Tax rebates begin in July

Bush signs bill, proclaims 'new tone' in Capitol

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In a White House victory celebration, President Bush put his signature to the nation's first across-the-board tax cut in a generation on Thursday and promised American families rebate checks in time to help with September school bills.

He proclaimed the $135 trillion tax cut, most of which takes effect slowly over the next decade, the first achievement for a "new tone in Washington."

GOP wants to rein in authority

By Associated Press and The States News Service

WASHINGTON - A group of Western Republicans, feeling burned by former President Clinton's national monument designations, support a proposal to rein in presidential authority to create monuments in the future.

But environmentalists call the proposal fatally flawed and say there is no need to restrict the president's authority to protect fragile natural and cultural treasures.

The National Monument Fairness Act introduced Thursday by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, would force the president to consult with a state's governor and congressional delegation and gather public comment 60 days before using the Antiquities Act to create a monument of 50,000 acres or more.

It would also require Congress to ratify the monument designation within two years of its designation or else it would be eliminated, a provision environmentalists call the bill's "fatal flaw." Once the two-year withdrawal period expires, the bill would leave the land in question subject to development threats, environmental groups say. In addition, there is no requirement that Congress would take up the issue of approving a new national monument so it could languish due to congressional inaction or politics.

But Simpson said he hopes to bring fairness to a longtime process intended to protect federal land that was first initiated by Teddy Roosevelt in 1906.

Simpson and other Republicans complained that Clinton abused the Antiquities Act when he created 19 monuments and expanded three others, putting nearly 6 million acres under federal protection. Please see GOP, Page A2

Commissioner raises concern over hospital talks, fears loss of services

By Chad Baldwin Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The chairman of the Twin Falls County Commission worries that an agreement between Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise could result in a loss of services at the local hospital.

Gary Grindstaff told Kiwanis Club members Thursday that many Magic Valley residents are already going to Boise and Salt Lake City for medical treatment, and he's concerned the trend would accelerate under any affiliation between the Twin Falls and Boise hospitals.

"It kind of worries me a little bit," Grindstaff said. "What could happen if we give control to anyone else is maybe a lot of business going to Boise. That's already happening." Magic Valley Regional spokesman Shawn Barigar acknowledged that some Magic Valley residents go elsewhere for medical treatment, but he said an affiliation with St. Luke's would not automatically result in local patients being referred to Boise. And such an agreement is intended to maintain or enhance the array of medical services available in Twin Falls, he said, not reduce them.

"The argument that we would just start shutting off services at Magic Valley ... I think it's quite the opposite of that," Barigar said. Discussions between Saint Luke's and the local hospital board - a group appointed by the county commissioners that serves as Magic Valley Regional's board of directors - have been under way for months. The hospitals have said they're talking about a "formal affiliation" involving services, operations, finances and strategic planning.

Barigar said the deal would not be a merger or partnership, but rather an arrangement that would "combine the existing clinical excellence at both organizations" and involve "sharing of technology and human resource expertise."

Grindstaff isn't convinced that would be the result. "If I were the manager and CEO of St. Luke's and could take over management of this hospital, my concern would be the hospital in Boise," the commissioner said in an interview after the Kiwanis meeting. "I'm not saying that's going to happen, but that is what I'm worried about."

Barigar said it's premature to assume a deal between the hospitals would result in St. Luke's managing Magic Valley Regional.

Those discussions with St. Luke's are still in very premature stages, and to the best of my

Fire officials plan fire ring to protect SV

By Karen Bostick Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - Fire officials in the Sun Valley and Elkhorn area plan to build a partial fire ring around the resort community to protect nearly $1.2 billion worth of homes from going up in flames. The bad news: they can't build the ring until October at the earliest. And that's not good in a year that's had two red flag warnings before summer has even begun.

Red flag warnings, generally triggered by high winds and lightning storms, don't typically occur until well into July or August, said Michael Echeita, Sun Valley's assistant fire chief. "You go for a walk in the hills right now and you'll find that they're already pretty dry," he said.

Ag secretary defends embattled nominee as 'visionary'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman defended a nominee for a top position at her department against allegations that he was insensitive to minorities and favored corporate farm interests.

Veneman called Thomas Dorr, an Iowa farmer picked to be undersecretary for rural development, a "visionary thinker."

"It's going to take a real visionary to do some outside-the-box thinking" about rural development, she said Thursday.

ing interests. At Iowa State University in 1999, Dorr observed that an economically prosperous area of his state lacked ethnic and religious diversity. He also has suggested the creation of giant farming operations in which individual farmers would work together.

Dorr "has a tendency to talk theoretically and to get people to think," Veneman said, speaking to reporters after a ceremony honoring her Democratic predecessor, Dan Glickman. The Senate Agriculture Committee has not scheduled a hearing on Dorr's nomination. The committee's new chairman, Iowa Democrat Tom Harkin, has not taken a position on Dorr.

Harkin is concerned about Dorr's remarks but "doesn't want to make a judgment until he gets a chance to see the whole record," said Harkin spokesman Seth Boffeli.

In a recent letter to the committee, members of the Congressional Black Caucus said they were shocked that a USDA nominee "would express the belief that ethnic diversity is an impediment to economic growth." Dorr has declined to be interviewed pending his confirmation, but has told administration officials that his 1999 remarks at Iowa State were taken out of context.

USDA has been dogged in recent years by civil rights complaints from farmers and employees. In 1999, the department settled a lawsuit filed on behalf of black farmers who claimed that they were systematically discriminated against for years when they applied for loans and subsidy programs.

Powell seeks open dialogue with N. Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Colin Powell on Thursday ruled out conditions for beginning talks with North Korea but said the "open dialogue" he envisions will include attempts to ease tensions along the border with South Korea.

"Alluding to the large North Korean troop presence in the border area, Powell said, 'You can't really have a full set of discussions without raising this particular issue.'"

Powell spoke with reporters after a luncheon meeting with South Korean Foreign Minister Han Seung-soo, who said he welcomed President Bush's decision to open talks with Pyongyang.

"The United States' dialogue with North Korea will certainly help South Korea's effort for recognition and cooperation with North Korea," he said.

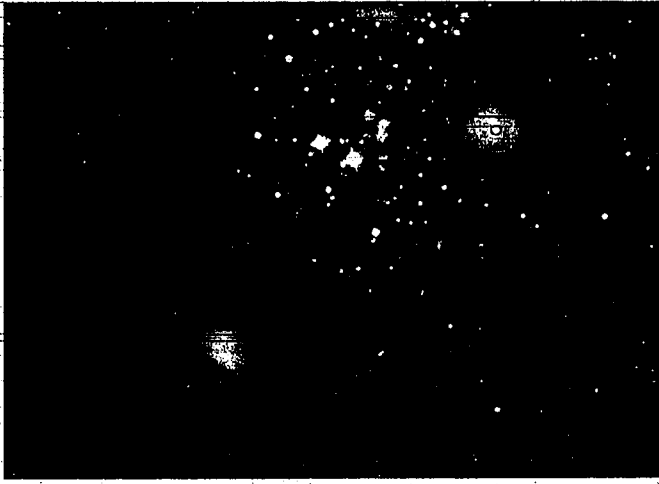

Powell said the initial contacts with North Korea probably will involve State Department officials who have dealt with Pyongyang's envoys in the past.

One possibility is Jack Fritchard, a career diplomat who specializes in Korean affairs in the East Asia bureau.

Clinton announced Wednesday his intention to open talks with North Korea on a range of issues. There have been no substantive talks with Pyongyang since the Clinton administration, which attempted to negotiate a missile control agreement but fell short.

"The negotiations involved an effort to wean Pyongyang away from missile development and missile exports in exchange for help for North Korea's devastated economy."

Powell said humanitarian issues will be on the U.S. agenda. His spokesman, Richard Boucher, said terrorism is another.

In this artist conception, dust rings surround young brown dwarfs in the gaseous womb of M42 from which they were recently born.

Astronomers: Dwarfs form like stars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — New evidence suggests that brown dwarfs — the hulking celestial bodies that have stumped scientists since they were first observed less than two decades ago — are more closely related to stars than planets.

An international team of astronomers presented evidence Thursday that not only do the faint, cool bodies form like stars, but they may be orbited by planets of their own.

"Like stars, brown dwarfs are born surrounded by disks, which may be capable of forming planetary systems," said Charles Lada, a senior astrophysicist at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass.

Lada presented the results on behalf of his colleagues at the 198th meeting of the American Astronomical Society.

Brown dwarfs are objects with masses that range between 10 and 70 times that of the planet Jupiter. Though enormous compared to planets, the gaseous bodies are not large enough to shine like stars because their masses are too low to ignite and sustain nuclear burning.

Debated by the ambiguity of brown dwarfs, astronomers have wavered between calling them super planets or failed stars. Lada said the new observations could put them firmly in the star camp.

The observations last year at the European Southern Observatory in Chile revealed a group of brown dwarfs in a cluster of young stars in the constellation Orion, about 1,200 light years from the sun.

Judge: WWII Memorial plans can move forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled against opponents of a World War II Memorial Thursday, rejecting their request to postpone construction on the National Mall.

With the ruling, all three branches of government have now moved to support the memorial or to let it proceed. Legislation passed by Congress and signed by President Bush last week placed planning for the memorial outside the normal regulatory process, an effort to end lawsuits and other delays.

Opponents charged that the new law is unconstitutional because it bypasses the review process in the courts.

U.S. District Judge Henry Kennedy disagreed, saying that while he wasn't making a "definitive ruling" on the law, it appeared constitutional and lawmakers hadn't overstepped their authority.

"It seems to be Congress' intent to remove this court's jurisdiction," he said.

The National Coalition to Save Our Mall, which opposes the memorial's design and its placement between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, filed a lawsuit in October.

On Monday, the group requested a temporary restraining order to stop the government from signing construction contracts to build the memorial.

But Kennedy declined, saying the coalition was unlikely to prevail in its lawsuit and would not be harmed if construction planning proceeded.

"No ground will be tilled, no trees will be pruned — and no actual construction will begin" until after Fourth of July festivities on the Mall, he said.

Only hours after the ruling, the American Battle Monuments Commission announced that a $56 million contract had been awarded to two companies to start construction work on the memorial this summer. The companies have worked on other Mall landmarks including the Jefferson and Roosevelt memorials.

Agency sets ergonomics hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buffeted by criticism of inaction, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao said Thursday she will hold three hearings on work-related injuries, a first step toward pursuing a Bush administration policy to protect workers through employer cooperation.

The hearings will be July 16 in Washington, D.C., July 20 in Illinois and July 24 in California, with a goal of developing a universal definition of injuries caused by repetitive motion and stress.

Chao will decide by September if she will pursue another government regulation or a voluntary policy.

Ergonomics is the science of adapting working conditions to suit individual employees. Critics have complained that there is not enough scientific evidence to justify employer regulations that were issued late in the Clinton administration, but repealed in March by the Republican-controlled Congress. Since Chao has been under pressure to say how she will address workplace injuries.

HMO debate presents problem for Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican House member who has tried to bridge the gap between the White House and health care leaders is showing signs of fatigue.

Rep. Charlie Norwood, R-Ga., a dentist who has spent six years championing patients' rights to sue their health plans, said Thursday he could possibly back a bipartisan plan launched by the newly Democratic Senate — if no other compromise can be reached.

"We're not over, but it's getting very much toward the end," Norwood said. "It's hard for me to give up because we're so close."

At issue is how to help Americans sue their health plans over denied medical care.

President Bush and GOP conservatives want to keep HMO suits in federal courts, and limit damages for pain and suffering to $500,000.

Meanwhile, a plan that appears headed for the Senate floor next week, pushed by Sens. Edward Kennedy and John McCain, R-Ariz., would let patients take their cases to federal or state courts, and win up to $5 million in damages.

Supporters like Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., joined the pair in a big launch soon after Bush took office.

Norwood, who has sponsored past bills to allow state suits and larger awards, held off endorsements and pledged to work with the White House on a compromise.

On Thursday, talks continued but the Bush camp still objected to state lawsuits, damages for pain and suffering beyond $500,000 and letting patients sue without exhausting other reviews of their cases.

"They (White House officials) made a suggestion or two, and I'm checking around to see if I can get any support for their suggestions," Norwood said. "I'm listening."

Norwood's support of Kennedy, which would essentially mean cosponsoring a companion bill in the House with Dingell, would increase the chances that Congress could send President Bush patients' rights legislation he's already vowed to veto.

Boeing investigates suspicious damage to 737 jetliners at plant

SEATTLE (AP) — Suspicious damage was found to the wiring of up to 10 Boeing 737 jetliners undergoing final assembly, the company said Thursday.

Boeing has since increased security at its plant in the southern Seattle suburb of Renton.

Company spokeswoman Sandy Angers said Boeing discovered seven incidents of wire damage that are "not common in the normal course of manufacturing." The company now also considers several earlier incidents suspicious.

Angers did not give details of the damage, but KIRO-TV in Seattle reported that the wires were cut, citing anonymous sources.

Each aircraft showed one instance of damage, but the damage was found in different places on each plane, Angers said.

The company notified the Federal Aviation Administration of the damage earlier this week, the same day the FAA was contacted by a whistleblower on the plant floor, FAA spokesman Allen Kenitzer said.

Kenitzer said the FAA referred the case to the FBI, which is considering an investigation because tampering with an aircraft is a federal crime.

Cases of employees intentionally damaging airplanes are rare, Kenitzer said. The last incident was reported in Seattle in 1990.

Boeing and FAA officials said the damage was easily detected when the airplane's systems were checked. Kenitzer said it would be highly unlikely for that type of damage to go undetected.

Independent signals shift on environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James Jeffords is going to be creating a lot more headaches for President Bush besides turning the Senate over to Democratic control.

The newly independent Vermont lawmaker who soon will become chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee has an environmental and energy agenda sharply different from the White House's.

"I have been disappointed in the president's actions so far this year on environmental issues," Jeffords told The Associated Press on Thursday. "In the weeks ahead, I'll be working to put together an environmental agenda that will garner bipartisan support."

A top priority will be trying to persuade President Bush to return to the positions he held as a presidential candidate on global warming and power plants' carbon dioxide emissions.

In March, Bush backed out of a 1997 international global warming treaty, negotiated in Kyoto, Japan, and abandoned his campaign promise to regulate carbon dioxide as a pollutant.

The administration is again rethinking its approach, focusing on largely voluntary measures. "I am deeply depressed by the fact we removed ourselves from the Kyoto agreement," said

Jeffords, who has sponsored legislation to treat carbon dioxide as a pollutant. "Obviously, we can't do much to reinstate our country except to put the pressure on and hopefully to convince the administration that that was a bad idea."

On some issues, Bush's agenda is not that far apart from Jeffords'.

A month before the president released his energy plan, Jeffords joined Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., in sponsoring a bill to promote cleaner vehicles and reduce fuel consumption through tax credits. Bush's energy package has similar tax incentives.

But Jeffords wants a stronger government role in improving energy efficiency and in looking beyond fossil fuels and nuclear power for energy resources.

"I was one of those who started the alternative energy field, wind energy. I also some time ago got the present energy bill put into place that looks for more efficiency and alternative forms of energy," he said. "I have been out front on these issues and I will continue to be out front."

Jeffords was one of the principal negotiators of the 1990 Clean Air Act. In recent years, he has stood watch against efforts by some Republicans to attach provisions to spending bills that would weaken environmental laws.

U.S. spy chief presses peace in Middle East

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Back-to-back meetings with Israeli and Palestinian leaders, U.S. spy chief George Tenet tried Thursday to shore up a fragile cease-fire.

But the two sides remained far apart on how to make a truce, last and return to peace talks, with the toughest dispute being over the arrests of Islamic militants suspected by Israel of involvement in terror attacks.

"The Palestinians should seize several dozen 'ticking bombs' — militants now plotting attacks," said Raanan Gissin, an adviser to the Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. Israel says the Palestinians released 300 militants at the start of the current conflict.

Sharon met with Tenet for 90 minutes Thursday. In a statement issued afterward, the prime minister demanded an "end to the violence, terror and incitement that have not ceased."

Gissin said the list of immediate terror suspects was given to the CIA director, who later met with Arafat and his security chiefs for about two hours in the West Bank town of Ramallah.

A meeting of Israeli and Palestinian security chiefs with Tenet was scheduled for Friday in Ramallah, said Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat. An Israeli official said there would be a meeting and the U.S. Embassy refused to comment.

The present said U.S. envoy William Burns would arrive in Ramallah on Friday for talks with Arafat and other Palestinian officials. The Palestinians balked at Israel's demands.

Palestinian officials say Arafat has already made a tremendous effort to enforce the cease-fire, including holding meetings with leaders of the militant Hamas and Islamic Jihad groups. But in the current tense climate, they said, he could not be expected to order mass arrests, as he did after suicide bombings in 1996.

Israel has made it difficult for Arafat to persuade his people to back the cease-fire, said Palestinian Planning Minister Nabil Shaath.

"Since the cease-fire started, not even an encouragement by the Israeli leadership has been given... On the contrary, it's always insults, and further bad measures," Shaath told reporters in Ramallah. "It's like a tinderbox and every step along the way is crucial," he said.

Israeli Defense Minister Benjamin Ben-Eliezer said Thursday, "There is no cease-fire." He said attacks continue and Palestinians continue to plan more. If Arafat wanted, he said, "tomorrow morning (there will be) total silence."

The Palestinians said they want a close U.S. involvement, though President Bush has shown no sign that he is ready for that.

The Palestinian security chief in the West Bank, Jibril Rajoub, said an arbitrator is urgently needed.

"We need a third party to monitor," Rajoub told The Associated Press. "We hope that Mr. Tenet will have the authority from the U.S. administration and also the agreement from the Israelis to be this third party."

Studies blame extinctions on early hunters

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than a century, scientists have debated what killed off the big animals in Australia and the Americas. Now, two studies blame ancient human hunters equipped with fire, spears and an appetite for meat.

The studies, appearing today in the journal Science, conclude that after early humans migrated into Australia and the Americas, the heavyweight animals of these new continents were driven to extinction within a few thousand years.

