School reform moves ahead

Senate OKs annual testing in reading, math; bill likely to become law

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Senate approved the first major overhaul of the nation's education policy in 35 years Thursday as it voted overwhelmingly in favor of President Bush's plan to use federal aid to force improvements in academic achievement.

The bill, approved 91-8 after more than a month of debate, calls for annual testing of students in reading and mathematics, and requires schools to demonstrate progress in eliminating achievement gaps. Failing schools would receive aid to improve but would face the loss of funds and other penalties if they fail to make adequate progress. Students in those schools would receive special assistance, including tutoring.

Local school officials would be given more flexibility in how they spend federal funds - which now accounts for 7 percent of public education funds. A small number of states and school districts could experiment with even more freedom from federal controls in exchange for meeting higher standards.

Before passing the bill, the Senate plunged into an angry fight over a proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to deny federal funds to school districts that exclude the Boy Scouts because of the scouts' refusal to admit homosexuals. The House bill contains a similar provision. The Senate eventually approved an alternative from Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., that would require schools to give all youth groups equal access to school property, regardless of their views on sexual orientation. The House-Senate conference will have to resolve the issue.

Bush was rebuffed by both the Senate and House in his bid to win approval of vouchers to help low-income children escape failing public schools by enrolling in private schools.

Prosecutor won't try FBI sniper

Too much time has passed, attorney says

The Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. - The FBI sniper who killed the wife of white separatist Randy Weaver at Ruby Ridge will not be tried for manslaughter, the Boundary County prosecutor said Thursday.

Last week, a sharply divided 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that FBI sniper Lon Horuchi could face trial on an involuntary manslaughter charge in the death of Vicki Weaver in the 1992 standoff.

"It is unlikely the state will be able to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the criminal act set forth," Prosecutor Brett Benson said in a statement issued from his Bonners Ferry office.

Too much time had passed, and a trial was not likely to be scheduled anytime soon, Benson said.

"The Ruby Ridge incident was a tragedy that deeply affected and divided many of the citizens of this country and county," Benson said. "It is our hope that this decision will begin the healing process that is so long overdue."

The involuntary manslaughter charge was filed by Benson's predecessor, Denise Woodbury. She lost to Benson in last year's election.

Benson said he would file a motion in federal court in Boise

HARD LANDING

Darla Vierstra looks over the wreckage of a car that 'dropped' into her property in the Rock Creek Canyon at the foot of Hankins Road. The driver of the car, Kurtly Duane Beadz, 34, attempted to evade a Twin Falls sheriff's deputy at about 1:30 a.m. Thursday when he crashed 80 feet down into the canyon. Officials said Beadz was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit.

Driver, trying to elude cops, flies into canyon

By John T. Huddy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Hansen man was seriously injured early Thursday after attempting to elude police, ramming his car through a concrete barrier and vaulting over an 80-foot cliff into the Rock Creek Canyon, officials say.

Kurtly Duane Beadz, 34, was driving a 1985 Nissan south on Hankins Road when he failed to stop at the stop sign at the 3600 North and Hankins Road intersection about 1:29 a.m., according to Idaho State Police Trooper

Kevin Haight, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Jeff Haskell attempted to pull Beadz over, Haight said. Beadz instead accelerated, attempting to elude Haskell. After a brief pursuit, Beadz failed to negotiate a turn, hitting a concrete barrier and sending the vehicle over an 80-foot cliff into Rock Creek Canyon.

Beadz's car then caught fire. He was rescued by Haskell and Kimberly Police Department Officer Eric Foster. Haskell and Foster were not available for comment Thursday. Beadz was listed in serious condition at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's intensive care unit Thursday afternoon.

The ISP is investigating the accident. Haight said a blood-alcohol report and toxicology report are pending, as are criminal charges.

Debris from Beadz's car, including a jacket and part of the dashboard, hung in the trees stretching down into the canyon Thursday afternoon.

The car, a mangled wreck covered with the remnants of white fire extinguisher foam, sat beneath a cluster of low-hanging trees. Haight said Beadz's car will have to be hoisted from the canyon by a crane. That will likely happen today, Haight said.

Darla Vierstra, the owner of the property where Beadz's car rested, said she heard the screeching of tires and tree branches snapping, but fell back asleep. "Beadz's car landed within 100 feet of Vierstra's home."

"I woke up with flashlights in my window," she said, laughing as she remembered the evening Thursday morning. "I didn't know

Logging advances in forest plan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Forest Service is considering scrapping a policy of the Clinton administration that requires giving ecological considerations priority over logging, recreation and other uses of the country's 155 national forests.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of an internal draft report detailing possible changes in management of national forests. Agency officials emphasized it is a draft and could face multiple revisions.

The goal is to write a "plain English rule" that can be used to make decisions that reflect local and national viewpoints, said Sally Collins, associate deputy chief of the 192-million-acre national forest system.

STANLEY - The prospect of her town's population exploding to hundreds - or even thousands - of times its present size isn't very appealing to Stanley Mayor Hilda Floyd. But she's accepted the fact that as many as 20,000 or more members of the Rainbow Family counterculture group will probably soon show up for a gathering on the Lowman National Forest near her town, which has about 100 permanent residents.

Meeting set 2 p.m. Monday at Stanley City Hall, downtown Stanley. A town meeting has been set for residents of Stanley to discuss and prepare for the expected arrival of thousands of members of the counterculture group known as the Rainbow Family for a gathering on the Lowman National Forest near Stanley. Speakers will include officers from the Idaho State Police and the Owyhee County Sheriff's Office.

White House threatens to veto farm aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House is threatening to veto supplemental farm aid if lawmakers try to spend more than $5.5 billion, saying that is enough money to meet any apparent need.

In a letter delivered to the House Agriculture Committee Wednesday, Budget Director Mitch Daniels said rising prices for some commodities are "improving the prospects for many farmers and ranchers." Congress has provided $25 billion in special payments to farmers over the past three years to supplement federal subsidy programs, and farm groups have asked for as much as $7 billion more this year.

This spring's congressional budget agreement set aside $5.5 billion for farmers that must be spent by Sept. 30, but the House committee also plans to dip into funds earmarked for the 2002 budget year, which begins Oct. 1. The veto-threat isn't going to change the panel's mind, spokesman Keith Williams said Thursday.

The bulk of the money is expected to go to grain and cotton farmers to supplement the annual "market transition" payments they receive under an existing program, but lawmakers also are pushing for help for a variety of other commodities, including soybeans, sugar and fruit. Daniels noted in his letter that last year's aid package included money for several commodities not traditionally supported by government commodity programs," including honey, cranberries and apples.

Congress started passing the annual bailouts in 1998 after sluggish exports and bumper crops led to a collapse in prices for a wide array of commodities. Corn and soybean prices remain low this year, but prices for cattle, hogs and milk have rebounded, and the government also is expecting some improvement for wheat growers.

Documents suggest oil firms cut production to boost price

WASHINGTON (AP) - Even as the Bush administration cites a lack of refineries as a cause of energy shortages, oil industry documents show that five-years ago companies were looking for ways to cut refinery output to raise profits.

The internal memos involving several oil companies were released Thursday by Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., whose office obtained them from a whistleblower. He said the materials did not necessarily reflect any illegal activities but said some of them "sure look very anticompetitive."

In response, Red Cavaney, the president of an industry trade group, said: "This finger pointing six years into the past serves no useful purpose."

Wyden was turning the material over to the Governmental Affairs Committee, which plans hearings on oil industry practices and energy prices.

Tight gasoline supplies have been cited repeatedly by the industry and the White House as a primary reason for soaring gasoline prices this year.

Pump prices have eased recently, the cost of gasoline jumped an average of 31 cents a gallon nationwide during the seven weeks ending in mid-May, according to government figures presented at a House hearing Thursday.

Wyden has been pushing for years to build a large refinery, planning for a new plant would have had to begin by the mid-1990s, energy experts say.

There has not been a new refinery built in the United States in 25 years; in the meantime, dozens of small ones have closed.

Bush, EU leaders clash over warming

The Washington Post

GOTEBORG, Sweden - President Bush and leaders of the 15 European Union countries clashed sharply Thursday over a global warming policy, with the Europeans saying they would move to implement the Kyoto climate treaty without the United States.

"We say we agree to disagree," Swedish Prime Minister Goran Persson said while sharing a platform with a grim-faced Bush, following a summit in this seaside city. "The European Union will stick to the Kyoto Protocol and go for a ratification process. The U.S. has chosen another policy."

Bush reiterated his objections to the treaty, but said: "We do agree that climate change is a serious issue and we must work together. We agree that climate change requires a global response, and agree to intensify cooperation on science and technology."

The two sides issued a communique emphasizing common positions on free trade, helping Africa with its AIDS crisis and peacekeeping in the Balkans. Bush reiterated his pledge that U.S. troops in the Balkans would not return home before the European soldiers there do. The communique said the United States and EU would seek to launch a new round of multilateral trade negotiations at a November meeting of the World Trade Organization in Doha, Qatar.

After the meeting, however, some Europeans expressed complaints about American protectionism in Bush's recent moves to defend the U.S. steel industry. The meeting was mixed by a call from Bush for expansion of the EU as well as the NATO military alliance. "I strongly believe in NATO expansion, and I believe that the EU ought to expand, as well," Bush said.

Bush's appearance here attracted about 10,000 protesters, a larger crowd than normally appears for EU summits, which bring together the heads of the 15 member countries. The meeting this time took place in Sweden because the country holds the EU's six-month rotating presidency.

The agency hopes to have the revisions completed by the end of the month. The Clinton policy on forest management allowed restrictions on logging, skiing, hiking and other activities if managers believed the ecosystem could be permanently harmed. The order ended a previous requirement that managers give equal weight to ecosystem health and other activities.

The draft eliminates the priority given to ecosystem health. It also removes specific requirements for scientific review when officials make decisions about how to manage national forests, instead offering broad guidelines for managers to follow.

Environmentalists are particularly worried about what they see as an attempt to dramatically reduce public comment periods and undermine the Endangered Species Act. The draft says management plans "are not subject" to consultation by the agencies that protect endangered species.

Forests

Continued from A1. "I'm not spending it on planning," Collins said Thursday.

Conservation groups say they're worried.

"This is taking the Forest Service back more than 20 years to a time when timber was king of the national forests," said Mike Anderson, senior research analyst with the Wilderness Society.

The draft, dated Monday, gives environmentalists another reason to criticize President Bush, who already is under fire for an energy plan that includes expanded oil and gas drilling on public land and breaks a campaign pledge to regulate carbon dioxide emissions.

The Forest Service is working on revisions to what many conservationists consider the key element of President Clinton's environmental legacy: the "roadless rule" that bans road construction and most logging and mining on a third of all national

End to Navy bombing practice leaves questions about cleanup

VIQUES, Puerto Rico (AP) - Even if the U.S. Navy ends six decades of bombing practice on Vieques in 2003, environmentalists say it could take decades to remove unexploded ammunition and clean up the battered reefs.

Responding to President Bush's announcement Thursday that the Navy would stop exercises on Vieques in less than two years, critics said much work remains to prepare the Puerto Rican island of thick scrub bush and white sand beaches for a future without the military.

"The cleanup of Vieques is going to take decades," said anti-Navy activist Robert Raboin. "It must begin immediately, and that's one of the demands that has not been met." The Navy has used the island to train troops for major conflicts from World War II to Kosovo, and it says the island's terrain and location uniquely allow for simultaneous mock assaults by air, sea and land.

In 1940 the Navy took over two-thirds of Vieques - an island, slightly larger than Manhattan - though its bombing range covers only 900 acres - less than 3 percent of the island.

Troops had used live bombs until two went astray during training for the Kosovo conflict in 1999, and killed civilian guard David Sanez on the bombing range, prompting protests to demand the military leave.

Records: Otter played the market

Rep. Butch Otter

BOISE (AP) — Freshman Republican Congressman Butch Otter aggressively played the stock market in 2000, buying and selling millions of dollars in securities as the market fluctuated dramatically.

The personal financial disclosure statement filed with the secretary of state's office on Thursday showed that the former son-in-law of billionaire J.R. Simplot had assets valued at between $3.5 million and nearly $12 million while he was mounting his successful campaign for the 1st District congressional seat.

But the report also showed that he made 228 securities sales during a year in the Dow Jones Industrial Index went from a high of 11,700 in mid-January to just under 10,000 in mid-October before closing out the year at about 10,600.

Those transactions generated between $1.6 million and $6.5 million, according to the statement — that does not require specific amounts but only calls for holdings to be listed within monetary ranges.

In addition to at least the $275,000 he made as lieutenant governor of the state of Idaho and from deferred compensation, retirement and pension plans from his tenure at the J.R. Simplot company.

Otter's only debt beyond any home mortgage he might have was a brokerage account margin loan of between $50,000 and $100,000.

Second-District Congressman Michael Simpson reported property worth between $150,000 and $300,000 and his bankruptcy denial practice contract worth between $50,000 and $100,000.

And Simpson was also affected by the stock market fluctuations last year. He and his wife, Kathy, reported retirement and pension investments valued at $690,000 last December — $69,000 less than those investments were worth a year earlier.

He reported no income beyond his congressional salary and the salary of his wife, who works at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory. The Simpsons had between $46,000 and $165,000 in credit card debts and a $50,000 to $100,000 mortgage of 40 acres of land.

Senate leaders report modest new incomes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Byrd still keeps much of his money in checking accounts and Sen. Patrick Leahy says he didn't have any unearned income last year, reflecting the generally modest financial standing of the leaders of the new Democratic-led Senate.

But financial disclosure forms for 2000 for members of Congress released Thursday also show that several of the Senate's freshmen came to Washington with personal wealth running right up there with the Kennedys.

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who has made a career of politics, lists a half share in a home in Aberdeen given him by his mother, worth $50,000 to $100,000, as one of his largest assets. He had several dozen investments to his name during the year, but only one that earned him in the $5,000 to $15,000 range.

Byrd, the 83-year-old, eighth-term senator from West Virginia, took over this month as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, which is responsible for deciding how the $661 billion budget will be divided among thousands of federal programs.

Study finds possible villainy in vitamin C pills

WASHINGTON (AP)—The vitamin C pills taken by millions of health-conscious Americans may actually help produce toxins that can damage their DNA, a step toward forming cancer cells, a laboratory study suggests.

In a study appearing today in the journal Science, University of Pennsylvania researchers said they found in test tube experiments analyzing the action of vitamin C that the nutrient can act as a catalyst to help make a toxin that can injure DNA, the body's genetic code.

The findings do not mean that vitamin C causes cancer, said Ian A. Blair, lead author of the study, but the research does sound a warning about the use of vitamin C pills.

"Vitamin C can do some good things, but it can do some bad things as well," Blair said. "If you really wanted to be cautious, you just wouldn't use supplementation (vitamin pills)."

Instead of pills, Blair said people can get all the nutrients they need through a balanced diet, particularly fruits, vegetables and grains.

Balz Frei, a professor at the Linus Pauling Institute at Oregon State University, said the Blair study "is an important finding in understanding the chemistry of vitamin C." He cautioned that the results come from a test tube study, which involves chemicals in glass lab dishes, and that the same action may not occur in living animals.

