Another moratorius

Commissioners impose fourth since July 2000

By John T. Huddy

TWIN FALLS—As the tides of discontent continue to swell over the dairy issue locally, the county's commission imposed yet another four-month moratorium on dairies—the fourth since July 2000.

Twin Falls County commissioners Gary Grindstaff, Marvin Hempleman and Bill Brockman, after hearing about 10 minutes of public comment from residents both for and against the morato-rium, unanimously imposed the both for and against the moratorium, unanimously imposed the 120-day interim moratorium.

The moratorium will last unfil oct. 2, or until a new county livestock ordinance is approved.

That profinance should be ready for public hearings by late July or early August, Brockman said.

Until then the moratorium was the county in the profinance was the county in the profinance should be ready for public hearings by late July or early August, Brockman said.

Until then, the moratorium will stay on. It will restrict any Operations with fewer than 77 milking cows do not require county approval, according to the county's existing three-year-old ordinance.

The new interim moratorium takes the place of a four-month moratorium which ended moratorium which ended Sunday. Reading from a prepared statement, Brockman explained why he changed his mind about imposing a moratorium that would allow dairies smaller than 144-milk-cows-to-set-up-shop-locally, but would continue to restrict any greater-sized dairies. The country's commissioners had expressed interest in imposing an emergency moratorium that could allow only a certain number of cows into the country, and continue to restrict the development of large dairy operations locally until problems with current operations are con-

But after advice from the county's legal department, Brockman said he changed his mind.

would be met by court char-lenges."

The commissioners' Monday-morning decision was no surprise to many residents on both sides of the dairy issue.

Since May, the commissioners-had talked about extending the moratorium another four months.

And of the seven residents who spoke about the moratorium at-Monday's meeting, only one per-son was opposed to it.

The opponent, Dave Snelson, was a member of the ad hoc com-mittee that helped draft the country's new ordinance which — if approved—will take the place of the country's existing livestock-ordinance.

ordinance.

The seven-member committee was troubled by disagreement between members throughout its more than six months of work.

"There's been a lot of operations hurt by this," Snelson said at Monday's meeting, "It's unfair to penalize those who haven't been guilty of any wrong doing." The dairy issue has become so controversal locally that it has pitted neighbor against neighbor a training the source of the state of Eller where Hank Halliger's large dairy continues when the state of Halliger's large dairy continues when the state of the state of Halliger's dairy a source of Halliger has weed to correct his dairy's odor problems, even getting help from the state. which is working with him on an odor management plan and syem for his dairy.

So far, many residents agree, the intensity of Hafliger's dairy's odors have not decreased.

Those people supporting the moratorium Monday pointed ar.

Hafliger's dairy as a continuing problem and encouraged the commissioners to impose another moratorium until the problems are solved.

Further, the moratorium will give people on both sides of the issue time to review the new ordnance, they said.

The 21-page ordinance has been sent to Lewis Ellers, exective director of the Idaho Dairyman's Association. Ellers is representing numerous local dairymen who are unhappy with the new ordinance, calling it "overbearing" and "too restrictive".

nance and suggest their changes to the commissioners. Ellers said he was disappointed with the commissioners' decision Monday.

"We've got too many people-out here that are existing feditions and existing call raisers that needed to make edjustments. Ellers said." We've been at this thing a whole year and you can't run a business that way.

The new ordinance will also be given to David Mead, a local resident who will work with ordinance proponents on their own suggested changes.

Mead said nether he nor those people supporting the ordinance.

Mead said neither he nor those people supporting the ordinance have made any suggestions yet. Eilers said he spoke with Mead later Monday afternoon and would try to work with him and the other residents on a compro-

the other residents on a compromise.

The ordinance, with suggessions from both sides, will then besent back to the commissioners for their review.

The commissioners gave both groups a deadline of June 20 to make the suggestions.

After public hearings before the county's Planning and Zoning.
Ontmission, the commissioners will deadde whether to adopt it.

According to Brockman on Manday, there shouldn't be many charge in all new ordinance.
Under the proposed ordinance,
any dairy of 4,500 animal units (3,214 milk cows) or more would be equired to have a processionally designed and engineered. any dairy of 4,500 animal units (3,214 milk cows) or more would be required to have a professionally designed and engineered odor-management and waste bystem. The existing ordinance has no such rule.

And following state law, all dairy premisers or matter the size.

And following state law, all dary operations, no matter the size, must have nutrient management plans, the new ordinance says.

