COURT CRUNCH?

Apparent lack of process in judge selection causes concern

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Though the retirement of one of Twin Falls' longest-standing District Court judges is still months away, there could be a crunch in the local court system if Gov. Dirk Kempthorne doesn't pick his replacement soon, the 5th Judicial District's administrative judge said. Fifth Judicial District Judge Daniel Meehl plans to retire Sept. 1. The Idaho Judicial Council last month interviewed several hopefuls for Meehl's job and sent Kempthorne a list of four finalists. It's up to Kempthorne to schedule interviews with the finalists and select the new judge. As of this week, there had been no word regarding when Kempthorne plans to start interviewing the finalists, said 5th District Administrative Judge Roger Burdick. If it takes too long for a new judge to be selected, it could Please see JUDGE, Page A2

BASE contest falls into action

Jumpers hope to gain support

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - One by one, they clambered over the railing, stood for a few seconds facing the wind - and then jumped off. After a few seconds of free fall from the Perrine Bridge, each jumper tossed a small primary parachute, which in turn ruffled, open the jumper's main parachute.

The sound of the freshly opened chute smacking against the air over the Snake River bounced off the lava rock cliffs near the river's edge, and another thrill-seeker drifted toward the safety of the south shore.

About 30 BASE jumpers showed up early Thursday on the Perrine Bridge to kick off the Snake River BASE Games, which wrap up early today. The competition centered around a large tarp set out as a target near the south bank of the Snake River near the bridge's base. The tarp is equipped with electronic sensors, and jumpers were out to score points according to how close they came to landing dead center on the target, said BASE games judge Martin Tilley of Auburn, Calif.

The jumpers were not only competing for individual glory; they also hope to warm the Magic Valley up to their sport, said contest organizer Harry Parker of Florida. Parker said his organization, the International PRO BASE circuit, held a low-key version of the contest last year and hoped to beef it up this year. But some local government and law enforcement officials balked at the idea of a crowd gathering on and around the Perrine Bridge. And jump contest organizers also found that a Twin Falls County ordinance calls for a hefty security bond for any event drawing more than 500 people, Parker said.

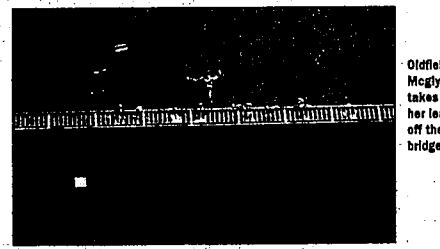

So the contest was again kept to a small scale, Parker said, though organizers hope to build it up in years to come.

That hinges on whether Twin Falls and the surrounding communities want it, said Parker and Tom Sanders of Santa Barbara, Calif.

"If people here want to make it a big event and bring a couple of million dollars into town over a

Brenda Oldfield-McGlynn lands her parachute inches from the center of a target under the Perrine Bridge in the first jump of the BASE games on Thursday. Participants are judged on the quality of their jump as well as how close they come to the target.

Oldfield-McGlynn takes her leap off the bridge. couple of days, we can do that," said Sanders, who spent the morning photographing and filming the competitors as they jumped. But without the backing of

Jumping for thrills

"BASE" stands for "building, antenna, span, earth" and describes the increasingly popular sport of jumping with a parachute off of tall structures or geological features. The Perrine Bridge has gained favor with BASE jumpers because, it is one of the few large-span bridges in the United States where the sport is allowed. Though the 485-foot drop off the Perrine Bridge allows for only a few seconds of free fall before jumpers must open their chutes, BASE jumpers like the bridge because the expansive flat, open area on the south shore of the Snake River near the base of the bridge makes for a good landing spot.

local businesses, the BASE jumpers can't afford to make the event much bigger than it is, Parker said.

"It has to be something the community wants," he said. "We're not here to shove anything down anybody's throats."

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce probably won't boost the contest anytime soon, said executive Ken J. J. "I've talked with them about it and discussed the possibility of there being a little bridge festival or something like that sometime down the road," just said. "For now, we've told them, 'Just quietly keep doing what you've been doing.'"

Parker spent much of Wednesday visiting with the Twin Falls County commissioners, the Twin Falls County sheriff and other officials. He said he also hoped to talk to brass from the Idaho State Police and the Twin Falls City Council.

"We need to someday get everybody involved together at the same table," he said. Snake River Canyon Tours owner Don Mays said BASE jumpers have given him plenty of business and almost no trouble over the past few years. Jumpers hired his company's tour boats to shuttle them between the landing site and Centennial Waterfront Park during the competition.

"It's bringing a lot of money into town," he said during a short break late in the morning. "BASE jumping is quite safe. Accidents do happen, but it's like that in any other sport."

Rainbows ponder response

Forest Service denies camp permit

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Rainbow Family members contemplated their next move Thursday in a struggle with the U.S. Forest Service over a camping permit.

"The Rainbows' aim has never been to fight the system. The Rainbows' aim is to get together for the purpose of sitting in the cathedral of nature on the Fourth of July morning in silent meditation and prayer for world peace," said Garrick Beck of Santa Fe, N.M., a longtime participant in the gatherings.

The Rainbow Family of Living Light is holding its annual gathering this year on the Boise National Forest about 28 miles northeast of Lowman. More than an estimated 1,000 people already have begun setting up for the gathering that runs Thursday through July 7. Gatherings are known for their counterculture experiences and considered by some Rainbows to be spiritual journeys.

The Forest Service on Wednesday accepted as valid a third permit application submitted by a Rainbow who voluntarily signed the document - something Rainbows have not been willing to do, as they are not an official organization with an official representative. Two applications already had been rejected this week, because they were not signed.

The Forest Service said it denied the signed permit because it must consult with the National Marine Fisheries Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on any permitted activities that might affect listed species in the Bear Valley area.

The Forest Service said the area is home to a number of threatened species, including chinook salmon, Canada lynx, bald eagles, steelhead, bull trout, gray wolves, the plant Ute ladies' tresses and a number of other sensitive species.

The Forest Service said it also lacked time to consult with the Shoshone-Bannock and Shoshone-Paiute tribes, which must be done on any action that might affect off-reservation treaty rights, cultural resources, or the ability of the agency to meet trust responsibilities. The tribes consist of the Bear Valley area and fishing grounds.

The Forest Service says Rainbows who are camping there are there illegally. But the sheer number of campers makes the gathering impossible to stop. The Forest Service's decision frustrated Beck, who said now that the agency finally got the signature it wanted, it denied the permit without giving the Rainbows an alternative camp

GOODING - Stepping out into the light of day on the Gooding Municipal Airport runway, the man who eluded police for more than six months after escaping from the Jerome County Jail took a deep breath and gazed into the distance.

Monty Ray Boston, 23, was then led by Gooding County Sheriff's Office Chief Deputy Jerry Pierce, who escorted Boston from San Diego back to Idaho Thursday, and Jerome County Sheriff's Detective Jim Dunsbergen to a waiting vehicle. There, Boston was shackled and handcuffed.

Boston, a large man with dark hair, wearing black trousers and a red, short-sleeved flannel shirt, initially was silent.

"Don't say anything," Dunsbergen told Boston as he shackled Boston's ankles. Boston stood by, shaking his head as he was handcuffed.

When asked by a reporter how the flight was, Boston quietly responded, "It wasn't thinking about the flight."

Boston and two other inmates fled the Jerome County Jail Nov. 23. A guard was severely beaten during the escape, officials said. The other inmates turned themselves in.

Boston was reportedly living with friends near Guadalajara in western Mexico. After more than six months on the run, Boston surrendered to police after crossing the U.S. border near Tijuana June 13.

He had been held in a San Diego jail. Please see ESCAPEE, Page A2

Council predicts no letup in West's drought situation

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. - Summers have always been dry there in the West, but this summer is going to be one of the driest on record - with potentially devastating effects.

The National Drought Council gathered farmers, ranchers, state agencies and federal officials here on Thursday to examine the drought of 2001 and found bleak prospects from Hawaii to Montana.

"They voiced concern about power shortages, protecting salmon, supplying water to farmers and a potentially disastrous wildfire season."

"Unless we get a lot of great rain soon, we're going to be hurting very badly," said Rich Moy, water chief for Montana. "If it stays dry next year, many fear an economic and agricultural disaster in Western states.

The drought is due mostly to light winter snowfall in the high mountains that sustain the region with slowly melting runoff each spring, feeding the great river basins from Canada to Mexico.

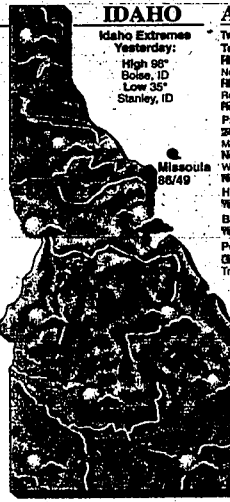

"Snowpack is the key in the West," said Phil Pasteris, top U.S. Department of Agriculture meteorologist.

The USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service has a new network of sensors in place across the West that can track changes in snow level on a daily basis, giving water managers one of their best tools for predicting drought patterns.

The National Drought Council was formed by Congress in 1998 to help plan for drought management. Its 15 members represent federal, regional and state agencies as well as Indian tribes.

Newspaper says woman admitted to killings Judge

HOUSTON (AP) — Andrea Pia Yates told police she methodically drowned four of her children before chasing the last one, a 7-year-old son, through the house. She drowned him in the bathtub next to the body of his 6-month-old sister.

The newspaper account said Noah entered the bathroom while Yates was drowning his baby sister, Mary.

Husband's support — A4

“What's wrong with Mary?” a police officer quoted Noah as asking. A police investigator, who said he had viewed Yates videotaped statements, said Yates told investigators she first killed 2-year-old Luke; second was 3-year-old Paul and third was 5-year-old

John. The newspaper said the investigator spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Earlier, Thursday Yates, husband, Russel, tearfully told reporters he wants to help his wife through the ordeal, blaming her actions on severe depression.

The Houston Chronicle story, released Thursday night on the newspaper's Web site, said

Yates told police that after each child was drowned she carried the limp child into a back bedroom, placed the child on a bed and covered the body with a sheet.

She placed Noah's body in the bathtub.

A Houston police spokesman told The Associated Press late Thursday that he is unfamiliar with what Yates told homicide investigators.

One of the three private attorneys on the finalists list is selected, it might take months for him to clear his busy court case load before taking the bench, Burdick said. And, he added, the attorneys can't put their practices on hold while waiting for word from Kempthorne.

At least one of the attorneys and it turns out you aren't going to be a judge, you can't just stop doing this work for three or four months and then expect to have a clientele afterward if you don't get the judge's job,” Burdick said.

Next, Pierce County Public Defender Jeff M. Brudie was chosen for the job on June 7, after some court officials there — including District Judge Carl A. Kerrick and Schilling's judicial assistant, Janet Kough — pushed for action by the governor.

Burdick said he doesn't want to draw conclusions based on what happened in Lewiston. “I certainly don't want to be skeptical of the situation in the Lewiston area nor critical of Kempthorne's schedule, because I don't know those situations,” he said.

Still, Burdick said there have been numerous calls to his office from people concerned over when a replacement for Meehl will be chosen.

Burdick is also a member of the judicial council, but he said he was not speaking as a council member when he made comments Wednesday to The Times-News.

Calls made Thursday to the judicial council's administrator, Robert Hamlin, were not returned.

Kempthorne was in Europe this week and could not be reached for comment. His spokesman, Mark Snider, said the governor would get to the interviews as soon as he could. Trying to sort through Kempthorne's schedules and those of the candidates is a complex task, he said.

Judge George R. Reinhardt III, the administrative judge in the 2nd Judicial District, said he didn't think Kempthorne damaged his best in choosing a new judge there.

In April, the judicial council sent a list of three finalists to Kempthorne, who began interviewing them late last month, Reinhardt said. “It's an important decision and one I don't think should be made quickly,” he said.

Courts in the 2nd District weren't tied up as a result of Kempthorne taking his time, Reinhardt said. “Everything turned out great for one reason or another,” Reinhardt said. “We didn't have to scramble at all.”

Comedian plugs into energy crisis, darkens 'Tonight Show'

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Jay Leno plugged into California's energy crisis for some low-voltage laughs on Thursday, using candles and flashlights to stage an electricity-free ‘Tonight Show.’

“This looks like the cheapest strip club at the airport,” Leno quipped as he looked around the dimly lit NBC studio.

Audience members, guests and Leno himself pointed flashlights at the stage.

“NBC lost so much money on XFL football we can't afford to pay the electric bill,” he joked during his opening monologue.

Gov. Gray Davis was among the late-night talk show's guests, offering his own tips for energy conservation.

“I get a really long extension cord and I plug it into a socket in

Continued from A1 site. “Every day the camp gets bigger. It gets harder and harder to move,” Beck said. For nearly two past week the Forest Service has said a gathering of this magnitude isn't welcome in the Bear Valley area.

About 1,300 people already were reported to be setting up camp by Thursday. The Forest Service, said its law enforcement officers are ordering campers to dismantle structures that are larger or more elaborate than what would be built in a typical hunting camp. Officers also are ordering dismantling of structures erected in off-limits salmon and steelhead habitat.

because “he was tired of looking over his shoulders.” It was unclear whether Boston would stay in Jerome or be transported to another jail.

Dunsbergen and Roberts, declined comment Thursday. Calls to Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver were not returned. A crew from the TV show “America's Most Wanted” taped Boston's return. In an earlier interview, Dunsbergen credited the nationally syndicated program for helping to convince Boston to surrender. The program in December 2000 ran a spot on Boston's case, and the show's producers were planning to soon run an update, Dunsbergen said.

Boston faces a federal warrant

In an earlier interview, Dunsbergen said his department doesn't hold a vendetta against Boston.