In the Americas, 73 percent of the large plant-eaters, along with the saber-toothed cat, were gone within 1,200 years after humans migrated to the continents about 13,600 years ago. Wiped out were animals like mammoths, camels, mastodons, large ground sloths and the glyptodont, a strange armored creature the size of a small car and weighing more than 1,400 pounds.

Scientists should be allowed to study Kennewick Man

Kennewick Man is a scientist's dream find - one of the oldest, and probably most complete human skeleton ever unearthed in North America. Scientists say the bones could tell us more about the identity of the first humans in North America.

Now, if only the federal government would step aside and let the scientists do their work.

Controversy has enveloped the 9,000-year-old skeleton since it was discovered six years ago in the Columbia River near Kennewick, Wash.

Indian tribes say Kennewick Man is their ancestor and want the bones reburied. Attorneys for eight scientists now in a tug of war with the tribes over the skeleton are asking a U.S. District Court judge to allow the scientists to continue their study on Kennewick Man. They argue that White House officials in the Clinton administration violated strict ethical standards by allegedly "coaching" tribes how to beat the lawsuit - and later tried to cover up their involvement.

A coalition of five Northwest Indian tribes - the Umatilla, the Yakama, the Colville, the Wanapum and the Nez Perce - have claimed Kennewick Man as their ancestor. The tribes want the bones reburied, arguing that further scientific study would violate their religious traditions.

But the scientists argue - persuasively - that the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act makes no provision for religious beliefs because it would be unconstitutional.

First of all, let us say we respect the Native Americans' religious traditions. They have every right to bury their dead.

If the dead are Native American. But it's very likely that "Kennewick Man" isn't Native American. Researchers say the skull of Kennewick Man appears to resemble Polynesians or southern Asians, and not modern Indians.

And then there's the time element.

At 9,700 years old, Kennewick Man was around long before there were any signs of Indian tribes. He was alive 4,587 years before Egypt broke ground on the Great Pyramids. He was walking the earth 3,200 years before the invention of the wheel.

that predate the 1492 arrival of Christopher Columbus are by definition "Native American."

Who cares if it's the truth, as long as it's politically correct? That would come as a surprise to the Vikings, whose remains from their voyages to North America around the year 1000 could be considered "Native American" and given to Indian tribes for reburial.

The federal government wants the case dismissed. But U.S. Magistrate John Jelderks has questioned the U.S. Justice Department's arguments and has denied that request.

Kennewick Man, has a lot in common with a skeleton found closer to home. Buhla was her name, and she was dug up in a gravel pit along the Snake River near Buhl in 1989. Scientists guessed her to be more than 10,000 years old, certainly the oldest skeleton ever found in Idaho and one of the oldest discovered in the New World.

Buhla was eventually turned over to the Shoshone-Bannock Indian Tribes and reburied on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation in eastern Idaho. Scientists said they wished they'd had more time to study Buhla, because she could have told us so much more about the continent on which we live.

This time, scientists are fighting for more time to study Kennewick Man. We think the judge should grant their request.

The Bush daughters are all right

PHILIP TERZIAN

You may have noticed that the Bush daughters' apparent acquaintance with alcohol has lately made the news.

Barbara Bush, a freshman at Yale, allegedly tried to use a false identification card at a New Haven saloon. Jenna Bush, a freshman at the University of Texas, has twice been apprehended for drinking alcohol at Austin restaurants in both cases, the Bush girls were victims of celebrity. The manager of the Austin restaurant, a self-described Democrat, recognized Jenna and called the cops. In New Haven, a security guard, one Bill Coffe, says he confiscated Barbara's fake ID, where it now hangs on his family room wall.

These incidents have not gone unreported in the press. Because both Bush girls are adults in the eye of the law (18), most newspapers have covered the stories extensively. TV personalities such as Katie Couric and Matt Lauer have devoted considerable time on the air to repeating the charges, interviewing family counselors and psychologists, and soliciting the views of George W. Bush's political detractors. This has greatly irritated the Bush family, which points out that neither daughter holds public office - both argued strenuously against their father running for president - and the infractions, while genuine, are decidedly trivial.

Democrats, however, see it another way. They have used the occasion to remind readers and viewers that the girl's father, George W. Bush, once had a drinking problem himself - "our DWI president," as one columnist put it - and make the hypothetical argument that, if Chelsea Clinton had done anything comparable, the vast right-wing conspiracy would never have dropped the subject. There is no doubt that President Bush was once a problem drinker, he has acknowledged as much, over and over, and has stayed away from alcohol for the past 15 years. The second point, however, is highly debatable. It is possible that some Clinton critics might have exploited Chelsea's problems, if she had any; but the fact is that we know next to nothing about the subject. Chelsea Clinton was off-limits to the press during her father's tenure in the White House - except, of course, when she was needed for photo opportunities during the Lewinsky affair - a condition that persists to this day.

When her mother ran for the Senate last year, Chelsea often accompanied her on the hustings, smiling, waving and shaking hands, but standing resolutely silent when asked the occasional question. Nor can it plausibly be argued, as some have tried, that because President Bush has gotten kid-glove coverage in the press (or so I am told), hungry reporters are bound to pounce on his daughters' travails. That's a nice theory, but it founders on the recent history of Albert Gore's children.

One of the Gore daughters was once accused by police in Chevy Chase, Md., for underage drinking - she tried to, don't you know who I am argument - but the story was largely suppressed. Albert Gore III was summarily dismissed from St. Alban's School (his father's alma mater) for reasons that have never been publicly explained, and just last summer, young Albert III was charged in North Carolina with driving 97 miles per hour in a 55 mph zone.

Why should the Bush daughters generate such media attention while Chelsea Clinton is shrouded by the press, and the Gore children go almost unmentioned? It's a good question, for which there is only one answer: The press is anxious to protect its favorites, and eager to embarrass a Republican president.

To be sure, the Bush daughters did not display sound judgment. Whether they like it or not, they are subject to a level of scrutiny - and frequently hostile scrutiny - that they neither asked for nor can ever escape. I presume their parents have since impressed upon them the value of prudence, and the sad reality that their lives are forever transformed.

Still, you have to ask yourself whether it is more self-destructive and dangerous to others to drive 97 mph in a 55 mph zone, or to brandish a false ID in an Ivy League hangout. And compared to the fun and games played by 16-year-old Baby Boomers in their heyday, a college freshman ordering a beer in a Tex-Mex restaurant seems comparatively benign. Let her who is without sin cast the first olive.

There is one final irony. Those who argued against Bill Clinton's impeachment because the case involved an invasion of privacy are the ones most eager to harass, and publicly humiliate, Jenna and Barbara Bush. Privacy is either a privilege or a right; but whatever it is, it ought not to be invoked selectively.

What the Bush girls are accused of doing falls under the broad category of youthful mischief, and the Bush families are entitled to protection from inquiring minds. And if this is the worst that can be said about the Bush daughters, Jenna and Barbara, then the president and first lady deserve full marks for being good parents.

It is nice to see what's up at home

Hi. I just wanted to say hi from the other side of the world. I am in the Army and stationed over here in South Korea. I grew up in Filer, so it's nice to have a way to keep up on all the local events through the newspaper. It's great that I have the ability to access the local news clear over here, even though we're like eight hours ahead.

Take care and hope to have a real copy again soon!

Keep hospital under local control

A few years ago, the Twin Falls County commissioners and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's board of directors received unsolicited offers from outsiders to buy or lease the hospital. When neighboring health-care organizations heard about it, they also expressed interest. Big numbers and lucrative offers circulated, and the commissioners did the right thing then, forming a large citizen's committee to study whether the county should sell, lease, affiliate or leave the hospital alone.

That committee had representatives from all over the valley, from all walks of life. Commissioners participated, board members served and even competitors were represented on that committee. They studied the issue for months. They had open meetings for the public, they actively solicited public comment with hotlines, e-mail addresses, post office boxes, ads, etc.

That committee heard from the public, loud and clear, and reported back, no to selling the hospital; no to leasing the hospital to for-profit groups; possibly leasing the hospital to a not-for-profit organization; yes to local control; yes to streamlining the hospital's governance structure; and yes to affiliating and/or partnering with not-for-profit companies that would enhance the health care in the valley. Since then, the commissioners and the hospital have been working toward forming a community-based not-for-profit corporation to maintain local control and strengthen the hospital's ability to effectively partner or affiliate with larger regional hospitals.

Recently, a big-dollar offer has resurfaced from an outside for-profit corporation, and the commissioners, perhaps dazzled by the dollars, are going to repeat the process.

Why? I won't speculate on their motives. I'll just ask that they do the right thing again. Move forward, not backward. I'm a teacher, and I'm thinking of all the missed opportunities to attain forward momentum while we study material we've already mastered. This hospital has performed exceptionally well under local control and leadership - enhance, don't hinder, its opportunity to continue doing so.

Plan is key to hospital's future

The May 31 opinion page of The Times-News contained an excellent comment from Dr. Ben Katz outlining exactly why establishment of a 501(c)(3) corporation is the key to the future of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Dr. Katz has been a respected member of the medical community for almost 50 years and has seen the hospital evolve from a small community hospital into an excellent regional facility it is today. His opinion is to be respected and his article should be required reading for anyone participating in the current hospital discussions.

On the same page appears an editorial by The Times-News staff commending the Twin Falls County commissioners for appointing yet another committee to explore other options. As I recall, an initial study was made by a group of respected community citizens and, after thorough research, they recommended the 501(c)(3) concept. This was enthusiastically accepted by the commissioners and one even announced that he was ready to proceed immediately. Enter the experts from The Times-News who questioned the finding of this committee and persuaded the commissioners to change their minds. It is my personal opinion that The Times-News will continue to recommend the formation of committees until one is finally created that consults with the paper before making a recommendation.

It is time for The Times-News to "butt out" and return to the business it knows something about - publishing newspapers.

The honor code is not a surveillance tool

ROBERT S. BOYNTON

NEW YORK — When I read about the plagiarism scandal at the University of Virginia, I was struck by how much attitudes had changed. The intellectual property about honor codes — in the relatively short period between my time as a Haverford College student and my taking a position as an NYU professor.

The essentials of a university education aren't the different things they were in the mid-1980s, but students' assumptions about the nature of information (a.k.a. knowledge) are. We are witnessing the digitalization of knowledge — the notion that ideas (like recipes, formulas, "cut-throat" e-mail addresses) can be appropriated electronically in any way users wish.

In early May, 122 students at U-Va. who had taken Physics 105 and 106 (an extremely popular physics course) like course called "How Things Work" over the past five semesters were accused of cheating on their term papers, e-mailing each other passages or copying papers from students who took the class before them.

Following reports of increased electronic cheating at high schools and colleges across the country, news that their physics professor, Louis Bloomfield, had written a software program to compare student papers and ferret out cheaters was portrayed as a cyberspace cautionary tale: Having grown tired of their children's clever tricks, adults were in charge again.

"The same technology that had enabled plagiarism can now be used to detect it," says Bloomfield. "I am a physicist and educator, but my job is also to protect intellectual integrity." (The program is available, free, at plagiarism.phys.virginia.edu.)

That the university is one of only about 100 colleges (out of 3,500 nationwide) with an honor code only heightened the drama. But the debate surrounding the scandal was obscuring something fundamental about an honor code. The emphasis was on the inapplicability of U-Va.'s anachronistic "code," rather than the moral question of its students' "honor."

I attended a private New York City high school in the pre-Internet era, where cheating was fairly common and a healthy portion of every senior class was shuttled off to Ivy League colleges. Although we received an excellent education, almost nothing was ever said about the reason for learning. The implication was clear: Knowledge was a means to an end, rarely an end in itself.

After high school, I majored in philosophy and theology at Haverford in Pennsylvania, where the communitarian spirit of its Quaker founders was still in the air. One manifestation of that spirit was the honor code, in force since 1896.

It was a simple bargain. In return for promising to act responsibly, we were afforded an extraordinary amount of freedom: self-scheduled, unsupervised exams, the trust of our professors. Every spring the student body came together to debate and ratify the code. Beyond debating the principles, we were debating ourselves: How much of the real world's petty vices would we allow in?

The honor code had profound effect on my view of intellectual life. Before college, I was disturbed by the conformity and competition of my classmates. At Haverford, the lack of supervision made the possibility of cheating so easy that cheating didn't make sense; I worked harder than ever before. The honor code helped clarify my choices: I could either cut corners, cheat and lead an inauthentic life; or discover what was possible when motivation was completely internal.

Which isn't to say that an honor code is an abstraction; it has serious consequences for a community. The question of precisely how it should be enforced is always lurking in the shadows. At Haverford, the most vigorous disagreement was over the code's stipulation that a student had himself violated it if he witnessed an infraction without confronting the violator.

Was the responsibility to confront fellow students part of the honor code, or a clever way for the Haverford administration to fob off that responsibility on us?

U-Va.'s recent scandal brings this paradox to the foreground. If professors have a foolproof way of catching cheating students, then what is the point of having an honor code?

Technologically, cheating had become much easier. My high school classmates and I spent hours copying passages to represent as our own; now all it takes is a few mouse clicks. But the difference is more one of degree than of kind. Copying is still copying. The words you present come from you or from someone else. All the technology in the world will never change that.

What has changed is my students' attitude toward intellectual property. If so much information is only a click away, why shouldn't a student cut-and-paste his way to an "A?" I can't keep track of the times I've been asked whether textual citations or footnotes are "required" in research papers. And this comes from the conscientious, confused students who simply don't understand what the standards for honorable work are any longer. They've grown up listening to "free" MP3 files, studying copyrighted articles their teachers photocopy and distribute without permission, buying bootlegged videos on the street.

It is no mystery why students at places like U-Va. find themselves in a dilemma. The information genie is out of the bottle. The students who violated U-Va.'s code — no less than the professors trying to thwart them — are missing the point. An honor code is not a surveillance mechanism, but a tradition that demands and expects the kind of self-scrutiny that a true scholar practices.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Nature Conservancy hires ex-deputy AG

KETCHUM - The Nature Conservancy of Idaho announced the hiring of William S. Whelan, a recently departed deputy attorney general, as the group's director of government relations.

Whelan joined The Nature Conservancy this week, an organization news release said.

"The Nature Conservancy of Idaho has been remarkably successful in preserving dozens of the most outstanding natural areas in our state," Whelan said. "It has achieved this with little fanfare by working cooperatively with landowners, local communities and government leaders. I am pleased to have the chance to join the conservancy's efforts."

Whelan worked as a deputy attorney general in the Natural Resources Division of the Idaho Attorney General's Office since 1991. He also supervised attorneys assigned to the Department of Agriculture, Fish and Game, Lands and Parks and Recreation.

In his new post with The Nature Conservancy, Whelan will be responsible for developing the chapter's legislative agenda at the state and federal levels and serve as the group's primary contact with the Legislature.

"As we attempt to achieve conservation at a broad scale, we need someone working with key stakeholders and policy-makers at that scale, who commands a high level of respect," said Geoff Farnsworth, state director of The Nature Conservancy. "We are very fortunate to have Will join us."

Districts get grants to help curb youth violence

TWIN FALLS - Several school districts will receive grants to help reduce youth violence by strengthening programs that prevent the use of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

The State Department of Education receives funds annually from the federal State and Drug-Free Community Act to distribute to school districts through a competitive grant process.

Members of the state's Safe and Drug-Free Schools Advisory Board evaluate the applications. Grants are awarded based on the greatest need.

"We are seeing many creative approaches across the state to help educators, students and parents," said Claudia Hasselquist, Safe and Drug-Free School coordinator for the State Department of Education. "We are pleased to see many school community partnerships developed to help kids."

Recipients include:
Gooding School District, $21,300 to enhance its student assistance program for seniors.

Twin Falls School District, $70,000 to provide additional support for the district's student assistance program.

Twin Falls library cancels author presentations

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Public Library has announced the cancellation of Brad Dimock's presentation, which had been scheduled on Saturday.

Dimock is the author of "Sunk Without a Sound: The Tragic Colorado River Honeycomb of Glen and Bessie Hyde."

Kimberly P & Z updates subdivisions ordinance

KIMBERLY - An ordinance on regulations for subdivisions in the Kimberly area was updated during the Tuesday night meeting of the city planning and zoning commission.

The ordinance revisions will give new homeowners additional protection with broader regulations dealing with fire construction inspections and a requirement of a one-year warranty period.

The preliminary draft for a master street plan drawn up by the J-U-B engineers was also studied by the group. Final decisions on the project will be made at a later date.

The results of the workshop on the city comprehensive plan were reviewed and action on this plan will also be completed at a future meeting.

Hispanic Caucus pushes for split

Creating subdivisions of districts could usher in minority lawmakers

The Associated Press

BOISE - Subdividing each of the state's 35 legislative districts might give Idaho Hispanics more ability than ever to elect a state representative.

No one is entirely sure whether that plan is constitutional, but the Idaho Hispanic Caucus wants the six-member, bipartisan redistricting panel to try it.

"It would help our cause," Caucus Executive Director Al Sanchez said. "It would help us get our own folks elected."

Assuming the panel drawing up the state's new political boundaries agrees to maintain the present legislative districts, each would have about 37,000 people represented by one senator and two representatives elected at-large.

Redefining America - E1

Democrat commissioner Ray Givens said the panel would be within its rights to create subdistricts in heavily Hispanic portions of Cassia and Canyon counties.

Republicans were not so certain. "We think the commission should seek an attorney general's opinion before deciding to subdivide," Republican Party spokeswoman Paula Garriott said.

If the commission were to divide the 35 districts into 70 subdistricts - one for each House member - their populations would be about 18,500 people. It also means voters would be able to pick only one representative. Currently, they choose two.

The plan could face a court challenge because the Idaho Constitution limits the number of legislative districts to between 30 and 35. Some worry subdistricts could be considered the same as legislative districts, rendering the proposal unconstitutional.

Boise State University political professor Gary Moncrief said the subdistrict concept has worked in other states and could boost minority and rural representation in Idaho. He also said the essentially at-large election of state House members could be challenged as well by minorities claiming it dilutes their voting power.