County should examine all jail space options

Although the idea has some immediate appeal, Twin Falls County should think carefully before getting into the rent-a-cell business.

It could turn out to be a bottomless money pit, with taxpayers footing the bill. And Twin Falls could end up with some really bad characters in its backyard.

Twin Falls County Jail officials say there's no more room at the inn. So county leaders are considering spending $1 million a year to lease the former Norco Windows building on Washington Street South as jail space. The current jail would house female inmates.

County commissioners are looking into an offer from a trio of Denver-based companies that want to purchase the Norco building, a 150,000-square-foot facility that sits on 36 acres of property, and convert part of it into a 256-bed jail, with offices for the Twin Falls County sheriff's department and other county agencies.

Under the proposal, the county would lease the building and property from the companies - Engelmann Inc., Rocky Mountain Corrections Inc. and Durrant Justice - for $1,003 million each year for 30 years. When the lease is up, the county would own the building and property.

In turn, the county would sub-lease parts of the building to the U.S. Border Patrol and other agencies. The Glambia food company might also sign a sub-lease with the county to continue to store wheat in the building.

County officials say when costs fill up at the current jail, the county is forced to ship its inmates to outlying county jails, a tactic that costs county taxpayers an average of $45 per inmate per day. So far this year, the county has spent between $200,000 and $300,000 to keep inmates in other county jails. If the number of inmates continues to grow at the current rate, the county could be spending $1 million a year by 2005, officials say.

But - that's fuzzy math. There's no guarantee the inmate population will keep growing. In fact, it's likely to shrink. First of all, demographics are changing. Twin Falls is graying as baby boomers grow older. Second, the new drug court probably free up space as non-violent criminals with drug problems are sentenced to treatment instead of jail.

With more bunks to fill, Twin Falls County could face economic pressure to take in more inmates from outside agencies, including state and federal prisoners.

In effect, Twin Falls could end up with a regional prison. That's bad news, because other agencies aren't likely to send us their model inmates. If they send violent, escape-prone prisoners, Twin Falls residents could be subjected to an unwanted risk.

At this point, Twin Falls County officials are only looking into the proposal. The county must hold public hearings and go through a judicial review before going ahead with the project.

And it's questionable that a proposal to get into the contract prison business would qualify for the judicial necessity provision.

If Twin Falls County needs more jail space, we think it should look into leasing options that don't include long-term leases and taking in more prisoners from other correctional agencies.

The superintendent who knew too much

School superintendent J.J. Phillips believed certain ideas were so important that he compiled a little book for his students to memorize between the first and eighth grades. He dedicated "Selections for Memorizing" to the "Boys and girls of the Lancaster (Ohio) public schools to the end that none may go astray, but that all may be led to live high and holy lives."

The book was intended as a supplement to the studies in that Ohio school system. It contained verses from the Bible, including The Lord's Prayer, the 23rd Psalm, the Beatitudes and instructions about honesty and integrity. It reflected a consensus at the time of how one should live so that personal and societal welfare might be promoted. There were also poems about light and fun things, as well as thoughts about respecting your parents and honoring your country.

In 1923, when that little book was printed, it was not considered harmful to the spiritual or intellectual well-being of students. Quite the opposite. Today, that book would have a hard time finding its way into a public school library, much less be assigned reading.

Monday's 6-3 ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that a Milford, N.Y. public school must allow a Christian club to meet on school property after hours when it provides facilities for other clubs is something of a bow to the past when thoughts like Phillips' were considered during the school day. Today, religious watchdog groups like the ACLU and Americans United for the Separation of Church and State behave as if religion is a harmful germ and that schools and public policy function best when they are decontaminated of such ideas.

While religion does not need the support of government, neither should it receive government's animosity. The teaching of a child cannot, or should not, be done piecemeal. Good nutrition requires a balanced diet. No one would think of giving a child a healthy breakfast, then feeding that child food containing harmful bacteria and moral development. If children are being taught one thing at home and at their place of worship, only to have those concepts undermined by the state in taxpayer-supported schools, the result is likely to be a malnourished mind and spirit.

Under the First Amendment, Congress is proscribed from making any law restricting speech, religion and the press because the Founders saw this of expression as healthy and helpful to the republic. In its ruling on the Good News Club vs. Milford Central School, the Supreme Court properly concluded that to exclude the Christian club solely on the basis of the content of its message was to discriminate against that club on free speech grounds. I wish the court had reached the same conclusion about

"free exercise" on religious grounds, but let's not look a gift court in the mouth.

When I scan the readings in Phillips' book, I read lines about nobility and integrity, reverence and honor. I wonder the children who learn them. Who held a referendum that allowed people to conclude secularism was a better "religion" than, as the old hymn puts it, the "God of our fathers, whose almighty hand... In this free land, by Thee our lot is cast."

If our government is to be of, by and for the people, why can't the people decide these things instead of narrow interest groups and unelected judges? Fifty years of imposed secularism has given us a record on which we can judge the success or failure of religious cleansing.

In our age, there is no more objective truth. No idea is to be preferred over another. It wasn't so in 1923 in Lancaster, Ohio. Then, sixth graders were asked to memorize what today would be the politically incorrect:

"God, give us men! A time like this demands
"Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
"Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
"Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
"Men who possess opinions and a will;
"Men who have honor; men who will not lie."

There is strong evidence that making politics personal really works

In the 1960s, the radicals' slogan was, "The personal is political." Now, there is increasingly strong evidence that making politics personal really works.

With the parties at parity nationally and in many states - as demonstrated by last November's exceptionally close presidential and congressional election - the ability to motivate people to vote becomes of paramount importance. More and more political strategists are coming to believe that the high-tech tools that have dominated TV spots, mass mailings and professionally staffed phone banks - are far less effective in doing that job than the old-fashioned way of turning out the vote.

Both political parties and a growing number of interest groups are trying to mobilize grass-roots armies of volunteers to phone or visit their neighbors and make a personal pitch for their votes.

What has been a seat-of-the-pants judgment is now drawing strong support from controlled experiments conducted by political scientists. The latest one, to be made public later this month, found that a pre-election phone call to a randomly selected group of college students from other young people in the same community boosted turnout by an average 8 percent over a comparable group of students who received no direct urging to go to the polls.

The lead author of the study published by the Pew Charitable Trusts, professor Donald Green of Yale University, commented that the "massive effect" of the single phone call each of the targeted students received should not be a surprise. "Those young people just don't feel a connection to the campaign, and when someone like them calls, it turns 22-year-olds into 36-year-olds." Suddenly their turnout rates match those of young marrieds who have started their families, acquired their first mortgages and are beginning to focus on taxes, schools and other issues.

The key is to have the contact come from someone with whom the potential voter can identify. In a previous study by Green and his Yale colleague, Alan Gerber, using a New Haven mayoral race, there was no turnout gain associated with repeated calls from a professional, out-of-state phone bank, and only slight benefit from a series of mailings. But there was a significant turnout improvement among those who were visited in their homes.

These controlled experiments employed only nonpartisan appeals to vote, not requests to help a particular candidate or party. But they underline a lesson increasingly being applied in the real world of politics.

Joe Andrew, who was chairman of the Democratic National Committee during last year's campaign, arrived on the job already convinced by his experience as the Indiana Democratic chairman that a combination of modern technology and old-fashioned shoe leather could produce dramatic results.

At home, Andrew used professional phone banks to identify the issue concerns of voters in targeted precincts, then sent volunteers to their homes with literature and oral arguments on those specific issues.

He brought the same program to Washington, where the DNC reportedly spent $55 million on field activities. But sources said Andrew was frustrated by the insistence from top operatives of Vice President Gore's campaign that the bulk of the budget go into TV ads. It is not unusual, politicians in both parties said, for professional campaign consultants to prefer spending money on paid ads, mass mailings and phone banks - from which they profit - rather than putting resources into building grass-roots organizations.

Organized labor made a more dramatic switch from TV to politics face campaigning when its ad campaign in 1996 failed to break the Republican grip on Congress. Pioneered by AFL-CIO President John Sweeney and the federation's political director, Steve Rosenthal, unions shifted their emphasis to member-to-member contacts, utilizing both workplace sites and home visits.

That success has been matched by comparable efforts from the National Rifle Association, the Christian Coalition and in some areas, by local Republican organizations.

As Andrew said, "For too long we treated voters as spectators, and increasingly they tuned out on politics. This is the way we can re-engage the people we've lost."

Teaching good girls to be tough negotiators

Why do men still make more money than women? Why is it that, for every dollar a man puts away in his wallet, his female peer jacks about 76 cents in her cute vinyl purse? It's a tough question and one being asked by women all around the world.

No one really knows whether to blame glass ceilings, or mommy tracks or simply the surviving remnants of the sexist employment policies that kept women stuck in pink-collar jobs for decades.

But there's one big factor that nobody's really talking about—women's own paralyzing reluctance to ask for what we deserve.

After all, most women aren't brought up to be tough negotiators.

By ELIZABETH AUSTIN AND LESLIE WHITAKER

rewarded with a 5 percent raise every year. Well, at the end of just 10 years, she'll be bringing home $48,869—and he'll be pulling down $62,722.

Over the course of their careers, her passive acceptance of that first offer will end up costing her a medium-sized fortune. Ironically, all this self-denial costs women more than money.

When they jump at that first offer, they undermine the impression they make on the prospective bosses they're trying so hard to please.

In a survey of employers, Robin Pindley and Gregory Northcraft, authors of "Get Paid What You're Worth," found that 80 percent were most impressed by job applicants who negotiated for a better compensation package.

Top-level negotiators produce win-win deals by honing their ability to listen carefully and put themselves in the other person's shoes—skills that most women have mastered by the time they reach their teens.

We need to silence those disabling inner voices—or better yet, replace them with messages filled with cool confidence. We need to look our fears in the face and fill ourselves: What's the worst thing that can happen here? Often we lose our simply because we're afraid someone might turn us down cold.

And sometimes—lots of times—the answer is going to be yes. That's an answer you won't get if you don't ask. So the next time a woman heads for that negotiating table, she should realize that nobody wins if she demurely accepts the first offer and lets thousands of potential dollars vanish into the wage gap.

If she speaks up and asks for all she deserves, she can help herself (and the rest of us) keep that extra 24 cents.

Elizabeth Austin and Leslie Whitaker are the authors of "The Good Girl's Guide to Negotiating" (Little, Brown 2001).

From the moment the delivery room nurse straps out that tiny pink wristband, we're encouraged to be "good girls"—taking turns at the swing-set and leaving the last cookie on the plate for somebody else.

By the time we're out of elementary school, most of us are highly skilled nurturers and team players. That means we're wonderful at raising families and building communities—but profoundly uncomfortable when it comes to asking our bosses for more money.

When it's time to sit down for that salary review, our heads are full of inner voices warning us against asking for too much. "Don't brag," they whisper. "They'll think you're a bitch. After all, it's only money."

And so we smile sweetly and hope for the best. Or we pull out a carefully prepared chart documenting our successes and achievements or tuition bills, to prove that we're not just being greedy when we ask for more.

As novice negotiators, we're terrified of what might happen if we file some feathers. They might say no. They might get mad. They might even fire us. Better to sit tight, work hard and wait for some super-enlightened employer to give us an unsolicited reward for all our years of hard work.

Over the course of time, a good girl can metamorphose into a tough gal, finally gathering the guts to speak up about her worth in the workplace. But by that time, she's usually so far behind that she'll never be able to catch up.

Suppose a young man and a young woman enter the job force on the same day at the same company. The woman, after a starting salary of $30,000, gives a yelp of excitement and accepts at once. The man, savvy, counters with $37,000 and accepts $35,000. They both work hard, and each is

Extradition hearing for escapee is today

JEROME - An escapee from the Jerome County Jail who turned himself in late Wednesday at the U.S. Mexico border did not waive extradition back to Idaho Thursday.

But Monty Ray Boston, 23, is expected to waive extradition today during a court hearing in San Diego, said Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough. And plans are still on for a private pilot to fly Gough's chief deputy, Jerry Pierce, to San Diego Saturday to pick Boston up, Gough said.

Once Boston is back in Idaho, Pierce is expected to hand Boston over to the Jerome County Sheriff's Department, Gough said. The exact time and place for the exchange hadn't been set late Thursday, he said.

Boston and two other inmates escaped from the Jerome County Jail Nov. 23, 2000, and a jail guard was severely beaten in the escape. The other two inmates turned themselves in shortly after the escape.

Boston recently began setting up his surrender by contacting members of his family in Gooding, said Jerome County Sheriff's Detective Jim Dunsbergen.

Rupert police investigate stabbing at local motel

RUPERT - Rupert police are investigating a stabbing that took place Wednesday at the Uptown Motel, 402 S. Oneida.

Police said a man was transported to Minidoka Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery for multiple stab wounds.

Police and hospital officials did not have information on the victim, and they said the suspect is a Hispanic man with a light complexion about 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighing between 180 and 190 pounds.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Rupert police at 434-2330.

Blaine County contracts with Canyon View clinic

HAILEY - Blaine County commissioners have voted to contract with Canyon View Psychiatric and Addiction Services at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

The decision renews a relationship that was broken in part because of reports that the hospital was releasing patients before they had received adequate treatment due to budgetary considerations.

Sheriff Walt Fending has said the switch could save half of the $18,000 his office spent last year transporting inmates before they had received adequate treatment due to budgetary considerations.

Benefit bike ride to begin Saturday

TWIN FALLS - Three staff members of the American Indian Christian Missions begin pedaling from Glens Ferry to Twin Falls on Saturday in the first part of ReZiRide 2001.

The 1,000-mile bicycle ride from Idaho to Show Low, Ariz., will benefit American Indian children. The name ReZiRide comes from the students, who say they are from "the rez," rather than "the reservation."

The riders leave Glens Ferry on Saturday and spend that night in Twin Falls. They ride into Burley the next day.

The ride will end July 8 at the mission in Show Low, near the Navajo Indian Reservation northeast of Phoenix, about 60 miles from the Arizona-New Mexico line.

Evelyn Fleener, AICM counselor, formerly of Boise, will be joined by Rachel Ginnings, dorm supervisor of Kansas City, Mo., and teacher Carrie Clark of Stoneboro, Pa., on the ride.

Participants gathered pledges before they started. Operators of various motels, campgrounds and restaurants along the route are donating lodging or meals to the benefit ride.

Fleener pointed out many of the children in the area have been abused and suffer from depression and hopelessness. Statistics show that Indian children are twice as likely to have had a parent die than non-Indian children, and the suicide rate for Indians is 85 percent higher than the rest of the U.S. population.

Environmentalists plan INEEL lawsuit

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two environmental advocates notified three government agencies Thursday that they intend to sue over what they call "illegal unpermitted operations of an evaporator system" at Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

David McCoy of Idaho-Falls and Troy resident Chuck Broscius, executive director of the Environmental Defense Institute, said they will file a lawsuit against the U.S. Department of Energy, the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the Idaho Department of

Environmental Quality

The agencies are allowing the processing of high-level radioactive and toxic liquid waste in INEEL's evaporators illegally, McCoy and Broscius said in a notice to the agencies.

Brad Bugger, an INEEL spokesman, said the allegations are unfounded.

McCoy and Broscius claim INEEL is operating a deteriorating 50-year-old evaporator which is not designed to handle the type of toxic waste it is processing.