“He'll be treated professionally and with courtesy,” Dunsbergen said.

Boston originally had been jailed in October 2000 on charges arising from an alleged romantic relationship with a 15-year-old Jerome girl. The girl's father discovered him in the girl's closet, where he apparently had been camped out for as long as two weeks, according to Jerome police reports.

When the man opened the closet door, Boston jumped out and tried to strangle him, according to police reports. Boston was charged with misdemeanor battery of sexual abuse of a child and child custody interference.

Parents of missing woman ask for help

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for the parents of a missing California woman urged Rep. Gary Condit on Thursday to tell police anything that could help determine what happened to her.

"We would ask Congressman Condit and anybody else with information to come forward and please cooperate with police," attorney Billy Martin said.

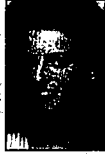

Terrance W. Gainer, the city's executive assistant chief of police, said Thursday that Condit "is absolutely not a suspect" in the disappearance but that police plan to interview the California Democrat for a second time.

Mike Lynch, Condit's chief of staff in Modesto, Calif., said Thursday that Condit wants to talk to police again and is trying to work out a time.

Chandra Levy, 24, of Modesto, has not been seen in seven weeks. She disappeared a few days after finishing an internship with the federal Bureau of Prisons in Washington.

Condit, 53, has described Levy as a "good friend" and has contributed $10,000 from his campaign funds to a reward. Through his office, he has repeatedly declined to elaborate on his relationship with her.

Martin, the family lawyer, said the parents do not believe their daughter "just walked away" and want police to upgrade their investigation "to something beyond a missing person investigation."

However, after a 45-minute meeting with Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey, Martin said authorities are keeping it a missing persons case. He declined to provide details about what was discussed.

Mrs. Levy, her husband by her side, read a short statement outside the police station but did not take questions.

"We are very heartbroken that we do not know where our daughter is," she said. "We continue to believe that she will come back alive."

Mrs. Levy previously had said her daughter told her she was seeing Condit, who is married. However, Martin said the couple is unsure of the true nature of the relationship.

Martin said the Levys also would like to meet with Condit. Mrs. Levy declined to talk to the congressman when he called last weekend, but Martin said that was because he had advised the couple not to discuss the case without a lawyer present.

"The security coordination meetings have been of a more positive and productive nature," he said. "There has been some dropping in the level of violence although it is nowhere near the level that we hoped for."

President again threatens to veto Dem's HMO bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush issued a formal veto threat Thursday against a Democratic-backed patients' bill of rights, saying the measure would encourage unnecessary lawsuits and drive up the cost of health insurance.

"The president believes that patients should be given care first — litigation should be the last resort," the administration said in a written statement that also reiterated Bush's desire to sign legislation this year that provides "strong patient protections."

Bush's threat drew a tart rebuttal from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and other supporters of the measure that Democrats have pushed their first order of business since gaining a Senate majority a few weeks ago.

Kennedy, D-Mass., accused the president of taking "exactly the HMO line," and said it was disappointing he had vowed to "veto comprehensive patient protections supported by virtually every group of doctors, nurses and patients. The president should stand with them and not with HMOs and insurance companies."

Republicans privately expressed relief over the president's actions, saying it would make it easier for them to build support for less expansive proposals in both the House and Senate. One senior GOP aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House had been lobbied by congressional Republicans who feared the president might not state his position forcefully, and thus undercut their own efforts.

The legislation would strengthen the hand of patients dealing with HMOs by guaranteeing them access to emergency treatment, medical specialists and other types of care.

It also would give patients the right to sue HMOs for denial of care in federal or state courts, and to seek punitive damages — an issue sparking much of the controversy surrounding the legislation. One provision strongly opposed by Republicans would permit patients to sue before completion of an appeal of an adverse HMO decision on medical treatment.

Tearful husband vows to support wife suspected of drowning kids

HOUSTON (AP) — The husband of a woman accused of drowning their five children in the bathtub said tearfully Thursday that he wanted to help his wife through the ordeal, blaming her actions on severe depression.

"I want to show her I love her and support her," Russell Yates said as he stood in his suburban Houston front yard filled with stuffed animals and flowers. He clutched a family photo.

Russell Yates, husband of accused murderer Andrea Yates and father of their 5 dead children, holds a family portrait while speaking at a news conference in front of the family's home Thursday in Houston.

"The woman here is not the woman who killed my children," Yates said as he pointed to the picture of his smiling wife.

Andrea Yates, 36, is charged with capital murder. Police believe she systematically drowned all five of the couple's children, ages 6 months to 7 years, on Wednesday morning, then called police and her husband, a computer specialist at NASA.

Yates said his wife told him simply, "You need to come home."

"I was afraid of her tone. Her tone was very serious," Yates said. He returned home to find his children dead and watch helplessly as his wife was arrested. "My heart just sunk."

Found under a sheet in a bedroom were the wet bodies of Mary, 6 months; Luke, 7; Paul, 3; and John, 5. The fifth child, Noah, 7, was found in the tub.

Yates said his wife had gone through postpartum depression following the birth of the couple's fourth child.

"She attempted suicide and they gave her medication. It took awhile, but she just snapped out of it," he said. "She was fuming from that time until a few months after she had our fifth child."

He also said Andrea Yates' father died about three months ago "and that just sent her spiraling down."

"We were all hopeful she would respond to the same medication she had the first time, but she never responded that well," Yates said. Andrea Yates was held without bail Thursday. Prosecutors have not said whether they will seek the death penalty.

Laurence Kruckman, a professor of medical anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania, said there are three levels of postpartum depression. The worst is postpartum psychosis, a hormonal condition that affects mothers after one or two of every 1,000 births.

Dog's owners face charges for attack of boy

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A 10-year-old boy whose ears were torn off by three pit bulls lay in critical condition Thursday as authorities tried to find the dogs and build a case against the owners.

Benjamin Moore, 27, a home health care nurse, and his girlfriend, Jacinda Knight, 33, were jailed on $100,000 and $115,000 bail, respectively, on suspicion of mayhem and failing to exercise care with dogs trained to fight, attack or kill.

The boy, Shawn Jones, is receiving painful rabies shots because the dogs cannot be found and tested.

Deputy District Attorney Dara Cashman said authorities do not necessarily need to find the dogs to prosecute.

"They would definitely strengthen our case, but we don't have to have them to prove the elements of the crime," she said.

Moore said he panicked after discovering what the dogs had done Monday evening. He said he loaded the animals into his car and dropped them off in remote, wooded locations in communities three or four miles apart.

Police have said that they do not believe this, and that the dogs have probably been hidden somewhere.

Moore said he did not call 911 or try to help the boy, who lay bleeding on the ground, because he thought the child was dead.

Shawn was riding his new mountain bike in nearby Richmond when the dogs attacked him. His ears were torn off, and his face, head and arms were also mauld.

Accused spy testifies he disliked communists

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Florida retiree accused of being a Cold War spy for the Soviets testified Thursday that he grew up hating communists "with a passion."
George Trofimoff, 74, cried on the stand as he described growing up in a Russian family that had been exiled by the communists. He said family members who did not escape the Bolshevik Revolution were killed.
"I hated them like everybody else in the emigre community," Trofimoff said. "We could never forgive them for what they did to our families and to the people of Russia."

Trofimoff is on trial on espionage charges. He faces life in prison if convicted of selling secret U.S. military documents to the KGB over a 25-year period.
A retired Army Reserve colonel, Trofimoff is considered the highest-ranking U.S. military officer to be arrested on spy charges.

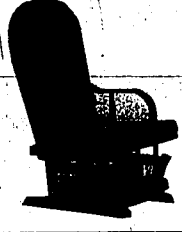

Trofimoff — who was born in Germany to Russian emigres and became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1951 — was civilian chief of a U.S. Army installation in Germany where defectors and refugees from the Soviet bloc were interrogated during the Cold War.
Trofimoff's testimony followed that of his former Army co-workers, who said the Trofimoff they knew hated communists and never would have been a spy.

Eaton will bring Midas touch to CSI Foundation

An ambulatory asset is moving from Main Avenue to the College of Southern Idaho.

Curtis Eaton is resigning his post as local president of Wells Fargo Bank to lead fundraising efforts for the CSI Foundation. He also will become CSI's vice president for institutional planning and development.

We cannot imagine a better person for the job. He's got the background, he's got the connections and he's got the respect of those whom he'll be approaching for donations.

Local banker Curtis Eaton is ideally suited to lead the College of Southern Idaho Foundation.

Money talks, and as a third-generation banker, he speaks the language fluently.

Eaton probably is the best-connected financier in southern Idaho. His roots are deep: His father once was Twin Falls' most prominent banker, as was his grandfather. His departure to CSI marks the end of a powerful family tradition, and local bankers will be poorer without an Eaton in their ranks.

Though he's a banker, Eaton isn't just a money man. He is arguably the state's most visionary thinker on education. A member of the State Board of Education since 1993, he has played a lead role in shaping Idaho's public policy on education. Closer to home, he was instrumental in the creation of the Advanced Regional Technical Education Coalition.

Eaton's obvious strengths are in banking and education but, like an iceberg, there's a lot more beneath the surface. He is a consensus builder with a formidable intellect and an appetite for hard work. He would excel at anything, but his new role at CSI is an unusually good fit for his talents.

Looking ahead, Eaton is an obvious candidate to succeed CSI President Jerry Meyerhoeffer. He's too modest to say so himself, but we aren't. Don't be surprised if that day dawns at CSI.

In the meantime, Eaton has a job to do. The CSI Foundation's assets have swelled from $200,000 in 1983 to more than $20 million today. Naturally, Eaton wants that trend to continue - and if anyone can do it, he can.

As any panhandler will tell you, the best time to ask for money is when there's a recognizable need. At CSI, there's a growing need for a university center where the University of Idaho, Boise State University and Idaho State University can offer classes leading to bachelor and graduate degrees.

Idaho Falls has such a "university place" building. Twin Falls could use one, too, so Eaton has an obvious fundraising goal ahead of him.

We're confident he's equal to that job, and to the others that will follow. After all, wealthy residents of southern Idaho have a long tradition of handing their money to men named Eaton.

I'm in, so why don't you keep out

JOHN BALZAR

Some of my friends are happily stringing up their fly rods. Summer is finally here. For weeks, they've been jockeying through workday traffic without so much as a single murderous thought. They are blissfully lost to daydreams of cool mountain rivers and big skies. Of trout and Of Montana.

"An angler's dream!" Montana calls itself. For the dimwitted, the state tourism agency explains: "In Montana, great fishing is a given."

Well, not entirely so anymore. I'm afraid. I feel sorry for my fly-fishing friends here in the city. A surprise awaits them. A crowded world is about to muscle them out of the way.

This summer, for the first time, Montana has thrown up roadblocks to outsiders. Locals have grown tired of rubbing shoulders with mobs of vacationers from Dallas and Los Angeles and Detroit and New York. So Montana officials marked out some of the finest public fishing water for "locals only" beginning this season.

As Montana sees it, the state is taking back some of its own water for itself. As local residents here in the city complain, it's a lousy, stinking rip-off.

I say it's part of a trend, and a wretched one that has taken selfish root in the United States. The imposition of private property rights on what always has been regarded as public terrain is happening from one end of the country to the other. In Connecticut, tourists are beckoned to "experience the beauty" of the state. Except cities like Greenwich reserve access to ocean beaches for residents only, leaving visitors, I guess, to drop in on the Garbage Museum in Stratford.

But who would have guessed that Montana, with its $1.7-billion tourism industry, would have joined the ugly urbanites?

The West, and by that I mean the Rocky Mountain West, has always been well, a place where you didn't have to dodge sharp elbows and play by city rules. Montana, more than any state in the lower 48, typified a grand freedom to escape. Until now.

Yes, hunters always have been given local advantage. But that has been a food issue. Fly fishing is not about food; it's about recreation. Catch and release. And recreation has been the backbone of Montana's tourist industry.

This year, sections of the famed Big Hole River, known for its huge trout, will be off limits to nonresidents on weekends. Newcomers who use guides will be limited, day by day, along parts of the river all week long. Nonresidents also will be barred off of the blue-ribbon Beaverhead River.

"This is awful," moaned my fly-fishing friend Eileen Padberg. "The water, the rivers, the sky, they belong to us all. And only God can decree otherwise."

Or, it seems, the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

Naturally, tourism officials are trying to soft-soap this new affront to outsiders. Visitor guides call the restrictions an "innovation" that will provide "a better trout fishing experience for all anglers."

Which is like saying we'd have a better experience at Disneyland if they'd just keep the damned tourists from standing in line.

So, who's behind this hoisting of the drawbridge? Friends up there tell me the pressure is coming not so much from old-line Montanans but the new breed of transplants from California and elsewhere.

In my years of reporting on the West, I have experienced nothing so righteous as the territorial claims of those who just arrived from yonder - those fancy people who have filled up Montana's splendid valleys with their hobby ranchettes and fences and who don't want to see any more like themselves on the Big Hole.

These migrants fled the cities, but they brought all their bad habits and attitudes with them.

So to my friends up there, you real Montanans, I say this: If the city transplants are getting you down this summer, if they're intruding on your once-secret spot on the Big Hole and scaring the fish jump in the pickup and come on down to California and enjoy a week at the beach.

Don't worry about the crowds. That's the whole point of the beach. And virtually the whole coastline here is open to you, a Mecca of sun and some of the best people-watching in the world.

Oh, but be warned. Don't be so foolish as to paddle out and try to go surfing. The locals will terrorize you and maybe vandalize your car. The waves in California, you understand, are for locals only.

Justice Department loses ground in tobacco suit

From the Philadelphia Inquirer

OTHER VIEWS

Many top Republicans have been cool toward the Justice Department's multibillion-dollar suit against the tobacco industry. President Bush knocked it on the campaign trail and did so again after taking office.

