connecticut

Congressman Christopher Shays on a whirlwind tour of Idaho and Montana to show him areas that would be protected under NREPA.

Over a period of seven days that ended Thursday, Shays and members of the Alliance for the Wild Rockies have flown over the Clearwater National Forest, Targhee National Forest, Owyhee Canyonlands, Lemhi Pass and Lost River area. They've paddled the upper stretch of the Salmon River, driven to a salmon hatchery in the Sawtooth Mountains and toured Nature Conservancy holdings at Silver Creek. They've talked with conservationists in the Bitterroot Mountains, hunkered-down with miners at a dinner in Challis and attended to John's ranchers opposed to wolf protection programs.

"I feel guilty in some respects having to spend a week here in such a beautiful part of the country that many of you have been working overtime to protect," Shays told

Big Sky refuses to apologize

By Ruth Stroeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY — An attorney for Big Sky Farms said he does not feel the need to apologize for raising concerns that prompted a Cassia County commissioner to abstain from an appeal process.

County attorney Kerry McMurray had requested the apology the day after Commissioner Shirley Povlsen recused herself from appeal proceedings related to Big Sky being denied a permit to build a large-scale hog farm.

In a May 21 fax to county commissioners, Big Sky attorney Donald Knickrehm raised questions about statements Povlsen made at a Mini-Cassia Economic Development Commission meeting in November 1999. He said such statements, if true, violated Big Sky's due process rights.

With Povlsen abstaining from the May 21 deliberations, commissioners Dennis Crane and Paul Christensen subsequently upheld a decision by the county's planning and zoning board. The board had denied in March a permit that would give Big Sky the OK to build a 595,000-animal hog farm in the Raft River area.

A November 1999 fax from Big Sky developer Ron Achs to the county says that Povlsen, a member of the development commission, voted with that commission to oppose the hog farm. The commission took its stand following a presentation by a Big Sky opponent.

Povlsen said she didn't remember publicly coming out in opposition to the farm because it happened one year and a half ago.

M. Murray asked for the apology in a May 22 letter to the Big Sky attorney. McMurray rediscovered the November 1999 fax in which Achs also waives his "right to ask for (Povlsen's) removal in the future regarding" the hog farm application.

Achs instead asked everyone who was involved in the application or took interest in it to avoid official testimony during the appeal process.

Traffic control

Police prepare for Western Days despite lack of manpower

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If everyone who is expected shows up to help with traffic control during the Western Days Parade should go without a hitch, a Twin Falls Police sergeant said Thursday.

But Sgt. Matt Hicks said there is still concern about potential traffic problems during Saturday's parade.

The reason? A lack of Twin Falls Police Department manpower, Hicks said.

As a city entity, we've kind of gotten out of our own way, so we kind of rely on the rest of the Magic Valley to help out and they have been very receptive," Hicks said. "If everybody shows up that's expected, there won't be a problem."

The city's police department intends on closing about 66 intersections along Blue Lakes Boulevard and Shoshone Street

Want to help?

The Western Days Committee is still looking for volunteers to help with traffic control during the Western Days Parade on Saturday. The parade will move south on Blue Lakes Boulevard from the Magic Valley Mall, turning right on Shoshone Street and ending at Second Avenue North and Shoshone. Vehicle traffic will be blocked from crossing Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Shoshone Street from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. To volunteer, call Bonnie Lezamis at 734-9075 or e-mail her at helpworth@micron.net.

Downtown residents show dismay about carnival

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some neighbors of this year's Western Days carnival are upset that they weren't notified before the rides were set up.

"Number one, we were never notified about any meetings about setting up a carnival in our residential area and we received no notification by telephone or letter telling us this could happen," said Rosemarie Denning, who lives on Fifth Avenue North, directly adjacent to the carnival. "I'm crippled, but if I could walk I would be down by the courthouse picketing right now."

And Denning isn't the only unhappy neighbor. Joshua and Stephanie Nelson, who also live on Fifth Avenue North, are worried about the noise and traffic volumes generated by the carnival — especially for their 15-month-old son Sean.

"It is going to be loud when our son has to sleep," said Joshua Nelson. "His room is closer to the street than ours."

Twin Falls County Commissioner Chairman Gary Grindsstaff said those neighbors should have been notified.

The Western Day's Fair Committee needed approval from the county's commissioners because the parking lot that is home to the carnival this year is county owned.

But Bonnie Lezamis of the Western Days Committee said neighbors living on closed streets near the fair were notified.

Last year's carnival was in the parking lot to the west of the Depot Grill in Old Town. Grindsstaff said he and Commissioner Bill Brockman have received numerous calls from angry neighbors.

Denning said she plans to post signs expressing her unhappiness about the carnival near her home and the commissioners' neglect to notify her and her husband.

She did commend the city's street department for putting up a temporary no-parking sign in front of her home.

"They (Denning and her husband) got some serious medical problems," City Engineer Gary Young said. "I'm hopeful that doesn't get to be the order of the day, though — running around putting in temporary no-parking signs."

Afflicted with hollow-viscus myopathy, Mike Pollard was unable to digest his food. He lived on liquid feedings taken through a surgically implanted tube for about two years. Many people are unable to survive past a year on the feedings because they damage the Friends organized dinners, auctions, yard sales and many other events. They raised more than $70,000, which was used to finance a plan to get Pollard to Pittsburgh where organs became available, and for other needs not covered by insurance. Doctors gave him five hours to get to the hospital from Idaho.

An initial 28-hour surgery did not result in a transplant because his liver was in such poor shape. As a result, he had to undergo a second 28-hour procedure 16 days later. He received a stomach, small intestine, pancreas, duodenum and liver. The expenses are not covered. Pollard's medication costs $1,300 for a five-week supply. For those who want to make donations, a Web account in Pollard's name has been established at First Federal Bank in Burley.

Idaho Public Television could fall under governance of universities

LEWISTON (AP) - The director of Idaho Public Television is baffled by the Idaho Board of Education's decision to charge a council with examining the idea of placing public television under governance of the state's universities. "Frankly, I am scratching my head trying to figure out where all of this is coming from," Peter Morrill said. "We really never expected it."

On May 17, during a meeting in Boise, the board passed the idea of placing public television under governance of the state's universities. It could mean a renewed synergy between Idaho Public Television and the schools, more local programming and stronger communications programs for the state schools.

Or it could mean the end of Falls, said during the meeting. University presidents had been lamenting weak communications schools during the presidential reviews, Hall added. He moved for the President's Council - made up of the state's university heads - to come to the board in September with a proposal on how universities could collaboratively manage the station license and enhance the schools' communication departments.

Effectively, the state schools could govern Idaho Public Television. It could mean a renewed synergy between Idaho Public Television and the schools, more local programming and stronger communications programs for the state schools.

Or it could mean the end of Idaho Public Television outside of Boise. Through the early 1980s, Idaho Public Television ran on individual stations, said Roger Wallins, a University of Idaho English professor. Like other stations, KUTD in Moscow aired national public television shows and a number created locally. Of those, two programs produced in Moscow caused a statewide uproar, Wallins said.

In the mid 1980s the Legislature cut Idaho Public Television's state funding completely. The cut wounded the stations, and a slash in federal funding threatened to close them down. Idaho Public Television survived, but the stations banded together under one, Boise-centered control.

Congressman says he'll pay wetlands fee, but wants to choose the recipient

LEWISTON (AP) - U.S. Rep. C.L. "Butch" Otter, R-Idaho, says he will pay a $50,000 fine for violating the Clean Water Act when he filled in wetlands on his ranch along the Boise River, but he wants to choose who gets the money. "I have decided not to appeal the case," Otter said. "But I'm trying to work out an agreement where instead of paying the fine to the EPA, I get to pay it into an environmental fund that will truly create more habitat instead of hire more bureaucrats."

Otter has until June 9 to pay the fine, which was reduced from $80,000 by an administrative law judge in April.

The former four-term lieutenant governor wants an extension of the payment deadline to get a decision on his request. At issue was Otter's decision to transform a reedy marsh on his 60-acre tract near Boise into a bass-filled pond with waterfalls and flower beds.

"You can bet that I'll be introducing legislation that when a person gets fined for things like I was fined for, that they be given a choice of where the money should go."

- Rep. Butch Otter

altering wetlands without permits. In the two previous cases, in 1992 and 1995, Otter was cited but was allowed to keep the changes in place. Otter has been talking with conservation groups including Ducks Unlimited and the Nature Conservancy about taking the penalty money to restore the wetland. "If I did damage, as they say, to the environment, then that's what I should repair," the congressman said. "If they do not allow me to do that, you can bet that I'll be introducing legislation that when a person gets fined for things like I was fined for, that they be given a choice of where that money should go."

Otter serves on the House Transportation water resources subcommittee, which oversees federal water projects, water-pollution controls and wetlands protection.

Judge limits case in drama lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A drama student who claims the University of Utah discriminated - against - her Mormon beliefs by requiring she read from scripts containing profanity won't be allowed to discuss other departments' curriculum changes in court.

U.S. District Judge Tena Campbell ruled Wednesday against considering examples of what other university departments have done to accommodate student objections.

Campbell took under advisement arguments in the university's motion to dismiss the suit by Christina Axson-Flynn, who dropped out of the university.

Alain Balmanno, an assistant Utah attorney general represented five U. faculty members, argued the university has the right to decide what may be taught and to whom.

Citing cases where the U.S. Supreme Court upheld this principle of academic freedom, Balmanno argued that in Axson-Flynn's case, accommodating her religious viewpoints would have required a change in the curriculum.

Steffen Johnson of Chicago, one of the Axson-Flynn's lawyers, argued that his client's case isn't about academic freedom but about her constitutional rights to freedom of speech and religion.

Johnson argued that the university accommodated other students' religious beliefs, such as allowing Jewish student Jeremy Rische to miss classes for Yom Kippur.

"The university says participation and attendance are very central to the curriculum," said Johnson. But when it comes to letting Axson-Flynn change a few objectionable words in a class skit, the university wouldn't bend. "Is it essential that one be able to take on roles where you use profanity?" said Johnson. "We disagree with that. If this case moves ahead, we'll bring testimony that this is not central to preparing actors for the professional world, he said."

Local schools get state checks for facilities

The Times-News
BOISE — Representatives of Minidoka County and Wendell school districts will be presented the first distribution of the state's Safe School Funding Act today.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne will be joined by State Treasurer Ron Crane and Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard at a 1:30 p.m. press conference to distribute the checks under provisions of House Bill 315, passed by the 2001 Legislature.

Representatives from Troy School District will also be present.