The regulators' failure to require environmental analyses and monitoring equipment on the evaporators violates the Clean Air Act, the men contend, and at least some of the high-level waste evaporators are operating without permits.

Bugger said the evaporator facility has a state air quality permit and an interim operating permit. DOE, which oversees INEEL, recently filed for a federal operating permit, Bugger said.

"It is operating legally," Bugger said.

Although the DOE has filed for a federal permit, McCoy and Broscius claim the application is "a sham" because the evaporator system is "misclassified" as a tank treatment system rather than a thermal treatment system.

Furthermore, they say the system can't meet the federal standards for thermal treatment and accuse the DOE of "deliberately misclassifying" the evaporators to keep the system operating.

DOE spokesman Dean Nygard said the agency could not comment on the notice because no one there had received it yet.

"After 50 years of operation, no major operating nuclear plant at INEEL has ever been permitted because none can meet current regulatory requirements," said Broscius in a news release. "It is a sad commentary when the public is left with no other recourse but litigation to protect the air and water we and future generations need for survival."

Blaine, Lincoln residents like current legislative layout

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Rumors the northern Magic Valley's legislative district could be divided up to benefit incumbents to the south brought a strong reaction from residents of Blaine and Lincoln counties at a redistricting public hearing Thursday night.

Citing the close economic, cultural and governmental ties as an argument against carving up District 21, residents and politicians from both counties spoke up at the Idaho Commission on Redistricting's hearing at the College of Southern Idaho.

The Wood River Valley is too closely tied to Twin Falls and other Magic Valley areas to put Ketchum and other parts of Blaine County - one of the few Democratic strongholds in the state - in a district with more conservative areas, speakers said.

"The only reason I can see to do that would be political," said Lincoln County Commissioner Jerry Nance.

Splitting up District 21 would allow Republican incumbents to the south to avoid running against one another if the Magic Valley loses a legislative district, which is likely to happen, speakers said.

Nance and others said Lincoln County and Blaine County have a special natural and historical bond that has been cemented by the formation of common irrigation, water and fire districts, as well as other governmental and social ties.

Thursday's public hearing was held to gather local residents' perspectives on how the districts should be adjusted. The commission's work began last week in Boise, where members began their public hearings and set agendas for future meetings.

Made up of three Democrats and three Republican appointees, the redistricting commission's meeting in Twin Falls was part of a three-stop public hearing tour across southern Idaho.

Members were appointed by the state's legislative and political party leadership.

Commission members will be using 2000 Census data to draw the new map. They hope to have a plan for the legislative districts finished by July 31 to give state residents an opportunity to voice concerns before the final deadline of Aug. 31, member Tom Stuart said.

Commission members were surprised by the strong reaction to the plan. "Generally speaking, I think it's necessary and exciting that we're providing the future of air industry in Twin Falls," Gerber said.

As for things Gerber would like to see at the local airport, he said more air travel services would be nice.

The only airline that works out of Joslin Field now is SkyWest, a Delta Airlines carrier. Carberry, under a request from city officials, said he will attempt to get more airlines into the airport.

Transit plan needs legislative action

Plans remain unsettled as Highway 75 work proceeds

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - Blaine County will have to do a little arm twisting and back slapping at the Idaho Legislature if the county is to carry out the recommendations of a just-completed transportation feasibility study to alleviate traffic jams along Highway 75.

The greatest challenge in implementing recommendations lies not in convincing Wood River Valley residents of the need to use public transit, but in getting the Idaho Legislature to approve means by which Blaine County can tax itself for public transit - or come up with the money through some other means, acknowledges Mary Ann Mix, chairwoman of the Blaine County Commission.

County commissioners huddled this week with Roger Miller, the consultant who had prepared the Blaine County public transportation feasibility study.

Among their questions: How

A flatter, slower curve seemed like the right thing to do to Commissioner Dennis Wright. But it drew a howl of protest from Commissioner Sarah Michael, who was concerned about the 45 mph suggested speed sign that would be posted there if the flatter, slower curve is implemented.

The speed limit would not be enforceable, but merely a suggestion that you need to slow to 45 to comfortably negotiate the curve, said highway department engineer Devon Rigby.

Bullet the Blue Skies: Engineers talk about airport's future

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An airport master plan is a necessary step for the future of the Joslin Field Magic Valley Regional Airport, engineers said Thursday.

At an airport meeting, Dale Riedesel of Riedesel Engineering in Twin Falls told a small group of airport officials, employees and other local residents about the future of airport improvement projects and a 20-year master plan.

Riedesel said the master plan not only looks at the future of Magic Valley's airport, but is required by the Federal Aviation Administration, which provides 90 percent of improvement money for the airport.

To provide improvements, those improvements and that plan must be shown in an airport improvement master plan, Riedesel said. "We need to upgrade the documents to provide for long-term planning."

Current airport projects include: • runway repaving and resurfacing • the opening of bids this month for new snow removal equipment • runway resurfacing and repaving

Riedesel said long-range projects could include two new taxiways that will allow more airport traffic and facilities for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Twin Falls city officials and BLM officials are negotiating to relocate BLM fire facilities to Joslin Field. Those facilities would include BLM air tanker hangars and barracks for smoke-jumpers who parachute into a fire site.

Airport Manager William Carberry said recently that the project will be paid for by the BLM and could cost anywhere from $1 million to $3 million.

Harald Gerber of Twin Falls, who attended Thursday's meeting and who designed the existing airport terminal, said the future looks bright for Joslin Field.

Generally speaking, I think it's necessary and exciting that we're providing the future of air industry in Twin Falls," Gerber said.

As for things Gerber would like to see at the local airport, he said more air travel services would be nice.

The only airline that works out of Joslin Field now is SkyWest, a Delta Airlines carrier. Carberry, under a request from city officials, said he will attempt to get more airlines into the airport.

Mule show offers a special flair

By Terrell Williams Times-News correspondent

FILER - Mule shows aren't like horse shows. Both the animals and their handlers at a mule show tend to be unpredictable.

If you've never been to a mule show, you're in for a real treat," said Shadow Seaman of Jerome, an organizer of the 5th Annual Magic Valley Mule Roundup Friday and Saturday in Filer. "People have a fantastic time. They're amazed at how much mules can do. Mules can do just about everything that horses can do, plus more, and mules do it with a special flair."

Entries for the two-day roundup have come from throughout the Magic Valley, as well as many from Nevada and a few from several other western states.

"It should be a good show with a lot of participation," Seaman said. "There's a lot of excitement about the lineup of events."

Seaman is a member of the Southern Idaho Draft Horse and Mule Association, which is sponsoring the event along with the Twin Falls County Fair.

Magic Valley Mule Roundup

Lead race; rescue race; barnyard jumping; musical cans; and pack scramble with one riding animal and two pack mules. Drawing for pack saddle custom made by John Gilster of Filer champions of the show. Action events begin at 1 p.m. with team sorting and the slightly faster team penning competition. Meanwhile, packers will be showing off their best strings of mules and Bill Flaherty will share his mule packing experience at a 4 p.m. demonstration.

The Saturday evening show features "coon" jumping, where a mule hops over a bar at increasing heights, a skill needed to hunt raccoons in the Midwest where there are fences at every section. Action races include log pulls and a comical sprint of feed wagons.

"Some people have built new wagons expressly for the wagon competition," Seaman said. "In musical chairs on cans, riders test their abilities to race for seats, stop on a dime and dismount before the competition."

On Saturday evening is a drawing for a pack saddle custom made by John Gilster of Filer. Tickets will be on sale Friday and Saturday. Proceeds for the roundup, a non-profit event, will go to help pay show expenses.

Local photographer's work goes on exhibit

ELKO, Nev. - An exhibit showcasing the work of Sun Valley photographer Kendall Nelson has opened at the Western Folklife Center in Elko.

Meg Glaser, artistic coordinator at the center, said the traveling exhibition is titled, "Gathering Remnants, A Tribute to the Working Cowboy" and features many black and white photographs documenting ranch life in the West. The exhibit also coincides with the recent publication of a book of the same name which also features Nelson's work.

Nelson was raised and educated in California before moving to her Idaho home and has spent many years photographing cowboys of the West. Several of the photographs were taken at ranches in northern Nevada.

Glaser describes Nelson's work as "wonderful" and "true works of art."

Possible accessory charge expires in 1996 murder case

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - A man once accused of withholding information about the 1996 murder of Angie Dodge no longer faces criminal prosecution on an accessory charge.

Bonneville County Prosecutor Kipp Manwaring said he allowed Glaser to describe the arrest against Jeremy Sargis, formerly of Idaho Falls, to expire because prosecuting Sargis could hinder future prosecutions in the case.

The 18-year-old woman was raped and murdered in her Idaho Falls apartment on June 13, 1996. Sargis was briefly accused of being an accessory after he refused to answer questions at the 1997 preliminary hearing of Christopher Tapp, who was ultimately convicted of the slaying and sentenced to life in prison. Tapp, 24, is not eligible for parole until he has served 30 years behind bars.

But police believe at least two other people took part in the killing although no other arrests have ever been made. Manwaring said there is no statute of limitations for murder so the case will remain open until any others involved in Dodge's death are found.

DNA from semen found at the scene has not matched samples taken from Tapp and 41 other potential suspects. But a statewide database of DNA from violent criminals is still being developed.

Prairie dogs displaced by road project to become food for ferrets

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) - A colony of prairie dogs that must be removed from an Arapahoe County development site will be shipped to Arizona and fed to black-footed ferrets.

Kaiser Permanente is building an assisted-living facility on the site along Arapahoe Road. It says it could not find a place to relocate the 500 prairie dogs and the solution is better than just exterminating them.

"There is no one taking prairie dogs right now," Kaiser spokesman Steve Krizan said. "And we were told we wouldn't see any openings for eight to 12 months."

The black-footed ferret is among the most endangered mammals in North America and feeds solely on prairie dogs. Animal rights groups have criticized the plan, saying a home could have been found. Susan Miller, director of Boulder-based Wild Things, said it took her group just two weeks to find a home for two other Arapahoe County colonies that will be displaced by a Department of Transportation road project.

"It wasn't easy, but it can be done," she said.

SIP drops Sunday newspaper

By Dan Fields
Times-News writer

Home delivery is also being axed

BURLEY — A Burley newspaper is moving its Sunday edition to Thursday and canceling its home delivery, effective next month, as part of an apparent push to cut costs and boost declining circulation.

In a memo earlier this week, South Idaho Press Publisher Jay Lenkersdorfer gave newspaper carriers a 30-day termination notice "to accomplish the multitude of procedural issues that need attention."

Lenkersdorfer confirmed Thursday that, starting July 9, the SIP — traditionally an afternoon paper — will be printed early in the morning and will be delivered through the mail.

Although Lenkersdorfer declined to say how many carriers will be let go, he said "there's a lot of people to be laid off" and help get the paper to the post office.

"The one thing that direct mail allows us to do is that it allows us to grow our circulation," he said. The SIP also hopes to gain circulation in the Twin Falls market, he said.

Lenkersdorfer declined to divulge his newspaper's current circulation, but he said it is close to figures released last year by the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Publisher statements, required by the post office, showed at the end of September that the South Idaho Press sold an average of 4,344 newspapers per day. The Times-News at the same point sold 4,371 copies of its Mini-Cassia Edition.

For the South Idaho Press, that was a decline of 632 papers since March 2000. The Times-News Mini-Cassia Edition showed an increase of 412 papers during the same period.

According to the Audit Bureau of Circulation, the South Idaho Press has resigned its circulation bureau membership and thus no longer will report circulation through ABC.

Lenkersdorfer said the cost-cutting moves are not related to his paper losing a recent contract to print the Thrifty Nickel, a free publication that delivers classified ads throughout eastern Idaho.

Roger Plothow, general manager of the Post Register in Idaho Falls, confirmed that his newspaper has been awarded the Thrifty Nickel contract. Plothow declined to say how much revenue his paper will receive by printing the publication.

Times-News Publisher Stephen Hartgen said he's not surprised the South Idaho Press is scaling back in a competitive newspaper market.

"The decisions by the other paper to eliminate delivery service and drop their Sunday newspaper appear to be the latest in a series of actions taken in response to the continued growth of The Times-News as the seven-day complete newspaper in the Mini-Cassia area," Hartgen said. "With their costs rising and a big drop in revenue coming with the loss of the printing contract, I would guess they had little choice but to cut delivery service to people. They stopped delivering in the area around Malta earlier this year, and just recently laid off some of their staff. So this latest move is no surprise."

Liberty Group Publishing, the Illinois-based owner of the South Idaho Press, reported a net loss of $7.2 million in the first quarter of 2001. The company reported losing $4.3 million in the same quarter last year.

The newspaper industry nationwide has suffered from an economic pinch in recent months, brought on by stagnant advertising revenue and rising prices for newsprint, ink and energy. Gasoline prices affect the cost of newspaper delivery.

Lenkersdorfer said some moves to increase his newspaper's circulation include adding a weekend magazine and opening a news bureau in Twin Falls later this summer, with an eye toward selling newspapers in the Twin Falls area.

"I think it will be good for the newspaper business in southern Idaho, because it will give people an alternative," Lenkersdorfer said. "They haven't had a second alternative and now they will."

Hartgen says he welcomes the competition but doesn't understand why Lenkersdorfer wants to add staff in other areas when he's cutting staff in his home office.

"News gathering is expensive, and if you're cutting staff in your own market, it's hard to see how you could be expanding staff in an alternative market where you have virtually no circulation or readership," Hartgen said.

Danny Hubbard, a South Idaho Press newspaper carrier, said he and other carriers "upset" and believe that eliminating home delivery is the wrong move to help increase circulation.

"It will be worse, because everybody got to know the people on their routes," Hubbard said. "They'll get the paper about the same time. But who wants to go into town (to the post office) on a Saturday or Sunday? They want to stay home."

Governor backs utility's objection to water for fish

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne sided with Idaho's largest utility on Thursday, advising federal salmon managers that the request for a third of the water in Brownlee Reservoir to be released for salmon migration could violate state law.

In an eight-page letter to the National Marine Fisheries Service, Kempthorne also said the request would "significantly impact resident fishery, water quality and availability of power for Idaho citizens while providing no significant benefit for the recovery of listed species."

Those problems are only compounded by this year's drought, the governor wrote.

Idaho Power Co. officials called the request, funneled through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, a blatant attempt to take advantage of the utility's pending application to relicense its hydrogenerating facilities in Hells Canyon.

They accused the government of trying to open up the license agree to earlier downstream releases from Brownlee of far less water than the 350,000 acre-feet the agency is seeking now.

Governor Dirk Kempthorne

Those refusals, and the Northwest's worsening drought, made quick action by regulators essential to saving fish listed under the Endangered Species Act, the agency said.

Idaho Power contends the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission cannot legally reopen the Hells Canyon license.

Special interests want their way from redistricting panel

The Associated Press

A bipartisan commission is taking its charge to redraw Idaho's political lines on the road, hearing pleas from Republicans and Democrats, urban and rural areas, and two ethnic groups to side with them while redistricting.

Hitting Idaho Falls and Pocatello on its initial foray, the commission includes three Democrats and three Republicans, who will change the district lines based on Census 2000 figures.

