Envoy promotes trade

Ambassador says China, U.S. must work together

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The people of Idaho are both conservative and pioneering, said Yang Jiechi, the Chinese ambassador to the United States.

His evidence? The potato-cream — coated with chocolate powder and topped with whipped cream — served at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science Friday evening.

"It walks and quacks like a duck, but it's not a duck," the ambassador told an invitation-only gathering of local government and business leaders, College of Southern Idaho officials and the Idaho governor.

Yang's comparison was humorous but his point a serious one. Confronted by globalization, he said, both China and the United States must be innovative, think the unthinkable, learn from each other.

"Both of us should move away from Cold War mentality," Yang said, urging trade and exchange of knowledge despite ideological differences.

Though it encourages families to limit their numbers of children, China still has such rapid population growth that it labors to provide education, health care and jobs, Yang said. CSI President Jerry Meyerhoeffer and his wife,

Looking abroad

International trade has been getting attention around the state as a growing benefit to Idaho's economy.

Some Magic Valley companies, even small ones, have been aggressive in developing foreign markets for local products such as pork, potatoes, harvesting equipment, whey ingredients and insulation.

McVeigh watch begins

Indiana prison readies execution for early Monday

The Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Timothy McVeigh awaited transfer Friday to the windowless brick building where he will be put to death — a journey that will be his last chance to see the sky and breathe fresh air.

The 33-year-old McVeigh abandoned all efforts Thursday to stave off execution for the Oklahoma City bombing after back-to-back defeats in court.

He is set to die by chemical action at 6 a.m. MDT Monday in the first execution carried out by the federal government since 1963. Prison officials said the chemicals that will be used for the execution have already arrived.

McVeigh is expected to be moved from his cell to the death house no later than Sunday morning, 24 hours before the execution. Prison officials would not say exactly when he would be moved, citing security concerns.

McVeigh has already instructed prison officials on what he wants done with his body, his money and any belongings. Prison officials and McVeigh's lawyers would not say what will happen to the body other than that it will be turned over to a representative of the family.

Clergyman faces sexual battery count

Jerome minister maintains innocence

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome clergyman was arraigned Thursday on a charge stemming from allegations that he had sexual contact with a teen-age girl, court records say.

The Rev. Robert Gomez, 62, on Friday said he couldn't discuss the matter in detail because it involves an active court case.

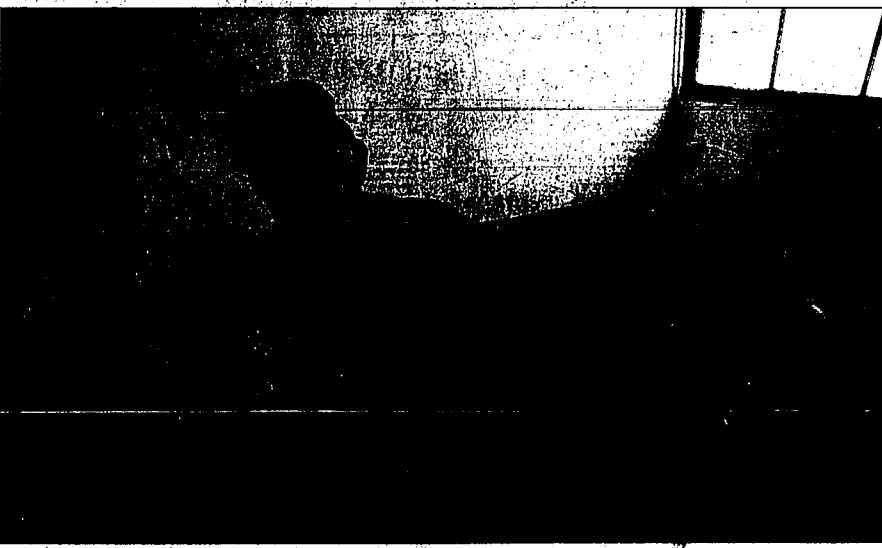

"I really wish I could comment, but I just can't. I maintain my innocence," he said.

Gomez was arraigned in Jerome on a count of sexual battery on a minor, according to court documents, and ordered to have no contact with the girl who made the allegations or with her family. Gomez was released on his own recognizance and faces a preliminary hearing June 21 in Jerome, court records say.

The girl told investigators that Gomez touched her in a sexual manner while she was at his house early May 29, according to an affidavit written by Jerome

Judge backs neighbors in Bliss dairy dispute

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A judge's ruling in a single dairy lawsuit has broader meaning for groundwater quality in Idaho, a family farm advocacy group says.

"Hopefully it will make everybody tighten things up a bit and improve water quality in this area," said Don Cogger, chairman of the Idaho Rural Council's Factory Farm Committee.

Ruling lets clean-water lawsuit go forward

U.S. District Judge Lynn Winmill this week denied a request by Bliss dairy operators, brothers Jake and Hank Bosma, to dismiss a Clean Water Act lawsuit brought against them by the Idaho Rural Council. The trial date originally set for Monday has been rescheduled to Dec. 3.

The Idaho Rural Council brought the lawsuit on behalf of Bosma neighbors, the Walker and Butler families. The Bosmas own and operate the Grand View Dairy, which neighbors two separate springs — one owned by the Walker family and the other by the Butler family. The families claim the dairy is polluting the springs.

Winmill ruled that the federal Clean Water Act applies to this case — an issue the Bosmas raised in their effort to have the case dismissed. Winmill said the federal court has jurisdiction in cases where polluted groundwaters are hydrologically connected to surface waters serving as tributaries to waterways under federal jurisdiction — in this case Clover Creek and the Snake River.

As the judge noted in his opinion, "the Bosmas hotly contest any suggestion that the dairy is discharging pollutants into

Japan fears it's country suffers from growing rage

Chicago Tribune

TOKYO — Mamoru Takuma was considered a harmless madman who could be controlled with pills, until Friday when he climbed into an elementary school and ran amok with a kitchen knife, killing eight and wounding 21 little boys and girls.

Police said Takuma took an overdose of the drugs that were supposed to keep him mentally balanced. Instead the overdose made him hallucinate and go berserk.

It was Japan's first massacre at a school and the worst mass killing since the 'Aum' doomsday cult released sarin gas in a Tokyo subway in 1995, killing 12 people and sickening thousands.

The images of bloodstained children and frightened little survivors in their white and black school uniforms today haunts a country that lags behind other developed nations in providing public mental health services.

How could Takuma, 36 many Japanese asked, carry out a bloody massacre only two years after he tried to poison teachers at an elementary school in central Osaka where he worked as a caretaker? He spiced their tea with a hefty dose of the tranquilizers doctors had prescribed for him.

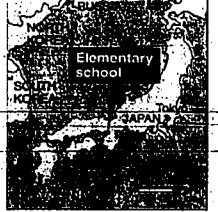

Four teachers became ill. Police arrested Takuma but pressed no charges because, so police officer Nobuharu Sugita said: "He suffered from psychological problems."

The school fired him as janitor and handyman. After a month of treatment at a hospital he was allowed to go home — armed with tranquilizers to control his urges.

Police said Takuma was speaking incoherently after two male teachers wrestled him to the floor, ending his bloody 10-minute stabbing spree during which he ran through four classrooms slashing at terrified 6- and 7-year-olds. His weapon was an police detective James Baker and filed with court documents. Medical examiners later found an apparent abrasion on the girl's genitals, the affidavit says. The affidavit also states that: "The girl told detectives she was invited to stay at Gomez's house that night because she had been having trouble at home, and he had previously counseled her. She claimed that after the alleged sexual incident, she waited until Gomez left the part of the house she was in and returned to her room." Kelley Brickey of Jerome told police she found the girl hiding in some bushes near her house at about 2:20 a.m., and the girl told her she was trying to hide from Gomez. Brickey told police she later gave the girl a ride home, and the girl claimed Gomez had touched her in a sexual manner. Brickey also told police that Another bludgeoned-to-death his mother, and a third 17-year-old stabbed dead a neighbor because, he said, he wanted to experience killing. Last month a teenager killed a commuter because the man had pushed him to step back so he could board the train.

Strict gun laws make firearms difficult to obtain. Instead, the Japanese use knives to vent their rage in a consumer society that has become sandwiched between lingering feudal traditions and ultra-modern high technology.

"People are becoming angrier all the time," wrote social commentator Keiichi Sakuta. Where Takuma was angry or overdoed remains a puzzle.

waters of the United States." C. Tom Arkooosh, a Goodying attorney representing the Bosmas, said the judge also pointed out that the Idaho Rural Council still must prove that a hydrological connection between the groundwater and the federal waters exists.

Arkooosh also said he has evidence that the dairy is not polluting the springs. He said he interested to see how the court handles the Idaho Rural Council's grievance, when weighed against his own.

The next possible court match in this case could involve an attempt by the Bosmas to suppress the Idaho Rural Council's expert testimony. Winmill denied the Bosmas' request and said the matter had to be settled in a separate hearing.

Charlie Tebbutt, a Eugene, Ore., attorney representing the Idaho Rural Council in its Clean Water Act lawsuit against Bosmas, says dairy waste can pollute groundwater through seepage. "The hydrological connection issue is one that the dairy industry should start taking more seriously," Tebbutt said.

"You have lots of springs that are popping out all over the place from shallow aquifers but probably also deeper aquifers," he said.

"Very good. Three basketball teams," the ambassador said. But a family of that size just isn't practical in China," he added.

Yang praised the past several decades' successes in U.S.-China diplomatic relations, getting big laughs with his 1970s story of the aide who hurried to the cockpit of an airplane to enter China before former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"This relationship has not come easy," Yang said. "And it has contributed a lot to the welfare of our two peoples."

An American, for instance, might start his day with an alarm clock, slippers, radio and coat all made in China.

"We do export a lot of stuff to the United States," Yang said, "but how about the other way around?"

"A Chinese man might surf the Internet enabled by Idaho computer chips, and beer made from Idaho barley and take his children to American fast-food chains serving Idaho potatoes," he said.

"China is no longer a middle kingdom, talking to itself," Yang said. "We're long past that stage."

Yang arrived in Twin Falls Friday with a delegation of 24 Shanghai government and education leaders and business executives in industries such as construction, retail, garments, high-tech, recycling and real estate. "It comes here to find counterparts," said Qian Zhenyong, chief executive officer of the Shanghai Jiao Tong University Science Park Co. Ltd. The university, one of China's top five, helps business startups acquire management and business know-how. As China grows its trade with other countries, he said, it needs professional managers who know technology and speak fluent English. CSF might play a role in that need.

Wenli Jiang, director of the Shanghai-Luwan District Education Bureau, expressed interest in English-as-a-second-language training through CSF for teachers in his bureau, who educate youngsters through high school age. The delegation Friday scientific research and encourage new technologies to combat global warming. They would not say how much he was proposing, but said it was dramatically lower than the Byrd-Stevens package.

That package would create "a major research effort to invent the advanced technologies that we will need to begin to reduce greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to global warming," Byrd said.

"It is virtually inconceivable that atmospheric concentrations of carbon dioxide are rising and that mankind is contributing to this rise," he said.

Global warming refers to a rise in the Earth's temperature that many scientists blame on heat-trapping greenhouse gases in the atmosphere resulting from the burning of fossil fuels and other human activities.

evening saw a demonstration of CSI's multimedia ESL program. He said he hopes his district's teachers can use English to teach math and chemistry, which would make the Chinese students easy to exchange with foreign schools and make Shanghai's more open city. And he hopes Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, after his next trade mission to China in October, will teach Irishmen about Shanghai.

Wenli said the business managers traveling with him are interested in commerce with Idaho. One of them, Zhou Guosheng, general manager of Shanghai Dasheng Industry & Trade Co. Ltd., praised J.R. Simplot Co.'s advanced potato-factory equipment.

"We want to introduce more and more Shanghai business people to the Idaho business circle," said Yu Xinghua, general manager of Shanghai-based construction giant Yonge Group.

Wu said he led the delegation of 24 to Idaho, hoping his friends could find their own business counterparts in Idaho. State officials have credited some of Wu's interest in other Idaho products to Hamilton Manufacturing Co. Chief Executive Officer Tangta Hamilton-Barney's persistence in developing a business relationship and personal friendship with Yonge.

Hamilton Manufacturing is a Twin Falls plant that turns-old newspapers and phone books into cellulose insulation and hydrosedimenting mulch.

Wu added that he wants to push Shanghai-based cooperation in education, environmental protection and building materials. He's particularly interested in seeing an English-training agreement established with CSI.

One of Wu's goals during his trip was to discuss other business ties with Hamilton Manufacturing. The China Academy of Sciences, he said, did scientific tests on Hamilton's hydrosedimenting and dust-control products.

"The result was good," Wu said.

Leaders urge changes to slow spread of AIDS

ATLANTA (AP) - Black leaders urged the Bush administration Friday to step up efforts to slow the alarming spread of AIDS among minorities, calling soaring infection rates a national emergency.

The National Black Leadership Commission on AIDS concluded a two-day conference by announcing a comprehensive proposal that includes more money for HIV-related housing and new AIDS outreach programs.

"The face of AIDS has changed, and it is now ours," said Donna Christian, Christian, the Virgin Islands delegate to Congress and a member of the Congressional Black Caucus.

The commission called for more than $500 million for the caucus' priority HIV/AIDS prevention efforts and asked President Bush to make sure enough federal AIDS money is spent on the racial and social groups that need it most.

"We have to tell him this is not a time to level-fund, which is to underfund," Christian-Christian said. "This is not a time to cut back, when people are dying."

The commission's chairman, former New York Mayor David Dinkins, said slowing the epidemic will take a commitment involving black leaders from Hollywood, the clergy, big business and politics.

"If a dog falls down a well somewhere, the whole world will be watching the rescue," he said. "The world seems not to be aware of the threat to all of us, to civilization, by AIDS."

Bush, who has faced criticism about his commitment to fighting AIDS, has announced that Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson and Secretary of State Colin Powell will head a task force focused on fighting AIDS in other countries.

He has chosen an openly gay Wisconsin man to direct the administration's AIDS policy.

New tax laws include break for college savings

WASHINGTON (AP) - Children whose families are taking advantage of education savings accounts will get an extra tax savings when they go to college under new tax laws.

College savings plans allow parents and grandparents to invest up to $250,000 in mutual funds that grow tax-free until the money is withdrawn, much like the popular 401(k) retirement plans.

Interest on money taken out before Jan. 1, when the new law kicks in, would be taxed at the student's normal rate, but the law President Bush signed Thursday includes a provision that will exempt the earnings from federal taxes.

"It's a wonderful bonus," said Suzanne Elms-Barclay of Lansing, Mich., who opened accounts last year for her two grandchildren. "You can do something for your grandchildren, and you won't have to stick your kids or grandkids with a big federal tax bill."

Education savings accounts are growing in popularity as several states have passed them into law in recent years. Elms-Barclay immediately invested $10,000 when they became available in Michigan in November, then another $10,000 this year - the maximum annual amount that Michigan families can exempt from state income taxes.

Her grandchildren, who live in New Hampshire, can use the money to attend any college nationwide or get vocational training.

Panel kills Bush's species act proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rejecting a prominent part of President Bush's environmental agenda, House Republicans shot down a proposal restricting the ability of environmental groups to get plants and animals listed to the endangered species list.

At issue are the kind of lawsuits that largely have established the Interior Department's priorities in deciding which species deserve protection.

Mary Beth Beetham, director of legislative affairs for the Defenders of Wildlife, said the Bush provision "would have gutted citizen enforcement of the Endangered Species Act." But Interior Secretary Gale Norton has argued it was necessary to let the Fish and Wildlife Service do its job.

A Republican-led House subcommittee on Thursday removed language the administration had bought for the plan from a $18.9 billion lands and energy spending bill for 2002. The legislation sailed through the House Appropriations interior subcommittee on a voice vote.

The lawmakers also ignored Bush's request for $2 million for preparatory studies for oil drilling the president wants to begin in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. That was the latest sign that Bush's proposal to drill in the sanctuary, opposed by environmentalists, is all but dead in Congress.

The bill would cut Bush's lands and energy budget by 4.4 percent, a testament to the spending appetite of lawmakers of both parties. It would boost Bush's request for energy research and conservation by $24 million to nearly $1.8 billion, and provide $1.32 billion for land conservation, $64 million over his request.

"Most of our bills will be pretty close to Bush's," House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Young, R-Fla., said. "Will they be exactly the same? No, because Congress has the obligation to use its best judgment."

Green Eggs and a Birthday

Theodor Seuss Geisel was born in March 1904 in Massachusetts. It wasn't until 1937 that he became known as Dr. Seuss. That's when he wrote his first children's book, And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street.

While in college, Geisel drew cartoons for a humor magazine.

He graduated in 1925 from Dartmouth. Then Geisel went on to study literature at Oxford University in England. After returning to the United States, he worked on other humor magazines for awhile.

After World War II, Geisel began writing children's books again. He wrote more than 40 books and sold more than 100 million copies in 18 languages. Geisel changed his name to Dr. Seuss because he wanted to sound more scientific.

Dr. Seuss' books include The Cat in the Hat, Green Eggs and Ham, How the Grinch Stole Christmas, Horton Hears a Who and The Butter Battle Book.

In 1984, Geisel received a Pulitzer Prize for his work in children's literature.

Jerome County Airport expansion takes off

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The Jerome County Airport is upgrading from crop dusters and Cessnas to Lear jets this summer. The county is remodeling facilities at the airport so it can handle small jets safely. With the upgrade, the airport will go from a rating of B1 to B2, Bonnie Deitrick, airport manager, said.

In the meantime, the Jerome County Airport is closed for construction. The construction started May 25 and is expected to be completed by the end of July.

"This project is cutting into our busy season, which runs from April to October," Deitrick said. But the long-term, the renovation opens the door to airport expansion, she said.

