Case draws Mexico's interest

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

Country could play role in case of resident indicted for Twin Falls murder

TWIN FALLS — The Mexican government may intervene on behalf of a Twin Falls murder defendant if the county prosecutor seeks the death penalty, officials said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Orlando Gonzales-Leon, 22, was arraigned Tuesday in 5th District Court on a first-degree murder indictment handed down last week by a Twin Falls grand jury.

The murder charge stems from the April 23 shooting death of Rodolfo Sena, 38, of Twin Falls. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb has until July 5 to decide whether to seek the death penalty against Gonzales-Leon.

As a citizen of Mexico, Gonzales-Leon is entitled by international law to meet with a representative of his government, said Anacelia Perez-Meyer, an official of the Mexican consulate for Idaho, Utah, Montana and Wyoming. A representative from the consulate in Salt Lake City will come soon to Twin Falls to meet with Gonzales-Leon, but an exact date for the visit hadn't been set Tuesday, Perez-Meyer said.

The consulate checks into all criminal cases filed against Mexican citizens in the United States, she said. But special interest is paid to potential capital cases, because the Mexican government opposes the death penalty, she said. The Mexican government might choose to intervene on behalf of one of its citizens facing the death penalty, Perez-Meyer said.

Court: Idaho can try Ruby Ridge case

FBI rifleman does not have immunity

The Washington Post

A divided federal appeals court Tuesday reinstated a state manslaughter charge against the FBI sharpshooter who killed the wife of white separatist Randy Weaver and ruled the marksman was not automatically entitled to immunity from prosecution.

In a 6-to-5 decision, the court raised sharp questions about the testimony of FBI sniper Lon Horiuchi about the 1992 siege of Ruby Ridge in northern Idaho and said at one point his actions seemed "more akin to recklessness than reasonable conduct."

"Assuming the facts alleged by the state," U.S. Circuit Judge Alex Kozinski wrote in the majority opinion, "this is not a case where a law enforcement officer fired his weapon under a mistaken belief that his fellow agents or members of the public were in immediate danger."

"Rather, a group of FBI agents formulated rules of engagement that permitted their colleagues to hide in the bushes and gun down men who posed no immediate threat. Such wartime rules are patently unconstitutional for a police action."

A federal judge in Boise had ruled in 1998 that Horiuchi was immune from prosecution under Idaho law because he was "acting within the scope of his federal authority" when he fired a bullet through a glass pane of the Weaver cabin door, killing Vicki Weaver and injuring family friend Kevin Harris.

Tuesday's decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, meeting in San Francisco, said the ruling was premature and sent the case back to U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge for evidentiary hearings to determine whether Horiuchi should stand trial.

Idaho prosecutors, who have accused Horiuchi of involuntary manslaughter under state law, said they would proceed with the prosecution as soon as the papers reach Judge Lodge.

Bush reaches out to moderates, foes

President promises cooperative effort

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush welcomed Democrats, a defecting Republican and a leading GOP presidential rival to the White House on Tuesday in a display of bipartisanship that illustrated how suddenly the political landscape had shifted beneath him.

"We can still get things done," the president told Democratic and Republican senators working on his education package.

The group included Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont, spending his last day as a Republican after announcing last month that he will switch to independent and tilt the balance of power to Democrats.

A silent Jeffords fiddled with his nameplate while Bush tried to explain what the party switch said about his own ability to lead. "That's what this meeting is all about," the president said. "There's going to be an opportunity for us to work on a variety of issues."

President Bush meets with, from right, Sen. Jim Jeffords, I-Vt., Sen. Bill Frisk, R-Tenn., and Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass.

Bush noted that Jeffords, seated three chairs away in the Cabinet Room, is the sponsor of an HMO reform bill that White House has shown some interest in. The president then squeezed the arm of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, seated next to him, and said of the liberal Democrat: "I'm anxious to talk to the chairman of the Education Committee."

Kennedy is chairman only because of Jeffords' switch.

When he announced his departure, Jeffords said he found it hard to work with Bush and other GOP leaders because the party had grown increasingly conservative. He struck a more conciliatory tone Tuesday.

"This was a most reassuring moment," Jeffords said outside the White House after the meeting. "We came together and began to understand how much we had in common. And that we'd all be working toward the common goal to help the kids."

Bush's education package has passed the House and is being debated in the Senate. Some conservative Republicans are objecting to the bill for several reasons, including its failure to provide federal money for private schools and Bush's desired student assessment tests.

"It's original, perhaps, that he doesn't want conservatives to stand in the way," the president said. "My only hope is that we don't try to add or subtract from the bill after agreements have been made."

Mysterious Nevada cancer cluster claims its first victim

ORANGE, Calif. — Richard Jernee cradled his son's head in his hands, whispering in his ear. "I love you. Everybody loves you."

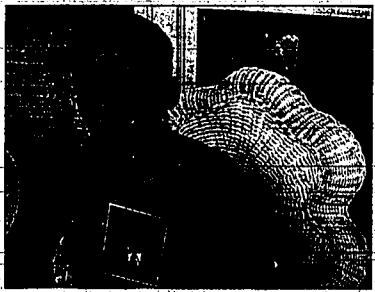

He said it over and over after doctors stopped the machine that was breathing for 10-year-old Adam Jernee. He said it until Adam died.

Adam became the first victim to die in a mysterious childhood-cancer cluster in Nevada.

Fourteen children have been diagnosed with cancer — all but one with acute lymphocytic leukemia — since 1997 in Churchill County, with 25,000 residents. Health officials have said acute

Rates for most cancers decline during the 1990s, records show

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rates for cancer cases and deaths went down in the 1990s, led by declines for prostate, lung and colon cancer, according to combined government and private studies. More breast cancer cases were detected, apparently because of aggressive screening.

"This is an optimistic report because overall cancer rates are tending toward a decline," said Holly L. Howe, one of the authors of a report appearing today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

For all types of cancer combined, incidence rates decreased, on average, 1.1 percent per year from 1992 to 1998.

The big four killer cancers — breast, prostate, lung and colorectal — accounted for 57 percent of the 1998 cancer deaths in the U.S., the study found. These diseases also accounted for 55.9 percent of all new cancers.

Death rates for eight of the top 10 cancers were all level or declining. The exceptions were the death rates for female lung cancer and for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, both of which increased.

Howe said prostate cancer rates have fallen dramatically.

Ohio town will vaccinate students for meningitis

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The state Health Department decided Tuesday to vaccinate up to 5,800 high school students to protect them from a meningitis-related outbreak that has killed two teen-agers and left a third seriously ill.

Health officials will start administering the shots for free Friday to students in six schools in and around Alliance, a north-eastern Ohio city of 23,000.

"Our job is to err on the side of conservatism," said Nick Baird, director of the Health Department. The state will cover the $55 cost per shot.

In an outbreak that has spread fear and confusion in the Alliance area, two high school students, Jonathan Stauffer, 15, and Kelly Coblenz, 16, died more than a week ago after contracting a blood infection caused by a strain of the bacteria Neisseria meningitidis. Officials suspect the two shared a water bottle at a school picnic last month.

On Saturday, Christin Van Camp, 18, a student at another high school, was diagnosed with the same kind of blood infection. The bacteria give victims either meningitis, a disease of the brain, or meningococemia, a blood infection.

The germs are spread by saliva by some means as drinking out of someone else's glass or sharing a fork or spoon. Symptoms include high fever, headache, stiff neck, confusion, nausea, vomiting and exhaustion.

Jonathan Stauffer Kelly Coblenz

Over the weekend, thousands of people in the Alliance area lined-up-to-get-antibiotics-and-about 37,000 doses were given out. But the pills protect people for only a day or two. A vaccine lasts three to five years.

A decision on immunization is based on the number of infections in a community. In a town the size of Alliance, three infections would be the minimum required under guidelines of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Dems take Senate control; GOP softens tone

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — With the modest crack of a gavel, Democrats took control of the Senate for the first time in six years Tuesday night in an unprecedented midterm transfer of power. It prompted both parties and the White House to issue summons to bipartisanship as the only way to get things done in a capital no longer solely under Republican sway.

As their grip on the chamber slipped, Republicans backed off on threats to stymie the Senate's reorganization under the Democrats—unless they retained the power to assure votes on Bush's judicial nominations, even as they vowed to continue to vigorously push the president's agenda.

Democrats welcomed the unprecedented circumstances of their return to the majority — not because of an election, but because of the defection of a lone senator from the Republican ranks — as a historic chance to break years of bitter partisan rancor.

"I think we recognize the extraordinary gravity of the situation, the extraordinary opportunity it presents to the Senate," said Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., the incoming majority leader. "And I think now we have to recognize our responsibilities with this new historic opportunity," he added, noting that before this year the Senate had never changed party control between elections.

The upheaval was prompted by the decision last month by Vermont Sen. James Jeffords to leave the GOP and become an independent aligned with the Democrats. This gave the Democrats a one-vote majority in the previously evenly divided Senate — their first capture of either house since Republicans took over Congress in 1995. The Senate is now composed of 50 Democrats, 49 Republicans and one independent.

Although Democrats will be gaining significant new powers to challenge Bush's priorities on issues ranging from more tax cuts to missile defense, the president said he was "confident we'll be able to work together" to get things done on a bipartisan basis.

"I think we have — I know we have — an opportunity to show the American people that, although the structure of the Senate may have been altered somewhat, we can still get things done in a way that's positive for America," Bush said at a White House meeting with senators of both parties who are working to pass his education bill, including Jeffords. "I'm confident we'll be able to work together."

The meeting—attended-by Jeffords, four Republicans and four Democrats, kicked off several days of events by the president that underscored the shifting balance of power in Washington. Bush had dinner Tuesday night with Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., with whom he has repeatedly differed, invited Daschle over for dinner on Thursday and plans a meeting with Sen. Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island, a maverick Republican.

May 29, 2001

Dear County Members:

It has come to the attention of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center medical staff that Twin Falls County is developing a request for proposal to lease the county hospital. As we understand, the purpose of this request for proposal is to raise funds in support of the county budget.

In the effort to raise county funds, it is our understanding the County will entertain lease proposals from both "for-profits" and "not-for-profits".

We wish to let the community know we are in strong support of the transfer and lease to the proposed community-controlled, non-profit 501(c)(3) organization. We believe this change will ensure the mission of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will be preserved into the future. It is this mission, which ensures service to all community citizens, which keeps us connected to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

At the other extreme, we are not in support of the county's consideration of leasing to a "for-profit" healthcare system. This consideration, which places hospital decision-making in the hands of stockholders, does not ensure the on-going Magic Valley Regional Medical Center mission. Quite the contrary, a transfer to a "for-profit" will ensure that services will not be available to all citizens. If the commissioners elect this leasing option with this hospital staff will not support the decision. Undoubtedly, our future relationship with this hospital will be questioned.

Despite what has been stated in the Times News and the public hearing, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center operates on a decreasingly small profit margin. There are very few county hospitals in the country that operate as for-profit, private companies, that company would be sold or transferred to an outside, for-profit, private company, that company would make all their management decisions based on profit margin rather than patient care and community need. Currently, all excess hospital revenues are reinvested in new services, technology, and building improvements to meet community need and to improve patient care. To drain the hospital of these revenues will be detrimental to the healthcare of this community.

This hospital provides a very high quality of services and patient care. It is truly a community asset and not just a financial sense. We need to work together to find a way to keep it operational, non-profit, and locally-controlled. The proposed conversion to a community-controlled, non-profit 501(c)(3) organization is the solution.

The medical staff considers this a critically important issue to our future healthcare community, MVRMC employees and patients.

Sincerely,
 Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Medical Staff

Astronomers spy most distant objects

PASADENA, Calif. — Astronomers have peered deeper than ever into the past and spied the most-distant-objects-ever seen — two quasars formed when the universe was just 800 million years old.

The announcement Tuesday at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society marks the fourth time the Sloan Digital Sky Survey has pushed closer to the birth of the universe some 13 billion years ago.

Earlier discoveries were about a billion years away from the birth of the universe.

Quasars are galaxies with very active and bright center objects, thought to be powered by black holes. They can shine with the brilliance of a trillion suns.

Post office posts $166 million loss in third quarter

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service was $166 million in the red for the third quarter of its budget year and could finish the year with losses of $2 billion.

The struggling national economy has reduced expected mail volume, postal chief financial officer Richard J. Strasser said Tuesday. "The volume growth trend is not good," Strasser said, projecting that volume losses range from $1.5 billion to $2.4 billion.

Income from a rate increase imposed in January fell below expectations because the independent Postal Rate Commission rejected some proposed increases, and the agency has been battered by rising fuel prices that are expected to cost it an additional $1 billion this year.

Prosecutor: Defendant in bombings deserves death

NEW YORK — Calling the bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa "mass murder committed in cold blood," a prosecutor asked a jury Tuesday to sentence a defendant to death.

"This defendant killed 213 people," Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Garcia said in closing arguments of the penalty phase of the trial as he pointed at defendant Mohamed Rashed Daoud Al-Owhali.

Garcia blamed Al-Owhali, 24, of Saudi Arabia, for those who died in the Aug. 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. An additional 11 people were killed in a simultaneous attack on the U.S. embassy in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

Jurors were expected to be instructed on the law in the case today, and then begin deliberations in the trial's penalty phase.

Commission says Florida election is unfair to blacks

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department should look into extensive problems in last year's elections in Florida that were examined by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, the commission's chairwoman said Tuesday.

Mary Frances Berry said she would ask for approval from the full commission Friday to request a meeting with Attorney General John Ashcroft and to ask Justice to examine the problems in Florida.

A draft of the commission report concluded that minority voters were unjustly penalized by the way the 2000 presidential election was conducted in the state.

Charles Canady, general counsel for Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, complained that the governor's office had been unable to get a full copy of the report in advance, and said in a letter to the commission that the report was rife with errors.

Rumsfeld praises U.S. troops on Kosovo mission

CAMP BONDSTEEL, Yugoslavia (AP) — On his first visit to the Balkans as defense secretary, Donald H. Rumsfeld praised American troops Tuesday and suggested a need for continuing U.S. peacekeeping in Kosovo. "Your willingness to answer the call to duty allows our country to contribute peace and stability in this still-dangerous and untidy world of ours," Rumsfeld told several hundred members of the U.S. peacekeeping contingent at this base in southeastern Kosovo. Rumsfeld made no direct mention of the future U.S. role in Kosovo, though in the past the Pentagon chief has questioned the wisdom of keeping American troops in the Balkans and other hot spots for years on end. Secretary of State Colin Powell and other U.S. officials have assured Europeans the United States won't pull out of missions abruptly, saying U.S. forces went in with Europeans and will go out with them. Rumsfeld, offering support for the mission, praised the soldiers and their commanders for interdicting weapons and other supplies moving through this area into Macedonia, where rebels are operating.

Earlier, Rumsfeld flew by helicopter to a U.S. Army observation post atop a rugged hill on the Kosovo-Macedonia border. A 31-man Army platoon there in the village of Mijak keeps a lookout for mule trains hauling weapons and supplies across the Macedonian border, which is newly within spitting distance of the foxholes where soldiers peer down the hillsides.

EDITORIAL

Forest officials were right to dump unrealistic SNRA regs

Our hats are off to Forest Service officials for listening to property owners and abandoning proposed building restrictions on private land in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The proposal sought to regulate the size, shape and style of new structures - even going as far as to dictate the size and shape of someone's living room window. It was an unrealistic plan, apparently penned by bureaucrats who thought anything bigger than a shirt would mar the SNRA's pristine vistas.

It shouldn't be surprising that the Forest Service has changed its tune since a new president moved into the Oval Office. Politicians does that to bureaucrats.

Property owners weren't the only ones who said the proposed rules were burdensome and intrusive. Seems the proposal was even too green for Bethine - Church that is, widow of former Idaho Sen. Frank Church. Perhaps Idaho's most celebrated conservationist, she is a founder of the nonprofit Sawtooth Society, an SNRA preservation group.

In a letter to Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Bill LeVere, members of the Sawtooth Society complained that the proposed rules were drafted after a flawed public participation process. Public hearings were held during the winter, when many recreation area property owners are out of the area.

The Sawtooth Society also worried the plan might backfire, saying angry property owners who would normally support their vision might bypass the voluntary certification process altogether.

So instead of force-feeding property owners new regulations, officials have decided to take a kinder and gentler approach. They've decided to distribute brochures showing accepted building designs. Landowners seeking other architectural styles would be subject to a more thorough review to determine if the property could be certified.