Most of those turning out on Wednesday in eastern Idaho reacted coolly to a Democratic proposal to cut the number of legislative districts from 35 to 30.

Since Republicans outnumber Democrats in the Legislature, the GOP would be hurt more by reducing that body by five districts, or 15 lawmakers. It also could force popular incumbent Republicans to face each other in primary elections.

Democrats want Idaho Falls to have its own legislative district. Currently, it is split into three, each with some rural constituents.

"Rural interests should be represented by rural districts," testified Idaho Falls' Harry Guelzow, an Idaho Democratic Party's execu-utive committee member. "Urban interests should be represented by urban districts."

Those in Lemhi and Custer Counties do not want Blaine County — a Democratic stronghold and resort area — in their district.

"Blaine is a world apart from the rest of us," said Lemhi County Commissioner Robert Cole. He recommended Butte County be included in District 25, which includes Jefferson, Clark, Custer and Lemhi counties. It currently is in District 31.

In Pocatello, the commissioners were urged to create districts that would increase the likelihood of Hispanic representation in the Legislature.

"We encourage you not to shut out the Latino community," said Sonya Rosario of Bannock County, who spoke for the Idaho Hispanic Caucus. "We are now 8 percent of Idaho, and we are here to stay."

Others spoke about redistricting to give Indian tribes more clout. "I am particularly concerned that Fort Hall is in four legislative districts and I think they have been effectively disenfranchised," Idaho State University political science professor Ralph Maughan said.

WSU memorializes students killed in accident

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — About 300 people turned out at a memorial service Thursday for three Washington State University students killed in an auto accident last week.

Students, faculty and staff mixed with family of the victims at the Holland/New Library for the memorial.

"We gather to mourn," WSU President V. Lane Rawlins said. "Our losses are real and tragic and beyond our understanding."

"The families should know that we share the sorrow and anger that such a thing could happen, that such tender lives should end before so much of life is experienced," Rawlins said.

People have been leaving cards and flowers at the library plaza since the June 4 accident that killed Brandon Clements, 22, of Wapato, and passengers Stacey G. Morrow, 21, of Milton and Ryan Sorenson, 21, of Westport.

Frederick Russell, 22, also a WSU student, has pleaded innocent to three counts of vehicular homicide and three counts of vehicular assault in Whitman County Superior Court.

If convicted, Russell could face life in prison, and a $50,000 fine on each charge, Whitman County Prosecutor Jim Kaufman said. Russell, who suffered only minor injuries in the four-car collision, remains free after posting $5,000 bond. Judge David Frazier allowed Russell to continue driving to his job pending an August trial.

The three students killed were returning to Pullman from a movie in Moscow in a 1978 Cadillac driven by Clements.

Mourners remember Washington State University students Brandon Clements, 22, of Wapato, Wash.; Stacy Morrow, 21, of Milton, Wash.; and Ryan Sorenson, 21, of Westport, Wash., during a memorial gathering at the Compton Union Building in Pullman, Wash., Thursday.

Four others riding in Clements' vehicle were injured. The Washington State Patrol said a Chevy Blazer driven by Russell attempted to pass in a no-passing zone while traveling toward Moscow.

Nevada governor signs bill allowing Internet gambling, medical marijuana

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Gov. Kenny Guinn signed a bill Thursday enabling Nevada to be the first state to offer gambling on the Internet, although some state officials say they won't defy a federal ban on the activity.

The Republican governor also signed legislation that allows seriously ill patients to use marijuana for medical purposes.

Experts estimate that revenues from Internet gambling — largely conducted by offshore companies because of the U.S. ban — reached $1.5 billion last year and could reach $6 billion by 2003.

Nevada officials say court challenges to the federal ban in other states could make the ruling unenforceable and they want to be ready.

The law instructs the state Gaming Control Board and state Gaming Commission to draft and adopt rules that would govern Internet gambling. Those requirements would include assurances that games exclude minors and residents from states that prohibit gambling. The law also outlines licensing requirements, fees and taxes.

At least three Las Vegas gaming companies — Park Place Entertainment, MGM Mirage and Harrah's Entertainment — have invested in technology firms developing equipment for Internet games. All three have Internet sites offering non-cash casino games and prizes.

The medical marijuana law lets seriously ill patients with a doctor's approval possess seven marijuana plants for personal use. Names of patients would be listed in a state registry. Nevada becomes the ninth state where the practice is legal.

The measure also relaxed one of the toughest drug possession laws in the nation, downgrading the charge for possession of small amounts of marijuana from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Last month the U.S. Supreme Court ruled it illegal to possess or sell marijuana for medical purposes.

Nevadans voted overwhelmingly in 1998 and 2000 to amend the state constitution to authorize use of marijuana by those suffering from cancer, AIDS, glaucoma and other illnesses. The task of implementing the voters' mandate was left to the 2001 Legislature.

Most say they won't let liquor laws spoil games

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — As officials were preparing to vote on a plan to loosen the city's alcohol rules during the 2002 Winter Olympics, a group that favors alcohol restrictions released a survey Thursday saying most people won't be turned off by the strict liquor laws here.

In the survey, sponsored by the same group that advocated government warning labels on beer and liquor bottles, 73 percent of respondents said Utah's liquor laws would have no effect on their decision to attend the games.

Nine percent said they would be less likely to attend because of what the survey called "mildly restrictive" alcohol restrictions.

"The Olympics is reaching out to people around the world. For a lot of people, that includes the opportunity to include alcohol," Sittler said.

Mayor Rocky Anderson has strongly supported looser liquor laws during the games with an eye toward creating a more festive atmosphere downtown.

Hearing

prised at the number of speakers voicing concern about the possible breaking up of District 21, which includes Blaine, Camas and Lincoln counties, as well as portions of Elmore and Washington counties.

Karl Shurtliff, commission member from Boise, questioned why so many were concerned about that possibility when no formal plans had been presented.

Sen. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, said the panel had indeed unofficial plans drawn up and being circulated widely by a fellow senator do put large portions of District 21's northern half in a district that includes territory north of Galena Summit.

Stennett declined to say publicly which lawmaker is circulating those plans, but he said proof of concern over them was the number of people — about 15 — testing against the idea.

"It would be unfair to people on both sides of that summit," Stennett said.

In addition, Stennett pointed out a strong geographic element that ties District 21 together: the watersheds of both the Big Wood and Little Wood rivers are wholly included in its boundaries. The ties those rivers provide are very strong, he said.

"Politically and economically, it's critical to keep those watersheds together," Stennett said.

Commissioners were also seeking ideas about the number of districts to be included in the new district layout and about how the new congressional districts should be drawn.

Speakers, most of whom seemed to be from the Wood River Valley, were relatively indifferent about the number of districts.

But several favored a proposal to include all of the greater Boise metropolitan area and all of the Magic Valley in one congressional district.

Times-News politics and state government reporter Michael Journeaux can be reached at 735-3231, or by email at mjourn@magicvalley.com.

Highway

include a highway only to reduce the speed," Michael said.

The matter remains to be resolved. Meanwhile, Rigby said residents along the Timber Eagle project have indicated they would be willing to close access onto the highway at Timber Way, and the Golden Eagle road to Section and off the highway. That would be in keeping with the county's and transportation department's efforts to consolidate in and out stretches along the highway, Wright said.

Transportation department engineer Chuck Carnohan noted that residents along River Bend and Hidden Hollow, just south of the Golden Eagle subdivision, want to build a primitive, unpaved access under the new Greenhorn bridge to the bike path so they don't have to cross the highway.

The Blaine County Recreation District has no plans to build a trail there, and the highway department can't build one as part of the current highway project, Carnohan said. But the department could assist a volunteer group of trail builders in getting permits, easements across the highway department's rights of way and buildings plans, he said.

The other option is including the request in the environmental assessment being done on the Highway 75 corridor.

"But I don't know if that would fill what they want, which is to get immediate access to the bike path," Carnohan said.

Transit

is in place," she said. Educate the public and build a broad consensus first by printing brochures, holding meetings to discuss public transit and sending valley residents on fact-finding tours to other communities and conferences, Millar advised.

Educate employers, too, that they can write off bus passes they buy for their employees, he said.

"It used to be employers advertised $10 an hour and a kid pass to get dishwashers. In the future, they might advertise $10 an hour and a bus pass," he said.

It's possible a latent transit demand study being done by the Idaho Transportation Department as part of its environmental analysis may also identify what it's going to make to get people to carpool or use some other alternative form of transit, said Diana Atkins, the consultant who is preparing that study.

Then, the implementation of high-occupancy vehicle lanes so they do not conflict with carpooling routes, and the new bus route on the East Fork intersection, Millar replied.

Commissioners questioned what they perceived as a lack of activity by the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce in informing visitors about the free bus shuttle running around Sun Valley and Ketchum. Millar agreed that he wouldn't have rented a car had he known about the system before he crossed the border.

"You've got a great bus system in Ketchum and Sun Valley, but ridership hasn't increased much, in part because you're not marketing it," he said.

Millar also encouraged the valley residents to invest in their pedestrian system.

"You've got a great trail system, but there are definitely places where you could make improvements in the cities," he said, pointing out slides showing plans where pedestrians must walk out into streets to get around pond-sized puddles and snow banks.

Report: Spend on Idaho's poor children now, reap benefits later

BOISE (AP) - The latest report on poverty in Idaho suggests that major government investments to fight poverty now produce an even bigger payback in the generations to come.

Poverty at all levels saps the state's broader economic well-being not only because it forces the diversion of more resources to subsidized housing, special education and increased health care and crime prevention, but it also denies the economy the productivity of adults who were denied work training because of their childhoods in poverty.

When parents cannot break out of poverty to improve the lot of their children, children are denied the resources to do any better once they are grown and the cycle is repeated, according to Thursday's third in the "Growing up Poor in Idaho" reports from the Kids Count project.

The cost nationally is estimated in the tens of billions of dollars.

"These billions represent lost income to the future adults that poor children become, their families and society as a whole," said Linda Anoshian, a child development specialist at Boise State University and co-author of the report with Judith Brown of the Idaho Center on Budget and Tax Policy.

The report called for government assistance to cover transportation, child care, health care and the educational needs of working poor families, including targeting economic development and business assistance incentives at employers who pay a living wage - one that experts say allows families to meet basic needs without public assistance and still pay something aside to deal with emergencies.

One specific recommendation was to expand the Children's Health Insurance Program that provides health coverage for children in families not poor enough for Medicaid but too poor to afford conventional health insurance.

But the program had become so successful in the past 18 months that lawmakers did the exact opposite last March. They ordered state Health and Welfare Department officials to stop soliciting poor children into the program to save money.

The state has attempted to meet some of those goals through its welfare reform program and its emphasis on gainful employment, but critics have argued that it falls far short of the assistance needed to successfully make the transition from welfare to work.

At the heart of poverty in Idaho, the report indicated, was securing a job paying a living wage. According to the Northwest Job Gap Study for this year, only 57 percent single white workers and just 31 percent of single minority workers had jobs paying a living wage this year. And it was worse for adults with two children. Under 30 percent of white workers and 15 percent of minority workers were making a living wage.

The Northwest Job Gap Study pegged the living wage in 1998 at $25,300 a year for a single adult with one child, $27,000 for a one-income couple with two children, $31,200 for a single adult with two children and $35,400 for a two-income family of four.

Man gets 22 counts in luxury homes fires

PHOENIX (AP) - A man was indicted on arson and extortion charges in a series of fires that destroyed luxury homes under construction near desert mountain preserves in the Phoenix area, a federal official said Thursday.

A 22-count indictment handed up by a federal grand jury accuses Mark Sands of being involved in eight arson fires at homes in Phoenix and suburban Scottsdale, said U.S. Attorney Paul Charlton.

Sands had previously been arrested in late April as an investigative lead in the arsons. Authorities said they had caught him scrambling the letters "CSB" on a sign fronting a home under construction near the Phoenix Mountain Preserve. They later released him.

"CSB" is said to stand for "Coalition to Save the Preserves." The acronym was found in notes at some of the arson sites and in letters sent to the news media.

Since 1998, 11 fires at upscale homes under construction near mountain recreation areas have been attributed to arson.

The charred remains of one of four luxury homes under construction is seen in this aerial photo Tuesday in Pima Canyon, Ariz.

Nine were near the Phoenix Mountain Preserve, a scenic stretch of mountains running through the middle of Phoenix; two were next to a mountain preserve in suburban Scottsdale. The last such fire occurred in mid-January.

Notes protesting development in the scenic desert land were left after some of the fires. Scrawled across a sign in April 2000 was: "If you build it again, we will burn it again." After an October fire, a typed letter was left at the scene with warnings against building in the desert.

This week in Tucson, four partly built luxury homes were burned and investigators were seeking possible ties to the Phoenix fires. The homes burned in Tucson were also in a scenic area.

Spring snow opens ski resorts

DENVER (AP) - Instead of river rafting as planned, Dax Scheffer was hitting the slopes Thursday as the 2001-2002 ski season opened, if only for a day, at the Big Sky resort in southern Montana.

The spring storm brought cold weather from Montana to Pikes Peak in Colorado, where visitors in summer attire were caught unprepared.

Whitout conditions forced the early closure of the road to the top of the 14,110-foot mountain near Colorado Springs. Temperatures dropped below freezing overnight as far south as the Four Corners area.

Eighteen inches of snow fell on the Sundeck Restaurant above Aspen. A golf tournament in adjacent Snowmass Village was postponed because of the winter-like weather.

Big Sky was opening its gondola to carry skiers and snowboarders up to the one trail open, which will offer a respectable 1,500-foot vertical descent. The resort had been scheduled to be open anyway for mountain bikers and other tourists. Lift tickets were $15, with skiing free for season passholders and staff.

Texas overhauls its criminal defense system

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Rick Perry signed into law Thursday an overhaul of the state's system of providing lawyers for poor defendants. He also signed legislation aimed at preventing racial profiling.

"Texans want their state to be tough on crime, but they also want a system of justice that is fair," the Republican governor said. "Both of these bills achieve those goals."

Lawmakers in the nation's busiest death penalty state passed the indigent-defense bill after Texas' criminal justice system came under fire during Gov. George W. Bush's presidential campaign.

A study last year found that some defendants had waited months before getting a lawyer and that some attorneys were unqualified or underpaid.

Under the new law, court-appointed attorneys will have to be appointed within three days after a defendant requests one and will have to meet minimum standards of training and experience.

Texas currently does not have statewide, uniform public defender system; court-appointed lawyers are chosen under varying local rules. Under the new law, Texas for the first time will also set adequate state money - up to $19.7 million - to help its 254 counties pay for indigent defense. Counties spend about $90 million a year on trial counsel for the poor.

Under the racial profiling law, all Texas law enforcement agencies are required to have a written policy that prohibits the stopping of suspects based on their race. Agencies also must create a grievance policy for those who believe they were victims of racial profiling.

Police will be required to record the race and ethnicity of people pulled over for traffic violations.

The bill includes $18.5 million for video cameras and audio recording equipment for patrol vehicles to monitor traffic stops. The bill "takes steps to ensure no-Texan will be subject to unwarranted stops - simply because of the color of their skin," Perry said.

The bills were just two of several criminal justice reforms passed by lawmakers last session. Perry had already signed a bill to give inmates easier access to post-conviction DNA testing.