The total cost of the project is $1,276,442. Idaho Sand and Gravel was awarded the bid.

The bill is shared by the federal, state and county governments and divides like this: the county was awarded a Federal Aviation Administration Grant for 90 percent of the project cost, or $1,148,797. The state of Idaho, through the Office of Aeronautics, will cover an estimated 3.3 percent, or $42,122; and the county will pick up the rest, or $85,523, said Marly

'We're the American gypsies'

Surrounded by tomahawks and other items, mountain man Digger sells and trades beaded items that he creates at the annual Massacre Rocks Rendezvous, 10 miles west of American Falls, June 1. None of the mountain men go by their birth names. Each picks up a new handle as he enters the culture.

Heyburn father, son love the mountain man life

The Associated Press

POCATELLO - Digger, Dr. Magnifico and Lynx Hunter kick back on Traders Row in homemade chairs on the dusty ground at Massacre Rocks State Park, sheltered by a tent embellished with furs, beads, hatchets and antiques.

The self-declared mountain men are part of a larger camp of Americana aficionados descending on the area 10 miles west of American Falls for a rendezvous.

"We're the American gypsies," says Dr. Magnifico, who originally comes from Cheyenne, Wyo.

Broken Wing is a Heyburn boy who has been coming to rendezvous for 10 years, the better share of his 13-year-old life. His friend, Powder Trickler, got involved when his friends invited him along some time ago.

"I just like getting away from town," says Broken Wing, who lives in Heyburn. He tries to attend at least eight or nine rendezvous each year.

Rendezvous are usually listed in any number of black powder magazines, and mountain men simply show up at the events. "This season is the highlight," says Digger, who comes from Okanogan Valley, Wash. "Later in the year, it gets warm and we go up higher in the mountains."

None of the mountain men go by their birth names. Each picks up a new handle as he enters the culture. It may be difficult to convince a mountain man to tell you his real name.

"A lot of these guys don't even know each other's birth names," says Digger. "They may have shared a camp with each other for weeks, but if you asked for one by his real name, no one would know who you were talking about."

The amount of goods a mountain man has to trade reveals his level of experience.

"Your store never gets smaller," Digger says. "You say you are going to get rid of some snuff, but it always gets bigger."

While many see a rendezvous as an opportunity to sell or trade their goods, others take the opportunity to hone their throwing and shooting skills. Throwing

Hearing continues injury case

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - A preliminary hearing set Friday for a man facing a charge of felony injury to a child has been delayed until June 22 to give attorneys more time to work on the case.

It is the second delay of a preliminary hearing in the case against Christopher Frey, 29. Frey, of Filer, is accused of striking a 15-month-old boy his wife was baby-sitting May 14.

The child had a bruise that covered most of the left side of his face, according to an affidavit written by Filer Police Chief Cliff Johnson and filed with court documents. Frey and his wife have four young daughters, court documents say.

Pet parade, fair run today

TWIN FALLS - The Lynwood Merchants Association presents its third annual Strut Your Mutt Pet Parade and Pet Fair today.

The parade starts at 11 a.m., with registration to begin 30 minutes earlier. A tricks and stunts contest is planned for 12:45 p.m., with prizes and awards to be handed out at 1:15.

The Lynwood Merchants Association will award a $400 gift certificate for best of show, while funniest act will get a $75 gift certificate. Other $50 gift certificates will be given winners in various categories.

The event will be held in the parking area behind King's and The Homestead.

Experimental ed course for teachers to begin Monday

TWIN FALLS - Teachers can sign up for the two-credit "Experiential Education in the Classroom" program at the College of Southern Idaho ropes challenge course, beginning Monday. The class runs all day Monday through Thursday.

According to CSI facilitator Karen Griffin, the course teaches learning by doing and demonstrates the value of hands-on learning. Participants will learn critical thinking, group work, problem solving and life skills that can be utilized in unlimited applications.

The ropes course is a large park on the east side of the CSI campus with an assortment of low-lying and high aerial obstacles that require teamwork to complete. The course will involve these activities on a challenge by choice basis, and participants will not be mandated to participate in physical activities with which they are not comfortable.

For more information or to sign up, call the CSI Student Information office at 733-3554, Ext. 2221 or Pete Snyder at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center at 737-2943.

Trainer helps gentle wild horses for adoption

By Dare Jensen
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - The Bureau of Land Management is offering 72 horses for adoption at the Gooding County Fairgrounds.

In connection with the adoption, Mario Johnson, a professional horse trainer from Georgetown, is presenting a clinic on gentling wild horses.

Clinics like the one presented by Johnson help with the adoption process, agree Rawhide Clark, a BLM employee from Challis, and Mike Courtney of Twin Falls. Most people adopting horses are familiar with the needs of horses in the area of feed and care, but the extra instruction in handling a wild horse is helpful, the two men said.

The bidding starts today at 9 a.m. at the Gooding fairgrounds. It is a silent auction, and the minimum bid is $125.

"The animals are about evenly divided from Oregon and Utah. The burros are from Arizona," said Mike Courtney, the BLM

Kimberly School Board inspects new school/gymnasium complex

KIMBERLY - The Kimberly School Board inspected the new high-school/gymnasium complex before the board's Thursday night meeting.

Construction manager John Bidegana and site engineer Dave Reader took the trustees, faculty members and other interested people on a tour of the building.

The regular meeting which followed the tour which was devoted to study of the budget for the coming school session. The board discussed the estimated student attendance for the new year as a guide for school income. A final budget hearing and approval by the board is scheduled for the July 21 meeting.

An update on progress on the new school was given by Bidegana. He said construction is on schedule and the building is expected to be ready to move into by mid-July.

The July 21 meeting is the last for trustees Bev Shewmaker and Jill Berry. Shewmaker has served on the board for 13 years and Berry for 11.

Judge lauds plan for kids with severe emotional disturbances

BOISE (AP) - A federal judge who less than nine months ago was on the verge of finding the Kempthorne administration in contempt of court this week applauded its new plan for helping thousands of mentally ill children.

"The plan represents a purposeful first step towards providing those children of Idaho who suffer from severe emotional disturbances the care and resources the state agreed to provide as part of a consent decree reached by the parties and adopted by the court," U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnill wrote in a five-page decision issued Monday.

Winnill said the proposed measures and strict deadlines for meeting them, represented "an important step towards the successful conclusion" of the so-called "Jeff D." class-action lawsuit that was filed against the state in 1990.

Kelly Belodoff, a lawyer for the children and families in the case, praised the judge for making it clear he would continue to hold the state accountable.

"What he's saying is, the plan has got to go from paper to reality. And the only way to make that go is to make sure you've got money," Belodoff said. "If they go through December and do everything they're supposed to do but there's no money requested, how have things changed?"

Monday's decision accepted the plan, along with some changes that Belodoff said were primarily aimed at firming up its requirements, stemmed from a March 26 hearing to review the 60-page proposal submitted Feb. 9.

It was developed by the state departments of Health and Welfare, Education and Juvenile Corrections, parents and representatives of the estimated 7,000 children who need specialized care.

A July 23 hearing is scheduled on the state's progress on the plan, calls for doubling the financial commitment to programs for mentally ill children, hiring 15 clinicians and creating a panel to oversee implementation.

well as families affected by mental illness in children. Seven local councils also would be created to work with the state agency.

The clinicians, with backgrounds in psychology, would be hired to work with mentally ill children. They would be posted to locations across the state according to need.

The detailed framework was ordered last September by Winnill, who was frustrated with the state's failure to live up to a 1998 agreement to implement recommendations in a needs assessment conducted by a Washington, D.C., consulting firm. He specifically cited Gov. Don Kempthorne for failing even to ask the Legislature for enough money to comply with previous court orders to establish a statewide system of community-based care for seriously troubled youths.

Idaho has been spending about $3 million a year on children with severe psychological illnesses. Lawmakers last winter approved Kempthorne's request for an additional $3 million for the spending year that begins July 1.

Mormon officials fail to report alleged abuse

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) - A Utah man is jailed here on $75,000 bond awaiting trial on charges he sexually abused a stepdaughter, who first turned to police, saying "he tried to focus on the authority of the Heavenly Father" rather than on earthly authorities such as the police, said Gallatin County prosecuting attorney Ashley Harrington.

Kelly Teters, 37, was charged last month with felony rape and intimidation after the girl again discussed the alleged abuse with her church leader in Mapleton, Utah.

The church leader in Utah reported the alleged abuse to authorities and an investigation was launched.

District Judge Mike Salvagni refused on Wednesday to reduce bond because Teters doesn't have enough ties to the community. Court documents filed by Harrington show even direct family ties don't deter Teters.

Report: Fugitive dies by sheriff's gun

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - Custer County Sheriff Robert Taylor fired the shotgun which killed fugitive Jeremy "Jerry" Pearce April 25 near the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River, a prosecutor's report said.

No charges will be filed against Taylor, who acted in self-defense when Pearce aimed an assault rifle at him, Custer County Prosecutor Layton Loynd said. But the investigation continues into the incident in which Pearce was killed after eluding officers and spending the night holed up in state Rep. Lenore Barrett's cabin.

Two suspects could be charged as accessories for helping Pearce elude police, Loynd said.

Pearce, 43, became the subject of a manhunt April 24, after a warrant was issued charging him with aggravated assault for allegedly pointing a 9-mm pistol at his brother-in-law.

The report said three of Pearce's friends talked to police about his whereabouts. All said the English citizen was armed and dangerous, and had killed people while he "was a commando in South Africa."

The report said Pearce told a friend of his plan to exit the cabin through the back as officers arrived before shooting a propane tank next to the cabin, hoping the explosion would kill them.

The officers learned on the night of the 24th Pearce had broken into the cabin near the historic Custer Townsite. Early the next morning, a posse of officers from Custer County, Idaho State Police, Idaho Fish and Game, and the Forest Service met near the cabin.

Pearce emerged through the back door of the cabin wearing camouflage pants, black jacket and hat, with an assault rifle.

The report said Taylor yelled, "Police department, drop your weapon."

Pearce pointed the rifle at Taylor, who fired. Pearce was hit with five pellets - in the mouth, chest, wrist, shoulder and abdomen.

As Taylor called for medical help, Pearce tried to grab the rifle which he had dropped, but a deputy picked it up first and took a 9-mm pistol from Pearce's waistband.

The pellet in his abdomen caused Pearce to bleed to death internally, the autopsy revealed. Before dying, he told Taylor, "Good shot, mister."

Pearce tested positive for amphetamine and methamphetamine, according to the report.

Lemhi County Sheriff Brett Barsalou and a deputy investigation of the shooting to avoid a conflict of interest.

"It was an unfortunate situation," Taylor said of the first time he has used deadly force in his almost 15-year career.

Web site helps folks get out of California

LOS ANGELES (AP) - California, here I go.

That could be the theme song of a new Web site designed to help disgruntled residents flee traffic, pricey real estate and rising blackouts.

Howard resident Randy Lee, 39, designs Web sites and created the "Leaving California" site partly as a marketing tool for his own business.

Then friends and family urged him to publicize the site, which contains links to real estate brokers and visitor's bureaus, polls, a message board and other information to help people learn about career and living opportunities outside the state.

"I don't promote that anyone leave who is content here and likes it here," Lee said. "I'm a native and I love California. What I don't love is the overpopulation, the traffic. Now we have the rolling blackouts. That's going to destroy the economy."

Rising housing prices, traffic congestion and other problems Lee cites are not the result of people leaving the state, but moving here in droves.

Census figures show that while residents left the state in the early 1990s as the state struggled with recession, California's population actually rose 13 percent in the decade.

Lee has already decided he will leave the state within two years for personal reasons, partly because of the high cost of living in his San Francisco Bay community.

"I have a 20-year old daughter and a niece out toward Modesto," Lee said. "There's no way they can even think of buying a house here, let alone afford to live here anymore. It's a sad realization when it hits you that you can't afford to live in your home."

Lee's Web site has been attracting visitors and even advertisers. Lee said about 26,000 people visited the site last week and he is making a profit selling ads to real estate brokers and similar relocation companies.

Paul White, an agent with Liberty Realty in Las Vegas, heard about Lee's site through a client who is moving from the Bay area. He decided to buy an ad earlier this week.

"There's a lot of people leaving California for the Las Vegas area and I want to have as many of those people as possible contact me," he said.

White said the ad, which links people to his own Web site, hasn't yet resulted in any solid leads.

"Probably people are looking for information whether or not they're actually making the decision to move," he said. "I think they're looking for alternatives, weighing their options."

Jim Manning, lives in Waco, Neb., and is trying to sell his 34-acre property with an ad on Lee's site. He said he called Lee after a friend reported seeing the site.

"If people are leaving your state as fast as they say they are, or thinking of leaving, maybe this would be the kind of place they would like to get out to, Manning said.

Elko County votes to support Wendover unification proposal

ELKO, Nev. - The Elko County Commission threw a new twist Thursday into the debate over annexing Wendover, Utah, into Nevada, voting 3-2 to support a bill in Congress that would allow the annexation.

Tuesday, the City Council in West Wendover, Nev., voted 4-0 not to support the legislation, saying it wanted more information first.

Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Utah, introduced HR2054 Tuesday. Its cosponsor is Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev. The bill allows the states to negotiate the details of a change in the border.

The bill would give Utah and Nevada six years to hash out a deal to unify the two Wendovers.

Both Hansen and Gibbons have said the border shift won't happen unless local and state officials on both sides want it.

Even if West Wendover doesn't want to merge with Utah's Wendover, the Utah town could be brought into Elko County.

The commission's vote, though, does not mean wholesale support of moving the border.

"The conclusion may be that this is not a good idea," said Commissioner Warren Russell.

Russell went to Washington recently to show his support for starting talks on unification.

"I could see, with the right things happening, we could have a community of about 30,000 in 10 years," he said, noting West Wendover is one of the fastest-growing areas in Nevada, with a population quickly closing in on 5,000.

The population of Wendover, Utah is 1,537.

The airport now on the Utah side could help support a diverse economy beyond the gaming industry, Russell said.

Commission vice chairman Brad Roberts said the economic costs and benefits, not emotional issues, will be the deciding factors.

City leaders in Utah's Wendover, which looks old and dilapidated next to its glittering

The State Line Casino in West Wendover lies on the Nevada side of the border from Wendover, Utah, recently. Utah and Nevada sit geographically side by side, but ideologically, they couldn't be farther apart: Nevada has legal gambling, prostitution and indoor smoking. Utah, with its largely Mormon population, eschews Nevada's sinful, yet profitable, practices.

Nevada cousin, have already expressed support for the merge. But there are skeptics.

"I don't think it will happen in my lifetime," said Margaret Wheeler, the city recorder for Wendover, Utah. Wheeler, 71, has been a resident on the east side of the border since 1954 and has witnessed other failed attempts.

Both sides appear to be taking rhetorical whacks at an invisible wall that divides the two cities - a wall manifested in separate schools, city services and laws - by talking about ways to resolve Wendover's economic problems.

Gibbons spokeswoman Amy Spanbauer said West Wendover's opposition to the bill was probably due to a misunderstanding of what the bill means.

"It's not a mandate that this has to go forward," she said.

"If anything, we're empowering the local people to make their own decision," said Steve Peterson, a lawyer for the House Resources Committee, which Hansen heads. "It all comes down to negotiating."

Third man pleads guilty to Internet sex soliciting

BOISE (AP) - Another of the eight men accused of attempting to solicit sex over the Internet from a sheriff's detective posing as a 14-year-old girl pleaded guilty Thursday.

Spencer H. Tolman, 35, is the third man to plead guilty to an attempted lewd conduct with a minor before a trial could take place.

All eight arrested in the undercover operation are accused of making contact with an officer posing as a teenage girl in an Internet chat room and arranging to meet and have sex.

Deputy Ada County Prosecutor Shelley Armstrong recommended to 4th District Judge George Carey that Tolman be given a suspended prison sentence of seven years, up to 180 days in jail, be placed on seven years probation, undergo sex-offender treatment, register with the state as a sex-offender and be banned from using the Internet while on probation.

Tolman's attorney, Gar Hackney, told Carey his client had already undergone a sex-offender evaluation, which said he would be amenable to treatment in the community, so a prison sentence was not necessary.

As part of the plea agreement, Tolman also can appeal any sentence Carey will issue on July 17, Hackney said.

Gergen, project engineer with Riedesel Engineering of Twin Falls.

The remodeling project will move and widen the runways. Currently, the runways are 60-feet wide. After the construction the runways will be 75-feet wide.

New and improved landing lights will be installed along the runways. A lighted wind cone is to be built for night traffic. In addition to the airplane fuel that is already available at the airport, the airport will stock A1 jet fuel after the upgrade for the expected increase in jet traffic.

Two new taxi ways on the west side of the airport are included in the remodeling. A new beacon will also be installed, Gergen said.

Detrick said the extra taxi ways will encourage pilots to build more hangars.

The ability to handle and service small jets, along with the anticipated additional hangars, will eventually lead to further expansion at the airport, she said. The 240-acre airport has plenty of room in which to expand.

"The demand is there. The airport has had a limited amount of small jet traffic already, but after the upgrade we will be jet-capable," Detrick said. "The landings will be much safer with the wider runways."

coordinator for horse adoptions. "Usually we average between 50 and 60 adoptions."

The extra horses are kept in holding pens around Idaho. Horses are added to the holding pens as range management dictates.

Horses kept for adoption are from 1 to 6 years of age. Horses from 6 to 9 are returned to the herd area, while those over 10 are sent to a long-term holding pasture in Oklahoma.

Johnson has been training horses professionally for eight years. By September, he will have presented eight clinics for the BLM, plus clinics for Logan Coach. The clinics for the BLM and Logan Coach are free.

Johnson endorses Logan trailers by using a three-horse single load to transport horses between clinics. Private clinics may be arranged by contacting Mario and Cynthia Johnson, Box 42, Georgetown, Idaho, 82339, phone 208-847-0293.