It shouldn't be surprising that the Forest Service has changed its tune since a new president moved into the Oval Office. Politicians does that to bureaucrats. The same officials who focused on recreationalizing the forests during the Clinton years have begun to open their minds to multiple uses since Dale Bosworth took over as the Forest Service chief.

During a recent visit with Times-News editors, Congressman Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, said the change in thinking is a reflection of the new administration. Republican leaders have no plans to bulldoze the forests, but they would like to see more cooperation from Washington on local issues, he said.

"I don't want to cut down the forests - I just want to bring it back to some common sense," Simpson said.

That common-sense approach includes looking at the needs of forests individually. It also includes taking another look at Clinton's roadless initiative - which Simpson said might be thrown out by the courts since it was created with little public comment in the departing administration's eleventh hour.

Simpson said if the roadless rule remains in place, it should be amended to allow controlled burns and thinning of forests to reduce fuel loads.

It appears Forest Service officials have begun changing their direction since a new administration came on board. In our minds, dropping the proposed regulations on private land in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area was a step toward sensible forest management.

Amnesty International is way off base

BILL THOMPSON

Amnesty International strikes again. This outfit is like that bronchial infection that was going around last winter. Whenever you figured the despicable bug had played itself out - or at least flown to torment some other poor soul - it would flare up again.

So it is with the world's foremost organization of bleeding heart nitwits, Amnesty International, which had been curiously silent for a month or so after throwing a fit over convicted terrorist Timothy McVeigh's decision to accept his death sentence without further delay.

The organization insisted that there should be no "consensual execution" and McVeigh had dropped all appeals and asked the court for a prompt appointment with the executioner - because a condemned prisoner is incapable of making a free choice in matters of life and death.

Imagine. The notorious Oklahoma City bomber respectfully requests the government to please hurry up and give him the lethal needle and in response some self-righteous gangle of humanitarians supposedly dedicated to bug bits and individual liberty starts screaming that the killer of 168 innocent men, women and children has no right to choose an early exit.

That was bad. But the group's latest hijinks are even worse. In honor of the organization's 40th year of existence - it might have served a useful purpose back in the early '60s, emphasis on "might" - Amnesty International launched another attack on the United States for its use of capital punishment.

The group even went so far as to lambaste the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, relegating the Lone Star State's arbiter of last resort in death penalty cases to a list of human rights "scoundrels" that also included the Communist dictator of China and the bloodthirsty president of Zimbabwe.

You'd think that AI, as the group calls itself on its Web site, would be plenty busy just railing against international war criminals and beaming torture and murder by Third World outthroats. How can AI possibly find time to meddle in the administrative policies of Texas state government?

Whatever credibility Amnesty International ever had evaporated when it professes to see no difference between a Marxist tyrant who maims and murders political opponents and a duly appointed board of citizens that functions as part and parcel of the greatest system of jurisprudence ever devised by humankind.

But then, Amnesty International apparently sees no difference between the state-sanctioned slaughter of innocents and the lawful imposition of a death sentence by a jury representing the community at large.

When it puts no Texas pardons board on a scoundrel's list alongside China's Jiang Zemin and Zimbabwean thug Robert Mugabe, Amnesty International renders itself preposterous.

Likewise, AI equates the United States and its use of capital punishment with savage atrocities such as China and Iraq, even though its own annual report noted that a grand total of 85 criminals were executed in the U.S. last year - whereas China executed at least 89 on one day in a recent crackdown on crime.

Amnesty International laments the capricious killing and inhumane treatment of "prisoners of conscience" in out-law nations and in the same breath rips the greatest democracy in the history of the world because it uses a hypodermic needle to end the lives of duly convicted and sentenced murderers whose court appeals often extend their Death Row residence for decades.

Do you suppose Amnesty International looks upon Timothy McVeigh as a "prisoner of conscience"? McVeigh, of course, has changed his mind and wants to delay his scheduled June 11 execution while his lawyers examine those documents that the FBI failed to turn over to the defense at his trial. AI must be thrilled that this cold-blooded killer, this mass murderer, decided to re-evaluate his position on the issue of "consensual execution."

Now if we could just get this Amnesty International crowd to re-evaluate its definition of "scoundrel."

LETTERS

Drug courts do good work

Mr. Kalange, in response to your letter of May 28:
You are correct in your analysis of the current "front-end rehabilitation strategies (programs)" that do not work and end up throwing the addict into relapse and back into the court system.
Dismissing the drug court as "frivolous" is a jump in the wrong direction. The drug courts in and of themselves do not "stop addiction," nor do they hope to correct morality. However, working with drug and alcohol treatment programs, the pilot drug courts nationally have shown a reduction in recidivism. When you consider the rise in the recidivism rate from 17 percent in 1974 to 67 percent in 1999 and the millions of dollars that have been spent on programs that have not worked, seeing a reduction in the rate of recidivism is meaningful.
But we must know our target audience for any program to be successful. With 80 percent of those in drug and alcohol treatment being diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, the rehabilitation drug program must be modified to address the learning styles and the behavior clusters of the addict-offender. Until the November 2000 founding of Life Challenges Inc. in Twin Falls, there were no formal rehabilitation-treatment programs that targeted this audience. (At 80 percent, this is a rather large audience that has been overlooked.) As a result, most offenders, after going through as many as five different programs, continue to violate. The offender, 80 percent of the time, is not able to understand, process, apply, establish a structure of self-discipline, see or change distorted self-perceptions, or modify thinking and behavior strategies, as taught in most core programs. Therefore, he fails or, more honestly, the program fails.

The drug courts, with appropriate rehabilitation-treatment programs, give the offender an opportunity to develop an individual relapse prevention plan that in turn generates more personal responsibility and accountability. The individual relapse prevention plan can be altered as the need arises and allows room for growth and refocusing. There is no magic program out there that will fix someone who doesn't want to be fixed. But in my experience, most of the offenders do want to change or improve but do not have the tools to be successful. Drug courts are a step in the right direction for much needed correction reform.

SHAUNA FULLER

(Editor's note: Shauna Fuller is president and developer of Life Challenges Inc., a social program that teaches people who are on probation or parole how to get out of the criminal justice system. It targets those who have attention deficit disorders and behavior problems.)
Kudps Magic Valley High
I would like to commend the Magic Valley High School for the compassionate, loving but firm teachers and staff.
In the beginning, I felt very upset that my pride and joy was going to attend the "alternative" school for troubled and dysfunctional children.
After my granddaughter had started attending this school, I dropped her off at the school and the principal happened to be out front. I called him over to the car and let him have it, saying "the parents of these children ought to see that their child attends a regular high school; this is nonsense." He invited me inside and I was impressed with the classrooms and other facilities and the well-mannered students. I could see that they ran a tight ship (an old Navy term).

Every day, each student is required to choose a book of their choice from the library and read for an hour. Instead of taking several courses in one day, a block of weeks is set aside that offers only one course: With this concentrated instruction, the kids come away with a thorough knowledge. Also, a set number of hours is allowed to be tardy or absent or 'out you go.
I have just finished looking through and reading the 2001 yearbook, and I was impressed with the poetic and artistic style and form. Each student has a whole page to design themselves with pictures, poetry and individual thoughts.
Perhaps some of the other high schools in the valley could take some pointers from this wonderful school.

Let the hospital continue

So the county commissioners have decided to solve their budget problems by leasing the hospital to the highest bidder. They do this in spite of the fact that not one but two citizen's committees and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's board of directors recommended converting the hospital to a community not-for-profit corporation - 501(c)3 - that would lease the hospital from the county. The most recent committee even suggested the lease payment be nominal so that profits could be re-invested in community-owned health care - not to subsidize other county government functions.
Apparently, the commissioners know more than all of those folks do (olks who, by the way, the commissioners themselves appointed). Can't say I'm surprised. They didn't believe the citizens they asked to study the confined animal feeding operation and CAFO lighting issues either.
Now they have asked some more citizens to form a third committee to help the county look "objectively" at all the options for the hospital's future. Will they ignore this group too? Or will they keep asking citizens to help them out forming committees and studying the hospital's future until they get the answer they want? Just how many more citizens are going to be willing to give their time and energy to these seemingly useless exercises?

Get real. The commissioners supported the 501(c)3 concept when they thought it would give them a lease payment to add to the county's budget. But when a big, seductive offer rolled in the door from an outside for-profit corporation, suddenly we needed to study the options yet again. These questions have been asked and answered in this community.
Let the hospital get on with the business of providing high-quality health care in the Magic Valley. This asset should be protected, developed, owned, controlled and managed locally - and every penny of profit should go back into the infrastructure and the direct provision of health care services in the Magic Valley.
Keep the commissioners, their budget woes and their politics out of it.

Tenor of environmental debate is bound to change the world

The World Conservation Union and Future Harvest (representing Third World agricultural researchers) have just issued a path-breaking conservation report declaring that high-yield "ecoculture" must be a major part of the world's efforts to save wildlife.

The World Conservation Union, a major international conservation group headquartered in Switzerland, is breaking step with such organizations as Greenpeace and the Sierra Club.

That's probably because the World Conservation Union includes some 10,000 conservation experts and scientists in its membership, along with Third World government agencies and non-governmental organizations working in places where, before their eyes, wild species and wildlife habitat are being lost to low-yield farming.

Greenpeace and the Sierra Club have a history of endorsing only low-yield organic farming, especially in the Third World, without much regard for how human inhabitants will be fed.

The joint report from the World Conservation Union and Future Harvest recommends ecoculture, sure, with higher yields to save more room for wildlife. They also want better conservation use of non-cultivated farmland such as stream banks, irrigation canals, and special sites conserved for cultural or religious reasons.

The groups believe farmers will be more willing to encourage wildlife habitat in such spaces if new technologies and farming systems raise the yields on their best soils — so they gain in total production and crop value.

In the wet, windy mountains of northeast Costa Rica, dairy calves died of wind chill and parakeets stole the coffee berries from the farmers' trees. In 1989, the Conservation League of Monteverde worked with farmers in 19 communities to create 150 hectares of windbreaks.

One study found the seeds from 174 different plant species in the windbreaks. Birds dispersed 95 times as many seeds (mainly wild trees) in the windbreaks as in the surrounding pastures.

The joint report also mentions the conservation impact of only the EU's cropland set-aside. In Britain, for example, the EU pays farmers not to plant crops on 600,000 acres, making set-aside the third-largest land use in the lowlands after grass and cereals.

Cropland set-aside may make good conservation sense in the intensely developed landscape of southeast England. However, each acre of high-yield farmland put into set-aside may eventually force the plow-down of two acres of forest somewhere else to make up for the lost production.

Farm trade must also play an increasing role in feeding the 21st century, especially for land-short Asia. The United States has set aside a great deal of cropland — more than 30 million acres of "conservation reserve" lands — mostly on the Great Plains, where there is already a great deal of wildlife habitat, few wild species and few residents to enjoy them.

More effective may be the recent U.S. emphasis on using its conservation payments to encourage grassy strips along stream banks. Such grassy strips prevent soil particles and nutrients from degrading the streams. In addition, the grassy strips provide year-round cover and food for birds and small animals.

The tenor of the environmental debate is bound to change by the thoughtful endorsement of high-yield farming by an environmental group as prestigious as the World Conservation Union.

Until now, eco-groups have been marching lockstep in support of the myth that organic farming can feed the world while protecting wildlife from harsh agricultural chemicals. But organic farmers' yields are little more than half as high as those of conventional modern farmers.

Whether the world supports or hamstring high-yield farming in the 21st century is the biggest wildlife conservation issue facing the world.

Until now, the environmental organizations have pitted people against wildlife. In a contest the wildlife can't win, The World Conservation Union has challenged the conservation credentials of every other wildlife organization.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Gooding County gets drought declaration

BOISE - Gooding County has joined 16 other Idaho counties in receiving drought emergency declarations from Gov. Dirk Kempthorne.

The governor signed declarations for Gooding, Boise and Oneida counties Tuesday night, a news release from Kempthorne's office stated. They join 14 previously designated counties.

Inflows to Magic Reservoir in Gooding County are forecast to be 21 percent of average, and irrigation supplies are expected to last only two more weeks.

With the declarations in place, water rights holders can apply to the Department of Water Resources for expedited processing of temporary changes of points of diversion and place and purpose of use under valid existing water rights.

Drought emergency declarations had already been approved for Blaine, Elmore, Lincoln and 11 other counties. A separate declaration was issued for the Salmon Tract area in Twin Falls County.

All drought emergency declarations are effective through Dec. 31.

Judge blinds kidnapping cases, delays another

TWIN FALLS - After preliminary hearings Monday, a judge bound kidnapping charges against two Twin Falls men over District Court.

An unrelated kidnapping case against a Bullhead man was delayed.

Magistrate Judge Mark Ingram bound a first-degree kidnapping charge and aggravated battery charge against Steve Burgoyne, 52, and a first-degree kidnapping charge against Michael Brannon, 42. Both face initial District Court appearances June 14.

The charges stem from allegations that they took Cynthia Campbell, 36, of Twin Falls against her will on April 18, according to court records. An affidavit by Twin Falls police detective Dan Lewin says Burgoyne fired a single shot from a .44-caliber handgun over Campbell's head and then shot Campbell once in the left arm.

In an unrelated case, a preliminary hearing for Charles Douglas Steele, 37, was delayed until June 15.

Steele was charged with second-degree kidnapping in connection with a March 19 standoff with police in Bull in which he allegedly held his ex-wife hostage for about 30 minutes before setting her free. Steele then holed up in his ex-wife's home for several hours before surrendering to police.

SIRCComm directors to meet tonight

JEROME - Emergency dispatch coverage of the Hagerman area and options for new software top the agenda of the meeting tonight of the board of directors of the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center.

The board meets at 7 p.m. in the SIRCComm building at 911 E. Ave. H. in Jerome.

Financial reports and hear reviews from the center's operations director and operations manager.

The board then is scheduled to go into a closed executive session.

Applications soon due for First District Judge slot

BOISE - The Idaho Judicial Council is accepting applications to replace outgoing District Judge James F. Judd in the First Judicial District until June 29.

Applications must be received by no later than 5 p.m. that day.

Applications are available from district court clerks in any county or from Judicial Council Executive Director Robert Hamlin. The latest 2000 application form must be used. The forms is available from the judicial council on WordPerfect or MSWord software.

Applications may be hand-delivered to Hamlin's office at 2710 Sunrise-Mun-Road, Suite 130, Boise. They may also be mailed to Hamlin at P.O. Box 16428, Boise, 83715. The phone number is (208) 334-5213.

(After the applications are in, the council will circulate a questionnaire to Idaho State Bar members and the general public regarding the applicants' qualifications. The board will then select a number of finalists to be interviewed in person in August or September.)

Summering in school

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Summer school for some 400 to 500 high school students starts bright and early today at 7 a.m., with sessions lasting until 12:55 p.m.

Meanwhile, summer sessions for about 600 K-8 students in the Twin Falls School District start Thursday. That number is about the same as last year, district officials say. Even though Thursday is the first day, many students won't show up until Monday, they said.

The main purpose of the intensive elementary sessions is remediation in reading and math. However, many of the high school students planning on summer school are getting a jump on courses such as history or government to free up time during the regular year.

The district is providing transportation, but routes are reduced so that students will be picked up at key spots. Only migrant students will get breakfast and lunch.

Here's a rundown of summer school throughout the district: Elementary: About 220 students in grades K-5 from all seven schools have been referred for extra help in reading and math. Lincoln Elementary Principal Beth Olmstead said sessions are from 8:30 to 11:30.

Please see SCHOOL, Page B3

TWIN FALLS - It's strong enough that an 18-wheeler could drive over it without cracking.

And fast enough that local skateboarders will be able to hit the new city skate park's rails and ramps at speeds that will make their parents' hearts skip a beat.

Soon, that frightening thought will become reality.

"This thing is still on track to set a standard," said Zack Wormhoudt, an architect and skateboarder and big-wave surfer from Santa Cruz, Calif., who helped design the city's new 10,000-square-foot skate park at Harmon Park.

"Gnarly," Wormhoudt said, looking at one of the many steel rails at this park. "This is a good rail."

Ketchum looks at rec center

By Karen Bosalck
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - City Council members appeared eager to get the ball rolling on a proposed privately financed recreation center Monday.

If the Bill Janss Community Center gets the green light in the next several weeks, it will bring an end to several frustrating years of master plans that succeeded master plans and a failed bond levy.

"Let's give people an answer as soon as we can. We can't drag this on another eight years," said Mayor Guy Coles, urging council members to review the latest proposal within the next 60 to 90 days.