And he pointed out nothing requires the commission to divide every legislative district into two. Some could remain as they are and some could be split.

But he cautioned that it could only be done in areas where the commission finds reason to do it. That includes regions of high minority concentration or where communities would be better represented in a split.

Commissioners on the bipartisan citizens' panel that began 90 days of work earlier this week said they will consider a multitude of plans, even subdistricts.

IN THE BULLDOG HOUSE

From left, Bev Showmaker, Valoy Randa, Richard Hayes and other Kimberly High School board members and interested community members listen as Project Manager John Bideganeta explains where he would like to move the mascot building that will decorate the lobby of the new school. The board members were given a tour of the new high school on Thursday afternoon. The new building will be open and ready for students by August when the school year begins.

Senators: EPA regs could derail Yucca plans

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS - Nevada's two U.S. senators believe the Environmental Protection Agency's groundwater radiation standard for Yucca Mountain could help derail plans for the nuclear dump.

"We didn't get everything we wanted, but we got the vast majority of what we wanted," Democrat Harry Reid said.

"This may in the future stop Yucca Mountain from being licensed, even if the site is found suitable," Republican John Ensign predicted.

But Energy Department officials from Secretary Spencer Abraham to J. Russell Dyer, Las Vegas-based Yucca Mountain Project manager, said they were confident they can meet the water quality standard.

Joseph Ziegler, the department's senior technical adviser, pointed to one analysis and said "This may in the future stop Yucca Mountain from being licensed, even if the site is found suitable."

Traveling 'Wall' elicits emotions from veterans

By Karen Terrell
Times-News correspondent

ELKO, Nev. - Strangers drawn together by the fiber of the Vietnam conflict are talking, crying and comforting each other as they quietly approach, touch and then begin reading the names etched on the 258-foot replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

People who might not otherwise say "hello" as they pass on the street make new acquaintances as they walk around the stark display. School children who probably have no idea what the display really means watch in silence as men and women with graying hair hug and then introduce themselves.

The "Wall" has stirred memories of Vietnam.

The half-size replica of the memorial is on display at City Park through Saturday. Elko is the only Nevada stop for the traveling exhibit.

Felix Ike, Te-Moak Western Shoshone Tribal chairman and veteran of the conflict, acknowledges that the exhibit might spark "bad memories" for some who served, but he added that "it is a time to start the healing."

He credits the war with helping break racial barriers prevalent in the 1960s.

"It was a brotherhood. There was no color. Race did not matter. There was only one race... the human race," Ike said. "We were still all brothers and sisters of the Great Spirit."

"Right or wrong, we did what our country asked us to do," reflected Glen Guttry as he looked at the more than 50,000 names on the Wall. He remembered seeing the body bags of fallen comrades being loaded on airplanes for transport home and realizing their families still had to be notified.

An Air Force traffic controller,

Visiting 'The Wall'

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Traveling Wall is on display at the Elko City Park through Saturday. A program honoring those who served in the conflict will begin at 8 p.m. today at the Indian Colony Gym. A Salute to American Patriotism Parade will get underway at 10 a.m. Saturday on Idaho Street, ending at noon at City Park for a Wall ceremony featuring guest speakers. A flyover of military aircraft is also scheduled for noon. The exhibit is officially open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. but organizers said no one will be barred from visiting anytime they choose.

Guttry said the exhibit brings back memories "as strong as yesterday." He recalled visiting the national Vietnam memorial in Washington D.C. and wondering "which of the names I saw in the body bags."

"We are here to honor those killed in action and those who made it back, but will never be quite the same," veteran Charlie Myers said. He also voiced frustration over the more than 1,900 POW and MIA's from the Vietnam war, saying it is time their whereabouts are acknowledged or their remains returned to their families.

Organizers of the exhibit estimate several thousand people have visited the Wall since its arrival earlier in the week.

In conjunction with the exhibit, a book of names is available to the public at the Chamber of Commerce Office in the Sherman Station nearby. The book is a listing of the names on the Wall and helps in locating an inscription on the replica, organizer John Ellison said.

There is also an exhibit of uniforms and other historical war artifacts at the Northeast Nevada Museum.

Regatta participants gear up

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - It's Idaho Regatta time again, with more than 60 teams lined up for this year's event.

The Budweiser Clydesdales will be in the June 22 parade and on site at the event Saturday, said Mark Maier, Regatta committee chairman.

"You can get up close and personal," he said.

This is the first year the Clydesdales have appeared at the annual event, which is in its 26th year.

The event will not be hindered by a shortage of water, even though Minidoka and Cassia counties have been put into emergency status because of low amounts of irrigation water.

"The reality is we always have some minimum streamflows," Maier said.

"We always have enough water to complete the course and make sure it is safe," he said.

Filer to vote on water project

By Mickey Brown Times-News correspondent

FILER - A bond election will be held Aug. 7 to determine if Filer will get a new domestic water system.

City Council members passed an ordinance Tuesday that will ask voters to help pay a portion of the cost to build and improve the town's water system. Of the total estimated $2 million-plus project, residents will have their say on a $1.2 million bond. A simple majority vote in favor is needed for passage.

Grants from state and federal agencies will help pay for the balance of the project, which includes a new well, pump house, pumps, piping and a million-gallon concrete storage tank.

Passage of the bond would increase the monthly base water rate of $14.50 to $25. Filer's last water rate increase was in 1996.

Carleen Herring of Region IV Development suggested the city hold several public meetings prior to the election date. The city has been trying to solve the water situation for more than six years and has spent a good deal of money in an attempt to save residents from paying more, Herring said. However, all attempts to provide adequate water quantity and storage have failed.

"Residents now need to become involved," she said. "A time and place where people can ask questions is an important part of the process. We are going to need their support."

Council members agreed to begin a public awareness campaign, with the first informal meeting set for June 18 in the Filer Middle School gym at 7 p.m.

The Filer Fire Station was selected as the polling place for the second bond election. Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 7.

In other council business, a motion to amend an ordinance on minimum lot size died for lack of a second. Members will meet on June 19 to work on an amendment that will be presented to the public at the regular July meeting.

The council meets again June 19 at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Castleford cleans up

By Mary Lou Potts Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - When Castleford residents decided to clean up their community, they wasted no time in filling the trash container donated by PSI Waste Systems.

By 10 a.m. on the recent cleanup day the Dumpster was full, and three businesses volunteered their bins for the overflow. More than 300 old tires were hauled to the dump, and at least four truckloads of old appliances were taken to a salvage yard for disposal.

At Wednesday's City Council meeting, Mayor Mary Pinkston and council members said they were pleased with the turnout and thankful for businesses who helped while remaining open for business.

"Everyone turned out for the cleanup; even some folks who live in the country came to town to help," City Clerk Patsy Kinyon said. "It was a fantastic day."

Anyone who did not participate in the cleanup or who does not make an effort to keep properties clean can be cited with violation of the city cleanup ordinance.

Recognition Day will become an annual event.

In other Castleford city business:

PSI Waste Systems has notified the city of an increase in rates next month. Homeowners will pay a certain amount for trash removal, bringing the monthly total to $4.70. Businesses' bills will be about 38 percent higher.

Utilities billing procedure might change.

The city uses postcards now, but a change in bill sheet would allow more space to detail the services and help customers understand the bill better, city leaders said. Postage would be higher because a sheet requires an envelope.

Some members agreed to think about the changes; make further comparisons; then discuss the matter next month.

Castleford Parks and Recreation board member Ray Fabella received the council's permission to install a drinking fountain and an outdoor water table.

The baseball fields need to be sprinkled before play, and a water tap for a garden hose would handle the problem. The recreation district would apply for a grant to pay the project cost.

Utility vows to fight water release request

BOISE (AP) - Idaho Power Co. on Thursday vowed to fight an attempt by the National Marine Fisheries Service to force the utility to release at least a third of Browlee Reservoir's water before the end of July for fish migration.

The agency tasked with restoring runs of threatened and endangered Northwest salmon and steelhead asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission last week to reopen the licensing process for the three-dam Hells Canyon hydroelectric complex on the Snake River.

"Regulators responded on Thursday with a request for detailed information."

"This is a blatant attempt to open our Hells Canyon operating license to get Idaho's water now, and then make the grab permanent when the dams are relicensed in four years," said John Prescott, Idaho Power's vice president of generation.

"NMFS wants to boost our customers' rates by taking control of the Hells Canyon project and running it for the fish needs of Idaho."

U.S. Sen. Michael Crapo said he would ask Commerce Secretary Donald Evans to intervene and have the Fisheries Service request withdrawn. The Idaho Republican said the release proposal violated state water law and "willing buyer, willing seller" provisions already agreed to by federal officials.

Brian Brown, the Fisheries Service's assistant regional administrator, wrote in a May 30 letter to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that Idaho Power had repeatedly refused to agree to earlier downstream releases from the Browlee of far less water than the 350,000 acre-feet the agency now recommends. Those refusals, and the Northwest's worsening drought, made quick action by regulators essential to saving fish listed under the Endangered Species Act, he wrote.

Brown said Idaho Power representatives had refused a Fisheries Service request in April to release 110,000 acre-feet of water to enhance the survival rate of migrating fish this spring.

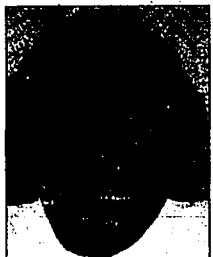

Then in May, he said, Idaho Power rejected a U.S. Bureau of Reclamation request for the release of up to 38,000 acre-feet of water in anticipation of a similar amount being released later from upstream federal reservoirs.

"These positions and the short timeframe available present substantial obstacles in our efforts to prevent the extinction and assist in the recovery of ESA-listed salmon and steelhead," Brown wrote. "Water management is an important component of NMFS's salmon recovery strategy. This is particularly true this year when anticipated streamflows approach the lowest ever measured and when available supplies to augment streamflows are low."

Rupert relay begins tonight

Annual event raises funds for the American Cancer Society

By Loraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — In the past two years the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life has been held on the Rupert Square, it has been the biggest Rupert event, next to its Fourth of July celebration.

In 1999, the first Relay was held locally, and 48 teams brought in about $60,000. About 25 teams raised about $130,000 last year, said Gail Gallegos, one of the event organizers.

With 55 teams participating this year, the Relay promises to be another big one, said organizer Tracy Haskin. "This year's goal is to raise $150,000."

Education will be the big focus of the Relay this year, Haskin said. Puffless, the Relay dragon, a 80-foot-high balloon-animal, will lead the way to the Cancer Smart Shop, where mini-workshops will be held to highlight cancer education, she said.

Each team member who attends one of the workshops will receive a Smart Shop buck. The team with the most bucks at the end of the event will receive a trophy.

"It's a fun, very unique trophy that I designed myself," said Haskin.

Ready to run

The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life 2001 begins at 6 p.m. tonight and continues until noon Saturday. Registration starts today at 3 p.m. by the Relay store, next to the Wilson building next theater. The survivor reception follows at 5 p.m., and the survivor ceremony starts at 6 p.m. The lunary ceremony is at 10 p.m. Entertainment including music, cowboy poetry, karaoke, a no-talent show and more will be held throughout the event.

Haskin, laughing.

Workshops will be held as walkers and runners make their way around the Square during the 18-hour event. Entertainment will run continuously, food will be served and games played.

While local groups like Soft Touch, the Six Pack, the Knights, The Dependents and many more keep teams entertained, raffles for quilts and other prizes will be held.

If that's not enough, there are many other ways folks can donate, including the Zion's Bank blackjack tables. The game will be played for a donation from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday.

Food is another big part of the event. Saturday morning, the Zion's team will be selling scones. The Haskin Insurance Services team theme is to "freeze out" cancer, as they are selling Popsicles.

Chili and cinnamon rolls will be served on the Square at 11:30 p.m. Friday. Figaro's Italian Kitchen will be selling pizza at 11 a.m. Saturday for a donation of $1 a slice, with money going to the Relay.

The P.I. parade and show — which has been a big hit in past years — will be from midnight to 1 a.m. Saturday. St. Alphonsus will also show its new LifeFlight helicopter at the Relay.

With all the fund-raising fun and games focused on raising money for cancer research, it would be hard to forget the real reason for the event — to honor survivors and those who have fought battles with cancer.

Kurt Woodward was one of many to whom the event is dedicated. His mother said he set a great example for many.

Judy Woodward dedicated the Traveler team's efforts to her son, who was 21 when he died from Ewing's sarcoma.

Because of her son's love for baseball, her team dedication compared the Relay to throwing cancer a curve.

"Just as many of us have been thrown a curve by cancer, our team would like to dedicate our efforts to throw cancer a curve," Woodward said. "Based loaded, bottom of the ninth, two outs, our team up by one, count's full at 3-2, winning run stands at second base."

Woodward's team, made up of Kurt's friends and family, is participating in the Relay as their way of helping win the cancer battle, she said.

New forest chief takes control of road decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forest Service chief Dale Bosworth is assuming authority over road-building and logging by a third of the national forests while the Bush administration revises a Clinton-era ban on those activities.

In a memo issued Thursday, Bosworth instructed Forest Service officials to consider long-term protection of roadless areas as they make scheduled revisions to the forests' management plans.

Bosworth will have authority over timber harvest and road construction in roadless areas until officials overseeing forests have a chance to map existing roads and get approval for possible revisions to the management plans, the memo said.

The memo says that some roadless areas become permanent wilderness, Bosworth wrote.

But one environmental group active in forest protection interpreted the memo as a go-ahead to the logging industry to begin commercial logging and road construction in the national forests. It blamed the White House.

"The president has made clear he wants to exploit these lands for more logging, mining and oil and gas drilling," said Steve Holmer, campaign coordinator for American Lands Alliance.

Administration officials are grappling with a Clinton-era ban on almost all logging and road-building on 58.5 million acres of national forests, an area more than twice the size of Ohio. Some call it the "roadless rule."

The Bush administration suspended implementation of the rule shortly after President Bush's inauguration and promised in May to revise it to allow local officials more say in decisions. Bosworth has said decisions should be on a forest-by-forest basis.

Also in May, when the Clinton rule was to have taken effect, a federal judge in Idaho blocked it. Bosworth wrote that he offered the direction in the memo because the policy is the subject of eight lawsuits in seven states.

"It is necessary for the agency to act decisively, proactively, and with common sense to ensure that our efforts to protect roadless values will not be confined to legal proceedings in courtrooms scattered throughout the country," he said.

Church scales back plans for Olympic media center

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon church is scaling back plans to sponsor a media center where unaccredited journalists could work during the 2002 Winter Games.

Instead, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will provide a news center in the downtown Joseph Smith Memorial Building "to respond to information to report on the church, its people, beliefs and history," spokesman Dale Bills said Wednesday.

With the Utah Travel Council's announcement that it will operate a news center for unaccredited journalists, "the church no longer sees a need to provide work space for journalists," Bills said.

In February, Michael Otterson, a church spokesman, said such a center would complement other media centers, including the official media hub provided by the Salt Lake Organizing Committee for 9,000 accredited journalists in the Salt Palace.

"We think these facilities will work very well in harmony with each other," Otterson said.

Spence Kinard, Utah Travel Council director, said the church's decision to scale back will not change the council's plans to provide media services.

"We think we'll have adequate facilities to take care of any media that might have planned to go the LDS media center," he said.

Kinard questioned whether the church's separate media center was necessary in the first place, saying it would be redundant.

"It's probably a more palatable situation for journalists to come to a state-run operation rather than go to a specific religion site," he said.

Church officials have said they will use the Olympics as an opportunity to tell the story of the history and culture of Mormonism.

The church's public relations department has already mailed about 3,000 information packets to sports reporters, columnists and feature writers around the world.

PHOENIX (AP) — Cattle ranchers and federal officials say Mexican gray wolves released in the wilds of Arizona and New Mexico need to be managed. The question they want to answer is, how?

During the next two months, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will be holding 11 open house meetings in the two states to collect suggestions on how to improve the 3-year-old Mexican wolf recovery program.

The program has shifted direction, from reintroduction to minimizing the endangered wolves' contact with humans, including people who have shot them, campers who feed them and rangers who have had to recapture them.

Go online for daily, weekly Idaho drought information

THE TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS — A new drought information Internet Web site created by the U.S. Geological Survey shows daily and weekly river conditions in Idaho.

the dots will display a more detailed report on river conditions for specific areas, a USGS news release said.

"In many areas of the state, river flows boosted by the rapidly melting snowpack are currently near their peak for the year, which in most cases will be substantially below normal," said

Steve Lipscomb, a USGS hydrologist in Boise. "However, flows will recede quickly once the sparse snowpack is gone. The new Web site gives you a good way to track these declining stream flows over the next several weeks."

Links to drought information also are posted. The Web address is <http://idaho.usgs.gov/drought/>.

Court blocks ski resort's expansion

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Snowbird-resort can't build a 50,000-square-foot summit lodge until a lawsuit by conservation groups is resolved, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday.

The Denver court did allow Snowbird to move ahead with plans for a second chair lift in Mineral Basin.

The new Hidden Peak lodge is on hold until the appeals court decides the merits of a suit filed by Save Our Canyons and the Wasatch Mountain Club.

"In light of the potential for irreparable harm if construction were to begin on this project — and the absence of harm to Snowbird if the construction is stayed pending appeal — we grant appellants' motion to enjoin Snowbird from commencing any ground-disturbing activity on the Hidden Peak construction project pending resolution of this appeal," the appeals court said.

The conservation groups appealed a decision by U.S. District Court Judge Dee Benson to dismiss the suit.

Snowbird spokesman Fred Rollins said the resort didn't plan to build the new summit station this year, anyhow. The new lodge will replace a tramway terminal and add a cafeteria, retail and utility space and meeting rooms.

Utah man loses bid to live tax-free

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Gauruder renounced his Utah residency in an effort to avoid state income taxes. It didn't work.

Now the chiropractor has to pay a year in jail and a $6,000 fine.