The three districts won approval of levies to address life safety concerns in their schools. They will receive payments for the interest on the levies.

Corridor

four dozen people who gathered to meet with him in Ketchum.

But NREPA is about more than protecting pretty places, said Kaz Thea, who runs an Alliance office in Ketchum.

This area — a mix of wilderness and roaded Forest Service land in Idaho, Wyoming, Montana and Canada — provides two-thirds of the water that drains in the United States.

It also includes five distinct ecosystems, which still contain virtually all the plant species and wildlife that Lewis and Clark witnessed 200 years ago.

Much of the area, including the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness and the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness, was protected under the 1964 Wilderness Act. But 20 million acres of critical wildlife habitat remain unprotected, Alliance members say.

Unprotected areas include the Mallard-Larkin area of the Clearwater National Forest. Biologists consider it a better place for seven species of caribou than any place in Canada because of its biodiversity. Naturally, Interstate 90 near Kellogg and Wallace wouldn't be removed to provide a wildlife corridor. But advocates could be built over the highway at strategic locations, as Canadians have done, to allow wildlife to cross.

Shays said he was shocked at the road building damage in the mountains.

"If you ever see it from a plane, it will get your heart out," he said. "The roads don't just go up to the top. They snake around the mountains and criss-cross so, in some cases, you see more roads than trees. The sediment destroys fish habitat and cars bring in noxious weeds. I saw tracks that I thought would regenerate quickly only to be told that I could come back 15 years from now and see the same tracks."

Not only do we need to stop building roads, but we should bring in noxious weeds. I saw tracks that I thought would regenerate quickly only to be told that I could come back 15 years from now and see the same tracks."

People say, 'What business is it of yours, beings you're an Easterner?' I just want you to know I, like you, own this land and I want this land to be preserved. We won't have a world to live in if we continue our neglectful ways," he said.

Boisean Mike Medberry, who has been advocating for protection of the Boulder-White Clouds for 20 years, said he was amazed to hear a Republican saying such things.

Wildlife corridors do make sense, but he was not optimistic about the act getting passed any time soon, he said.

But King, an Alliance board member, urges her supporters not to write Congressman who have traditionally been unfriendly to the environment.

King said members of Congress laughed when she began testifying for the bill. But NREPA garnered 111 bipartisan supporters during the 9th Congressional session and has enlisted 70 supporters in the current session.

"The bill hasn't changed in any major way since then, but public awareness has changed. There's more receptivity," she said.

Police

Avenue North where the parade will end.

Because of the size of this year's parade, the city's police department just doesn't have the manpower to handle all traffic control, Hicks said. But with help from volunteers, and other sheriff's and police departments, the parade should not be a problem.

"We're going to be O.K. as far as personnel and resources. We've had to enlist the help from other officers from other departments," Hicks said. "We have a number of citizen volunteers that will come in and help us also."

Wayne Tousley said county reserve deputies will be on hand to assist with traffic control during the parade.

The Idaho State Police and neighboring city police departments, including officers from Jerome and Kimberly's police departments, plan to help with traffic control.

Also, volunteers will work traffic control at intersections along Blue Lakes Boulevard and Shoshone Street.

The worst possible scenario would be traffic congestion problems of accidents because of the parade, parade organizers agree.

Standoff has roots in illness and poverty

SANDPOINT (AP) — People who tried to help the McGuckin family over the years were rebuffed by words, dogs and, finally, the threat of guns.

As the family was ravaged by multiple sclerosis, mental illness and poverty, friends tried to offer food and other assistance.

JoAnn McGuckin

"We were trying to check on them and get them help for years," said Mary Peters, who has known the family a long time.

The last time she went to their dilapidated house in the lakeside community of Garfield Bay, she was met by snarling dogs and a shotgun-toting family member.

"They were thinking we were all their enemies," Peters said.

She displayed a decade-old picture of the family in a church directory showing a smiling Michael and JoAnn McGuckin and five of their eight children. Two children, now adults, have

Six of the children remained inside the house Thursday, refusing to answer requests from Bonner County sheriff's deputies to surrender and receive help from social service agencies.

And they apparently have enough food to hold out for a while, a local relief worker said.

A family friend picked up a 200-pound box of staples for them at Bonner Community Food Center last Friday, director Alice Wallace said Thursday.

The family routinely received food from the center, she said. Of reports that the children had been subsisting on lily-pod soup and lake water, she said that wasn't all they had and suggested it might have been "a one-time thing, an experimental thing."

The standoff began when Michael McGuckin, who worked at a nearby lumber mill, became ill with multiple sclerosis. He died three weeks ago at the age of 61, and was buried last Friday.

Caring for her husband and the children apparently has long been a struggle for JoAnn, 44, who became increasingly paranoid over time, according to those who knew her. She blamed chemicals sprayed on roads for her husband's illness and feared the government would take their home and children.

The family refused help from social service agencies and the young children were kept home from school. They also had no utilities, so the home had no heat, electricity or telephone service. Lacking power for their well pump, they scooped water from a nearby lake.

The family kept more than two dozen dogs, many of which mated with coyotes. One had reverted to a wild state, Sheriff Phil Jarvis said.

The oldest of the eight children, a young man, lives in California and has little contact with his family, said Rev. Dennis Day of St. Joseph Catholic Church, which the family once attended.

A 19-year-old daughter was essentially raising her younger siblings until she had a falling out with her mother and left, Day said. She was reportedly trying to help end the stalemate.

Daschle says Yucca Mountain a dead issue

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Nevada got a boost in its fight to keep nuclear waste from being stored at Yucca Mountain when the incoming Senate majority leader on Thursday put up a formidable partisan roadblock.

"I think the Yucca Mountain issue is dead," Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said after arriving in Las Vegas. "As long as we're in the majority, it's dead."

Since 1987, Yucca Mountain has been the only site studied to become the graveyard for 70,000 tons of the nation's spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive research waste.

The Energy Department is scheduled to forward its recommendation next year to Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham, who will make a recommendation to President Bush. The earliest it could open is 2010.

The state's bipartisan congressional delegation, Republican Gov. Kenny Guinn, state and city leaders and the gambling industry are opposed to the dump site, 90 miles from Las Vegas. The state Senate on Wednesday passed a bill to put up $4 million for a legal and public relations fight against the proposed dump.

Daschle, in town to speak at a private fund-raiser for Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., spoke with reporters when he arrived at the Las Vegas Executive Air Terminal.

Daschle's trip to Las Vegas was his first outside of South Dakota since Vermont Sen. James Jeffords left the Republican Party last week to become an independent, giving Democrats control of the Senate with a 50-49 majority.

Daschle will become the Senate's new majority leader next week and Reid the majority whip, the No. 2 man in the Senate.

Daschle said the new positions he and Reid will have "will allow us to put Nevada's agenda on the national agenda."

He then spoke briefly about Yucca Mountain and predicted a proposed ban on college sports betting won't pass the Senate either.

"Because it passed on a committee 10-10, it's very likely it's in for a rough road," he said. "I think we can convince the majority of senators to be opposed to it as well."

Earlier this month, the Senate Commerce Committee split 10-10 over whether to get a bill out during the meeting on college sports, which is legal only in Nevada. The tie vote meant the bill survived and now goes to the full Senate.

Thursday's $1,000-a-head fund-raiser at the Ball Hall Casino Club in Reno raised more than $500,000 for Reid's 2004 re-election campaign.

Big Sierra fire is near containment; cost millions of timber, mostly on national forest lands, federal officials said Thursday.

More than 150 fire engines, 10 helicopters, four air tankers and 18 bulldozers worked to complete containment lines around 70 percent of the so-called Devil fire late Thursday afternoon. It was expected to be encircled by fire lines late Thursday and under control by Monday, the Susanville Interagency Fire Center said.

The fire threatened the town of Susanville on Sunday, forcing evacuations of 60 homes and a hospital and closing streets with dark soot. Gusty, erratic winds caused the fire to jump the Susan River to the north late Wednesday, again threatening homes. But aggressive attack stopped the new surge, fire managers said.

The Susanville blaze started about seven miles west of town Sunday on private timberland after being sparked by a man shooting targets in the woods, said late Department of Forestry spokeswoman Wendy McIntosh. He was cited for causing a fire and letting it escape.

The fire skirted eight homes, coming as close as 30 feet to some of them. About 140 residents were evacuated, but most had returned to their homes by Thursday. Two firefighters were injured.

Meanwhile, firefighters moved closer Thursday to containing a wildfire that has burned 1,900 acres in the Catalpa Mountains in southern New Mexico.

Farm

Knickerhohn said Thursday that Big Sky did not ask Povlsen to remove herself from the appeal. He also said he didn't feel there was a need to apologize.

In a May 23 written response to McMurray's request, Knickerhohn said he was unaware of Ache's answer, but the legal effect of this "communication" remains to be determined.

Nevertheless, Knickerhohn wrote, commissioners had said at a May 14 appeal hearing that they had no inclination to vote a certain way, had not made any public statements or had one-sided communication with others.

Such assertions made by Povlsen and Christensen were "inaccurate and misleading," Knickerhohn's letter said.

While the letter refers to Povlsen's involvement in the Minicassia Economic Development Commission, it does not say how Christensen may have violated the public hearing process.

Knickerhohn said Thursday he could not be more specific regarding the allegations against Christensen.

Christensen couldn't be reached for comment Thursday afternoon.

Will Herrington, the attorney representing the county commission during the appeal, said he didn't know what Christensen did that may have jeopardized the process.

"Commissioner Christensen's position, I'm sure, is going to be that he did nothing to indicate he was predisposed," he said.

Herrington said he will have the final draft of the commission's decision ready by June 11 at the earliest.

Big Sky has also raised the issue of the "intermittent and inappropriate delays in the processing of the application," Knickerhohn's letter said.

"When Big Sky receives a copy of the final decision, it will determine whether to appeal the commission's decision to a district judge and 'assert the violations of Big Sky's due process and equal protection rights,'" the letter said.

Geothermal energy offers potential savings

BOISE (AP) - Southern Idaho is sitting atop some of the largest reserves of geothermal energy in the nation, and experts believe tapping that resource can take a significant bite out of escalating power bills. "We need to take a fresh look at this," Roy Mink of the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute said...

Deputy Assistant Energy Secretary Robert Dixon said the Bush administration is committed to expanding the use of geothermal power as it is to other renewable power resources, including easing restrictions on access to federal lands where much of that resource is located. But Dixon said it will take time and the commitment as well of state and local governments to maximize geothermal resources...