Nearly 40 people took their lunch hour to crowd into Ketchum City Hall to see the two-hour unveiling of the latest proposal prepared by architect Andrew Barnard of the Denver-based Sink Combs Dethlefs, which specializes in sports and recreation facilities.

A needs assessment, gathered from talking to representatives of 30 organizations and focus groups numbering about 100 residents, determined that the area is an unusually active community with a need for a central gathering place, said Paul Brailsford, chief executive officer of the Washington, D.C.-based Brailsford and Dunlap facility planning project management firm.

The $14 million facility would be placed on the city-owned Park and Ride lot at Warm Springs and Saddle Road.

The red brick facility with glassed rooftop cupolas would have the flavor of a railroad depot, in keeping with the historic nature of the area where it would sit.

It would include a 100-by-200-foot international-sized ice sheet with 1,206 seats. Another 1,500, to 1,800 could be placed on the floor for concerts and trade shows.

The facility would also include a fitness center with strength training and cardiovascular equipment, a two-story climbing wall, multi-purpose gym, meeting room with kitchen, child care center, locker rooms and showers.

An outdoor pool with three or four lanes would be augmented by saunas, an infant pool and year-round hot spring pools of varying sizes and temperatures.

There would be room for about 300 parking spaces on site, and nearly 500 in the area, including parking at the Park and Ride lot across the street.

Once the facility is built, the city would accept the title to the center, allowing it to get a state-of-the-art facility for basically half-price, said Jeff Turner, vice president of Brailsford and Dunlap.

Utility wants generators in Cassia, Minidoka and Jerome counties

By Dan Fields
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Idaho Power officials are gearing up for a meeting later this month with local planning and zoning commissions that will determine whether the utility can set up mobile generators in Cassia and Minidoka counties.

Idaho Power wants to set up 25 diesel generators in the two counties, along with Jerome County, said company spokesman Dan Olmstead. The generator in Jerome County, an application for which has already been approved, will be parked at the utility's Hunt substation north of Eden.

The meetings with each county's respective commission are part of public hearings that take place on June 21. The Minidoka hearing is at 2 p.m. and Cassia's at 8 p.m. during each county's commission meeting.

Olmstead said the generator sites in Minidoka county are located north of Rupert and Paul. The sites in Cassia County are between Burley and Oakley.

The generators at each site would produce a sound level of about 65 decibels, comparable to the sound of a diesel truck, Olmstead said. However, he said, most of the homes near the generators will be at least a half-mile away, meaning the sound will not be as noticeable.

The utility doesn't want to repeat what recently happened in Boise, where residents forced the removal of generators because of noise levels.

"That's why we've chosen those locations - to have distance away from people," Olmstead said. "We don't want to have the same situation we had in Boise. Certainly, there will be noise. People will notice that they'll be there, but they shouldn't be obtrusive. At least we hope not."

Idaho Power doesn't plan on shipping the Treasure Valley generators to Mini-Cassia.

We do have problems on the original 25 generators with noise and vibration concerns and, to some degree, air-quality concerns," Olmstead said. "We think we've found three places in Ada County, further out toward the desert. It looks like those original 25 will remain in Ada County."

Once the generators produce power, it goes into the utility's southern Idaho grid and is dis-

BPA rate boost may be lower than expected

The Times-News and The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — With utilities promising to curtail power purchases, aluminum smelters shut down for two years, the Bonneville Power Administration may be able to keep its wholesale price increases below 100 percent when the new rates take effect Oct. 1.

The agency had warned utilities which buy power from — including three Magic Valley municipal utilities — that wholesale rates could quadruple. But Chief Executive Officer Steve Hickok now said the percentage increase this fall "will be substantially less than multiple digits."

Locally, the effect could be most felt in the Mini-Cassia area, as the cities of Burley, Rupert and Heyburn all buy their power from the BPA.

The final figure depends on negotiations with aluminum companies and local utilities, Hickok said. "Utilities have been asked to cut their BPA power purchases by 10 percent. A 70 percent wholesale rate increase would translate into about a 35 percent increase for most residential and business customers."

BPA sells electricity produced at 29 dams and one nuclear power plant to six private, investor-owned utilities. It markets nearly half of the power consumed in the Northwest.

Hickok expects all but one aluminum company to sign two-year deals, under which BPA will pay the companies to shut down so the agency can avoid having to buy expensive electricity on the open market to serve them.

Spokesman Ed Mosey said a rate forecast being announced today "still might make the hair stand up on the back of your head, but we think we'll get quite a bit more" in demand-reduction agreements by the end of June. That's when the Oct. 1 rates will be formally set.

BPA is contractually obligated to provide utilities, aluminum companies and other users about 11,000 megawatts of electricity — 3,000 megawatts more than it can generate on its own.

That power is produced at a cost of $24 per megawatt.

"Unless I can close that gap, the agency will be forced to cover the difference with wholesale power that is running as high as $500 a megawatt."

This Bonneville Power Administration substation is one of a handful in the Mini-Cassia area that distribute electricity. The utility said Tuesday that anticipated rate increases won't be as high as expected, which could spell some relief for electric departments in Burley, Rupert and Heyburn. The three cities buy power from the BPA to resell.

Gooding County eyes subdivision ordinance

By Almoa Metcalf Times-News correspondent

GOODING — County Planning and Zoning Board member Judy Daubner reported on the progress of a subdivision ordinance at Monday's regular County Commission meeting.

At the board's regular meeting and subdivision workshop on May 30, members reviewed subdivision ordinances from Blaine, Jerome, Twin Falls, Hagerman and Elmore counties.

Because of recent attention in Hagerman to changing the "impact area," Gooding County planning and zoning officials "paid particular attention to a review of the impact area done in Glenns Ferry."

Dauber said the overlay "would make the dairies unable to grow to tremendous proportions, although we haven't spoken with the Hagerman people to see if they would want that."

Rupert looks for ways to cut costs

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — While grappling with a promised rise in energy costs, the City Council is looking for ways to cut the city's utility costs.

Richard Reynolds of Idaho Energy Authority (IDEA) and Mike Boyer of CMS Energy/Viron Energy Services provided a possible solution during the council meeting Tuesday.

Representatives from Minidoka County School District, Minidoka Memorial Hospital and several Rupert businesses, which could also benefit from energy conservation measures, listened as Boyer explained the CMS proposal to replace energy infrastructure.

The company guarantees in writing that the performance contracting work they could do on a facility would result in energy and operation savings that would cover the debt service of the installation, Boyer said.

CMS would look at such city functions as wastewater treatment office visits and even sludge and find ways to save energy. The guarantee does not change if costs for the project change, he said.

"If we are off on our costs, we will take those costs," he said.

Work could be done locally.

"We love working with local subcontractors," Boyer said.

After energy infrastructure improvements are made, energy savings would be monitored to guarantee that savings.

Pre-project energy bills would be compared with bills after the project on a monthly basis. A savings of 25 percent should result, he said.

Nick Hallett, superintendent of Minidoka County School District, asked if the guarantee would work if there were temperature extremes throughout the year.

"If there is a hot summer or cold winter, that's our problem, not yours," Boyer said.

The school district might be interested in the plan if it would save money, but the district would have to know more details, Hallett said.

Richard Reynolds, staff assistant at United Electric Co-op, Rupert, said Bonneville Power Administration is working with IDEA on some programs to help customers receive credit toward a power discount.

CMS is one of the contractors that IDEA has been working with, Reynolds said.

Roger Bagley, city administrator, said Rupert should know by the 15th or 30th of this month how much of a rate increase to expect from BPA. Estimates change frequently ranging from 50 to 200 percent, he said.

"It changes every week," Bagley said.

But the city is trying to get things in place through IDEA to make conservation measures, he said.

The council has not discussed exactly what will be done about the increase or how it will affect Rupert's utility patrons, Bagley said.

tributed to Idaho Power customers. "This keeps us from going into the open market," Olmstead said.

The generators are being used to help save the company — and ultimately its customers — money, Olmstead said. By producing the power through the generators, it's costing Idaho Power between 13 and 15 cents a kilowatt hour. If the utility has to buy power on the open market this summer, it will cost between 30 and 40 cents a kilowatt hour, he said.

The company is only charged about 2 cents a kilowatt hour to buy on the open market during a normal summer, Olmstead said, noting residential customers are being charged about 6 cents a kilowatt hour.

Because of Department of Environmental Quality regulations, the generators can only run for six months. After that time, they must be moved or turned off.

Citizen panel convenes for historic redistricting work

BOISE (AP) — The six-member, bipartisan citizens commission began its 90-day sprint toward new congressional and legislative district maps on Tuesday in what officials called a historic moment for the state.

The three Republicans and three Democrats were sworn in by Secretary of State Pete Coeur after a decade of dramatic and unbalanced growth.

Givens is joined by fellow Democrats Karl Shurdiff, a former state legislator and U.S. attorney for Idaho, and retired military officer Tom Stuart and Republicans John Hepworth, a Twin Falls attorney; Kristi Sellers of Chubbuck and former state legislator Dean Haagenen, a Coeur d'Alene contractor.

After watching the Legislature essentially tear itself apart every 10 years trying to redraw the district lines, voters in 1992 overwhelmingly approved giving the responsibility to a citizen commission that is answerable only to the courts.

Givens was the attorney in the longest of those, the 1980s battle that ultimately resulted in the imposition of a court-ordered plan that expanded the Legislature by 21 members with the addition of seven huge, at-large, multi-county districts.

Calling equitable treatment of minorities and struggling rural communities top priorities, Givens said he believed the public involvement contemplated in the commission's deliberations would provide the biggest boost toward drafting acceptable district maps. It will take at least four commissioners to approve any new map.

Planners estimate annual operating expenses of $1.76 million, which would be used to pay eight to 10 full-time staff and part-time staff members. They project an annual income of $1.79 million raised by revenues from ice cream, membership fees, resort babysitting, birthday camps, day passes for tourists and rent for special events.

The project wouldn't increase taxes. "Instead, the center's board would raise $8 million over a 14-month period with the help of the San Francisco-based Greenwood Company. The Greenwood Company raised several million dollars more than it set out to raise for the new St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center a few years ago.

To finance the remainder of the project, the city would enter into a 6320 structure, an IRS vehicle that is used to build public projects, such as courthouses.

The Janss Center would issue a tax-exempt bond to finance construction. The city would appropriate funds each year to pay a lease payment equal to the annual debt service for bonds issued for construction.

Council member Maurice Charlat said what he had heard was "very interesting and exciting." But he wanted to dig into the operating plan before making a commitment.

"I'm excited about it, but I'm concerned about how we're going to pay for it," echoed Coles.

Rebecca Goodwin, who just last week proposed a private/public partnership with the Blaine County Recreation District to build a YMCA-type multipurpose facility in Hailey, said he didn't see anything in the Bill Janss Center proposal to make him rethink what he was doing. His facility would cater more toward giving youngsters after-school activities and budding young athletes plenty of training time, he said. The Janss Center, by contrast, would fill a niche among tourists.

There's been a lot of discussion in the valley about whether such a facility should be built in Hailey, where the bulk of the proposal is being developed in the Valley area. The Janss Center board was unable to find property in Hailey and jumped at the offer by the Ketchum council, Murphy said.

Arguing further where the center should be would be a waste of time when there is property available, added Hutchinson. "I don't want the property to sit vacant much longer."

Park

With a cold drizzle lightly covering the newly cemented park, Twin Falls City Engineer Gary Young and other city leaders met Tuesday with Wormhoudt, some local skaters and representatives of a local skateboarders' association that helped raise money for the park.

Local leaders scheduled July 13 as the new skate park's official opening. A skateboarding contest is set July 14 and an in-line skate contest July 15 at the park.

City leaders said the park could — but shouldn't — be used before opening day.

Typically, cement needs time to cure, or harden. At 4,000 pounds per square inch — the new skate park's strength — the cement will be at 95 percent strength 28 days after it is poured.

Half of the park has already cured for about 20 days. The skateboarders' Association picked up an expert levels — needs about 20 days more cure time and should be ready before the opening.

But, the park's engineers said, the park will be closed until July 13 just to make sure they give the concrete enough time to cure.

It could be difficult trying to keep skaters off, however.

Ron Black, a member of the skateboarders' association, said some skateboarders have already climbed the fence and tested out the features.

"They said they just wanted to try out the park, but we told them they would have to wait," Black said.

Brent Borah, project foreman for Stanley and Associates — the company that built the park — said it is one of the more interesting and challenging projects he has worked on over the years.

"The sloped angles, radius and elevation changes is what's been somewhat difficult, but challenging," Borah said.

And one local skateboarder, Brandon Buchanan of Twin Falls, was nothing but smiles as he surveyed the new park Tuesday.

"This is definitely one of the most exciting things in the Twin Falls for skateboarders," Buchanan said.

The city pitched in $90,000 for the new park, while the Magic Valley Skateboarders' Association picked up the rest.

The $169,999 total is a small price to be paid for the city's skateboarders, some say.

"We spent a lot of years wishing and hoping and working," Black said. "When you get down to some of the things that need to be worked out, they seem pretty minor."

supervising the junior high program. She said the mission of the program, which is going into its third year, is also remediation.

"A lot of these kids fall right through the cracks," she said.

"We concentrate on decreasing the number of dropouts in high school. If they walk into high school more prepared, they will feel more successful."

She said though only about 150 students are registered so far, that number is about on target with the past two years, when there were around 200 in school.

The classes are held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Thursday, June 7-28.

"It's going to be short and sweet and absolutely no fluff," Roberts said. "We're going to give them a great, big shot of math that lasts for one and a half hours, and then a shot of reading for another hour and a half."

For the past two years the attendance rate has held at 96 percent, Roberts said.

"They like the attention and the small classes," she said.

High school: Baird said between 40 and 500 students attend each year to take classes such as English, math, reading and body development, in addition to government and history. The high school program lasts until July 16, with two-and-a-half hours at 7 a.m. and running until 2:55 p.m.

Migrant program: Going into its 16th year, the migrant program usually provides catch-up tutoring for about 150 students, said Gordon Armstrong, Bickel Elementary School principal. Bickel is the site for the two-week program that runs all day with both breakfast and lunch for students. Classes start on June 12 and end on Thursday, June 28.

Armstrong said students who move frequently with their families typically lose around two to three weeks in their studies as they adjust to new schools. The program is so popular that Armstrong said students say they don't want to go home when it's over.

"They just want to keep coming to school," he said.

Elko County manager to retire this summer

ELKO, Nev. — Elko County Manager George R.E. Boucher will retire in a few weeks after serving Elko County for nearly a half century.

The Elko County commissioners will meet at 1:30 p.m. today and Thursday in Room 405 of the courthouse.

During today's meeting, the commissioners will discuss naming the administrative building in Boucher's honor and the possibility of designating June 22 as "George R.E. Boucher Day" in Elko County. Also on the commissioners' agenda are reports from the Jackpot, Monticello and Jarbidge town-boards and county roads.

Prosecutor: Children lived in squalor

SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP) — For six days the McGuckin children refused to leave their rural Idaho home. Now their mother is refusing to leave her jail cell.

JoAnn McGuckin, 46, remained in the Bonner County Jail on Tuesday, even though a judge has said she is free to go. She refuses to leave until she is reunited with her children, who are currently wards of the state.

"Those are my kids," McGuckin said in a statement read Tuesday by her attorney. "The state needs to mind its own business."

The widow demanded again that the felony child neglect charge that led to her arrest last week be dismissed.

Health attorney Bryce Powell, said tests on the six children indicate they are not malnourished and are in good physical health. Powell said he has seen the children, who are being held at the hospital in Sandpoint, and that they appeared healthy.

Sheriff's deputies arrested McGuckin May 29 and tried to take her six children into custody, believing they were malnourished, cold and living in unhealthy conditions.

A hearing Tuesday to determine custody of the children for the next 30 days was postponed until next Monday after attorneys asked for more time.

McGuckin refused to leave jail Monday after her bond was reduced from $100,000 to nothing. She has refused to stay away from her children as a condition of release, has demanded the charges against her be dropped and that county Prosecutor Phil Robinson apologize.

Robinson said he won't apologize or drop the charge, especially after learning more about conditions at the home. The state asserts she failed to provide the children with adequate food and shelter.

Officials are trying to build a case for neglect against the mother, saying the family's house was filthy with dog feces, human waste and rotting food.

"I wouldn't put my dog in that home," Robinson said Tuesday. "It's pretty obvious this (mess) didn't happen in five days."