Babbitt: Monument remains battleground

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) - Former Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt hiked through the Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument on Friday a year after it was created by President Clinton - and warned that it's still an environmental battleground.

Marking the first anniversary of the monument's creation, Babbitt hiked with fellow board members of the World Wildlife Fund on a trail through some of the 52,947 acres assembled from public lands along the Oregon-California border.

Babbitt said he believed the Bush Administration was targeting the Cascade-Siskiyou as a "test case" in its review of the monuments created by Clinton through the Antiquities Act, because the monument has strong local support and is located in a state with a strong conservation ethic.

"This is where the controversy is," he said. "This is the battleground. If this one goes, the rest will all come tumbling down."

Interior Department spokesman John Wright denied there is any such strategy, adding that the Cascade-Siskiyou was going through the same review as the rest of the monuments created by Clinton.

Environmentalists became concerned three months ago, when Interior Secretary Gale Norton said her department would review all 19 national monuments set aside by Clinton.

Recently, Norton added in testimony to Congress that there was no intention of dissolving any of them, Wright said.

But there is still a possibility that some may be modified through changes in the borders and management plans.

Last month, Interior indefinitely postponed issuing the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's draft plan for managing the Cascade-Siskiyou, located at the intersection of the Siskiyou Mountains and the Cascade Range. The department said time was needed to get familiar with the issues before starting a public discussion.

The delay raised the hopes of the monument's opponents, who have been working to cut back the size of the monument and dissolve sections that envelop private lands.

"Because of the high degree of biological diversity created by the intersection of mountain, desert and valley ecosystems, World Wildlife Fund has listed the Klamath-Siskiyou region around the monument as one of the 200 most important ecosystems in the world," said wildlife fund president Kathryn Fuller.

Federal finding means changes for community

CATALDO (AP) - No one will be evicted and no homes are in immediate danger of condemnation as the result of a new federal study proposing the town's center be designated a "floodway," but residents can expect some changes.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency study means that, in accordance with a Kootenai County ordinance, homeowners within the floodway no longer may add onto their homes or make "substantial improvements" to their property.

Previously, residents were allowed to build in the floodway area as long as they elevated their new structures.

"We will not issue building permits any longer, regardless of whether you raise it or not," said Rand Wichman, Kootenai County's interim planning director.

Cataldo, which survived serious flooding in 1996 and a subsequent "voluntary buyout" program that left a sour taste in many residents' mouths, is only the most recent northern Idaho community to have its flood map updated by the federal agency.

Other communities may soon follow.

The city of Kellogg has contacted Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, requesting that he intercede to help the city secure a revised flood map. And Chuck Moss, the state's director of the Bunker Hill project, has written to the federal agency.

Emergency Management Agency's regional office in Seattle, suggesting that flood maps be updated for communities scattered through Kootenai and Shoshone counties.

But in Cataldo, there is little enthusiasm for plans to update maps. Instead, there is confusion and anger at what residents contend has been almost no contact with the federal agencies and county officials making property decisions.

"People really don't know what to think, because they have just had no information," said Steve Mathews, who owns Peak Adventures in Cataldo. "Many residents of this town go, I wish they would just leave us alone."

cer, she had just retired and was moving to Burley to be near her sister, who is a nurse.

"I had no plans for medical problems," she said.

"She knew her sister would help her get through it."

Shortly after she moved here, her sister was diagnosed with breast cancer, and they went through treatments together, Mason said.

At her 50th birthday - a week after her surgery - Mason saw a lot of fear in the faces of her loved ones, she said.

"They thought I was going somewhere," Mason said.

She was determined to show them that she would survive.

"I need to thank everyone who has done all the hard work," she said.

Hard work has put the Rupert Relay For Life in the American Cancer Society's top 10 community fund-raisers in the nation, said Lucky Bourn, who auctioned off two quilts during the ceremony.

The quilts had hand-prints and names on them of people who had fought battles with cancer.

Bill Shockey bought one quilt for $3,050. His mother's name, Nerde Gates, was on the quilt.

Kathy Egan bought the other quilts for $3,074.

"She lost her husband, Don Egan, to cancer just five months ago," Bourn said. "His name is on the quilt."

New images show underside of Saturn's rings

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - The Hubble Space Telescope has caught Saturn's rings in full tilt, revealing new clues about the origin of the gossamer band that encircles the giant planet.

The images, captured at approximately 12-month intervals from 1996 through last year but only released this week, show the planet as its northern hemisphere swings from fall to winter.

With each passing year, Saturn's seasonal motion reveals more and more of its rings to Hubble's view. The process is slow, since Saturn takes more than 29 years to complete one lap around the sun, making each "season" on the planet equal to more than seven Earth years.

Since Saturn's rings are only some 30 feet thick, they are practically invisible when viewed edge-on. The most recent image, however, captures Saturn as its tilt reaches its extreme, or winter solstice in the planet's northern hemisphere.

Is your banker really the decision-maker?
Or is a higher power pulling the strings?

When you do business with the big banks, you're never really sure you're talking to the real decision-maker. That can be pretty frustrating when you need a quick answer on a loan. Or if you need to know by how much your checking account was overdrawn. Or why your mortgage loan hasn't been approved. The problem is that most of the big banks are pulling all the strings from some distant location. So, they don't always understand your situation. Sometimes they don't even care. All of which makes our bank a good place to take your business. We live, work, and play right here in the community. We probably know you and your family. We care about your business and are eager to serve you. And if anybody is going to be pulling any strings around here, it's going to be you.

Should the government execute McVeigh?

Yes

There's a reason why he must die

DENNIS PRAGER

The likely execution of Timothy McVeigh has presented opponents of capital punishment with a serious dilemma. None of their usual arguments for keeping all murderers alive applies here: McVeigh is not a member of a minority group, his guilt is not in doubt, and he has the highest caliber defense. Moreover, all polls indicate that most Americans - even a majority of opponents of capital punishment - support McVeigh's execution.

Consequently, opponents have launched a particularly vigorous campaign against executing murderers. Given the fervor and ubiquity of editorial opposition to capital punishment and the belief of increasing numbers of religious people that it is always immoral, it is a good time to rebut these arguments.

First, who support capital punishment for murder - and only for murder - are opponents to acknowledge that allowing all murderers to keep their lives after deliberately taking others' lives is, at the very least, unjust. If a man steals your bicycle and society allows him to keep and ride around on that bicycle, most of us would find that profoundly unjust. Why, then, is it just to allow everyone who steals a life to keep his own?

The answer is that it is not just - indeed, it is a cosmic injustice. Opponents of capital punishment acknowledge this, if only by implication. They never argue that keeping all murderers alive is just, but rather that innocents could be executed, that murderers of whites are disproportionately executed, that rich defendants get better lawyers and that Europe doesn't have capital punishment but Iraq does.

Second, allowing all murderers to keep their lives diminishes the worth of human life. The way society communicates what it thinks about a crime is by the punishment it metes out. Yet opponents of capital punishment argue that taking a murderer's life reduces the worth of human life.

This defies logic. If taking away a murderer's life reduces the worth of human life, taking away a rapist's freedom presumably reduces the value of freedom. But of course, the opposite is true. Taking away criminals' freedom is our only way of showing how much we value freedom.

The radical secularization of society also has led to greater opposition to capital punishment. There is a direct relationship between the amount of secular education a person receives and opposition to capital punishment. It is rare to find a liberal arts professor who advocates it.

How are we to explain the increasing opposition to capital punishment among religious? One major reason is that, thanks to the influence of the universities and secular media, secular values now influence religious values more than vice versa.

Mainstream Protestant and Catholic thought has always affirmed the right of a just government to take the life of murderers. As for Judaism, while many of the ancient rabbis opposed capital punishment (largely because they lived in the gladiator-loving, mass-crucifying Roman empire), Judaism's primary source of values, the Torah, is emphatic about capital punishment for murder. Putting murderers to death is the only law repeated in all five books of the Torah.

Another reason is the mistranslation and subsequent misunderstanding of the Sixth Commandment. The original Hebrew reads not "thou shalt not kill," but "thou shalt not murder." As for the current opposition of the American Catholic bishops and the pope, an additional reason is their opposition to abortion. They perceive that they will garner more respect for their opposition to abortion by unequivocally opposing killing anyone except in personal or national self-defense. Hence their constant reference to the "seamless" ethic of life. But Catholics who wish to retain their religion's millennia-old sup-

The system reeks with disparities

JOE DAVIDSON

There was something truly aggravating about lawyers for a killer of Timothy McVeigh's magnitude saying that he seeks a stay of execution to "promote integrity in when the system works like it usually does. Just Raul Garza's death date is June 19, eight days after McVeigh's. If McVeigh represents exceptional blunders in the system, Garza is the face of the commonplace. His profile reflects the everyday racial and geographic disparities that make the system so unjust. That bias is one reason attorneys have asked President Bush to grant clemency to Garza, a dope dealing killer.

The disparities were outlined in a Justice Department survey released in September. The study shows U.S. attorneys from just three of 94 federal jurisdictions accounted for one-fourth of recommendations to the attorney general to seek the death penalty from 1995 to 2000. Furthermore, like Garza, 85 percent of the convicts in the federal lethal injection queue are minorities. Almost 30 percent of those inmates, including Garza, were convicted in Texas, according to the Death Penalty Information Center, a private interest group.

Garza was scheduled to die in December, but former President Clinton postponed the execution after a broad coalition urged him to impose a moratorium on the federal death penalty. Clinton didn't go that far, but he did grant a reprieve. While doing so, he ordered additional capital punishment research, saying: "The examination of possible racial and regional bias should be completed before the United States goes forward with an execution.... In this area there is no room for error." Thanks to the McVeigh case, the likelihood of error is more evident now than ever. The disparities noted in the September report have not been corrected. The Citizens for a Moratorium on Federal Executions, the coalition that pressed Clinton to declare a moratorium, now wants Bush to halt all federal executions because their "reliability, fairness and equality" cannot be guaranteed.

Yet, despite the department's own figures, Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft on Wednesday told Congress there is no bias in the system and no need for a moratorium. He argued that minorities are less likely to face death after being charged. Repeated studies have demonstrated, however, that in federal capital offenses and throughout the criminal justice system, blacks and Latinos are charged more severely for similar crimes. Justice Department statistics show, for example, that white defendants are twice as likely to get plea agreements from federal prosecutors.

That McVeigh and Garza are guilty of heinous crimes is not the reason enough to proceed when their cases indicate something is very wrong with capital punishment. There have been no federal executions in 38 years, and there should be none as long as mistakes and racial and geographic bias infect the system with unfairness.

Yet, even if the unfairness is eliminated, McVeigh's case demonstrates why a moratorium should not end. Despite a multi-million-dollar defense to protect McVeigh's rights, despite a crack prosecution and law-enforcement team, 46 of 56 FBI offices failed to turn over 4,449 documents to his defense. It mistakes of that degree can be found just days before McVeigh's scheduled death, then mistakes in another case certainly could be found just days after death.

If the FBI fiasco is not reason enough for Bush to impose a moratorium, then the bias in the system should be. This time, mistakes may have only delayed a guilty man's execution. Next time, errors could kill the innocent. All of the time, we have a system that reeks with disparities.

Joe Davidson is a commentator on National Public Radio's "Morning Edition."

port of capital punishment can cite the church's greatest thinker, St. Augustine, who wrote in "The City of God" that it is "no way contrary to the commandment 'thou shalt not kill' to put criminals to death according to law or the rule of rational justice."

Allowing every murderer to keep his life is simply immoral. In their hearts, when confronted with McVeigh, even most opponents of capital punishment acknowledge this.

It's sad that it takes the murder of 168 people for many to acknowledge what their hearts know.

the criminal justice system." Although McVeigh appears to have decided to allow his execution to go forth next week, after U.S. District Judge Richard P. Matsch denied his request for a stay and the appeals court upheld that ruling, there's no doubt the criminal justice system - the death penalty system in particular - could use a big dose of integrity.

While McVeigh lacks the individual qualifications to promote that integrity, his case has become a major example of what is wrong with the death penalty. The FBI has demonstrated that big mistakes can be made in capital cases. Beyond McVeigh, the next scheduled federal execution provides a clear lesson why capital punishment is wrong, even

Don't point fingers at the innocent

I am in desperate need of some advice.

Recently, a Tywin Falls officer came over to my house investigating a theft that took place at a local music store. He proceeded to interrogate me as "the only suspect for this crime." I admitted to him that I had been in the store the day that the crime happened (as I happened to be a regular customer), but I have never stolen or planned stealing anything from them, let alone anyone else in my life.

So a few weeks have gone by and on Sunday, my wife, daughter and I were pulled over for speeding. The officer then informed me that I had a warrant out for my arrest, cuffed me in front of my family and incarcerated me for theft. I then spent the day in jail and missed work. I was never served with a summons or a warrant for any of this. I have few good friends and lead a humble yet busy life. I am a man of integrity whose world revolves around his family, school and work. I am completely honest.

Today I lost faith in the business in which I have been faithful to and the law which has not only questioned my integrity but broken my spirit. I took nothing from this business and yet I have been taken for more than a thousand dollars, a day missed at work and a day spent in jail. Would it have been worth it to approach the owner and offer compensation, even though I am innocent? It seems so with what I've lost so far.

I am truly sorry that they lost their inventory in a theft, but placing the blame on me seems like a way of justifying their loss.

My face and name are known among the owners of this store, and now they have taken the liberty to ruin both. I can't afford an attorney to help defend me because my entire savings was spent on bond - the money that feeds my family and pays the bills.

Where does one turn when he shows up in the wrong place at the wrong time and blame needs to be placed? How many truly innocent people are taken down just because a finger needs to be pointed?

I hope justice is served in the right direction.

Widow should receive money

I agree with the June 5 editorial which supports that the widow of Deputy James Moulton receive, as quickly as possible, the $100,000 death benefit voted by the state Legislature. Deputy Moulton died while performing his duties, even though there are serious questions regarding how and why Sheriff Weaver handled the search warrant procedure.

However, I find unacceptable the editorial's conclusion as to the details of how Moulton died. The editorial states he died "trying to serve a search warrant at the home of an Eden drug suspect, who greeted officers with a blazing handgun."

Yes, unfortunately, he died attempting to serve a warrant. But did the suspect greet the deputies with a blazing handgun?

Probably a drawn handgun, since the suspect had had his life recently threatened. All of the reports made public to date indicate no one knows (or at least no one has said) who fired first. It may well have been the sheriff's deputies defending what they perceived as a threat to their lives.

Shop at home for a home

If ever the admonishment to "shop at home" should be needed, it is when contemplating the purchase or refinancing of a home. In the past 30 days, I have sympathized with three different families as they attempted to work with out-of-state mortgage brokers to acquire financing. All three had already been working with the lender in excess of 30 days when I became aware of this predicament. All three had been advised to seek funding from local lenders who know our market and our economy but felt that by using a "friend," they were getting a better deal.

Days became weeks. One party was told after 30 days that they didn't qualify for the loan sought unless they were married, so the lender began work on a different type of loan.

After more faxes, calls, letters (and the day prior to scheduled closing), the lender found out that that she wasn't even approved to write that type of loan in Idaho!

Multiply this scene by the number of affected sellers, landlords, title officers, real estate agents and family members involved in any real estate transaction and you'll have a sense of the frustration level incurred.

So please shop and compare the hundreds of loan options available right here in southern Idaho. The lenders are people you see every day and they know their business. They also have lower fees than 90 percent of the lenders you'll find elsewhere.

WEST Idaho court backs ruling for gas firm

BOISE (AP) — The state has no authority to tax fuel sold on Indian reservations, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled Friday in rejecting tax claims against a Lewiston company for fuel sold to the Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe.

The high court unanimously upheld then-4th District Judge Daniel Eismann's late-1999 decision that the Idaho Tax Commission could not collect fuel tax from Goodman Oil Co. on the gas it picks up from the Exxon Terminal in Spokane, Wash., and delivers to the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's Renewah Auto Center for resale.

Eismann, now an Idaho Supreme Court Justice, and Justice Wayne Kidwell were not included in Friday's ruling. Two substitute justices joined in the opinion written by Justice Gerald Schroeder.

The Tax Commission, estimating the state could lose $1.6 million a year in gasoline taxes from Goodman Oil, appealed Eismann's finding that no federal law allowed the state to tax fuel sales in Indian country. The Supreme Court agreed with his conclusion that doing so interfered with the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's ability to exercise its sovereign functions.

The Tax Commission also argued that the fuel taxes and transfer fees were imposed on the licensed distributor, not customers on the Indian reservation, and therefore were enforceable. But the Supreme Court agreed with Eismann that such taxes and fees inevitably are passed on by the distributor.

Driver pleads innocent in deadly wreck

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) — A 22-year-old Washington State University student pleaded innocent Friday to charges stemming from a chain-reaction collision that left three people dead.

Frederick Russell, 22, entered innocent pleas to three counts of vehicular homicide and three counts of vehicular assault in Whitman County Superior Court.

If convicted, Russell could face life in prison, and a $50,000 fine on each charge, Whitman County Prosecutor Jim Kaufman said.

Russell, who suffered only minor injuries in the four-car collision, remains free after posting $5,000 bond.

The seven WSU students killed or injured were returning to Pullman from a movie in Moscow in a 1978 Cadillac driven by Brandon Clements.

Clements, 22, Wapato, and passengers Stacey G. Morrow of Milton and Ryan Sorensen, Westport, both 21, were killed in the collision Monday.

Four others riding in Clements' 1978 Cadillac were seriously injured and three remained in hospitals Friday.

The Washington State Patrol said a Chevy Blazer driven by Russell attempted to pass in a no-passing zone while traveling toward Moscow.