Bodies of Mexican immigrants who died in border-crossing return home

ATZALAN, Mexico (AP) - A man who went north to find a better life returned home Thursday, their simple, cloth-covered coffins carried in a midnight caravan up to their impoverished mountain villages. "Entire communities turned out before dawn to meet the coffins holding sons, brothers and friends who died in the furnace-like Arizona desert last week while trying to evade the U.S. Border Patrol..."

Josefina Garcia, 72, right, looks toward the coffin of her nephew Alejandro Marin, 28, while his mother sits beside it in San Pedro Attepepan, Veracruz, Thursday. Alejandro was one of 14 who died in Arizona while trying to enter the United States.

"We are not wanderers here; here, we feel our blood," said Melquiades Mendez Cortes, a town councilman who accompanied the coffins.

"I was one of the 14 who died here from the southern state of Veracruz. Seven were from villages scattered in the lush coffee country around this county seat about 40 miles west of the port of Veracruz."

"The state government charged a plane that carried the 12 coffins back to Veracruz on Wednesday night. Then the coffins were unloaded and brought home in caravans whose headlights cut a path up the winding roads to the mountains."

"Thursday was a day for grieving. Friends and relatives brought flowers to the coffins, and came to talk about and remember the dead. For most, the funerals were scheduled for Friday."

"For many, there was frustration both at being forced by poverty to try to cross the border, and at the deadly difficulties imposed on those who try."

"Why don't they treat us like human beings?" Mendez asked. "On Wednesday, an Arizona grand jury indicted Jesus Lopez Ramos, allegedly the guide who abandoned the men in the desert, up 25 counts of smuggling - for each of the 14 immigrants who died and for 11 others who survived."

"The would-be immigrants crossed the U.S.-Mexico border into the Cabeza Prieta National Wildlife Refuge in southwest Arizona on May 19, drove for about 90 minutes, then set out on foot. Told they would have to walk only a short way to a highway, instead they faced 70 miles known as 'The Devil's Path' and temperatures of up to 115 degrees."

Four days later, U.S. Border Patrol officers began finding the

Regulators hope to prove power manipulation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A year after California's electricity price shocks began, regulators say they are close to proving how power wholesalers aggravated a crisis that so far has raised customer rates by $5.7 billion, saddled two utilities with $8.2 billion in losses and dumped a $13 billion bailout bill on taxpayers.

California lawmakers and regulators are determined to recover some of that money from the power wholesalers who have cashed in on the crisis. Toward that end, the California Public Utilities Commission, Attorney General Bill Lockyer and the California Electricity Oversight Board are trying to prove out-of-state wholesalers illegally manipulated the market to create artificial supply shortages that have driven wholesale electricity prices as high as $1,900 per megawatt hour.

"I don't think these are going to be very hard cases to make, even if they didn't break the letter of the law, they clearly have violated the spirit of the law."

—Owen Clements, chief special litigator for San Francisco

Before California's power woes began in June 2000, wholesale prices on the spot market rarely climbed above $150 per megawatt hour.

California's Legislature also has formed two special investigative committees to look into the allegations of market misconduct. And at least five suits, including one filed by San Francisco City Attorney Louise Renne, are seeking damages from power wholesalers on behalf of all Californians.

At the very least, the investigators say they will show the wholesalers violated federal laws against "unjust and unreasonable" electricity prices.

"I don't think these are going to be very hard cases to make," said Owen Clements, chief special litigator for San Francisco. "Even if they didn't break the letter of the law, they clearly have violated the spirit of the law."

The investigators also suspect that the wholesalers have created a variety of more sinister abuses, possibly by colluding. Those allegations will be hard to prove, according to legal and energy experts.

The power wholesalers say they have done nothing wrong, arguing that they are being turned into scapegoats by a 1996 deregulation law sculpted by California lawmakers and the two utilities, Pacific Gas and Electric and Southern California Edison, that have reported a combined $8.2 billion in losses since June 2000.

Michael Aguirre, a San Diego attorney handling one of the private suits, fears California regulators and politicians are spending more time rattling cages than digging into the labyrinthine operations of the power wholesalers.

Seventeen suffer minor injuries after Las Vegas casino-hotel fire

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Seventeen people were hurt Thursday, none seriously, in a two-alarm fire at a downtown Las Vegas casino-hotel, authorities said.

Casualties at the six-story Gold Spike hotel broke windows and climbed out windows — including one woman who broke her ankle jumping from a fourth-floor window to a second-floor rooftop — as thick smoke billowed about 11 a.m.

The unidentified woman and two men were plucked from the second-floor roof when firefighters first arrived.

"It was just blazing with black smoke," said Paul Weiss, a water service contractor who said he was working in a third-floor room when the fire started in a neighboring room.

A 3-year-old girl and 16 adults, including two Las Vegas police officers, were treated for a variety of ailments, including smoke inhalation, heat exhaustion and chest pains, said Tim Szymanski, Las Vegas Fire Department spokesman. He called the woman's broken ankle the most serious injury.

The officers went door-to-door through the hotel to make sure everyone was evacuated, Szymanski said.

Firefighters were investigating how the fire started. Damage was estimated at $150,000, with most of it confined to the room where a man and woman first reported their mattress on fire.

"A lot of people panicked and broke out windows when they didn't have to," the fire department spokesman said.

Court blocks timber sales in Oregon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In a blow to the logging industry, a federal appeals panel blocked the harvest of thousands of acres of old-growth forest in southwestern Oregon, ruling Thursday the federal government did not adequately address the plight of protected salmon.

throughout California, Oregon and Washington state — all idled pending the panel's ruling. "This is a victory for salmon," said Patti Goldman, of the Earthjustice Legal Defense Fund, which sued the government on behalf of a host of environmental and fishing groups.

In the Oregon case, the three-judge appellate panel said the National Marine Fisheries Service failed to adequately consider the harm logging would have on endangered salmon runs on 20 of 23 Umpqua National Forest and Bureau of Land Management parcels in the Umpqua River Basin around Roseburg, Ore. The basin, comprising those lands draining into the Umpqua River, is home to Umpqua cutthroat trout and threatened runs of Oregon Coast coho salmon that are protected under the Endangered Species Act.

Don Ho will appear at tribal casino

WORLEY (AP) — The man who made "Tiny Bubbles" synonymous with Hawaii is coming to the Coeur d'Alene tribal casino in northern Idaho.

Don Ho, 70, will perform for one show Saturday evening in Worley. The native Hawaiian got his start in a cocktail lounge called Honey's in Honolulu and became popular in the early 1960s when he began playing at Duke's in Waikiki.

His laid-back singing and storytelling made him a hit on the mainland as well. By the mid-'60s, Ho was playing in Hollywood, Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, Chicago and New York.

Is your banker really the decision-maker? Or is a higher power pulling the strings?

When you do business with the big banks, you're never really sure you're talking to the real decision-maker. That can be pretty frustrating when you need a quick answer on a loan. Or if you need to know by how much your checking account was overdrawn. Or why your mortgage loan hasn't been approved. The problem is that most of the big banks are pulling all the strings from some distant location. So, they don't always understand your situation. Sometimes they don't even care. All of which makes our bank a good place to take your business. We live, work, and play right here in the community. We probably know you and your family. We care about your business and are eager to serve you. And if anybody is going to be pulling any strings around here, it's going to be you.

Officials urge extended deadline for compensation of Nazi-era slaves

BERLIN — With German compensation finally set to reach surviving Nazi-era slave laborers, industry and the government faced a long-simmering problem Thursday: making sure all victims get a chance to apply.

Officials from Eastern Europe and the United States urged German lawmakers to extend an Aug. 11 deadline, a day after Parliament voted for the start of payouts from the $4.6 billion fund after more than two years of tough negotiations.

Many of the more than 1 million people forced to work under inhumane conditions for the Nazi war economy live in remote parts of Eastern Europe or in South America, and advocates worry that some who had given up hope will need time to put together the proof needed to receive money.

"There are still a lot of dangers that could follow yesterday's happy solution," Poland's ambassador in Berlin, Jerzy Kranz, told German radio.

Police visit activist on anniversary of China protest

BEIJING — An advocate for victims of China's 1989 crackdown on democracy protesters was visited by police and questioned about her efforts to force an official investigation, the woman said Thursday.

Retired university professor Ding Zilin said two police officers came to her home after 10 p.m. Wednesday and questioned her for a half-hour. She said they wanted to know about her recent activities and plans for the June 4 anniversary of the army assault on pro-democracy protesters in Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

She said she was not warned or threatened.

"I told them I'd already gone to bed, but they insisted on coming in. Overall, though, their attitude was pretty OK," said Ding, a retired university professor.

Study indicates oily fish might ward off cancer

LONDON — Eating even moderate amounts of oily fish such as mackerel, salmon and sardines might cut the risk of prostate cancer in half, new research suggests.

Omega-3 fatty acids, plentiful

World in brief

In dark, oily fish, are known to fight heart disease. They also have shown promise in protecting against cancers of the colon, rectum and ovary.

Previous studies have shown fatty fish oils can impede the growth of prostate cancer cells in laboratory dishes and in animals. In another study, prostate cancer was found less frequently in men who had high levels of fatty acids in their blood.

Now, a new study, published this week in The Lancet medical journal, found that Swedish men who ate greasy fish only occasionally or not at all were twice as likely to develop prostate cancer as those who made it a moderate or large part of their diet.

Giant sculpture portraying apartheid leader collapses

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A 13-foot-high copper sculpture portraying an apartheid leader collapsed Thursday, slightly injuring two people, police said.

The falling bust of J.G. Strijdom damaged the top two floors of an underground parking garage below the square where the sculpture had been resting on a pedestal.

Two homeless people, who had spent the night in the garage, were treated at the hospital for minor injuries, police Inspector Anton Breed said.

Officials had not yet determined what caused the collapse, but no foul play was suspected, Breed said.

Chemical factory blast kills 11, injures 10 in India

NEW DELHI, India — A powerful explosion ripped through a chemical factory in western India on Thursday, killing at least 11 workers and injuring 10 others, a news report said.

Police believe the blast was caused by a buildup of pressure in the factory's main boiler, the Press Trust of India news agency said.

Thirty-five workers were on the night shift when the explosion took place at the Exopel India Ltd. factory in Pune, a city 70 miles southeast of Bombay.

Police officer Sridhar Pandurang Jadhav was quoted as saying.

The factory makes guanidine nitrate, which is used in chemical explosives.

Jadhav was quoted as saying that there was no evidence of sabotage.

Palestinian bus driver gets jail for hit-and-run murders

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian driver who plowed his bus into a crowd of Israelis in February was sentenced Thursday to eight life terms, one for each person he killed.