McGuckin's arrest prompted the children to huddle up in their home, keeping officials at bay with the help of their pack of vicious dogs. The children — Kathryn, 16; Benjamin, 15; Mary, 13; James, 11; Frederick, 9; and June, 8 — agreed to come out Saturday after being assured by authorities they would be able to stay together.

Their father, Michael McGuckin, died May 12 at the age of 61.

Sheriff's deputies searched the house Monday, finding five guns and ammunition, along with an overwhelming stench, Robinson said.

They found a full bucket in the bathroom that the children were using as an indoor toilet after the home's water was shut off, he said.

Animal control officers were rounding up the family's 27 dogs and have promised that the animals will not be destroyed.

Asked how long McGuckin planned to remain in jail, Powell said, "She's made her demands rather clear."

McGuckin is in poor health, Powell said, but he declined to provide details. The sheriff's office has said she may be mentally ill.

At next Monday's hearing, a judge could return the children to their mother, retain state custody or send them to live with their mother under regular state scrutiny. A decision on where the children will live for the next year will follow the 30-day period.

Energy Department prepares for another busy fire season

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A dusting of weekend snow in the mountains will not be enough to prevent what is shaping up as a long summer of wildfires on the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

"We have had a very dry season this spring," INEEL's Michael Stevens said in a telephone interview. "But we are ready for the wildland firefighting season."

The U.S. Department of Energy site is accustomed to fighting wildfires, sparked every day year by lightning, blown trees and stray cigarettes. This season officials have adjusted their approach following an internal review of the agency's firefighting practices.

Last summer, major wildfires swept through three Energy Department test sites, burning through contaminated soils, threatening radioactive waste dumps and heightening public concern about releases of chemicals and radiation.

Wind pushed a large fire up to the boundary of the INEEL's nuclear test reactor area last July, igniting grass inside the fence line. No damages or injuries were caused by the 50,000-acre blaze.

Although critics disputed the findings, state and federal officials concluded elevated levels of radiation following the fires stemmed from natural radioactivity and fallout from historic weapons testing, posing no danger.

Materials, perhaps destined for Iraq, can be made lethal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extract certain ingredients from the antiperspirant under your arm, mix them with an off-the-shelf antibub cleaner and you've got the makings for deadly mustard gas.

The local anesthetic that takes the sting out of minor surgery uses the same chemical agent as a gas that induces agonizing convulsions and death.

The dark side of seemingly benign materials is much in the minds of the major powers these days as they tussle over imports to be allowed into Iraq.

Figuring out whether Iraqi authorities want materials to alleviate suffering or annihilate neighbors could well be impossible, experts in "dual use" ingredients say.

"A border inspector would have to have a degree in physics," said Alistair Millar, who has co-authored a report on smart sanctions for the Fourth Freedom Forum, an anti-war think-tank.

Britain and the United States are leading an effort in the U.N. Security Council to force a new sanctions regime on Iraq — one that would loosen broad controls on civilian goods but tighten restrictions on military equipment.

The U.S. has already placed sanctions on some heavy machinery, including oil-drilling machines and earth-moving equipment.

For now, lists of prohibited materials are being debated among the council's five veto-wielding members.

Diplomats say the plan would deprive Iraq's leaders of their most potent propaganda weapon — the suffering of their own people — and at the same time make

Keeping chemicals out

Many chemicals used commonly in daily use can be converted into deadly weapons of biological and chemical warfare. Currently an effort is being launched to keep many of these "dual-use" goods out of Iraq.

Dual-use Item	Common uses	Potential military uses
Chlorine	Water purifier, cleansers	Sulfocating chemical
Thiodiglycol	Solvent for pen ink, cosmetics and antiperspirants	Combined to create mustard gas
Hydrochloric acid	Rust and iron stain remover
Dimethylamine	Vulcanizing rubber; tanning leather; making detergents and local anesthetics	Used to create a chemical that attacks the central nervous system
Viruses such as foot and mouth	To create antibiotics and vaccinations	Can wipe out enemy livestock
Growth media	To create penicillin	To create anthrax life more difficult for a leadership viewed as criminal by the British and the Americans.

The problem is deciding what goes on the proposed lists. A leaked draft of one list featured audiovisual and supercomputer hardware.

It gets trickier trying to eliminate chemical and biological "precursors" — goods that can become elements in weapons of mass destruction.

"Pesticides, disinfectants, cleaning materials for car engines — the molecular structure of all those things is only minimally different from the structure for chemical weapons," said Richard Butler, former head of the U.N. weapons inspections team in Iraq.

"It's kind of like making moonshine — you don't have to be Johnnie Walker to know how to make whiskey."

Beyond finished goods, the Iraqis have argued they need raw materials to manufacture their own everyday items, to be sold more cheaply than imports.

George Parsfall, a retired DuPont chemist who advises non-proliferation groups, analyzed some of the precursors appearing on lists posted by the Australia Group, an informal alliance of 32 nations set up in 1985 to stop the spread of chemical warfare.

The United States, Britain and France are all members of the Australia Group, and there's likely some overlap between the lists.

Topping the chemical precursor list is thiodiglycol, commonly used as a solvent for ball point pen ink, cosmetics and antiperspirants.

Combined with hydrochloride — known as muriatic acid in hardware stores, where it is sold to remove iron stains from bathtubs — thiodiglycol creates mustard gas.

D-Day Memorial

The Washington Post

BEDFORD, Va. — Off the coast of France, before they boarded the small landing craft that would take them in for the invasion of Normandy, Ray Stevens extended his arm to shake hands with his twin brother, Roy.

Roy declined. The two had grown up together on a farm in the shadow of Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains, joined the National Guard together and been shipped together to England for World War II. They had farmland they'd bought together waiting back home in Bedford. Let's shake hands after we get off the beach safely, Roy told Ray.

Roy would never get the chance. Ray Stevens, 24, died on the beach.

Bedford, a town of 3,400 people, lost 21 men when their company was slaughtered in the first wave at Omaha Beach on D-Day in 1944. It was the highest per-capita loss suffered by any community in the United States.

In many ways, the Stevens brothers represent what the town lost that day. One brother came home. The other did not. The survivor must live with the memories.

It gives you chills thinking about how it happened to this little town," Stevens said. "All of them that got killed were like a family."

Walking through the National D-Day Memorial, to be dedicated here by President Bush today, the 57th anniversary of the Allied invasion of Nazi-held Europe, Roy Stevens was still wondering whether he'd done the right thing by refusing his brother's hand. "Maybe I should have taken it," he said quietly.

Stevens, 81, paused and looked down at a memorial plaza illustrating the invasion. Bronze sculptures showed soldiers struggling through water, trying to reach the beach. Pressure valves sent sprays of water sporadically into the air, representing bullets that rained on the boys, fired by German defenders on the cliffs above. A soldier lay dying in the sand, his blood at his head.

"How come some of us made it here, and not them?" asked Stevens. "I was lucky enough to get home and raise a family. They didn't have that chance. They never had that opportunity."

OPEC agrees to keep oil output stable, meet in July

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC members formally agreed Tuesday to keep pumping oil at their current levels and to meet again in July to assess the impact of Iraq's suspension of its crude exports.

Delegates from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced the decision after a formal session at the cartel's headquarters in Vienna. They said the decision was unanimous.

By meeting again next month, OPEC is taking a highly unusual step that indicates the seriousness with which it views Iraq's action. Ministers said the group will meet July 3 to review market conditions, in the wake of Iraq's halt on Monday of its 2.1 million barrels in daily oil exports.

OPEC has an official output target of 24.2 million barrels a day, and its members pump about two-fifths of the world's crude. Although Iraq belongs to OPEC, it doesn't participate in production agreements with the group's other 10 members.

Palestinian family donates organs to save Israeli lives

JERUSALEM — The family of a Palestinian man shot in the head last week has donated his organs to four Jews and an Arab waiting for lifesaving transplants in Israel, the national organ transplant coordinator said Tuesday.

Tamar Ashkenazi said it was the first organ donation from a Palestinian to Israelis since peace efforts collapsed under fighting that began Sept. 28.

Mazen Julani, a 33-year-old pharmacist from traditionally Arab east Jerusalem, was shot in the head by a man in a passing car as he sat at a cafe last week. Julani's father, Lutfi, said the family believes he was killed by a Jewish settler. Police say the shooting was criminal, not political.

"Islam does not forbid donating organs to save another's life," said Lutfi Julani, 71. "So, I donated organs to save the lives of others, no matter if they were Jews, Christians or Muslims, even though my son was killed by a Jewish settler's bullet."

U.S. serviceman after fleeing rebel fire

MANILA, Philippines — A U.S. serviceman was missing Tuesday

World in brief

after he and four other American military personnel encountered gunfire from suspected communist guerrillas on the slopes of Mount Pinatubo, officials said.

The riders were accompanied by four armed Filipino soldiers and a guide while visiting the popular tourist attraction in the northern Philippines, said Elmer Cato, a spokesman for U.S. Filipino military exercises.

Suspected New People's Army guerrillas opened fire when they saw the group, said Cato, adding that the attackers probably mistook the American servicemen for tourists. They were dressed in street clothes.

No one was injured, but "one of the U.S. personnel made a run for it," Cato told The Associated Press. "He is now the subject of a search."

Rwandan militants kill, eat rare mountain gorillas

VRURUNGU NATIONAL PARK, Rwanda — Rwandan soldiers fanned out across Virungu National Park on Tuesday to protect endangered mountain gorillas after militiamen grilled one male and ate its meat. A second gorilla reportedly met a similar fate.

Only 355 members of the gorilla subspecies live in the wild, researchers believe the two slain gorillas were young silverback males who recently reached maturity and were forced out of family groups.

They were apparently killed for food Friday by Hutu militiamen who became trapped on the park's lush volcanic slopes by a military cordon and were unable to sneak out for food.

"It is a terrible loss," said Liz Williamson, who works at a gorilla research center run by the Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund International. "Because the population of gorillas is so tiny, any single individual is invaluable genetically."

Although the killing and eating of monkeys, chimpanzees and lowland gorillas is common in Congo and other parts of Central Africa, it is rare in Rwanda and Uganda. The mountain gorillas, some of which are playful and will approach humans, are vital to Rwanda's tourism industry.

Taliban militia bans alcohol for foreigners

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan's ruling Taliban militia on Tuesday ordered foreigners to refrain from drinking alcohol, eating pork, listening to loud music and having inappropriate contact with members of the opposite sex.

Foreigners who disobey these rules will be expelled or jailed between three days and one month, depending on the severity of the offense, said a dispatch from the Taliban's Bakhtar news agency, citing a decision by Information Minister Qudrullah Jamal.

"Foreigners should honor the rules of an Islamic society," the decision stated. "We are prohibiting these things because they can destroy our society." Most Muslim countries, including neighboring Pakistan, allow foreigners and non-Muslims to drink alcohol and eat pork. Saudi Arabia, however, does not exempt foreigners from the ban. It imposes strict Islamic law and prescribes the death penalty for murder, rape, drug trafficking, adultery and armed robbery.

The Taliban took power in most of Afghanistan in 1996, promising to install a pure version of Islam.

The report added that the decision has not yet been implemented but "will be started in the near future." It said the ruling was not meant to harass foreigners but rather to ensure compliance with Islamic values.

The decision comes just days after the Taliban ordered female foreign aid workers to refrain from driving, saying it violated Afghan traditions.

Here's a zucchini recipe that was submitted through The Times-News Internet cookbook recipe exchange. (Check the information at the bottom of this column to see how you can sign on.)
Genie Williams of Twin Falls sent in the "appetizer" recipe. The main ingredient comes right out of the garden.
Genie wrote, "This recipe was thrown together out of desperation. We always seem to grow too much zucchini during the summer. With this recipe, now we can't grow enough for our kids."

ZUCCHINI EVEN KIDS WILL EAT

Servings: 2-4
1 medium-size zucchini squash, sliced into 1/4-inch rounds
2 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons garlic salt

Place sliced zucchini on ungreased cookie sheet in single layer. Brush slices with melted butter. Sprinkle on cheese and garlic salt liberally. Broil until lightly browned, and serve immediately.

Variations:
• You can use even a cheddar cheese or cheese of your choice (try Feta cheese).
• If salt is a problem, you can use garlic powder or even fresh minced garlic. A slight pinch of black pepper spices it up just enough, also.
• Also, try a little lemon juice in the butter, or add lemon pepper before broiling!

Here's a quick-fix idea for Father's Day from the Knight Ridder News Service. The spices are a great alternative to a marinade, because you don't have to wait for the meat to absorb the marinade flavors.

GRILLED STEAK AND MUSHROOMS WITH HERBED BAGUETTE

3/4 pound grilling steak skirt, rib eye, strip or flank
1/2 pound whole portobello mushrooms
2 tablespoons ground cumin
2 tablespoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon dark brown sugar
2 teaspoons olive oil
1/2 French baguette
Olive oil spray
1 garlic clove, whole
1 teaspoon oregano
1/4 cup and freshly ground black pepper

Preheat grill or broiler. Remove all fat from steak. Wash mushrooms and pat dry with paper towel. Cut stems off if long. In a small bowl, mix cumin, chili powder, cinnamon and brown sugar together. Sprinkle on steak and press into meat, reserving some for mushrooms. Brush mushroom and stems with oil. Place them in bowl and press rub onto all sides. Cut baguette in half and then cut each piece in half lengthwise. Place on tray crust side down and spray with olive oil spray. Cut garlic in half and rub over bread. Sprinkle with oregano. Put mushrooms in disposable aluminum dish or on heavy-duty foil. Place on grill away from direct heat. Sear steak 1 minute on each side over direct heat; and continue to grill 5 minutes on each side. Place bread on grill for 1 minute to toast. Remove steak and mushrooms to carving board and slice. Serve with bread. Makes 2 servings.

Symphony league president offers well-rehearsed recipes

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Twenty years ago, Doll Smith's cookbook was nothing but blank pages. Today, it is filled to overflowing with handwritten recipes and clippings saved from magazines and newspapers.

There are no duds in Smith's recipe collection. All of the recipes are tried and successful - her favorites.
But the pages are tattered and torn and have food spills on them, so Smith recently took the book to a Xerox machine and made photocopies of all of the pages. She even gave a back-up copy to a niece for safekeeping, just in case.

Smith is a retired music teacher who leads a very busy life. She is the symphony league president, and she teaches music lessons. She even takes an occasional music lesson, when the right teacher comes to town.

She loves the mornings this time of year, when the wind is not blowing and the weather is cool and crisp. It's great walking weather, Smith says. She and her husband, Matt, walk every morning, in fact. Not long ago, they took a walking tour in Italy and hiked all over the province of Tuscany.

Both of them also volunteer in the public schools, helping children in the early grades, and they've lived in Magic Valley for more than 30 years. Sometimes, Smith even finds time to play a game of bridge.
The Smiths have two sons, two grandsons and a 3-year-old great-grandson, who lives in Utah. Smith said she is worn out after one of the child's weekend visits, but claims he is the light of her life.

This one is easy to make because you don't have to get down the mixer.

APPLESAUCE CAKE

2 1/2 cups flour
2 cups sugar
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1-1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1/2 cup oil
1 egg, beaten
1 can (12 ounces) applesauce
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped walnuts
Mix everything in a large bowl. Pour into a well-greased, large loaf pan and bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes until done. Sprinkle powdered sugar over the top for frosting.

CAULIFLOWER BROCCOLI SOUP

6 cups chicken stock (can use hot water and bouillon cubes)
3 stalks celery, chopped
1 small onion, chopped
2 1/2 cups potatoes, diced
3 carrots, chopped

Put into a saucepot and simmer for 20 minutes. Add 1/2 head of cauliflower and 1/2 head of broccoli (break these up into small pieces, adjusting the proportions of cauliflower and broccoli to your personal preference). Simmer for 10 minutes. Add 1 pound Velveeta cheese. Heat till cheese is melted, and serve hot.

Smith once served this dish at a dinner party. A guest finished his serving of it and asked for a second helping. His wife asked what it was. Smith said eggplant. The wife said her husband didn't like eggplant.

BAKED EGGPLANT

1 bell pepper, chopped
1 1/2 cloves garlic, minced
Fry in 1/4 cup of oil for 5 minutes.