The Utah Court of Appeals on Thursday rejected Gauruder's appeal of a conviction on tax evasion arising from his failure to file tax returns from 1995 to 1997.

"Gauruder's novel tax theories do not overcome the fact that he failed to meet his tax obligations," the appeal ruling said. "His attempted renunciation of his Utah residency does not overcome the fact that he resided in Utah during the years in question."

In court papers, Gauruder argued he obtained a Utah driver's license and a state chiropractor license only because he had to make a living.

When the state presented Gauruder's bank records as evidence of income, he maintained that the documents did not prove that he had taxable income.

State law makes no allowance for "irrational and unsupported" interpretations of the tax code.

At the federal level, the Internal Revenue Service also is familiar with creative tax-evasion ideas.

One common technique is to argue that the 16th Amendment, which created the federal income tax, was not properly ratified in 1913. Courts have repeatedly rejected this claim, according to the IRS.

Others claim that filing a tax return violates their 4th and 5th Amendment rights by subjecting them to unwarranted invasions of privacy and by forcing them to incriminate themselves. Courts have universally frowned on these arguments as well.

Still others have sought to avoid taxes on religious grounds by taking a vow of poverty. Courts have found that play-legal bankruptcy, too.

As usual, the volunteer non-profit organization event is held for the benefit of tourism, he said. The Regatta weekend brings more than a $2 million economic impact, he said.

Economists have shown that those who make a complete turnaround between five to nine times in the economy," he said.

But local folks aren't the only people excited about the Regatta. Larry Hamilton is one of the out-of-town racers. He has been to the Regatta six times.

"We really enjoy the town and people from surrounding areas who support our team. We have a really good following there," Hamilton said.

Hamilton, of Morena Valley, Calif., is owner/driver of a liquid-fix super stock sprint boat that his team has been racing for eight seasons, he said.

"We have been in the top five in national points a number of seasons," Hamilton said. "We also run the very competitive super stock racing series in which we have placed second two years in a row."

He is proud of a particular racing accomplishment from the 2000 Regatta.

"Last year in Burley, we went home with the fastest super stock lap out of 19 boats to earn the cool Idaho Cup," he said.

Whittington is impressed with a particular aspect of the event.

"One important element that we appreciate is the dedication and effort by the rescue crew. Knowing that there are dedicated, competent, extremely qualified individuals out there is a great feeling," he said.

In previous years at the Idaho Regatta, Whittington's team has qualified fourth fastest out of about 18 boats and took first in the 1998 Super Stock Shootout.

Revived Ricks attends final graduation

REXBURG (AP) — Thomas E. Ricks came back to life on Wednesday for the final graduation at the two-year institution which bears his name.

Actually, it was Brent Kinghorn, Ricks College community services vice president, who took to the stage with a black bowler hat, round spectacles and a gray-grizzled beard.

"It's good to be back in Ricks," he said. "I heard, too, that they are going to make this school a four-year school."

It has been nearly a hundred years since

Ricks last cast his eyes on REXBURG, the town he founded in January 1883, and Ricks College, the largest privately owned junior college in this fall, the institution will convert to the four-year Brigham Young University-Idaho.

"It doesn't bother me, though. I was embarrassed when they named it after me in the first place," Ricks said.

History points to Ricks' modesty. When other early pioneers wanted the name Ricksburg to appear on maps of the Upper Snake, Ricks demurred. They ultimately settled on a Germanized version of his name, and REXBURG was born.

"We're very pleased," said Sherwood Ricks, a great-grandson to Thomas E. "I thought it was a nice tribute to a wonderful man and the legacy he established."

The school plans to build a new academic building and name it in Ricks' honor, along with changing the name of the college's Landscape Horticulture Demonstration Gardens to honor him.

Conservation groups sue over stream diversions

BOISE (AP) — Two environmental groups filed a federal lawsuit on Thursday alleging hundreds of stream diversions on federal land in the upper Salmon River basin violate the Endangered Species Act.

Western Watersheds Project and the Committee for Idaho's High Desert contend the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management failed to ensure that diversions for irrigation by ranchers and others do not harm salmon, steelhead or bull trout — all listed as protected "threatened" species.

Federal biologists have repeatedly warned that irrigation diversions are a major source of harm," said Jon Marvel, executive director of the Western Watersheds Project. "Fish are being sucked into ditches where they die, and they are killed when streams are dewatered, yet federal bureaucrats do nothing."

George Matejko, supervisor of the Salmon-Challis National Forest, said he had not seen the lawsuit. He declined comment until after conferring with agency attorneys.

Laird Lucas, an attorney for the environmental groups, said the Sawtooth National Forest had taken steps to comply with the Endangered Species Act's requirements on stream diversions. "Because the Salmon-Challis National Forest and the BLM were refused to take action, we are forced to file suit."

GIVING EACH OTHER SOME SPACE

Burgandy Marley, 7, takes a big bite out of her donut while her brother, Talon, 9, sits on the opposite end of the step Saturday in Pocatello. The two were at the ribbon-cutting ceremony for the newest Pocatello Neighborhood Housing Association house, which was built completely by students.

Park officials move stranded grizzly bear

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Park officials say a yearling grizzly stranded on Dot Island has been relocated to the west shore of Yellowstone Lake.

Visitors reported seeing a grizzly on the shore of the island May 26, and three days later park staff went to investigate. Officials said they saw the animal briefly in the brush, and returned the next day to set up a scent lure station in hopes of attracting an adult.

They found no fresh evidence of an adult, so they caught the young bear in a culvert trap on Saturday. It was then hauled to the western shore and released.

The grizzly was small for its age, probably because of inadequate nutrition on the island, officials said. A den was found on the island, and officials believe the bears crossed on the ice in December and remained on the island for the winter.

Judge hears smoke case

SPOKANE (AP) — A federal judge will decide whether the Americans With Disabilities Act can be used to protect people suffering from smoke from field burning.

U.S. District Judge Robert Whaley said after hearing arguments in the case Wednesday that he will issue a written ruling on whether a Spokane clean air group's lawsuit against the state Department of Ecology will proceed to trial in late July.

Save Our Summers sued Ecology in October 1999, contending the agency's efforts to curb smoke from field stubble burning were inadequate. The group contends field smoke discriminates against people with lung diseases.

The eight plaintiffs include children from Pullman and Post Falls, Idaho, who claim smoke-filled skies prevent them from using public facilities, such as schools and parks.

The state disagrees. Assistant Attorney General Leslie Seffern argued that the federal act cannot force the state to make air cleaner for sick people. "The plaintiffs are not entitled to a particular level of air quality," he said.

SO's attorney Karen Lindplidt said the state's own Clean Air Act commits the state to protect sensitive people, and that Ecology isn't doing that in communities where field stubble is burned in summer and fall.

The Washington Association of Wheat Growers is not a party to the case, but is monitoring it closely, spokeswoman Gretchen Borck said.

Contracts, weather tame California power prices

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's power buyers have locked in enough power in long-term contracts to help bring wholesale electricity prices down to near-normal levels, state officials said Thursday.

Helping cut prices are better-than-expected conservation efforts by Californians, more power plants returning to service and more scrutiny of electrical generators by several investigations.

All have converged to cut spot-market power prices to below $95 per megawatt hour and as low as $20 during the off-peak times. The state paid an average of $284 per megawatt hour during the first quarter of the year. Duke Energy said last week it charged as much as $3,880 per megawatt hour in January.

While things have started look-

"It's way too early to... say that California has turned a corner. There's just not enough power available, and if some of the factors bringing prices down go away, Californians could find themselves in a situation where they have no lights on at all."

Richard Wheatley, Reliant Energy spokesman

ing better, no one is saying this means an end to the state's power crisis. However, it will lessen the state's exposure to the ultrahigh prices for last-minute power purchases, said Ray Hart, deputy director of the Department of Water Resources.

This is the first time that the state has been able to turn down electricity since January, when it began purchasing power for the customers of three financially shaky utilities — Pacific Gas and Electric Co., San Diego Gas and Electric Co. and Southern California Edison.

Still, said Richard Wheatley, spokesman for Reliant Energy, "it's way too early to predict a trend and say that California has turned a corner. There's just not enough power available and if some of the factors bringing prices down go away, Californians could find themselves in a situation where they have no lights on at all."

Power plant operators could have lowered prices in the face of a proposed windfall profits tax, growing support for zoning generating facilities and the creation of a state public power authority, said Harvey Rosenfield, executive director of the Foundation for Consumer and Taxpayer Rights.

"They may have wanted to lower prices so their buddies in Washington, D.C., would say 'Look, Harvey, it doesn't need price caps,'" he said.

The state still needs the temporary price caps that California Gov. Gray Davis has asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to implement, said Nancy McFadden, a Davis adviser.

The recent lull in the crisis is "good news, but our battle's not over," she said.

Broken pipe spills 10,000 gallons of sewage near Yellowstone Lake

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — About 10,000 gallons of raw sewage leaked from a broken pipe and may have flowed into a trout spawning stream near Yellowstone Lake.

A break in the line serving the Lake Village employee housing area was discovered early Tuesday morning, officials said.

The sewage had soaked into the ground, come to the surface and emptied into a ditch that flows into the stream.

Workers discovered the rupture during a routine check. The pipe, placed in the late 1960s or early 1970s, is susceptible to breakage when settling or shifting of ground occurs, which officials believe was the cause.

Park staff replaced the pipe with one less prone to breakage and cleaned the area.

No visitor services were affected, officials said.

The incident was reported to the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality.

On May 25, during a visit to Yellowstone, Interior Secretary Gale Norton spoke of the overburdened sewage system at the park as an example of the maintenance backlog the Bush administration is attempting to address.

Kempthorne fills court vacancy

BOISE (AP) — Jeff Brudie, a Lewiston attorney and vice president of Regence BlueShield of Idaho, was chosen over two magistrates on Thursday to fill the vacancy left by last week's retirement of 2nd District Judge Ron Schilling.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne made the appointment after days of criticism over delays in appointing a replacement for Schilling, who gave notice of his departure from the bench seven months ago.

Other candidates for the judgeship were Nez Perce County Magistrates Gregory Kahlertsch and Gary Elliott. All three were interviewed for the position several weeks ago.

Before working as general counsel for Lewiston-based Regence BlueShield, Brudie was a partner in a Lewiston law firm and worked as the primary public defender for Nez Perce County. He also is serving his second three-year term as one of 14 attorneys on the Professional Conduct

Board of the Idaho State Bar.

"After 10 years as a public defender and his work in the private sector, Jeff has realized that he wishes to return to the courtroom as district court judge," Kempthorne said. "His background will serve us all well."

Brudie received civil engineering and law degrees from the University of Idaho. He and his wife, Julie, have three children.

The 2nd Judicial District includes Latah, Clearwater, Nez Perce, Lewis and Idaho counties.

State will spray moths to protect Palouse firs

POTLATCH (AP) — The Idaho Department of Lands plans a chemical assault on Douglas fir tussock moths, which have reached their highest levels in 20 years in north-central Idaho.

Agency entomologist Ladd Livingston said the moth population causes defoliation in the firs, making them more vulnerable to other insects and diseases. Over time, it increases fire hazard in forests.

The areas most affected are near Moscow Mountain and north to Plummer.

Spraying could begin as early as Saturday on more than 70,000 acres, agency spokesman Russell Eck said.

Egg masses were sent to laboratories and hatched over the winter to determine levels of a naturally occurring virus that kills the caterpillars. The presence of the virus can eliminate the need for spraying, but levels were not high enough to make it necessary.

After tussock moths establish themselves in an area and build their numbers, high population levels exist for one to four years, according to a report from the British Columbia Ministry of Forests.

The moth infestation is in its third year, and Ladd said the problem will persist for at least one more year if not treated. Most populations eventually deteriorate due to parasites, predators, diseases and starvation.

A contractor will spray by helicopter using global positioning devices.

Trial for Thanksgiving slaying goes on the slate for September

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Michael A. Williams will stand trial on a second-degree murder charge in September for last Thanksgiving's stabbing death of another man in the mobile home park where both lived.

Williams, 39, remained in the Bonneville County Jail on Wednesday in lieu of $50,000 bond after pleading innocent on Wednesday to killing Richard A. Walker.

Walker died of a single stab wound to the abdomen near his mobile home.

Prosecutors allege Williams stabbed Walker after he saw breath coming from behind a tree. Williams alerted deputies to the body on Thanksgiving and claimed to have discovered Williams while on a walk, prosecutors said.

Investigators said Williams later acknowledged he might have killed Walker, and the murder weapon was found inside the body cavity of a turkey in Williams' mobile home.

Foster family found for standoff children

Cody Nielsen leaves 1st District Court in Logan, Utah, last month after a hearing on a first degree felony charge of rape.

SANDPOINT (AP) — A suitable foster family has been found for six McGuckin children, who were released from a Sandpoint hospital, child welfare officials say.

The children have met with the foster parents and approve of the idea of moving in with their family on a temporary basis," said Michelle Britton of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The family, whose identity is being withheld, agreed to accept all six children and took them in Wednesday night, she said.

Bonner County sheriff's deputies arrested the children's widowed mother on May 29 on a warrant alleging child neglect and tried to take the children into custody the same day, believing they were malnourished, cold and living in unhealthy conditions in their rural Idaho home.

But the children holed up for five days, keeping officials at bay with their pack of semi-wild dogs. They finally agreed to surrender last Saturday after they are assured their mother was OK, they would be allowed to stay together and their dogs would not be harmed.

Sheriff Phil Jarvis said "all but a couple" of the family's dogs — which had tracked deputies' neighbors and livestock — have been captured and taken to a shelter in Kootenai County.

About a dozen families had initially volunteered to take the children, but most were found not to have enough space and experience for such a large undertaking, Britton said.

"Few families have the room and ability to care for six children," Britton said.

The problems placing the McGuckin kids illustrate shortages throughout the state's foster care system, Britton said. There are just over 1,000 licensed foster-care families in Idaho, and about 1,300 kids in the system, she said.

Meanwhile, mother JoAnn McGuckin, 46, remains in the Bonner County Jail, even though she is free to leave. She is refusing to leave the jail because of conditions that would prevent her from taking custody of her children.

Prosecutor Phil Robinson said the six children are physically fine, and not malnourished as previously believed. Officials had previously retracted statements that the family home did not have electricity.

The children are Kathryn, 16; Benjamin, 15; Mary, 13; James, 11; Frederick, 9; and Jane, 8. Their father, Michael McGuckin, died May 12 at the age of 61.

Court papers: Teen's discipline for videotape led to family killings

COLVILLE, Wash. (AP) — A confrontation over a teen's secret videotaping of his sister in the shower led to the killing of four family members, court documents allege.

Search warrant documents say that authorities believe 16-year-old William Lembecke killed his parents, sister and little brother in December after he was disciplined for secretly videotaping the 18-year-old girl in the shower.

A hearing is scheduled Wednesday on motions by Lembecke's lawyers to have a confession and other evidence thrown out because he suffered "diminished mental capacity" when he gave statements to officers and authorized a search of his home in this northeast Washington town.

Lembecke originally told authorities he shot his sister, parents and 11-year-old brother Dec. 23 because he was angry that his father had yelled at him for not helping to gather firewood.

The search warrant documents indicate he didn't tell Stevens County sheriff's detectives about the videotape, but admitted having sex with his sister's body after killing her.

Lembecke is charged with four counts of aggravated first-degree murder in the deaths of his parents, Robert H. Lembecke, 49, and Diana L. Lembecke, 43; sister Jolene A. Lembecke; and brother Wesley J. Lembecke.

Investigators following Lembecke's directions found the bodies on Dec. 30, buried in a snowbank along a road about two miles from their home. Jolene Lembecke's body was nude from the waist down.

Trial is scheduled Aug. 20, with a jury from Okanogan County.

If convicted, Lembecke could spend the rest of his life in prison. The death penalty is not an option because he is younger than 18.

Stevens County sheriff's Detective Loren Erdman said in a search warrant affidavit that Jolene Lembecke told her boyfriend and her parents about finding an illicit recording in the family's new video camera Dec. 21.

The boyfriend, Dylan Simpkins, said Jolene Lembecke showed her parents a video of her in the shower and a second video showing William Lembecke masturbating while watching a duplicate of the first video.

She erased the video after showing it to her parents, Simpkins told detectives. He didn't know if a duplicate existed.

Deputy Stevens County Prosecutor David Bruneau said officers found the camera and some videotapes, but court rules prohibit him from disclosing their contents.

Simpkins told detectives that Jolene Lembecke was so upset about the videotape that she stayed overnight at Simpkins' home in Chewelah.

When she returned home from work the next evening, William Lembecke had the opportunity to kill his family members, the documents say.

When detectives went to the home Dec. 30, they found William Lembecke, who told them his family had gone to California to visit a sick relative. Lembecke allowed deputies into the house and broke down in tears when they found what appeared to be a blood stain showing through fresh paint in the kitchen ceiling. He then provided directions on where to find the bodies, investigators say.

Crime lab surveys samples from home

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Investigators have removed suspected blood samples from a refrigerator and a tooth in an envelope from the home of a man suspected in the death of a 15-year-old Cache County girl.

Affidavits released Wednesday list more than 60 items police took from Cody Nielsen's home and car.

The items include traces of hair from a bedroom, suspected blood samples from a refrigerator and freezer, a tile scraper with hair on it, a tooth and a tooth extractor.

Investigators are waiting on test results from a crime lab on those samples, said Cache County Attorney Scott Wyatt.

So far, none of the items has been verified as belonging to Autry, who disappeared last June.

Nielsen, 28, hasn't been charged in the death of Trisha Autry. However, he faces charges in two rape cases.

Last month, investigators searched Nielsen's property after Autry's jawbone was found buried at his former workplace.

"He's the prime suspect," Wyatt said. "The sheriff's office has done an enormous amount of investigation work; there's a few things they're following up on."

Investigators have received numerous calls from residents who think they might have information about the crime, he said.

"We're trying to be as cautious as possible and make sure we haven't missed anything," Wyatt said.

Nielsen remains in jail, without bail, on the rape charges. "So we've got a little breathing room there," Wyatt said.