This week, Attorney General John Ashcroft undercut the government's case. Score one for a special interest that lavished contributions on Republican officeholders - and zero for the public interest. A federal judge threw out part of the suit last fall, barring the government's bid to be reimbursed for its Medicare costs and other expenses from tobacco-related illness. Fortunately, the ruling left the feds continue to try proving that tobacco-related groups violated anti-kickbacking laws by conspiring to misrepresent their product's risks.

If the remaining claim were upheld in court, tobacco companies might be forced to give billions in profits to the U.S. Treasury. That money could further the health goals and other purposes served by the more than $240 billion that states are getting from the tobacco industry in their legal settlement.

The tobacco companies have always said the government's case was meritless from beginning to end. No surprise there. But their day in court wasn't expected for a couple more years due to the case's complexity.

The Justice Department should have rebuffed the tenacious efforts of GOP lawmakers to strip the litigation's funding. It should have been preparing a full-court press.

Mr. Ashcroft moved in the opposite direction with his announcement that he would seek an out-of-court settlement. His reasoning: He supposedly feared losing another round in court this summer.

So the next day's newspapers gave the other side's lawyers the pleasure of reading how little confidence the attorney general had in what had been a priority case for his department. No serious negotiator starts out on his knees.

For anti-tobacco lawmakers and activists, the Ashcroft flop didn't come out of the blue. While he expressed openness about the suit, he criticized it as a U.S. senator. What's more, when the Commerce Committee approved a strong anti-tobacco bill sponsored by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., then-Sen. Ashcroft cast the only "no" vote. He later called Mr. McCain's effort to stop millions of teens from risking their lives by smoking "nothing more than an excuse to raise taxes and expand government."

Mr. Ashcroft's sweet-scented message to tobacco titans is not startling. It's just a shame.

Make Mexico a better country

I am concerned about my Mexican neighbors, friends. They come here - if they get here - live in some pretty sad, awful dumps called houses. They work hard. Some say they get paid well and come here to better themselves. Well, maybe after time some do. But what they go through I've seen with my own eyes.

I resent Mexico as a country of resources and wealth. Why do they not open up all their resources and build a better country for their people.

We are creating a lot of unhealthy conditions. Some of these people are treated so shabbily by the Americans they grow to resent, even hate, us.

This is not healthy growth. Just money, money.

BETTY GALVIN Wendell

George's courageous battle and how determined he was to make everyone else feel better. He always told callers he was "doing just fine" or "it's OK."

It seems his goal in life was to make people feel good about themselves and to help them learn how to handle the tough situations life sometimes deals. He certainly accomplished that. One of his favorite sayings was, "Well, you play the hand you're dealt and you do your best." George did just that.

It seems to us that George McAdams' desire to be of help to others, especially the thousands of students he was so proud of in his 32 years as an exemplary teacher, would best be fulfilled through the establishment of a permanent scholarship fund. The George and Coral McAdams Scholarship Fund will be a permanent tribute to a couple whose devotion to their students, their city, their family and each other has set an example for us all to follow. George thought it was a wonderful idea. The thought of leaving something tangible and long-lasting behind appealed to him.

If you would like to join us in raising the necessary dollar amount to accomplish this goal, please send donations to the McAdams Scholarship Fund, First Federal Savings Bank, P.O. Box 249, Twin Falls, ID 83303-0249.

We'd like to say "thank you" to the many who have been so generous about George and Coral through this long ordeal. We received calls of interest almost daily. The overwhelming love and concern exhibited for them is humbling and impressive, and we have happily passed it on.

Thanking a good man

For more than two years, George McAdams of Kimberly fought through leukemia, a battle he won, and through bone marrow transplant done last November. George's cancer was beaten, but due to some errors in medication, he contracted GVH (graft vs. host) disease. By the time he received the right medication, his weakened immune system couldn't handle the overpowering money. Not enough can be said about the effect thousands of cards and letters had on George. He even heard from total strangers. It buoyed his spirits immensely. It says a lot about the caring, considerate and thoughtful people we live among. It truly restores one's faith in mankind - Nor can enough be said about

Seeking emotional literacy in Britain

Although it's been argued that illiteracy in the advanced portion of the globe is disgracefully high, few politicians have considered something called "emotional literacy." But Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister, has found his calling — the cultural manifestation of the Third Way. Blair feels that the British must work on their emotions. A Labourite think tank called Antidote, led by Susie Orbach, a British-American psychotherapist, recently issued a report entitled "Manifesto for An Emotionally Literate Society" that the prime minister has embraced.

Known for her self-help books such as "Fat Is A Feminist Issue," Orbach explained the intent of the emotional literacy project. "Our aim is to create an emotionally literate culture, where the facility to handle the complexities of emotional life is as widespread as the capacity to read, write and do arithmetic."

Orbach's claim as mere psychobabble, it is instructive that she treated Lady Diana, the Princess of Wales, for depression and eating disorders. Diana's televised confession about her failed marriage may be one graphic example of emotional literacy.

"What this movement intends to accomplish is not entirely clear. However, it is designed to encourage dialogue, what Orbach calls "society's energy," she notes that "the process of dialogue enables people to develop their thoughts, feelings and values as they come to appreciate those of others."

Specific projects include an anti-bullying program that emphasizes conflict resolution, and The Marshallwood Project, which draws on "the individual's natural ability to listen and to offer non-judgmental understanding to one's peers."

Not every Brit shares Blair's enthusiasm for emotional literacy. Some critics note that societies are governed by rules, not by emotions. It would certainly be interesting to hear Orbach address a group of well-souled British football fans on their way to Germany for the World Cup matches. How receptive would they be to the anti-bullying program?

HERBERT LONDON

Surely Blair, responding to the public's outrage over the murder of toddlers for kicks and the assorted acts of perversity that appear on the tube nightly, wants to appear as if he is doing something about the apparent social breakdown.

By embracing Orbach's formulation, Blair is creating the faulty impression that dialogue and conflict resolution techniques can address the woes animated by social anomie. While psychotherapy may have its benefits at a micro level, its effects at a macro level are insignificant.

Orbach assumes dialogue encourages a respect for the thoughts and feelings of others. But there is scant empirical evidence to buttress this assertion. Some people like to talk and some like to listen. What actually registers in a dialogue exchange is largely unknown.

Years ago Philip Rieff wrote about the therapeutic society. Yet even Rieff could not have anticipated the extent to which dubious psychological theories would come to influence public policy.

That emotion could trump reason is in itself telling. It suggests a cultural movement away from law and order to one of expression and acting out. At some point, of course, the excesses of expression lead inexorably to the excesses of control. Societies cannot countenance permanent disorder. Nazism follows Weimar.

One can't blame Orbach for trying to sell her brand of emotional literacy to the public. That Blair buys it is truly remarkable.

Blair is increasingly the exemplar of the 21st century man — emotional, sensitive and empathetic. It should not be lost on the British public that the man who leads the nation has vigorously embraced the Marshallwood Project. I wonder what Winston Churchill would think.

FERC's mitigation plan makes energy woes worse

CHARLI COON

Pretend for a moment that you're helping out a friend or family member who's an alcoholic. He's experiencing some horrible withdrawal symptoms, and he tells you that all he needs to get better is one more drink.

What do you do? Refuse and appear heartless? Or give in and make his recovery even tougher?

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission faced a similar situation in California. State officials there, having presided over a spectacularly inept "deregulation" scheme, were demanding the agency impose price caps on wholesale electricity prices. Likewise, some members of Congress were badgering the agency to order stringent price controls.

Now FERC has caved in, approving a "price mitigation plan" for California and 10 other Western states (one that expands an earlier order for price caps only during power emergencies).

Never mind that California wouldn't be in this situation if it weren't for price caps.

Specifically, caps on retail prices, or how much power companies charge their customers. Those amounts were capped in 1996, but guess what wasn't? Wholesale prices, or what electricity producers charge the power companies.

Yes, producers could charge electricity retailers whatever the market could bear — and thanks to regulations that discouraged the construction of new power plants, that got to be quite a bit — but retailers couldn't pass any of the price hikes on to their customers. The results were predictable: Rolling blackouts. More than $8 billion in state funds spent by the end of May to buy power. And the state's two largest utilities, Pacific Gas & Electric and Southern California Edison, bankrupt.

What went wrong? In short, state officials didn't trust the market. Demand outpaced supply because they insulated customers from the beneficial effects high prices would have had on California's electricity market.

That's right — beneficial effects. In a free market unfettered by price caps, the utilities would have started charging their customers more. In response, producers would have begun generating more electricity, customers would have curtailed their electricity use and prices would have dropped.

The idea that prices must remain free of government controls for markets to work efficiently isn't a matter of "conservative" or "liberal" ideology — it's economic fact. As Robert Litan of the Center for Brooking Institution recently noted, "95 percent of economists would say that price controls are always dumb or that there should be a very strong presumption against price controls. They lead to artificial scarcity and then perpetuate it."

To get an idea of how well FERC's "price mitigation plan" is likely to work, recall the nationwide price controls on oil imposed by President Richard Nixon in the 1970s. As with the current crisis, the objective was to ensure petroleum products (particularly gasoline) remained affordable.

But while this plan may have looked great on the drawing board, in practice it had a ruinous effect. The artificially low prices gave customers no incentive to cut their use of oil and gasoline, so demand kept growing. The low prices also removed all incentives for producers to increase supply to meet this demand.

After all, if prices (and therefore profits) are capped, why bother investing in ways to produce more oil and do so more efficiently?

FERC contends that its regulatory scheme is different. It's purportedly a temporary solution that employs "market-oriented principles," in the words of Chairman Curt Hebert Jr. The agency just wants to ensure that wholesale electricity rates "fall within a zone of reasonableness," it says. Once they "fix dysfunctional markets," we're led to believe, officials will step in to let the markets work their magic.

That would sound a whole lot more reassuring if government meddling weren't responsible for the market being so dysfunctional in the first place. If government officials want to help consumers, the best thing to do is remove all caps and production-inhibiting regulations. That may not be the most politically expedient thing to do, but it is the right thing.

At the very least, they should imitate our alcoholic friend and try to "fix" things with another shot of the same concoction that helped create the problem. A hangover delayed is not a hangover denied.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Police arrest man they say caused crash

TWIN FALLS - A man police say led them on a car chase late Wednesday in Twin Falls was arrested on charges of driving under the influence, eluding police and attempted robbery, Twin Falls police Sgt. Mike Covington said.

Salvador Magana Jr., 25, was set to be arraigned Thursday on those charges, Covington said.

Police at about 11 p.m. noticed a car being driven well over the speed limit in the 300 Block of Elm Street North and alerted other officers, Covington said.

Police began to pursue the car when the driver did not pull over for a squad car on Filer Avenue, he said. After a short chase, the driver lost control and the car went through a fence and flipped over in a canal near the Centennial Square mall in Twin Falls, Covington said.

The driver fled on foot and tried to steal a car in a nearby parking lot, but he was subdued by police and the car's owner, Covington said.

Police then arrested Magana, Pedro Ortiz, 18, of Twin Falls and a male juvenile Covington declined to identify. Ortiz and the juvenile were passengers in the car that fled police and were charged with illegal consumption of alcohol by minors, Covington said.

Sun Valley to host 2002 Republican convention

TWIN FALLS - Idaho Republicans cast a unanimous vote last week naming Sun Valley the site of their 2002 convention at their semi-annual meeting held Saturday in Twin Falls.

The convention, which will be held June 15-18, 2002, takes place every two years and in 2002 will be held as a precursor to the November elections when nearly every elected official in the state will be up for re-election.

The GOP will bring more than 650 delegates, alternates and "their families to camp near the Valley for four days of meetings where the party platform, rules and resolutions will be discussed. In addition, the convention is expected to feature appearances by the Idaho congressional delegation, statewide office holders and candidates as well as state senators and representatives.

"We are excited to bring our convention to Sun Valley," Chairman Trent Clark said. "This is a great opportunity for our members to experience one of Idaho's best recreation spots while taking care of party business. We are looking forward to the opportunity to spend some time in the Wood River Valley."

The convention is held in a different location every two years and this time will be hosted by the Region V Central Committee and the Blaine County Republicans.

"We are thrilled to have been chosen as the hosts for this convention," Blaine County Chairman Maurice Charlat said. # Minidoka P&Z OKs generator plan

By Ruth Stroeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY - It became a dilemma between quality of life for a few and low electricity bills for many.

Not shy to admit their quandary, members of the Minidoka County Planning and Zoning Commission approved Idaho Power's request to install several temporary diesel generators in the county.

Even residents who were hesitant to embrace the generators knew it.

Officials pick electricity over potential noise problem

"I understand the need for the power. But I'm a little concerned about the noise level," Paul resident Frank Suchan said during a public hearing Thursday.

The commission approved up to eight generators at each of the Adelaide, Paul and Julian Clawson substations.

The Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission was presented with a similar proposal Thursday for the same number of generators. The commission had not held its public hearing by The Times-News' deadline.

Generators under consideration in Cassia County included eight for the Golden Valley substation, eight for the Kenyon substation and eight for the Buckhorn substation.

Each group of eight generators would produce 85 decibels, which is equal to the sound of loud street noise or a factory. From 200 feet away, the decibels drop to about 70, equal to a noisy office or average street noise.

Because the Adelaide and Paul substations have more neighbors than the Julian Clawson substation, the Minidoka commission required

Idaho Power to develop sound buffers at those locations.

And because tankers will be refueling the generators twice a day, the commission required Idaho Power to place surface material on the road leading to the Paul and the Julian Clawson substations to keep dust to a minimum.