Peel and dice one medium-sized eggplant into 1/4-inch cubes. Add to the garlic and pepper mixture and add 1/2 cup water. Cover and steam till the eggplant is clear. Remove from heat and allow to cool while mixing the following:

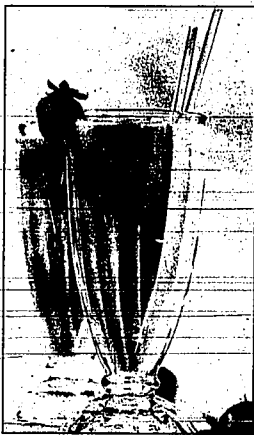

1 beaten egg
1 cup bread crumbs
Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup grated cheese
Hold back 1/2 cup of this crumb mixture and mix the rest into the eggplant mixture. Pour into a casserole dish and sprinkle the reserved 1/2 cup of crumb mixture over the top. Dot with butter and bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes.

NOTE: You can substitute zucchini for the eggplant if you wish.

Attractive solar decks lower energy bills

DEAR JIM: I want to add a unique deck and screened gazebo kit to my house. It gets baked by the afternoon sun in the summer and my electric bills show it. Is there a way to build a deck to help shade the house?

seek and provide more privacy than a standard flat deck with a rail.

Anytime you can spend comfortable time outdoors, either on a deck or in an insect-free gazebo, you can set your air-conditioner thermostat higher and cut those electric bills. The typical family also creates a lot of heat when they are indoors by using TVs, cooking, just moving and breathing.

You can build a single-level solar deck, but a contemporary two-level one is not much more work and it will certainly look better and be more efficient. This is particularly true for an east or west orientation.

The designation of "solar" deck comes from the positioning of top and side trim, which varies depending on the orientation to the sun. The concept is to block the intense summer sun from baking your house walls, yet allow it to shine through in the winter. It also provides a wind-break in the winter.

Building a solar deck on the west side of your house provides the greatest year-round efficiency. The top of the deck should be covered with 1-by-6 louvers that are tilted to block the summer sun that is high in the sky. Tilt them enough so that the lower winter sun will shine through them. Cover the side of either the upper or lower level with tilted louvers, but not both because you may feel closed in. Slant the side louvers outward from top to bottom and space them fairly wide apart to allow cool evening breezes through.

Building a screened gazebo kit is a great idea. I built a modular gazebo kit several years ago and I spend many comfortable evenings in it away from the mosquitoes. It is a cedar model with floor and screen kits. The only tool I used was one screwdriver to attach all of the preassembled panels together.

The range of designs of do-it-yourself gazebo kits is tremendous. Smaller, about 10-foot diameter octagonal models, like mine, are typical. Larger ones, octagonal or oblong, with multiple roof levels, cupolas, ornate copper roofs and glass windows for year-round use are available.

If you plan to use no-maintenance vinyl, or other composites for your deck, consider a vinyl gazebo kit too. These 10-foot octagonal vinyl kits are white, attractive and easy to build. They use no-maintenance aluminum inner supports for strength.

Write for Update Bulletin No. 456 - buyer's guide of 13 gazebo kit-manufacturers-listing sizes, materials (wood or vinyl), features and detailed instructions for building east, west and south-facing solar decks. Please include $3 and a business-size SASE. Write to James Dulley, 6906 Royalgreen Drive, Cincinnati, OH 45244.

Long summer days, short summer meals

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder News Service

Something happens when the weather heats up. I lose all desire to cook. It's not just the heat. Maybe it's the late suppers after my son's baseball games. Maybe it's because on warm evenings, sitting on the screened porch is more appealing than spending time with a hot stove. Or maybe it's just the lazy days of summer.

I find myself looking for ever quicker and easier ways - short of the fast-food drive-through - to get supper on the table. Add a salad and bread to a quick, low-fat quick main dish for a light, satisfying meal.

SHRIMP, CORN AND PEPPER SAUTE

- 4 servings
- 1 tablespoon sesame and olive oil, combined
- 1/2 cup diced green bell pepper
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 (10-ounce) package frozen corn
- 1 pound frozen shrimp, peeled and deveined, thawed
- Mrs. Dash and Creole seasoning, to taste
- 1/2 cup diced red bell pepper
- Salt and pepper, to taste

In a large skillet over medium heat, heat the oil. Add the onion and peppers and saute for 5 minutes. Add the corn and saute 5 minutes more. Add the shrimp and seasonings and saute, until pink. May substitute smoked sausage or chicken tenders for shrimp.

-From "Express Lane Diabetic Cooking"

CHICKEN MEDITERRANEAN

- 4 servings
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/4 pound skinned and boned chicken breast halves, cut into large chunks
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 (14.5 ounce) can diced tomatoes, undrained
- 1/2 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/3 cup crumbled reduced-fat feta cheese
- 1/4 cup kalamata olives, chopped

Cook chicken and garlic in oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat 8 minutes or until chicken is done. Add tomatoes and next 3 ingredients to skillet. Reduce heat, and simmer, stirring often, a few minutes. Sprinkle with feta cheese and olives, and remove from heat. Cover and let stand 5 minutes.

Everheart reflects survey results

Changes in preferences lead to new design

Tastes change year to year. But when it comes to home design preferences, taking the longer view is more informative. Associated Designs keeps abreast of these ever-changing trends through its annual Homes from the Heart Survey. Each year, we use this information to custom design a home based on our readers' most enthusiastic preferences. This year, that's the Everheart.

Freshly tallied results from the 2001 survey reveal major changes, as well as some similarities, since we published our first survey about nine years ago.

Then, country-style homes were the front runners. About 40 percent preferred this style, and 50 percent wanted a wood exterior. This year, country still garnered 28 percent, but contemporary edged past it by a percentage point. Wooden exteriors drew only 20 percent, while brick/stone spiked up to a whopping 70 percent.

Great rooms gained the ground that living rooms lost. Only about 30 percent want a formal living room now, down from 50 percent - a major shift. On the flip side, more than 70 percent now prefer a great room (living/dining room, open to the kitchen), up from 60 percent.

The desire for a home office has also increased by more than 10 percent, reflecting contemporary society's increased computer usage and a related trend of working partially, or entirely, at home.

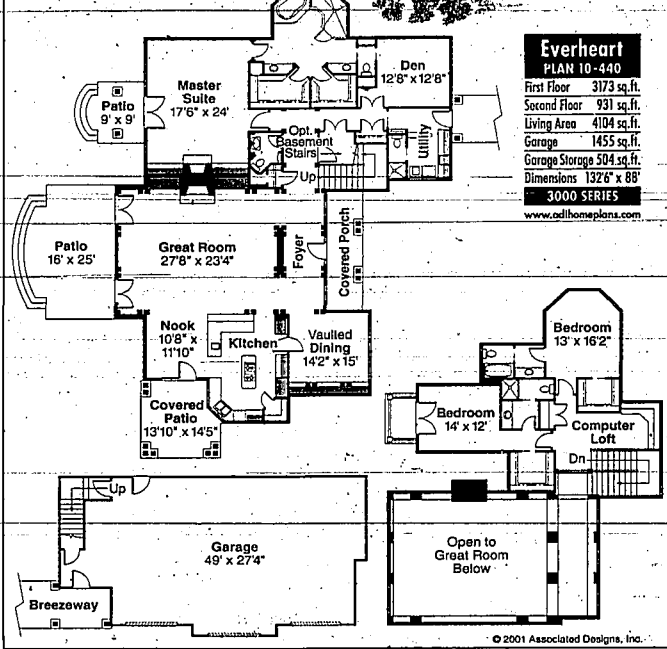

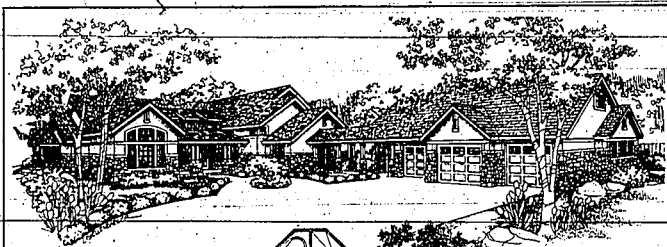

Preferences that stand the test of time include an almost universal desire for a fireplace or woodstove, plus roomy storage spaces, such as pantries and master suite walk-in closets.

The Everheart is handsome, luxuriously large and comfortably relaxed. And despite boasting 4,100 square feet of living space, plus nearly 2,000 square feet of detached garage, the front facade is decidedly unpretentious. Eye-catching features include stone veneer walls, including, multipaned windows and a collection of variously sized gables.

Entering, you step into a wide, lofty foyer, naturally illuminated by windows, sidelights and overhead dormers. Art showcased on the gallery wall separating foyer and great room will need spotlighting only at night.

Multipaned windows fill most of the spacious great room's rear wall, and a 14-foot ceiling adds to the feeling of expansiveness. Many families may prefer to use this space as a family room. It's open to the kitchen, with a raised conversation bar marking the boundary.

Working at the L-shaped counter, or the cook top island, you can easily be a part of goings-on in the larger space. The nook is handy for day-to-day meals, while the vaulted dining room stands ready for festive occasions. A built-in hutch fills most of one wall. When day is done, the owners can retreat to the Everheart's deluxe master suite, and soak away stress in the roomy spa tub. During the day, soft light washes into the bay that houses the spa tub, plus an oversized shower. Other amenities include a den (or home office), two large walk-in closets and a private patio.

Preferences that stand the test of time include an almost universal desire for a fireplace or woodstove, plus roomy storage spaces, such as pantries and master suite walk-in closets.

Two more complete bedroom suites are upstairs, plus a computer loft with a built-in desk. Each of the bedrooms has a roomy walk-in closet plus its own bathroom.

A breezeway links the house to a three-car garage with plenty of extra storage space above it.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Department W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Everheart 10-440 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 350 home plans is available for $15. For more information, call (800) 634-0123.

GREAT GAZEBOS

Garden hideaways remain popular

By Nick Harder
The Orange County Register

In the 19th century, gazebo garden structures became popular. As Victorian-era gardens became more ornate and extensive, it became popular to sit in your garden. Eventually, structures were erected from which to "gaze" at all the wonderful flowers and plants. Near the end of the century, an English architect combined the Latin word, "videbo" (for "I shall see") with gazing, and we got the word "gazebo."

The Victorian influence is felt in the architecture of most gazebos. You're most likely to see lots of "gingerbread" carpentry - little scallops, ornate carvings or cuttings and a wide variety of roof styles. There's no definition that says a gazebo will have eight sides, but most do. Most are open with a railing around most of the structure, but not all. You'll find some gazebos enclosed by screens and some with just columns and no railings.

Though the vast majority of gazebos are built of wood, an increasing number are made of a hard vinyl. Most gazebos are painted white, off-white or are made of white vinyl. But you'll also find gazebos in colors such as gray, several shades of green, beige and even a few in Mediterranean hues.

Some of the roofs imitate that of a home complete with similar roofing materials, such as wood or synthetic shingles. There are also roofs that are porous and made of 2-inch-by-2-inch lumber spaced apart to let sunlight filter in.

These days, gazebos are available everywhere, from the Internet to your local nursery or home and garden center. Before buying one, find out if you need a building permit, or if you live in a homeowners association, do you need permission? Also figure out if your neighbors are likely to object if you gazebo would block their view.

Gazebos come in many sizes, but are usually referred to by their diameter. An average gazebo is probably 8 to 12 feet in diameter, though you can get them as small as 6 feet and as large as 30 feet. A gazebo should be large enough to hold the number of people you think might use it at any one time.

For the most part, the site should be level, though it is possible to build a platform or foundation-for-a-gazebo-on-a-slope. Gazebos can be built or ordered with or without their own floors. A gazebo that comes without its own floor can rest on anything from concrete to a wood deck. The posts for a gazebo will have to be fastened down, though, or anchored in the ground or concrete. Good drainage should be considered no matter what the choice of flooring or foundation.

Do you want to buy a gazebo kit with sections you put together or have it delivered and put together? A kit will most likely save you money. Most kits require average skill to assemble. Some kits come in what seems like a thousand pieces, some in five or six major sections.

Most kits and most gazebos sold through retail centers are of wood, such as redwood or cedar. If your gazebo is painted, sooner or later it's going to need repainting, and repainting little carpentry scallops can be a chore. Spray painting is possible, but prepping takes a lot of work and painting by brush is often more reliable. That's why vinyl gazebos are making headway in the market. There's virtually no maintenance.

In many cases, whether it's a gazebo kit or one you'd buy from a nursery or home and garden center, there's not much choice of roofs. However, if you when you look at a variety of manufacturers that a choice of solid or porous roofing may come in. Part of your choice should be based on how much sun - if any - you want if you want just a little, a porous roof style will suit. No sun? Choose an enclosed style. With a porous roof, you're going to get rain or humidity bringing in much more dirt and grime and letting it "cake" on with the sun. You're also likely to get more fading.

Then you must decide whether to match your home's roofing materials or to make your gazebo roof contrast. What's this all going to cost? For a gazebo with its own flooring or one that will sit on your deck, prices can range from $300 to $3,000.

Desert gardeners should consider water-conserving plants, flowers

Gardening in a desert does not mean growing cactus and prickly pear and rocks. Gardening in a desert means we get to be creative.

Grass, for example, is overrated. It seems to exist because of an old-fashioned idea imported from places where it rains a lot and people had servants to go out and chop down acres of green stuff to provide the barons a bucolic view. Grass is not all that great an idea in the desert. Grass wants to be watered deeply every seven to 10 days. Grass roots need to head down into the soil about six to 12 inches to be healthy. Watering grass deeply and less frequently does save water. But caring for more shallow-rooted plants, or maybe some with deep tap roots that search for their own water, is a better idea.

How about cutting out the grass? Or, instead of going cold turkey, some of it? It's easy to kill grass. You can put a dark tarp on a grassy area, weigh it down with rocks and let the sun bake it for a month. Lift the tarp and you have composted organic matter ready to be filled in. Or you can do like the gardeners at Disney: Mark and spray the area with Round-Up one day, dig it up and plant the next. There are lots of pretty plants that will do well with little water. Here is a partial list of shrubs and perennials to choose from. Take the list to the nursery and see what tickles your fancy. Then take your new garden home and enjoy a more interesting yard and lower water bills.

First, the shrubs: Siberian peashrub; blue mist (caryopteris); western redbud; mountain mahogany (cercocarpus); lavender (though you could put this into the perennial group, too); mahonia; heavenly bamboo (nandina domestica is known to be a pest in wetter regions, but it won't get enough water here to make itself unpopular); pyracantha; rosa rugosa; rosemary; salvia; lavender cotton (santolina chamaecyparissus looks an awful lot like Dusty Miller); and yew. And the flowers: thrift; butterfly weed (asclepias tuberosa); ballota pseudodictamnus; calamint; Jupiter's beard; coreopsis; iris; flax; most daisies; monarda; daffodils; Russian sage; sedums; lamb's ears; Mexican sunflower and verbena.

You probably know of other nice plants that grow and bloom that you can add to this list. I was just hoping to get you started thinking beyond grass.

Try to buy at least three of each plant you choose. You learned in art class that odd numbers are more pleasing to the eye, and the different plants will show up better in small groups. Never mind about lining up the tall ones in the back and the short ones in the front like a class photo. Let the different heights and shapes add interest to your new garden.

Try adding a focal point, such as a birdbath or gazing ball or small tree. Put it off to one side, or at least off-center.

Congratulations! You're a water-wise garden designer.

TIP OF THE WEEK: Remember to water your indoor plants.

Tortilla wraps liven up leftovers

By Kristin Eddy
Chicago Tribune

Wrap up dinner plans with meal of stacked tortillas. Meat-lovers can add any leftover meat such as strips of roast beef or chicken.

Prepare a box of Mexican-seasoned rice to serve alongside, serve with a tossed green salad for crunch and finish with cool scoops of ice cream. The meal can be on the table in less than 40 minutes.

Quesadillas can be assembled on the weekend and frozen for later. Brush with butter or oil and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes to serve.

BLACK BEAN AND CHEESE QUESADILLAS
Yield: 4 servings

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1/2 medium onion, chopped
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 1 can (15 ounces) black beans, rinsed, drained
- Salt; freshly ground pepper
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 8 eight-inch flour tortillas
- 1 large tomato, seeded, diced
- 1/2 cup frozen corn, thawed
- 1 package (8 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese

1 cup prepared salsa
1/2 cup each: sour cream, chopped green onion
Heat olive oil in medium saucepan over medium heat. Add onions and cumin; cook until softened, about 3 minutes. Add chicken broth and hot pepper sauce; heat to boil. Add beans; cook until heated through, about 5 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste; set aside. Heat 1 tablespoon of the vegetable oil in large skillet over medium-high heat. Place 1 tortilla in pan; cook 30 seconds. Remove black beans from saucepan with slotted spoon; place 1/3 cup in middle of tortilla. Top with .25 each of the tomatoes, corn and cheese. Top with another tortilla; cook until cheese melts, about 2 minutes. Turn tortilla over; cook until browned, about 2 minutes. Transfer to cutting board; cover to keep warm. Repeat with remaining tortillas and filling. To serve, cut into quarters. Garnish with salsa, sour cream and green onions.