Governor ponders over execution bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Facing a Sunday deadline, the governor of the No. 1 death penalty state must decide whether to ban the execution of killers who are mentally retarded - an issue that has prompted increasingly fierce debate over morality and justice.

State lawmakers passed the legislation last month, and Republican Gov. Rick Perry has not said whether he signs it. He has, however, said he has problems with it.

The political pressure is mounting.

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush this week signed a bill making Florida the 15th state to ban the execution of retarded defendants.

On Monday, President Bush said he opposes executing the retarded, though a spokesman said he was not taking a position on the Texas bill.

The U.S. Supreme Court this month struck down the death sentence of Texas man awaiting execution, ruling the jury had not been properly instructed about his retardation. A high court ruling is expected next fall in a North Carolina case that could end executions of retarded killers.

And a group of retired U.S. diplomats is calling for an end to the death penalty for the retarded, saying such executions strain relations with other countries.

In Texas, crime victims have joined prosecutors in pleading for a Perry veto, saying that current law already protects the retarded and that a ban would open the door for unprecedented - and unwarranted - appeals. Perry has not said what he plans to do but expressed concerns with the bill this week.

"If this bill becomes law, it would change our jury system process to where a judge - a single judge - can override the will of a jury," he said. "I have a real problem with that."

Supporters of the ban say it is an issue of humanity in the nation's busiest death-penalty state and have seized on the president's comments.

Algerian protests against discrimination turn deadly

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) - Police fired water cannons and tear gas at rioters Thursday as hundreds of thousands of protesters marched on the presidential palace demanding greater democracy and denouncing unrest. Two people died in the turmoil.

Ethnic Berbers organized the mass protest against discrimination, and it was joined by opposition parties demanding greater freedom, presenting Algeria's military-backed government with a growing challenge even as it battles the separate threat of an Islamic insurgency.

Demonstrators threw stones at riot police blocking their path to the palace, and the security forces fired a truck-mounted water cannon and volleys of tear gas. Other rioters, some carrying knives, hatchets or iron bars, smashed building facades, including the glass front of the Sofitel, the most luxurious hotel in Algiers.

The line of demonstrators stretched down a main highway into the city, chanting and carrying banners reading, "You can't kill us we are already dead" or denouncing the "hogra," a word used to refer to injustice and abuse of power. Many had painted their faces with a cross-like symbol used by Berber nationalists on flags.

Hospital officials said that between 400 and 500 people were injured in the demonstration. The two dead were journalists - a woman with the Arab-language weekly El Chourouk and the other a man - who were hit by a bus fleeing a depot that had been set on fire, government official Mohamed Guendil said on television.

Algerians pass a bus depot after it was set on fire during a protest Thursday in downtown Algiers.

The Berbers, who claim to be the original inhabitants of North Africa, have had tense relations with Algiers for decades as they press their demand for official recognition of the Berber language, Tamazight, and an end to what they say is government discrimination against them.

Official: Philippine government halts attempts to talk with rebels

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines - The government said Thursday it has stopped trying to negotiate with Muslim extremists holding more than two dozen hostages, sending reinforcements to search a southern island and hunt the insurgents down.

Meanwhile, after three days of searching, there was still no sign of the body of an American hostage the rebels claimed to have beheaded. The government said the rebels may have been lying.

Interior Secretary Joey Lina, in charge of police, said there is "strong possibility" that Guillermo Sobero of Corona, Calif., was still alive.

The Abu Sayyaf guerrillas holding the hostages on southern Basilan island had already said they would no longer negotiate.

Gen. Romeo Dominguez, commander of the forces on Basilan, said Thursday he has 5,000 men scouring the island, after the addition of 1,000 Philippine marines the day before. At least 16 soldiers have been killed and more than 50 wounded in fighting with the rebels over the past two weeks.

Palestinian kills Israeli officer; truce wavers

JERUSALEM - A Palestinian shot and killed an Israeli army intelligence officer Thursday, marring the first day of a truce worked out by CIA director George Tenet.

Israel's military received orders to begin implementing the truce, but stopped pullbacks in places where violence persisted, including the road leading to the southern entry of Jerusalem, site of the shooting.

Israeli tanks on carriers rumbled back from forward positions in Gaza. At the Netzarim junction, a flashpoint throughout more than eight months of fighting, Palestinians threw rocks at Israeli soldiers after a tank was withdrawn.

Israeli and Palestinian security commanders met in the Gaza Strip to coordinate implementation of the truce.

Restoration reveals secret Colosseum's passageway

ROME - A revamp of the Colosseum will create an underground passage from the ancient arena's walls, restoring the original golden color, and excavate a passage Roman emperors used to get to the games, site officials said Thursday.

The cleaning and the excavation are part of a restoration project which will cost $17.6 million. The project, which began earlier this year, will be completed in 2003.

So far, the work has revealed mosaic floor fragments, a plaster ceiling depicting two jugglers and other traces of the arena's decorations that adorned an underground corridor emperors used to enter the Colosseum.

The corridor has been dubbed "Circus Maximus" after the emperor who fought gladiators and wild beasts in the arena during his brutal reign. Commodus of our lives

Fun for kids abounds at Magic Valley Dairy Days, which annually draws about 4,500 people to Wendell City Park.

Wendell festival to celebrate dairy cows this weekend

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

WENDELL - It's not just a dairy festival. It's a dairy cow festival.

Magic Valley Dairy Days, which once featured a giant inflatable Holstein that floated away into Jerome County, is the only summertime hootenanny in these parts at which you can win prizes for your cow-milking prowess.

But since there are more than 125,000 dairy cows in the Magic Valley, it's also arguably the most authentic.

Free ice cream, free milk and free cheese abound in and around Wendell City Park, and the centerpiece event of the two-day celebration - the parade at 11 a.m. Saturday - has a distinct dairy theme.

It's the 12th June for Dairy

Days, sponsored by the Wendell Chamber of Commerce. Proceedings start with a dance from 6-8 tonight in the park, with music by Blue Haven. Local restaurants will service up specialties from 5-10 p.m.

On Saturday, a Boy Scout pancake breakfast in City Park starts the day from 7-10 a.m. Cost is $3 per person or $10 per family. A three-on-three basketball tournament runs throughout Saturday,

The parade lines up in the parking lot between M&K Dairy Equipment and True Value Hardware on Wendell's south side and moves up Idaho Street to Sixth Street.

On Saturday afternoon, a show-n-shine car show is planned from 1 to 5 p.m. in the park. The cow-milking contest starts at 130.

Food booths will be open all day and there will be continuous

Folled again

The Wendell-based Snake River Community Players will present the melodrama, "Someone Save My Baby Ruth" or "Fol That Villain" in conjunction with Dairy Days.

Performances are scheduled for tonight and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Wendell High School auditorium, and again on June 22-23.

The farce, written by Billy St. John and directed by Kyle Irwin, is about a dysfunctional bunch of Boston confectioners and the plot by subway magnate Sydney Swindie to steal their Sweet Shoppe for nefarious real estate purposes. Jan Kroeger, Deidre Hansen and Andrew Chojnacky are the candy-makers and Irwin the villain. Other cast members are Adam Kroeger as Tom; Collin Petersen as Hubert; Alicia Bigler and Audrey Waite as candy-counter clerks, Telly and Toffee; Sheril Bigler as Mrs. Murphy; Clara Nebeker as Minnie and Isabella Buhler as Penny Candy.

Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and students and $20 for families.

live entertainment in the park's bandshell in the afternoon. In addition, there will be new-equipment displays in the park and a carnival for the kids.

Magic Valley Dairy Days scholarships for students who will be attending Idaho colleges, universities and vocational school will also be handed out.

Entrepreneurs Discover The Road To Riches; Making Money On The Internet May Prove Too Easy!
 Entrepreneur Generates Nearly $100,000 in Sales in One Month!

Want A Second Paycheck (Thousands of Dollars/Month) Without Getting A Second Job?

By Brandon Lewis

TWIN FALLS, ID - This information-packed workshop may very well be the turning point in your financial future. In just 90 minutes you will learn how it is possible to build the perfect business using the Internet. Forget hiring employees, having a retail establishment, high overhead and other normal business expenses.

Most of us don't understand what the terms Internet and Information Superhighway really mean. Oftentimes we mistakenly believe that the opportunities for making big money in these areas are limited to computer programmers, software companies and telecommunication firms. Nothing could be further from the truth!

Learn the Secrets

When you attend this amazing 90-minute workshop you will learn the secrets and gain an understanding of how simple it can be to cash in big on the Internet. The most startling fact is that individuals are earning thousands of dollars a month with little or no business experience, and without being required to invest tens of thousands of dollars. It is even possible to make money on the Internet without owning a computer. Business professionals verify that thousands of men and women of all ages have discovered how to get a second paycheck without getting a second job.

These dramatic results come from three sources. First, is the once in a lifetime opportunity for individuals and small businesses to become involved in what could very well be the most revolutionary development in our lifetime - making money on the Internet. Second, products, services and information can now create tremendous incomes for those individuals who have been exposed to this perfect marketing opportunity. Thirdly, the participants at this 90-minute, moneymaking Internet workshop will be exposed to the insider secrets which have been used by individuals like one of our students who generated nearly $100,000 in sales in just one month.

Remarkable stories of everyday people just like you will be shared, explaining how quickly and easily lucrative your Internet business can be... literally overnight. Despite these extraordinary successes, a problem exists. A company spokesman for Galaxy Mall, Inc. explains the dilemma, "Most individuals have never been exposed to a marketing opportunity that can be started for next to nothing, requires only a few hours a week to run and still provides literally thousands of dollars in regular cash flow. They have never heard how they could be traveling or vacationing anywhere in the world while still earning an income of thousands of dollars a month. Where can the aspiring entrepreneur learn how to build their profitable business on the Internet that others have already proven successful?"

In this upcoming 90-minute, information-packed workshop, Galaxy Mall, Inc. has invited a nationally renowned instructor who will show how easy it is to get started making money on the Internet. By the end of this entertaining workshop you will understand why the Internet is considered by experts to be the road to riches, and more importantly, how you can get on that road. Amazingly, your instructor will show you how it is possible to receive an income 24 hours a day, and you don't even have to have a computer to get started. When you attend this remarkable moneymaking and information-packed workshop you will find out how to get a second paycheck (that could amount to thousands of dollars) without getting a second job.

Book on intellectuals lands on list

'The Meaphysical Club' documents the lives and influence of William James, John Dewey, Charles Sanders Peirce and Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. They helped define the American philosophy known as pragmatism, which places cooperation over ideology.

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a scholar in tweeds crashing a beach party, a book about four 19th-century American intellectuals has landed on the best-seller lists alongside Sue Grafton, "The Great American Sex Diet" and the sayings of Yogi Berra. "The Meaphysical Club" documents the lives and influence of William James, John Dewey, Charles Sanders Peirce and Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. They helped define the American philosophy known as pragmatism, which places cooperation over ideology.

Written by Louis Menand, the 560-page book quickly sold out its first printing of 25,000 and is well into its second run: Strong reviews from The New York Times and others and two author appearances on National Public Radio have helped the book reach "the top five" on Amazon.com and show up on the best-seller lists of The Washington Post and The Boston Globe.

Publishers and writers worry that no one appreciates literature anymore, yet books such as Menand's, Seamus Heaney's translation of "Beowulf," Stephen Hawking's "A Brief History of Time," and Jacques Barzun's "From Dawn to Decadence" suggest otherwise. Whether people actually read these works or just wanted others to think so is another question, but enough customers bought them to make them best sellers. "People are a lot smarter than publishers give them credit for. They will buy good books," said Stephanie Oda, publisher of the industry newsletter Subtext. Menand, a staff writer for The New Yorker who began working on the book a decade ago, had little trouble persuading Farrar, Straus & Giroux to take it on. Jonathan Galassi, publisher of FSG, said that he found Menand's idea fascinating and that after reading the book he thought it was accessible and had commercial potential. "I don't know if I would have said that when he first proposed it," Galassi said. The term pragmatism was made popular by William James, brother of Henry James. Pragmatists believe everybody is entitled to his or her own idea of truth, and that we learn best from experience and exchange of opinions. In short, pragmatism is the philosophy of getting things done. "The American mindset is practical, it's not theofetist," Menand said. While the spirit of pragmatism dates back at least to Benjamin Franklin, Menand writes that it became especially influential in the second half of the 20th century. "The Civil War had convinced a lot of Americans (among them Holmes, who was wounded in battle) that uncompromising beliefs lead to destruction. And Charles Darwin's theory of natural selection undermined the idea that history is divinely guided, and led to skepticism that anything was undeniably true. "What these thinkers were trying to do is see how we can use terms like 'truth' and 'justice' in a world where we can't be sure how to define them anymore," Menand said. The title of Menand's book derives from a discussion group set up in the early 1870s in Cambridge, Mass., where Holmes, James and Peirce were literary figures. (Dewey, somewhat younger, would emerge a decade later.)

'Atlantis' comes to theaters

Combined news services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Associated Press reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Along Came A Spider'

There are both mysteries and surprises in this reasonably diverting albeit frequently improbable thriller, but the biggest mystery of all is hardly a surprise: How does star Morgan Freeman manage to give a master class in acting every time he appears on screen? The film tries its hardest to outsmart us, yet in general outbats and rhytms fairly standard. With Patricia Potter. Directed by Lee Tamahori. (1:43. R, for violence and language).

'The Animal'

'Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo' Rob Schneider returns in a raunchy, clever summer comedy as a nerdy small-town police department clerk who regains consciousness after a car wreck, a veritable superhero with a wide array of amazing abilities and weird traits. What gives is lots of earthy laughs. With 'Survivor's' Colson Bakerell, John C. McKinley and Ed Asner. (1:23. PG-13 for crude and sexual humor).

'Atlantis: the Lost Empire'

Its gift for wide-screen spectacle notwithstanding, this gee-whiz story of a turn-of-the-century search for the fabled lost continent has the look and feel of the best Disney animated film of 1981 not 2001. (1:35. PG, for action violence).

'Evolution'

When an asteroid carrying fast-evolving organisms lands in Arizona, its offspring threaten to eat the country. If you loved 'Ghostbusters' you'll hate this. With David Duchovny, Orlando Jones, Seann William Scott, Julianne Moore, Ted Levine. Screenplay by David Diamond, David Weissman, Don Jakoby. Directed by Ivan Reitman. (1:45. PG-13, for crude and sexual humor, and for sci-fi action).

'A Knight's Tale'

Writer-director Brian Koppelman's idea for marrying modern rock music to 14th century jousting was a good one, but he's too parsimonious with it. As a result, we get to spend too much time watching a tedious romance between Heath Ledger and newcomer Tannay Sossamon. Love may be grand, but this ain't. (2:12. PG-13 for action violence, some nudity and brief sex-related dialogue).

'Lara Croft: Tomb Raider'

Angelina Jolie stars as video-game heroine Lara Croft as she sets out to save the world. Directed by Simon West. With Iain Glen, Daniel Craig and Jon Voight.