Khalil Abu Olbeh, 35, had driven a group of Palestinian workers from Gaza to Tel Aviv on Feb. 14 when he spotted Israeli soldiers and civilians waiting at a bus stop in Azur, just south of Tel Aviv, witnesses told the court.

Abu Olbeh, who lives in Gaza City and had a work permit for Israel, turned his bus around, sped up and rammed the vehicle into the crowd. He killed seven soldiers — four of them women — and a female civilian.

Vatican workers hurry to finish pope's resting place

VATICAN CITY — Crowds of Roman Catholic faithful will join Pope John Paul II in St. Peter's Square on Sunday for their first glimpse at a see-through, bullet-proof coffin holding the body of John XXIII, one of the most popular pontiffs of modern times.

Vatican workers hurried Thursday to put final touches on the new resting place for John XXIII, whose well-preserved body was removed from the grottoes under St. Peter's Basilica earlier this year — part of preparations to give the late pontiff a resting place more accessible to admirers.

Palestinian PLO leader dies at 60

JERUSALEM (AP) — Faisal Hussein, treated by much of the world as the Palestinians' foreign minister, was a welcome guest on Israeli milk shows, diplomatically explaining his people's claims to Jerusalem in the Hebrew he had learned in Israeli jails.

Yet the patrician PLO leader, whose gentle airs projected moderation, would also scuffle in dusty pinstriped shirts with riot

London with Israeli opposition politicians to discuss how the two police to protest Israeli rule in the city. Such contradictions prevailed until his last days — he died Thursday at age 60.

A month ago, Hussein met in London with Israeli opposition politicians to discuss how the two peoples could one day share Jerusalem. This week, in Kuwait, he attended a conference on why the Arab world must freeze ties with Israel as a response to eight months of Israeli-Palestinian fighting.

Hussein once explained the enigma to Israeli peace activists who were puzzled when, in a speech in the late 1980s, he defended the Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule.

Western Days returns to T.F.

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - They keep movin' the furniture, but it's the same old holiday. Western Days, Twin Falls' annual hail-and-howdy-to-summer, resumes for the 19th time this morning, drawing 25,000 folks or so to the 'doin's in and around City Park.

The party starts from the Magic Valley Mall to downtown, starting at noon Saturday - and the three-day musical jamboree are the traditional highlights, but the Saturday night main event is new this year.

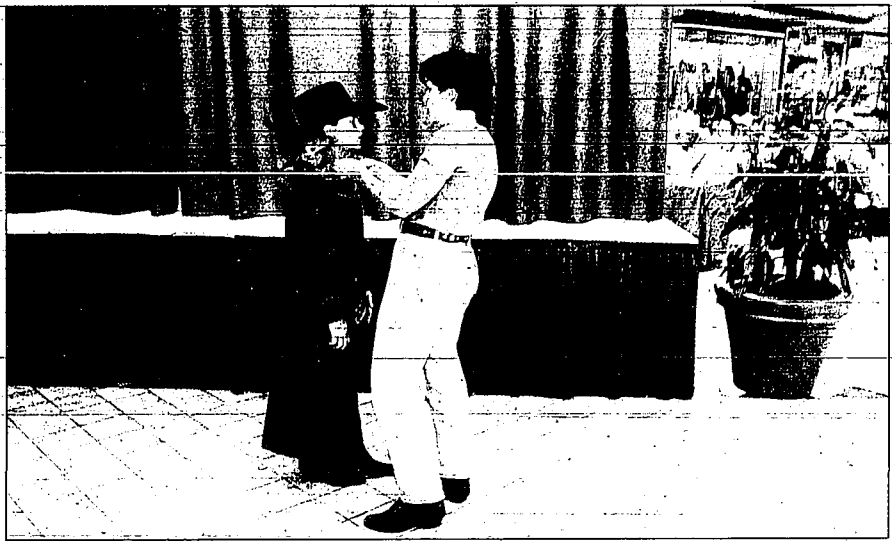

The Professional Bull Riding Invitational Inc. will bring a 2 1/2 exhibition of verigo and verve to the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer Saturday night.

There's also a street dance in downtown Twin Falls tonight, sponsored by Crowley's Soda Fountain, and a pancake breakfast and later a barbecue Saturday.

The popular 3-on-3 basketball tournament, held Saturday and Sunday around City Park, is back, as is the fun run - this year a half-marathon starting at 10 a.m. Saturday and a 5K run following the parade route at 11:30.

As always, food and craft vendors will abound in the park, a carnival will run for three days across Shoshone Street in the Twin Falls County parking lot, and there will be quirky attractions ranging from a dummy head roping sponsored by Jim Vickers to a show by Valentine's Performing Pigs Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

The Western Days Queen contest starts this morning with horsemanship and continues this afternoon at 3 at the Magic Valley Mall with speeches and modeling.

Shelley Perkins puts a few final touches on her daughter Jentry Perkins' dress during last year's Western Days Queen competition. This year's queen competition runs all day today, with a horsemanship contest starting at 9 a.m., and speech and modeling at 3 p.m. at the Magic Valley Mall. The queen will be crowned Saturday night during the Professional Bull Riders Invitational at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer.

Contestants will take part in a fashion show at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the band shell in City Park, and the queen will be crowned at Saturday night's bull-riding event at the fairgrounds. Contestants this year are Staci Fife of Jerome and Sara Barker of Twin Falls for queen; Myisha

Mueller of Twin Falls, Kari Gooding of Parma, Melissa Webb of Kimberly, Miriam Allen of Jerome and Stefanie King of Burley for teen queen, and Amy Huddlestone of Filer, Jentry Perkins of Bellevue, Allison Stephens of Twin Falls and Andren Fritz of Filer for princess.

The Western Days queen will represent the Magic Valley at the Miss Idaho Rodeo Pageant in July in Nampa, while the teen queen will compete at the Miss Teen Rodeo Teen Idaho Pageant in August in Gooding. Lucy Gomez of Horseshoe Bend is the reigning Western Days queen, Jaclyn Bruhn of Filer is the teen queen, and Brianna Fife of Middleton is the princess. During the parade Saturday afternoon, all vehicle traffic will be blocked from crossing both Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Shiphone Street from about 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Upcoming events in the Magic Valley

- June 9: Live History Day, Idaho Farm and Range Museum, Jerome

Moto-rock comes to Twin Falls

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Ernie Ball Moto Music Madness, a quirky combination of hard rock and hard knocks, will stop at the Magic Valley Speedway on Thursday.

It's part of a 40-city tour by the San Luis Obispo, Calif.-based promoter, who combines the aerial insanity of freestyle motocross with the latest in live music, plus an interactive consumer area.

The gate opens at 4 p.m. with live music, and the motocross competition begins at 7. Fans can also meet with the riders and bands beforehand, play guitars, and check out other interactive booths.

The event features world-class freestyle, and the motocross athletes, including Mike Jones, Clifford Adoptante, Trevor Vines, Dan Pastor, Jeremy Carter, performing adrenaline-driven stunts on their motorized bikes in mid-air, from handstands (the "Bart Attack") to flying through the air holding on to just the rear fender (the "Superman").

If you go...

- What: Ernie Ball Moto Music Madness will play Twin Falls.
- Where: Magic Valley Speedway, one mile west of the Twin Falls airport.
- When: Thursday; gate opens at 4 p.m. with live music, and the motocross competition starts at 7 p.m.
- How much: For ticket information, call the Magic Valley Speedway at 734-3700.

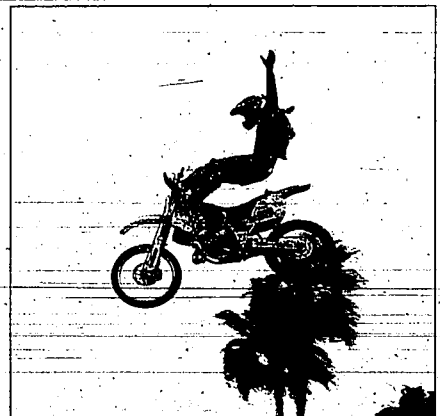

Live music will contribute to the festival-like atmosphere. Bands including Beyond/BMG artists Transmission OK and Indy favorite, The Army of Freshmen, are scheduled to perform. Ernie Ball's Local Heroes stage will also turn up the volume, featuring two local groups selected by local radio stations.

The Los Angeles-based Transmission OK is a rock quartet flavored with the vibe of the '60s and '70s. Guitarist and singer Blues Saraceno is considered a guitar whiz kid, releasing his first solo album at age 16 and two more before his 23rd birthday.

The Army of Freshmen, a heavy pop rock band out of Ventura, Calif., will introduce their self-titled debut CD on Blue Hand Records in May 2001. MD Extreme Promotions, a sponsor along with the Ernie Ball Company, is a pioneer in extreme sports promotions. The company, owned by Marc Burnett and Indy race car driver Davey Hamilton, has produced more than 150 freestyle motocross demonstrations, competitions and choreographed events including the "Extreme Freestyle Challenge" held at 20 racetracks and speedways in 2000.

The Ernie Ball Company was the first to offer rock strings with the creation of Slinkys, and further revolutionized the market by offering guitarists Custom-Gauge single strings. EB also produces Music Man guitars and basses, volume pedals, and other accessories.

Freestyle motocross jumper Clifford Adoptante will be among the athletes performing at Ernie Ball's Music Madness Tour, Thursday at the Magic Valley Speedway.

PARADE APPLICATIONS
As the primary parade season is upon us in Twin Falls, the Twin Falls Police Department feels it has become necessary to streamline the application process to provide better service. This will allow the department to be adequately informed and able to effectively participate in the parade/fun-run planning process well before the actual event.
As outlined in the City Code (9-13-4a), an application for a parade permit must be filed with the Chief of Police not less than twenty (20) days nor more than forty-five (45) days before the date of the parade/fun-run. Again, this will allow the department adequate time to plan the event and provide the necessary resources to conduct the parade safely.
Thank you in advance for your cooperation regarding these applications. If you have any questions, please contact our Traffic Supervisor, Sergeant Matt Hicks at 735-7297.

Public Library

COME VISIT THE LIBRARY!
OUR HOURS OF SERVICE ARE:
Monday, Friday and Saturday from 9-6;
Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for 9-9.

Come enjoy the joy of reading! Sign ups are now available in Children's Services for some great summer reading programs for June and July!

"All Roads Lead to Your Library" is the theme for the program for those students who have completed kindergarten through third grade. Participants will earn points by reading books indicated by the names of towns on their reading road maps.

"K&K" is the reading program open to those students who have completed fourth through sixth grade. Complete a jigsaw puzzle by reading types of books indicated on each puzzle piece. Then, once a month bring a bag lunch to the Library and enjoy a brief introduction to the VRCA newsletters for 2001 as well as an hour of high interest speakers, camaraderie and cookies!