HOME Lawn & Garden

Q: Why does my faucet squeal when I turn it on?
A: Noisy faucets are usually caused by worn washers. The noise should stop when the washer is replaced.

Q: How deep should I plant my vegetable seeds?
A: As a general rule, vegetable seeds do well when planted at a depth of four times the seed's diameter.

Cooking in hot weather requires strategy

I thought summer was here; then it turned cold again. It's just a matter of time; hot weather is on its way.

This time of year, I like to do most of my cooking early in the morning before the house heats up for the day. Then the family eats salads and whatever is in the refrigerator for the rest of the day. If I do get stuck having to cook later in the day, I either fire up the barbecue grill, use a more creative approach to meals. How about you?

Here are some hot weather dishes for you to try.

FAKE PIZZA
Serves 2 (takes 5 minutes)
2 English muffins, split and toasted
1 can flavored spaghetti sauce
4 slices mozzarella cheese
1/2 teaspoon oregano
Spread the English muffin halves generously with the flavored spaghetti sauce; cover with slices of cheese and sprinkle with oregano. Place under the broiler and cook until the cheese melts.

VALLEY COOKING

Lettuce leaves
2 cups cooked crabmeat
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1/3 cup chili sauce
Dash Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
Shred the lettuce and spoon on the crabmeat. Mix the remaining ingredients and pour over the crabmeat.

CHILILAY (takes 8 minutes)
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon onion
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup canned tomatoes, drained
1/2 pound soft mild cheese, cut into small pieces (cream, mozzarella, Monterey Jack, muenster)
Salt
Cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
4 slices toast
Saute the pepper and onion in butter for 2 minutes. Add the tomatoes and cook 4 minutes longer. Reduce the heat and add the cheese and seasonings. Cook very slowly until the cheese melts. Stir in the milk and egg. When the mixture thickens, spoon over toast and serve.

Umpteen years ago, when hubby and I first married, he was in the Marine Corps stationed at Quantico, Va. The snack bars at the local drive-in movie theater there served Maryland Crab Cakes. They were wonderful. These are as close as I've been able to replicate them. They are served with tartar sauce. Make a bunch up ahead of time, freeze them, then zap them in the microwave oven when you want to eat one.

MARYLAND CRAB CAKES
Serves 2 (takes 16 minutes)
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 pound cooked crabmeat
1 egg beaten
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Dash cayenne
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
Bread crumbs
Cooking oil
Saute the onion in butter for 1 minute. Combine all the ingredients except the bread crumbs and form into 4 cakes. Roll in bread crumbs and place into a heavy frying pan containing 1/8 inch of fat (hot but not smoking) and fry on each side about 5 minutes or until golden.

FRUIT SLAW
Serves 10 (takes 10 minutes preparation time)
3 cups shredded cabbage
1 orange, peeled and sectioned
1 cup seedless red grapes
1/2 cup sliced celery
1 small apple, cored and chopped
1 cup chopped, fresh strawberries or kiwis
1 cup fresh cherries, pitted and chopped
Other fresh fruit as desired.
1/4 cup shelled sunflower seeds or nuts, chopped
1 (8-ounce) container fruit-flavored yogurt
In a large bowl, combine everything except the yogurt and nuts. Toss to mix well. Refrigerate. Just before serving, pour the yogurt over everything and toss to cover the fruit and vegetable mixture. Sprinkle the nuts on top. Serve on cabbage leaves.

Yummy fruit cocktail cake turns into favorite

By Linda Cicero The Miami Herald

Dozens of readers have written declaring fruit cocktail cake one of their favorites. You can make the cake with other canned fruits, such as peaches or pineapple, and many readers said they sprinkled the top with chopped nuts and/or coconut before baking.

FRUIT COCKTAIL CAKE
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 16-ounce can fruit cocktail in syrup, drained (reserve liquid)
1/2 cup margarine
1 cup evaporated milk

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
Stir together the flour, sugar, baking soda and salt. Stir the eggs together with the drained juice from the fruit cocktail and beat into the dry mixture. Fold in the fruit. Pour the batter into a greased and floured 9-by-13-inch pan and bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees, or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. About 10 minutes before the cake is done, combine evaporated milk, sugar and butter in a medium saucepan; mix well.

Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, about 10 minutes, or until mixture is thickened. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla. Prick the cake all over with a fork while it is still warm. Slice into squares. Pour the warm sauce over all and serve warm or cool. Makes 12 servings.

I like to cook the garlic cloves in the same water I'm using to cook the potatoes. That way, the garlic gets soft and infuses its flavor throughout the potatoes.

GARLIC MASHED POTATOES
3 pounds potatoes (about 6 large) peeled and quartered
1 large onion, peeled and chopped coarsely, optional
6 garlic cloves, peeled and minced
1 tablespoon salt, or to taste
1 1/2 teaspoons white pepper
4 tablespoons (half stick) butter or margarine

1/2 cup milk or cream
1 bunch fresh parsley, chopped fine
Place the potatoes, onion and garlic in a large pot and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil over high heat. Add the salt, reduce heat to a rolling simmer and cook until potatoes are tender, about 20 minutes. Drain well. Mash potatoes, garlic and onions. (I still think a hand masher makes the best texture; it's too easy to turn potatoes into glue if you use a food processor or electric mixer.) Add pepper, butter and enough of the milk or cream to reach desired consistency. Stir in the parsley, taste to see if additional salt or pepper is desired, and keep warm until serving time, or reheat in microwave. Makes 6 servings.

Sports collectors may want NFL magazines

By Anita Gold Knight Ridder News Service

QUESTION: I have three sets including Vol. 1, Vol. 2, and Vol. 3 of the History of the Super Bowl magazines copyrighted in 1977 by the National Football League Properties, Inc. that were given out free at McDonald's restaurants, plus Super Bowl records.

marked compliments of McDonald's and Coca-Cola. I went to several sports card and antique shops and tried the Internet, but couldn't find out anything about them. Can you help me? CHESTER KEITH GLOUSTER, OHIO

ANSWER: Each set consisting of three magazines per volume is worth from $10 to $15 in near mint condition, adding up to be worth between $30 and $45 for your three volumes. The Super Bowl record book is worth about $5. However, I'm told that sports collectors will pay more for such items than McDonald's collectors.

Is your banker really the decision-maker? Or is a higher power pulling the strings?

When you do business with the big banks, you're never really sure you're talking to the real decision-maker. That can be pretty frustrating when you need a quick answer on a loan. Or if you need to know by how much your checking account was overdrawn. Or why your mortgage loan hasn't been approved. The problem is that most of the big banks are pulling all the strings from some distant location. So, they don't always understand your situation. Sometimes they don't even care. All of which makes our bank a good place to take your business. We live, work, and play right here in the community. We probably know you and your family. We care about your business and are eager to serve you. And if anybody is going to be pulling any strings around here, it's going to be you. Financial Power Right Here At Home.

Thai food meets U.S. taste buds

By Jane Snow
Akron Beacon Journal

On busy days when the dishwasher breaks and the dining room is jammed, Sunanta Fogle dreams of returning to Thailand. "I'm getting old," she says wearily, pushing a strand of shiny-black hair behind a delicate ear. When she began cooking her favorite Thai curries and stir-fries in a leased kitchen in a tavern on West Market Street, Fogle was 41 years old. Now, three moves and a truckload of awards later, she is 57.

Fogle cooks these days in a pretty restaurant on Tallmadge Avenue near Chapel Hill in Akron, Ohio. Like Fogle herself, the food has worn extremely well. Bangkok Gourmet has four times been named the best Thai restaurant in Ohio by Zagat restaurant guides.

The key to Fogle's success has been in adapting the flavors of her native Thailand to American tastes. The dishes are authentically Thai, but the fire has been toned down and often the flavors are given an elegant twist.

Nowhere is this more apparent than in her most popular appetizer, chicken saté. Flavor permeates the charcoal-singed skewers of chicken. They would taste good even without the luxurious, coconut-based sauce.

CHICKEN SATÉ

- 2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breast
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon ground turmeric
- Pinch salt to taste
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 cup coconut milk
- Peanut sauce

Cut the chicken breast across the grain into 1-inch cubes. In a bowl, combine the spices and sugar over the chicken and mix well. Add coconut milk and mix well, massaging ingredients into chicken for 2 to 3 minutes. Cover and refrigerate for 1 or 2 hours. Meanwhile, soak 16 bamboo skewers in cold water. Thread chicken chunks on bamboo skewers, overlapping pieces of meat. Grill over medium heat for about 5 minutes, turning and brushing with marinade mixture, until chicken is cooked through. Place 4 skewers on each of 4 plates. Spoon sauce over meat. Serves 4.

- Peanut Sauce:
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 2 tablespoons-massaman curry paste

- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 1 can (6 ounces) coconut milk
- 2 teaspoons ground roast peanuts
- 1 tablespoon peanut butter
- 1/2 teaspoon tamarind or lime juice
- Sugar to taste
- Salt

Heat the oil in a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat. Add the massaman curry paste and curry powder. Stir for about two minutes over medium-high heat, until fragrant. Add half of the coconut milk, a spoonful at a time. Cook for about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add ground peanuts, peanut butter, tamarind juice and 1 teaspoon sugar. Add remaining coconut milk a spoonful at a time, stirring constantly. Cook, stirring occasionally, for 3 to 4 minutes longer. Add salt and more sugar if necessary.

The following is a fast-fix, but delicious recipe:

- SESAME SALMON WITH BERRY SAUCE

- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon spice rub for seafood (see note)
- 1/4 cup berry jam

- 1 tablespoon rice vinegar
- 1 tablespoon dark balsamic vinegar

Salmon:

- Nonstick cooking spray
  - 1 pound salmon fillet
  - 1 teaspoon sesame oil
  - 1 teaspoon sesame seeds
- To prepare the sauce: In a small saucepan, heat the olive oil over medium heat. Add the onion and sauté 5 minutes. Add the spice mixture and stir 30 seconds. Then add jam and water, stirring to melt. Stir in the vinegars and boil until slightly thickened. Keep warm.
- To prepare the salmon: Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Spray the top of a broiler pan with cooking spray. Place the salmon on the pan and rub the top with sesame oil. Sprinkle with sesame seeds. Bake 12 minutes per inch of thickness, or until the fish tests done.

Cake-like sugar cookies recall earlier times

By Ellen Hawks
The Baltimore Sun

Jeanette Shoemaker of Frederick, Md., wrote: "I would very much like to have an old-time recipe for sugar cookies, the kind that mound up when baked and are cakelike in texture. They were a favorite of an aunt of mine who is now deceased." John W. Billett of Baltimore sent this. If you like them crisp, bake until the edges are just beginning to brown. For a cakier cookie, remove just before any browning occurs. They will be very soft when they are removed from the oven, so give them a minute to firm up on the cookie sheet.

MAM MAM'S SUGAR COOKIES

- 3 1/2 cups sugar
  - 2 cups solid shortening
  - 2 cups sour milk (see note) or buttermilk
  - 5 eggs
  - 2 teaspoons baking soda
  - 2 teaspoons cream of tartar
  - 8 cups all-purpose flour
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract, Sprinkles or raisins (optional)
- Preheat the oven to 375 degrees.

Cream together the sugar and solid shortening in a large mixing bowl. Gradually add the sour milk (or buttermilk) and eggs and mix thoroughly. Stir in the baking soda and cream of tartar. Mix in the flour, 1 cup at a time. Add the vanilla. Drop the batter by mounded tablespoons on lightly greased baking sheets. Decorate, if you wish, with sprinkles or raisins. Bake for 12 minutes, cool for 1 minute on baking sheet and then remove to wire racks to cool completely. Store in airtight container. Makes about 8 dozen cookies.

NOTE: To "sour" milk, add 1 tablespoon of white vinegar or lemon juice for each cup of milk and let stand at room temperature for 10 to 15 minutes.

Devils look to close out with style

Avs must find momentum killer

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The New Jersey Devils returned home from Colorado Tuesday one win away from being remembered as one of hockey's dynasties. They held all the momentum in a Stanley Cup Finals series in which they lead, 3-2. They have a chance to clinch their second straight Cup

Game 6, Thursday, 8 p.m. (ABC)

Thursday night at home. And they hope when the Finals are over this series is remembered for what they accomplished. The Devils would prefer it's not remembered for a blunder by Patrick Roy. But like the ground ball through Bill Buckner's legs in the 1986 World Series or Scott Norwood's wide right in Super Bowl XXV, the signature play of this series has undoubtedly been Roy's faux pas behind his own net in Game 4 Saturday night. His misplay led to Scott Gomez's game-tying empty-netter, which led to a 3-2 Devils win.

When this is all over, it might have led directly to a Devils championship, too. "I'd like to think that with hard work, good things go your way," Ken Daneyko said. "We Please see NHL Page D2

READY TO RUMBLE

Champs brim with confidence; Sixers undaunted

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Kobe Bryant went to a movie the other day, opting to see "Pearl Harbor" rather than watch Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals.

Shaquille O'Neal, who promised to have his game face on by early in the week, pitched his best-selling book at a news conference Tuesday, and responded to a reporter's ringing cell phone by saying, "Tell them to call back later," drawing laughter from the assembled media.

A few of the Los Angeles Lakers have talked openly about securing a spot in the record books by winning four straight over the Philadelphia 76ers to complete an unprecedented sweep of the playoffs.

"We've talked about it, our guys recognize the significance," Lakers forward Rick Fox said after his team's final practice before the NBA Finals begin Wednesday night at Staples Center. "We'd be up there with all the other greats."

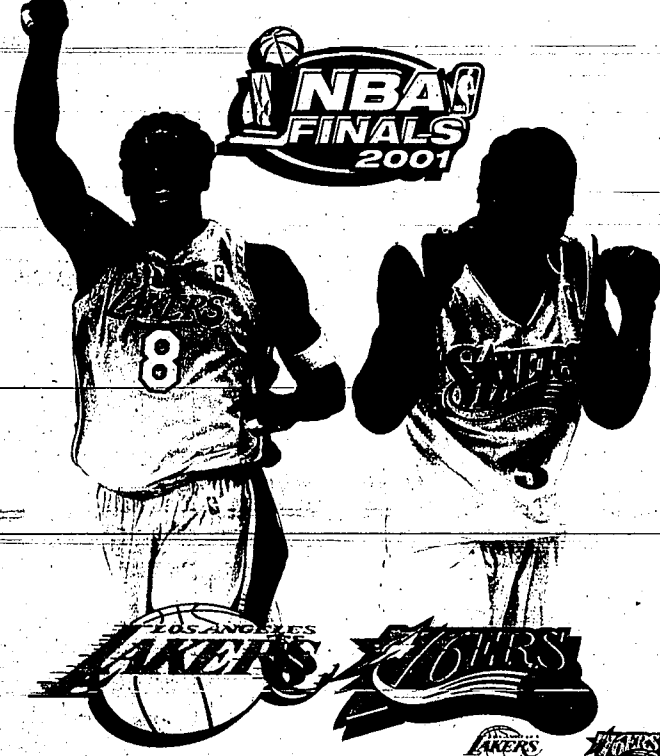

Are these guys confident, or what? More importantly, are they focused after having last played on May 27?

The answers appear to be yes, and yes. "We're confident, but we know what kind of a team Philly is, with an intense defense and a high scorer," Lakers forward Horace Grant said.

"They are very much prepared," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said of his players. "Being here is not a surprise, but how we have done it is a surprise. Their attitude, attitude and appetite for this series and for playoff basketball is quite apparent."

After an up-and-down season lightened by the simmering feud of O'Neal and Bryant going public in January and injuries to both center chat, the Lakers are healthy and on an incredible roll.

First came eight straight wins to finish the season, and now 11 to begin the playoffs - an accomplishment matched only by the 1989 Lakers, who were swept by Detroit in the third round of NBA Finals after starters Byron Scott and Magic Johnson sustained hamstring injuries.

"Sometimes you have to have your trials and tribulations before you see the light at the end of the tunnel," Lakers reserve Robert Horry said. "We're at the end of the tunnel."

"For the most part, we're just taking it one game at a time." That's been the Lakers' mantra for weeks, and it's worked to the point where the odds on the finals are unreal.