Brockman said the new ordinance will likely be adopted in September.

DENVER (AP) - Federal prose-cutors urged a judge Monday not to delay Timothy McVeigh's ex-cution, saying that he admitted the crime and is "undeniably the crime and is "undentably guilty" despite thousands of newly released FBI documents on the Oklahoma City bombing. "Rather than answer for his own proven and admitted murder ous conduct, McVeigh would like up ut the federal government on trial," prosecutor Sean Connelly said in court papers.

In a strongly worded response, Connelly argued that the material has no bearing on McVelgh's control and death sentence because he confessed in a book and said he and co-conspirator Terry Nichols acted alone.

"Timothy McVeigh does not and could not suggest he is actually innocent of the charges of which the jury convicted him," Connelly said. "He does not and

The court ruled in the case of a woman whose male co-workers at a DuFont plant in Tennessee harassed and demeaned her, including refusing to associate with her after she was chosen to speak to girls visiting the plant for Take Your Daughters to Work Day.

Lower courts ruled for Sharon Ba. Pollard and agreed she deserved to be compensated for money she presumably would have made if working conditions had not forced her to leave the plant.

McVeigh has identified nine items he claims could have helped his defense, but none prove his innocence, Connelly said. Under the anti-terorism law under which McVeigh was convicted, he cannot receive a new trial unless he has strong evidence of his innocence; the prosecutor said.
"McVeigh is undeniably guilty and there is no case in which the death sentence can be more appropriate than this one," Connelly said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas jurors who sentenced a retarded-killer to death did not get-clear instructions about how to weigh the defendant's mental abilities against the severity of his crime, the Supreme Court ruled Monday. The ruling overturned the death sentence of Johnny Paul Penry, whose lawyers daim their client has the mind of a 7-year-old and likes to play with coloring books.

The case, sent back to a federal appeals court, does not-answer-a-larger-question-about-whether-execution of the mentally retarded is constitutional. The court has agreed to use a different case to review that question next fall.

The vote was 63 on the crucial question of the instructions, although the court was unanimous in ruling that a Texas court properly admitted evidence of Penry's future dangerousness.

S.I.D.S. and Propulsid® (Cisapride)?

S.I.D.S. (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) has been reported in connection with Propulsid use. If your Infant was prescribed Propulsid and later died of unknown causes, or S.I.D.S., you should investigate your legal rights. Propulsid has also been associated with serious cardiac arrhythmias in adults. Propulsid was prescribed for infants with colic and for adults with heartburn. The manufacturer agreed to stop soiling Propulsid in July 2000, in the face of concerns over deaths and irregular heartbeats.

If you or a family member took Propulside, experienced attorneys can help you learn more about your legal rights and, if appropriate, help you obtain compensation for any resulting injuries. We have represented victims in national and local lawsuits against drug manufacturers.

Exercise through Life's Stages

For most people, the demands of home and work make it difficult to do the very things we know are good for us! We w that exercise is important for the health of our bodies both physically and emotionally. It is no secret that a strong healthy body helps us enjoy life no matter what we do, where we work, or where we live. But exercise, for people of all ages, is less a part of our lifestyles today than ever before.

MVRMC Family Practitioner, Dr. Sara Johnson, will discuss making exercise a part of your life in whatever the age of stage you enjoy. Best of all, this is more than a lecture!

- Bring a friend.
- Come dressed to move.
- Be inspired.

Dr. Johnson will work with you to help you learn exercises you can do even at home—exercises that work for you!

Chief investigates roots

—FILER — After-experiencing a few-medical-problems, Filer Police Chief Cliff Johnson used his investigative ability and the Internet to research his family roots.

He found they began in Texas.

Shortly before his mother's death in 1994, Johnson had learned his biological father's. name. He knew he had been adopted at birth but never knew anything about his biological father, and his mother was not free with other information, he said.

said.

Through research he learned that he had four siblings.

Johnson wrote to one brother and received a telephone call back and that started the ball rolling. He received a photo-graph in the mail from this broth-er and was amazed at the resem-

"My new family grew up in Texas and I plan to show them Yellowstone Park and do a little sailing on Red Fish Lake. This will be a great opportunity to get to know each other," he said.

He also saw another brotherfor the first time on national legvision. The brother plays for a

Young author makes national weekly

By Dixie Thomas Reale Times-News corresponden

JEKOME – At 12 years of age, Carissa Lee has done something many adult writers envy. She wrote an essay published in "Weekly Reader," which has a circulation of 800,000.