Officials identify body as that of Jackson teen-ager

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Lincoln County Wyo. officials have identified a body found in Idaho's Pallasades Reservoir Sunday as a Jackson teen missing for nearly two years.

The body of Patrick Gildea, 16, was found floating west of Indian Creek. Gildea has been missing since being pushed into the Snake River near the Lunch Counter rapids south of Jackson on July 3, 1999.

Andrew P. Smith of Jackson was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in January 2000 for Gildea's death and sentenced to three to five years in prison.

Gildea and a friend were throwing fish at Smith's raft as he was going through the rapids. Smith then pushed both boys into the water. The other teen made it to shore, but Gildea never resurfaced.

Smith later said in court documents that he did not mean to hurt the boys, but just wanted to embarrass them.

Lincoln County Sheriff's Sgt. Tim Malik said search teams had been searching for Gildea's body again just a few weeks ago.

"He just turned up in a place where no one expected him," he said.

Patrick would have graduated Friday from high school, with a little luck, said his mother, Kathy Gildea-Patrick. Had attention deficit disorder, and school was a challenge for him.

At graduation, his 150 classmates paid tribute to Patrick. And after graduation, his friends presented Patrick's mother with his 2001 tassel. Several days later, the county coroner presented Kathy with a tennis shoe. Not the one that had been kicked off in his struggle to stay afloat, but the other one.

Blue Cross, hospital reach billing deal

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — At long last, nearly 18 months after Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center and Blue Cross of Idaho have come to a partial accord on billing for patients with traditional Blue Cross coverage.

The hospital and health-care insurer announced they have signed an agreement covering emergency-based inpatient admissions. The agreement, retroactive to April 15, means Blue Cross customers with traditional coverage will not be billed for emergency-based inpatient charges beyond their policies' limits.

"We wanted to make sure our customers-in-emergency situations were protected against the additional, and sometimes significant, charges that can occur when no contractual protection exists," Tracy Andrus, Blue Cross' senior vice president of marketing and provider services, said on Wednesday.

Blue Cross policyholder who goes to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center now receives a reimbursement check from the insurer rather than the payments being made directly to the hospital. The policyholder pays any difference between the amount of reimbursement check and the hospital's actual charges.

Under the new agreement for emergency room-based admissions, charges that exceed the agreed-upon allowances — previously charged to patients directly by the hospital — will be written off as contractual adjustments.

The agreement is intended to help Blue Cross pay 18 percent of people brought to the emergency room who are admitted to the hospital, spokeswoman Amy Dirks-Stevens said.

"In an emergency, you don't have a chance to make detailed decisions about where you want to get your health care," she said.

Blue Cross broke off contract negotiations with the hospital early last year, claiming its prices were too high. It began steering its 8,300 customers with traditional insurance to other hospitals in eastern Idaho and Utah by offering to pay a higher share of their medical costs.

Disney workers win right to wear clean underwear

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — After almost two months at the negotiating table, the workers who play characters such as Mickey Mouse and Cinderella at Walt Disney World have won an important concession: clean undergarments.

Under a tentative contract between Disney and the Teamsters union, the workers will be assigned individual undergarments, which they can take home each night to clean themselves instead of relying on Disney laundries.

Some employees who portray Disney characters have complained that the undergarments they wear with costumes are not sufficiently cleaned when they pick up a washing item for their shift. They now will be able to take the items home and wash them themselves. This Mickey Mouse is onboard the Disney Wonder cruise ship with the pop group Dream.

Some workers had complained about getting public lice and scabies. "Things have been passed around," said Gary Steverson, a stilt walker at Animal Kingdom. "I know I don't want to share my tights and I don't want to share my underwear."

Many of the characters have to wear Disney-issued jock straps, tights or bike shorts underneath their costumes because regular undergarments bunch up and are noticeable. Each night, they turn in the undergarments with the rest of their costume before going home. They then pick up a different set the next day.

Disney officials had told the workers that they use hot water to clean the undergarments, but they apparently weren't doing so, said Steverson, a shop steward with the Teamsters, which represents workers who portray such figures as Goofy, Pluto, Minnie Mouse and Donald Duck.

Some workers complained about receiving undergarments that were stained or smelly. Steverson said there have been three cases of costumed workers at the Magic Kingdom getting public lice or scabies during the past two years.

Disney spokeswoman Rena Callahan refused to comment on the new contract provisions because "we don't control our negotiations with the media, only at the negotiating table."

Other concessions the costumed characters won include more time to put on their costumes and a weather clause that includes air pollution as a factor in determining how long cos-umed characters have to be outside.

Recently, smoke from a nearby brush fire has irritated singers' vocal cords and made it difficult for stilt walkers to breathe, employees said.

"People are feeling nauseous, they have itchy eyes, are dizzy

Aunts private-eye scheme could end up in public eye

DEAR ABBY: I recently visited my "Aunt Selma" in North Carolina. I used to consider her a wonderful person until I found out what she has been up to.

One of Aunt Selma's neighbors pays her to follow her husband and a neighbor lady. (I'll call her Nona.) The wife thinks that Nona and her husband are having an affair. My aunt follows them occasionally, and afterward she calls the man's wife and lies to her. She makes up things she thinks the wife wants to hear.

When I asked Aunt Selma why she does this, she said she isn't going to give up good money to tell this woman that there's nothing between the husband and the neighbor!

I used to think Aunt Selma was a respectable person. Now I see her as a money-grubber. She constantly lies to this woman about things her husband and Nona are doing, when in fact Nona is in the house alone watching television. I have a feeling Aunt Selma is going to get hurt one day for making up all those stories about the husband and her neighbor.

I know the people involved. Should I tell them what's going on?

DEAR ABBY

that we haven't wisely managed our finances, planned ahead or invested wisely - which we have. We are active people, younger than our age in many ways.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. I'd be grateful if you would print this for the world to see.

—OFFENDED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR OFFENDED: You're welcome.

Those who assume that folks in their mid-60s who continue working do so because it's necessary may be not only barking up the wrong tree, but also relying on outdated information. In recognition of the fact that our population is living longer and in better health than a generation ago, there are now financial incentives for people to remain in the workplace until age 70. Also, it shouldn't be lost on anyone that people who are successful in their careers and enjoy what they are doing are often unwilling to "hang it up" simply because they've reached a "magic number."

When people tell me they are planning to retire, my first question is always, "Retire to what?" It's vital to stay mentally and physically active - or old age WILL set in! That's why I have always considered "retirement" a dirty word.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please put out the word to insensitive people that just because you reach a certain age, it doesn't mean you have to retire?

My husband enjoys his job, but is always hounded about when he's going to retire. Because people are 64 or 65 doesn't mean they have to sit down and do nothing. I consider it an insult to be constantly asked when we're going to stop. It's as if they are saying we are old.

I know too many people who sit around waiting to die. Just because a time was set, years ago, for drawing Social Security, that's no reason people have to stop doing what they enjoy. I don't understand why people ask such personal questions. It's a real turn-off. It's as if they're implying

Witness confirms killer in Nepal royalty massacre

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A survivor gave the first eyewitness account of the massacre of Nepal's royal family Thursday, describing how the intoxicated crown prince gunned down his father, then shot relatives after relatives, some repeatedly and at close range.

Dr. Rajiv Raj Shahi said he rushed to the side of King Birendra, trying to staunch his bleeding wounds. Crown Prince Dipendra fatally shot his parents, brother and sister and five other relatives before turning the gun on himself.

"It was the then-Crown Prince Dipendra, who carried out the murders," Shahi said. "He was just a murderer."

Shahi — the son-in-law of Prince Dhirendra, a brother of the slain king — was the first witness to publicly describe the slaughter Friday night, which has stunned this impoverished Himalayan nation.

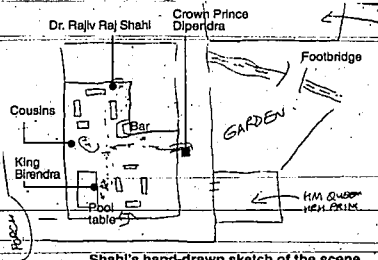

The slaying sparked riots in the streets of the capital Monday amid disbelief among some Nepalese that the crown prince committed the massacre. Their skepticism that the truth would ever be told was fueled when Birendra's unpopular successor, his brother King Gyanendra, initially said the shooting was "accidental."

In his account, Shahi praised Gyanendra's son, Paras Shah, for his actions during the slaughter, saying that without him there would have been more casualties. But he gave no specifics on Paras' role.

Prince Paras now likely to become crown prince, but is widely despised among Nepalese for his reported wild lifestyle and involvement in at least three hit-and-run incidents. The resentment has rubbed off on Gyanendra — so much so that many have speculated Paras or

Nepal's dynasty ravaged

Dr. Rajiv Raj Shahi, son-in-law of the brother of Nepal's slain king, was present at the massacre that took place last week and confirms that then-Crown Prince Dipendra carried out the murders. At a news briefing Thursday, Shahi sketched out the scene and described how the intoxicated crown prince had been escorted out of a large hall where the family was holding a party. The crown prince returned with an assault rifle and shot relative after relative. Ten royal family members were killed, including the crown prince.

his father were somehow behind the mass killings.

Earlier second-hand accounts made no mention of Paras rescuing anyone. A brother of Paras' mother said witnesses had told him that the prince pleaded to Dipendra for his life, then escaped when he was distracted. Otherwise, Shahi's description generally mirrored earlier accounts of how a drunken Dipendra, thrown out of a palace gathering after misbehaving, returned to the party with an assault rifle and began shooting, Shahi said the shooting lasted 1.5 minutes.

During the party, the 29-year-old Dipendra appeared "really drunk" and began to "stammer and quarrel," said Shahi. So Shahi, Paras and Dipendra's younger brother Prince Nirajan escorted him upstairs to his bedroom.

Shahi, whose head was shaven in a traditional Hindu sign of mourning, narrated the sequence of the slaughter, using a marker and a sketch of the palace, as he spoke to journalists at the hospital where he was visiting four wounded royals.

"About 9 p.m. I heard a burst of gunfire. I thought it was somebody playing a prank," Shahi recounted. "There was shouting and I heard someone say, 'His Majesty has been shot.'"

Shahi, a military doctor, said he ran to where the king had fallen, near a billiards table at the room's southern end.

"I took off my coat and pressed it against his neck where he was bleeding," Shahi said. "(The king) said, 'I have been shot in the stomach also.'"

Shahi said his father-in-law, Dhirendra, tried to stop the crown prince. "He was shot at point-blank range on his chest," Shahi said. Dhirendra died in the hospital Monday.

While the crown prince moved between the rooms, shooting more people, the king's daughter, Princess Shruti, and sister, Princess Shobhi, ran to the king's side.

Dipendra shot the two princesses and his father again, Shahi said. "I jumped to the side to save myself." Shruti was killed, while Shobhi was wounded.

The crown prince then turned to the other end of the hall where Paras Shah was standing with some female cousins, Shahi said.

Rwanda tribunal acquits first genocide suspect

ARUSHA, Tanzania (AP) — A U.N. genocide tribunal found a former Rwandan mayor innocent on Thursday, the first acquittal in the court's seven-year history.

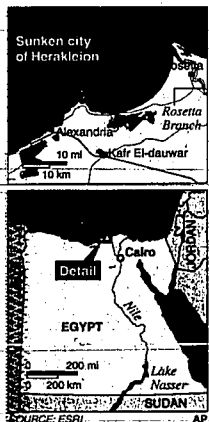

After an 18-month trial, Ignace Bagilishema, the former mayor of Mabaraza, was found innocent of charges that he helped organize the massacre of Tutsis in Rwanda's western Kibuye province in 1994.

Bagilishema, 46, sat stunned when the verdict was read by Presiding Judge-Erik-Mose of Norway, then tears began running down his face. Bagilishema did not speak to reporters following the hearing.

The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda is responsible for prosecuting the ring-leaders of the state-sponsored genocide of more than 500,000 people in Rwanda, most of them Tutsis and politically moderate Hutus. It has convicted eight people of genocide.

In a 341-page judgment, Mose said that the prosecution had failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Bagilishema had committed the alleged atrocities in Kibuye. He wrote that there were many contradictions in the testimony of the witnesses "and some witnesses were not reliable."

The judge said that in all eight counts of genocide, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to genocide and crimes against humanity, there was not enough evidence to show Bagilishema was directly involved. Bagilishema's French lawyer, Francois Roux, appeared on the verge of tears. "I'm happy with the decision of the court."

Researchers show items from port city

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — An earthquake 1,200 years ago sank the ancient port city of Herakleion cradling to the Mediterranean floor. On Thursday, archaeologists unveiled some of its hidden treasures, including a giant stone tablet that pinpointed the port city's location.

The tablet, or stela, was one of two — and the other, researchers said, was among the largest ever found. The smaller block, almost black in color and about a third the size of the giant stela, stood supported by a frame.

The two stone tablets were displayed Thursday on a barge moored in Abu Qir Bay, east of modern Alexandria's downtown. On the same barge were three giant statues — one of Hapi, the god of the Nile flood, and the others of a pharaoh and his queen, both unidentified.

"Just after a couple of dives, we discovered so many objects. The site is rich and amazing," said diver Eric Smith, of Key West, Fla.

The excavation proves that Herakleion was an important pharaonic harbor city and entrance to ancient Egypt, said French archaeologist Franck Goddio, the leader of the international team excavating the underwater site. "We have learned so much in just one year."

Blair likely headed for another term as Britain's prime minister

Tony Blair

LONDON (AP) — Britons cast ballots Thursday in schools, village halls and even a fish-and-chip shop, in a vote widely expected to yield Prime Minister Tony Blair's Labor Party its second landslide win.

Blair's likely election triumph, though, was clouded by prospects for a low voter turnout, together with a plummeting pound.

As ballots boxes filled across Britain, the sterling touched a 15-year low — read as a reflection of worries about the country eventually joining the single European currency.

The government leans toward closer European union, but has insisted it would not take Britain into the common currency — the euro — without referendum approval. William Hague's Conservatives had pinned their election campaign to anti-euro sentiment, but appeared headed for a crushing defeat.

Final pre-vote opinion surveys pushed Labor's lead to 15 points, suggesting the party could equal or perhaps better its majority in the 659-seat House of Commons.

Determined not to allow complacency to erode its margin, Labor campaigned as if every seat was at risk, imploring voters to give the 48-year-old prime minister another term.

"I think Blair deserves another chance — he's only getting started," said voter Charlie Jones. In some constituencies, though, early voting patterns pointed to the possibility of a turnout sharply lower than the traditional 70 percent-plus voter participation.

A smiling Blair, without a jacket despite a nip in the air, walked with his wife and teen-age children through a field strewn with buttercups to vote near his home in Sedgfield, northeast England. Hague, unfazed by a joke about his ridicule, managed a smile about his negative image as he and his wife ffion prepared to vote in his native Yorkshire.

"I've even brought my polling card, in case you didn't know who we were," Hague, 40, quipped to election workers.

The Conservatives, crushed in Labor's 1997 landslide after 18 years in power, are fighting to regain some of their standing. They campaigned against an "arrogant" governing party they said was in need of a lesson at the ballot box.

Through a combination of efforts by a dedicated core of volunteers - five to 10 of them this time of year, working up to 40 hours a week each - and serious amateur scholarship, the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum has made some major additions to its collection of agrarian artifacts and applied to the Bureau of Land Management to add 344 acres to its site near the junction of Interstate 84 and Idaho Highway 93.

budget for this year of nearly $30,000. But the substance of the museum is donated and restored treasures, and they'll all be on display Saturday at the 17th annual Live History Day.

Original barracks from the Minidoka Relocation Camp, the Canyonside Church, a prove-up shack, a log cabin, corn crib and granaries and a windmill will be available for inspection, but a major appeal of the event for the crowds it attracts the second Saturday in June is "live" history.

Hands-on demonstrations of folkways fast disappearing from general knowledge is at the heart of Live History Day. Saturday's attractions will include old-time demonstrations of farming with horses, spinning, weaving, butter-making and cream-separating, corn-shelling, horseshoeing and blacksmithing, flintknapping, apple cider-pressing, saddle-making and willow whistling.

"We tried to get our saddle-maker again, but he had to go to a wedding," said Ralph Peters, a former Jerome mayor and state legislator and one of IFARM's most dedicated volunteers.

There will also be a variety of children's activities, including old-fashioned games, a 4-H Club petting zoo and kiddie train rides.

Vintage farm equipment will be on view, of course, including tractors, threshers, mowers, hay-

Yee-haw: Outlaw Day takes over Richfield on Saturday

The Times-News

RICHFIELD - There are bigger, glossier, more sophisticated community celebrations around the Magic Valley, but none more authentic than Outlaw Day. Horses and cattle and the folks who wrangle them are very much the focus of this single-day celebration on the second Saturday in June.

From noon to about 4:30 p.m. in the town's rodeo arena, there are events ranging from amateur mudbog races (starts at 4, with a $30 entry fee) to husband-and-wife cow milking.

It's the 46th year that Richfield has celebrated thus. Proceedings begin at 7 Saturday morning with breakfast served up by the local quick response unit in the Richfield High School cafeteria until 9 a.m. Admission is by donation.

At 10:30, there's a parade from the city park around town and back to the park.

Then action shifts to the rodeo arena at 12:30 p.m., with bullriding and calf roping. Horse racing - six different events - starts at 1. Following the horse racing comes everything else, ranging from kids' stick-horse racing to girls' and ladies' pole bending.

After the arena events, Outlaw Day adjourns to the American Legion Hall for a dance from 9 p.m. to 1 p.m. Shoshone's Johnny Urrutia - Johnny U - will provide the music, and admission is by donation.

Actress accuses producers of adding nude scenes

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Linda Fiorentino says the producers of a low-budget biographical film project about painter Georgia O'Keefe added explicit nude scenes to the script without her approval.

The accusation surfaced in a cross-complaint the actress filed Wednesday in response to a lawsuit from the German studio Art Oko Film, producers of "Till the End of Time."