The Lakers are listed as 11.5-point favorites in Game 1, and with one oddsmaker, a better picking them has to lay $2,400 to win $100 while a 76ers supporter wins $1,800 by laying $100.

These are rather remarkable numbers considering the participants finished the season with identical 56-26 records and split their two games.

But while the Lakers have breezed to 11 wins in the playoffs by an average of 15.4 points, the 76ers have gone 11-7, and reached the finals for the first time since 1983 by winning their last two series in seven games.

Tyrone Hill said the 76ers didn't Please see NBA, Page D2

Twins select Mauer

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Joe Mauer, a slugging high school catcher with a strong arm, was taken by the Minnesota Twins with the No. 1 pick in Tuesday's baseball draft.

Baseball Amateur Draft

Mauer, a three-spot star from Cretin-Derham Hall in St. Paul, Minn., is the first catcher drafted with the top pick since Milwaukee took B.J. Surhoff in 1995.

The 6-foot-4, 205-pound Mauer was a standout in baseball, basketball and football, and intends to concentrate on playing baseball despite a scholarship to play quarterback at Florida State.

Mauer joined Danny Goodwin (Chicago White Sox, 1971) and David Clyde (Texas, 1973) as the only players to be chosen by their home state with the No. 1 pick.

The Chicago Cubs selected Mark Prior, the Southern California right-hander considered by some to be the best college pitcher ever, with the second pick. Prior, 14-1 with a 1.50 ERA, had a school and Pac-10 conference-record 189 strikeouts and just 17 walks in 131 2-3 innings for the College World Series-bound Trojans.

The 6-foot-5, 220-pound Prior has a blazing fastball that reaches the mid-to-high-90s, an excellent breaking ball and a solid curve. He was drafted by the New York Yankees with the 43rd pick in 1998, but opted to go to Vanderbilt. He transferred to USC after his freshman year and quickly established himself as one college baseball's most dominant pitchers.

Dewon Brazelton, a hard-throwing right-hander from Middle Tennessee State, was taken by Tampa Bay with the third pick.

Philadelphia chose right-hander Gavin Florig with the fourth pick.

Mark Greenlee, the sweet-swinging Georgia Tech third baseman considered to be one of college baseball's greatest switch-hitters, was taken by Texas with the fifth pick.

Capriati keeps cool on clay

The Associated Press

PARIS - Serving one point from an elusive victory, Jennifer Capriati stared at the clay, trying to calm her nerves in the tense silence. She bounced the ball five times, then managed to put it in play.

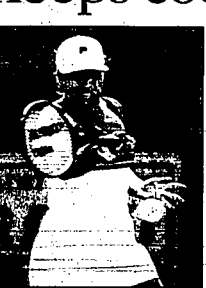

So much for the hard part. The rally ended with an errant backhand by Serena Williams, giving Capriati a shaky but sweet 6-2, 5-7, 6-2 victory in the French Open quarterfinals Tuesday.

Serving was the biggest hurdle for Capriati, who survived 10 double-faults, and a bout of butterflies that cost her the second set.

"It was starting to become a nightmare a little bit," she said with a sheepish smile.

The fourth-seeded Capriati earned her first semifinal berth at Roland Garros since 1990, when she made her Grand Slam debut as a career 14-year-old.

The squandered opportunity was especially galling because two months ago, Capriati failed to convert eight match points and lost to Williams' sister, Venus, in the Ericsson Open final. Of those eight points, seven ended with a Capriati error, including one double fault.

That's what happened. The sixth-seeded Williams was playing her first tournament after a two-month layoff because of knee tendinitis, and her own serve and backhand looked rusty. Burley Dealership Disposing of 251 Bank Repos and Other Used Vehicles for Only $59 Then Start Making Payments*

BURLEY, ID - Bank Repossessed cars and trucks are among the most hunted-for bargains in the automotive industry. Unfortunately for John Q. Public, they're also the hardest to come by.

"This is the opportunity Idaho bargain hunters have been waiting for! Customers won't see savings like this again all year."

"It's that simple," said Mr. Williams. "To make these bargains even easier, we'll mark the 'payers' right on the windshield. 'Just pick your vehicle and plunk your payment. You won't find a faster, easier way to get a great deal on a pre-owned vehicle.'"

"These vehicles have been acquired at incredible savings from banks (repos), auctions, and other sources," Garth Williams of Goode Motors said. "We have been asked to eliminate this inventory immediately - regardless of loss of profit - and if that means selling these 'LIMIT 1 VEHICLES PER HOUSEHOLD'...

Rice a Raider - San Francisco treat no more

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) - Jerry Rice put on the silver and black for the first time and couldn't help but admire himself.

"I look good in it, man," said Rice's most prolific receiver since he donned a new uniform for the first time in 16 seasons.

After a record-breaking career across San Francisco Bay with the 49ers, Rice ended months of speculation about his future Tuesday by joining the Oakland Raiders.

"This is a beginning for me, and I hope this is going to jumpstart my career all over again," he said.

Rice, a 12-time Pro Bowl selection, will wear three Super Bowls in San Francisco, and will wear the 49ers Monday because of salary cap problems.

On Tuesday morning, he caught a few passes from Pro Bowl quarterback Rich Gannon during an informal workout and took a moment to boast about his new uniform.

"His contract with the Raiders was not disclosed, but it was believed to be up to a four-year deal that keeps Rice near his family in a new $5,000,000-square-foot mansion in Atherton.

It also keeps Rice close to his fans, who might not like the idea of their hero-leaving the 49ers' family for the rough-and-tumble Raiders across the bay.

Noticeably missing from Tuesday's workout was veteran Tim Brown, the Raiders' margin receiver for more than a decade. The session was voluntary, and Rice did not take offense at his new teammate's absence.

NFL and players extend agreement through 2007

NEW YORK — The NFL will have labor peace through 2007, the league and the players ratified Tuesday's agreement to extend the collective bargaining agreement for three years.

The NFL Management Council and players association agreed to extend the salary cap through 2006, with the final year of the extension an uncapped season. The players and league owners must vote on the agreement, but that is considered a formality, particularly for the players, who could receive an increase in salary to as high as 65.5 percent of designated gross revenues in 2005. Veteran players also will have a portion of their salaries paid out of a league-wide fund instead of counting against the salary cap.

"The subsidy for older veterans was one of the keys to the deal," said NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw. "Under the agreement, all players with more than four years in the league will cost the clubs the same in both cap room and dollars, even though the older players will be making more."

WR Herman stays with Lions for $1.5 million

PONTIAC, Mich. — Less than a week ago, Herman Moore was thinking about selling his home in suburban Detroit.

The landscaping and home repairs can now be put on hold. The Detroit Lions and Moore agreed Tuesday to a new contract that will pay the team's career leading receiver $1.5 million this season.

Moore agreed to a seven-year contract in 1999 and was scheduled to make nearly $3.3 million this year. After two last-year seasons, Detroit asked the 10-year veteran to reduce his salary to $1 million for 2001.

For weeks, team president Matt Millen said the team would not increase its offer.

However, after it became clear that Jerry Rice was headed to Oakland, Moore and Millen talked for about 30 minutes on a practice field Monday. A resolution came quickly.

Bills linebacker Moore has surgery to remove bullet

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Buffalo Bills linebacker Corey Moore had a bullet surgically removed from his left leg and will miss at least part of the team's minicamp.

Moore, shot early Friday in his hometown of Brownsville, Tenn., has been cleared to travel, but the Bills don't know how soon he will be able to practice. Moore had the surgery Monday in Tennessee. Bills spokesman Scott Berchold.

Moore, preparing for his second season with the Bills, was shot in his car after he stopped at an intersection. He reportedly told police that an unknown person walked up from behind, stuck a gun in the open driver's side window and pulled the trigger.

Moore was able to drive himself to the hospital.

This is Moore's second run-in with trouble in the past month. On May 15 in Haywood County, Tenn., he was charged with aggravated assault after a man was hit with a beer bottle. Moore later was released on bond.

Hearst, who rushed for 4,509 yards with three teams from 1995-98, hasn't played in the NFL since a January 1999 playoff game in Atlanta in which he broke his left leg near the ankle.

He has since undergone several surgeries on his leg and ankle, but has never wavered in his desire to return to football.

After being cleared for practice in a Monday physical, he wore only a minor brace on his ankle.

Patriots sign free agent defensive tackle Parker

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots signed free agent defensive tackle Riddick Parker on Tuesday.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed. The 28-year-old started all 16 games for the Seattle Seahawks last season, finishing with a career-high 48 tackles. He had a career-high nine sacks as a member of the team's practice squad.

Parker signed with the San Diego Chargers as a non-drafted rookie free agent in 1995. He played with the Seahawks in 1996 and spent the season as a member of the team's practice squad.

Home Depot to begin using roving cashiers

ATLANTA - Home Depot is revving up its checkout lines with new technology and roving cashiers to get shoppers out the door faster.

Taking a lead from car-rental companies and other retailers, Home Depot is testing wireless scanners on mobile carts that employees will use to scan purchases while consumers wait in line.

Once shoppers make it to the checkout counter, their purchase tickets should be ready and waiting, said spokesman Don Harrison. "Everything is already scanned, so all they have to do is pay and head out the door," Harrison said. "It should make the lines much shorter."

Home Depot is testing the mobile scanners in about 700 stores, including most of metro Atlanta's 40 locations.

Atlanta-based Home Depot worked with 360Commerce of Austin, Texas, to develop the technology.

Home Depot plans to roll out the scanners to the rest of its 1,300-plus stores - including one in Twin Falls - by the end of the year, Harrison said.

Qwest gets contract
extension with NASA

DENVER - Qwest Communications International Inc. has won a $25 million, five-year contract extension for providing high-speed Internet access to NASA's research and education network.

Qwest will connect eight NASA sites in the country with the Internet service under the contract. They include NASA headquarters in Washington, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the Goddard Space Flight Center and the Langley Research Center.

Qwest announced the deal Monday.

The NASA Research and Education Network, or NREN, works with other agencies and academics to demonstrate the latest networking applications.

Projects include a virtual simulation laboratory for aeronautical research and development, and remote-controlled demonstrations of robotic technologies.

"It's an honor to again be selected to partner with the federal government on a research and education network," said James Payne, Qwest president of Qwest Government Systems Division.

"The Qwest network will nearly quadruple connection speeds for the network."

MILWAUKEE - Washington Mutual Inc. has closed on its acquisition of FleetBoston Financial Corp.'s mortgage unit, adding Fleet's 500-employee Milwaukee operation to a mortgage services banking firm said Monday.

Seattle-based Washington Mutual, which is the largest U.S. savings and loan and seventh-biggest banking company, with $220 billion in assets, closed on its $660 million purchase of the FleetBoston mortgage unit Friday, Washington Mutual does banking business in the Magic Valley.

"Washington Mutual provides services for about $455 billion in loans nationwide," said Craig Davis, president of the Washington Mutual Home Loans and Insurance Services Group.

Davis said the company plans to increase its mortgage-servicing business internally and through acquisitions, and that the processing centers will expand to accommodate the growth.

The former FleetBoston units have been renamed Washington Mutual Home Loans Inc.

Idaho Power cuts services at Twin Falls office

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Don't bring your power payment downtown anymore. The Idaho Power Co. office at 133 Third St. N. in Twin Falls will become an "operations center" Monday, handling construction work and emergency response, but no longer processing electricity-bill payments.

Customers who normally conduct Idaho Power business through the mail or telephone won't be affected. Those who pay the bill in person or in cash will have to choose among pay stations at other businesses in the area.

Logan's Market in Filer, Person's Foodliner in Kimberly and Twin Stop Convenience and Lynwood IGA in Twin Falls are able to process Idaho Power payments. For information, customers can call 1-800-488-6161.

Idaho Power said it will change more of its business and field operations this summer "as part of its ongoing efforts to provide quality customer service and maintain its high efficiency rating for customers."

Senior Vice President of Delivery Jim Miller said field offices would focus on providing operations centers, providing energy delivery system construction, maintenance, meter reading and 24-hour emergency response.

Billing and customer transactions, however, will move to the central customer-service center in Boise.

"We found through research that less than 10 percent of our customers use our field offices for customer transactions. The other 90 percent of our customers already satisfy their transaction needs through the phone, Internet or the mail," Miller said.

Most operations centers will remain in their existing communities. A similar switch will happen in Hailey Nov. 1.

After the switch, billing, payment collection and other customer transactions will all take place in the Boise customer-service center.

Albertson's posts profit increase

The Associated Press

BOISE - The nation's second-largest food and drug retailer announced a 4 percent increase in first-quarter profits Monday, meeting Wall Street expectations.

Albertson's Inc. - which has several Magic Valley grocery stores - said net income totaled $186 million on $9.3 billion in sales for the 13 weeks through May 3. That compared with $179 million in profit on $9 billion in earnings for the same three-months a year ago.

The per-share earnings of 46 cents was up four cents from 2000 and a high for the year, expected by Wall Street analysts, most recently polled by Thomson/First Call. A month ago, financial analysts were predicting 46 cents a share.

Chairman Larry Johnston, the former General Electric Co. chief executive who has a reputation for ironing out acquisition problems and consolidating businesses, commended Albertson's to at least 43 cents in second-quarter per share earnings - without costs related to the $12 billion acquisition of American Stores in 1999.

"Our strategic direction is taking shape, and I am becoming more confident each day that we know where we need to focus our energies," Johnston said in a statement. He is the first Albertson's chief executive who had not worked his way up through the ranks of the chain.

The acquisition, which more than doubled the company's outlets to over 2,500 in 26 states, had only a fractional effect on the balance sheet during the first quarter. About $13 million in expenses was offset by $14.2 million in credits.

The major roadblocks in the 1999 American Stores Company merger are behind us, and a new culture is evolving that will be based on learning from both of the previous entities for the common good of the new enterprise," Johnston said.

The acquisition cost the company veteran Chief Operating Officer Richard King, who resigned the day the deal was approved. He was replaced by American Stores executive Peter Lynch.

And two weeks ago, Chief Financial Officer A. Craig Olson resigned.

The company reported a 1 percent increase over the past year in identical store sales and a 1.4 percent increase in comparable store sales, which include replacement stores.

Johnston said that the use of technology will be accelerated companywide to enhance Albertson's competitive advantages.

"We will commit a greater share of our capital expenditures to information and process technology over the next three to five years, with the goal of becoming the industry leader," he said.

The company also aims to improve employee recruiting and retention by eliminating bureaucracy, having fewer layers of management, strengthening communication, launching better training programs and introducing exciting new reward systems.

Forging import barriers

Bush appeals for trade help for steel industry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Bush, pledging to help beleaguered American steelmakers, asked for a trade investigation Tuesday that could lead to stiff import barriers on foreign steel.

White steel users complained that the action would drive up prices on everything from automobiles to refrigerators, U.S. steelmakers and lawmakers from steel-producing states hailed Bush's decision, saying government help was urgently needed.

Since a surge of foreign imports began in 1998 as a result of the Asian currency crisis, 18 U.S. steel companies have filed for bankruptcy protection and 20,000 jobs have been cut, according to industry figures.

In making his announcement, Bush said at the White House, "It's in our nation's interest to make sure that if there are unfair trade practices in the steel industry, we address them in a very aggressive way."

The administration asked the U.S. International Trade Commission, an independent government agency, to begin a four-month investigation to determine if domestic producers are being seriously harmed, using a provision of U.S. trade law known as Section 201, which allows for protection against import surges.

If the ITC finds serious injury, it will make recommendations to Bush on what types of punitive tariffs or quotas should be imposed to restrict imports.

The administration would have the freedom to accept the recommendations or come up with its own set of trade barriers, which it could put into place for three years.

During that time, the U.S. industry would be required to come up with plans to become more competitive.

In addition to possible trade barriers, Bush said he was directing Commerce Secretary Donald Evans and Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill to begin negotiations with U.S. trading partners to find ways to eliminate global overproduction in the steel industry and to develop new trade rules to make sure the current glut of steel does not occur again.

Administration officials rejected suggestions that Bush, who championed free trade during the campaign, was seeking to establish some type of global steel cartel, rivaling OPEC's oil pricing power.

Overcapacity problems have existed for a half century, and the administration wants to keep those problems from recurring, one official said.

Republicans and Democrats in Congress from steel states said the administration had taken a good first step, but cautioned that the real test would be in making sure the final trade protections covered the full range of steel products.

Sen. George Voinovich, R-Ohio, said, "Steel is in the worst shape that I have seen in my memory."