It struck a vehicle headed toward Pullman, then struck the car in which the three fatalities occurred. The Blazer was then rear-ended, and both vehicles burst into flames, the patrol said.

University goes all out to save water

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University used more than 223 million gallons of water last school year and its goal is to reduce that by 10 percent despite a hot, dry forecast.

Physical plant director Darrell Buffaloe said the university started to look into conservation when city officials voiced concerns about the lower aquifer levels after a dry winter.

"We knew the impact to the university would be significant," Buffaloe said.

"We looked into what our water consumption was and how to reduce it. We're trying to stay ahead and conserve now."

Idaho State is not watering the campus during the hottest part of the day and sprinkles only two days per week. A special committee discusses and implements conservation on campus.

Shaq, Kobe lead Lakers to series-tying win

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Shaquille O'Neal was at his best, Kobe Bryant was much better than last game and the Los Angeles Lakers built a big enough lead to hold off the no-quilt Philadelphia 76ers.

Tying the NBA record for blocked shots in a finals game, O'Neal had 28 points, 20 rebounds, nine assists and eight blocks as the Lakers owned the NBA Finals at one game apiece with a 98-89 victory Friday night.

Bryant had 31 points, eight rebounds and six assists - as well as an earful of trash talk from Allen Iverson in the final seconds.

The series grew more testy and confrontational in a game the Lakers controlled most of the way. But after O'Neal picked up his fifth foul with 6:38 remaining, Philadelphia used a 13-3 run to close within three points with 2:22 left.

O'Neal then got his ninth assist on a 3-pointer by Derek Fisher, and Bryant fed Robert Horry for a basket from close in that gave the Lakers a 94-86 lead, with 1:19 left. O'Neal's jump hook with 28 seconds left gave Los Angeles an eight-point lead that all but sealed the victory.

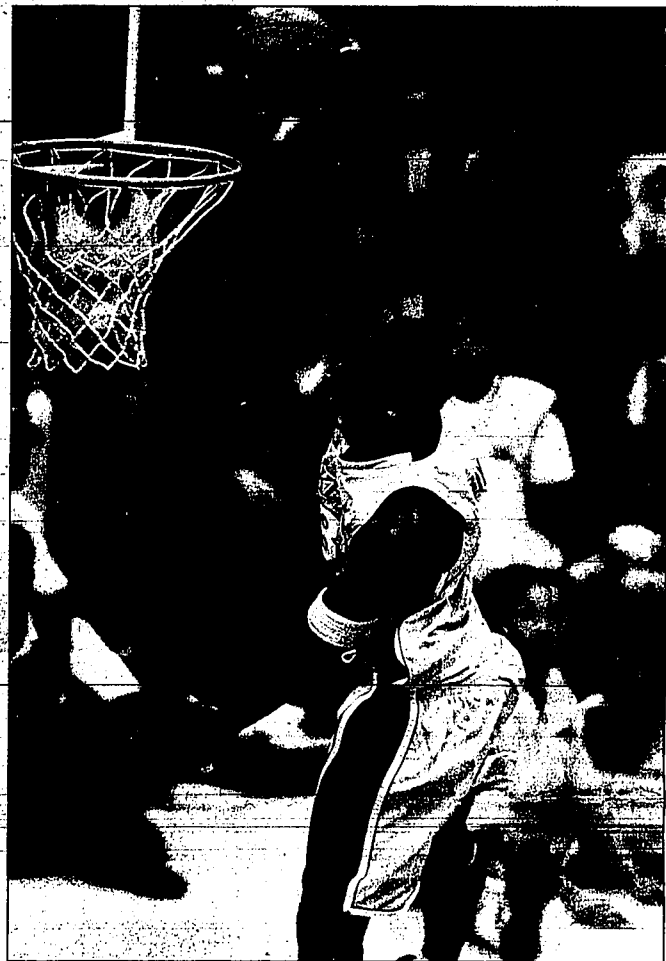

The series resumes Sunday night in Philadelphia, where Iverson will try to make a bigger contribution.
"He was held to 23 points, primarily because of Fisher's defense, and missed all four of his free throw attempts."

O'Neal tied the finals record for blocks held by Bill Walton, Hakeem Olajuwon and Patrick Ewing.

"They are playing at a high level. In Philly, they will be playing at a higher level," said O'Neal, who seemed to be leading the Lakers to a romp before picking up his third, fourth and fifth fouls in the first 5.5 minutes of the fourth quarter.

The Lakers made only two baskets over the next five minutes, 3-pointers by Brian Shaw and Fisher that kept the 76ers from catching up.
Iverson left the game with 19 seconds left and spent the rest of the time yelling at the Lakers, who were again heavy favorites despite their loss in the opener.

Bryant bounced back from his 7-of-22 shooting performance in Game 1, going 11-for-23 from the field and 6-for-8 from the line. Fisher, who was scoreless in the opener, added 14.

Los Angeles guard Kobe Bryant dunks during the first half of Game 2 of the NBA Finals against Philadelphia Friday.

Avs hope home ice seals win

The Associated Press

DENVER - Having staved off elimination, the Colorado Avalanche seized the momentum in the Stanley Cup finals and got the situation they wanted:

a deciding Game 7 at home with a chance to carry Ray Bourque his first cup.

If only they weren't a disappointing 1-2 here in this finals series.

In fact, neither the New Jersey Devils have shown much proficiency on home ice; the Devils also are 1-2 in their rink in the series.

Avalanche defenseman Adam Foote, who opened the scoring for Colorado in its 4-0 victory in Game 6 on Thursday night, has a theory about why home teams have fared so poorly, not only in the finals but in the playoffs overall this year.

"Sometimes home teams want to overcomplicate the game," Foote said Friday. "We don't want to do that. We want to bring it to them; not press them when it is not there."

In other words, not commit the fatal mistakes the Avs made in Game 5 at Pepsi Center, when their overaggressiveness set up several odd-man rushes for the Devils, resulting in New Jersey's 4-1 win.

"I think both teams are going to go out with similar game plans in terms of not beating themselves," Bourque said. "It's a game of mistakes, and whoever is going to make the fewest mistakes is going to win the hockey game."

In his 22nd - and possibly final - NHL season, Bourque is closer to winning his first Stanley Cup than he has ever been.

Asked Friday if he believed that fate, destiny or an unseen hand had anything to do with his quest, he said, "I'll answer that better after the game tomorrow. But I hope so."

"No, I think you create your own destiny and fate, by going out and working hard, just trying to get the job done."

Colorado forced a Game 7 because goaltender Patrick Roy, vilified after a puck-handling gaffe contributed to the Devils' come-from-behind win in Game 4, regained his form.

Roy stopped 24 shots Thursday night to earn his second shutout of the finals and a record-tying fourth of these playoffs. It was the 19th shutout of his postseason career, also a record.

This is the 11th time the finals have gone to a Game 7, with the home team winning eight. The last time a visiting team won a Game 7 was in 1971 when the Montreal Canadiens rallied from a 3-2 series deficit and took the deciding game in Chicago.

PARIS - One point from elimination six days ago, Gustavo Kuerten is now one win from his third French Open title.
The gangly Brazilian nicknamed Guga earned a berth in the final by beating Spaniard Juan Carlos Ferrero 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 Friday.

Kuerten won the championship at Roland Garros in 1997 and again last year. On Sunday against Spaniard Alex Corretja, Kuerten will try to become the sixth man to win three French titles and the first since Mats Wilander earned his third title in 1988.

Rangers keep Twin Falls A team winless

The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — The Twin Falls Cowboys' A team remained winless after the Idaho Falls Rangers swept an American Legion doubleheader 9-1 and 6-4 on Friday at Tauphus Park in Idaho Falls.

In Game 1, Hillcrest High pitcher Craig Roismun limited the Cowboys to only a single by Todd Reibin. In the late game, the Rangers tagged Twin Falls for three runs in the fifth to take a 6-4 lead, then held the Cowboys scoreless for the sweep.

A. J. Stone and Reibin led the Cowboys with triples. Twin Falls pitcher John Nance was hit for a face by a pitch and had to be taken to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center. A hospital spokesman said Nance was "alert, awake and in stable condition" with cuts on his face.

All-star baseball games tune up June 13

BOISE — The Idaho Selection Games, as part of the 2001 Pacific Northwest Baseball Championships, will be held June 13-14 at Memorial Stadium in Boise. The workouts will determine the Idaho contingent for the classes of 2002 and 2003.

The top 50 high school players from Idaho as identified by high school and college coaches and professional scouts will compete for 18-roster spots for each Idaho team at the Northwest Championship.

The Idaho selection committee consists of Albertson College coach Shawn Humberger, Jim Walker, College of Southern Idaho coach, Carl Moesche, Northwest Major League Scouting Bureau scout and Jeff McKay, a scout for the Kansas City Royals.

The third annual Pacific Northwest Championships will be held at Cheney Stadium in Tacoma, Wash. Aug. 19-22. The top high school baseball players from Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana and western Canada will compete in the five-game tournament in two separate tournaments of 2002 and 2003 graduates.

LOGAN, Utah — Utah State University basketball coach Stew Morrill will be conducting two Aggie basketball camps from June 13-15. The first camp from Monday through Wednesday, will be a "Big Man/Posters" camp, focusing on skills and post and perimeter players.

Registration begins from 10 a.m. to noon on Monday at the Valley View Towers Dormitory.

The second camp is a competition camp from June 13-15, allowing players to improve through 5-on-5, 3-on-3 and 1-on-1 drills. Registration begins Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon at the dorms. Camps are open to players entering fifth through 12th grades. Walk-ups are welcome.

Coach Morrill will also be conducting a morning camp from June 18-21 for boys and girls in second to ninth grades. Camps run from 8:30 a.m. to noon daily. Cost is $95.

For more information on camps, call (435) 797-2060.

TF Parks and Rec offers roller hockey

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department is offering roller hockey for ages 7 to adult June 12 through July 5. The non-competitive league will take place on Tuesdays at the South Park tennis courts. The league is open to all skill levels for beginners and advanced skaters. Cost is $12 per person within city limits and $15 for those outside of Twin Falls.

For more information, call 736-2265.

Tigers' Easley hits for the cycle

DETROIT — Damon Easley became the ninth Detroit Tigers player to hit for the cycle, accomplishing the feat Friday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Easley hit an RBI double in the third inning, a three-run homer in the fifth, a single in the sixth and a triple in the eighth.

The previous Detroit player to hit for the cycle was Travis Fryman on July 28, 1993.

Mariners manager returns after funeral

SEATTLE — Lou Finella rejoined the Seattle Mariners Friday night after missing four games because he went to Tampa, Fla., to attend his father-in-law's funeral.

While he was away, Seattle extended its franchise-record winning streak to 14 games and best-in-division record to 46-12 under bench coach John McLaren.

The Mariners again were missing center fielder Mike Cameron on Friday because of a sprained left knee. Cameron was injured Tuesday night and did not play in Wednesday's game.

Antonio Davis angered at link to sex scandal

TORONTO — Antonio Davis of the Toronto Raptors reportedly is angry at being linked to an Atlanta strip club that is the focus of a federal racketeering trial.

The club's former manager has testified that Davis was among those athletes he arranged for dancers to have sex with.

Thomas "Ziggy" Sicignano testified in Atlanta in the government's case against Club God owner Steve Kaplan and six associates.

Davis told the Toronto Sun he attended the club once several years ago, but was outraged at being named one of the club's regulars for whom sex with strippers was arranged.

Sanders, Lemieux join field for Elway Classic

BROOMFIELD, Colo. — Former Detroit Lions running back Barry Sanders and Pittsburgh Penguins star Mario Lemieux have been added to the field for the John Elway Elway Golf Classic June 30-July 1.

They join Michael Jordan, Johnny Bench, Ivan Lendl, Dan Marino, Emmitt Smith, Jim McMahon, Brian Griese and Mike Shanahan, all previously announced.

The event, at the Omni Interlocken Resort and Golf Club, is the eighth stop on the 2001 Celebrity Players Tour.

Elway also will compete for the $250,000 purse.

Minnesota hires Ball State coach

MINNEAPOLIS — Brenda Oldfield of Ball State was hired Friday as Minnesota's women's basketball coach. She replaces Cheryl Littlejohn, who was fired this spring for NCAA rules violations.

Oldfield was the Mid-American Conference coach of the year in 2000 after guiding Ball State to a 16-13 record. She was 35-22 in two seasons at Ball State.

The Golden Gophers fired Littlejohn on May 14 after a university investigation found 12 NCAA rules violations.

Sign up for Rocky Mountain Jr. PGA events

BOISE — The Rocky Mountain PGA Section is accepting registration applications for the 2001 Westfield Rocky Mountain Junior PGA Championship, contested at Bridger Creek Golf Course in Bozeman, Mont., June 27-28.

Locally, the Magic Valley PGA Junior Championship at Twin Falls Municipal will be held July 17-18. Deadline to enter is July 6.

The winners of the boys and girls, division of the Rocky Mountain PGA Junior Championship qualify to join nearly 100 of the nation's top junior golfers in the national Westfield Junior PGA Championship, July 18-21, at Westfield Group Country Club in Westfield Center, Ohio.

Junior golfers who wish to enter the Rocky Mountain Junior PGA Championship can obtain entry forms at local PGA golf facilities or contact the Rocky Mountain PGA at (208) 939-6028.

Sixers can't overcome Iverson's bad game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Allen Iverson launched a 3-pointer, appeared to get hit on the elbow by Derek Fisher and didn't get the call. He couldn't take any more.

Iverson, who averaged 10.1 free-throwers per game during the regular season, had just taken his 22nd shot and hadn't visited the foul line once. He let referee Steve Javie know about it and drew a technical foul.

After scoring 48 points to lead the Philadelphia 76ers to a 107-101 overtime victory over the Lakers in Game 1 of the NBA Finals, Iverson had just 23 Friday night. He also missed two crucial foul shots as Los Angeles evened the series with a 98-89 victory.

The NBA's MVP and former champion missed his first five shots and finished 10-of-29, including 3-of-10 from 3-point range. Iverson missed all four of his foul shots, including two that would've cut the deficit to three points with less than three minutes left.

It was the first time this season he didn't make at least one free throw.

Fisher was the primary defender on Iverson. Tyrone Hill, who was ineffective against Iverson on Wednesday night, harassed, clutched and grabbed him some more in Game 2. Kobe Bryant also guarded Iverson at times.

With Iverson struggling,

Los Angeles' Kobe Bryant reaches around a charging Allen Iverson in the second quarter of Game 2 in the NBA Finals in Los Angeles on Friday. The Lakers tied the series up 1-1 with a 98-89 win. Game 3 is Sunday in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia got some offensive help from an unlikely source: Todd MacCulloch.

The reserve big man scored a career-played-high 13 points and had five rebounds in 16 minutes. MacCulloch, who played two minutes in Game 1, averaged 3.1 points and 7.8 minutes in 14 of 19 playoff games he played before Friday night.

The Sixers got just five points from starting forwards Jumaine Jones and Tyrone Hill. Surprisingly, with Dikembe Mutombo on the bench for 8:56 from the end of the first quarter to the middle of the second, Philadelphia increased its lead from one point to seven.

Shaquille O'Neal scored five straight points once Mutombo exited, then was shut down by Matt Geiger and MacCulloch.

O'Neal scored six straight when Mutombo returned, with 6:28 left in the first half and the Lakers outscored Philadelphia 16-7 to take a 49-47 halftime lead.

Fisher bounces back from subpar effort

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Derek Fisher wasn't about to let one lousy game get him down.

Fisher, terrific in the playoffs before a below-par effort in Game 1 of the NBA Finals, bounced back Friday night, especially at the defensive end, as the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Philadelphia 76ers 98-89 to even the best-of-seven series, 1-1.

Philadelphia's Allen Iverson scored 48 points in the opener, many while being guarded by Fisher, who was unable to keep up with the Philadelphia star and sat out the last 20.5 minutes in favor of seldom-used Tyrone Lee.

With Fisher on him most of the way in Game 2, Iverson shot 10-of-29 in scoring only 23 points — quite a comedown after three straight efforts of 44 points or more.

While Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant provided the bulk of the Lakers' offense, Fisher scored 14 points capped by the game's biggest basket — a 3-point play from 2.09 left to give the Lakers a 92-86 lead.

The 76ers had outscored the Lakers 13-3 before that to cut an 86-73 lead to three points.

Fisher played 22 of a possible 24 minutes in the second half after sitting out the entire second quarter following a tough go offensively in the first period, when he made 1-of-4 shots.

He really made his impact felt late in the third quarter, getting a steal and dunk to give the Lakers a 74-65 lead, and a 3-point with 17.4 seconds left in the period to make it 77-67.

Then, with the Staples Center crowd at its loudest, he harassed Iverson into a 3-point airball as time ran out in the quarter.

At one point late in the third period, before Fisher's late five-point flurry, Iverson showed his frustration when he slapped Fisher's hand away from him in frustration while another Philadelphia player handled the ball.

Fisher, who missed the season's first 62 games after undergoing surgery to repair a stress fracture in his right foot last September, averaged a career-high 11.5 points.

The Lakers are 27-6 since he returned including 12 wins in 13 playoff games.

Fisher averaged 15.1 points in the Western Conference portion of the playoffs as the Lakers swept Portland, Sacramento and San Antonio and had 38 assists and only six turnovers while playing terrific defense.

However, he went scoreless while playing 23 minutes as the 76ers beat the Lakers 107-101 in overtime to begin the finals, and finished the game on the Los Angeles bench.

Fisher scored four points in the game's first 80 seconds to escape the doldrums, but didn't score again until the third quarter.

After barely hitting the rim on a 3-point shot and missing a layup late in the first quarter, he was benched for the entire second period, but that's a distant memory now.

Bryant showed his 15-point Game 1 effort was obviously nothing more than an off-night, surpassing that total in the first half with 16 points and finishing with 31.