"Books 2 Movies" is the summer reading challenge for those students who have completed seventh through ninth grade. Join other participants as you strive to reach an overall reading goal. Watch classic movies and then stretch your mind as you compare the movie theme with themes found in books.

Reinforce the reading skills of your kindergarten through third graders by scheduling them to spend a special reading time full of fun and games in June with our Grandma Melva from CSI's Foster Grandparent Program. Contact Children's Services to sign up.

Kindergarten through third grade join Mr. Claude Cash for "Friday at Four" as we learn about cats with stories and a craft.

The first of the Candlelight Tales is scheduled for Thursday, June 7 at 7pm. This is a family storytime to bring a quiet end to a family's busy day. Meet in the Storywell kiva. No registration required.

Author Brad Dimeck will give a slide show and lecture on the book Stink Without a Sound: The Tale of Colorado River Hoopsmoon of Glenn and Bessie Hyde on Saturday, June 9, for 4-6th in the Library's Program Room.

'Moulin Rouge,' 'The Animal' come to local theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Knight Ridder Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Along Came A Spider'

There are both mysteries and surprises in this reasonably diverting albeit frequently improbable thriller, but the biggest mystery of all is hardly a surprise: How does star Morgan Freeman manage to give a master class in acting every time he appears on screen? The film tries its hardest to outsmart us, yet in general outline and rhythm it's fairly standard. With Monica Potter. Directed by Lee Tamahori. (1:43. R, for violence and language).

'Angel Eyes'

Jennifer Lopez plays a crack-jack Chicago cop, but her film's potential thriller opening unexpectedly - and rewardingly - leads to an unusual love story between Lopez's beautiful and formidable policewoman and an enigmatic, clearly traumatized young man (Jim Caviezel). With Terrence Howard, Sonia Braga. (1:43. R, for language, violence and a scene of sexuality).

'The Animal'

Experimental transplants give injured cop Rob Schneider the physical prowess and baser instincts of animals. 'Survivor' Colleen Haskell co-stars.

'Bridget Jones' Diary'

A cheerful and cheeky concoction that survives its excesses and the liberties it takes with the best-selling novel about the comic agonies of being single in a married world by smartly mixing knock-about farce with fairy tale romance. Cleverly written and with Hugh Grant, Colin Firth and the appealing Rene Zellweger in the lead roles, ideally cast as well. (1:34. R, for language and some strong sexuality).

'Crocodile Dundee in Los Angeles'

The 'g'day' man wears out his welcome with a flat and listless visit to the City of Angels. The director and his cast, including Firth, should stick to tourism. With Linda Koslowski, Paul Rodriguez. Directed by Simon Wincer. (1:35. PG, for some language and brief violence).

'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon'

A film by Ang Lee that transcends categorization and reminds us - simply, powerfully, and subtly - what we go to the movies for. A delightful one-of-a-kind martial arts romance where astounding fight sequences alternate with passionate yet idealistic love duets. 'Crouching Tiger' is a fusion film from top to bottom. Starring Chow Yun-Fat, Michelle Yeoh and Zhang Ziyi. (1:59. PG-13 for martial arts violence and some sexuality).

'Driven'

An earnest, formulaic, unintentionally silly motion picture set in the international racing circuit. But director Renny Harlin's visuals (shot by Mauro Fiore and edited by Stuart Levy and Steve Gilson) are crisp, slick and kinetic enough to make even pit stops look thrilling. Written by and starring Sylvester Stallone, with Kurt Russell and Rip Torn. (1:57. PG-13 for language and some intense crash sequences).

'Freddy Got Fingered'

Even confirmed cretins may be appalled to be caught seeing this humorless revue of Tom Green's ugliest stunts, which include sexual abuse of animals. Rated R; crude attempts at humor, language, sexual situations. 1 hour, 27 minutes. Canadian writer-director Jeremy Kulesha's drama is a true sensory exploration in that sex is prey one of its concerns. Five characters represent touch, taste, smell, sight and sound, exploring the ways we use our senses to experience, and the way we use them to shut it out. Made before 'Magnolia,' it has a similar anecdotal structure and insights, and also has fine performances from a cast that includes Molly Parker, Mary-Louise Parker and Nadia Litz. Rated R; sexual themes. 1 hour, 45 minutes.

'In the Mood for Love'

The last thing you'd expect from a Wong Kar-wei film is to be put into a dream state, but that's exactly what happens with the Hong Kong master's 'In the Mood for Love.' And though it is ultimately a melancholy experience, it's one to savor. Far from the frenetic, impressionistic style of Wong's acclaimed '90s films - 'Chungking Express,' 'Fallen Angels' and 'Happy Together' - 'In the Mood' is a seductive, leisurely paced romantic drama in which time itself seems to pause to absorb and reflect on the signs of emotional conflict in its two principal characters. Rated PG.

'Joe Dirt'

Lewdness, scatology and David Spade's hairdresser rule in this farcical ode to the basic goodness of white trash. Spade is a janitor who searches for his long estranged parents and gets a lot of goopy things dumped on his head along the way. What are you waiting for? (1:29. PG-13, for crude and sex-related humor, language.)

'A Knight's Tale'

Writer-director Brian Helgeland's idea for marrying modern rock music to 14th century jousting was a good one, but he's too parsimonious with it. As a result, we get to spend too much time watching a tedious romance between Heath Ledger and newcomer Shannyn Sossamon. Love may be grand, but this ain't. (2:12. PG-13 for action violence, some nudity and brief sex-related dialogue.)

'Moulin Rouge'

A fever dream of musical spectacle by director Baz Luhrmann, its dizzying visual and melodic panache is operatic by intention and excessive by design. This is a flabbergasting piece of work, nakedly out there, willing to risk looking foolish because it is so in love with the head-turning possibilities of the film medium. And, inevitably, foolish is what it sometimes looks. Although it showcases excellent work from costars Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor as singing star-crossed lovers in turn-of-the-century Paris, it's also a film that can't escape the defects of its virtues. (2.06. PG-13 for sexual content.)

'The Mummy Returns'

Writer-director Stephen Sommers, co-stars Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz plus a lot of creative personnel prove that the second time is the charm as they combine for a sequel that is much improved over the 1999 version. An old-fashioned sensibility plus computer-generated special effects have no trouble gaining our attention. (2.09. PG-13, for adventure action and violence.)

'Pearl Harbor'

An intelligent, briskly-paced and action-filled summer blockbuster that views Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor as the beginning of America's loss of innocence, a point of view that encompasses, passion, valor, epic disaster and spectacular aerial warfare. In the foreground are lifelong pals, U.S. Army pilots

(Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) both in love with the same actress Kate Beckinsale. Directed by Michael Bay, written by Randall Wallace and co-starring Cuba Gooding Jr., Tom Sizemore, Jon Voight and Alec Baldwin. (3.00. PG-13 for sustained intense war sequences, images of wounded, brief sensuality and some language.)

'Save the Last Dance'

A twist of fate sends a 17-year-old aspiring ballerina (Julia Stiles) from a Norman Rockwell small town to urban Chicago and an interracial romance with a bright youth (Sean Patrick Thomas) hoping to land a premed scholarship. There's lots of dancing and heart-rugging but a gritty edge and urban realism as well. The film's talented young actors include Kerry Washington, Fredro Starr and Bianca Lawson. (1.53. PG-13, for violence, sexual content, language and a brief drug reference.)

'Shrek'

A gleeful piece of wisenheimer computer animation, this new version of William Steig's fractured-fairy tale about an ogre who rescues a princess is all comic attitude, all the time. It especially benefits from its superb voice talent, including Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, John Lithgow and an unstoppable Eddie Murphy as a donkey sidekick named, well, Donkey. (1.29. PG for mild language and some crude humor.)

'Someone Like You'

Ben Franklin had it right: Men and melons are hard to know.

Nevertheless, in this refreshingly funny romantic comedy starring Ashley Judd, Hugh Jackman and Greg Kinnear, reassures with the wisdom that inside every cynic is a romantic struggling to get out. PG-13 (sexual candor and language)

'Spy Kids'

An engaging premise (two preteens have to rescue spy parents Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino from the bad guys) is made into a winning family film that's lively, imaginative and possessed of a playful sense of humor. Not what you'd expect from the maker of 'Marachi' and 'From Dusk Till Dawn,' but writer-director Robert Rodriguez is apparently something of a big kid at heart. (1.28. PG, for action sequences.)

'Tailor of Panama'

A spiffy entertainment, taken from the John Le Carre novel but very much in the Graham Greene mode, in which a disolute British spy (Pierce Brosnan, sending up his James Bond work) and a suave tailor with a secret (an excellent Geoffrey Rush) do all kinds of damage passing on exaggerated secrets. Directed by John Boorman with typical intelligence and verve. (R, for strong sexuality, language and some violence.)

'What's the Worst That Can Happen?'

Burglar Martin Lawrence and billionaire Danny DeVito engage in an escalating struggle over a ring. John Leguizamo and Glenn Close co-star.

'Pink Floyd The Wall' comes back to Faulkner Planetarium

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS - The Faulkner Planetarium has brought back "Pink Floyd The Wall" for a limited showing this summer. "The Wall" was a very successful entertainment show throughout last summer at the planetarium. The planetarium show features eleven album selections - some 45 minutes' worth - of the compilation said to be rock's greatest concept album of all time. It will be shown at 8:15 p.m. each Tuesday through Saturday.

All seats to this show will be $4. "The Wall" will be shown only until this summer's new entertainment show called Space Jammin' debuts, which is expected to be about June 19. At that time, Space Jammin' will be shown in the 8:15 p.m. time slot. "The Dinosaur Chronicles" will continue to be shown during the daily 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. shows as well as Saturday's 2 p.m. shows. Seats to this show are regularly priced at $4 for adults, $3 for seniors, $2 for students, and $9 for families.

Mississippi's Superman soars far again

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) Superman ruled supreme again at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships on Thursday night, and immediately took on a challenge to the world record in the long jump.

Mississippi's Eugene Stringfellow, a huge fan of the action hero, won the long jump for the second consecutive year, keeping his Superman T-shirt from LSU's Willie Davis.

The two have been exchanging the shirt, depending on who wins the head-to-head competition between the Olympians.

Stringfellow, a senior, finished with a 5.9 margin over the Tigers' jumper.

Stringfellow wore his customary red Superman T-shirt before

Davis, jumping in the second flight, went 26-10.5 and 26-10 on his first two tries, then fouled.