Idaho Power spokesman Dan Olmstead said his company wants to prevent the costly mistake that

Red Cross cuts force layoffs

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Three American Red Cross employees in Twin Falls will lose their jobs and another staff member will be moved to another site as a result of belt-tightening within the statewide organization.

The American Red Cross of Greater Idaho announced earlier this week it is cutting its annual budget from $3.1 million to $2.6 million. The Rupert office will be closed. Statewide, 13.5 staff positions will be cut. Some positions have been reduced through attrition, but there will be layoffs.

Red Cross says it will rely more heavily on volunteers to continue to meet disaster relief needs. CPR and first aid classes will continue to be offered, but Red Cross said it will reduce non-essential services such as community and school presentations.

After two Rupert staff members are transferred to Twin Falls, there will be a net loss of half a position in Twin Falls' Sawtooth branch, said Lenn Moorhead-Rosenberg, a Red Cross spokesman for the Idaho Chapter.

In the shuffle, one full-time staff member and two part-time employees in Twin Falls will be laid off. One full-time Twin Falls employee will be reduced to half time.

Twin Falls staff members will be handling services in Minidoka and Cassia counties in addition to their established role of serving the rest of the Magic Valley.

Sawtooth's new director will be Patt Hansen. She comes from Rupert, where she had fulfilled a branch management role and worked as the state executive officer for emergency services, a job she will continue from Twin Falls.

Jean Maestas, an Idaho Red Cross board member in Twin Falls, said the budget forced difficult decisions.

"It's tough right now, and we're hoping to get back to where we're

Rupert closure won't affect senior services

The Times-News

RUPERT - The Office on Aging Senior Assisted Services and Retired and Senior Volunteer Program is not closing, said Kitty Andrews, RSVP East End coordinator.

Andrews' office is in the same building as the American Red Cross in Rupert, which will close at the end of the month.

But the Red Cross closure will not affect the senior services her office offers, she said.

Andrews arranges transportation for 148 seniors to go to their doctors and dentists and for other purposes.

Many have called her to ask about her office's disposition since the announcement about the Red Cross office, she said.

more comfortable," she said.

But she added she doesn't know whether the Rupert office ever will reopen.

Consolidation of seven Idaho Red Cross chapters into a statewide chapter nearly a year ago contributed to some of the budget constraints, Maestas said. She said in the long run the consolidation will yield a more efficient organization with more influence at the national level.

There was concern that national headquarters might close some local chapters, Moorhead-Rosenberg said.

"All branches were spending more than was coming in," he said.

Consolidation was chosen to allow Red Cross offices to provide more services and raise more money statewide, Moorhead-Rosenberg said. Both were accomplished. The remaining goal of bringing the budget under control was not.

Idaho Red Cross donations

1998	- $688,353
1997	- $729,612
1997	- $849,414 plus $289,000 to support Idaho floods.
1996	- $388,950
1999	- $1.07 million (includes a one-time $78,000 grant for two disaster vehicles)
2000	- $972,723
2002	- $1.2 million (plus $188,000 pledged by the United Way of Treasure Valley for disaster services in 2002)

Source: American Red Cross of Greater Idaho

Rick Mitchell, chief executive officer of the Greater Idaho chapter, said that while donations have been increasing, they haven't been keeping pace with the growing number of disaster services provided.

National Red Cross also reports a shortfall. It has spent $38 million on domestic disaster relief this year while donations have totaled $21 million.

National headquarters is paying $1.8 million over six years to help with the Idaho consolidation, a figure that includes disaster relief subsidies, Mitchell said. The money allowed Idaho Red Cross to update its computers and add health and retirement benefits for its employees. It has not covered all costs that have come up associated with consolidation, he said.

Outgoing Sawtooth branch director Karen Langley said news of the layoffs came as a shock. Another office staff position already was reduced six months ago because of budget constraints, she said.

The Twin Falls office responded to 25 disasters last year with an average cost of $2,000 to $3,000 each, Langley said. It offers between 40 and 60 CPR and first aid classes a month.

Senator fears water may be next for deregulation

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - An Idaho state senator who expressed doubts about deregulation of electric companies warned Thursday to "be prepared - water will be deregulated next" if electric deregulation sweeps the country.

Speaking in the opening session of the annual Idaho Water Users Association law seminar, Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, predicted that politically influential economic interests that resent cheaper hydroelectric power in the Pacific Northwest as well as political ideologues who oppose regulation will begin a national push to deregulate water.

Noh also said he foresees a "serious situation" developing if an agreement isn't hammered out with Idaho Power, Idaho's largest electric utility, on water rights above Swan Falls in southwest Idaho. Noh said that without an agreement for a government guarantee to be held in trust for the public, Idaho Power might claim all water rights, effectively limiting or denying water for municipal and agricultural use.

Noh was joined by another panelist, state Sen. Robert Lee, R-Rexburg, in saying legislation is needed to avoid catastrophic electric energy shortages and skyrocketing power rates. In California, the state's largest reg-

Gooding County residents argue against annexation

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - Fear of future annexation had many county residents speaking out against the city's proposal to expand its area of impact during Wednesday's public hearing in Hagerman.

About 75 people showed at the public hearing to let Gooding County Planning and Zoning commissioners know how they felt about the proposal.

The county planning and zoning board is required to hold public hearings before any county zoning changes can be made. For the past several years, the city of Hagerman has had jurisdiction in its area of impact. New construction fell under Hagerman's building and subdivision ordinances and building permits were issued and fees collected by the city. But that's all about to change.

A recent decision by the Idaho Supreme Court ruled that it's unconstitutional for a city to govern its area of impact because the residents have no representation in city politics. That means that Hagerman's area of impact now falls under Gooding County's jurisdiction.

Since the ruling, county and city planning and zoning members have met during the past few months to make the transition of power a bit smoother. And it was during those negotiations when Hagerman asked the county to increase the amount of land in its area of impact.

Mayor James Norwood said reason for the request to enlarge

Bliss to implement Internet policy

By Dale Jensen
Times-News correspondent

BLISS - Children cruising the Internet was the topic of discussion at Monday's School Board meeting.

The board discussed the Children's Internet Protection Act signed into law last December that requires public schools to have policies regarding Internet use. Policies must include measures for blocking or filtering internet access to websites that would be considered, obscene or harmful.

Superintendent Kevin Lancaster will put such a policy in place. Also Monday, the board gave Lancaster the go-ahead to look into the purchase of a 12-15-passenger van to take students on field trips and other small group activities.

Lancaster also discussed plans for four additional classrooms. The district will advertise for bids that will include plans and sketches of an addition that would blend in with the current campus.

The district will purchase air conditioners for the four high school classrooms with southern exposure. The total cost is estimated at $1,680.

Other School Board business:

- The board approved the $1.44 million budget for the 2001-2002 school year.
- The board approved a summer maintenance schedule.

Ketchum works out kinks in proposed recreation center

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - City Council members vowed to make the proposed Bill Janss recreation center open to all Blaine County citizens on an equal basis as they began examining the nuts and bolts of the project Wednesday.

"It's not my desire to segregate the citizens of our community," said Councilman Randy Hall after a Ketchum resident questioned whether Ketchum residents would receive lower membership rates because of the use of local option taxes to help pay for the center.

It would be disastrous to implement one fee structure for Ketchum residents and another for Halley residents, Hall said.

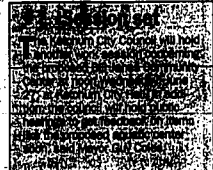

"I'm looking at this as a county-wide project," Hall said. "I would hope this doesn't become a territorial thing," added Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce Director Carol Walker.

About 6,000 workers commute daily from Halley and Bellvue to Ketchum where they pay local option taxes on goods and services, she noted.

City council members examined everything from the materials that would be used for piping hot pools to the projected pay for lifeguards ($12 an hour) to how much it would cost to hire a third party to manage the facility ($75,000 to $100,000 a year) as they set about determining whether it would be prudent for the city to enter into a proposed public/private partnership to build the center.

Mayor Guy Coles has given the council two months to reach a decision on the center, which has been talked about for a dozen-plus years.

A Business and Strategic Plan given to council members just before Wednesday's workshop Proposed charging daily fees of $10 for adult residents and $6 for local children. Daily fees would be $15 and $9 respectively for non-residents. Monthly fees would be $90 for adult residents and $145 for non-residents. Annual passes would be $500 for adults and $700 for families who live in Blaine County.

In contrast, Sun Valley Athletic Club charges a $250 initiation fee and $57 a month membership fee. Daily passes are $15.

The basic membership would include access to the aquatic center, weight training and cardiovascular areas, the multipurpose court and locker rooms. Discounted membership fees would be charged for the rock climbing wall, baby-sitting, open skating, court rentals, aerobics and tickets to events.

The plan, prepared by Brailford & Dunlavey, projects that 1,030 memberships would be sold. It estimates that 28,500 daily passes would be sold annually. About 23,000 of those would come from the 221,000 people who visit Sun Valley each year.

Some other details of the plan:

- Ice rental of the Olympic-sized rink would be $225 per hour, slightly higher than what Sun Valley charges for its rink. Open skate sessions would cost $6 and could bring in $48,000 per year. Rental by the Sun Valley Suns hockey team could bring in $20,000 a year.

Drop-in users of the rock climbing wall would pay $5 per visit, generating an estimated $33,000 in annual revenue. Classes, parties and equipment rentals would bring in another $48,000 a year.

$3 an hour would be charged for baby-sitting.

Under the plan, the nonprofit Bill Janss Community Center would raise $8 million and issue a tax-exempt $7 million bond to build the facility. The bond does not require approval of Ketchum residents.

But it does require the city to enter into an agreement to operate the facility and lease the land upon which the facility would be built. The city would pay a lease payment equal to the Annual Debt Service for Bonds and own the facility when the debt has been paid off. Debt service is marked as $658,000 a year.

Another $167,700 would be assessed each year for debt service coverage, released at the end of each fiscal year and rebudgeted.

If the city were to default on the bond, the bank would take over the facility for the life of the bond. If city were to discontinue annual appropriations, the bank would continue to be bound by the terms of the agreement to operate the facility as a recreation center. It wouldn't be turned into an office, Community Center Board Secretary Lee Shephardson assured the council.

City Administrator Jim Jaquet said the city has the ability to take on another large bond issue without impacting fire, snow removal and other services. The city retired a bond for the Park and Ride lot upon which the recreation center would sit last year.

Short on help, Twin Falls' driver's license office temporarily cuts hours

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Need a license? Better start scheduling time to go get one.

The county's driver's license division is cutting back its hours since today.

The reason? Lack of manpower, said Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousey.

Tousey said the driver's license division has three people on staff, one of whom is just hired and will need five to six weeks of training.

A fourth person is needed, Tousey said, to keep up with rising driver's license applications.

"It's getting so busy, and the wait is longer," Tousey said.

Jenny Anton, driver's license supervisor for the county, said the shortage in employees has been hard.

"It's just really tough. We're doing the best we can, and I think we're doing a great job. Everybody is being really nice about it. We do a lot of other things in here besides driver's licenses too," she said.

The average wage for a full-time employee at the county's driver's license division is around $8 an hour.

According to Idaho Transportation Department numbers, 45,012 licenses were issued in Twin Falls County in 2000. That's an increase from 1999, when 44,797 licenses were given.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Gary Grindstaff said the commissioners have to review Tousey's request for additional staff.

"We don't really know where we're at yet. We really haven't even started on figuring out what we're going to do with each department yet," Grindstaff said.

He said he has heard no complaints about long waits at the driver's license division.

"Only me," Grindstaff said. "I had to stand there for 45 minutes one day."

Tousey said the driver's license division problems are not directly related to budgetary problems at the courthouse.

The county commission cut the budgets of nearly every department this past year. Cuts ranged from 2 to 10 percent in some departments.

The new 2001-2002 budget year starts Oct. 1.

BURLEY - The highlight of bicycling across the West, they say, is the people they meet. Drivers wave and honk, and strangers open their homes...

For six weeks the five-some are trekking 2,600 miles from Provo to Vancouver, B.C., back down the coastline and into Tijuana, Mexico. It's a non-recreational ride, but a fund-raiser for the 100,000 Americans - mostly children - who suffer from epidermolysis bullosa, a genetic skin disease...

inspires them, and usually that sounds like a bunch of hogwash, but it really works. Bertrong said Thursday from the home of Burley resident Zane Parker. 'If you do something that's not for yourself, it makes a big difference, especially when the people you're doing it for have it a lot worse off than you ever will,' Bertrong said.

President nominates lobbyist for ag post

WASHINGTON (AP) - A former top lobbyist for the timber industry was nominated by President Bush on Thursday to an Agriculture Department post overseeing the Forest Service and land conservation programs.

Rey would become USDA's undersecretary for natural resources and environment. Craig called Rey "one of the nation's foremost experts in the protection and management of forests."

Hayden said. Rey's nomination comes as the Forest Service is considering scrapping a Clinton administration policy that requires giving environmental considerations priority over logging, recreation and other uses of the 159 national forests.

Frenchman's Island appeal gets put on hold

BURLEY - A planning and zoning appeal has been put on hold while a property owner prepares arguments. A lawyer representing a group of Cassia and Minidoka county residents was scheduled to argue to the Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday that the county administrator misinterpreted a conditional-use permit that had been granted to Neil Larsen, the owner of Frenchman's Island.

Larsen is building a marina and allowing a business to rent motorized watercraft from the island. An appeal filed May 14 by Rupert attorney Rick Bollor says the conditional-use permit grants the county does not allow such uses. County Administrator Tim Hurst says that because the conditional-use permit allowed other commercial ventures, the watercraft rental is in keeping with the permit. The commission decided Thursday to put the appeal on hold after Larsen filed two motions. One motion was for Larsen to be allowed, as the property owner, to make arguments on the appeal. The other motion was to postpone the matter. The commission next meets at 8 p.m. on July 5 at Burley City Hall.