The independent studio sued Fiorentino in April for $5 million, alleging she halted production and sunk the film by repeatedly failing to appear on the set.

Fiorentino claims the filmmakers altered the original script to include "unnecessary, prurient sex scenes emphasizing full frontal nudity" that she refused to perform.

Attorneys for Art Oko film declined comment on the cross-complaint.

Both claims were filed in Los Angeles Superior Court.

Fiorentino's cross complaint also blamed the failure of the production on the studio.

"My support and my dedication to 'Till the End of Time' never wavered," she said. "I spent nearly 16 months trying to get the film made."

"Till the End of Time" was scheduled to begin filming last summer with Fiorentino as O'Keefe and Ben Kingsley as photographer Alfred Stieglitz.

The cross-complaint seeks damages for defamation and breach of contract. Fiorentino is perhaps best known for her movies "Dogma," "Men in Black" and "The Last Seduction."

PBS announces revamped lineup

NEW YORK (AP) - Calling it its first major prime-time restructuring in more than a quarter-century, PBS on Thursday announced a new Fall 2001 lineup that will add two new weekly series and shift old favorites.

Newcomer "Antiques Roadshow UK" (a British cousin to the ongoing "Antiques Roadshow") launches on Thursday at 8 p.m. (ET) with veteran documentary series "Frontline" moving from Tuesdays to Thursday at 9 p.m.

At 9 p.m. Friday, after the firmly rooted "Washington Week in Review" and "Wall Street Week," PBS has slotted a new 13-part series, "Life 360." It tells stories focused on a single theme, through documentary, performance and personal narrative. "Nightline" correspondent Michel Martin will be the host.

"ExxonMobil Masterpiece Theatre," which for 30 years has brought British drama to American audiences, relocates from Sundays to Monday at 9 p.m.

Most of the schedule takes effect the week of Oct. 1. But two earlier, limited-run series are also part of the mix: 'Africa,' an eight-episode portrait of the relationship between the continent's human history and its human history, begins Sept. 9. 'Evolution,' also in eight parts, explores the power of evolutionary theory. It airs Sept. 24-27.

And come fall, "American Masters," which profiles important figures in artistic and cultural life, will air for the first time as a weekly series.

It will yield its Sunday-at-9 slot to "American Experience" in January. (A special fall

"American Experience" will feature the long-awaited final four hours of "New York," the epic Eric Burns documentary whose first 10 hours premiered in November 1999.)

Reality fare includes "Local News," a five-part series offering a behind-the-scenes look inside a local TV newscast in Charlotte, N.C.

Most of the schedule takes effect the week of October 1. But two earlier, limited-run series are also part of the mix: "Africa," an eight-episode portrait of the relationship between the continent's environment and its human history, begins Sept. 9.

"Evolution," also in eight parts, explores the power of evolutionary theory. It airs Sept. 24-27.

The revamped lineup is based on a scheduling experiment undertaken last fall at seven PBS outlets. The innovations are meant to "increase audience flow from program to program, and attract new viewers and members," said PBS president Pat Mitchell.

'Swordfish,' 'Evolution' to hit theaters this week

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, the Associated Press and Knight-Ridder-Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Along Came A Spider'

There are both mysteries and surprises in this reasonably diverting, albeit a little improbable thriller, but the biggest mystery of all is hardly a surprise: How does star Morgan Freeman manage to give a master class in acting every time he appears on screen? The film tries its hardest to outsmart us. In general outline and rhythm it's fairly standard. With Monica Potter. Directed by Lee Tamahori. (1:43. R, for violence and language).

'Angel Eyes'

In a drama less metaphysical than it pretends to be, Jennifer Lopez is a Chicago cop whose life is saved by soulful mystery man James Caviezel. When the film reveals itself as just another romantic meditation on destiny it's written and directed by the same people who brought you 'Message in a Bottle' - it plods right down to date. Rated R; sexual situations, violence, language. 1 hour, 44 minutes.

'The Animal'

'Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo's' Rob Schneider returns in a raunchy-clever summer comedy as a nerdy small-town police department clerk who regains consciousness after a car wreck a veritable superman with a wide array of amazing abilities and weird traits. What gives is

Big box office

- Lost weekend's top-grossing movies:
1. 'Pearl Harbor,' Disney.
  2. 'Shrek,' DreamWorks.
  3. 'The Animal,' Sony.
  4. 'Moulin Rouge,' Fox.
  5. 'What's the Worst That Could Happen?,' MGM.
- Source: Exhibitor Relations Co.

lots of earthy laughs. With 'Survivor's' Colleen Haskell, John C. McGinley and Ed Asner. (1:23. PG-13 for some crude and sexual humor.)

'Bridget Jones's Diary'

Renee Zellweger is a stitch in this uneven adaptation of Helen Fielding's bestseller about the London career girl longing for romantic attachment. Hugh Grant is snarkily funny as her boss and Colin Firth aloofly earnest as the barrister her parents want her to date. R (language and sexual situations)

'Crocodile Dundee In Los Angeles'

It is a croc in more ways than one. 'Crocodile Dundee in Los Angeles,' the third chapter in the series about the amiable Australian outdoorsman played by Paul Hogan, has all the laughs of a feature-length advert for the Subaru Outback. Not coincidentally, the vehicle with a prominent role in the movie is the same model endorsed by actor/pitchman Hogan on TV commercials. PG (profanity, brief violence)

'Driven'

Sylvester Stallone takes the back seat in this racing drama, which never says the words 'Formula One' but is definitely formula. He's a past-bis-prime driver hired by team owner Burt Reynolds to watch the back, on- and off-track, of potential superstar Kip Pardue, whose worst enemy is his own self-doubt. Soap opera subplots are scattered between the racing sequences, which make liberal use of computer-generated imagery to depict spectacular crashes. Locals will want to experience the climate, set (if not entirely filmed) on Belle Isle. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 57 minutes.

'Evolution'

This would be funny if 'Ghostbusters' didn't already exist. It would be startling if no one ever made the 'Alien' series, visually imaginative if there weren't already two 'Jurassic Park' movies. Instead, 'Evolution' is just derivative; director and co-producer Ivan Reitman steals from several sources, but mostly from himself. The enemy this time. Please see MOVIES, Page C7

 which is kinda cute - is an alien life form that threatens to take over the world, and a group of bumbling scientists must stop it. David Duchovny plays a goofy version of his 'X-Files' character. Orlando Jones creates most of the laughs with his terrific timing. And as an ex epidemiologist, Julianne Moore deserves better. PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, and for sci-fiction. 105 minutes.

'Joe Dirt'
 David Spade stars as a white trash simpson in a rather hard-boiled satirical comedy. A noble deluge of ill-fortune to find fame, happiness and a beautiful babe. Another gross-out comedy, and not a particularly funny one either. 1 hr. 33 PG-13 (bathroom humor, sexual innuendo, animal humiliation)

'A Knight's Tale'
 Scored to classic rock anthems by Queen and Thin Lizzy, this page-to-chainmail romantic adventure-comedy about a peasant (Ben Affleck) who becomes a 14th-Century jousting legend should be ridiculous, and it is: ridiculously entertaining. Writer-director Brian Koppelman (who wrote 'L.A. Confidential') gives the handsome lead a people's sport of rowdy comic sidekicks (Mark Addy, Alan Tudyk and Paul Bettany as Geoffrey Chaucer), a dark knight adversary (Rufus Sewell), and a noblewoman (Shannyn Sossamon) who win along with the big tournament. And against all odds, the silly strategy triumphs. It's more fun than a Renaissance Fair, with less problem parking. Rated PG-13; nudity, language, violence.

'Memento'
 Christopher Nolan's exceptional new film, a haunting, nervy thriller about a man who can't remember anything at all. More than a film of ideas, however, it's a provocatively structured and brilliantly executed film noir, an intricate, inventive use of cinema's possibilities that pushes what can be done on screen in an unusual direction. With Guy Pearce, Carrie-Anne Moss and Joe Pantoliano. (145; R; violence, language and some drug content)

'Moulin Rouge'
 A fever dream of musical spectacle by director Baz Luhrmann, this dizzying visual and melodramatic is operatic by intention and excessive by design. This is a flabbergasting piece of work, nakedly out there, willing to risk looking foolish because it is so in love with the head-turning possibilities of the film medium. And, inevitably, foolishly, is what it sometimes looks. Although it showcases excellent work from costars Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor as singing star-crossed lovers in turn-of-the-century Paris, it's also a film that can't escape the defects of its virtues. (2:06, PG-13 for sexual content)

'The Mummy Returns'
 The inescapable sequel to the 1999 hit brings back all the principals and heaps on more of everything. The squabbling adventurers Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz are now married, with a son as curious about dusty old forbidden chambers as they are, and that crumbling antiquity of a villain Imhotep (Arnold Vosloo) has a rival in the Scorpion King (wrestler The Rock). Director-writer Stephen Sommers and a legion of computer-generated-imagery-artists conjure endless armies of monsters and swarms of creepy bugs and build pyramids and castles that never were, but it's finally all more exhausting than it is exhilarating. Where do movies like this go when the effects are no longer special? Rated PG-13; violence. 2 hours, 10 minutes.

'Pearl Harbor'
 The team of producer Jerry Bruckheimer and director Michael Bay try to apply the fireball physics of their summer action hits like 'Armageddon' to the day that will live in infamy, but if you remember this 'Pearl Harbor,' it will be for fireballs, not for feelings. Divided into three parts, it tells a story of two best friends (Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) who love each other, flying and the same woman (Kate Beckinsale). The midsection is devoted to the attack, which manages to be both historically accurate and exciting in an artificial, action-movie way. The last section provides a triumphant ending via the daring raid by Gen. Doolittle (Alec Baldwin) on Tokyo, but the film just leaves us disappointed, not only in its lack of depth and context, but in the state of the Hollywood blockbuster. Rated PG-13; violence. 3 hours, 3 minutes.

'Shrek'
 The first great American movie of 2001 is a computer-animated satire that sends up the Disney tradition even as it honors it. Its story of an ugly, curmudgeonly green ogre (the voice of Mike Myers) who is blackmailed into rescuing a damsel in distress (Cameron Diaz) will delight and engage children while entertaining adults to no end. The gags are clever and hilarious, with Eddie Murphy giving his best performance in years as the voice of a literal smart ass - a motor-mouthed talking donkey. The animation is gorgeous, but it's the writing that makes this an instant classic in the course of fracturing fairy tales. 'Shrek' becomes one. Rated PG; language, some innuendo. 1 hour, 29 minutes.

'Someone Like You'
 Ben Franklin had it right: Men and melons are hard to know. Nevertheless, in this refreshingly funny romantic comedy starring Ashley Judd, Hugh Jackman and Greg Kinnear, reassures with the wisdom that inside every cynic is a romantic struggling to get out.

PG-13 (sexual candor and language)

'Spy Kids'
 An engaging premise (two preteens have to rescue spy parents Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino from the bad guys) is made into a winning family film that's lively, imaginative and possessed of a playful sense of humor. Not what you'd expect from the maker of 'Marsupilami' and 'From Dusk Till Dawn,' but writer-director Robert Rodriguez is apparently something of a big kid at heart. (1:28, PG, for action sequences)

'Swordfish'
 John Travolta notches another bad movie on his belt. Travolta plays a wacko with a plan to steal billions from a federal drug fund with the help of a reluctant computer hacker (Hugh Jackman), Halle Berry and Don Cheadle opposite John Malkovich. The high-tech heist flick star. Please see FILMS, Page C8

Films

doesn't sink anywhere near as low as last year's "Barfield Earth," but at least that self-bomb had some good unintentional laughs. "Swordfish" seems to take itself seriously; with director Dominic Sena ("Gone in 60 Seconds") apparently convinced he was making a crisp, smart, suspenseful thriller. After a fairly original opening though, it fades to a standard-issue action thriller, then to implausibility, finally to imbecility.

'Tailor of Panama'
A spiffy entertainment, taken from the John Le Carré novel but very much in the Graham Greene mode, in which a dissolute British spy (Pierre Brosnan, sending up his James Bond work) and a suave tailor with a secret (an excellent Geoffrey Rush) do all kinds of damage passing on exaggerated secrets. Directed by John Boorman with typical intelligence and verve. (R, for strong sexuality, language and some violence).

'What's the Worst That Can Happen?'
This David and Goliath crime comedy pits professional thief

Martin Lawrence against crooked media tycoon Danny DeVito. The stars and many others are amusing but the impact is diminished by an overly labored plot and a relentless amorality that is less than sly in tone. With John Leguizamo, George Headley. (PG-13, for language and sexual content).

IHSAA renames high school classifications

BOISE—The Idaho High School Activities Association is changing the way it labels its various classifications for participation in sports.

The new classifications were approved unanimously on Wednesday by the association's board of directors. The divisions are, from the largest to the smallest schools, 5A, 4A, 3A, 2A and 1A.

None of the 139 high schools in Idaho are changing their level of competition, or the opponents they play. Under the old system schools, from largest to smallest, were labeled A-1 Division I, A-1 Division II, A-2, A-3 and A-4. The new classifications go into effect in the fall.

“For us, at our level, we're very happy with the decision because it is going to eliminate so much confusion between the Division I and Division II level,” Boise School District activities director Jim Carberry said after Wednesday's decision. “It's simple and clear so the parents aren't confused.”

Declo athletic director Jay Darrington, a Region IV state representative, said he also liked the change.

“Our principal, (Mike) Matthews kind of suggested it,” he said. “I think it was good and I haven't talked to anyone who doesn't like it.”

The new system is similar to ones used in Oregon, Utah and Washington.

The Activities Association board also voted on Wednesday to eliminate the A-4 slowpitch softball state tournament. Most teams in the state play fastpitch.

Bruneau's Rimrock High School claimed the A-4 state title in May. The board also moved the state tennis tournament up a week from the other state tournaments (baseball, softball and track) next year because of a scheduling conflict.

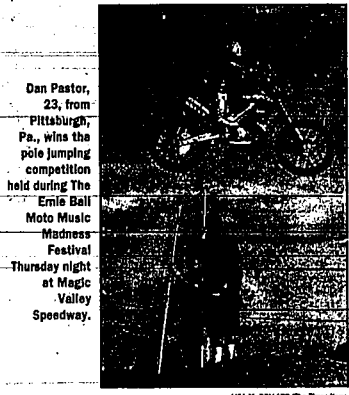

The 29 schools in the Magic and Wood River valleys affected by the change:

- (From A-1, Division I to the new 5A)
- Twin Falls, Minico (will play football at 4A)
- (From A-1, Division II to the new 4A)
- Burley, Jerome (From A-2 to the new 3A)
- Buhl, Declo, Filer, Gooding, Kimberly, Wood River.
- (From A-3 to the new 2A)
- Glenns Ferry, Valley, Wendell (From A-4 to the new 1A)
- Ellis, Camas, Canyon, Carey, Castleford, Community School (Ketchum), Dietrich, Hagerman, Hansen, ISDB, Magic, Valley Christian, Murtaugh, Oakley, Raft River, Richfield, Shoshone and Twin Falls Christian.

Motorecyclists hit the skies

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Dan Pastor made it look easy. Tommy Clowers made it look spectacular. But Trevor Vines took the mid-air motorcycle contortionist act to a new level.

And the estimated crowd of 1,812 responded, choosing Vines as the winner of the freestyle motocross event at the third annual Extreme Freestyle Motocross and Ernie Ball Music Madness show at Magic Valley Speedway Thursday night.

Vines, a late entry after missing a flight into Twin Falls from Colorado Springs, Colo., was the only rider to land any of several tricks attempted during a two-minute span without his hands on the handle bars. For Clowers, the 2000 world freestyle champion and X Games gold medalist in the step-up competition, a close second in the applause-determined competition was just fine.

“I'm just coming back from a collar bone injury and I've only been riding a couple weeks,” Clowers said. “It felt pretty good. There's a couple of things I want to work on but I still have a lot of time until the X Games.”

The show, a mix of music and motorcycles, was split into three competitions, including the freestyle competition, a step-up competition, which simulates motorcycle pole vaulting, and a whip competition in which the riders attempt to violently turn their bodies back-and-forth in mid-air to create a whipping effect with the bike.

Reigning world freestyle champ Pastor won both the step-up and the whip competition but didn't have enough to complete the trifecta.

Pastor cleared heights close to 15-feet in the step-up and nearly completed a 360 degree turn before spinning his motorcycle back the other way in the whip.

Caleb Wyatt contemplated attempting a back flip in the step-up, but decided against it after having trouble with his bike. The flip would have been only the second ever attempted.

“I wanted to do it here,” Wyatt said. “But my back is pretty much ripped in half right now. I'm riding Vines' bike and I don't think I want to try doing it here and end up in a wheelchair. I will do it though, some time. That's a promise.”

There were only two close calls during the three-hour event and both involved the same rider. Shawn Highland narrowly avoided disaster during an intermission stunt show. The

DEFIANT AVS FORCE GAME 7

New Jersey's Bobby Holik knocks over Colorado goaltender Patrick Roy during Game 6 of the Stanley Cup Finals in East Rutherford, N.J. Thursday.

Footo, Roy lead Colorado to 4-0 shutout

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—Ray Bourque's guarantee was as good as Adam Foote's goal—the Colorado Avalanche are going home for Game 7 of the Stanley Cup finals.

Foote had a goal and two assists and Patrick Roy, never straying an inch from the net, turned aside a flurry of early New Jersey shots as the Avalanche prevented the Devils from clinching the cup with a series-tying 4-0 victory Thursday night.

Just as Bourque predicted, the Avalanche rebounded from their worst game—a 4-1 loss at home Monday in Game 5—with a determined, dominating effort to force the first Game 7 in the finals since the New York Rangers beat the Vancouver Canucks in 1994 and only the fourth since 1967.

“We played our game, and we didn't press early,” said Foote, who scored the fifth goal of the series by a Colorado defenseman—to none by the Devils' defensemen. “We outskated them, we played how we wanted to play. Now, we

Capriati beats Hingis again

The Associated Press

PARIS—Jennifer Capriati defeated top-seeded Martina Hingis in the semifinals of the French Open Thursday to move within reach of a second consecutive Grand Slam title.