In the final, Stringfellow improved on each jump, opening with 26-10.5, followed by 27-0 and his winning leap of 27-1.75.

Stringfellow's two best jumps were the second- and third-longest in the world this year.

The excited Stringfellow said he was anxious to take on world record-holder Mike Powell in this month's USA Championships, also at Eugene, Ore. Powell returned to competition this season after a four-year absence.

"I saw Mike Powell after this thing, and I told him if he was ready, we could go right now," Stringfellow said.

Five other finals were held Thursday night.

The most popular winner with the Hayward Field crowd of 4,975 was Oregon decathlete Santiago Lorzonzo, who finished with 7,885 points, a career-best by 163. The other winners were men's high

Meet local bowlers Pete and Virginia Mulkey

This week it is an honor to tell you about a couple of pretty ardent bowlers, Eugene (Pete) and Virginia Mulkey.

They met in Jerseyville, Ill. when Pete came home from the Army and needed a little nourishment at a restaurant where Virginia was employed. Two weeks later, they married. To those who said it wouldn't last, they celebrated 55 years together in April.

Pete worked in dam construction. He has worked on several dams up and down the West Coast, including The Dalles Dam in Oregon, one near Ellensburg, Wash., various canals and dams near Dexter, Ore., the Oroville Dam, and a job near Jamestown, Calif.

The couple moved to Grover City, Calif. while he worked on a nuclear power plant. Then they relocated to Healdsburg, Calif., near the famous Napa Valley wine country, when Pete worked on a project in the Warm Springs area. A move to Fresno saw Pete take his final job on the Shaver Lake Dam before retiring at 61.

With the many places the couple has lived and producing seven children, Virginia has been a very busy housewife and mother. Their children's names are Marvin, who resides in Oroville, Calif.; Dave (Riverbank, Calif.); Barbara (Modesto, Calif.); James (Hammet, Ron (deceased), Al (Buhl) and Gary (Modesto, Calif.).

And yes, as a rule, they make an annual trip to the Golden State.

Their children have blessed them with 14 grandchildren aged 13 to 38 and 14 great-grandchildren ranging from five months to 11 years old.

Pete and Virginia started bowling in 1974, while living in Grover City, but only as open bowlers. They eventually joined a mixed league and bowled one year in 1975 in Modesto. They moved to Twin Falls in 1988. Why? Their son, Al, had moved to Buhl and talked about the great hunting and fishing in the area. Following a visit, they decided this was where they wanted to spend the rest of their lives.

They joined bowling leagues as soon as they moved to Twin Falls and are still bowling to this day. Last week's column listed Virginia as one of the ladies who bowled the most games during last season. In fact, she polled a total of 273 games on four leagues. Pete participated in two leagues. They both carry titles they have earned at the Idaho State Senior Championship Tournament. Pete became a state champion in the B Division (65-to-69 years) in 1992. Virginia claimed that title in 1993 and again in 1995, also in the B Division.

They also also enjoy golf and during the summer months they are on the greens three to four times each week, weather permitting.

Here is a couple I deem a real pleasure to have known for many years. Virginia has served on the Twin Falls Women's Bowling Association Board of Directors and is currently on the Board for the Idaho State Senior Association.

If you are a bowler and haven't had the honor of meeting and/or knowing these two, you've missed out on having a couple of great friends.

Boys 12-and-under

Extreme 10, Rapids 0
Pocatello 3, Rapids 0
Rapids 3, Idaho Falls 1

The Twin Falls Rapids' 12-and-under boys' team completely dominated yet lost 1-0 in a semifinal match against the Extreme 12-and-under team from Jackson, Wyo.

Twin Falls lost its first match to the Pocatello Panthers 3-0, but bounced back against the Idaho Falls Rush 3-1 to earn the semifinal matchup with Wyoming.

Ted Wunderlich, Devon Jenks and Jeff Jewell provided the scoring for the Rapids in their three contests. Play was sponsored by Physician's Center.

11-and-under boys

The Twin Falls 11-and-under boys' team lost its semifinal match to the Pocatello Panthers with exciting ball movement yet could not produce enough goals to qualify for the 14-and-under semifinals. Twin Falls 13-and-under team fell to an older Blackfoot Inferno 2-1, and tied both Idaho Falls Odyssey 0-0 and the Pocatello Lightning 1-1. Tournament play was sponsored by Brose Chemical.

13-and-under girls

The Twin Falls U-13 Girls played an excellent tournament with exciting ball movement yet could not produce enough goals to qualify for the 14-and-under semifinals. Twin Falls 13-and-under team fell to an older Blackfoot Inferno 2-1, and tied both Idaho Falls Odyssey 0-0 and the Pocatello Lightning 1-1. Tournament play was sponsored by Brose Chemical.

12-and-under girls

The Twin Falls 12-and-under girls' team continues to develop under the coaching of Sarah LaMarche, but came up short against Idaho Falls teams the Xtreme 1-0 and the Alliance 2-1. In a match the Rapids should have won, the Rigby Singers came back for a 2-2 tie. Goals were scored by Madison Fischer, Risa Caspersen and Samantha Sinnamon. Defense was led by Megan Miller,

12-and-under girls

Rapids 2, Vallure 0
Meridian 1, Rapids 0
First-year coach Sarah LaMarche continues to be impressed with the development of the Rapids' 12-and-under girls' team (5-5-1) as it continues to improve over last year's (1-1-5) record.

Madison Fischer and Caspersen each added to their goal scoring stats in the first match with offensive support provided by Laura Filas and Kelsey Clark. Subway and Lamb Weston sponsored the match.

14-and-under girls

Nampa 2, Rapids 0
Rapids 2, Emmett 2
The Rapids (4-4-1) lost to an older Nampa team on two fast breaks to the goal. The team continues to develop with excellent play by Angie Hegman, Hannah Evans and Browning in the first match. Lacy Miller contributed goals in the second match with support by Andrea Watkins, Krista Osterhout and Wunderlich. The matches were sponsored by Brose Chemical/Lamb Weston.

HOOPIN' IT UP

JUSTESEN DO IT

Chief Master Jack Pierce, president of the Hwo-Rang Tae Kwon Do Federation stands with Flier first-grader Cassio Justesen. Justesen competed at Master Jay Hartwell's Northwest Tae Kwon Do championships, held at O'Leary Junior High School. Justesen, who was sponsored by Barry Rental, received a first-place trophy for girl's forms and a first-place trophy for girl's sparring. Justesen has since been promoted to a low green belt and training with his brother, Caleb, and mother, Tawni, at Master Hartwell's Intermountain Martial Arts, 225 Main Ave. E., in Twin Falls.

PRICE IS RIGHT

Sponsors: J&C Custom, Enzabac Microbial Products, Miller Brothers, Colmagen, Spheri, Animal Pharmaceutical Incorporated, Wendell Tire Factory, Signs Now, Shoshone Veterinary Hospital
Years at Speedway: Third
Hobbies: Golf, bowling and racing
Pit Crew: Van Holland, Karen Van Holland and Ken Vanderham
Best speedway experience: "Winning the Thunder Stocks last season."
Worst speedway experience: "In a heat race last season I hit the wall head-on coming out of turn 4. We were running three wide and I thought I could get around and then I just ran out of room."
Outlook on season: "I'm really happy if I could finish in the top three. I'm leading right now but there are some good drivers in this class."

TWIN FALLS - If there's any doubt that Ray Van Holland is a racing-fan first and foremost, take a look in the grandstands when the Budweiser Grand Nationals aren't running. Finding the driver of the silver and black No. 11 Chevy Camaro plunked down in the bleachers instead of nestled in the driver's seat isn't unusual. For Van Holland, being a spectator has made him a better racer. "I like to keep my mind off it before I race," Van Holland said. "So I'll go up and sit in the stands with my family and friends. I don't feel comfortable sitting in the car for 15 minutes just waiting. And the more relaxed I get the better I drive."

"The racing has been anything but relaxed since Van Holland took to the track three years ago. He edged runner-up Natalie Wheeler by seven points for the Thunder Stocks title last season in only his second year of racing and finds himself in another tight points race this year - only this time it's in the Grand National class. Through five races, Van Holland holds a slight, six-point lead over Michelle Meads atop the standings, 288-282. The two have been battling throughout the season, with Meads leading in wins (2-1) and Van Holland leading in total five finishes (5-4). "I've been looking over my shoulder since Day 1," Van Holland said. "Meads is a great driver and a great car."

The experience in the Thunder Stocks last season has helped prepare him for the pressures of this season's points race with Meads, Van Holland said, but it also taught him patience. "The closest thing I learned was how to handle the pressure," Van Holland said. "It was a little hot-headed last year, but now I know that rubbing is racing. I also learned that a race isn't won on the first lap; it's won on the last one."

Van Holland's early success in the Grand Nationals can be attributed as much to the driver as to the car. Van Holland knew he was buying a competitive car when he purchased the racer from Thomas Powell at the beginning of the season, but he had no idea he would feel so comfortable behind the wheel. "It's really important to be able to trust your car," Van Holland said. "If you have some iffy parts, you won't go around the corner at full speed. You might baby it a little. But with this car, I feel very comfortable. When I first drove it, it felt like I'd been driving it half the season." Keeping the car ready falls on the shoulders of Van Holland's wife Karen and occasionally Ken Vanderham. Once a week, Art Van Holland runs a "nuts and bolts" check where he checks every nut and bolt to make sure they're tight. They also change the oil twice a week and all told, Van Holland said it costs about $150 a week to put the car on the track.

"You'd be surprised how much comes loose from all the vibrating," Van Holland said. "That's where my dad comes in. We keep the car at his shop and he takes great care of it." In the end, win or lose, Van Holland said just being a part of the Grand National field has been worth the price of admission. "The experience has been super," Van Holland said. "All of these drivers are really like a big family. That's been by far the best thing. They don't look at you like an outsider. We all go out with the idea to put on the best show we can and may be the best driver win." The show, of course, was one of the reasons Van Holland started racing. He was a fan whose passion carried over to the pits and eventually the race track. Maybe that's one reason he feels relaxed just watching the action. "If the fans weren't there, it wouldn't be as fun," he said. "And the more they cheer, the more fun it is."

Hornets buzz to life at speedway

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Got $20, a car painted yellow and the desire to race? That's all you'll need Saturday to join the inaugural Hornet class races at Magic Valley Speedway. At least nine and possibly more of the four-cylinder race cars are expected to make the first of five scheduled races this season.

"Anyone with a three- or four-cylinder car painted yellow with optional black stripes and sporting no larger than a 103-inch wheelbase is eligible to join the field.