Bridge

Continued from B1 a majority indicated they would be willing to pay a 50-cent toll to help build the new bridge. Humphrey said the study showed that amount would pay for about 50 percent of the cost of both a new bridge and corridor improvement. Residents would expect matching funds from state and federal sources, the surveys indicated. The corridor Humphrey was talking about concerns roads leading from Jerome to the bridge and Pole Line Road. He also pointed out that the study accounted for some anticipated toll-avoidance, which refers to the who would travel the Ferrine Bridge in order to avoid the toll. As a result of toll avoidance, estimated in the study at 25 percent, the 50-cent toll would generate revenues to cover 40 percent of the cost for new bridge and corridor improvements," he said. Humphrey's recommendations to the board included working with Twin Falls and Jerome county planning and zoning commissioners to rezone corridor areas, immediately acquiring rights of way in order to save money and holding workshops for a public referendum. Humphrey also said he was concerned by a continued lack of interest from elected officials in both counties. Twin Falls County Commissioner Bill Brockman said later that he hadn't looked at the project as something that could happen in the near future. "With a price tag ranging anywhere from $75 million to $125 million, where do we start on this thing?" he said. "It's long-range - probably 20 years down the road." He did say he thinks it's time to start acquiring property, but still, he sees limited involvement on the part of the county commissioners. "But 125 million? I don't see how there is anything we can do but give verbal support," Brockman said. Also Thursday, Gerald Martens, a Twin Falls County Highway District engineer, reported that the Salmon Falls Bridge, located on top the Salmon Dam, is in bad shape and becoming increasingly dangerous. He told the board that large vehicles have been banned from the 83-year-old one-lane bridge. The main problems are crumbling concrete and the steep, unstable approaches. "It's the only all-weather access to western Twin Falls County and Owyhee County," he said. "It's extremely critical." About 300 cars a day cross the bridge, Martens said. Of those, 250 do not belong to the people who live and work in the Three Creeks area, but are recreational users, he said. But he acknowledged that rough estimates of $6 million to $7 million to build a new bridge are only available through special designations approved by Congress. He said he has sent copies of the study on Salmon Falls Bridge to Idaho's congressional delegation in an appeal for funds. He asked the board to back the appeal. Gooding

Continued from B1 the area of impact was not to annex more property into the city, but to maintain some control of how the area is developed. "This would give the city a little more say in what was happening near the city's borders," Norwood said. "It would give us some say as to what happens near the city's water source." Hagerman's current area of impact encompasses property one mile beyond the city limits. The city's proposal would nearly triple the amount of land in the impact area, moving the boundaries to the Snake River to the west, to the Justice Grade Road to the north, the canyon rim to the east and to the Vader Grade Road to the south. But for many county residents at the public hearing, the city was asking for too much. "Our fear about this proposed impact area, is once it's been approved, we are afraid that slowly you (the city of Hagerman) are going to annex, block by block. And that's what I'm afraid of, that our taxes are going to double." -Nick Tzanakakis, Gooding County resident

Generator

Continued from B1 occurred when Idaho Power installed several generators in Boise. In Boise, the noise level wasn't a problem. But the constant drone of generators bothered residents so much that the equipment had to be removed after only nine days, Olmstead said. "We want a high probability of success," Olmstead said. Commissioners asked whether it would be possible to consolidate the generators more on the remote Julian Clawson site and less on the other sites. But Olmstead said it is unlikely that the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality, which issues emissions permits, would approve of more than 10 generators for one location. Idaho Power may determine that the generators won't need to run 24 hours a day, Olmstead said. They may only need to run during peak hours, but that will depend on the summer wholesale market, he said. Idaho Power hopes the diesel generators will enable the company to buy less electricity on the wholesale market during the peak summer months. The generators are expected to go on line July 15. The generators will produce electricity at a cost of 13 cents per kilowatt-hour, Olmstead said. The price will be capped at 18 cents. DEQ allows generators to operate for only six months. Olmstead said that at the end of that time, Idaho Power will evaluate whether to turn the generators off or remove them, based upon the wholesale markets. Bill Chisholm, energy coordinator for the Idaho Rural Council, said it's important for counties, with their signing power, to consider methods of energy conservation, not just production. "I just want to put this in the mix of thinking," Chisholm said.

Water

Continued from B1 related utilities sold off their generating facilities to companies that aren't regulated - and therefore are free to sell wholesale electricity at soaring, unregulated prices, some as high as 700 percent above normal. Noh and Lee proposed that future generating plants be owned by regulated utilities so that Idaho customers won't face California-type price shock. Conservation also is a key to sparing Idahoans electric shortages, especially because drought conditions have denied the usual water supply for hydro plants in which about two-thirds of the state's power comes. Noh said Idaho "starts from such a wasteful base" in energy consumption. Later, state Public Utilities Commissioner Martha Smith said the more than 100 people in attendance that cost analysis estimate that a 5 percent reduction in electric consumption during peak load hours can lead to as much as a 50 percent reduction in monthly electric bills. Smith said Idaho, along with other Western states, is consuming record amounts of electricity due to economic growth, a winter that was 20 percent colder than average, a lack of new generating capacity, drought conditions, plus a suspicion that some generating plants in the region's electric grid are being held offline to increase profits of owners. "The final straw," she said, will be if Idaho suffers inordinately high summer temperatures and demand surges. Smith complained that a set of "power myths" endure in Idaho. In attempting to debunk the myths, she said that Idaho is not an "energy island" and shortages and spiraling prices affect the Genie State, and even small conservation efforts can ease costs and increase supplies. The sticky issue of rescuing salmon from decimation was confronted by Sara Denniston, a conservationist with Idaho Rivers United, and John Simpson, an attorney who questions costly salmon reintroduction efforts. Denniston said that when Hells Canyon Dam goes through the licensing process in 2003, federal authorities have the power to require Idaho Power to devise methods for passage of salmon through the dam. She also said that Idaho needs to consider shifting more of its power generation from hydro plants because of diminishing water supplies - such as using farmland as farms for wind power. In some parts of the country, she said, farmers are being paid $1,500 to $2,000 per acre for allowing construction of large power-generating windmills. Today's final seminar sessions will include a taped message from U.S. Rep. Butch Otter, R-Idaho, and a discussion of the Endangered Species Act's impact on river operations in the Pacific Northwest.

Our fear about this proposed impact area, is once it's been approved, we are afraid that slowly you (the city of Hagerman) are going to annex, block by block. And that's what I'm afraid of, that our taxes are going to double.

But one county resident said his friends and neighbors were misinterpreting the city's reasoning behind the proposal. As someone who has served on the city's planning and zoning commission, Jerry Veendendaal said this is an issue of control over the land, not about annexation. "What they are saying is 'Is the city going to control (the area of impact) or is the county,'" Veendendaal said. Gooding County planners made no decision after Wednesday's public hearing. The next step is for the county and city planning and zoning boards to reach a decision regarding the size of the area of impact. Once an agreement has been reached, recommendations will be presented to the Gooding County Commissioners and the Hagerman City Council. However, county and city approval of zoning changes will require another round of public hearings. The issue is tentatively scheduled for discussion during the Gooding County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting at 1:30 p.m. June 27 at the Gooding County Courthouse. ## DNA child safety program comes to TF

TWIN FALLS - A DNA LifePrint Child Safety Program will be in Twin Falls this week.

The DNA LifePrint Child Safety Program is designed to promote awareness and education for parents and children in an effort to protect children against violence, said a news release from program officials. Gary's Westland Motors Family of Dealerships has underwritten the program's visit to Twin Falls.

DNA LifePrint will take place from 3 to 7 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at Gary's Westland Motors, 1427 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., and Gary's Westland Hyundai & Truck Center, 1070 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The DNA program is "the fingerprinting of the new millennium," the news release said.

The kit is completely non-invasive, meaning no blood is taken or analyzed. The procedure is simply rubbing the inside of the child's cheek for several seconds with the applicator in the kit. The applicator is then inserted into a fixation solution, contained in the vial and the child's DNA is captured and preserved for more than 80 years. There will be no databasing. The only record of the visit will be given to the parent, along with child safety tips and instructions on the DNA sample.

Studies have shown that unless taken by a trained technician, fingerprints are unreliable as a means of identification, the news release said. DNA LifePrint eliminates inaccuracy and provides parents with the FBI's preferred method for help in an investigation.

CSI surgical technology program gains recognition

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho's surgical technology program, under the direction of Janet Beorchia, will be recognized as the Outstanding Idaho Professional Technical Program for 2001 by the Idaho Department of Professional Technical Education, according to a CSI news release.

CSI's surgical technology program is in its fourth year and Beorchia has headed the program for the past three years. She teaches up to 16 students a year to work with surgeons, anesthesiologists, and registered nurses in hospitals, physicians' offices and surgical centers. Technologists help prepare patients for surgery and assist the surgeon with instruments and equipment during surgical procedures.

CSI Health Science and Human Services Director Dr. Clauden Buechner says the CSI program faced tough competition this year from many other programs throughout the state. The programs were judged on their ability to meet industry needs, retention, creativity, and student placement after graduation. Program graduates are eligible for national certification and many CSI students have been recruited for employment while they're still in school.

Beorchia and Buechner will receive the award at the Professional Technical Education Association's summer conference in Boise Aug. 8.

Bell striker from Idaho leaves jail, apologizes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Flashing the peace sign, an itinerant from Idaho who struck the Liberty Bell with a sledgehammer walked out of jail on bail Thursday and apologized.

"Peace and love," said Mitchell Guillatt, 27, on being released to his mother's custody on $50,000 bail. "I'm sorry for the damage that occurred to the Liberty Bell."

Karen Guillatt was with her son and said he would have no further comment on advice of his attorney. They were returning to her Boise home, which she put up as collateral to secure her son's bail.

Mitchell Guillatt was tackled by a National Park Service ranger on April 6 after pulling the sledgehammer from a backpack, and striking the cracked bell while saying, "God lives."

He said he did it for religious reasons and was charged with damaging U.S. property and a related offense for damaging historic property.

On Wednesday, Magistrate Diane Welsh found him competent to stand trial and granted bail. The judge ordered Guillatt to wear an electronic monitoring bracelet around his ankle until he returned to Philadelphia for trial.

Boise mayor cites error, says he'll stop late-night wandering

BOISE (AP) - Mayor Brent Coles issued a formal apology Wednesday for embarrassing the community following an early-morning encounter with a sheriff's deputy by a top aide's house.

Coles said he lied to the deputy who spotted him at 4:21 a.m., June 14, parked in his Chevy Blazer by the home of his spokeswoman, Suzanne Burton.

"I apologize to the community as a whole for embarrassing them this way," he said in a written statement. "I often drive someplace and then stop and park and think and then drive on to some other spot."

"I chose an inappropriate spot to stop and park that morning - that I freely admit."

Coles said he plans to forgo such early-morning jaunts from now on.

About 20 calls came to City Hall on Wednesday, evenly divided between critics and defenders, staffers reported.

Coles emphatically denies being in Suzanne Burton's neighborhood for a romantic tryst with her. Burton, likewise, has dismissed such suggestions.

"There's absolutely nothing inappropriate about my relationship with her or anyone else," Coles said.

In his statement, he apologized to his family.

"I apologize to my dear, patient wife who is very human and who is hurt and bewildered by the allegations being made against me," Coles said.

Boys drown in separate accidents

The Associated Press

Two boys drowned on Thursday in separate incidents.

Authorities said 7-year-old boy was with three other children at Coeur d'Alene City Beach about midday when the woman watching the children left to wash her hands.

When she returned, she told authorities the boy had drowned. Attempts to resuscitate him failed.

And right before noon, an 11-year-old developmentally disabled boy disappeared in a pond near Eagle Island State Park west of Boise. Dive teams and a helicopter were called on to search. The body was found 50 minutes later and the boy could not be resuscitated.

McGuckin kids switch foster homes

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - It's been nearly a month since JoAnn McGuckin was arrested near her rural Idaho home, and the family's fate remains in limbo.

The six McGuckin children will move to another temporary foster home this weekend, as negotiations grind on between prosecutors and defense attorneys.

A court hearing is set for Wednesday in Sandpoint in which the child neglect charge against McGuckin, and the custody of the children, could be settled, lawyers on both sides say.

"We're hoping for the dismissal of the criminal charge and the reunification of the family," said McGuckin's lawyer, Bryce Powell of Sandpoint.

Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson and Idaho state child welfare workers say they are most interested in protecting the children from an unhealthy home environment.

McGuckin was arrested by Bonner County sheriff's deputies on May 29 for investigation of child neglect, an event that prompted her children to begin a five-day standoff with law enforcement officers at their home near Garfield Bay. The children eventually surrendered and have been in foster care since.

McGuckin remains in the county jail in Sandpoint, even though she is free to leave, because she refused to abide by a condition of her release that barred her from visiting the children.

The children's father, Michael McGuckin, died of multiple sclerosis in early May.

If negotiations on a comprehensive deal to end the case fail, then additional delays in the custody decisions seem inevitable.

Brent Featherston, the appointed attorney for the children, said he would resist such delays on grounds they hurt the kids.

"We don't get any answers, and the children don't have any sense of direction or any sense of stability," Featherston told The Spokesman-Review newspaper.

Report evaluates state's medical investigations

BOISE (AP) - Legislative evaluators found the state Board of Medicine's procedures for handling complaints against doctors generally appropriate.

But in a report issued on Thursday, the Office of Performance Evaluations called for some informal policies to be formalized and for the board to become more aggressive in investigating doctors.

Evaluators said the current system is complaint driven and recommended that the board set up indicators, including the age of a physician and his health status, that would trigger investigations without a formal complaint being filed.