'Memento'

Christopher Nolan's exceptional new film, a haunting, nervy thriller about a man who can remember nothing at all. More than a film of ideas, however, it's a provocatively structured and thrillingly executed film noir, an intricate, inventive use of cinema's possibilities that pushes what can be done on screen in an unusual direction. With Guy Pearce, Carrie-Anne Moss and Joe Pantoliano. (1:45. R, for violence, language and some drug content).

'Moulin Rouge'

A fever dream of musical spectacle by director Baz Luhrmann, its dizzying visual and melodic panache is operatic by intention and excessive by design. This is a flabbergasting piece of work, nakedly out there, willing to risk logical foolishness because it is so in love with the head-turning possibilities of the film medium. And, inevitably, foolish is what it sometimes looks. Although it shows us excellent work from costars Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor as singing star-crossed lovers in turn-of-the-century Paris, it's also a film that can't escape the defects of its virtues. (2:06. PG-13 for sexual content).

'The Mummy Returns'

Writer-director Stephen Sommers, co-stars Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz plus a lot of key creative personnel prove that the second time is the charm as they combine for a sequel that is much improved over the 1999 version. An old-fashioned sensibility plus computer-generated special effects have no trouble gaining and holding our attention. (2:09. PG-13, for adventure action and violence).

'Pearl Harbor'

An intelligent, briskly-paced and action-filled summer blockbuster that views Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor as the beginning of America's loss of innocence, a point of view that encompasses, passion, valor, epic disaster and spectacular aerial warfare. In the foreground are lifelong pals, U.S. Army pilots (Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) both in love with Navy nurse Kate Beckinsale. Directed by Michael Bay, written by Randall Wallace and co-starring Cuba Gooding Jr., Tom Sizemore, Jon Voight and Alec Baldwin. (2:00. PG-13 for sustained intense war sequences, images of wounded, brief sensuality and some language).

'Shrek'

computer animation, this new version of William Steig's fractured fairy tale about an ogre who rescues a princess is all comic attitude, all the time. It especially benefits from its superb voice talent, including Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, John Lithgow and an unstoppable Eddie Murphy as a donkey sidekick named, well, Donkey. (129. PG for mild language and some crude humor.)

'Swordfish'
A dirty fairy tale of cyber-terrorism where nasty people inhabit a trash-talking world of fast cars, complaisant women and major explosions; this John Travolta-Halle Berry-Hugh Jackman vehicle is what you'd expect from commercials/video director Dominic Sena and action fan/producer Joel Silver. (139. R, for violence, language and some sexuality/nudity.)

'What's the Worst That Can Happen?'
This David vs. Goliath crime comedy pits professional thief Martin Lawrence against crooked media tycoon Danny DeVito. The stars and many others are amusing but the impact is diminished by an overly labored plot and a relentless amorality that is crass rather than sly in tone. With John Leguizamo, Glennie Headley. (PG-13, for language and sexual content.)

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - It was so much fun the first time, they're going to do it again. "Slapsticks" will be on the College of Southern Idaho stage again for fund-raising performances tonight and Saturday.

Directed by CSI drama professor Tony Mannen, the show was a last-minute substitute for one of the two originally scheduled drama productions that didn't come off during the spring semester. It turned out to be an improvisational hit.

The drama club students from Delta Psi Omega will do two performances in Room 119 of the Fine Arts Center. Each show will be at 8 p.m. Admission is by donation. Proceeds will be split between Delta Psi Omega and the Magic Valley Rehabilitation Center.

Ice shows start Saturday

The Times-News

IN BRIEF

CSI Inks Valley's Black, Oklahoma State transfer

TWIN FALLS - College of Southern Idaho coach Derek Zeck announced Thursday he has received national letters of intent from Valley High's Rob Black and Oklahoma State University transfer David Anderson.

Black, an All-State football and basketball player who helped lead the Vikings to the A-3 state basketball championship in March, is the first area athlete to sign with CSI under Zeck.

Zeck said the talented guard, who averaged 18.2 points per game, solidifies an already deep backcourt.

"We're so deep there. We have a lot of sophomores who have already been through the league," Zeck said. "But he's real and he's a great kid. He'll get a chance."

Zeck described the 6-foot-8 Anderson, a native of Puerto Rico, as a "monster athlete."

Anderson played with the Puerto Rican national team last summer and lists his hometown as Sugar Land, Texas, the same as CSI signee Andre Watson. Anderson finished his senior year of high school at Hargrave (Va.) Military Academy, where he averaged 30.0 points per game.

In other moves, James Idoko and Yankuba Camara have left the team. Zeck said Idoko is pursuing a professional career in Europe while Camara has followed former Golden Eagle William "Smush" Parker to Fordham University, where he'll redshirt next season.

In a four-way breakaway, German National team member and overall point leader, Judith Arndt, sprinted to a first-place finish Thursday in the second stage of the HP Women's Challenge bicycle race.

Athensua rider Rasa Polkviute placed second with American Joao-Wilson of the Office Depot Team finishing third. Wilson maintained a lead for over half of the latter part of the race before Arndt raced past her to finish first at 3:41.

"My goal was to get over the climb ahead of the great climbers, that way I could help Jeannie (Longo)," Wilson said. "I made it over the climb alone. I wasn't strong enough in the swirling tailwind to go the distance."

Thursday's stage was a 53.5-mile race from Lowman to Stanley, which featured riders climbing the 13-mile, 1,900-foot Banner Creek Pass.

A blast from the past

Irwin takes early lead at U.S. Open

The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. - Tiger Woods never said winning another U.S. Open would be easy. He also never envisioned chasing a man more than twice his age. Eleven years after becoming the oldest U.S. Open champion, 56-year-old Hale Irwin showed he has plenty of game left Thursday with momentum-saving pars and an unlikely birdie on the tough 18th hole for a 3-under 67.

"My purpose here this week is not to be ceremonial. It's to be competitive," Irwin said. "And I think today established those bona fide credentials."

All Woods established was that he was human. After chopping his way to a double bogey on No. 9 - his first in a major since the third round of the PGA Championship - Woods fell to 3-over par and was in danger of dropping another shot when heavy storms swamped Southern Hills and suspended the first round.

Only 66 players in the 156-man field managed to complete their rounds. When play resumes at 5 a.m. today, Woods will face an 8-foot par putt on No. 10 and a long day of trying to make up for the lost time.

Boris Coosen of South Africa birdied the seventh hole just before the sirens sounded and was tied with Irwin at 3 under. Toshi Izawa of Japan was at 2 under after four holes.

Loren Roberts and Stewart Cink were the only other players who finished their rounds under par, both at 69.

The U.S. Open

Tulsa, Okla. - A brief look at the first round Thursday at the U.S. Open (all times EDT):

Leading: Three-time winner Hale Irwin shot a 3-under 67. He has a two-stroke lead over Loren Roberts and Stewart Cink among players finishing the round before storms halted round.

Trailing: Phil Mickelson and Sergio Garcia were three shots back. Bernhard Langer shot a 71. Davis Love a 72.

Tiger Woods: Shaky start for Tiger Woods in quest for a fifth straight major title. He bogeyed No. 3 and double-bogeyed 9, leaving him 3 over at the turn.

Stormy weather: Rain and lightning halted play with only 66 of 156 players finishing the round. Play will resume at 5 a.m. today; the second round is pushed back from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Shot of the day: Irwin's 2-iron from 198 yards at No. 18 landed within 2 feet of the cup for a gimme birdie.

Key stat: There were 12 birdies at No. 9 and four at 18 after the USGA eased conditions on the treacherous greens. No. 15 played as the toughest hole.

Lakers chase postseason history

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Kobe Bryant was dreaming of a dynasty, Shaquille O'Neal was pondering his legacy, Ron Harper and Horace Grant were making comparisons to the Chicago Bulls of the 1990s.

The Los Angeles Lakers were getting a little ahead of themselves Thursday on the eve of Game 5, but with good reason.

There was a sense pervading the First Union Center that the NBA Finals are all but over. Even the Philadelphia 76ers seemed ready to succumb to the inevitable.

"What I'm wanting to feel like now," Allen Iverson said, "is that the way to beat those guys is to really blow them out to have a chance. And the way things are going, that's just not going to happen."

The chance that Irwin wins is zero

TULSA, Okla. - The 56-year-old, first-round leader says age is just a number. So here's the one that best describes Hale Irwin's chance of winning the U.S. Open again: Zero.

There is no nice way to say this: Irwin is a three-time winner of the national championship, and he's also the oldest winner ever. The trick he turned in 1990 at age 45. But look back at the golfers who've won since then, and it becomes apparent that for card-carrying AARP members, the Open is a shut case.

JIM LITKE

When Tiger Woods won last year by a record 15 shots he was 24. The year before that, the late Payne Stewart won at age 42. Spite the difference between those two, and that's the average age of the man who hoists the trophy on those steamy Sundays in June.

You need to have that deep-rooted belief that you can," Irwin said, "yet at the same time, along with those vitamin pills, you have to take the reality pill. And you have to be realistic about what you can do and what you can't.

"I cannot drive the ball with Tiger. I can't drive the ball with many of these guys. But I can certainly put it into positions where I can play."

Irwin did that with just enough precision Thursday to shoot 67 and be drawn into a game of what-if. He hit eight of 14 fairways and 11 of 18 greens - both middling numbers - but he needed only 27 putts. Maybe he should have been content just beating his playing partners - Fred Funk, whose 45th birthday was Thursday, and Loren Berber, whose 46th is just 10 days away. But Irwin's mind was already jumping ahead.

What if he stays hot with the putter, and somehow bumps up the percentages of fairways and greens hit?

"There's always the hopes and the expectations, but at the same time, the reality," he said. "And what you do is hope they all sort of meet somewhere in the middle."

But Irwin's recent form in the Open suggests the meeting will take place much lower than that. Last year at the Pebble Beach, he took a 68 in the opening round and took himself out of contention with rounds of 78 and 81 the next two days. In 1994, he was in third place heading into Sunday and wound up signing for 78, sliding all the way down to tie for 18th. In the 21 Opens before his last win, he missed two cuts; he's missed that many in the 11 years since.

The point is not to knock Irwin, but to keep the rest of us from joining this exercise in self-delusion. Tales that begin this way always end with a heavy heart. Irwin knew enough to stop short of predicting a win, but it wasn't hard to figure out which way he was leaning.

"I feel confident about what I'm able to do. Whether or not I can do it, I don't know. But I know the purpose here this week is not to be ceremonial. It's to be competitive."

If those words carry an echo, it's because they should. Those were the words Jack Nicklaus used to rationalize his playing at the major championships long after he had lost real chance to win them. And if you're looking to chastise somebody for toying with our emotions, blame Jack. When he came out of nowhere to steal the Masters at age 46, he took the cap off our imagination.

Yet every time Nicklaus' name turned up on the leaderboard at a major championship for the next 15 years, logic went home with a headache. Then common sense took the rest of the weekend off. Unfortunately, his golf game followed right on the heels of his head.

Expect the same to happen to Irwin. He's a former standout defensive back at Colorado, as tough and fierce a competitor as they come. Believing in themselves was how Irwin, and especially his biggest venues, tournaments on the toughest venues. The frightening thing is how quickly they get the rest of us make the leap of faith, on evidence as scant as a scintillating first round.

For one day, at least, this was the Hale Irwin of old. In the time he's taken to roll a round, he's more likely to be just an older and wiser Hale Irwin.

Long day ahead for U.S. Open golfers

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Golfers at the U.S. Open are in for a long day today, and maybe Saturday as well. Thunderstorms that rolled across Southern Hills Country Club on Thursday prompted the U.S. Golf Association to suspend play at 3:17 p.m., with 30 of the 52 throes still on the course.

Those left on the course - among them Tiger Woods, who is seeking his fifth straight major championship - will resume play at 6 a.m., weather permitting. "Then the second round will begin, with the final group scheduled to tee off at 4:30 p.m. Even with sunny weather, the round will have to be completed Saturday morning.

"In essence, we're backing round two up 2.5 hours," said

Key Hole of the Day
TULSA, Okla. - A look at the key hole Thursday in the U.S. Open:
Hole: 18
Par: 4
Stroke average: 4.38
Rank: 3
Key fact: Only four birdies all day.

Tom Meeks, the USGA's director of rules and competitions. "I know they're not going to finish. But if we can get the last group - and I think we can with a break in the weather - if we can get them through 13 or 14, then the game plan would be to bring the six or eight groups that are still out there back Saturday morning."

After those players are finished, the third round would begin as scheduled.

The Tulsa area was under a tornado watch much of the day. Play was first stopped at 1:39 p.m. as storm clouds built. No tornadoes formed, but lightning and heavy rain lingered.

Meeks said there were no negative comments by the players when they were informed. "I must admit, I congratulate the players for their positive attitude on realizing we've got a tough thing to try to get back on schedule," he said.

The National Weather Service said the rain could continue into the evening. The forecast for today called for sunny skies with temperatures in the upper 80s. Meeks said if there is casual water throughout the golf course, the resumption of the first round might have to be delayed even longer.

"I think we can get back close to schedule tomorrow," he said. "Again, I'm being very optimistic, because I certainly don't want to look at the other side until I have to."

He said the USGA would not send golfers off on two tees for the second round because of the large field. He also said the players "absolutely" would not be allowed to lift, clean and place their golf balls.

"We will not sacrifice the game of golf and the foundation of golf by doing that," he said.

Nicklaus focuses on job of dad this year

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - For the first time in 45 years, Jack Nicklaus swung an umbrella, not a club, at the U.S. Open.

He didn't want a big deal made of it. The four-time champion was too busy being a concerned parent.

Nicklaus and his wife, Barbara, stretched the gallery ropes with other fans to see their 32-year-old son, Gary, make his second Open appearance Thursday.

"When he plays well, you have a great time and enjoy it," Nicklaus said. "And when he plays poorly, like any parent, you suffer with him."

Briefly, the leaderboard looked like past tournaments, with a Nicklaus on top, this time only briefly. Gary Nicklaus birdied the second hole, but then his troubles began.

He double-bogeyed No. 7 and bogeyed the last five holes to finish at 8-over 78, declining comment as he headed to the clubhouse.

"I don't know if he lost patience," Jack Nicklaus said. "It's a typical U.S. Open problem. You make one mistake and you don't know where the next one's going to happen."

Nicklaus blended into the golf like any sun-wearer. He wore an umbrella and a water bottle. Spectators tended to leave him alone or gawked from afar. He waited until after the round to sign autographs, hoping to avoid being a distraction.

The boy looked up to find Nicklaus standing next to him. His mouth fell open, but he didn't say a word.

Nicklaus kept his eyes on his son, his mouth tight as Gary struggled.

The man with 44 straight U.S. Opens to draw from hadn't filled the younger Nicklaus' head with advice. He had told him to focus on the fairways and holes - just the kind of advice, Nicklaus said, that's "not much use coming from the old man."

He also gave no pointers about playing Southern Hills. "It's hard for me to give much advice," he said. "I haven't played well here myself."

Martin finishes strong at Greater Cleveland Open

CONCORD, Ohio (AP) - Casey Martin gripped his driver at No. 15, smacked it against the passenger-side cushion on his cart and knocked his game into gear. "That was my first flush shot of the day," he joked.

Playing in his first tournament since the Supreme Court ruled he could use a cart in competition, Martin salvaged a frustrating round with birdies at three of his final four holes for a 4-under-par 68 Thursday in the Buy.com Greater Cleveland Open.