Bryant and Fisher were outscored by Iverson 30-4 in the first half of the opener and 48-15 overall. It was certainly a different story in Game 2.

the barrage and countered with several shots to Frazier-Lyde's head.

The second round produced more of the same, and it ended with both slamming each other toe-to-toe.

In the third, Ali stunned Frazier-Lyde with two hard lefts to the head, knocked out her mouthpiece, and finished the round with a six-punch combination that staggered Frazier-Lyde some more.

whose experience on the big stage helped him win most of the key points.

In the second semifinal, the 13th-seeded Corretja disappointed the crowd by beating No. 10 Sebastian Grosjean of France 7-6 (2), 6-4, 6-4. Corretja's only other Grand Slam final was at Roland Garros in 1998, when he lost to Carlos Moyá.

"I haven't dropped a set since the first day, so that means I'm playing better than I even imagined when I came here," Corretja said.

Grosjean, who upset Andre Agassi in the quarterfinals, was unable to muster similar magic against Corretja.

"I don't have too many regrets," Grosjean said. "I played somebody stronger than me from the bus line. He played a great game."

Jennifer Capriati will be a heavy favorite today in her first French final against Kim Clijsters, Belgium's first Grand Slam final.

And the skinny Kuznetz will be heavy favorite Sunday. Perhaps his biggest challenge will be to come up with a creative way to celebrate his third title.

After surviving the marathon against Russell, Kuznetz carved a heart on the court with his racket.

What does he play for Sunday? "Maybe I can get some of Van Gogh's influence," he joked.

Davies vaults to front at Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Laura Davies shot a second straight 4-under 68 Friday to vault into the lead midway through the Rochester International.

Davies, a 19-time winner on the LPGA Tour, had missed the cut in five of her previous seven tournaments. She had an 8-under 136 total, one shot ahead of Brandie Burton.

Davies collected the first of five birdies on the Locust Hill course at No. 8 by hitting a bunker shot 8 feet away, then sinking the putt. She rolled in a 15-foot putt at No. 12 and another birdie from 12 feet at No. 14.

She took out her driver only once, at the par-5 17th, smacked it 275 yards into the wind, then finished by leaving her chip just 2 feet away for a final birdie.

Burton shot a 69 for 137 and was four shots ahead of Danielle Ammannacc, Laura Diaz and Maria Hjorth.

First-round leader Leta Lindley slipped to 143 after a 78. Defending champion Meg Mallon, a 13-time tour winner, shot a 74 for 143.

Estes led by three strokes before turning in a six-birdie, one-bogey round. His 15-under 127 total was just a stroke off John Cook's 1996 two-round total of 126, a PGA Tour record until Mark Calcavecchia's 125 at the Phoenix Open earlier this year.

Only Scott McCarron came close to challenging Estes on the TPC at Southwind course. McCarron got to 13 under before finishing with a 69, and was tied with Brent Schwarzrock (67) and Jesper Parnevik (64) at 131.

Senior player Holtgrieve takes over at NFL Classic

CLIFTON, N.J. — Jim Holtgrieve shot a 7-under-par 65 to take a 3-stroke lead after the first round of the NFL Golf Classic.

Jim Colbert, John Bland and Ted Goin shared a second round of 68. Larry Ziegler, John Schroeder, Mike Smith and Yoshiaki Yamamoto were another shot back.

Defending champion Lee Trevino was in a group at 71 with Ray Floyd, Dave Stockton and Tom Wargo.

Australasian Scott heads pack at English Open

MERIDEN, England — Australian Adam Scott overcame poor putting to shoot a 2-under 70 and take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the English Open.

Laura Davies, of England, watches her drive off the 13th tee during the second round of the Rochester International held at Locust Hill Country Club in Rochester, N.Y., Friday.

Rose of England, Peter O'Malley of Australia and Massimo Scarpa of Italy were at 139.

Sprague breaks streak at Texas

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jack Sprague broke a 22-race drought in the NASCAR truck series, and ended Dodge's winning streak Friday night by taking the O'Reilly 400.

Sprague, a two-time series champion and the only driver to appear in all 155 Craftsman Series races, drove his Chevrolet to a 4.66-second win over Brendan Gaughan in a Dodge at Texas Motor Speedway. His average speed of 133.620 mph was a track record.

Dodge trucks had won the first eight races this season, matching the circuit record held by Chevrolet, which won the first eight NASCAR trucks races in 1995.

It was Sprague's 20th career victory, the first since he won the Sears 200 at Evergreen Speedway in Washington on June 3, 2000. The win is second to Ron Hornaday's 25.

"We've had an awesome truck all year. We finally got one," Sprague said. "Better than anything else was having those Dodges. I've had my hands full with those things."

Sprague regained the lead for good on the 122nd of 167 laps. He led twice for a total of 54 laps.

M's wish list: No. 1 pitcher

SEATTLE (AP) — Mariners general manager Pat Gillick, already on the lookout for another bat for his team, says he's searching for a No. 1 starting pitcher as well.

"If you want to go to the end, you have to have a No. 1 starter," Gillick said Friday night before Seattle's game with San Diego. "A No. 1 starter is somebody (that) when you get in a playoff situation, you need to have to win."

Mariners opening day starter Freddy Garcia is still too young and inexperienced, Gillick said.

"Freddy Garcia might be at some point a No. 1 starter, and hopefully he will be by Freddy's 24 years old," he said.

The Mariners lost to the New York Yankees in six games in last season's AL championship series.

The Mariners had the best record in baseball at 46-12 going into Friday night's game, but Gillick said he was concerned with upsetting the team's chemistry.

Estes takes lead to four strokes at St. Jude Classic

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Bob Estes shot a 5-under-par 66 and pushed his lead to four strokes after two rounds of the St. Jude Classic.

AL grabs early bragging rights

BOSTON (AP) — David Cone won for the first time in 10 months, and Manny Ramirez led a three-homer attack as the Boston Red Sox beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Friday night.

Cone (1-1) pitched six innings for his best Sox since recovering from arm trouble. It was another step in his comeback after Boston signed him following his 4-14 record and 6.91 ERA for the New York Yankees last season.

Randy Wolf (4-6) gave up solo homers to Ramirez, Dante Bichette and Chris Lethbrunner. Derek Lowe got his seventh save.

Reds 7, Indians 4

CLEVELAND Alex Ochoa went 4 for 5 with three RBIs and five former Indians teamed up to lead Cincinnati.

Ochoa drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and added a two-run double in the ninth as the Reds rallied from a 3-0 deficit.

Bill Selby, released by Cleveland after last season, hit a two-run homer — his first since 1996 — and ex-Indians right-hander Jim Brower (3-3) picked up the win. Former Indians reliever Danby Graves pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Rich Rodriguez (2-2) was the loser.

Tigers 9, Brewers 4

DETROIT — Damon Easley became the ninth Detroit player to hit for the cycle, the first since Travis Fryman on July 28, 1993.

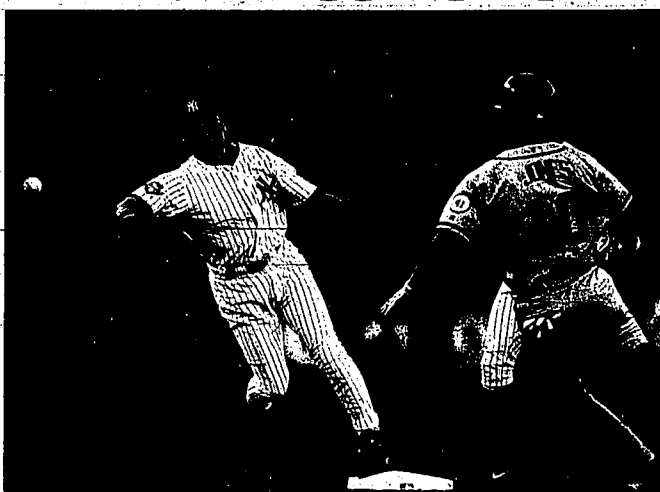

Easley hit an RBI, a double in the third inning, a three-run homer in Detroit's six-run fifth, a single in the sixth and a triple in the eighth.

Jeff Weaver (5-6) gave up three runs and seven hits in six innings and struck out seven. Paul Rigdon (3-4) gave up seven runs — six earned — six hits and four walks in 4-13 innings.

Yankees 7, Braves 4

NEW YORK — Andy Pettitte (7-4) took a three-hit shutout into the sixth inning before leaving with tightness in his left groin as the Yankees won for the fourth time in the series.

Bernie Williams and Scott Brosius homered and Tom Glavine (6-4) pitched seven as New York won the first game

Mariano Rivera struck out Mark DeRosa to end the game for his 18th save.

Devil Rays 7, Mets 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Ryan Rupe (3-5) allowed four hits in seven shutout innings, and Greg Vaughn and Fred McGriff homered on consecutive pitches as Tampa Bay built a 7-0 lead.

Steve Trachsel (1-7), in his first start for New York since he was demoted to the minor leagues three weeks ago, allowed four runs and seven hits in six-plus innings.

Orlones 5, Expos 0

BALTIMORE — Rookie Josh Towers (3-1) pitched a six-hit, no-run game as the Orioles beat Jerry Hairston Jr. 5-0 with an RBI, sending Montreal to its fourth straight loss.

Towers (3-1) got the first shutout for an Orioles rookie since Arthur Rhodes beat the New York Yankees on July 29, 1992.

Matt Blank (0-2) gave up three runs and five hits in five innings.

Twins 6, Pirates 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Torii Hunter hit a fifth-inning grand slam to overcome a 6-4 deficit as Minnesota avoided its first four-game losing streak this season.

Reliever Hector Carrasco (3-2) pitched four scoreless innings and struck out a career-high five. LaTroy Hawkins pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Blue Jays 7, Marlins 6

TORONTO — Shannon Stewart drove in the winning against Ricky Bones (2-1) run in the 10th inning with the 14th double of the game, the sixth by Toronto. Florida's eight set a team record.

Billy Koch (1-2), Toronto's sixth pitcher, got four outs for the win.

Diamondbacks 11, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Luis Gonzalez hit three home runs, and Randy Johnson (7-4) beat Kansas City for the ninth straight time.

Gonzalez, who had four RBIs, homered off Paul Byrd (0-1) in the first and fifth and against Doug Henry in the ninth to raise his total to 25. Only San Francisco's Barry Bonds, with 32 heading into the day, has hit more this season.

Johnson had 11 strikeouts in seven innings — raising his major-league leading total to 148 — and allowed one run.

White Sox 7, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Carlos Lee hit a grand slam in the bottom of the 10th inning Friday night to give the White Sox a dramatic 7-3 victory over the Cubs in the first game of the Crosstown Series.

The White Sox overcame a disastrous outing from David Wells (5-2) on Friday night — one earned — before leaving with back spasms after forcing only five batters in the shortest of his career.

Boston catcher Jason Varitek dives for a foul ball in the seventh inning Thursday evening at Fenway Park in Boston. He broke his elbow upon landing.

Elbow sidelines Boston catcher for 2-3 months

BOSTON (AP) — Red Sox catcher Jason Varitek will be sidelined two to three months with a broken right elbow, Boston general manager Dan Duquette said Friday.

Varitek, who started 47 of Boston's first 58 games, was hurt Thursday night while making a diving catch of a foul ball by Detroit's Shane Halter. Varitek was placed on the 15-day disabled list.

Missing the rest of the season "is always a possibility," said Varitek, who is batting .293. "I've only thought of it that much. I've only thought about when I can get back."

He was replaced in the lineup for Friday night's game against Philadelphia by Scott Hatteberg, who was batting .172 in his fifth season with Boston. The Red Sox called up catcher Marcus Jensen from Triple-A Pawtucket to replace Varitek on the roster.

D-backs' Stottlemire

to miss entire season
PHOENIX — Complications from elbow surgery will keep Todd Stottlemire from pitching this season.

The Arizona Diamondbacks said Friday that the 35-year-old right-hander may need up to nine months to fully recover and will undergo minor surgery on his right shoulder during that time.

Stottlemire had surgery Sept. 26 to readjust the nerve in his pitching elbow.

Report: Eight approved to bid on the Red Sox

BOSTON — Boston Bruins owner Jeremy Jacobs, former Pittsburgh Penguins owner Roger Marz and Cablevision chairman Charles Dolan are among the potential bidders for the Boston Red Sox, The Boston Globe reported Friday.

The paper said that major league baseball has cleared eight groups to see the team's financial records, the next step in the bidding process.

Michael McAule, a lawyer for the Jean R. Hawkey Trust, which is selling its 53.5 percent stake in the team, would not confirm the report. "The sale is a private process and we believe it would be unfair to characterize or comment on the identity of any potential bidder," Morreale told The Associated Press.

Bush throws first pitch

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Seattle Mariners, Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies have caught the attention of President Bush.

"I'm intrigued by the Cubs, they're going to have a tough road," the former Texas Rangers owner said Friday after throwing out the ceremonial first pitch of the College World Series. "St. Louis is a good ballclub."

"I think the Phillies are interesting. Seattle, they're an unbelievable club. That team, that really does speak to the value of a team, when you lose three stars like they've lost, and now they're playing great ball."

Bush was referring to Ken Griffey Jr. and Alex Rodriguez.

Unlike his ceremonial first pitch at Milwaukee's Miller Park on April 6, Bush reached the plate with his toss to Stanford catcher Ryan Garko.

Bush's windup Friday at Rosenblatt Stadium was a bit more conservative and his delivery more traditional.

"The pitch had a little hop on it, if you noticed," Bush said later on ESPN's telecast.

"I got out there (in Milwaukee) and tried to go with some heat. It got a way from me," the president said. "All kinds of excuses. The bulletproof vest excuse. I learned my lesson, and that is not to try to show off and just get it in there."

Bush maintained he wouldn't get involved if there's a work stoppage after baseball's labor

With one out in the sixth, Pettitte came up lame on the follow-through on his first pitch to Rafael Furcal. He hopped on the mound and reached for his groin area.

Trainer Steve Donohue rushed out to the mound, followed by pitching coach Mel Stottlemire and manager Joe Torre. After two warmup pitches, Pettitte was replaced by Mike Stanton. The Yankees led the Braves 5-0 at the time.

Sheffield activated, Pena designated for assignment

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers activated left fielder Gary Sheffield from the 15-day disabled list before Friday night's game against the Anaheim Angels, and designated catcher Angel Pena for assignment.

Sheffield was sidelined since May 24 because of a torn ligament in his left index finger. He had played with the injury for a month before that, but the pain and the swelling became too great.

He was hitting .293 with 11 home runs, 26 RBIs and a .551 slugging percentage when he went on the DL.

Father of former baseball pitcher critical after crash

HARBOR SPRINGS, Mich. — The father of former major-league pitcher Jim Abbott was in critical condition Friday after a traffic accident near his home.

After Michael Abbott, 52, lost control of his 1992 car about Wednesday night, the vehicle rolled and caught fire, police said.

Jim Abbott, who was born without a right hand, spent 11 years in the major leagues and won the gold medal game at the 1988 Olympics. He retired in 1999 shortly after being released by the Milwaukee Brewers.

Stanford rallies from 8-0 to win 13-11

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Ryan Garko hit a go-ahead RBI single in the seventh inning as Stanford rallied to beat Tulane 13-11 in the longest nine-inning game in College World Series history on Friday in front of a crowd that included President Bush.

Garko, who caught Bush's ceremonial opening game first pitch hours before, singled to center during the Cardinal's five-run seventh to give Stanford its first lead in a game Tulane (55-12) controlled early.

The game lasted 4 hours, 18 minutes — surpassing the previous mark of 4:01 by Arizona State and Oklahoma State in 1984. It was also the highest-scoring opening game in College World Series history.

Sam Fuld had three RBIs, and Jonny Ash and Jason VanMeeteren two each for the Cardinal (49-16), who are in the College World Series for a school-record third straight year.

Mike Wodnicki (7-1) allowed two runs and three hits in 1-23 innings for the victory, the Cardinal's sixth in seven games.

After J.D. Wilcox struck a run in the ninth, Jeff Bruckner, normally a starter, came in with runners on second and third and no outs and got three outs for his first save of the season.

Tulane scored five runs on seven hits, including five straight, off Stanford ace Jeremy Guthrie to "take a 5-0 lead in the second. Guthrie lasted just 1.3 innings, allowed all five runs — both season worsts — and threw just 38 pitches.

The Green Wave added three more runs in the third off Tim Cunningham and John Hudgins with Scott Madden's sacrifice fly and Jon Kaplan's two-run double making it 8-0.

But Stanford broke through with seven runs in the fifth. Tulane starter Nick Bourgeois walked Chris O'Riordan to lead

The game was the teams' first meeting since 1982.

Cal State Fullerton 5, Nebraska 4

Aaron Rifkin hit a two-run homer for the Titans (47-16), playing before a partisan Nebraska crowd in their 11th CWS appearance.

Jon Smith (11-2) lasted only until the sixth inning but got the win after allowing four runs on seven hits and struck out seven. Freshman closer Chad Cordero struck out four of the seven batters he faced to earn his 14th save.

Shane Komine (14-2) struck out nine as his streak of 14 straight wins ended.

John Cole hit a pair of solo homers and Matt Hopper also connected for the Cornhuskers (50-15), who rallied to tie it twice after falling behind 3-0, but never took a lead. Nebraska had won nine straight coming into its first College World Series.

The Titans will play Stanford, a 13-11 winner over Tulane earlier Friday, on Sunday night. The Huskers and Green Wave will play Sunday afternoon in a game that will knock-out one of the College World Series newcomers.

Bacani's leadoff homer to left of Kominie in the fifth turned out to be the game-winner. Nebraska had just tied it in the top half of the inning on Cole's homer to center, his fourth in the last five games.