Randy Kerr, race director of Magic Valley Speedway, said the Hornets have created quite a "buzz" since the press release announcement of the new, non-competitive class. "This will be the biggest thing to ever start at the speedway," Kerr said.

Each Hornet must also have a working AM radio and horn to be eligible to race.

"We want to keep it as something you can do as a hobby," Kerr said. "Not something that takes up a lot of time."

So far, several speedway drivers have signed up including Alan Larson, Jim Shirley and Rex Brittain. But Kerr said as many as 18 cars have registered numbers. Some of the makes and models lined up are a Dodge Aries, several Toyotas, and a Mustang II. But no AMC Hornets.

Also on the card Saturday will be the Mountain Dew Modifieds, Budweiser Grand Nationals, NAPA Auto Parts Pony Stocks and the Dairy Queen Thunder Stocks.

Hot laps begin at 6 p.m. with the green flag dropping on heats and main events at 7 p.m.

DOVER, Del. (AP) - Tony Stewart believes his history of success at Dover Downs International Speedway is nothing more than another line on an impressive resume.

So, when it came time to decide where to use one of his precious tests for this year, Stewart didn't hesitate to choose The Monster Mile, where he won twice last year after finishes of fourth and second as a rookie.

"With NASCAR allowing only seven on-site tests per car, the decision to try to improve on near-perfection rather than find a better way around another track might be considered unconventional. But Stewart isn't thinking that way as he prepares for Sunday's MBNA Platinum 400.

"If you get complacent with the fact that you think you're good enough to win, then that's when you're going to get beat," he said. "You just stop doing our work."

To assume he can continue to outrun the opposition at Dover without considering changes to his car would be a big mistake, Stewart insists. He knows the other Winston Cup drivers will do everything possible to close the gap.

"We've got to do the same thing that they're doing, while trying to be a little faster yet," he said. "So, we have to keep up and make that same gain that they do in order for us to keep that advantage."

Dover is somewhat special to Stewart, because it helped re-establish him as a major force. After setting records as a rookie with three wins and a final standing of fourth in the points in 1999, he got off to a mediocre start last year.

Then he led 242 of 400 laps in this event, beginning a six-race roll. He also won the following week in Michigan, and was in the top 10 in the next three races before prevailing again in London, N.H.

Stewart wound up with a series-best six wins - a record for a second-year driver - and finished sixth in the points.

Among those ahead of him was series champion Bobby Labonte, Stewart's teammate at Joe Gibbs Racing. Labonte might be the biggest threat to Stewart, who will try to join David Pearson, Rusty Wallace and Jeff Gordon as the only drivers to win three straight Dover races.

Dover is a landmark to Labonte because he made his Winston Cup debut here 10 years ago. On June 2, 1991 - a year he won the Busch series title - Labonte started 33rd and finished 14th in this race. He completed just 88 laps in his own car in the Budweiser 500, but looks back fondly on the experience.

"We have come a long way since then and we have had our share of ups and downs," Labonte said. "He has been quite a ride and it all started in Dover."

Stewart had quite a ride last Sunday, winding up sixth in the Indianapolis 500 before getting to Charlotte, N.C., and finishing third in the Coca-Cola 600.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

RadioShack's stock drops on low forecast

— FORT WORTH, Texas — RadioShack's stock price fell in midweek after the company said it will miss second-quarter earnings projections.

RadioShack — which has some Magic Valley operations — lowered its earnings forecast to 25 to 27 cents a share in the quarter ending June 30, down from estimates of 34 cents a share made a little more than a month ago. The company said per-share profits may be off by 10 percent for the year because of sagging sales.

Chief Executive Leonard Roberts announced the revision toward the end of a conference with analysts at RadioShack's Fort Worth headquarters.

Several analysts who attended the conference said they were not surprised.

Barry Sosnick, a research analyst with Fehnestock & Co. in New York, said he sensed the news was coming when the company had completed most of its scheduled presentations by mid-afternoon, and the conference was scheduled to last until 5 p.m.

"What were they going to do after 3:30?" Sosnick said, adding that the revision itself was not a great shock.

James Grant, RadioShack's senior director of investor relations, said the conference "went about as well as it could have" under the circumstances, adding that RadioShack management benefited from being able to speak with analysts about "what happened, why it happened and what we're going to do about it."

Dennis Telzow, an analyst with Hoak Breedlove Wesneski in Dallas, said he had inklings that another revision was on the way. He has adjusted annual earnings projections for RadioShack three times since early April — from $2.32 a share to $1.86 a share this week, to $1.65 — in sequence with each of RadioShack's quarterly and annual revisions.

U.S. unemployment rates continue to rise

WASHINGTON — New claims for state unemployment benefits remained at the highest level in a month, suggesting the nation's labor market still is struggling.

The number of workers filing new claims for the insurance jumped 8,000 to 665,000, an adjusted 419,000 for the week ending May 26, the Labor Department said Thursday.

"We're in very serious territory here," said David Orr, an economist with First Union Corp.

The increase was the third in a row, keeping claims at their highest level since April 28, when they shot up to 425,000. Analysts had anticipated a smaller increase. The more stable four-week moving average, which levels week-to-week fluctuations, slipped 1,500 last week to 402,500, the lowest level since April 21.

Thursday's labor report didn't substantially move Wall Street. Stocks advanced tentatively at midday, struggling to rebound after this week's technology sell-off.

Many economists were predicting that Friday's report on the nation's unemployment rate for May will tick up from April's posting of 4.5 percent, stoking recession worries.

Novell executives ponder selling software company

PROVO, Utah — Novell Inc. executives, who have been trying to reverse two years of sagging sales and profits, toyed with selling all or part of the software company earlier this year as one method of boosting the price of its stock.

The executives also considered spinning off at least one subsidiary into an independent company or entering into a joint-venture partnership, Novell said in a document delivered to federal regulators Wednesday.

Instead, the Provo-based provider of Internet services software in March agreed to buy Cambridge Technology Partners, a Massachusetts technology consulting company. The $245 million deal "is expected to increase Novell's annual revenue by almost 50 percent."

State obtains injunction in TF securities case

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A former Twin Falls man must pay almost $650,000 restitution to investors who bought stock in a pair of corporations, the Idaho Department of Finance said this week.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl entered a judgment and permanent injunction against Gregory S. Dabney, who consented to the court's order, the state said in a press release.

The order arises from a civil securities lawsuit that also named Agricultural Services of America Inc. and Agricultural Investments of America Inc. — both Wyoming corporations — and Paul Grant and Russell R. Graham, who were officers and directors of ASA.

The Finance Department's complaint, filed in Twin Falls in May 2000, alleged the defendants solicited Idaho residents to invest in unregistered stock in ASA and AIA, were not licensed to sell investments in Idaho, failed to disclose material financial information to investors and did not adequately discuss the risks involved.

"Without admitting or denying the allegations, Dabney consented to be permanently enjoined from engaging in future violations of the Idaho Securities Act, agreed to certain restrictions on his future business activities and was ordered to pay restitution of almost $650,000 to investors," the Finance Department said. "With the entry of this judgment, the lawsuit is resolved" against all three individuals.

The state's complaint also alleged that the companies wrongly led investors to believe ASA owned a soil-enhancement technology, that the company said investors could receive up to 700 percent return on their money, and that the defendants told investors the company would go public and be listed on NASDAQ within a year.

Grant, in California, last summer signed court documents admitting the violations and consenting to a judgment and permanent injunction to be entered against him. That resolved the charges against Grant.

Graham, who still lives in Idaho, consented to a judgment and permanent injunction against him this spring, the Finance Department said.

ASA Chief Executive Officer Dabney, a former Twin Falls resident then living in Montrose, Colo., last summer said he would contest the department's complaint.

Microsoft releases latest Office program

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. on Thursday launched the latest version of Office, called XP, with more than 100 lavish events throughout the country aimed at making people want more.

An estimated 250 million people already use a version of the Microsoft's flagship business software system, Microsoft chief executive Steve Ballmer said, but that doesn't mean the market is saturated.

"We don't have a lot of saturation at all," he said in an interview. "We have a lot of users. And users want to be able to use more, get more done, collaborate with others better."

Ballmer, Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates and other executives spent the day touting new Office XP features such as SharePoint, which allows employees to share information over a company's intranet, and task panes, which give users easy access to recently used documents and options.

In New York City, at a slick multimedia presentation fit for a late-night talk show, a visibly tired Gates called Office XP "a product for the entire world."

Speaking at the Hammerstein Ballroom, Gates said the product would save money by making people more productive.

"By making Office just 10 percent better, we save literally hundreds of millions of man-hours of labor," said Gates.

Jeff Bezos, founder and CEO of Amazon.com, left, meets with Bill Gates, Microsoft Corp. chairman and chief software architect, at a New York news conference to launch Microsoft's new software, Office XP, Thursday. packed into the MCI Center chortled when a demonstration of Office XP's PowerPoint program crashed and the program locked up. There, the company also handed out raffle prizes including a copy of Office XP signed by Gates.

Office XP is immediately available in 15 countries. The basic program will sell for $239 as an upgrade, and $479 for new users. A full-featured upgrade also sells for $479.

Microsoft will not say how many copies will be shipped or give specific sales targets. But

So far, Enderle says he has seen low demand for the product. He blames the lukewarm response to a marketing campaign that he doesn't think has done enough to show the product's new features.

"It actually is a reasonably good product," he said. "It's more how they're presenting themselves to the world."

Some also questioned whether users will be sold on the idea of pricey upgrades in a weakening economy, especially since many recently upgraded to Office 2000.

Simpson predicts rural airport boom

The Associated Press

POCATELLO — Air delays and packed flights could serve as a catalyst to accelerate development of Idaho's rural airports, Rep. Mike Simpson said.

"In many cases, we just don't have enough pavement to land the planes," the Republican congressman said. "I think you will see more and more use of secondary airports."

Simpson, a member of the House Aviation Subcommittee, said hearings on runway construction have pointed to the need for more landing spaces for planes.

Instead of landing at primary airports, some airlines have begun routing flights through smaller cities to relieve the stress.

"Any of the big hubs have real problems with capacity," Simpson added.

If the relief measure materializes, Idaho's airports could attract more connections and more business.

"What we have got to do is get more regional carriers into smaller airports," Simpson said. "If you had a regional jet from United coming into Idaho Falls right now it would bring vast possibilities."

Rep. Mike Simpson

The Legislature approved $700,000 to help Idaho communities match federal funds to upgrade rural airports. And the state has the potential to rake in roughly $20 million in federal funds.

Simpson said those funds could make the difference in bringing Idaho into the mainstream of air travel.