No small accomplishment. Terriell Newman, her teacher, assigned her sixth-grade class at Central Elementary School in Jerome to write an essay about an eyewitness account of World War. II. Carisas's parents, Nancy and Kent Lee, had a friend of the family, Richard Hansing, who was a veteran of World War II.

HACKERS FIND A HOME

Computers at universities are a prime target

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Dave Dittrich is not happy: A software pirate has hacked into comput-ers at the University of Washington and installed a filesharing program on one machine.

It means one-stop shopping for stolen – and now free – software, and plenty. of headaches for. Dittrich, the university's computer security expert.

Lawyers for the software publisher are sending threatening emails, and Dittrich must clean up the mess. The lawyers do not worry him. Getting outguned again by the hackers – that bugshim a lot.

up the mess. The lawyers do not worry him. Getting outgunned again by the hackers – that bugshim a lot.

"The tools these days for intrusions are pretty much automatic," Dittrich said. "A system can be fully compromised in about a minute."

It's becoming more prevaleht, where novice hackers hone their skills amid a higher education culture known for lax security and free exchange of ideas.

David Dittrich, senior security engineer at the University of Washington's Computing and Communications, sits in a classroom in Seattle-Wednesd m in Seattle-Wednesday

"They're good practice grounds because their vulnerabilities are usually pervasive and their monitoring is usually worbully inaccurate." said Richard Power, editorial director at the Computer Security Institute. "It's kind of like hacking with training wheels."

University computes systems also attract experienced hack-ers. Huge hard drives make it-easy to store illicit software and fast Internet access affords the perfect staging ground for devas-tating attacks on corporate Web sites.

Larger universities also offer other enticements.

"There's a lot of sensitive

"You couldn't get it with a frontal attack on a military weapons lab research facility. But you may get it indirectly by going through university research labs."
For the hacker looking to get a credit_card_in_another_person!-rame, there is plenty to glean from university student databas-ess.

from university student databases.

"A lot of universities use your Social Security number to track you in their databases," he sald. Many security attacks on companies are first tried on universities, where hackers can practice in relative anonymity. One example was the February 2000 assaults on eBay, CNN. com and other Web sites. Hacked university computers – and many others – were used to send an overhelming number of messages to the Web sites, making them inaccessible to customers.

Digital 'watermark' could prevent music sharing

Knight Ridder News Service

University of Miami researchers have developed a new technology to embed a digital watermark into audio files that could prevent illegal duplication and piracy over the internet. It's part of an effort to prevent filesaharing companies like. Napster from allowing the free distribution of music and other information. Researchers say the innovation.

distribution of music and other information. Researchers say the innovation could have a significant impact on the illegal duplication of audio and video files across the Internet by providing a new way to track information. The technology, dubbed Hercules, was developed by UM researchers Alexander Illev and Michael Scordlils in the school's College of Engineering. The work began two years ago and grew out of graduate research done by Illev, who earned his master's degree in music engineering technology from UM in last year.

The innovation is based on a new principle in how stereo sound is created and perceived by the listener. Stereo sound operates on two channels; by altering the timing relationship between those two channels, researchers were able to create a third "masked" channel throughwhich new, inaudible information can be transmitted.

which new, inaudible information can be transmitted.

The new information could be anything from pictures to text to links to Web sites. It could also include new computer programs that would prevent the informa-tion being copied or track illegal users.

tion being copied or track illegal users.
None of the added information would affect the actual sound of the files.
Since the technology is so new, no one has used it to completely block the duplication of digital music – but UM already has licensed the process to a private company for commercialization.

Ready for a cold one? Firm goes high tech to cool drinks

BRADENTON, Fla. – Maybe you've been stuck in a crowd along the parade route on a swel-tering Saturday afternoon, no beer or soda vendor in sight, long-ing for that icy, thirst-quenching

Or perhaps you ended up warweary at the end of a long hike through the woods, with nothing to show for it but scraped-up legs and a canteen of lukewarm water. Tempra Technology hopes so—and that your family, friends, and, well, all of the consumerworld's been in similar situations.

"We're just now in a position to-show them something patented and perfected," Guarino, Tempra's president and chief executive. Officer, said recently in. its Bradenton office. He was proud because, just a few days earlier, Tempra carried home the Bronze Award for Can of the Year from an industry convention in Denver.