The routine caseload for medical board investigators in other states is 30 to 35, Kerr said, but in Idaho there are only two investigators to handle 132 cases last year.

The evaluators found that case disposition in Idaho was consistent with that in nearby states and that the procedure provides the doctors targeted by complaints with constitutional due-process protections.

Actor Carroll O'Connor, TV's 'Archie Bunker,' dies

Carroll O'Connor

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) - Carroll O'Connor, whose portrayal of irascible bigot Archie Bunker on "All in the Family," helped make the groundbreaking TV comedy part of the American dialogue on race and politics, died of a heart attack Thursday. He was 76.

O'Connor collapsed at his home and was taken to Brotman Medical Center, publicist Frank Tobin said. He said O'Connor died with his wife of nearly 50 years, Nancy, by his side.

The actor had diabetes and had undergone coronary artery bypass surgery in 1989.

Personal tragedy darkened O'Connor's later years. His only child, Hugh, a co-star with his father on the TV series "In the Heat of the Night," shot himself in a drug-related suicide in 1995.

A native of New York, O'Connor had been working for two decades on stage and in TV and movie supporting parts when he was tapped by producer Norman Lear to play a blue-collar worker from New York's borough of Queens with the gift of gab and a big chip on his shoulder.

On Jan. 12, 1971, Archie began spouting off against minorities, liberals and his long-haired son-in-law (whom he called "Meathead") and kept at it for 13 years. O'Connor didn't flinch at playing an unlikeable character and deftly brought Archie's intolerance to feisty comic life.

The actor also managed to give Archie a vulnerability that allowed him to be seen as a beleaguered soul, bound by his unthinking prejudices and buffeted by the changes sweeping Vietnam War-era America.

Further softening the character was his love for wife Edith (Jean Stapleton), lovingly known as "Dingbat," and their daughter, Gloria (Sally Struthers), and his grudging affection for Meathead Mike (Rob Reiner).

"All in the Family," adapted from the British series "Till Death Do Us Part," shattered the sitcom mold that had produced decades of superficial and bland series featuring, invariably, a wise and kindly paternal figure.

Lear considered other actors for the pivotal role of Archie, but said he found the right combination of "bombast and sweetness" in O'Connor, whom he had seen in the film "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy?"

The sitcom got off to a rocky start. Many found it unsettling and offensive, and tamed it out. Harvard psychiatrist Alvin Foussaint called the show's bigotry "dangerous because it's disarming."

Eventually, however, viewers came to embrace Archie and the series as a comedy and a source of debate. It ranked No. 1 for five years, was top-rated for much of its run and gave birth to two spin-offs, "Maude" and "The Jeffersons."

FIGHTING A REPUTATION

Community tries to bring the party back in bounds

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - The partying is extreme - and sometimes deadly - in Isla Vista, a community packed with Santa Barbara college students. And both the law and university officials are trying to bring things under control, beginning in the classroom.

Among the strategies being used to discourage drunken misbehavior: Professors at the University of California at Santa Barbara are being given grants from the school to work anti-alcohol and anti-drug messages into their classroom assignments.

In separate accidents this spring, two partygoers from Santa Barbara City College plunged to their deaths from the ocean bluffs along Del Playa Drive, the road that is often the scene of raucous beer bashes with students hanging from the balconies.

Last week, five young men were arrested on charges that included kidnapping and sexual assault. They are suspected in a September incident in which a UCSB freshman was allegedly forced into, stripped, sexually assaulted with a crutch and aundry hose, then left unconscious and covered with food, beer and garbage on a couch in the street.

The incident was videotaped, and officials said the tape was widely shown before someone turned it over to police June 4.

The deadliest episode happened in February, when a UCSB freshman mowed down a group of pedestrians with his car on a bustling Friday night in Isla Vista, killing four people. A drug test on the 18-year-old showed recent marijuana use and the painkiller lidocaine in his bloodstream.

"This has been a bad year," said Michael Young, UCSB vice chancellor of student affairs. Isla Vista's 20,000 residents are crowded into an unincorporated, off-campus area of less than a square mile.

More than half are students - the vast majority of them from UCSB, the others from Santa Barbara City College - and high rents lead them to live two, three and four to a room in block after block of apartment houses. The average age is 23. There is little adult supervision.

"There's a 'Lord of the Flies' element," said the Rev. Norm Freeman, an Episcopal clergyman.

The partying would horrify many parents: students throwing beer bottles, dashing naked across rooftops, vandalizing cars, starting fights, burning couches in the street, and drinking until they are too drunk to stand.

In recent years, Isla Vista has recorded more than two dozen rapes and sexual assaults annually. But it has been a few years since there has been a fatal fall from the bluffs.

"You could see anything down here, and you get a thicker skin," said Scott Mitchell, 19, who just finished his freshman year.

"You show up, you drink for free, you invite all your friends, they invite their friends. If you're lucky, you'll get some freshmen girls to cruise through, you get them drunk, and then the party really starts," said Jack Thomas, 22, a senior from Los Angeles who goes by the nickname Lucky.

"That's the way this place is."

University officials take issue with UCSB's party-school reputation, saying the place ranks in the middle in a national study of binge drinking. The school has three Nobel laureates on the faculty and a freshman class with a high school grade-point average of 3.7.

But university officials have long wrestled with problems in Isla Vista.

UCSB is working with the county on an ordinance requiring residents to register parties, and wants to extend campus jurisdiction to Isla Vista for certain crimes.

Under UCSB's "stealth education" strategy that began a decade ago and expanded in recent years, professors are encouraged to slip anti-alcohol messages into the classroom - for example, by assigning students in a film class to dramatize the dangers of abuse.

The university is also pressing faculty members to hold more classes on Mondays and Fridays to discourage partying on Thursday and Sunday nights.

Mourners remember firefighters killed in N.Y.

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (AP) - Some 10,000 firefighters, friends and family converged on two churches Thursday for the funerals of two of three firefighters killed in a Father's Day blaze at a hardware store.

Harry Ford, 50, was remembered as someone other firefighters pointed at their side during a blaze.

"He's an example for firefighters, he's an example for us all," Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said. The mayor asked the congregation to give Ford a standing ovation so his three children could see the respect their father earned in his 27-year career.

Firefighters from along the Eastern Seaboard gathered for the separate funerals of Ford and Brian Fahey, 46, a 14-year NYFD veteran.

At Fahey's funeral, fellow firefighter Tim Geraghty, who crained his ankle while fighting the blaze that killed his colleagues, called Fahey "a great trainer, great instructor, great friend - a great guy."

"We just lost a milestone for the fire department," Geraghty said.

Giuliani also asked for a standing ovation heard by Fahey's children.

Ford, Fahey and John Downing, 40, died Sunday while fighting a five-alarm fire and explosion in a Queens hardware store. Downing's funeral was scheduled for Friday.

Ford and Downing were crushed to death by the tumbling roof and facade. Fahey was trapped inside.

Fire Commissioner Thomas

Wearing his father's helmet, Brendan Fahey, 9, the son of New York City firefighter Brian D. Fahey, cries Thursday as his father's casket is carried out of Saint Raymond's Roman Catholic Church.

von Essen said the cause of the blaze would not be determined until investigators finished clearing rubble.

Greg Colton, a firefighter from Toronto, said he came to the funerals to tell New York City firefighters "they're not alone in this time."

"It's a brotherhood," said Colton, vice president of the Toronto Professional Firefighters Association. "It's a special job and it's a special bond. It's really hard to explain to the public, but when you hear about this on the news, it's just like losing someone in your family."

The blast and 12-hour fire injured about 50 rescuers and two civilians.

Officials suspect murder-suicide in death of police officer, wife

AURORA, Colo. (AP) - A police officer, his wife and two children were found dead in their condominium Thursday, victims of a suspected murder-suicide, authorities said.

The woman's two teen-age sons kept through the shootings and awoke to find the bodies, investigators said.

Officer George Petrillo, 40, most likely shot his wife Carolyn Petrillo, 39, and their children Gabriella, 6, and Knight, 4, before shooting himself, police spokeswoman Detective Fran Gomez said.

Carolyn Petrillo's sons from a previous marriage, ages 14 and 18, were asleep in the home and discovered the bodies when they awoke in the morning, Gomez said. They called 911.

They are not suspects, Gomez said.

Investigators recovered a handgun they believe was used in the shootings, but Gomez could not immediately say whether it was George Petrillo's service weapon.

Gomez said she did not know where in the condominium the bodies were found or where the teens were sleeping.

Gene change fights malaria

WASHINGTON (AP) - A gene mutation that arose thousands of years ago now protects hundreds of millions of people from severe malaria, the mosquito-borne disease that is the world's deadliest infection.

Researchers report Friday in the journal Science that they have traced the natural evolution in Africa, Asia and the Mediterranean area of the mutation that gives some protection from malaria's most serious effects.

Malaria annually infects about 500 million people and kills more than 2 million, making it globally a deadly infection than HIV/AIDS or tuberculosis. Without the mutation, it could be even worse.

"This is a striking example of how infectious disease can shape the path of human evolution" and how organisms battle for survival on a molecular level, said Sarah A. Tishkoff of the University of Maryland.

Tishkoff is first author of the study with 17 co-authors from eight countries.

The researchers traced the development of a malaria resistant gene that they believe first appeared in humans thousands of years ago in Africa and later among people in the lands of the Mediterranean and parts of Asia.

Tishkoff said the mutation of an X chromosome gene called G6PD evolved as a natural response to widespread infection from the mosquito-borne parasite that causes malaria. In its mutated form, it helps block the reproduction of the malaria parasite.

Officials indict 14 in bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen Saudis and a Lebanese alleged to be members of a terrorist group supported by Iranian officials were indicted Thursday, nearly five years after the Khobar Towers bombing that killed 19 American servicemen in Saudi Arabia.

A 46-count indictment handed up by a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Va., said that elements of the Iranian government supervised and supported the suspects, but no Iranian government officials were charged.

President Bush promised to continue searching for those responsible for the bombing and said more people might be charged.

In a statement to victims' families and survivors, Bush said, "Your government will not forget your loss, and will continue working, based on the evidence, to make sure that justice is done."

The Iranian government has denied any involvement, and U.S. officials say there is no proof as yet that Iran sponsored the attack on the Khobar Towers, however intricate the links between the Iranians and their Saudi allies may have been.

Bush spoke by phone Thursday with Crown Prince Abdullah to thank him for Saudi Arabia's cooperation in the investigation.

At FBI headquarters, Attorney General John Ashcroft said, "The indictment explains that elements of the Iranian government inspired, supported and supervised members of Saudi Hezbollah," he said, "the indictment alleges that the charged defendants reported their surveillance activities to Iranian officials and were supported and directed in those activities by Iranian officials ... The only limitation on this case, as in any criminal case, is what we believe we can prove in a court of law."

The indictment, coming just days before the statute of limitations on the attempted murder and some of the conspiracy charges were to expire, accuses the suspects of murder, attempted murder and conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. About 40 of the charges are punishable by death.

None of the suspects, all members of the shadowy Saudi Hezbollah that had long been thought to be behind the bombings, are in custody in the United States.

FBI Director Louis Freeh, whose term ends this week, said the United States is in discussions with Thursday, though he officially was on the FBI books through today. The father of six sons ranging from 3 to 16, Freeh has not said what his plans are.

Deputy FBI Director Thomas Pickard is expected to be named acting director until Freeh's successor is confirmed.

Freeh met on Thursday with White House officials who sought his advice on successor candidates. Former acting Deputy Attorney General Robert Mueller, now U.S. attorney in San Francisco, has emerged as the front-runner to replace Freeh.

The case had been a priority for Freeh, who met with the victims' families and went to lengths to secure the cooperation of Saudi officials in pursuing the suspects.

"His personal involvement and tireless commitment are a substantial reason why we stand here today," Ashcroft said. "This investigation exemplifies the leadership, the integrity and the compassion that Louis Freeh has delivered for America during the past eight years of his service as director of the FBI."

Freeh's last day in the office

Ashcroft praises Freeh on last day

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of criticism over a string of FBI bungles, Director Louis Freeh was praised on his last official day by Attorney General John Ashcroft for his leadership and integrity.

"He has moved this institution forward into the 21st century, building law enforcement cooperation and investigative capacities that are respected across the nation and around the world," Ashcroft said Thursday at a news conference announcing indictments in the Khobar bombing case.

Blacks: Racial profiling is prevalent

More than half of all black men report that they've been victims of racial profiling by police, according to a survey by the Washington Post, the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation and Harvard University.

Overall, 37 percent of blacks said they've been unfairly stopped by police because they were black, including 52 percent of black men and 25 percent of black women.

Blacks aren't the only Americans who say they've been the targets of racial or ethnic profiling by law enforcement. One in five Latino and Asian men reported being victims of racially motivated police stops.

Racial profiling is only one of many examples of intolerance that minorities say they continue to confront. More than a third of all blacks interviewed said they've been rejected for a job or failed to win a promotion because of their race. One in five Latinos and Asians also said they've been discriminated against in the workplace because of their race or ethnicity.

Overwhelming majorities of blacks, Latinos and Asians also report they occasionally experience at least one of the following expressions of prejudice: poor service in stores or restaurants, disparaging comments, and encounters with people who clearly are frightened or suspicious of them because of their race or ethnicity.

House votes to deny Bush drilling in monuments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday voted to deny Bush administration efforts to explore for oil and gas in environmentally sensitive areas, including a tract in the Gulf of Mexico that pits Florida's Republican governor against his brother, President Bush.

The House voted 247-164 to postpone any final lease agreement between the Interior Department and energy companies wishing to develop an area close to Florida in the eastern Gulf. Lawmakers also voted 242-173 to prevent the administration from pursuing new oil, gas or coal development in national monuments.