Capriati, seeded fourth, overwhelmed Hingis 6-4, 6-3 with her powerful groundstrokes. The match ended when Hingis sent her opponent long.

Capriati plays Belgium's Kim Clijsters in the final Saturday.

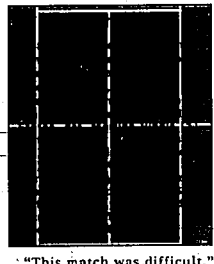

In men's semifinals today, Gustavo Kuerten faces Spaniard Juan Carlos Ferrero in a rematch of their semifinal thriller a year ago, while No. 10 Sebastian Grosjean of France against Spain's Alex Corretja, seeded 13th, in their first head-to-head.

“It's like I've been reincarnated,” said Capriati, who last played in the semifinals at Roland Garros in 1990. “That year she became the youngest Grand Slam finalist at 14, but never got past the quarterfinals at the French Open in the next decade.”

“This match was difficult,” Capriati said. “I knew she wanted to win her first Roland Garros, and I wanted to win mine too.”

Hingis, 20, has won every other Grand Slam title at least once, but never has won the French Open, despite reaching the final twice.

Boxer Laila Ali flexes her arms after weighing in at 160 and 3/4 pounds Thursday.

Boxing legends' daughters Ali, Frazier will square off

The Associated Press

VERONA, N.Y.—The months of taunting are over. Madame Butterfly and Sister Smoke are set to go.

“I'm ready to get this over with,” Laila Ali said as she prepared to meet Jacqui Frazier-Lyde in an eight-round bout tonight at Turning Stone Casino. “I can't wait. She's been doing a lot of talking about how I'm going to be running, so I'm just hoping that when I start busting her up side the head that she has another plan.”

“She's avoided me for so long,” Frazier-Lyde countered. “Laila's having nightmares of me. I'm not going to have a problem nailing Laila Ali's head. I know you're going to run, but I'm going to track you down.”

Seems like old times as the daughters of former heavyweight champions Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier rekindle what once was boxing's most bitter rivalry. It's been 30 years since “Smokin' Joe Frazier won a brutal 15-round decision over Ali in “The Fight,” the first of their

Belmont Stakes could come down to Point Given-Monarchs showdown

NEW YORK (AP) — The showdown between Kentucky Derby winner Monarchs and Preakness winner Point Given is what's expected in the Belmont Stakes on Saturday.

John Ward, Monarchs' trainer, fears a different scenario. "To me we're both set up to get beat," Ward said Thursday.

The last Kentucky Derby winner to win the 1.5-mile Belmont was Thunder Gulch, Point Given's sire, in 1995. The last Preakness winner to win the final race of the Triple Crown was Tabasco Cat in 1994.

The quality of the other seven 3-year-olds could get in the way of a Monarchs-Point Given race for the wire.

"This is one of the better ones," said D. Wayne Lukas, who has won the Belmont four times and has Buckle Down Ben in this field. "This is a good bunch. The winner that comes out of this race is a legitimate Belmont winner."

Monarchs looked sensational in winning the Florida Derby by 4.5 lengths, but then finished second in the Wood Memorial. In a performance Ward called a perfect prep for the 1.25-mile Kentucky Derby.

It was Monarchs, making a big move from 10th place with a half-mile remaining, won the Derby by 4.75 lengths in 1:59 4-5, second only to Secretariat's 1:59 2-5 in 127 runnings of the race.

In the 1 1/2-mile Preakness, Monarchs finished sixth. "I watched the Preakness again the other night and I think our mistake was taking him back," Ward said, explaining that the colt should have been closer to the early pace.

Point Given opened his 3-year-old campaign by winning the Sun Felipe, then won the Santa Anita Derby. The favorite in the Kentucky Derby, the huge chestnut colt was second, only a head behind stablemate Congaree with a quarter-mile remaining, then faded to finish fifth.

In the Preakness he made a move on the final turn and won by 2 1/2 lengths.

"Gary had a plan in his head how he was going to ride in the Derby," Baffert said. "In the Preakness he let the horse decide on his own."

The rest of the Belmont field has good credentials.

There are Invisible Ink, second in the Kentucky Derby; Preakness runner-up A.P. Valiente; Thunder Bolt, fourth in the Derby; and Dollar Bill, fourth in the Preakness. Baffert is holding out Congaree, third in both the Derby and Preakness.

Also in the Belmont are Baho Star, the front-running winner of the Arkansas Derby who suffered heat exhaustion while running 14th in the Preakness; Baffert's third of four starts in England, one of them on dirt, and Duceo Down Ben, who won the Grade I Laurel Futurity last year.

No better place to be for CWS teams

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — For the eight teams in the College World Series, Omaha is a college baseball paradise.

Some — like Nebraska and Tulane — are experiencing the event for the first time, while others — like Stanford, Southern California and Miami — have been here many times. They all agree there's no place they'd rather be.

"Something I hear at practice from our players is the word 'Omaha' at least once every day," Miami coach Jim Morris said. "It's something our players talk about and think about from Day 1."

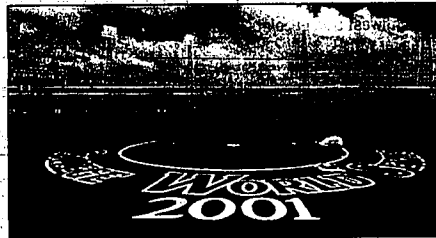

The road to the College World Series has gotten increasingly difficult, with teams having to win a double-elimination regional and best-of-three super regional to get to Omaha.

"This is the pinnacle," Southern California coach Mike Gillespie said. "It's been our experience that it's hard to get here. This is not a given. This is not easy. This is not to be taken for granted. This is special."

The event will also have a special fan, as President Bush will throw out the first pitch in today's College World Series opener between Stanford (46-16) and Tulane (55-11). Opening ceremonies and the home run challenge were Thursday night.

Tulane, the nation's winningest team, spoiled retiring Louisiana State coach Skip Bertman's bid for a sixth national title in 11 years by beating the Tigers in the super regionals. Now, the Green Wave are having their own Omaha experience.

"To have the opportunity to advance and get to the College

Mike Brown puts the finishing touches on the 2001 College World Series logo at Rosenblatt Stadium Wednesday, in Omaha, Neb.

College World Series

World Series is a thrill for me, but a feeling of euphoria for our fans," Tulane coach Rick Jones said.

Stanford won four elimination games during the first two rounds to get to the College World Series. The Cardinal lost their top three starting pitchers and have no seniors on their roster, making this year's trip unexpected — even to coach Mark Marquess.

"This is probably the biggest surprise that we've ended up in Omaha," Marquess said. "It's the youngest team I've ever had in my 25 years at Stanford."

The second game tonight pits local favorite Nebraska (50-14), also in the CWS for the first time, against Cal State-Fullerton (46-16).

Huskies fans have firmly made their presence felt. A sea of red

T-shirts, hats and shorts dominated the large ticket line outside Rosenblatt Stadium on Thursday. Nebraska's campus in Lincoln is located about 50 miles from Omaha, and the Huskers are in the College World Series for the first time in the program's history.

"We get to take this road to Omaha a lot, but it's usually to catch a plane to head south to play," Nebraska coach Dave Van Horn said.

The Titans, the tournament's top seed, started the season 38-8 but have gone 38-8 since.

In Saturday's games, Southern California (44-17) plays Georgia (47-20) and Miami (49-12) takes on Tennessee (46-18).

Bank Repossessed Cars to be Sold Directly to the Public

Burley Dealership Disposing of 251 Bank Repos and Other Used Vehicles for Only $59 Then Start Making Payments*

BURLEY, ID - Bank Repossessed cars and trucks are among the most hunted-for bargains in the automotive industry. Unfortunately for John Q. Public, they're also the hardest to come by.

Banks often unload repossessed vehicles to car dealers at rock-bottom prices — allowing dealers to re-sell them for retail value. But bargain-seekers can take heart: This week, Goode Motors is going to change that.

This Wednesday, June 6th through Saturday, June 9th, Goode Motors will offer 251 bank repossessed, lease return and other used vehicles for thousands below normal values, and pass the savings on to their customers.

"These vehicles have been acquired at incredible savings from banks (repos), auctions, and other sources," Garth Williams of Goode Motors said. "We have been asked to eliminate this inventory immediately — regardless of loss of profit. And if that means selling these vehicles for up to thousands below normal values, then that's what we'll do."

Every bank repossessed and other pre-owned vehicle will be available for just a $59 acquisition fee* then start making payments.

"This is the opportunity Idaho bargain hunters have been waiting for! Customers won't see savings like this again all year."
 GARTH WILLIAMS, Goode Motors

"It's that simple," said Mr. Williams. "To make these bargains even easier, we'll mark the payments right on the windshield. Just pick your vehicle and pick your payment. You won't find a faster, easier way to get a great deal on a pre-owned vehicle."

Almost every type of vehicle and price range will be available, from luxury 4x4s to basic transportation. Many are still under warranty. "With our pre-owned inventory near an all-time high, chances are we have what you're looking for in stock and ready to drive home," Mr. Williams added.

Extra sales and finance staff will be on hand to assure customers prompt, quality service and the best finance terms possible. Mr. Williams said, "We'll have over $4 million in financing available for this event, so chances are we can arrange financing for just about anyone who is employed, regardless of past credit history."

Trade-ins will be accepted, and customers are encouraged to bring their title or payment book to expedite delivery.

"The opportunity Idaho bargain hunters have been waiting for happens this Wednesday through Saturday at Goode Motors. Every bank repo and other used vehicle is just $59 then start making payments." Customers won't see savings like this again all year," said Mr. Williams.

After the $59 SuperSale ends at 6:00 p.m. on Saturday, June 9th, Goode Motors will send many of these vehicles to auction. Any questions can be directed to (208) 878-5611 or 1-800-590-FORD. Goode Motors is located at 1096 E. Main St. Burley.

*LIMIT 2 VEHICLES PER HOUSEHOLD, PLEASE. With approved credit. $59 plus tax, title & fees. Down payment may be required for credit approval. See dealer for details. Example: '96 Chevy Cavalier, Sale Price $371.58. $79/mo for 48 mos. @ 10.2% APR. $59 acquisition fee, $0 down payment for a total of $59 down plus tax. Total amount financed $3121.58 plus tax. ## Robinson aims to be first female NASCAR driver since 1989

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) - No one will be watching the weather more than Shawna Robinson will be this weekend.

Robinson is vying to become the first woman to start a Winston Cup race since 1989. But if rain washes out today's qualifying—and there's a chance for showers in the area—she will be eliminated from the Kmart 400.

"Our biggest fear right now is rain," Robinson said. "If it rains out qualifying, we don't get a chance again."

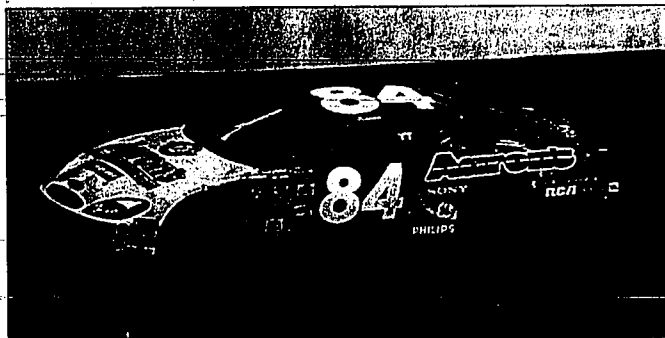

Robinson is making her second attempt this season to drive in stock car racing's top series. Her first try, in April at California Speedway, ended on her qualifying lap when a part broke on the rear of her Ford Taurus.

With no owner points to get her in the field—the same situation she would face here—Robinson went home in tears. The five weeks spent waiting for her next chance were agony.

"I don't think words could ever describe how disappointed we all were at California. I felt like I wanted to curl up and go away," Robinson said. "Let me tell you, it's been a long, long time since California until this week."

Now Robinson will try to make the 43-car field at Michigan International Speedway, providing the weather and her luck holds up.

Should she make Sunday's race, she'll become the first woman to take the green flag since Patty Moise in 1989.

Shawna Robinson, driving for owner Michael Kranefuss, tests her car at Michigan International Speedway in Brooklyn, Mich. May 26. Robinson, who races in the ARCA series, will attempt to make her first career NASCAR Winston Cup start at MIS for the Kmart 400 on Saturday.

But Robinson, who will try to race in four more Winston Cup events this year before team owner Michael Kranefuss enters her in a full schedule next season, isn't trying to do this just to follow Moise into the record books.

"We want to race, that's what we are here for," she said. "Nobody on this team, especially me, is going out there just to go out there and I'm not crawling into a Winston Cup car to make history or to be the first at something."

Robinson has been racing cars all her life and advanced all the way to the Busch Series, where she was runner-up for rookie of the year in 1992 and won a pole in Atlanta in 1994.

But she took a five-year break to start a family and another career, as owner of a home-decorating business.

She was still around the track during that time—her husband in an engine builder for Dale Earnhardt Jr.—and eventually decided to return to racing.

"I want to be something in this sport," she said. "I'm racing because I'm competitive, because I want to be a factor and because this is what I've wanted to do for such a long, long time."

Notes on the economy

Magic Valley report

Who needs help?

Generally, many more businesses than a year ago. Local employers in May placed more newspaper ads looking for workers than they did in year earlier. Last month, employers in the Times-News classified advertising section bought 1,707 employment ads. That was a significant 15.2 percent more than the 1,482 such ads of May 2000 and also topped the 1,184 of May 1992. That pulled year-to-date 2001's employment ads 5.7 percent ahead of the total ads placed in the first five months of 2000.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Cold weather limits

Wal-Mart sales growth

CHICAGO - Wal-Mart Stores Inc. said sales at stores open at least a year rose 3.8 percent in May, slightly more than half the increase a year earlier, as unusually cool weather limited sales in some areas.

Same-store sales increased 7.4 percent in May, 2000.

Sales of items such as grills, barbecue sets, sporting goods, pool toys and air conditioners were weak, the company said, particularly in areas with cooler weather such as the Midwest and the Northeast. Growth of at least 10 percent in food sales helped offset the weakness.

Total sales for the four weeks ended June 1 rose 12.5 percent to $16.44 billion. Sales at Wal-Mart's discount stores rose 11.5 percent to $10.39 billion. Sales at Sam's Club, a chain of stores that sell goods in wholesale quantities, rose 7.7 percent to $2.23 billion.

Same-store sales rose 3.6 percent at Wal-Mart discount stores and 4.8 percent at Sam's Clubs. The retailer has said that if same-store sales remain in the 3 to 5 percent range, earnings growth in the second half of the year should return to double-digit percentages.

Analysts surveyed by First Call/Thomson Financial are predicting the company will earn $1.54 per share for the full fiscal year. A profit of that size would reflect earnings growth of 8.5 percent compared with last year.

For the second quarter, Wal-Mart said it expects profit growth to be similar to the 3.3 percent growth seen in the first quarter. Analysts are expecting the company to earn 38 cents a share, which is 5.6 percent above year-earlier levels.

Wells Fargo to write off $1 billion in losses

SAN FRANCISCO - San Francisco's Wells Fargo bank disclosed Wednesday a $1 billion loss on its venture capital portfolio in one of a string of developments that indicate the fallout in the venture world continues.

Wells Fargo's write-down stood out for its size. The fourth-largest U.S. bank - which has bank branches throughout the Magic Valley - said it expects to take a $1.3 billion second-quarter charge. $1.05 billion of which results from write-downs due to losses in public and private stock in the bank's venture capital portfolio, according to the company.

Though the company did not give many details, it listed two examples of the write-offs. First, it invested in Cerent, which was later acquired in November 1999 by Cisco Systems, the largest maker of computer-networking equipment. Wells Fargo's shares in Cerent became Cisco shares, which have fallen 66 percent in a year.

Second, Wells Fargo invested in Siara Systems, which was acquired by Redback Networks in March. Siara's stock, a maker of telephone and fiber-optic networking equipment, have fallen 85 percent during the same period.

Ross Karl, Wells Fargo's chief financial officer, said in a statement the company doesn't see much "sense" in holding the positions in Cisco or Redback any longer. "In hindsight, we did not liquidate them quickly enough," he said.

Spud prices improve but remain depressed

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS - Prices to Idaho potato growers have more than tripled in the past month, bringing some optimism to an industry that has been in the cellar for more than a year.

But the average price as the marketing year for the 2000 crop winds down is still well below the break-even level, and the good prices are only going to growers with high-quality spuds.

"The market seems to be moving higher every day," said Bruce Huffaker of Idaho Falls, editor of the North American Potato Market News.

He reported the latest average price at $3.32 for 100 pounds. A month ago, it was $1. On average, it costs a grower $4 to $5 to grow 100 pounds of potatoes. One reason prices are high is because good spuds have become hard to find as stocks of last year's harvest dwindle.

"There's a lot of quality issues with the potatoes that are left," Huffaker said. "Because there was a long growing season in 2000, a lot of potatoes in storage have been bruised. Potato warehouses have had to sort extra hard to find premium ones for the cartons shipped nationwide."

But Huffaker said he expected the growers with good potatoes in storage could see higher prices between now and July.

There have been a few other factors at work as well. Wisconsin and Colorado finished shipping their fall 2000 crops earlier than expected, and russet potato acreage in Kern County, Calif., is down by half, Huffaker said.

He also credited potato diversion programs this winter and spring with taking a significant number of potatoes off the market. The Potato Growers of Idaho formed the Potato Management Co., which eliminated millions of pounds from the supply line. A U.S. Department of Agriculture program announced in March took out even more.

John Thompson, Potato Growers executive director, said he did not expect to see demand outstrip supply any time this year.

New computer game appeals to a finicky audience: Cats

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Amy is an exuberant adolescent whose pastimes run to roughhousing with her siblings, napping away the afternoon and, yes, playing computer games.

But Amy's gaming tastes are decidedly unusual. Instead of space aliens with guns, she prefers a monitor brimming with darling mice and buzzing houseflies. That's because Amy is a cat.