Here's how Tempra's techno whizzes, led by their own in-house inventor, made the self-chilling can work. Think of how sweat cools the

A. Although I am not an attorney, Mr. R., I am always glad to give legal advice, especially when the answer is as clear to me as it is in your case. Even by the letter of the law as it is laid out in the literate that comes with each copy, of Microsoft Office, it is, permissible for you to transfer that license to another party. Technically, this transfer requires you to do exactly as you-propose, which is to-remove Office from you'r own computer once it; gets installed. In reality, of course, there hasbeen widespread abuse, with people thinking little of lending no problem with the person who

In fact, Microsoft has, a hardnosed plan to crack down on this

Witness: Club owner arranged sex for athletes

ATLANTA – The owner of a top Atlanta strip club regularly set up sex shows and paid dancers to have sex-with professional athletes, a former club manager testified Monday at a federal racketeering trial. Gold Club owner Steve Kaplan played host to members of the New York Knicks, Charlotte Hornets and Indiana Pacers when the basketball teams were in town, Thomas "Ziggy" Sicignano testified. Sicignano said Kaplan paid dancers to have sex with former Knicks Patrick Ewing and John Starks, Reggie Miller and Antonio Davis of the Pacers and Atlanta Braves outfielder Andruw Jones. Sicignano dropped the names late in the day during the trial of Kaplan and six others. All face racketeering charges, including accursations of credit card fraud, prostitution, loansharking and funneling, money to the Gambino crime family. Sicignano said Kaplan paid dancers to put on a sex show and then have sex with Sards and three Knicks players in hotel rooms in Atlanta, and later did the same for Miller, Davis and other Pacers in 1997.

Spokesmen for the Knicks, the NBA and individual athletes ally declined to comment when the allegations were raised earlier this year. The club grosses about $20 million a year, Prosecutors have said Kniplan bilked customers with "outrageous" credit card bills.

Defense attorneys said their clients were simply smart business, men who made millions of honest dollars by catering to high-profile guests.

Unjustly delaying a death benefit for a law officer's widow would be cruel indeed. But a local lawy Moulson's death. Moulson died trying a poperar to be exaggerating when he alleges that state officials have done.

Lance does appear to have valid reasons for asking his fellow members on the Board of Examiners to wait a bit longer. His spokesman said Lance doesn't oppose the payment, but merely wants the board to cross the Ts and dot the Ts. Among other things, the board wants to be sure the death benefit won't be subject to federal taxes.

Assuming that's true, Miciak's hot rhetoric can be written off as lawyerly hyperbole. The Board of Examiners should make sure it is, by dispatching Amy Moulson's check as soon as possible.

Bush takes aim at some big targets

This is a conservative government that is committed to changing the status quo. Its agenda is ambitious, and it is targeting major American institutions for overhaul. That does not fit the stereotypes of the two parties. Looking back, we see that Democratic presidents brought tha New Deal, the Great Society and mors of the other ambitious domestic innovations successful or otherwise. Republicans resisted most of these measures when they were new and led the criticism of their costs. The Democratic motto seems to be: Dream big. The Republicans: Smaller is better.

President Buster, first legislative victory fits that model. The $1.35 trillion tax cut contains relatively little in the way of reform.

reform.

But looming ahead, if Bush has his way, are hugely significant changes in fundamental public and private programs and institutions. Bush is out to change the way Americans educate our children, guard the nation's security, meet our energy needs, provide retirese's benefits and organize a portion of our medical care.

DAVID S. BRODER

Any one of these overhauls would be challenge enough. Bush wants to do them all, in the next 18 months, and -now - in the face of divided government. To say that he faces an epic sales task is a massive understatement.

Bush has a mixed record at best when it come to political companying them.

sive understatement.

Bush has a mixed record at best when it comes to political communication. Thanks to a helpful White House aide, I have in hand a batch of Bush speech texts that do indeed span a universe of topics. But it is striking that he has not gotten through to the public on the subject on which he has spoken most often and passionately, education reform.

Although important provisions remain be settled between the House-passed version and the Senate's draft, there is broad agreement on the basic principles both bills contain and, the survey shows, strong public support for its approach.

No such convenient consensus exists on how to balance energy supply and, demand. Regional, economic and ideological differences abound.

That has not deterred Vice President—Cheney from advancing what even critics.

acknowledge is an ambitious program of energy initiatives. Nor does Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld seem inhibited by the certainty of Joud objections from pressing ahead on his goal of remaking the military.