Both amendments were attached to an $18.9 billion Interior spending bill for fiscal 2002, which passed later on a 376-32 vote and moves next to the Senate.

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush has repeatedly urged his brother's administration not to proceed with plans to extend offshore oil and gas drilling to a tract that comes as close as 17 miles to Pensacola, Fla., and 200 miles from the Tampa Bay region. Yet the White House was working hard to generate opposition to any delay in leases, including calls to some of Florida's Republican lawmakers.

The amendment, sponsored by Reps. Jim Davis, D-Fla., and Joe Scarborough, R-Fla., would prevent the Interior Department from signing final lease agreements in the tract, known as Lease Sale B1, until April 1, 2002. The delay, they said, would give opponents time to work out an agreement.

Alligator wrestler gets green light to hunt in park

NEW YORK (AP) — An alligator wrestler from Florida arrived in the big city to try to capture a 12-foot gator that has made its home in a pond in Central Park.

Mike Bailey, who works at a Seminole Indian tourist attraction near Hollywood, Fla., planned to make an attempt after dark Thursday.

Bailey, 23, is not being paid by the city but received the go-ahead after impressing the Parks Department's wildlife experts with his knowledge of alligators and his concern for capturing the reptile in a safe and humane way, said Parks Commissioner Henry Stern.

The gator was first sighted on Saturday along the shore of the Harlem Meer, a one-acre lake at the northern end of Central Park. It had not been seen again until Wednesday night, when it was spotted by a TV crew.

Stern said the gator was probably a pet that was released by its owner after it got too big.

The commissioner said it has not been decided where the alligator would wind up if Bailey captured it, but he denied a report that it would go to a petting zoo in Florida.

"The alligator will not be displayed," Stern said. "We intend to do whatever is best for the alligator."

Gates is still the richest

Forbes magazine releases latest rankings of wealth

NEW YORK (AP) — Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates is still the richest man on the planet, according to the latest ranking by Forbes magazine, but value investing guru Warren Buffett slipped past the software giant's other co-founder for second place.

The bursting of the Internet bubble knocked a number of billionaires down a peg or two, or off the list entirely. Nevertheless, Gates — with a net worth of $58.7 billion, down from last year's $60 billion — easily retained his No. 1 position on Forbes magazine's 15th annual list of the world's billionaires.

Microsoft's Paul Allen slipped behind Buffett after the net worth of the "Oracle of Omaha" increased $4 billion, to $32.3 billion. Allen, who was tied with Buffett for third place last year, had $30.4 billion, according to list results released Thursday.

The billionaire club swelled to 538 members this year, up from 482 last year, because Forbes decided for the first time to include all billionaires. Previously, the magazine counted only "working rich" billionaires to differentiate between those who ran businesses and those who simply lived off their wealth.

Because of the new entries, some year-to-year comparisons are difficult.

For example, the overall number of billionaires would have dropped this year under the old parameters, and Forbes wasn't able to provide a comparable number. The problem should be resolved when next year's list appears, said Kerry Dolan, a senior Forbes editor who co-edited the rankings.

The rankings appear in the July 9 issue of Forbes, which reaches newsstands today. Oracle Corp. founder Larry Ellison, last year's second-richest man, saw his net worth plummet from $47 billion to $26 billion. But that was still good enough to make him No. 4.

German retailers Theo and Karl Albrecht had the fifth spot and Prince Alwaleed Bin Talal Alsaud, a global investor from Saudi Arabia, came in sixth.

Three heirs of the Wal-Mart fortune created by founder Sam Walton took the No. 7 through No. 9 spots, and two more Waltons tied for 10th place. Several Waltons who made the list this year were not included last year because they were no longer active in the business.

The stock market shakeout over the past year hurt several on the list. "Call it the worldwide humbling of the billionaires," the magazine said.

For example, the net worth of Japanese software magnate Masayoshi Son, founder of Softbank, dropped from $19.4 billion to $5.6 billion, putting him in 55th place. Last year he was eighth.

Man commandeers large construction crane

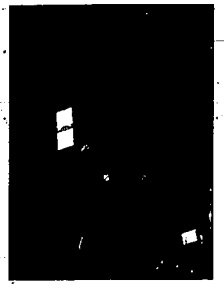

ATLANTA (AP) — A man in a suit climbed up 200-foot construction crane and held police at bay all day Thursday, reading a Bible, scribbling and, at one point, dropping a blank check as psychologists and his mother tried via cell phone to talk him into coming down.

Police said the 23-year-old man threatened to hurt anyone who climbed up after him. But he made no demands, and was not believed to be a danger to others as he waited out the police in the cockpit at the top of the crane.

Early on, police feared that the man had a gun and evacuated about 250 workers from the BellSouth Corp. site north of downtown.

His mother, two psychologists, and police tried to persuade him to come down. But he was still there more than 11 hours after she was found.

As his cell phone ran out of power, a bullhorn was used to communicate with him. Hoping to sweat him out, police turned off the air conditioning in the cockpit and estimated the temperature inside was 95 to 100 degrees. But the man occasionally opened the cockpit door and walked or crouched on the open-

Mom seeks $490,000 from ex-sheriff, county in murder

FALLS CITY, Neb. (AP) — The mother of the cross-dressing woman whose murder was dramatized in the 1999 movie "Boys Don't Cry" asked a court Thursday for $490,000 from a former sheriff and county government for failing to protect her daughter.

Brandon's attorneys made the request at a hearing ordered by the state Supreme Court to refigure an earlier damage award of $17,000, most of which was to come from her daughter's two imprisoned killers.

The judge gave attorneys on both sides a month to submit written arguments before he makes a ruling.

The two men murdered Teena Brandon, who often dressed as a man and used the alias Brandon Teena, eight years ago. She had told then-Richardson County Sheriff Chales Laux that they had raped her when they found out her true gender.

The pair, John Lotter and Marvin Nissen, also killed two people who witnessed her slaying. Joann Brandon sued Laux, saying he should have protected Brandon after she reported the rape.

In a 1999 ruling, District Judge Orville Coady agreed but also found that the young woman's lifestyle contributed to her death.

Earlier this year, the high court overturned part of that ruling. Chief Justice John Henry said "Laux" was more concerned with Brandon's sexuality than he was with keeping her safe after she had reported she was raped.

According to court records, Laux referred to Brandon as "it," and his interrogation of her included questions such as "Do you run around... with a sock in your pants to make you look like a boy?"

The high court directed Coady to instead award the victim's mother at least $80,000 for wrongful death and refigure other damages.

NASA prepares test flights on plane

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NASA is planning a series of test flights of an unmanned flying wing that is designed to run on solar power and able to cruise at altitudes reaching 100,000 feet, more than three times higher than commercial jets.

The first of as many as three flights could come this weekend from a Navy airstrip on the Hawaiian island of Kauai.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration developed the Helios Prototype with AeroVironment Inc. in a bid to build a remotely piloted aircraft that could replace space satellites for some applications.

The goal is extreme-duration, sustained high-altitude, long-endurance flight for essentially earth observing and telecommunications," said John Hicks, who manages NASA's Environmental Research Aircraft and Sensor Technology project at the Dryden Flight Research Center. "Basically, it's to try to get it up for six months at a time."

A prototype of NASA's solar-electric high-altitude flying wing, known as Helios, lands on a takedown near Dryden in this November 1999 photo.

The plane has a 247-foot wingspan, greater than that of a Boeing 747, yet is only 12 feet long. It is too large to use the runways at the Pacific Missile Range Facility on Kauai, so it will take off and land from the crushed coral apron alongside the strip.

Rumsfeld calls U.S. defense out of date

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's "two war" strategy has outlived its usefulness, leaving the United States ill-prepared for emerging threats like ballistic missiles and cyberattack, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld told Congress on Thursday.

The current strategy is not working, so we owe it to ourselves to ask: What might be better?"

Rumsfeld said in testimony before the House Armed Services Committee. He made a similar presentation to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

It was Rumsfeld's first public testimony to congressional panels since he took office in January. Some Senate panelists had complained that Rumsfeld was keeping them in the dark, although most applauded him Thursday.

The U.S. defense strategy, in place for 10 years, is to maintain the capability to win two "major theater wars" — like the 1991 Gulf War — at nearly the same time. The idea is to have enough combat forces to sustain a conflict in the Persian Gulf, with enough in reserve to dissuade North Korea, for example, from starting a conflict with South Korea.

Bluesman John Lee Hooker dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Veteran bluesman John Lee Hooker, whose foot stompin' and gravelly voice electrified audiences and inspired several generations of musicians, died Thursday. He was 80.

Hooker died at home in his sleep, said his agent, Mike Kappas.

Hooker died of natural causes with friends and family near, Kappas said. During a more than six-decade-long music career, the veteran blues singer from the Mississippi Delta estimated he recorded more than 100 albums. Some of his better-known songs include "Boogie Chillen," "Boom Boom" and "I'm in the Mood."

Throughout it all, Hooker's music remained unchanged. His rich and sonorous voice, full of ancient hurt, and his brooding and savage style remained hypnotic but unpredictable. To the strains of his own guitar, he sang of loneliness and confusion. Neither polished nor urbane, his music was raw, primal emotion.

Mom frets at child's choice of boyfriends

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Kristen," is almost 17. She's always been a good kid - keeps her grades up and makes the honor roll regularly. She's never been a problem.

DEAR ABBY
Abby Cadabby

What worries me is Kristen's choice of boyfriends. I know parents are not supposed to like the boys their daughters date, but it's worse than that. The guy she is going with is so far below the standards her dad and I have set for her, it terrifies me.

This boy is only 16, but has dropped out of school and comes from a family that has nothing, including pride. Their house is filthy. Frankly, I am embarrassed their name is associated with ours in this small town.

How can we get our daughter to understand she is playing with fire by associating with this guy? Should I forbid her to see him, or should that backfire? Don't tell me to have a heart-to-heart talk with her, Abby; she knows all too well how I feel.

-SCARED FOR OUR GIRL

DEAR SCARED: Don't judge the boy by his family. Unless he's into drugs, alcohol or violence, do not "forbid" your daughter to see him. It will only make him more attractive if he's off limits.

A more effective way to handle this might be to take an interest in the young man. Include him in family activities, and let him learn about your lifestyle and standards. Encourage him to go back to school. Your example could show him the advantage of completing his education. In fact, your family could be the best thing that ever happened to him.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Frightened Mom in Arizona" is sure to generate a huge response. My mouth literally dropped open upon reading what happened to her little boy at the day-care center.

Your response regarding reporting the incident to the police immediately was right on. However, adding that you have received letters from day-care providers complaining that parents pick up their children late was a big NO-NO.

Parents are frequently caught in traffic, bad weather, late meetings, etc. In these instances, parents should call the day-care center or provider and notify them he/she is running late and is en route, or if necessary, should arrange for someone else to pick up the child, if possible. We don't know the reason why "Mom" was late, but you almost made it sound as though if the parent was late, it was her fault if something happened to the child.

A responsible day-care supervisor would never let an employee's boyfriend or girlfriend supervise a child. Which brings me to my next point: Children should be informed that no one is to touch or look at their "private parts" ever in a day-care or baby-sitting setting. Parents need to let children know what is permissible and what is not.

My heart goes out to "Frightened Mom," and I will pray for her son.

-MOM IN SAGAMORE HILLS, OHIO

DEAR MOM: I received a stack of mail from readers who were offended that I wrote, "Let this be a warning." They felt I was blaming the mother for her son's possible abuse.

Perhaps I should have been more clear: It was intended as a warning to parents to have an emergency plan in place in case they are detained, so they know who will be responsible for their child until they arrive. Also, it is mandatory that the day-care center be licensed and that all personnel have passed background checks.

Hospital officials upgrade injured supermodel's condition

ATLANTA (AP) - Supermodel Niki Taylor was upgraded to good condition and moved out of intensive care Thursday, nearly eight weeks after suffering liver damage in a car accident.

She moved into a private room Thursday and Dr. Jeffrey Nicholas said he is "hopeful that Niki will be able to participate in rehabilitation therapy very soon."

The mother of twin 6-year-old boys, Taylor lives in Florida and was visiting friends in Atlanta at the time of the accident.

She was a passenger in a vehicle driven by her friend James Renegar, who told police he looked down to answer his cell phone and lost control of the 1993 Nissan Maxima. The car hit a utility pole.

MOVIE STAR'S summer

Bruce Willis spends month in 'True West'

By Karen Bossick
 Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Normally, someone like Julia Roberts would get the honor of starring opposite Bruce Willis.

But when "True West" opens June 29, it'll be 28-year-old Chad Smith of Hailey, Idaho, playing off Bruce.

Is he nervous? Afraid he's going to flub it in front of 7,500 people who are coming from as far away as Germany and France to see one of Hollywood's biggest box-office draws? Afraid he'll ruin things for a man whose very name has earned the play national exposure in such publications as USA Today?

"I had butterflies when he and I first met and talked," admitted Smith, who was cast after Willis saw him in last spring's production of "Sideman."

"But that vanished as soon as we started rehearsing. He's secure in who he is and what he does. He's not particularly worried anybody is going to outshine him or look bad next to him. It's obvious he's the draw but, really, it's all about the play."