Perched on a desk in the executive offices of Manhattan's Humane Society, Amy, a 3-month-old tiger-striped tabby, sits with her nose an inch from the monitor.

As a squeaky white mouse cuts diagonally across the screen, Amy springs into action, her front paws batting at the virtual rodent.

A few moments later, the young feline turns to sniff the keyboard. Then she paws at a computer cable. The wounded mouse, like many a forsaken low-tech cat toy, is forgotten.

The game, titled CyberPounce, appears to be the first commercial software program written for a non-human audience.

For Los Angeles-based game designer Matt Wolf, 32, the unpredictability of finicky cats like Amy - whose bursts of frenzied playing last until their attention is drawn elsewhere - posed the biggest hurdle in creating the program. "Cats are very independent animals, very hard to predict," said Wolf. "You can dangle a T-bone steak in front of them and they may or may not respond."

Wolf, who helped design several Sega video games, including Virtua Fighter and Daytona, now runs a start-up game software company called Double Twenty Productions. CyberPounce, a $14.95 CD-ROM compilation of 11 virtual kitty toys, is the one-year-old company's first offering.

The program caters directly to feline prey instincts.

Its characters include a frog that zaps its tongue at a buzzing fly, a flapping bird and a bubble-blowing fish. The software can be played by the cat alone - in screen-saver mode - or used as an interactive game between a cat and its owner.

Wolf, who doesn't own a cat, hasn't plumbed the oddities of feline behavior enough to be able to guarantee that the software will bring out the playful kitten in any cat. But he tried. During the design process, Wolf hired an animal behaviorist to gain insights.

He learned that cats can recognize activity on a television screen or computer monitor, but most programming designed for humans doesn't titillate them. Cats fixate on an object's color and movement patterns rather than its shape, he said.

"It's the way something moves. Diagonals are a big deal for cats. Starts and stops. Random movement is the key."

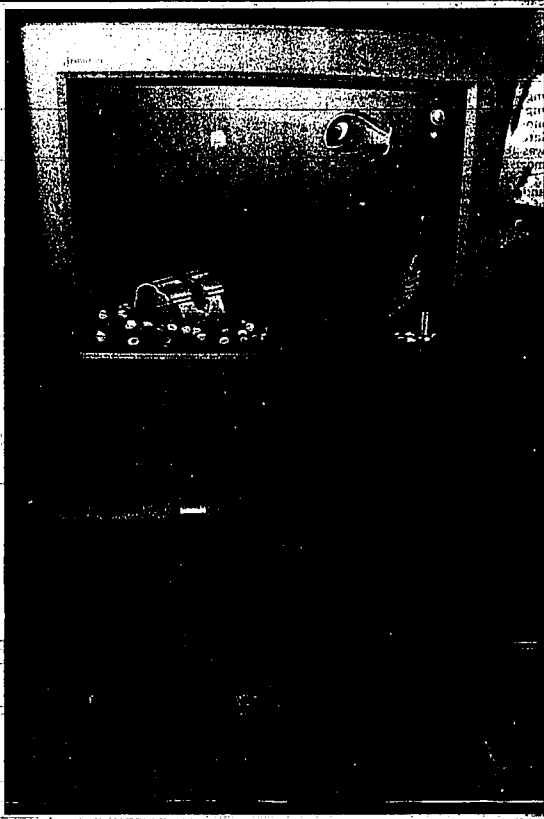

Wolf used random movement-generating software of the kind he employed while crafting games for a less discriminating audience: young males. Wolf and his programmers paired cat-enticing characters with random movements and added lots of squeaky, chirpy sounds.

After testing the game on 100 or so cats, Wolf claims CyberPounce has coaxed cats into uninterrupted play for as long as 10 minutes.

Blockbuster video retailer roars back by changing with market

Knight Ridder News Service

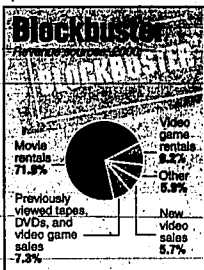

DALLAS - Pardon Blockbuster, the retailer synonymous with video rental, if it's tiring of the numerous obituaries that have been written about its business.

Back in the early '90s, people were betting that pay-per-view would put video stores out of business. And just last year, critics were saying that video-on-demand homes delivered directly into homes would soon make video stores a thing of the past. Studios, start-ups, cable companies, even Blockbuster started funneling money to develop the format.

At the same time, Blockbuster - which has a Twin Falls store - pushed forward with a makeover of its huge chain of stores, devoting more space to DVDs and to selling satellite TV systems.

Fast forward to May 2001. Exuberance for video on demand has tempered as Blockbuster and others found that the technology would take longer than expected to perfect for the mass market. Meanwhile, Blockbuster's initiatives have paid off in increased market share, higher profits and a rebound in its stock price, which had sagged after the company went public in mid-1999.

The company continues to position itself to be a player in video on demand, however far off, believing that its relationships with movie studios and knowledge of consumer habits put it in the middle of any equation for delivering the next "Titanic" at any hour to consumers' homes.

In short, Blockbuster is trying to sell Wall Street on a story that has no end in sight. Like the thrillers on its shelves, the company keeps coming up with new twists to its plot.

"We will find a way to continue evolving our retail base to maximize our profitability," John Antioche, the company chairman and chief executive, says confidently.

Barry Sosnick, a research analyst with Fehnestock & Co. in New York, believes that Blockbuster is destined to have a long future because of its ability to aggregate customers and track what they like in movies.

"Blockbuster's role is not going to be diminished by changes in technology, but is going to be enhanced by changes in technology," he said. In the long run, "it becomes a one-on-one marketing game and that database of customer behavior, all of a sudden, becomes of incredible value."

Blockbuster - founded in Dallas in 1985 - certainly has assets it can build on. The company has 7,700 video rental stores worldwide - including about 200 in the United States - a well-known brand name, high-traffic locations, and a customer database that should be the envy of any retailer. Every day, more than 3 million people visit a Blockbuster store, and the typical customer visits 14 times a year.

In 2000, Blockbuster raised its revenue to nearly $5 billion, up from nearly $4.5 billion the previous year. Sales at stores open more than one year were up 5.6 percent.

Earnings - excluding one-time charges, and before interest, tax, depreciation and amortization - rose to $53.8 million from $51.4 million in 1999.

The company's share of the movie rental industry rose to 36 percent in 2000, up from 32 percent. And Blockbuster expects its share to reach 40 percent by the end of 2001.

The improvement continued in this year's first quarter: net income rose to $4.7 million, up from a loss of $4.1 million in the same quarter last year.

Nation's largest retailers report disappointing sales

Combined wire reports

NEW YORK - After experiencing a brief recovery in April, most of the nation's largest retailers slipped back in May, hurt by a choppy economy and rising energy prices.

Some discount retailers, including Wal-Mart Stores Inc., and a few apparel stores such as Talbots Inc., posted decent results on Thursday. Still, many other merchants - most notably department stores as well as apparel chains like Gap Inc. - languished amid a weakening consumer spending.

Store executives noted they were hurt in part by unseasonably cool weather, but they also emphasized that the results clearly showed that consumers, who have been spending tentatively for the past year, continue to pull back.

The scenario prompted several retailers to reduce earnings and sales projections.

Federated Department Stores, whose May sales were below expectations, warned that its second quarter may fall below Wall Street projections unless the weak revenue trend is reversed. The retailer said it is not yet reducing its earnings estimates for the year, though it said "the goal may be difficult to achieve."

Even Target Corp., usually a strong performer, saw its sales fall below projections. "It's disappointing across the board," said Michael P. Niemira, vice president of the Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi Ltd., who tracks retailers. He estimated

Stocks end high on semiconductor sector's outlook

NEW YORK (AP) - A brighter earnings outlook from the semiconductor sector gave Wall Street some long-awaited good news Thursday, helping the market advance despite lingering doubts about the economy.

Semiconductor rose $3.07 to $31.01. Semiconductor makers, whose chips are used in computer processors and telecommunications networking equipment, were also boosted by a healthy revenue outlook from the Semiconductor Industry Association, which said it forecasts sales rising 20.5 percent next year.

AROUND THE NATION

Officials use DNA to convict hunter

KANE, Pa. - Wildlife officers used a dead bear's DNA to prove that a hunter illegally shot the animal in its den.

Michael Autry, 27, of Bridgeville, a Pittsburgh suburb, was found guilty last month and fined $1,000, both for killing the bear and for lying about the circumstances. He could also lose his hunting license.

Investigators said Autry shot the 240-pound female black bear in its den on Nov. 20, then dragged the carcass out, took it to a checkpoint and told officials that he had killed the animal five miles from the den.

Another hunter who saw Autry kill the animal reported the episode to officials, who took blood and hair samples at both the checkpoint and the den.

NASA delays next space shuttle flight again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - NASA has pushed back the launch of its next space shuttle flight yet again because of problems with the international space station's new $1 billion robot arm.

Atlantis will lift off no earlier than July 7, NASA spokesman James Hartsfield said Thursday.

The mission, to deliver an airlock, or pressure chamber for spacewalking astronauts, had been scheduled for mid-June. But last month, NASA bumped the flight to at least July 2 because of the robot-arm trouble.

The 58-foot arm, which was attached in April, is needed to install the $164 million airlock.

Supreme Court throws out death sentence

TRENTON, N.J. - The state Supreme Court reversed the death sentence Thursday of a man convicted of murdering two pizza delivery drivers during a thrill-killing ambush, saying errors were made during the sentencing.

The divided court upheld the conviction of Thomas Koskovich in the two murders, but in a 4-3 vote ruled that the jury could have been misled about how to consider statements of one victim's mother during sentencing.

The court also found that jurors should have been told Koskovich would have to spend the rest of his life in prison were his life spared, and that the jury could have been misled about how to vote on factors justifying his execution.

The court ordered a new sentencing trial, during which a jury could reinstate the death penalty.

Koskovich and Jason Vreeland placed a fake pizza order to lure delivery driver Jeremy Giordano and pizza shop owner Giorgio Gallara to an abandoned cabin in northwestern New Jersey on April 15, 1997. Koskovich shot Giordano to death in what prosecutors called a "thrill killing."

Congress awards honor to 'Peanuts' creator

WASHINGTON - Congress awarded its highest civilian honor to "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz on Thursday, saying the comic strip characters created by the late cartoonist "embodied human potential."

"We're humbled by this great honor in this most historic place," said Schulz's widow, Jeanine.

Schulz, who was awarded the Congressional Gold Medal, died in February 2000 at his home in Santa Rosa, Calif. He had announced only months earlier that he had colon cancer.

"The characters he gave us have become a permanent part of pop culture," said Senate Republican leader Trent Lott of Mississippi. "Schulz's kids are us."

Rep. Mike Thompson, D-Calif., said that when Schulz was an Army sergeant during World War II, he kept morale high by decorating the letters of his fellow soldiers with cartoons. "I know the images and leadership he provided us will never be forgotten," Thompson said.

The medal has an image of Schulz's face on one side. The other side features the entire Peanuts gang, including Charlie Brown and Lucy.

Schulz is the first cartoonist to receive the medal. Others honorees include George Washington, Bob Hope and Mother Teresa. Lawmakers in January presented the award to Pope John Paul II during a ceremony at the Vatican.

ON THEIR TERMS

High school junior Jesus Segura, 16, practices with his band earlier this month in Chicago. If Segura graduates from college, the 16-year-old Chicago native, whose mother is Puerto Rican and father's Mexican, will be among the first in his extended family to get a degree.

Young Hispanics redefine America

The Associated Press

CHICAGO - Jesus Segura circulates among his three worlds - Puerto Rican, Mexican and American - without leaving the city where he was born.

"I'm Hispanic," he says, "and the neighborhoods that represent them are distinct. But together they create a single identity as inseparable as the blood in his veins."

"They are all a part of me, equally," says the 16-year-old Chicagoan, whose mother is Puerto Rican and father Mexican. "I'm quite proud of my countries. I love every single one of them."

It is a common sentiment among Hispanic boomers - a new generation whose ranks have grown so quickly that, at 12.3 million, they are now the nation's largest minority group among those 17 and younger, according to the 2000 Census.

"They are, by their very numbers, helping reshape America for the 21st century - but not without maintaining a tight grip on their roots."

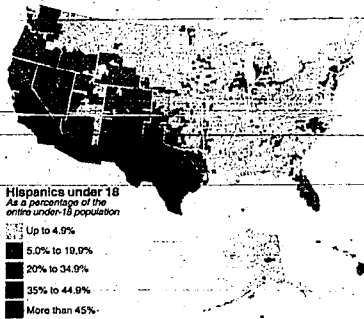

One market research survey found 54 percent of these teens identified themselves as Hispanic only or more Hispanic than American. Another 37 percent said they were equally Hispanic and American, according to the 1999 survey, completed by San Diego-based TNS Market Development.

That sense of cultural pride has only been enhanced as Hispanic pop icons, sports stars and political leaders - from singer-jazz Jennifer Lopez

Census2000

Growing up Hispanic

Hispanics under age 18 make up 17.1 percent of the under-18 population. Compared to the national trend of an aging population, the under-18 segment makes up 34.8 percent of the entire Hispanic population. For the entire U.S. population, the under-18 segment makes up only 25.7 percent.

and baseball star Alex Rodriguez to California Lt. Gov. Cruz Bustamante, former speaker of that state's Assembly increasingly gain the spotlight.

"Hopefully, it's not just a phase that will eventually go away," says Vanessa Soto, a recent high school graduate who - along with Segura and many other Latino youth - has learned to be an on-air producer at Radio Arte, a small station that broadcasts to Chicago's largely Mexican Pilsen neighborhood.

Many of their elders think this is just the beginning of the "Latinization of America."

"For me, jokingly I would say, it's like Montezuma's Revenge or a little bit like taking back Mexico in a sense," says Felipe Korzeny, a native Mexican who is co-founder of Cheskin, a market research and consulting business based in Redwood Shores, Calif.

And, he says, Hispanic youth are a huge part of that, as many U.S. companies scurry to tap into a market that Korzeny estimates already spends $200 billion a year. Those companies include Pepsi, Radio Shack and MTV-S, a cable network that features rock and pop music "en Espanol."

Still others, who are organizing voter registration drives in high schools, see the new generation's potential for political power.

The nonprofit United States Hispanic Leadership Institute hosts an annual fall conference attended by thousands of teens, with Hispanic business leaders as speakers, a college fair and workshops on political organizing.

"The numbers are there," says Juan Andrade Jr., who heads the institute. "It's just a matter of whether we create good leaders or mediocre leaders."

While they are bound by labels and often language, Hispanic youth are not easy to categorize in other ways.

Some of their ancestors were here well before these states were united. Others have just arrived from such countries as Guatemala, El Salvador, the Dominican Republic and - still most often - Mexico.

Many are bilingual. Newer arrivals sometimes speak only Spanish. And still others speak only English - or, like Esperanza Garcia, prefer to speak English because they know it better.

Court rejects McVeigh appeal

The Associated Press

DENVER - A federal appeals court on Thursday rejected Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh's request to delay his execution, saying his attorneys "utterly failed to demonstrate substantial grounds" why the execution should not proceed next week.

The 33-year-old McVeigh is set to die by injection Monday at the federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind.

A three-judge panel from the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals considered McVeigh's argument much of Thursday and issued its ruling without hearing oral arguments.

"McVeigh has utterly failed to demonstrate substantial grounds upon which relief might be granted," the court decision said.

McVeigh attorney Rob Nigh was in his Tulsa, Okla., office, and not immediately available to comment. Earlier Thursday, McVeigh attorney Nathan Chamberlain declined to say whether the legal team would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if it lost in the appeals court.

McVeigh's lawyers wanted more time to review nearly 4,500 pages of belatedly released FBI documents for information they felt could have helped in his defense during the 1997 trial.

Ex-prosecutor gets probation in Waco case

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS - A former federal prosecutor was sentenced to two years' probation Thursday for withholding information that the government used explosive tear gas canisters during the deadly siege at Waco.

Bill Johnston was also ordered to perform 200 hours of community service.

"Maybe you need to talk to some high school students," U.S. District Judge Charles Shaw said. "Maybe you can help somebody not to make a similar mistake."

Johnston admitted withholding one page of pretrial notes about the government's use of pyrotechnic tear gas on April 19, 1993, the day the Branch Davidian compound burned down. Cult leader David Koresh and some 80 followers died.

Justice Department and FBI officials had denied for years that the government had used anything capable of sparking fires when they employed tanks and tear gas to try to end the standoff.

Ultimately, investigators concluded that the canisters did not cause the fire, and a report by former Sen. John Danforth, assigned by President Clinton to look into the siege, absolved the government of wrongdoing.

A suburban rite of passage receives a new twist

The Associated Press

BAY SHORE, N.Y. - Janet Sosnicki and Rachelle Pellegrino hardly touched when they started dancing at Sosnicki's senior prom last month.

"It was a little uncomfortable," recalled the 18-year-old Sosnicki. After all, a lot of the other prom-goers were staring at the only same-sex couple there.

Things will be different Friday when Sosnicki, Pellegrino and an expected 200 other young people attend Pride Gala, Long Island's first full-fledged gay prom.

Twenty-one years after the nation's first gay prom was held in Boston, such events are growing increasingly common in large cities and small towns around the country. But Pride Gala has received a flurry of publicity, perhaps because it is taking place on Long Island, prototypical postwar suburbia.

Bay Shore High School and one of the Long Island prom planners.

Sponsored by the group Long Island Gay and Lesbian Youth, the prom will take place at a catering hall in picturesque Sayville, about 50 miles from Manhattan.

Sosnicki, a senior at Walter G. O'Connell High School in Copiague, said the prom is designed to provide support for teens who are not yet "out" about their sexuality.

Despite the strides made by the gay-rights movement, she and other organizers said, gay, teen-agers still endure intolerance and harassment.

Liverman, who is slender and soft-spoken, said he was repeatedly attacked during his freshman year. "I was pushed into lockers," he said. "I was pushed down flights of stairs."