"I'll take it," Martin said. "I don't feel like I played that great, but 68 is one of my best rounds this year. I didn't hit a good shot until the seventh hole."

Martin will begin today's second round in 19th place, four strokes behind leader, Heath Slocum.

Martin's case has sparked a nationwide debate among golfers and non-golfers. But there was no controversy to be seen or heard during Martin's round - just golf.

"He's a great guy," said Charlie Sifford, who helped break golf's color barrier as one of the first blacks to play on the mainstream tours.

"I'm happy for him," said Sifford. "I think he deserves the cart. He doesn't have an advantage over other guys. Carts can't hit those shots for him."

Martin got in his round as temperatures crept toward 90 and before half the field got under way.

"I had a huge advantage," he said with a wink. Martin missed the cut in four of his eight tournaments this season and his best finish is a tie for 34th at the Louisiana State in April.

He's hoping that, with his 3.5-year legal battle against the PGA finally over, he can focus on his game and fans will look at his ability and not his disability.

"I think it's the start of a new chapter for me," he said earlier this week.

Sweden's Hjorth takes Evian Masters lead

EVIAN, France (AP) - Sweden's Maria Hjorth equaled the course record with a 7-under 65 and took a one-stroke lead after the second round of the $2.1 million Evian Masters Thursday.

"I just felt it would be a good day when I teed off," Hjorth said. "I felt I could get a good run going."

In warm and calm conditions, Hjorth had eight birdies and only one bogey.

Hjorth, who lives in Scottsdale, Ariz., was at 10-under 134 for 36 holes.

Another Swede, Sophie Gustafson, who shot a 66, and first-round leader Beth Daniel, who had a 68, were tied for second at 125.

Gustafson scored the 17th with a sand wedge from 109 yards and won a cut. Gustafson also bogeyed the par-5, seventh hole with a tee iron to two feet and had two birdies in a bogey-free round.

Daniel came to the par-5 18th with five birdies and tied for the lead with the approach hit a tree left and bounced into a bunker.

Maria Hjorth tees off during the second round of the Evian Masters in the French Alps, Thursday.

round where she only missed one fairway and hit 17 greens.

"I drove well and last week in Rochester I couldn't hit a fairway," she said. Korea's Se Ri Pak shot 68 and was fourth at 137. Pak reeled off four birdies to complete her front-nine in 31 and grab a temporary share of the lead but came back in 37.

Jackie Gallagher-Smith and Annika Sorenstam both shot 69s and were tied at 138 with two others - Japan's Akiko Fukushima (66) and Korea's Mi Hyun Kim (67).

U.S. Open champion Karrie Webb held from 30 feet to birdie the first hole, but it was her only birdie in a round of 73.

For the second straight day, Webb threw her ball disgustedly into the pond by the 18th.

Continued from D1. back nine to finish at 70, along with Sergio Garcia, Angel Cabrera and Matt Gogel. Davis Love III, playing for the first time in two months because of neck and back injuries, bogeyed the last two holes for a 72.

Irwin, who qualified by winning the Senior Open, can become the oldest first-round leader of the U.S. Open since World War II if his lead stands. Where he goes from there is anyone's guess, but he won't rule himself out yet.

"It's not like I've never been here before," he said.

Irwin has won the U.S. Open three times, one fewer than Jack Nicklaus and Ben Hogan and two more than Woods. His last time came in 1990 at Medinah, when he was given a special exemption to play and beat unheralded Mike Donald in a playoff.

"With more storms coming and Southern Hills already soaked, the U.S. Golf Association called it a day after a delay of 90 minutes.

Asked to comment as he climbed into a waiting car, Woods said, "I'll talk to them tomorrow."

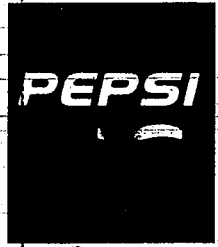

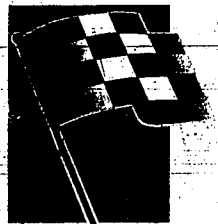

The old man gets a little more, rest. Irwin won't tee off for his second round until about 3 p.m., although the course could be at its toughest.

Irwin has been in this position before.

Two years ago in the PGA Championship at Medinah, he was just four strokes off the lead after 36 holes before he struggled on the weekend and tied for 41st. A year ago at Pebble Beach, he joined Woods as the only player to have two rounds in the 60s - Irwin's middle rounds of 78-81 didn't exactly help his cause.

Still, the 67 was his lowest U.S. Open score since the final round at Medinah in 1990.

"There's always the hopes and sometimes the expectations and sometimes there's reality," Irwin said. "And you kind of hope they all sort of meet in the middle somewhere."

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
If Jeff Gordon expects his fans to maintain respect for him, then he better start using his fists instead of his mouth. Tony Stewart and Rusty Wallace should have been knocked on their butts for what they did to Gordon. Gordon disappoints me for talking that crap, and if he continues to do that, he'll be known as the pony of the track, and I, for one, would hate to see that, because he's too good of a driver and too much of a gentleman to deserve that. To get respect, sometimes one must demand it, and if it means straightening people out physically, then by heavens, do it and have no regrets about it.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I, for one, think that Fox is doing a fantastic job covering our beloved sport! The new innovative camera shots and well-placed microphones give the viewer the sensation of being inside the race car. I specifically love the "Crack It Up" feature, with my surround-sound system and big-screen TV, it allows me to be a part of the race. The announcers don't speak like the engines do the talking, and I crank up the volume... I'm glad to see ESPN getting their noses bent. They thought it was funny when every other station wanted access to NASCAR news and it had to go through them, and now the tables have been turned!

Race trucks hit Magic Valley Speedway

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley Speedway has been good to Nick Lynch.

The defending American Race Trucks speedway points champion-already has one-win at the Twin Falls oval this season and will be looking for a second on Saturday-in-what-is-fast-becoming a two-driver points race.

Lynch, of Burley, enters the fourth race of the season with 455 points and eight races left to run. Second place driver John Newhouse from Twin Falls is second with 428 points, while Parma's John Wong is a distant third at 380.

Three ran a close race the last time the trucks came to Twin Falls in early-May, with Lynch pulling ahead of Wong in the final five laps to take the checkered flag.

Also traveling-to-the-speedway for the third time this season are the Cactus Petes Intermountain Late Model Super Stocks. It's the fifth race of the year for the fast cars and their first visit since May 19.

The sleek race cars opened the year with the Bud 300 at the local track on April 16, but cold weather and caution flags kept racing to a minimum and survival-at-a-premium. With warmer weather and the early season rust worn off, the problems-of-the-past-should-be-a-thing-of-the-past.

Two local classes round out Saturday's field. Jerry Rice will be looking to catch points leader Troy Chandler in the Thunder Stocks division. Chandler leads Rice by only 12 points in the closest points race of the local classes.

Grand National Sportsman points leader Ray VanHolland will try for his eighth top 5 finish in eight starts while Michelle Meads will be trying to close the 20-point-gap-that-separates-the-two.

Heat races begin at 7 p.m. with main events scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Gordon knows Pocono woes

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) - Ask Jeff Gordon about Pocono International Raceway, and he can't come up with a description of any of his three victories.

"I'm still in more of a career also-ran than a three-time Winston Cup-champion, Gordon has a list of excuses for his defeats.

"I've lost by missing a shift, I've spun out and I've been stuck in the mud," he said.

There are 42 other drivers hoping Gordon will have some new material, like an explanation Sunday of why he didn't win the Pocono 500. He hasn't had to say much three of the past four weekends - just thank the sponsors, pocket the winner's share and go home.

He won NASCAR's non-points all-star event May 19, coming from the rear of the field in backup car. A week later, he again had the look of a winner, but lost a chance because of a collision on pit road.

Then he led 381 of 400 laps while winning at Dover, Del., and took the points lead with a victory last Sunday at Michigan International Speedway. There, he led 143 of 200 laps for a two-race total of 524 of 600.

His beginning to resemble the Gordon of old, the one who got 47 of his 55 career victories from 1995-99. He thinks the current run of domination could continue a while.

Jeff Gordon expects his fans to maintain respect for him, then he better start using his fists instead of his mouth. Tony Stewart and Rusty Wallace should have been knocked on their butts for what they did to Gordon. Gordon disappoints me for talking that crap, and if he continues to do that, he'll be known as the pony of the track, and I, for one, would hate to see that, because he's too good of a driver and too much of a gentleman to deserve that. Jim Baggett Stribling, Pa.
Thanks for providing us of your opinions.

"I've seen this team get stronger and stronger," Gordon said. "We just have to be sure we don't beat ourselves.

Then he laughs, as if to remind himself he's at Pocono, where caution flags fly as often for both animals and humans running on the track, where he has beaten himself more than once.

"The race I missed the shift on the restart while leading stands out in my mind," he said of 1995. "I made a mistake that cost me the win."

Another time, it was even more embarrassing.

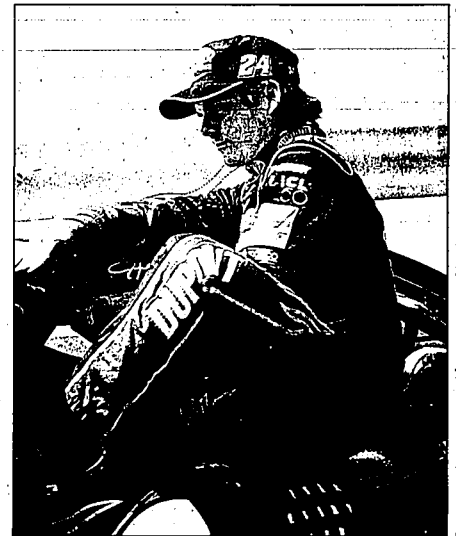

"There was a late restart and I was in the top five with a strong car," Gordon said. "It was scuffing my tires in turn one when I lost control of the car. I had rained the night before and I got stuck in the mud. I finally got out of the mud, I had to restart at the tail end of the lead lap.

"It wasn't funny then, but I can laugh about it now."

With three wins, four seconds and a third in his last 11 starts at Pocono, Gordon might have the car to beat again Sunday. His toughest opponent appears to be Jeremy Mayfield, who won last June by tapping the late Dale Earnhardt and passing him a quarter-mile from the end.

A victory Sunday would move Gordon into a tie with four other drivers for the most Pocono victories. Among the four-time winners are Rusty Wallace, who inherited the lead and won last July when teammate Mayfield's tire blew.

In the mid-1980s, the battle for supremacy in the Winston Cup Series was mainly a rivalry between Chevrolet driver Dale Earnhardt and Ford driver Bill Elliott. Their most famous showdown occurred in the 1987 running of The Winston. The two traded paint several times, and Earnhardt emerged triumphant. It was the scene of the misnamed "Pass in the Grass" (Earnhardt actually held the lead over Elliott and did not pass him).

Tourism association wins $45,000 grant

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration this week announced a $45,000 grant to the South Central Idaho Tourism and Recreation Development Association of Twin Falls.

The grant will allow the association to plan and implement a regional loop tour system to draw visitors to the region.

"The tourism association will develop a system that will work to boost tourism and associated development in the region. EDA is pleased to partner with the people of Idaho in helping to diversify the economy and create new jobs," said Acting Assistant Secretary for Economic Development Mary C. Pfeiffer, in a statement.

The grant is funded under EDA's Economic Adjustment Program, which helps states and communities develop plans to lessen the adverse effects of changes in their economic situations that are causing, or threatening to cause, serious structural damage to the underlying economic base.

Albertson's announces quarterly cash dividend

TWIN FALLS — Boise-based Albertson's Inc., which has several Magic Valley grocery stores, declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 19 cents per share. The dividend will be payable Aug. 10 to stockholders of record at the close of business July 16.

Albertson's operates 2,539 retail food and drug stores in 36 states.

Wal-Mart to pay fine for errors during construction

MOORE, Okla. — Infractions committed by contractors while building the Moore Wal-Mart six years ago contributed to a $1 million fine levied against the retail corporation by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Moore store was one of 17 Wal-Mart stores nationwide where contractors and subcontractors violated the Clean Water Act during construction, according to an EPA report.

The report states Wal-Mart failed to comply with storm water regulations and let polluted water from construction sites flow into public storm drains. The Clean Water Act requires contractors to create pollution prevention plans to minimize the amount of pollutants in storm water runoff.

The EPA penalized Wal-Mart for infractions at sites in New Mexico, Texas and Massachusetts, as well as Moore — the only Oklahoma store mentioned in the report.

Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, Ark., agreed to pay the fine and, as part of the settlement, establish a $4.5 million environmental management plan to improve compliance with environmental laws at future construction sites.

Wal-Mart spokesman said even though the retailer agreed to pay the fine, it disagreed with the EPA on several issues.

Slowdown leads to layoffs at American Express

MINNEAPOLIS — American Express Financial Advisors — which has financial advisers serving the Magic Valley — is laying off 100 customer service employees, saying reduced demand on the investment front has decreased work and call volumes this year.

About 75 of the layoffs will be in Minneapolis and 25 in Salt Lake City, the company said. The workers serve retail and online brokerage clients and financial advisers.

Some of the workers being laid off now are expected to find other jobs within the company. Those who have not landed elsewhere after eight weeks will receive severance packages.

Funding layoffs are possible. "What we don't know with 100 percent certainty is what the economy and financial markets will do over the next several months. We will continue to make staffing adjustments to accommodate fluctuating work volumes," the company said.

Ameo joins U.S. Bancorp Piper Jaffray, Charles Schwab, Merrill Lynch and other investment houses in reducing staff in response to this year's difficult securities markets.

Twin Falls reaps renewal award

Association of Idaho Cities honors city for loan program

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An effort to bring a new look to some older parts of town also brought an award to town Thursday.

Twin Falls received a City Achievement Award from the Association of Idaho Cities for its rehabilitation financing program. Local officials received a plaque during the 54th AIC Annual Conference in Natapa.

Working with bond counsel, the city and its Urban Renewal Agency created the program, which got City Council approval in March. It allows certain residential or commercial property owners in the urban renewal district to get below-market-rate, long-term financing — from participating financial institutions — to renovate or remodel their buildings.

"The program should bring needed improvements to the downtown area, restore the sense of community, increase property values and boost the economic viability of the downtown," AIC said in a statement.

Twin Falls' recently enlarged Urban Renewal Area No. 4 now includes much of the south side of town.

The area's new rehabilitation financing assists building repairs or other improvements, such as facades, fire-suppression sprinkler systems, landscaping, water and sewer lines, parking lots, curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

It provides low-interest, longer-term loans to property owners doing voluntary rehabilitations or ones required for building permits or certificates of occupancy. It also offers the loans to groups of homeowners installing curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

City Economic Development Director Dave McAlindin said earlier that the program is structured so the agency doesn't risk the rest of its own budget if property owners fail to make their loan payments.

Interest in the proposed rehabilitation financing was running high this spring from downtown commercial property owners and at least one group of residential neighbors, McAlindin said in March. He wasn't available Thursday to say how many loan applications the program has received since March.

Folks such as Robert Myrland were anxious for the rehabilitation financing program's approval. Small-business owners don't have the bucks to pour into restorations of downtown's historical structures, said Myrland of Uptown Bistro, the latest business venture to occupy the 1906 grocery store at 117 Main Ave. E.