The Titans silenced the crowd of 22,899, mostly donned in red and white, with a three-run first inning. Bacani led off with a double, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored on a single by Jason Corapaci. Rifkin followed with a shot deep into the bleachers in left field, leaving the Husker-friendly crowd in stunned silence.

They came back to life in the second when Nebraska scored a run and had runners on second and third with nobody out, but the Huskers didn't take advantage of it. Jeff Bleivins was thrown out at home on a fielder's choice and Smith picked off Josh Hesse when he strayed too far off second.

Dan Johnson, who led off the inning with a double, scored on a double to right by Hesse.

The Huskers tied the game at 3-3 in the third on solo homers by Cole and Hopper. Fullerton got another run in the bottom of the third when Robert Guzman reached on an error and scored on Brett Kay's single to right, but Cole came back and tied it again in the fifth with his 11th homer of the season.

Cole, whose first homer hit just above the 408-foot mark in dead center, hit another shot about 15 feet to the left to tie it at 4. It was his first two-homer game of the season and third in his career.

The three runs Komine gave up in the first matched the total he gave up in the first inning all season.

More than two horses have a shot at Belmont Stakes

By Tom Keiser
The Baltimore Sun

ELMONT, N.Y. — If you want a showdown, watch a Western. The Belmont Stakes is more than a two-horse duel.

Granted, the story line holds classic appeal: Monarchos, the Kentucky Derby winner, meets Point Given, the Preakness winner, in their pivotal clash today at Belmont Park.

But the $1 million Belmont, the third leg of racing's Triple Crown, features a nine-horse field so strong and a cast of characters so intriguing that a Monarchos-Point Given showdown loses its luster. The truth is, racing aficionados don't even place the two horses on the same plane.

Point Given is still the potential super horse, despite his Kentucky Derby flop. An imposing son of Thunder Gulch, winner of the 1995 Kentucky Derby and Belmont, Point Given has charisma.

He is stunning, an oversized colt whose chestnut coat glistens and whose eyes flash with mischief. He rears up repeatedly, forcing his cool-headed exercise rider, Pepe Aragon, to cling to his neck as if it were a limb breaking off a giant tree trunk.

The public loves the flashy Point Given — and for good reason. Except for his puzzling performance in the Kentucky Derby, he has finished first or second in 10 races.

"This horse is doing so good that I wish we had a Triple Crown on the line this year," said trainer Bob Baffert.

Just as Baffert had with Point Given after the Derby, John Ward Jr., trainer of Monarchos, said his horse in the Preakness had not care for the track. That is a trainer's No. 1 excuse for dull efforts.

In the Belmont, the pace factor will probably be paramount again. No one doubts who will streak to the front, including Todd Fletcher, trainer of Balto Star.

"He will be on the lead," Fletcher said. "I'm sure of that."

If Balto Star, son of the sprinter Glitterman, can conserve his speed for the first half of the 1 1/2-mile race, he might remain a factor into the stretch. Fletcher replaced the gelding's jockey, Mark Guidry, with Chris McCarron with that in mind. McCarron is an expert at judging pace.

The more important questions may be: When will the jockeys on the horses chasing Balto Star launch their decisive drives? Will they keep their horses closer than usual for fear that McCarron will control the pace and steal the race? And if they do pace closer, will their mounts still pack their usual late, powerful punch?

Gordon takes pole; Robinson qualifies

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Jeff Gordon continued his march back to the top of NASCAR on Friday, and Shawna Robinson officially started her drive into the history books.

Gordon, on a resurgence after a disappointing 2000 season, turned a lap of 188.250 mph around Michigan International Speedway to win the pole for the Kmart 400.

It was his third pole this season and 36th of his career — three of which have come on this 2-mile oval. That ties him with Alan Kulwicki for the record.

But the feat was overshadowed by Robinson, who qualified 32nd. When she takes the green flag on Sunday, Robinson will be the first woman to start a Winston Cup race since 1989.

"This means everything to me," she said as her crew from MK Racing embraced her in hugs. "Nobody wants it more than I do. This isn't about making one race, this is about the future and racing full-time next year."

Robinson, who will attempt to make four more Winston Cup races this season before trying a full schedule in 2002, tried hard to shift the focus away from her gender.

But wearing a tiny T-shirt that showed her navel and a pair of capri pants, the 36-year-old mother of two couldn't help but stand apart from the 42 men in the field. "I'm a racer who just happens to be a girl," she said. "I grew up around race tracks and my dad raised me to be competitive." Gordon, meanwhile, had the pole in hand even though Ricky Rudd gave him a scare. Rudd, the last car to attempt to qualify, came within two one-thousandths of a second of knocking Gordon off the pole. Rudd ran a lap at 188.240 to earn his Ford the second starting spot.

Mike Skinner will start third in a Chevrolet, followed by Dave Blaney in a Dodge, Ricky Craven and Bill Elliott were next in Fords.

No place like the Lone Star State for IRL drivers

FORT WORTH, Texas — For Indy Racing League drivers, there is no place like the Texas Motor Speedway.

Packs of 8 to 12 cars going more than 210 mph lap after lap while separated by only inches have become the norm on the track's 1.5-mile high-banked oval, where the Casino Magic 500 will be run tonight.

Kelley Racing teammates Mark Dismore and Sharp will start from the front row Saturday night.

McLarens race out front after first day at Canadian GP

MONTREAL — Team McLaren drivers Mika Hakkinen and David Coulthard were fastest Friday, while nearly everyone was wondering what happened to Ferrari's Michael Schumacher in opening practice for the Canadian Grand Prix.

Coulthard, who trails defending series champion Schumacher 52-40 in season points, was close behind at 1:18.086.

Schumacher usually is a force at the Canadian track, where he has won two straight poles and four of the past seven races, including last year's. But he failed to improve on his top lap of the morning and was 11th overall.

Hawkers will need business license to sell tickets

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — People selling Olympic tickets on the street or wearing T-shirts or pins will need a $130 "solictor's license" during the 2002 Winter Games.

To get the licenses, they will have to undergo criminal background checks.

Salt Lake City licensing watchdogs want to avoid the scenario of three years ago when scalpers scammed hundreds of Utah Jazz fans with $500 and $600 duplicate Delta Center tickets to the NBA Finals. None of the con artists was caught.

It already costs $95 for a solictor's license for salespeople pitching magazine subscriptions, cleaning supplies and perfume door to door or on downtown streets.

Brokers who sell tickets out of offices or in newspaper advertisements would not need a solictor's license. "Police officers will use their discretion when ticketing violators. For example, a couple from Minnesota with an extra hockey ticket to sell on the street corner would not need a license."

Drake expects to open a "one-stop shop" in a downtown city office building this fall where vendors can apply for business licenses, file tax forms and get permits.

Bank Repossessed Cars to be Sold Directly to the Public

Burley Dealership Disposing of 251 Bank Repos and Other Used Vehicles for Only $59 Then Start Making Payments*

BURLEY, ID - Bank Repossessed cars and trucks are among the most hunted-for bargains in the automotive industry. Unfortunately for John Q. Public, they're also the hardest to come by.

Banks often unload repossessed vehicles to car dealers at rock-bottom prices - allowing dealers to re-sell them for retail value. But bargain-seekers can take heart: This week, Goode Motors is going to change that.

This Wednesday, June 6th through Saturday, June 9th, Goode Motors will offer 251 bank repossessed, lease return and other used vehicles for thousands below normal values, and pass the savings on to their customers.

"These vehicles have been acquired at incredible savings from banks (repos), auctions, and other sources," Garth Williams of Goode Motors said. "We have been asked to eliminate this inventory immediately - regardless of loss of profit. And if that means selling these vehicles for up to thousands below normal values, then that's what we'll do."

Every bank repossessed and other pre-owned vehicle will be available for just a $59 acquisition fee* then start making payments.

prompt, quality service and the best finance terms possible. Mr. Williams said, "We'll have over $4 million in financing available for this event, so chances are we can arrange financing for just about anyone who is employed, regardless of past credit history."

Trade-ins will be accepted, and customers are encouraged to bring their title or payment book to expedite delivery.

"The opportunity Idaho bargain-hunters have been waiting for happens this Wednesday through Saturday at Goode Motors. Every bank repo and other used vehicle is just $59 then start making payments.* Customers won't see savings like this again all year," said Mr. Williams.

After the $59 SuperSale ends at 6:00 p.m. on Saturday, June 9th, Goode Motors will send many of these vehicles to auction. Any questions can be directed to (208) 878-5611 or 1-800-590-FORD. Goode Motors is located at 1096 E. Main St. in Burley.

*LIMIT 2 VEHICLES PER HOUSEHOLD, PLEASE. With approved credit. $59 plus tax, title & fees. Down payment may be required for credit approval. See dealer for details. Example: '96 Cavalier. Agency honors Magic Valley Bank

TWIN FALLS - As part of National Homeownership Week, USDA Rural Development honored Magic Valley Bank for "its outstanding commitment to homeownership in Idaho" as a participating lender in the Rural Development's Guaranteed Rural Housing Program.

Magic Valley Bank became an approved lender for the program in December 1999. It is the leading lender this year, out of 52 lenders who participate in the program in Idaho, Rural Development said. Magic Valley Bank loans throughout the valley, with 60 percent of the guaranteed loans being made in the Mini-Cassia area.

Through the program, participating lenders provide financing for homebuyers who cannot meet the rates, terms or down payment requirements of a conventional loan.

Another top executive to leave Home Depot

ATLANTA - Home Depot's top merchandising executive is leaving the company, marking another top-tier change at the retailer, which has a Twin Falls store.

Mark Baker, who's responsible for Home Depot's vast product mix, plans to resign by the end of the summer to pursue business interests outside of the home improvement industry.

Baker's exit is the latest change in a series of management shifts at Atlanta-based Home Depot since new Chief Executive Bob Nardelli took over in December.

Baker, 43, joined Home Depot in 1996 and was promoted to executive vice president of merchandising last October.

Home Depot said Baker's successor will be named prior to his departure.

Baker is leaving in the midst of an overhaul at Home Depot. Nardelli, a General Electric veteran, is brought in to juice up the retailer's operations, is on a mission to cut costs. The retailer's inventory, in particular, has been under a microscope as Nardelli tries to move slow-selling products.

In recent months, Nardelli has fired duties among his top executives and boots in colleagues from GE to shore up the management team. Accounting for Baker's departure, four of the seven executives remaining in the top tier have strong GE ties.

Nardelli has recruited two directors who sit on GE's board as well. Claudio Gonzalez, chairman and CEO of Kimberly-Clark de Mexico, joined Home Depot's board last month, as did Roger Penske, founder and chairman of Penske Corp.

Toilet humor has a place in cleaning businesses

You might think that cleaning septic tanks and portable toilets lacks humor.

"When the toilet is overflowing, it's hard to smile about it," Barbara McKee points out from her office at McKee Excavation in Runville.

Toilet humor does have its place, however, especially in a competitive business where a picture that speaks a thousand words might be inappreciated.

McKee is the proprietor of Septic Service uses the apt slogan, "A Straight Flush Beats a Full House," and back in Runville, McKee Excavation claims to be "1 in the 2 business."

"It was just too good to pass up," laughs McKee, remembering when her late husband Wayne came up with the phrase more than 30 years ago. "It just seemed to come off the top of his head, though I don't know if anyone else uses it."

McKee admits that she didn't want to keep the slogan, but her son, who now runs the family business, talked her into keeping it.

"The important thing is that customer's problems get solved as quickly and painlessly as possible," McKee said. "Then everybody is happy."

And, as in most lines of work, a sense of humor never hurts - especially in a business where well-stuff happens.

Governor, Chinese ambassador meet

The Associated Press

BOISE - Gov. Dirk Kempthorne said China's economic growth promises to further increase the importance of Idaho exports to the world's most populous nation, identifying the state's fifth-largest trading partner.

Kempthorne met Friday with Yang Jiechi, the Chinese ambassador to the United States, and members of a 26-member trade delegation from Shanghai visiting the state this week.

"China is a long way away from Idaho, but a good beginning has already been made in our cooperation," Yang said during a news conference in Kempthorne's office after a private meeting with the governor.

Idaho exports to China grew from $84.7 million in 1998 to $311.7 million last year. More than half those exports were computers and electronic components, and semiconductors and industrial machinery accounted for almost 19 percent more.

But Kempthorne said the Asian nation's need for building materials and other goods should enable additional trade increases.

"China is an important market for Idaho products and services, and international trade is an equally important component of our state's economy," he said. "Shanghai is a dynamic city with a growth economy, presenting many opportunities for Idaho businesses."

Charles Xue, president of Shanghai Housing Development Co., said his company was considering use of lumber and other building materials from Idaho in construction of single-family housing for which there is incredible demand.

Yang said there also is the opportunity to increase tourism exchanges between China and Idaho as a growing number of his nation's citizens earn more disposable income.

"I hope that more will be coming to this country. There are certain procedures that have to be worked out, and I hope they will be worked out," he said. "Idaho certainly has a lot to offer."

Kempthorne invited Yang to attend a game in Boise next Jan. 25, before the opening of the Olympic Winter Games in Salt Lake City, between the U.S. and Chinese women's hockey teams.

Before the ambassador's arrival, the Shanghai delegation of government leaders, educators and commercial officers met Wednesday and Thursday with representatives of such companies as Micron Technology Inc., Hewlett-Packard, J.R. Simplot Co. and TJ International. Meetings also were conducted with officials from Boise State University, Idaho State University and the University of Idaho.

A showcase of Idaho products was organized for the delegation Friday, followed by a trip to the Magic Valley.

Target Corp. reports store sales decline

Knight Ridder News Service

SAINT PAUL, Minn. - Target Corp.'s department store division is facing the challenge of easing a new name into two of its three key markets at a time when sales are lagging behind those of retailers operating similar stores.

For the second straight month, Target Corp., which has a discount store in Twin Falls, on Thursday reported that sales at its department stores open at least a year, or "same store sales," are down 6 percent in May from comparable period a year ago. For the first five months of this year, sales at its Marshall Field's, Dayton's and Hudson's stores have dipped nearly 5 percent.

That performance ranks near the bottom of other public companies with similar format department stores, all of which have operated in a tough retail environment. For May, only Saks - which owns Saks Fifth Avenue, Herberger's and others - fared worse among similar-type retailers, with a 10.8 percent decline.

Target Corp.'s department store division's woes come as it rolls out a rebranding effort that will bring its 19 Dayton's and 21 Hudson's stores under the Marshall Field's name. The Twin Cities is Dayton's territory, Hudson's rules in Detroit and Marshall Field's is centered in Chicago.

With a sluggish national economy that has hurt scores of retailers, the question is: What effect will Target's rebranding have on the department store division? Retail analysts contend that, over the long haul, Target's move should increase the brand strength of its department store division, improve marketing, increase business and cut costs.

But Steven Kernkraut, an analyst at Bear Stearns, warned: "The name change, in and of itself, won't be the cure-all. The key, he said, is whether better merchandising accompanies the united brand."

Target Corp.'s makeover to a single department store name is a massive effort that will affect the all department store operations, from shopping bags to storefronts. The company announced its plans in January, explaining that the expense to make the switch - which it won't disclose - should boost profits and its national brand recognition.

Already, Target Corp. has redesigned and publicized its Marshall Field's department store Web site, a first step in the retailer's rebranding effort.

Earnings warning, glitch hurt markets

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - An earnings warning from Juniper Networks sent stocks tumbling Friday in a selloff exacerbated by computer problems that shuttered the New York Stock Exchange for much of the morning.

NYSE trading resumed at about 11:35 a.m. for most stocks, though some companies did not start trading until early afternoon.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 113.74 to 10,977.00, a drop of about 1 percent. Prior to the NYSE's reopening, the Dow which consists primarily of NYSE stocks, had slipped about 36 points.

Broader stock indicators also fell. The technology-focused Nasdaq composite index dropped 48.90 to 2,215.10, a 2.2 percent decline, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index slipped nearly 1 percent, down 12.00 at 1,264.96.

The NYSE had opened for trading as usual at 9:30 a.m. Friday, but halted trading at about 10:10 a.m. because of a failed software installation that was affecting trading in about half of the exchange's 3,500 listed stocks.

The Nasdaq Stock Market as well as other exchanges remained open throughout the NYSE's problems, but volume was light until the NYSE reopened.

Bush to nominate Tennessee banker to Fed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will nominate Susan Bies, a top official with a Tennessee bank, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, the White House announced Friday.

If confirmed by the Senate, Bies, 54, would be the only woman on the seven-member board of governors and the only Fed member with direct experience in commercial banking.

Since 1980, Bies has worked for Memphis-headquartered First Tennessee National Corp., a large regional bank holding company with 200 branches in Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas. She was president of the bank as executive vice president in charge of risk management.

Bies, who holds a doctorate in economics from Northwestern University, worked as bank economist at the Fed's St. Louis regional bank from 1970 to 1972. She also taught economics at Rhodes College in Memphis and Wayne State University in New York before joining First Tennessee.

Private economists viewed the choice of Bies as a mainstream selection that gave no hint that the Bush administration planned to push monetary policy in any particular direction.

While the normal term for a Fed board member is 14 years, Bush will have the chance to fill five of the seven positions in the first year of his presidency. Two of the positions have been vacant for two years.

However, economists said as long as Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan remains in place, the Fed's interest rate policy will bear his strong imprint, given his 14 years as chairman and the success he has had guiding the economy during that time.

"It will remain the Greenspan Fed for as long as he is there," said David Wynn, chief economist at Standard & Poor's in New York. Greenspan's current term as chairman ends on June 20, 2004.

Source: Resort owners get extension on payment

Knight Ridder News Service

The owners of the Aladdin were granted an extension through Tuesday on the payment of $37 million in financial shortfall in the Strip megaresort's operations, a knowledgeable source said Thursday.