As if that were not enough, Bush also is eager to overhaut the two largest and most important domestic programs. Social Security and Medicare. He is committed to convincing Americans that these highly popular programs face daingerous financial shoals and that the way to save them is to open them up to make to forces.

There will be fileree resistance on all four of these fronts – energy, military, Social Security and Medicare. And, as Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, a cheerleader for this reform agenda, reminded me the other day, what makes the jack, so difficult is the need to educate people, about the current system, before they can be persuaded that it needs to be changed as the administration proposes.

Avenue's unfair portrayals of women, NOW hosts its annual "Love Your Body. Day" in September in a concerted effort to "spark dialogue across this nation on the impact of harmful media messages, and images of women."

Excuse us, NOW leaders, have you watched TV lately?

For years, the advertising industry was eastigated for portraying women as half-wits, more concerned with vacuum cleaner bags and casseroles than matters of the hind. But, does reversing sexual stereo. Types accomplist, anything?

Mike Flynn, an advertising executive whose firm creates ads for Coca-Cola and TWA, Delleves "men will react with their pocketbooks," withholding their dollars instead of spending them.

We're not sure, but you can bet that most dads will think twice before buying Campbell's Soup, Levi's and Kleenex or signing up for a Visa Card. What's more, according to Flynn, women do most of the household shopping. In the ad industry stilling is the name of the game: If absurd male characters make merchandise fly off the shelves, the "dumb dude" is likely to renain a staple of television advertising and our inner consciousness.

City Council clears way for street widening Pole Line Road. That will cost millions of dollars, and require even more federal grant money.

By John T. Huddy

TWIN FALLS - The City Council unaimously approved an agreement that will pave the way for a plan to widen Washington Street to Falls Avenue.

The council approved the agreement with the Idaho Transportation Department to start the development phase of the Washington Street North-project. That project - estimated to cost a total of $1.4 million-will widen Washington Street to two lanes each way from the Wirsching Avenue and Washington Street intersection north to Falls Avenue. The city is currently widening the intersection of Washington Street and Filer Avenue south of Wirsching Avenue to two lanes each way.

Wirsching Avenue each way. In March, the City Council approved a $603,261 contract with PMF Inc. to widen the with PMF Inc. to widen the intersection.

The council's approval of the phase three agreement would get the ball rolling on the project, Twin Falls City Engineer

Gary Young said on Monday.

"It (agreement) basically starts the development process for phase three," Young said. "It starts the whole process to bring it to the construction phase."

But the city would have to klck in at least $281,000 for the project, he said, which the council would have to come back and approve on a later date.

Construction on the phase three Washington Street project is expected to start sometime in 2002, Young said.
City leaders hope to widen the rest of Washington Street up to even more federal grant money.

Hospital takes pitch on the road

By Jennifer Sandmanr Times News writer

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley Regional Medical Center continues to campaign for the Hospital Board's preferred change in the way the county-owned facility is governed.

Hospital Board's preferred change in the way the county-owned facility is governed.

Hospital communications and marketing staff visited the Buhl Chamber of Commerce lunch Monday to outline developments in the Hospital Board's proposal for a new non-profit organization to run the hospital.

"Currently, our board is standing by the S01(c)3 as the best option," said Shawn Barigar, hospital communications manager.

Meanwhile, Twin Falls County commissioners continue with their own plans to explore other options for the hospital's future, including potential leases to for-profit companies. A new commissioner-appointed hospital advisory committee will hold its first meeting Wednesday.

Barigar told Buhl chamber members that in 1998 an ad hoc committee recommended not selling the hospital but looking into affiliations or changing its governance structure.

But commissioners first want to look at options besides the Hospital Board's 501(c)3 proposal. Commissioner Gargo Grindstaff said Monday in a telephone interview that the Hospital Board is selling its program before the county has looked at other options.

As the hospital campaigns for its 501(c)3 proposal, it also continues to spread its message about the community contributions it makes as a locally-governed medical center.

Rhonda Bright, hospital marketing manager, told Buhl chamber members that the hospital made more than $6.6 million in community contributions last year, including another nearly $590,000 donated by the hospital foundation. The more than $6 million in contributions included:

• $5.2 million in non-teim-based deviations and the second of the property was a property of the property of the

Commissioners postpone officer selection

BURLEY - Because they want more time to talk with their counierpairts from Minidoka County. Cassia County commissioners decided Monday to hold off on announcing a new Mini-Cassia veterans' service officer. When selected, the officer will replace the position that had been held by Al Thatton. Thakton, who was also a Burley councilman, died in March at a Twin Falls hospital from congestive heart failure. Emmet Olmsted, of Rupert, a Mini-Cassia veterans' officer himself until 1996, has been filling the post temporarity.