"It takes a lot more work to keep 1906 building in operation than to have a new building," restaurateur Myrland said in March.

Nevertheless, Uptown Bistro cooked up an ambitious project: Remodel the front and back facades of its building, originally the C. Harder Bakery and Grocery. Put in new windows. Add air conditioning, essential for diners' comfort. Fix scuffwork that was removed in the 1950s.

But Myrland expected rehabilitation costs to be "between $42,500 and $50,000," he said. The restaurant held off for a year, hoping to take advantage of the financing program.

TALKING UP MINI-CASSIA

Michelle McFarland, the Mini-Cassia economic development coordinator, talks to about 50 people Thursday about incentives that attract businesses to communities. She said she has about two dozen prospective employers interested in coming to Mindoka or Cassia counties, but she declined to release details on any of them. McFarland made her remarks during the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce's monthly luncheon, which was held at George K's restaurant in Burley.

Heinz warns profits might fall short

Strong dollar, rising expenses depress earnings per share

Bridget News

KANSAS CITY — Food company H. J. Heinz Co. said its profits will be lower than expected in the first half of its fiscal year as the strong dollar undermines income from overseas sales.

The warning came as the maker of Heinz ketchup and Ore-Ida frozen potatoes — including some from Magic Valley growers — reported a fourth-quarter profit 18 percent lower than a year earlier. In addition to its foreign-exchange problems, the Pittsburgh-based company is struggling with high energy costs and weak sales growth.

While Heinz still expects earnings per share to be between $2.70 and $2.80 for all of fiscal 2002, the company said first-quarter earnings will be 60 to 62 cents per share. A survey of analysts by Thomson FinancialFirst Call pointed to a profit of 65 cents per share.

Second-quarter profits will fall 2 to 3 cents short of the 71 cents per share that Wall Street expects, the company told analysts via a conference call.

In its fourth quarter, which ended May 2, Heinz earned $186 million, or 53 cents per share. The amount does not include charges of $299 million, mostly related to a restructuring announced March 15.

That shakeup eliminated 1,900 jobs as the company closed its Puerto Rico tuna operation, sold eight fishing boats and ceased pet food production at its Terminal Island, Calif., plant. Heinz has reorganized its struggling tuna and pet food divisions.

Sales in the fourth quarter rose 4 percent to $2.7 billion. Excluding the impact of the strong dollar, sales increased 8 percent. That figure exceeded most industry analysts' projections, but so did the quarter's restructuring charge. The company previously had predicted a $300 million write-off.

Excluding special items, the company's fourth-quarter operating profit fell 14 percent. In addition to the strong dollar, which gives exporters less U.S. currency for sales made overseas, rising North American energy costs and increasing marketing and manufacturing

Kmart rolls out sixth wave of Martha Stewart products

Knight Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — Martha Stewart has claimed her stake in your bedrooms, nurseries, gardens, kitchens, walls and tabletops. Now the domestic deity wants to clean up your closets.

This week in New York, Kmart Corp. and Stewart launched the sixth line of Martha Stewart Everyday products for the Troy-based retailer, which has Twin Falls and Burley stores. The line is expected to generate $100 million in sales through the end of January.

Called Martha Stewart Everyday Keeping, the 314-piece line features plastic storage boxes, chrome shelving, cedar hangers, glass food canisters and wooden closets. Prices range from 19 cents for a plastic storage box to $69.99 for a chrome five-shelf unit.

Kmart stores began carrying some items two weeks ago. Stewart snatched up clothespins, making the item the top seller in the Everyday Keeping line, says Vincent Franco, a Kmart divisional vice president. The top revenue generator is a $59.99 ironing board.

Stewart asked for consumers' patience in looking for her products at Kmart, alluding to the discount retailer's reputation for having empty store shelves. "If you're frustrated, keep looking. They will be restocked," said Stewart, chairwoman and chief executive officer of Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc. Chuck Conaway, Kmart CEO, acknowledged that it is a challenge to ensure availability of Stewart's products and that it is one of the areas the company has worked to improve.

Judge appoints examiner to review Washington Group's bankruptcy

The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — A federal bankruptcy judge Wednesday ordered an examiner be appointed to determine why Washington Group International filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

The appointment, considered someone in cases exceeding $5 million, came amid charges by one of Washington Group's largest creditors that mismanagement could be the reason the Boise-based company spiraled into its second bankruptcy in five years.

The successor to one-time international construction giant Morrison Knudsen Co. filed May 14 to protect the company from creditors while it reorganizes.

It accused Raytheon Co. of defrauding it last year in the sale of the Massachusetts-based company's construction division for $55 million and the assumption of an estimated $450 million in liabilities. Washington Group claims liabilities were actually $700 million. Raytheon denies the fraud charge.

At the U.S. Bankruptcy Court hearing, attorneys for Mitsubishi Heavy Industries said Washington Group's plan for reorganization provides preferential treatment to some creditors.

"In the past year, Washington Group has burned through $1 billion or more, and they're saying it's all the fault of Raytheon," Mitsubishi attorney Andrew Sherman said. "But was the bankruptcy the fault of management, or from incompetence? An examiner should come in and find out what happened."

Judge Gregg Zive agreed. "There is always a concern that the reason a company seeks reorganization has something to do with its management," he said. "It's a delicate issue."

He authorized the hiring of an examiner and set a June 25 hearing to determine that officer's powers.

Washington Group attorneys argued any information to do with its lawsuit against Raytheon Co. should be excluded because of the pending litigation.

Zive denied a request by Mitsubishi for "super-priority" status among creditors, which would allow it to collect money owed before any other group is paid. Mitsubishi claims it is owed at least $59 million and means to sue Raytheon and buy equipment used on three construction sites.

Martial arts expert to open studio

Tenshinkan Karate champion plans Zenergy expansion

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — Jonathan Winstral, co-founder of Zenergy, a hybrid yoga/fitness studio in Mill Valley, Calif., left for Saitama, Japan, last week to compete in the 16th Tenshinkan Karate World Championship.

He returned with the "kancho" world cup, the first time a foreigner has won in the competition; in previous years, the award has gone to Japan, a Zenergy statement said.

Why should the Magic Valley care?

Winstral's plans include an opening later this year of a Zenergy studio in Sun Valley.

Twelve hundred contestants; Zenergy said, were chosen to compete in the Tenshinkan Karate World Championship in Japan Sunday in numerous elimination rounds with two types of event: "kata," choreographed forms emphasizing movement, strength, focus and balance; and "kumite," contact fighting in three-minute rounds judged by points.

Tenshinkan Karate means "the true or sincere way of the empty hand," the Zenergy statement said. "It is concentrated in the heart, more so than in the fist of the practitioner, so its benefits are better recognized in one's own character development than through fabled opponents," Winstral said.

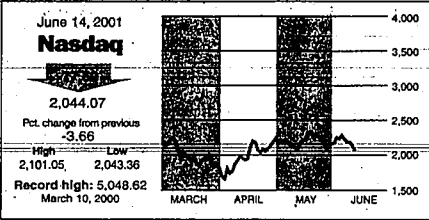

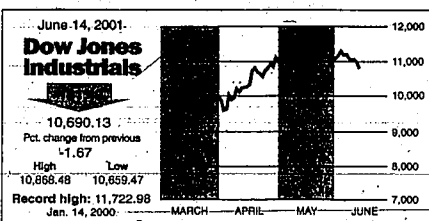

Based on traditional concepts and incorporating modern fighting techniques, Tenshinkan Karate is a progressive martial arts system, Zenergy said.

Michele and Jonathan Winstral founded Zenergy a year ago in Mill Valley, which they call a rustic, affluent enclave a few miles north of San Francisco. Incorporated into the personal training and body transformation program is a schedule of yoga, cardio and martial arts classes. Tenshinkan Karate is one of the classes Jonathan Winstral teaches.

Barrage of earnings warnings send stock market tumbling

NEW YORK (AP) - More bad economic and earnings news battered the stock market Thursday, slamming technology stocks and sending the Dow Jones industrials down more than 180 points. The Dow was also hurt by news that General Electric's plans to acquire Honeywell will not win approval from European officials. Analysts said a barrage of second-quarter earnings warnings have unnerved investors, who now fear that a business turnaround is unlikely in 2001. A profit warning from the John Hancock Core Value Fund. The hopes and dreams of a fourth-quarter recovery is being put in question as each day goes on. There's no good news on the earnings and economic front right now," said John Forelli, portfolio manager for the John Hancock Core Value Fund. "The hopes and dreams of a fourth-quarter recovery is being put in question as each day goes on."

Broader stock indicators also dropped sharply. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 21.73, or 1.8 percent, to 1,219.87, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 77.59 to 2,044.07, a decline of 3.7 percent. The expiration of stock futures and options Friday, a quarterly occurrence known as triple witching, also exacerbated the market's negative tone. Triple witching is the best of times can lead to sharp declines. "We're starting to develop a short-term overvalued condition," said Gregory Nie, technical analyst at First Union Securities.

"Investor optimism has taken a back seat to the news of the moment, which are second-quarter preannouncements." Some of the Dow's steep decline Thursday was attributed to Honeywell, which dropped $5.16 to $37.10 after GE indicated its plan to acquire the company for $41 billion might not be approved by European regulators. GE rose $1.01 to $48.86, but another Dow component, United Technologies, fell

$3.16 to $77.10 on speculation it was being tested in buying Honeywell. Meanwhile, three new economic reports did little to suggest the business climate is improving. The Labor Department's Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach store shelves, crept up a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent last month, following a modest 0.3 percent increase in April.

Non-gambling casino heads to Utah resort

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A businessman plans to move a non-gambling casino to the Saltair Resort less than two months after opening the business in Maryland. Club Pair-A-Dice opened in April, but owner John Boender closed the business to prepare for the move to Saltair, which he said offers a better venue. It could open in six weeks. "I want this to be a place where parents can come with their kids," Boender said, although customers must be at least 18. Because gambling is illegal in Maryland, the Murray Club didn't bet as they played blackjack, craps and other games. It was legal because customers paid $7 an hour to sit at the tables. The casino will occupy about 6,000 square feet with 20 to 30 blackjack tables, craps and other games. The hourly rate for the new resort is going up to $11 an hour. Boender plans to open an area with a bar and entertainment for children under 18. Saltair has been a successful venue for rock concerts in recent years, and the casino is not expected to affect that, said Bruce Fritchett, an attorney for Boender's company.

Martha

Continued from D6 "Martha is my partner in building a stronger Kmart," Conway said at the launch at Stewart's Manhattan office, where he received a quick lesson from Stewart on how to properly fold a bath towel. The new line is the latest in a partnership that has helped Kmart in its struggle against competitors Wal-Mart Stores Inc. of Bentonville, Ark. and Target Corp. of Minneapolis, both of which also have Magic Valley stores. Kmart's market share is still behind Wal-Mart and Target, but its Martha Stewart lines have helped bring back some shoppers.

"I don't see anybody work as hard as she does to imprint her personality on products. I think that's what makes her so successful." - Randall Scott, branding consultant board? I don't think so." Branding consultant Randall Scott said that kind of demand for detail and quality that has helped Stewart's products gain popularity. "I don't see anybody work as hard as she does to imprint her personality on products. I think that's what makes her so successful. She hasn't cut corners that Kmart would have cut," said Scott, senior vice president at Addison Whitney in Charlotte, N.C.

Stewart's products weren't always widely successful with Kmart's customers. The endorsement deal was inked in 1987 under the leadership of Kmart CEO Joseph Antonini, but it took two years before any products under the At Home with Martha Stewart label hit store shelves. Shoppers weren't wowed by the merchandise or couldn't find it at the stores. The product line languished for years until Floyd Hall, who replaced Antonini, and Stewart revamped the idea in 1995.

The result was Martha Stewart Everyday and the first line of products, Martha Stewart Everyday Blue and White Label bedding and bath products, launched in February 1997. Five more product lines were introduced in the following four years: Martha Stewart Everyday Cosmetics, a paint collection for walls; Baby Baby, an infant bedding and nursery line; Garden, which included plants, seeds, tools, outdoor furniture and barbecue grills; Kitchen, a line of cooking accessories, and now Keeping.

Collectively, the more than 4,500 items sold in the six lines are expected to generate $5 billion in total sales from 1997 to the end of this year. Sales have grown each year, from $375 million in 1997. Scott said it is unusual for a mass merchandiser to have such a hit on its hands.

Historian probes star missing from Star-Spangled Banner

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Flag Day report: the missing 15th star on the original Star-Spangled Banner is still nowhere to be found.

There were 15 states in the Union when Francis Scott Key saw "by the dawn's early light" that the flag still flew over Baltimore's Fort M'Henry.

Lonn—Wood—Taylor, a Smithsonian Institution historian, who is probing the mystery of the missing star, said Thursday the flag was long in the hands of the Armistead family; descendants of Lt. Col. George Armistead who commanded the fort in 1813. His granddaughter, Georgiana Armistead Appleton, gave pieces of it to people she thought worthy of relics.

An exhibit called "Snippings from the Star-Spangled Banner" has opened at the side of the flag itself, which is laid out for conservationists to work on behind a glass wall.

After years of strain on the fabric from being hung vertically, the flag will be exhibited in the future with one end raised only a few feet from horizontal. Conservation work is due to be completed in the summer of 2002.

Spencer R. Crew and Lawrence M. Small prepare to place a piece of the Star-Spangled Flag on display at the museum in Washington Thursday.

Callers to psychic hotlines should hang up

DEAR ABBY: I recently moved to Minneapolis from south Florida, where I had worked as a telephone psychic. The money was great. However, I now live in an area where I actually know my neighbors, and I feel very guilty about my previous line of work.

As "psychics" here really just salesmen. We convinced callers that we knew something about their future. The callers were both men and women, and they really believed what we fed them. I feel doubly bad remembering how when business was slow, we laughed about the "pathetic losers" who were calling us. Some of them, I know, spent most of their daily wages on those phone calls.

I can't do anything to make up for my past sins, but please, Abby, warn callers of psychic hotlines that they are dealing with people with no more knowledge

Fonda claims she is happier than ever after her divorce

The Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Jane Fonda said she's happier than ever after her divorce from CNN founder Ted Turner.

"Oddly enough, this is the most wonderful period of my life," the 63-year-old actress told reporters Wednesday.

"While sad, divorce doesn't necessarily mean failure. The things which cause us the most pain are also the things we learn most from," said Fonda, who won best-actress Oscars for 1971's "Kluge" and 1978's "Coming Home."

Turner, the 62-year-old billionaire founder of the Cable News Network, married Fonda in December 1991. It was the third marriage for both.

"The couple announced in January 2000 that they were separating, and a judge in Atlanta granted their divorce last month.

Fonda's decision to become a Christian — which Turner has said was a factor in their breakup — has given her social commitments extra drive.

"It doesn't matter if you're a late bloomer as long as you don't miss the flower show," she said. "I question everything I do in the light of what Jesus Christ would have done."

Fonda made the comments while at the International Council of Nurses' world congress, where she encouraged support for the nursing profession.

"Nurses are not paid enough because it's primarily a female profession, and they don't get the respect they deserve," she said. "But nurses are the bedrock of health care."