He said the crisis was more severe than during the 1980s, when the Reagan administration negotiated "voluntary restraint agreements" with foreign producers to give the U.S. industry time to go through a painful restructuring.

While the administration said it had no estimate of what the impact on steel prices would be from higher-import barriers, Gary Hufbauer, a trade expert at the Institute for International Economics, said restrictive tariffs could add $100 to the price of a new car, about half the impact of the Reagan steel protection efforts had in the 1980s.

Duane R. Dunham, president of Bethlehem Steel Corp., said that Bush's decision "is welcome news to an industry beleaguered by the unfair and illegal flood of steel imports over the last several years."

Shares of U.S. steel companies surged on the news. USX Corp.'s U.S. Steel Group, the nation's largest steelmaker, was up $1.70, or 8.3 percent, to $21.74. Bethlehem Steel Corp. rose $1.16, or 39 percent, to $4.15, and Nucor Corp. rose $4.16, or 8 percent, to $56.

The administration decision is certain to worsen trade tensions with Europe, where the president will travel next week for his first big meeting with leaders of the 15-nation European Union.

"This is bad news," said Pascal Lamy, the EU's top trade negotiator, of the Bush announcement. "The 201 route is not the way to go. The cost of restructuring in the U.S. steel sector should not be shifted onto the rest of the world."

The Clinton administration had refused the steel industry's request to launch a 201 case, fearing it could trigger retaliation from trading partners and could be challenged before the World Trade Organization.

More bankers, entrepreneurs turn to Small Business Administration

Knight Ridder News Service

After a decade of pumping gas and fixing cars, Alan Popick, 54, was on the brink of losing his business last fall.

Chevron, which leased Popick a garage, told him that it would cancel their franchise agreement because the company wanted to switch the Chevron service station to another location - and then gave Popick a month to dig up about $1 million he needed to buy the business.

"They would have sold it to someone else, and I would have been out of business," Popick said.

Desperate, he turned to his banker, who steered him toward the Small Business Administration. The SBA quickly guaranteed a $700,000 loan through the Bank of America that allowed Popick to buy the garage, change the name to Southgate Citgo and stay in business.

SBA loan types - D5

Entrepreneurs are more bankers and more turning to the SBA, a federal agency created almost 50 years ago to foster small-business growth.

In fact, SBA lending is getting so popular that a proposal by the Bush administration to raise fees on these loans has sparked a small storm of protest.

Several factors contribute to the increased interest. Businesses realize the SBA can offer financing on more favorable terms. And bankers, who ultimately lend the money the SBA guarantees, say the SBA helps them issue loans at a time when the home office is trying to keep wraps on potential problem loans by being more cautious about lending.

The SBA, for example, will take a chance at businesses with short track records - less than three years - and will take a legal guarantee to pay back the loan in lieu of collateral. This makes the SBA accessible to lots of younger and start-up businesses that otherwise might not get financing.

On top of that, the new chief of the SBA's South Florida district office, Francisco Marrero, says he plans to make the agency much more visible.

"The market is here and one of the beauties of this market is the diversity, the potential it has," said Marrero, who took over the South Florida SBA office in February. "What we need to do is to get out of the office and get together with grass roots groups. We need to tell them that this is not the SBA of 10, 15 or 20 years ago."

Today, Marrero said, the SBA recognizes that it needs to reach out to a broad array of businesses, including those owned by women, African-Americans and

Wal-Mart rollbacks add to profit-margin pressure

 By Catherine Maltzows
BridgeNews

Commentary

CHICAGO - Wal-Mart Stores Inc. plans to keep beating the prices of its rivals, company executives told those gathered at its recent annual meeting. Most likely that also means investors can expect further profit-margin pressure at the world's largest retailer.

Known for "everyday low prices," Wal-Mart has engaged in aggressive pricing discounts to lure shoppers in stores amid a pullback in consumer spending. These so-called rollbacks will cost the Bentonville, Ark.-based retailer - which has a couple of Magic Valley stores - over $11 billion in the current fiscal year.

To stay in the game, Kmart Corp. - which also has stores in the valley - has launched its own strategy of low prices that are in line with Wal-Mart. The nation's No. 2 discounter slashed prices on about 4,000 products a few months ago and then again on additional items around the Memorial Day weekend.

On May 4, the Troy, Mich.-based retailer launched what it calls its "Blue Light Always" advertising campaign, which promises to keep prices on home staples, such as laundry detergent, within 1 percent to 2 percent of the lowest price available.

Wal-Mart executives plan to do better than that though. They pledged repeatedly during the Friday meeting to keep their pricing competitive across the board.

"If they want to play the game, we're going to make them play across all categories," said Chief Financial Officer Tom Schoewe at the meeting.

Minneapolis-based Target Corp., which has a Twin Falls store, is also competing for market share. See WALMART, Page D5

Different flavors of SBA loans SBA

Knights Rider News Service
The SBA offers three major types of loans.

The 7(a) Loan Guaranty Program

One of the SBA's primary programs, it provides SBA-guaranteed loans to small businesses. The loans are capped at $2 million, of which the SBA guarantees no more than $1 million.

Generally, the SBA guarantees 75 percent of a loan under $50,000 and 75 percent of a loan greater than $50,000.

The SBA seeks businesses that can repay the loan from their cash flow. Good character, management capability, collateral and other investment are also important considerations.

Most businesses meet SBA criteria. There are restrictions on some businesses, such as franchises, recreational clubs, farms, fishing operations and medical facilities.

The proceeds of SBA loans can be used for most business purposes, such as buying real estate, equipment, inventory and machinery.

Interest rates may be fixed or variable. The interest rate runs between prime rate plus 2.25 and prime rate plus 4.75 percent, depending on the loan's terms.

The SBA charges a servicing fee for each loan approved. The fees range from 2 percent to 3.5 percent of the SBA-backed portion.

All loans are subject to a 0.5 percent annual servicing fee applied to the outstanding balance of SBA's guaranteed part of the loan.

But SBA loans don't carry other fees that banks customarily charge, such as processing fees, origination fees, application fees, points, brokerage fees and bonus points.

Certified Development Company (504) Loan Program

This program provides growing businesses with long-term, fixed-rate financing for major fixed assets, such as land and buildings.

To qualify, a business must not have a net worth in excess of $5 million or more than $2 million in net income over the previous two years. Loans cannot be made to businesses that engage in speculation or invest in rental real estate.

Typically, a 504 program includes a loan secured by a bank that covers up to half of the project cost, plus another loan from the CDC that covers 40 percent of the project cost. The SBA guarantees the CDC loan, paying outright 30 percent of the project cost outright.

Generally, the business applying for the money must create or keep one job for every $35,000 provided by the SBA.

Interest rates on 504 loans are pegged an increment above the current market rate for five-year and 10-year U.S. Treasury issues.

The 504 program cannot be used for working capital or inventory, consolidating or repaying debt, or refinancing.

The project assets being financed are used as collateral. Personal guarantees of the principal owners are also required.

Microloan Program

This program provides very small loans to start-up, newly established, or growing small businesses. Under this program, SBA makes funds available to nonprofit community-based lenders, called intermediaries.

These intermediaries then make the loans to eligible borrowers in amounts up to a maximum of $35,000. The average loan size is about $15,500.

The maximum term allowed for a microloan is six years. However, loan terms vary according to the size of the loan, the planned use of funds, the requirements of the intermediary lender, and the needs of the small business borrower. Interest rates vary.

Business owners applying for a microloan should be aware that intermediaries will generally require some type of collateral and the personal guarantee of the business owner.

Each intermediary is also required to provide business-based training and technical assistance to its microborrowers. Individuals and small businesses applying for microloan financing may be required to fulfill training or planning requirements before a loan application is considered.

Source: Small Business Administration

Hispanics. And to do so, the SBA needs to be more active in looking for clients, rather than waiting for them to walk in the door.

Essentially, the SBA has three key loan programs. They are:
• The 7(a) program, which offers loans to existing businesses and start-ups. The loan can be used for equipment, debt refinancing or working capital. The SBA does not grant the money. Instead, it offers guarantees to the banks that underwrite it.

• The 504 program offers loans to businesses that want to buy a building or office space. Payback terms are generally longer and down payments lower than with a conventional loan.

• Microloans target companies with grants from SBA-funded community development organizations. The interest rates on SBA loans are not exactly bargains - they range from prime rate plus 2.75 percent to prime rate plus 4.75 percent, depending on the loan and borrower.

Business owners who have benefited from SBA loans say the bottom line is that the SBA approves the money when others will not.

It is partly because of two misconceptions. One is that SBA loans are only for struggling businesses. The other is that applying for an SBA loan requires a lot of paperwork.

True, the SBA takes a chance on businesses with unproven records, and thus its default rate is just above 10 percent. But Macrao said most SBA loans go to sound businesses and that default is not a determinant of whether a loan is approved. He also points out the agency can approve some loans within 36 hours.

Productivity posts biggest downturn in eight years

WASHINGTON (AP)
American workers' productivity, a key measure of rising living standards, fell at an annual rate of 1.2 percent in the first quarter, the biggest drop in eight years.

The downward revision in productivity - the amount of output per hour of work - reflected the weakened U.S. economy. The Labor Department, which released the revision Tuesday, had previously estimated that productivity in the January-March quarter dipped at a rate of 0.1 percent.

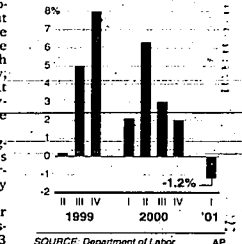

The 1.2 percent decline, bigger than analysts predicted, was the largest since the first quarter of 1993, when productivity fell at a rate of 5 percent.

The drop boosted unit labor costs, a gauge of inflation pressures, at an annual rate of 6.3 percent in the first quarter, the biggest increase since 1990, and faster than many analysts expected, according to revised figures. The government previously estimated labor costs rose at a 5.2 percent rate in the first quarter.

Lower productivity figure is a byproduct of a slowing economy, which grew at an annual rate of 1.3 percent in the first quarter, far more slowly than the 2 percent rate the government previously estimated.

In fresh evidence of the struggling economy, orders to U.S. factories declined by 3 percent in April, following a 0.7 percent increase in March, the Commerce Department said. It was the second decline this year, after a 6.3 percent fall in January.

April's drop reflected slackened demand for cars, ships, airplanes and other transportation equipment and for computers and electronic products, including semiconductors.

Letters by king go on auction

LONDON (AP) - Everyone knows about the fateful romance of Edward VIII, the British king who gave up his throne for Wallis Simpson, the twice-divorced American socialite he loved.

Now, an auction house has sold more than 260 of Edward's love letters - but they're not Wallis'.

"Mon amour, I swear I'll never marry any woman other than you," he wrote to Freda Dudley Ward, the wife of a British Parliament member with whom he had a 16-year relationship. The letter was dated April 18, 1920, when Edward was still the Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne.

But the relationship with Dudley-Ward ended when the future king's friendship with Mrs. Simpson blossomed into love.

The collection of letters was sold to a private collector, Barry Davies, for $48,645 according to Bonhams & Brooks auctioneers in London. They said Davies bought them for his wife, Christine, a collector of royal memorabilia.

In another letter, sent in 1919, Edward tells Dudley-Ward: "I'm like you, angel, want to die young and how marvelously divine if we could die together; there's absolutely nothing I could wish for more."

The couple apparently met in February 1918, when they were both in their early 20s, following a dance.

Dudley-Ward - whom Edward affectionately nicknamed Freddie - became his mistress shortly after they met, yet she had to share his bed with other women.

According to Wallis Simpson's biographer Charles Higham, the prince had a string of lovers, including Thelma Furness, Gloria Vanderbilt's twin sister.

All his dalliances apparently ended after Edward met Wallis at a party at Lady Furness' country house in 1931. Although not a standout on the London social scene - Wallis was seldom if ever mentioned in society columns - she caught Edward's eye with her handsome style. He fell desperately in love and briefly hoped to make Simpson queen.

But the fact that she had been married twice was an acute embarrassment to traditionalists and the Church of England hierarchy, and Parliament insisted the king could not wed her.

Edward, however, remained determined to do so, and on Dec. 10, 1936, he abdicated to marry the woman he loved. The couple were married in 1937 and became the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. They lived mostly in France and spent much of their time entertaining or being entertained within high social circles on both sides of the Atlantic.

Another group of letters connected with King Edward VIII was sold at the same auction for $6,162.

These were to young Edward from his father, King George V, while the prince was on a trip to Canada and the United States in 1919.

Prescription for happy Father's Day: Get annual physical exam

DEAR ABBY: It has taken me years to be able to write this letter. With Father's Day approaching, I can't put it off any longer.

This is the 10th year I will avoid greeting card stores, full-page ads for Father's Day specials, and any other reference to Father's Day.

My beloved father was buried the day before Father's Day in 1991. His surgery to repair damage from a heart attack was unsuccessful. He had seen the doctor the week before, complaining of chest pains. After a short exam, he was given a prescription for an antacid and advised to return in two weeks if the problem persisted. He didn't survive two weeks.

We were stunned that this active, vital man could, without his knowledge, have a heart problem so severe that it proved to be fatal. After the funeral I did some research.

The most startling statistic I discovered is 225,000 people die unexpectedly each year from heart attacks. One cardiologist told me, "Sometimes the first symptom is that the patient is dead."

Abby, this figure accounts for one-fourth of all heart disease-related deaths in this country. Had my father been properly diagnosed, in all probability he could have received treatment to prevent his heart attack. As it turned out, his heart was so badly damaged, he was unable to withstand the surgery to try to save his life.

DEAR ABBY

Abby, please urge your readers to insist that their loved ones see a doctor regularly for a complete physical examination - especially if there's a history of heart disease or other high-risk factors in their family.

If one father takes my advice and spares his children the pain of a fatherless Father's Day, my wonderful father's death will not have been without meaning.

- MISSING DAD IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR MISSING DAD: Please accept my sympathy for the loss of your father. While I can urge readers to schedule annual physicals, it is eloquent letters like yours that often give them the added "push" they need to safeguard their health. If they won't do it for themselves, sometimes they'll do it for the peace of mind of their families. I'm sorry you're still suffering so much pain. Perhaps it will help you to take a moment on Father's Day to remember some of the special times you shared with him. I can't imagine a finer tribute.

DEAR ABBY: This morning while I was waiting for some repair work to be done on my car, I read with interest the letters in your column about the symbolism of finding one or more pennies.

When the repairs were finished, I went out to my car, opened the car door and guess what was sitting in the middle of my driver's seat? A bright, shiny 2001 penny! I wonder if my father (who has been deceased for 12 years) was sending me a message.

- DAVE BROWN, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR DAVE: I don't know what your mechanic charges, but your dad may have thought you needed the money.

Cruise files second lawsuit challenging gay rumors

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tom Cruise has filed a $100 million defamation lawsuit against a man who allegedly offered to sell videotapes of himself having sex with the actor.

It's the second lawsuit Cruise has filed in the past month, challenging rumors that he is gay.

The Superior Court lawsuit filed

Monday accuses Michael Davis of spreading a rumor by e-mail to the media, claiming he had an affair with Cruise and had a videotape to prove it.

The lawsuit accuses Davis of making the statements "in order to hurt the plaintiff and to gain widespread publicity for himself."

On May 29, the lawsuit says,

Davis allegedly disseminated to at least a dozen media outlets in the United States "false and defamatory written statements about the plaintiff, including the false assertion that Doe 1, an unnamed male, had engaged in an illicit homosexual relationship with the plaintiff during plaintiff's marriage and that this was recorded on videotape."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Life is a succession of lessons which must be lived to be understood."

—Emerson

"That deal was a trap," lamented a disillusioned South. "It was taught to me by my ungrateful honors, not away from them. Unfortunately, only experience can teach the exceptions."

South won his diamond queen and led a low club to dummy's king and East's ace. East returned a trump to South's ace, and South led another club. East overtook West's eight to lead another trump, and South was in trouble.

If he returned to his hand in trumps, dummy's club ruff would disappear, so he exited dummy in spades. West won and persisted with a third trump, cutting off all escape routes for South. In the end, South had to surrender three clubs and a spade for one down.

Leading up to dummy's unguarded king is correct procedure when West might have the ace. It serves no purpose when declarer "knows" it is East who has the ace (the bidding).

To make today's game despite the 3-1 trump break, South must win dummy's diamond ace at trick one. At trick two, he must lead a club from dummy, away from dummy's king.

East wins and switches to trumps, but South wins the race. Another club goes to East, who leads another trump, but South retains control. He exits dummy in diamonds to ruff his last club, limiting the defenders to only two clubs and a spade.