"It is vital to the economic success of these airports," Simpson said. "Now, most business are global businesses. Travel is very important to them... The inability to offer air travel is a real hindrance to economic development."

The congressman also said that more connections in Idaho would also make life easier for travelers like himself.

"Imagine a regional connection from Idaho Falls to Denver — it opens up whole new world of possible connections," Simpson said. "It still stuns me that I can fly cheaper round trip from here to Washington, D.C., than from Boise to Idaho Falls."

Costco profits slip on energy costs

BridgeNews

CHICAGO — Costco Wholesale Corp. — which has one store in Twin Falls — said Thursday that higher costs for opening new stores and steep energy prices in California left it with a smaller fiscal third-quarter profit than a year earlier.

The decline came as the Issaquah, Wash.-based retailer's competitors, companies such as BJ's Wholesale Club Inc. and Wal-Mart Stores Inc.'s Sam's Club unit, enjoyed record profits as the economic downturn encouraged shoppers to head for discount stores.

"Last month, Costco, the largest U.S. warehouse club operator, warned that weak sales and higher energy and gasoline costs would leave it with weaker earnings than analysts expected. The company said it was not able to pass on the higher prices to consumers."

Costco has suffered more than its rivals from high energy prices because it has a large base in power-strapped California. BJ's stores are mostly on the East Coast.

The California energy crisis could add $40 million before taxes to Costco's electricity bill over the next 12 months, said

Bill Dreher, an analyst at Robertson Stephens. He said that alone would strip 5 cents from the company's earnings per share.

"Unfortunately, the energy conservation measures meant to reduce expenses are likely to hurt sales by limiting customer traffic into stores, and reduce impulse purchases, thus shrinking average ticket."

— Bill Dreher, Analyst at Robertson Stephens

Costco has been adding new businesses, such as gas stations, pharmacies and optical departments, to its warehouse stores in an effort to boost sales. It also has been opening more stores in the United States and abroad, and investing in expanding on the Internet.

The higher expenses associated with these expansion moves weighed on the quarter's profit. Merchandise costs rose 12 percent to $6.6 billion while pre-opening expenses nearly doubled to $12.8 million. Selling, general and administrative expenses rose 17 percent to $706 million.

Costco plans to open five additional warehouses in the fourth quarter and between 26 and 28 new warehouses by the end of this calendar year.

Costco now says its expected to earn between $1.26 and $1.30 a share in 2001, down from an estimate given in early March of $1.33 to $1.37 a share.

Companies join Potlatch against power company

The Associated Press

LEWISTON — Several southern Idaho manufacturers are siding with Potlatch Corp. in what they say is a precedent-setting dispute with Avista.

Potlatch has warned that if it cannot sell the electricity it generates, at the rates it wants, the local mill could shut its doors for good.

The mill makes a significant portion of its power needs with its own cogeneration plant. The company wants Avista Corp., the utility serving north-central Idaho, to serve all its electricity needs at the plant, allowing Potlatch to sell the power it generates on the wholesale market, where prices are soaring.

Some companies say the ruling by the Public Utilities Commission makes in the Potlatch-Avista dispute will set a standard for similar cases.

Industrial Customers of Idaho Power is asking to present evidence and examine witnesses when the regulators hear the case. It is the only organization asking to intervene and represents some of the largest employers in Idaho including Simplot Co., Boise Cascade Corp. and Amalgamated Sugar — all of which have plants in the Magic Valley.

In the last year, wholesale power prices have soared from $50 to $350 a megawatt, dramatically increasing what Potlatch Corp. spends on electricity.

"It's raising some serious questions, and we want to be sure we have a seat at the table," said attorney Peter J. Richardson, who represents the industrial users.

Richardson's clients want to be able to generate power at their facilities, and use on-site and to sell to Idaho Power, the utility serving them, or to any other buyers.

But at the same time, they want to buy power for their plants at the same lower rates paid by companies without their own generating capabilities.

Stocks on bargain hunting

NEW YORK (AP) — The technology sector rebounded Thursday as investors set aside doubts about earnings and decided to take a chance on stocks that have fallen to their lowest prices in weeks.

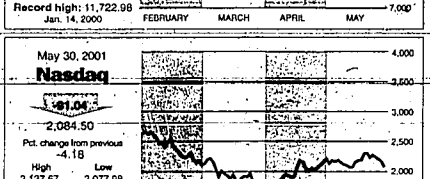

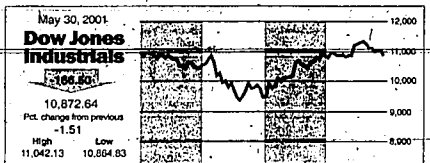

But market watchers cautioned that Wall Street still faces turbulence from an expected plethora of disappointing earnings forecasts for the second quarter.

"I would suggest that during the next 15 days as we get more pronouncements we'll see peak volatility. You'll see big gains and losses than usual," said David Eisenberg, chief equity officer at John Hancock Advisors.

The Dow Jones industrials closed up 39.30 to 10,191.93, recovering from a 166.50-point fall Wednesday.

The technology-focused Nasdaq composite index rose 25.39 to 2,110.49, ending a three-day losing streak. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was up 7.74 to 1,255.82.

The gains came on bargain hunting in stocks that fell sharply in recent sessions amid earnings worries and concerns that Wall Street's huge spring rally was premature. Sun Microsystems, whose profit warning late Tuesday triggered intense tech selling, advanced 22 cents to $16.47. Oracle rose 79 cents to $15.30.

The Dow's upturn was also powered by technology, including Intel, which gained 41 cents to $27.01. Industrial stocks were strong as well. 3M was up $1.23 to $118.58, while General Motors rose 79 cents to $56.90.

The advance was the first for the Nasdaq in a week, but it didn't come easily. Trading was choppy throughout the day, with most stocks sluggish early in the session and then unable to maintain bigger gains achieved up in the afternoon.

The market has been moving higher steadily since early April, but in the last few sessions, Wall Street's confidence has faded somewhat. Conflating economic data, as well as many companies' inability to predict when business would substantially improve, has heightened uncertainty about when a business turnaround will actually occur.

Of particular concern are the next few weeks because of what's known as earnings season, the time when companies that are expecting disappointing earnings issue their forecasts. Although the market is expecting those figures to be weak, many analysts say the bad news might still be hard to digest, particularly for tech stockholders.

"The visibility for what's ahead for technology is still very poor and until you see some improvement there, there's not going to be much of a catalyst in the Nasdaq," said Rafael Tamargo, director of equity research at Wilmington Trust. "At this point, it appears things are still getting weaker, rather than improving."

firm of Deloitte and Touche.

The size of the tax cut for the wealthy was a major point of contention in the legislative debate. Congress approved the tax bill May 26 only after several changes were made that partially addressed Democratic demands that the bill give less to the wealthy and more to the poor.

Deflation takes its toll on Japanese economy

Low Angeles Times

TOKYO — Noriko Kanbayashi and her husband tried to buy a condominium in the early 1990s only to lose out repeatedly to stronger buyers. Finally, in 1993, she and her husband bought a small three-bedroom house and they grabbed it, even though its $415,000 price tag severely stretched their budget and locked them into a 30-year mortgage.

Eight years later, their investment is worth half what they paid for it, leaving Kanbayashi furious at the banks for allowing her family to get into such trouble and at the government for ignoring the broader debt problem.

"How come we are made to suffer so much?" Kanbayashi said. "In 20 years' time, our house won't be worth anything."

Like a cancer, deflation is eating away at the world's second largest economy. Japan is the only advanced nation since World War II to experience such serious price declines, leaving policymakers in uncharted economic territory.

Sato said her husband's auto-repair business has fallen off by 30 percent. To make ends meet, he now rents rather than buys tools and she scours leaflets for bargains, turning off lights and scrapping on dining out.

cent, to $350,000, largely because of falling land prices. In the same period, Americans were riding a great wave of wealth, as the U.S. stock market more than tripled.

At first, Japanese lower prices in the land of the $120 million would seem like a cause for celebration. And in some areas they have benefited consumers. Those in a position to buy real estate now, for instance, can expect to get more in a better neighborhood for less.

"Prices have definitely come down in Japan, especially food and clothing," said Kazuo Sato, a 51-year-old Tokyo homemaker, as she emerged from a "100-Yen Store" that sells everything from dinnerware to children's chairs for 80 cents an item. "It's a huge change from 10 years ago."

The problem, however, is that incomes often fall faster than prices as companies reduce bonuses and overtime, leaving consumers further behind. In fact, deflation has eroded Japan's overall standard of living.

Sato said her husband's auto-repair business has fallen off by 30 percent. To make ends meet, he now rents rather than buys tools and she scours leaflets for bargains, turning off lights and scrapping on dining out.

"We used to be able to save a little," she said. "Now I feel like we're barely above water."

In a bid to refuel the economy, politicians have tried to nudge, bribe and browbeat consumers into spending more, without much luck. While pervasive gloom is part of the problem, deflation also gives people a strong incentive to cut their wallets shut.

Provision gives wealthy bigger tax break than expected

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — A little-noticed provision in the sweeping tax cut approved by Congress last week gives the wealthy an even bigger tax break than advertised. The bill now needed support from moderate Democrats only after it was revised to reduce the top federal income tax rate from 39.6 percent to 35 percent, instead of to the 33 percent President Bush had sought.

But then Congress added a provision to eliminate limits on how much wealthy taxpayers could deduct from their income before calculating their taxes. The impact will be the same as shaving another 1.2 percentage points or more off the top rate.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds; and the pessimist fears this is true."

—James Branch Cabell

The optimist plays today's game believing nothing will go wrong. He resigns himself to a trump and a diamond loser, but he knows he won't lose two clubs. The pessimist lives in a different world — he knows that everything will go wrong. He makes the game when the optimist fails.

South ducks West's diamond king, and West continues with his queen, smothering both honors in dummy. When South wins his ace, it is time for a diamond ruff in dummy?

Expecting either a 3-3 heart break or the club king aside, the optimist ruffs his last diamond at trick three. After cashing two top trumps, he cashes dummy's two top hearts and ruffs a heart. When they fail to break 3-3, his last hope is to score two club tricks. And when West has the king of clubs, South must concede one down.

The pessimist fares better with one small modification — he doesn't ruff his diamond at trick three. Instead, he cashes the ace and king of trumps and the ace and king of hearts. A heart ruff brings the same bad news as before, but the pessimist is prepared. He crosses to dummy with the led ace diamond ruff, and ruffs another heart, establishing dummy's fifth heart. Now it's a simple matter to cross to dummy's club ace to discard a club on dummy's fifth heart.