Representatives of the Sommer Family Trust and London Clubs International have been talking with bankers about pushing that extension through July 31 and hope to point to improving profits as they seek an overhaul of the payment requirements, the source said.

Aladdin executives could join as early as next week with Los Angeles-based Show Clubs of America to form a new partner "Baywatch" star Carmen Electra has signed a 10-year deal to perform in a nightly production show in a 1,200-seat showroom to be built on the megaresort's mezzanine level.

Employing a series of slickly produced TV commercials that have aired locally and in Southern California, Aladdin executives have repositioned the 2,547-room megaresort as a hip night spot that appeals to the Mandalay Bay-Hard Rock, Hotel crowd.

Sommer Family Trust and London Clubs International have been negotiating with their bankers for more than a week after missing the scheduled May 29 payment.

The $37 million is needed to close a shortfall in the Aladdin's operating funds. That came about because the privately owned property failed to generate cash flow at a level that would equal at least $50 million a year.

Recent quarterly results suggest that the Aladdin will generate 2001 cash flow of $34 million to $60 million, according to Andrew Zarnett, a Deutsche Banc Alex. Brown bond analyst.

against disclosing such information until it's released in a formal filing with the government agency.

The Aladdin was also financed with publicly traded bonds totaling $221.5 million that carry a 13.5 percent interest rate and have been trading at about 22 cents on the dollar in a market of limited interest.

The keep-well agreement was designed to assure Aladdin bankers that the property's operations would generate enough money to continue to meet all debt requirements. But Aladdin owners argue the money should be reinvested in the property to broaden business.

"This whole thing is viewed as being positive move because it indicates that people are seeing light at the end of the tunnel," the source said. "The banks would not have done it if there was a continued run of negativity."

Credit Suisse First Boston bond analyst John Leupp believes that whether or not the payment schedule is reconfigured, the Aladdin is plagued by fundamental problems.

Bristol-Myers to buy drug business for $7.8 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. believes its $7.8 billion cash offer for the drug business of DuPont will give it a promising pipeline of drugs under development, and analysts say Bristol-Myers could use the help.

Last year, Bristol-Myers' patent expired on Taxol, a breast cancer drug with $1.5 billion in sales, opening the door to competition from companies producing generic versions. And this year, the company's second best-selling drug — Glucophage, for treatment of diabetes — goes off patent.

The deal with DuPont announced Thursday gives "credibility to Bristol's statements that it would concentrate on the pharmaceutical business," said analyst Bob Kirby of Edward Jones.

The DuPont deal is in line with Bristol-Myers' strategy of growing through acquisitions, joint ventures and its development, said Peter Dolan, company president and chief executive officer. He said several drugs under development by DuPont "have the potential to address serious unmet medical needs, and contribute to the overall pharmaceutical sales and earnings growth in the future."

Report says Disney Co. is expected to lay off workers

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Walt Disney Co. is expected to lay off 3,000 workers, including many from its theme parks and entertainment department, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday.

Layoffs will include about 24 employees in the Disney-owned ABC network's news operation and another 25 people in Disney's movie, music, home entertainment and TV animation divisions, the Times said. The 4,000 positions represent nearly 3 percent of the company's 120,000 workers. The cuts are expected to save up to $400 million a year.

The cuts are the final phase of Disney's plan to cut 4,000 jobs worldwide, announced in March.

About 3,000 employees accepted the company's voluntary severance package, Disney spokesman John Dreyer told the newspaper.

Dreyer would not say where the cuts will occur, but dozens of layoffs were expected at theme parks in Anaheim and Orlando, Fla., and in its struggling feature animation department.

Continued from B8 Traders this week has been choppily - a contrast with the huge rally stocks enjoyed this spring. Analysts attribute the action to an expected fallback from the rally as well as investors' unwillingness to make big commitments with second-quarter results approaching...

Continued from B8 Once trading resumed, the market's focus returned to what has been the theme in recent sessions - earnings, particularly in the volatile technology sector. Juniper Networks fell $8.61 to $38.02 on news it was lowering its forecast for second-quarter results and cutting $ to 9 percent of its work force because of sluggish demand for its networking products...

Continued from B8 Investors also sent Intel lower, even though the semiconductor tech company had said it expects to meet earnings forecasts. The chip maker fell 47 cents to $30.67, pulling back after a healthy gain Thursday. Analysts' outlooks to be a little bit ambiguous right now," said Brian Belski, fundamental market strategist for US Bancorp Piper Jaffray. "But I think this is just a very volatile time for the stock market. There's not much to look to in decision as we head into second-quarter earnings."

Continued from B8 Blue chips were also weak, especially in the financial sector. J.P. Morgan Chase dropped $1.43 to $44.20. Declining issues outnumbered advancing by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 721.65 million shares as of 4 p.m., down from 1.08 billion in the previous session - a dip reflecting the NYSE's earlier problems. The volume was the lightest day of trading on the NYSE this year. The Russell 2000 index was off 3.15 at 511.54. Dow Jones Industrial Average, 18,000 Nikkei stock average, a DAX index was virtually unchanged, as was Britain's FT-SE 100. France's CAC-40 fell 0.3 percent.

Iranians vote on direction of country

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - From teeming city districts to dissidents' prison cells, ballot boxes filled Friday with a near-certain outcome: victory for President Mohammad Khatami and his drive to loosen the grip of Iran's ruling clerics.

The real test begins after the votes are counted. First results are expected today.

Two potent forces - Khatami's popular movement and the nation's Islamic overseers, offer visions that strike at the heart of how the country should be governed.

Khatami sees an "Islamic democracy" with room for some Western-inspired rights, fewer social restrictions and better contacts with the West. Conservatives have reacted harshly to changes, such as a more open media, which they fear could erode their enormous influence.

After voting, Khatami said his goal is to merge "independence, freedom and progress" with Iran's "Islamic identity."

But huge questions hang over an expected second, and final, four-year term for Khatami. Among them - how far and fast can he integrate concepts of openness in a nation built upon the uncompromising values of an Islamic revolution 22 years ago?

For reformists, the backdrop of the election was deeply symbolic and worrisome. Activists and journalists languish in jail and dozens of publications remain banned.

From sweltering Tehran neighborhoods to isolated mountain hamlets, more than 45,000 polling stations were set up for the 42.1 million Iranians who have reached the voting age of 16.

Helicopters carried ballot boxes to the most remote villages. Guards were given voting material for jailed dissidents and other prisoners, the Interior Ministry said. Voting tents were erected in desert outposts or in cemeteries for those taking part in the Friday ritual of visiting family graves.

In the central city of Isfahan, voters provided little polling stations early to avoid the blistering midday sun. Clerics in robes and turbans stood alongside merchants in the holy city of Qom, the nation's center of Islamic study.

Jury convicts four Rwandans for war crimes

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - A Belgian jury sentenced four Rwandans, including two Roman Catholic nuns, to prison terms ranging from 12 to 20 years Friday after convicting them of homicide in the 1994 massacres in their African homeland.

Benedictine nun Sister Gertrude received a 15-year sentence for her role in the massacre of some 7,000 people seeking refuge at her convent in southern Rwanda. Another nun, Sister Maria Kisito, received a 12-year sentence.

Alphonse Ntezimana, a businessman, received a 20-year sentence, and university professor Vincent Ntezimana was ordered jailed for 12 years.

The prosecution had sought life sentences for all four. Ntezimana sobbed and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief as the sentences were imposed. The others showed no emotion.

The rulings concluded a landmark trial hailed as by human rights campaigners as precedent for legal action against suspected war criminals wherever they may hide. The trial was the first in which a jury of citizens from one country judged defendants for war crimes committed in another country.

Macedonian leader backs off on war plans

KUMANOVO, Macedonia (AP) - Macedonia's prime minister backed off Friday on plans to declare a state of war, but vowed to crush the ethnic Albanian rebels in the north.

Prime Minister Ljubco Georgievski bowed to pressure from international officials, who feared a declaration of war would deepen the crisis by radicalizing the ethnic Albanian minority. Still, he said the rebels must be quashed.

Defense asks for acquittal in Peru trial

LIMA, Peru - Lori Berenson, the New York native accused of collaborating with leftist guerrillas, should be acquitted because Peru's spy chief manipulated her case, the defense said in closing arguments Friday.

Attorney Jose Luis Sandoval said Berenson, 31, has been used as a political tool from the time of her arrest in November 1995.

Convicted by hooded military judges to life in prison in 1996 for treason, Berenson won a civilian retrial in August on lesser charges of "terrorist collaboration." The trial is now in its fourth month with a verdict expected in the next two weeks.

Sandoval said the entire case, including the decision for a retrial, was choreographed by Peru's spy chief Vladimiro Montesinos, who fled the country last year.

Commission suggests violations of rights in Florida

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights approved a report Friday that suggests blacks disproportionately had their ballots discounted in Florida's elections, leading to widespread violations of the Voting Rights Act.

The panel accepted investigators' findings by a 6-2 vote, with both members appointed by Republicans voting no.

The report asks the Justice department to investigate the problems in Florida. Black voters had their ballots discounted at a rate far higher than nonblacks, the report said. The commission says it has no evidence of a conspiracy but would like an investigation to find out if any of the disparity was intentional.

Jeb Bush says he is seeking re-election as governor

MIAMI - Gov. Jeb Bush said Friday he intends to run for re-election in 2002.

Bush spoke briefly about his decision while answering reporters' questions after visiting an elementary school in his hometown.

Bush had said for months that he would make his intentions about seeking a second term known in June. He was elected governor overwhelmingly in 1998 after narrowly losing the 1994 election.

The decision comes as a growing list of Democrats have said they will challenge the 48-year-old governor, who came under fire last year because of the disputed Florida election that made his brother president of the United States.

The list of possible candidates includes former U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno of Miami; U.S. Ambassador to Vietnam Pete Peterson, a former Panhandle congressman; and Bill McBride, a Tampa attorney who stepped down as manager of Florida's biggest law firm this week to run for governor.

Daschle: Little room for deal on patients' rights

WASHINGTON - Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle says there's little room for compromise on patients' rights legislation that will be one of the first major bills to be taken up in the new Democratic-led Senate.

The current Democratic bill, he said, at a news conference Friday, is already "a compromise of a compromise... We can't go any farther, to the right because I think then we'd lose the middle in the compromise."

German WWII sub found in Gulf of Mexico

NEW ORLEANS - The wreckage of a German submarine sank about 45 miles from the mouth of the Mississippi River during World War II has been found, two oil companies announced Friday.

The wreckage of the U-166 was found during surveying for a planned underwater pipeline route, BP Amoco PLC and Shell Oil Co. said at a news conference at the National D-Day Museum in New Orleans.

The sub lies not far from the wreckage of the American passenger freighter S.S. Robert E. Lee, which the U-166 sank on July 30, 1942. The U.S. military sank the German sub shortly after that attack.

Michelle Krebs, 18, receives her shot from school nurse Jill Kuhns, Friday at Salem High School in Salem, Ohio.

Vaccinations begin against meningitis

ALLIANCE, Ohio (AP) - Schools were turned into makeshift clinics Friday and thousands of people were vaccinated to ease fears about an outbreak of a meningitis-related bacteria that has killed two teenagers.

In all, 5,800 students and staff at six high schools were getting the shots.

The Ohio Department of Health said the shots were precautionary but necessary to ease the fears of residents in this blue-collar community of 23,000. The state is paying for the $55-per-dose vaccine.

At Alliance High School, about 1,500 people were expected to be inoculated. Jars of cotton balls and hazardous waste containers for the disposal of used needles filled tables. Surrounding counties donated nurses and needles.

About 15 miles to the east, students and parents lined up outside Salem High School.

"It's basically a relief to get the shot," Carey Rogers, 17, said after getting vaccinated. He said his mother previously wouldn't allow him to attend graduation parties.

Nancy Duncan, in line to get a shot with her daughter Kelly, said she isn't going to cancel her daughter's 100-person graduation party.

"I got cans of pop so we don't have to worry about anybody sharing glasses," she said. "I got a magic marker so we can write people's names on their cans."

At Marlington High School, cots and eight vaccination tables were set up in the auditorium. Security was assigned there because of concerns that people not on the vaccination list would try to get shots; school district spokesman Dan Buckel said.

Be the one who gets involved

I've always been a woulda-coulda-shoulda kind of guy. I know the perfect thing to say or do in any situation. It's just that I don't think I can do it until about a week after it happens.

You know the type. If I stumble upon some teenagers trying to steal my hubcaps, my first reaction will be to apologize for interrupting their work. Days later, I'll realize what I coulda done, shoulda said or woulda been justified in doing - if only I'd thought of it at the time.

Some might think of me as a "wimp." I prefer to think of myself as "cautious."

Which is fine in many situations. But I'm learning that there are times when we all need to be able to react quickly and decisively to life's drama as it unfolds before us. Indeed, there are occasions when it is flat-out wrong for us NOT to do so.

Not too long ago, I was shopping for a birthday present when a woman entered the store with her sobbing daughter. The little girl, who looked to be about 4, was wailing about wanting to go to "the other store," and the woman responded loudly with harsh words and threats. I felt sorry for the child - but then, she WAS being pretty obnoxious. And anyway, it wasn't my place to get involved in a family dispute, was it?

Then the woman hit the girl. Not a quick stroke to the seat of the pants, but a solid blow to her head that sent the girl sprawling. The woman then bent over the child, shaking a finger in her face and scolding her with vicious oaths while she sobbed painfully.

I didn't know what to do. I was outraged by what I saw happening, but my cautious nature held me back. I glanced around to see if someone - anyone - was going to come to the little girl's aid, but the store seemed strangely empty. Clearly, something had to be done, and if anyone was going to do it, it had to be me. The time had finally come to stop being such a wimp.

I walked toward the woman. She looked at me. I searched her eyes for embarrassment or fear. I saw only contempt and anger. I didn't know what to say, so I just said the first thing that came to mind: "Look, I know how frustrating kids can be. But please don't do that. You're hurting her."

In a more perfect world, the mother would have looked at me tearfully, thanked me for helping her regain control of herself and explained the devastating reasons for her rage. I would have then referred her to my friend the family therapist, after which I could have hopped up on my rusty steed and galloped behind the requisite silver bullet, of course.

Unfortunately, the world isn't perfect. The woman sneered at me and snapped, "Why don't you just find your own business?" Then she took the little girl by the hand and stormed away. But as she left, the child looked at me, and I like to think she silently thanked me for stopping the hurt.

Then again, maybe she was wondering why I didn't do more. As usual, I've thought a lot about that, and I realize that there was more that I could have done, or should have said, or would have followed through on to affect a more lasting change in the situation. If only I'd thought of it at the time.

Obviously, I've got a lot to learn about responsible involvement. But I'm determined to learn it. The good feeling I felt after trying to help - however feeble that attempt may be - gives me the courage to try again. And to do it right this time.

Don't get me wrong - I'm not flinching into Batman or anything. I'm just trying to make my little corner of the world a happier, safer place.

And I don't look what I've already accomplished. There's at least one less wimp.

Retired Presbyterian minister publishes book

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS. -- As a Presbyterian minister, the Rev. Robert Van Nest was often called on to counsel parishioners or offer words of wisdom to his congregations. So he spent years clipping humorous and inspirational articles to help him illustrate particular points. Some 5,000 clippings later, he decided to publish a book.

"Yeast is Yeast" (McDonald and Associates) offers answers to questions, thoughts to ponder and lots of chuckles.

Van Nest, now retired, said the title of the book comes from a story found in the field and neglected. He was dirty and scraggly, and his mane was so tangled that birds built nests in it. The horse didn't know what to do, so he asked a man at the stable. The man told him to rub yeast in his mane. The horse did so and, sure enough, the birds flew away. The moral of the story: "Yeast is yeast and nest is nest, and never the mane shall tweet."

Robert Van Nest, author of 'Yeast is Yeast', is seen here with his book. The book is a collection of humorous and inspirational articles.

Van Nest was born and reared in New Jersey. He and his wife, Phyllis, were born five days apart in the same hospital. He attended college in Tennessee; she in Maryland. Both of them received bachelor's degrees in 1951 and, shortly thereafter, married. He went to seminary in Princeton and was ordained a minister in 1955.

The Van Nests' first ministerial assignment was to a church in Craig, Alaska - population 250. It was quite a change from the bustle and bustle of urban New Jersey. The church was so small that Van Nest also traveled to Edna Bay and Hollis, nearby logging camps, and the Indian village of Kasan to hold services.

His second assignment in Alaska was as an associate in the Anchorage Presbyterian Church. The Van Nests moved to Washington in 1960, where they started a church from scratch in Edmonds. After about three years, that congregation had grown to 296 members.

The Van Nests then went to the United Churches in Olympia where Van Nest was the associate from 1968 to 1971. In 1971, he was called to Twin Falls, where the family has lived for more than 30 years.

Van Nest was senior pastor at the Presbyterian church in Twin Falls from 1971 to 1986. Then, he retired from the ministry and worked as a real-estate agent for eight years.

In retirement, he has been working in the Hollister Presbyterian Church, where he preaches every fourth Sunday.

The Van Nests have three sons (one deceased) and seven grandsons.

GODLINESS OR GREED?

Prayer book seeks 'exponentially expanding blessings'

By Erin McClam
The Associated Press

CUMMING, Ga. -- Bruce Wilkinson is sitting on the deck of his massive house an hour north of Atlanta, looking heavenward as a gee-whiz grin spreads across his face.

He has just heard the latest sales figures for "The Prayer of Jabez," his half-inch thick, index card-size book that has sold nearly 5 million copies and remains atop the best-seller lists.

"This book, the success wasn't predicted - or even imagined," he says. "This isn't really a Barnes & Noble-type book."

Yet he's not entirely surprised. The book, which likens prayer to a stockbroker's request for a huge portfolio, suggests God is just waiting to bestow "exponentially expanding blessings" to just about anyone willing to put in the request.