Together, Minidoka and Cassia counties pay $10,000 annually for the position, which covers the officer's salary as well as the program's expenses. The veterans officer helps veterans receive health benefits and coordinates transportation to out-of-town hos-pitals for medical treatment.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—
Genealogy buffs searching for ancestors from 120 years ago can now do so at the click of a mouse, thanks to a new CD-ROM compiled by the Mormon church.
The new database of the 1880 U.S. Census includes information on 50.4 million inhabitants of what were then 38 states and eight territories. The 56-CD set is the largest census to be automated, according to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Grocers concerned by food scares demand inspections

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supermarkers and restaurants spooked by food poisonings linked to fruits and vegetables are making suppliers hire inspectors to check farms and packing operations.

Produce is responsible for an estimated 10 percent of all outbreaks of foodborne illnesses, yet the government has no mandatory rules for the safe growing and packing of fruits and vegetables—only voluntary guidelines.

An inspection in Washington state caused a farmer to move a lettuce field away from a septic system that sometimes overflowed. In other places, tests of irrigation water are turning up microbial contamination, a major cause of poisoned produce. In Mexico, packing shets have been enclosed to protect produce from contamination, Trade groups representing produces ampliers, supermarkets and enclosed to protect produce from contamination.

Trade groups representing produce suppliers, supermarkets and restaurants have agreed on inspection guidelines that are to be released later this month. Grocery gaints Albertson's and Safeway were the first major supermarket chains to ask for the audits, and Publix, a large Southeast chain, recently followed. Wal-Mart, A&P and Kroger, the nation's largest grocer, are considering similar programs, industry officials say.

The inspectors serve as "the police of our operations, which is good," said Francisco Obregon, a packer who sells Mexican-grown tomatoes, peppers and other produce to US stores.

"The industry doesn't want the government to come in and lay

CSI begins ed-assistant programs

Twin Falls - Responding to a need it expects to grow in coming years, the College of Southern Idaho is starting an education-assistant program this fall.

CSI expects the program to benefit teachers and students by providing specialized training for teachers' assistants - now known as teachers' assistants - now known as teachers' assistants - now known as teachers' aides but in the future to be called paraprofessionals or paraeducators. The program will also offer a one-year certificate or two-year degree to new students interested in an education career.

CSI's program administrator and instructor, Tracey Meyerhoeffer, said that at first school districts are expected to begin focusing on education assistants who work with special education and bilingual students. However, this fall's offerings at CSI will allow education and the special control of the special

New tax law may make planning futile

The new tax law doesn't make planning unnecessary, it just-makes it impossible.

"While the tax law has hardly been immutable in recent times by one count there have been 1,900 changes in the past five years alone "the new bill turns the code into a kind of perpetual-motion machine, with rates shifting, benefits coming and going, provisions phasing in and phasing out until taxpayers' minds reed.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Truth lies within a little and cer tain compass, but error is im mense."

—Henry St. John

"Sorry, partner, I got off to the wrong lead," apologized. West.
"Had I led a heart, he would have had no chance."

"It. wasn't fatal to lead our. sult," replied East, "What killed us was the spade card you chose."

East took his spade ace and returned a trump to South's ace. South offered his club queen, and West took his aceito swhich to his heart 10. South won dummy's ace to discard, a heart on dummy's ace to discard, a heart on dummy's heat queen for a ruffing finesse. When it succeeded, South discarded one spade and ruffed the other, limiting his losses to two tricks.

Had South tried to cash dummy's club jack, South could have overruffed East, but he would no longer have had enough entries for a ruffing finesse in hearts.

As admitted, an opening heart lead would have indeed deleated the game. With no alternative, South would lose a finesse, and two black aces would quickly follow.

However, while finding a heart lead would require dlvine help, the proper spade lead is within human capacity. For flexibility, west should lead his spade king, not fourth-best. After eyeing dummy, East can either overtake or duck, depending on what he sees. In today's layout, East allows the king to hold while signaling for a heart shift. This gives the defenders three sure winners, and South's game goes one down.