Wilkinson says the book's phenomenal success is a perfect example of his book's theme.

It is anchored atop major best-seller lists - The New York Times, The Washington Post, USA Today - whether it's classified as nonfiction or self-help. Its companion Web site bulges with glowing testimonials.

And, smack in the middle of the Mother's Day, Father's Day and graduation seasons, some people are buying dozens of copies as gifts.

"They are still going strong," reports Emma Lee, manager of Cornerstone Christian Bookstore in the Atlanta suburb of Snellville. "It's not unusual for them to buy them in 20s and 25s, not unusual at all."

Not everyone is buying the idea.

One camp of conservative theologians believes "Jabez" is stunning in its selfishness, using verses buried in the Bible as a religious excuse for wanting lots of money and material goods.

"American culture is very oriented toward paychecks and big houses," says the Rev. Daniel L. Gard, graduate school dean at Concordia Theological Seminary in Fort Wayne, Ind., a Lutheran school. "This basically gives those same secular values a religious shellacking. So you can feel good as a religious person and at the same time go after all the stuff in the world."

Gard jumps the best seller with what he calls megachurch Christianity, the sort of money- and power-driven religion that came to be symbolized by the rise and fall of televangelists such as Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart.

The Jabez controversy centers on the book of 1 Chronicles, which lists descendants of early generations in a blizzard of names that stretches for pages on end. One of those names is Jabez, a descendant of Judah who may have been a herdsman. He implores God: "Oh, that you would bless me indeed and enlarge my territory." The Bible says God grants the request.

The theory, according to Wilkinson's book, is that it's perfectly OK to ask God for tangible blessings, just use them well. If a poor family needs a car, they should ask. If Wall Street brokers can use a big portfolio to spread risk in the world, they should ask.

"Why not make it a lifelong commitment to ask God every day to bless you," Wilkinson writes. "And while he's at it, bless you a lot."

Dr. Bruce Wilkinson talks about his book, 'The Prayer of Jabez,' during an interview at his home outside Cumming, Ga. The guide on how to pray for specific blessings has sold nearly 5 million copies around the world.

'American culture is very oriented toward paychecks and big houses. This basically gives those same secular values a religious shellacking. So you can feel good as a religious person and at the same time go after all the stuff in the world.'

- Rev. Daniel L. Gard, Concordia Theological Seminary.

Wilkinson, 53, holds a doctorate of divinity from Western Conservative Baptist Seminary and is the founder of an evangelical ministry called Walk Thru the Bible. He admits that asking God for things - actual merchandise that you can touch; rather than abstract wishes for world peace - feels awkward.

"People think God is kind of irritated, busy, off running the peace talks, and could care less whether or not you're having a bad day," he said. "He'll take care of you - but you've got to ask him."

In testimonials on the Web site, Jabez believers say the 93-page book has saved marriages, careers and even lives, bringing about miraculous recoveries from illness.

Jabez franchising in the style of "Chicken Soup for the Soul" is not far off. Wilkinson's wife - who stunned him by praying openly that the book would sell a million copies - is working on "The Prayer of Jabez for Women."

A book aimed at young children and a companion video are in the works. And Wilkinson's latest book, "Secrets of the Vine," has crept up to No. 3 on the Times' list of best-selling advice books.

Not surprisingly, he credits the success to Jabez.

Wilkinson says he has prayed the Jabez verses each day for about 30 years, starting when he discovered them in seminary.

Karl and Beverly Nelson

Nelsons to head mission

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS. -- For Karl Nelson, retirement is not going to be about sitting around and taking it easy. Instead, he plans to travel - all the way to Bangalore, India.

He and his wife Beverly, have answered a call from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to preside over the Bangalore mission. They will serve there for three years, and will be responsible for the countries of India and Nepal.

As mission president, Nelson will serve with 55 missionaries. Twenty-four of them are from North America. The rest are nationals. Of the billion population in the area, there are 3,500 members of the LDS Church.

The first missionaries went there in 1852, but most of the people who joined the church then immigrated to the United States. In recent times, missionaries have been active there since 1993.

"So it's relatively new, but we do have churches and units of the church organized," Nelson said. "There are 20 branches of the church organized in seven different major cities in India, and we have three districts (small stakes)."

Nelson will retire on June 24 as sales manager for Westfarm Foods, and the couple will leave the next day for Provo, Utah, to enter the missionary training center. On June 29, they will set out for India.

"It's going to be a challenge and it's going to be hard, but we're excited to go," Nelson said. "Hopefully, we can do some good over there in that country."

All five of the Nelson children served on missions and are supportive of what their parents are going to do. At 55, Nelson said, he and his wife still have their health and are young enough to enjoy the experience.

Beverly Nelson is equally enthusiastic about the move and has some questions about what it will be like to be a homemaker in India. Shopping, food preparation and preservation and the exchange of money are the kinds of things she will need to learn more about, she said.

But, she added, she doesn't have great worries or concerns about what to expect and is prepared to deal with environmental challenges.

"I never think when I brush my teeth that I have to 'boil the water,' but because of the water situation there, we will have to boil water," she said. "That's just a given - you just filter and boil."

The tropical humidity makes wearing nylon stockings impossible, too, and loose cotton or linen.

Short prayer provides key to best seller

The Prayer of Jabez takes root in a Bible verse, 1 Chronicles 4:10. The text - and Jabez called on the God of Israel saying, 'Oh, that you would bless me indeed, and enlarge my territory, that my hand would be with me, and that my hand would hold the sword, that I might dwell in the land which God granteth me.' - is the key to the book's success.

Wilkinson says he has prayed the Jabez verses each day for about 30 years, starting when he discovered them in seminary.

Worship a peaceful god

We still have some people in the world who worship old gods—like the one that had Moses and his people do so much killing, giving commandments like an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, etc.

Jesus, on the other hand, claimed he was a prophet and wanted the people to worship a peaceful and loving god, for he said God was a spirit and that spirits had no flesh or bones but dwell inside of people.

Denied chance to build church, pastor files suit against county

ORLANDO, Fla. - A Christian pastor has sued Volusia County claiming his religious freedom was violated when a county board barred him from building a church near a community where many spiritualists live.

The Rev. John Ferro and Dunamis Community and Outreach Ministries filed a federal suit against the county on May 31, asking a judge to overturn a land development commission ruling that kept the congregation from building a church in Cassadaga, 35 miles northeast of Orlando.

The proposed site was near the homes of members of the Southern-Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association, prompting some spiritualists to express concern church members would try to convert them. About 150 people who live in and near the community signed a petition against the proposed church.

Kansas town celebrates candidate for sainthood

PIESEN, Kan. - A priest from Kansas who died while ministering to soldiers in a Korean prisoner-of-war camp - and who is now a candidate for sainthood - has been memorialized with a life-sized statue.

The dedication at St. John Nepomucene Church is part of an effort by the Wichita Roman Catholic Diocese and the Archdiocese

It has always been easy to tell what kind of a god people worship by what they do.

"Damita," "Damita" (Atlanta Recordings). This CD sampler has two songs, "Spirit Inside" (Damita co-wrote) and "Calvary." The first has an upbeat R&B tempo with lyrics about the spirit living within you when you walk right and talk right.

The tempo slows on "Calvary," which is a thought-provoking story about a dream and recognizing a place - Calvary. It continues with the singer seeing her Savior nailed to the cross. He could have chased angels to his side, but he chose to die.

The singer, Damita Haddon, is a Detroit native. This is her debut album on a major label. She made her first recording with a female a cappella group she organized shortly after finishing high school and continued her singing career in her church choir.

Damita's interest is focused on "reaching fresh ears" - and the hearts and minds of the young.

"My plan is a big part in how kids react," she said. "We're got to give them a new message. The message has to communicate."

Daryl Coley & Beloved, "If Chronicles" (Verity Records). This CD single is from Daryl Coley's latest release "Oh, The Lamb."

His message is about humbling yourself and praying. Coley says the only answer to every situation is prayer.

Coley is musically gifted. He was studying voice and jazz piano when he began playing the clarinet in his grade school band. He was taught early on to appreciate all forms of musical expression; his vocal ability is a testament to his diverse musical training.

Coley is a singer, songwriter, arranger and musician. He recently formed "Beloved," a 10-member vocal ensemble of exceptional singers and musicians.

Beverly Nelson said, here in the states, there are church libraries and access to lots of books and pictures. India has none of these, so the Nelsons will take along many of their own manuals and pictures to use in teaching church.

Beverly Nelson said she is totally at peace with the decision to serve the church in India.

"We believe that we're never asked to do anything that we're not able to do," she said. "And so, with that in mind, I know that we'll be able to do whatever we need to do there because of the reason that we're going."

Presbyterians split on gay clergy ban

By Bruce Schreiner
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A disagreement simmering within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) over a ban on ordination of homosexuals may boil over next week.

Opponents of the ban intend to seek its repeal at the denomination's national assembly, which opened on Friday in Louisville. This city is also the headquarters of the church, the nation's sixth-largest Protestant denomination, which has as many as 3.6 million members.

"We resent this categorical prohibition," said the Rev. Laird Stuart, a San Francisco pastor who leads a group pushing for repeal. "We would like ordaining bodies to be given the right to ordain people as individuals, not as members of categories."

Conservatives are prepared to defend the ban.

"There is a prohibition that is very straightforward, that we believe the Scriptures teach, and the church ought to proclaim that our officers should model in their own lives," said the Rev. Jerry Andrews of suburban Chicago. "How else can the church honor the Lord if we neglect the word of the Lord?"

The Presbyterians are among several mainline Protestant denominations, notably the Episcopal Church and United Methodist Church, that have struggled with the issue of gay clergy and same-sex unions in recent years.

Other Protestant groups could face debates and protests at national meetings this summer.

Stuart and Andrews each said the struggle in the Presbyterian churches could go either way.

Repeal would require not only passage at the Louisville assembly but also — and probably harder — to achieve — ratification by a majority of the church's 173 pres-

The Rev. Laird Stuart, at the Calvary Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, is leading a group pushing for repeal of a ban on ordination of homosexuals. The slimmer disagreement within the church may reignite next week during the denomination's national convention in Louisville, Ky.

byteries, or regional legislatures.

The sexual conduct standard was inserted into the church's constitution in 1997. Under the standard, ministers, deacons and elders are required to "live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness."

The practical effect was to prohibit gays and lesbians from ascending to the pulpit or lay leadership.

As they prepare to defend the ordination standard, conservatives are regrouping from a defeat on whether Presbyterian clergy can officiate at "commitment ceremonies" for gay couples.

The national assembly voted for a ban last year, but the presbyteries failed to ratify it. That gave clergy leeway to conduct such rites, as long as they are not confused with marriages.

With both sides entrenched, the gay-rights feud may drive people from the denomination, though some say an outright split is unlikely.

Other potentially divisive issues expected to draw discussion at the eight-day assembly include abortion and the meaning of salvation.

One resolution calls on the assembly to declare "moral opposition" to abortion of fetuses 20 weeks and older, except to save the mother. It would chip away at the church's position favoring abortion rights.

Another would state that salvation requires an acceptance of Jesus Christ. It was prompted by comments at a Presbyterian conference last summer by the Rev. Dirk Ficca, a Presbyterian and director of a Chicago-based interfaith organization, who suggested salvation can occur apart from faith in Jesus.

Yet another resolution is aimed at calming the disputes within the faith. It calls for reconciliation through a year of study and prayer among all Presbyterians.

Crabb's latest book looks at Naomi's trials

The Dallas Morning News

"Shattered Dreams: God's Unexpected Path to Joy," by Larry Crabb (Waterbrook Press, 218 pages, $19.95).

Once again, popular evangelical author Larry Crabb takes on an unpopular subject — suffering in this case — and wrestles with it alongside his readers. "Shattered Dreams" finds parallels between today's injustices and the biblical story of Naomi, who lost a husband and both her sons. Crabb's premise: Christian believers often focus on "second things," such as feeling good, while God works on first things — an intimate relationship with him. The author says that tragedies in the form of shattered dreams often function as the conduit for such a relationship.

"Without trials, only spoiled brats would enter heaven," he writes. "And that would turn heaven into hell." The book concludes with hope: A Christian's deepest desires can be found in a life from, with and for God. The release of this book and Dwight Edwards' "Revolution Within" mark the launch of Crabb's New Way Ministries. For more information, see www.larrycrabb.com.

"Revolution Within: A Fresh Look at Supernatural Living," by Dwight Edwards (Waterbrook Press, 210 pages, $10.95).

Faithful to his roots, the direct descendant of this early American preacher Jonathan Edwards has written an all-encompassing theological treatise about Christian living. Filled with gripping anecdotes and vivid word pictures, it reads like an exciting story. So what is the revolution within? Edwards says it occurs when believers in Christ grasp "New Covenant" living.

This book is to help Christians discover the "outlandish resources that God has placed within us at conversion, which serve as the foundation for all He calls us to do," Edwards writes. He discusses four New Covenant provisions — a new purity, a new disposition, a new identity and a new power — and provides Scripture passages for further study. Next January, Waterbrook Press will publish a workbook by the same title that expands on concepts found in the book. Edwards is senior pastor of the 2,500-member Grace Bible Church in College Station, Texas. He also works as a consultant for Larry Crabb's New Way Ministries.

"Preaching the Whole Bible as Christian Scripture," by Graeme Goldsworthy (Eerdmans, 287 pages, $20).

Pity the preachers. Their job is never easy, least of all when they preach from the Old Testament. What has Genesis to do with Jesus? Or the Book of Judges? Or here's a real challenge — the Song of Solomon?

To judge from a lot of Christian preaching, not much. And yet, according to the Gospel of Luke, the risen Jesus told his disciples that the whole of Israel's Scriptures — not just isolated messianic prooftexts here and there — speak of him. Discerning how they do so poses one of the greatest challenges for even the most sensitive Bible reader.

An Australian professor has written this book to help pastors preach meaningfully — and Christianly — from the Hebrew Scriptures. Too often, he says, preachers reduce Bible stories to moral tales and character studies. Be like Abraham. Be like Daniel. Be like Ahab or Saul.

There's much more to Scripture than that, Goldsworthy writes, and that "much more" finally centers on Jesus. No Christian sermon can fail to talk about him. But if the talk is to be persuasive, not forced or facile, preachers need to get the Bible's big picture. They need to grasp the sweep of its history. Goldsworthy's book, taken to heart, could transform their preaching. Other Bible readers would benefit from it, too.

Church of England ponders bishop appointments

By Robert Barr
The Associated Press

LONDON — Appointing bishops in the Church of England has long been a process shrouded in secrecy, with the final choice in the hands of politicians. But now there's a chance some small windows could open on the old and complex procedure.

Some proposals may come before the General Synod in July that would fine-tune the system, which technically gives Britain's monarch the ultimate authority in choosing the leaders of the church.

In practice, however, Church of England bishops are selected by the prime minister, or king's "advice" to the queen or whose is always accepted.

"Working with the Spirit," a report published May 9, calls for less secrecy in the process, a wider pool of candidates and giving permission for potential bishops to put themselves forward, rather than quietly waiting for someone else to promote their careers.

"It is important to stress that we are not saying that the system is unfair, weak or ineffective," said Baroness Perry of Southwark, who chaired the Crown Appointments Commission Review Group.

Bishop Richard of Penrith greets churchgoers after a service at the Church of England Josus Church in Troutbeck, northwestern England.

"What we are saying is that it needs to be seen to be fair, robust and effective, and that in order to increase confidence in it, the system must be made more open and transparent."

The review group said that priests should be told whether they were included on the list of potential bishops, and they should be given the opportunity to review and correct information about themselves.

The group said the church was too apt to consider only suffragan, or assistant, bishops for promotion to bishop of one of the church's 44 dioceses.

"It has been suggested to us that ... suffragan bishops are often 'safe choices' rather than people likely to cause trouble, reliable pastors rather than impressive thinkers or prophets," the report said.

Church Times, an independent Anglican weekly, saluted the proposals as "an intelligent response to dissatisfactions that have not developed past the stumbling stage, but threaten to do so."

Roman Catholic bishops are mainly chosen by the church — by the pope — or, in some European dioceses, by local church bodies. It's not surprising that the rule is different in the Church of England, an institution which has had the monarch as its supreme governor ever since King Henry VIII rejected the authority of Rome in the 16th century.

Monarchs asserted their rights to choose bishops long before that — with Frankish kings taking the lead in the West in the sixth century. In England, the monarch's involvement in appointing bishops was established long before the Norman Conquest.

Mormons celebrate 200th anniversary of Young's birth

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Brigham Young, the man who took the Mormon church to Utah and made it thrive, was remembered by church members on the 200th anniversary of his birth.

Born June 1, 1801, in some European dioceses, by local church bodies. It's not surprising that the rule is different in the Church of England, an institution which has had the monarch as its supreme governor ever since King Henry VIII rejected the authority of Rome in the 16th century.

Monarchs asserted their rights to choose bishops long before that — with Frankish kings taking the lead in the West in the sixth century. In England, the monarch's involvement in appointing bishops was established long before the Norman Conquest.

Young directed church members to settle in Utah and communities throughout the West, including Las Vegas and San Bernardino, Calif.

Young was born in Whitingham, Vt. He grew up in New York state and converted to the Mormon church in 1832, two years after it was organized, assuming leadership after founder Joseph Smith was assassinated in 1844. Young led the faithful to one settlement after another, moving on when persecution grew too severe.

He founded Salt Lake City in 1847 and was elected governor of Utah — then called Deseret — in 1849. He died in 1877.

1223 Lawndale V Twin Falls

Has been completely remodeled. It has been updated with new kitchen, new carpet and vinyl throughout. The home has a fireplace in the living room and a contemporary. The main is very bright and efficient in the kitchen. The back yard is great!
There is a nice parking spot and the work side of the living room.