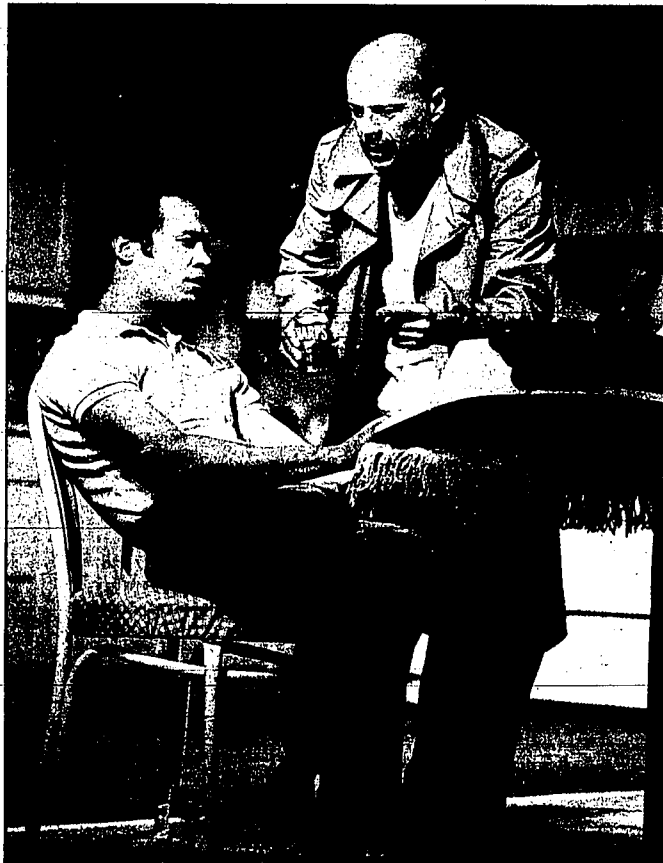

That play is a diabolically pulsating black comedy written by playwright Bruce Smith. The story of estranged brothers delves into the devastating effects of man's two-sided nature that Shepard believes psychology has fallen short in explaining.

Austin, the good brother played by Smith, is an ambitious, college-educated family man who is just on the verge of having his play make the big time. But, despite being a success by society's standards, he is not respected by his father-and that is weighing him down. He becomes desperate to live the adventure he sees his brother living.

Lee, played by Willis, is a thief and a drifter — just like Dad. It's exciting, this life on the edge, but still he can't help but covet the stable life his brother has.

The two brothers' quest to diverge from their lifestyles results in a ferocious, yet hilarious, war with one another. Willis has yearned to tackle the role of Lee since he became familiar with the part as a young actor starting out in New York City.

There was something about Lee that was monstrously terrifying. Yet, it was something that he knew if he could pull it off he'd be rewarded with the actor's Holy Grail—a deep sense of communion with the audience.

"Lee is a funny, terrifying character and it's very seldom you find a character with these two elements in the same role," said Willis, who used scenes from "True West" in audition pieces while he was still too young to play the role of Lee on stage.

"I think the play speaks for itself. I think people will understand why I'm doing it when they see it. It's just an exciting play, well-written, funny, scary. It deals with family issues, dysfunction, all kinds of different aspects of life in America."

This is the first play Willis has done since he did another Shepard play, "Fool For Love," with Company of Fools four years ago. That play, another dark comedy about an absent but present father conjured by his son and daughter, was one of the first Company of Fools did after Willis enticed the company's artistic director Rusty Wilson and managing director Denise Simone to set up shop in the theater that he and his then-wife Demi Moore had bought in Hailey.

For Willis it was an encore performance of the play that got him

If you go ...
There are still plenty of good seats for "True West," what with 7,500 seats available over the course of the play's run in Hailey's Liberty Theater. There are still some $15 tickets left for the 2 p.m. July 1 preview. Tickets for the opening preview at 8 p.m. on June 29 are $10 and available at the Liberty Theater Box Office starting at 6 that night. The show will then run July 5-29 with performances at 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Tickets are $30 for the balcony and $40 for main floor seating, with all seats reserved. Box office hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and noon to 4 p.m. Saturdays. You can pick up tickets in person at The Mint on Main Street or charge tickets by phone at 578-9122.

recognized and eventually led to a starring role on "Moonlighting."
 "It was the type of theater I was most attracted to in New York," said Willis, looking tan and lean in a striped crew shirt, jeans and red canvas deck shoes. "Sam Shepard is the most prolific American playwright we've ever had. He writes parts that are scary, funny, complex all at the same time."

Willis is looking forward to taking a break from the movie cameras where he just finished "Hart's War," a thriller about a murder trial inside a Nazi POW camp, to act in front of a live audience.

"Acting on stage is a different creative experience for me," he said. "In film you have an enormous lag time between the time you do the work and the time you get a response to that work-six to nine months, usually. So you always feel disconnected."

"With theater, the reaction is immediate. If you're trying to do something funny, you know right away whether you've made a connection with the audience or not."

As for staging the play over an entire month?
 "I did that because I could. I had time off. I'm unemployed now. I just give the illusion of being busy. I only work six months a year. I work six months and spend six months with my kids. I'm fortunate in that respect — most dads have to work year-round."

Willis, a part-time Blaine County resident for more than a decade, has kept a hands-on role with Company of Fools since he stopped in Richmond, Va., five years ago to see a play featuring Simone, a classmate of his from Montclair State College in New

Fun Days come to Filer, but bean festival moves elsewhere

By Steve Crump
 Times-News writer

FILER — Food will abound at this weekend's Filer Fun Festival, but the beans will be confined to the Kiwanis Chili Feed on Saturday afternoon.
 The Filer Bean Festival, a West End tradition that last year joined forces with Filer's summer celebration, won't be part of Fun Days this year.

"The bean growers and the bean commission decided summer wasn't a convenient time for them because they're doing inventories," said Jay Fort, who heads up Filer Fun Days for the local Kiwanis chapter.

Until last summer, the Filer Bean Festival had long been a late-winter fixture at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.
 "They've decided to reschedule it for another time," Fort said.

Notwithstanding, Filer's little summer solstice get-together has burgeoned into a four-day home-nasty heavy on family entertainment.

To say nothing of the Famous Chicken Drop, a summer Fun Days tradition, set for Saturday afternoon at 5.
 Both Saturday and Sunday, there will be family-oriented games during the afternoon and early evening and many concession booths, offering everything from homemade pie to elephant ears.

Those are scenes, to the uninitiated.

- Install ultra-low flow toilets, or place a plastic container filled with water or gravel in the tank of your conventional toilet. Be sure it does not interfere with operation of the toilet's flush mechanisms.
- Install low-flow aerators and showerheads!
- Consider purchasing a high efficiency washing machine that can save over 50% in water and energy use.

Company looks for volunteers

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Junior Musical Playhouse — JUMP Company — is looking for volunteers to direct, choreograph and accompany the troupe's 12-person Promo Group when it auditions for the chance to entertain at the Winter Olympics in Utah next year.

Rehearsals must begin in late July for auditions in September. Interested candidates should send a resume and cover letter to the JUMP Company Board of Directors, P.O. Box 1030, Twin Falls 83303. Deadline is Thursday.

A member of the company's board of directors, he makes time in the middle of his own busy schedule to see every play.

"He doesn't just sign the checks. He's part of the team, someone who's truly concerned about the community of theater artists here. He gave me 40 minutes worth of notes on 'Sideman' in the lobby," said Simone.

At the same time, Willis has allowed the company to evolve from what people used to call "the company Bruce founded" to a company that has gained respect for the innovative ways it seeks to unlock the wonder of the human heart, as well as the commitment it makes to nurturing youngsters who are interested in the theater.

Willis' admiring cast say he is an enabling, even ennobling, director.

He's intense, passionate. But he's also playful. To wit: the yodeling sendoff he gave cast members as he walked out of the theater a few afternoons ago on his way to fly down to Texas on business.

It's was a good counterbalance to the six- to seven-hour rehearsals that have been going on since the first of June.

"This is definitely stretching me," said Smith, who played Ebenezer Scrooge in "A Christmas Carol." "You can't just play my character. You have to understand what it is about my brother that I like. And that's where Bruce is so helpful. He encourages collaboration: 'What do you think? How do you feel?'"

"He's shown me not to be afraid to take my impulses all the way to the end, to see where I go with them. He encourages me to not myself become fully engaged. As a result, I'm trying some things that I thought no one would ever do. When you let yourself do it, you can see it actually happen."

Working with Willis has also been a learning experience for Danielle Kennedy, a Ketchum resident and another Company of Hoops veteran. You'd think with eight grown children, Kennedy would know every which way to react when she walks in to find her whitewashed June Cleaver kitchen in shambles. But she's finding new ways under Willis' direction.

Willis has taught herself to empty herself to allow herself to react in surprising ways, rather than the clichéd "Mom's pissed" role you might expect.

"The biggest job I have is to come in empty everyday, to stop thinking about how I'm going to react to a scene ahead of time," she said. "Sometimes, when the air's so thick you can cut it with a knife, when we're at our blackest, that's when we're also at our funniest. And that's where Bruce has the ear. He sees that contrast in Shepard's plays and he helps us discover that contrast between tension and comedy."

"We put the fun in dysfunction," added Andrew Alburger, a New York actor who portrays the Hollywood man about to give Justin his break.

Proceeds from "True West" will be used to help the company purchase new theater lights and underwrite extracurricular activities like the Stages of Wonder program the company conducts in the schools. It will also help bring to stage productions like James Joyce's "The Dead" — productions that are not always big box office draws even though critically acclaimed.

And how will Willis feel when the curtain goes up June 29? "Probably terrified. It's frightening to be on stage," he said. "And I don't think this time around will be any different despite the years of experience I have behind me."

All-volunteer Murtaugh festival grows

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — When the city of Murtaugh decided this year to stop sponsoring the community's half-century-old Friendship Day summer festival, some members of the City Council invited local grocer Greg Griggs to take on the project.

Smart move. "It's just taken off," said Griggs, who owns the Murtaugh Country

Store and is active in HealthNet, a Magic Valley coalition that works with youngsters. "We've had senior-citizen volunteers, kid volunteers and all kinds of people dropping off checks for $5, $10 to help out."

The result Saturday will be one of the biggest Friendship Days celebrations in years, with a parade at 1 p.m. from the school to the city park, followed by a barbecue and games at 2 p.m. The food is free, although each family that attends is asked to help out by bringing a dish of choice.

The fun will include a cherry seed-spitting contest, pie-throwing, a tug-of-war and, intriguingly, a water balloon volleyball contest. "It's a real community project this year, and that makes me feel good," Griggs said. "We only started three weeks ago."

In other games, Wood River stormed through Marsh Falls 14-0 in five innings after knocking off Jerome 9-1 in its opener. Brigham

Bonds blazes new path

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Each time Barry Bonds steps to the plate, the crowd rumbles and roars to life. With every powerful swing of his bat, stadium sparkle with camera flashes and echo with shouts of anticipation.

It's only June, but baseball fans already sense history in the making. Bonds, the San Francisco Giants' veteran slugger, is hitting home runs at the fastest pace ever.

Just three years after Mark McGwire hit 70 homers to break Roger Maris' hallowed 37-year-old record in a summer that captivated the nation, Bonds' incredible start to the season has fans thinking that the moody but supremely talented star can become the new home run king.

On Wednesday night in San Diego, Bonds hit his 38th homer of the season, breaking the major league record for homers before the midseason All-Star break. Bonds has 532 homers in his career, but he has never had such a power surge - and even he doesn't know what's got into him in his 16th season.

"I can't explain what's happening out there," Bonds said. "I can understand the public's fascination with this, but I can't understand it. I've never seen anything like this."

Bonds, who got a well-earned day off Thursday, needs 33 homers in the Giants' final 90 games to beat McGwire. Bonds has been cautious about his quest, saying he can't imagine beating McGwire's mark.

"Not a chance," he told the San Francisco Chronicle after slugging No. 38. "I'm not Mark McGwire. I'm just not that powerful a hitter."

McGwire says it's premature to talk unless Bonds reaches 60 homers in September.

Such caution doesn't diminish

San Francisco's Barry Bonds follows his 38th home run of the season on Wednesday in San Diego.

the amazing feats Bonds already has accomplished this season, however.

Bonds hit five homers in two games earlier this season in Atlanta. Last week, he hit the longest homer ever at the Giants' Pacific Bell Park, which is regularly packed with sellout crowds cheering his every move. His surge has fans across the country rushing outside for their morning newspaper or logging on to the Internet to see whether Bonds homered last night.

"I've been to five games this year, and Barry hit a homer at three of them," Jason Riggings, a stockbroker from Pleasanton who commended his firm's tickets twice during San Francisco's last home stand. "It's almost weird, the way he's hitting so many. Every night, you wonder what his next trick is going to be."

Bonds practically grew up in major league clubhouses while his father, Bobby, hit 332 home runs as a speedy outfielder with several clubs. The elder Bonds doesn't want to speculate whether his son can do it.

But there's a growing opinion

Wendy Ward eyes her shot from the rough onto the green during the LPGA Championship at DuPont Country Club in Wilmington, Del. Thursday.

Ward steals spotlight away from Webb, Davies at championship

The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. - Wendy Ward got off to a quick start Thursday with a 6-under 65, the perfect way to forget about last year's bizarre finish in the LPGA Championship.

On a day when Karrie Webb took a step closer to the career Grand Slam and Laura Davies began her bid to make the Hall of Fame, Ward ran off four straight birdies at DuPont Country Club, capping off the torrid stretch with a near ace. She finished with a one-stroke lead over Becky Iverson and Akiko Fukushima, with Webb and Davies among those at 67. Another stroke back was Annika Sorenstam, whose lone bogey was courtesy of a sudden blast of wind from approaching thunderstorms.

For Ward, it was a matter of forgetting her misfortunes from last year. She had to assess a one-stroke penalty on herself in the final round because she

Webb can't weave magic in 1,500 semifinals

Chicago Tribune
EUGENE, Ore. — He is a boy competing against men, and this time the men aren't about to let high school phenom Alan Webb run his own race the way he did in breaking Jim Ryun's prep record for the mile at the Prefontaine Classic invitational last month.

August's World Championships and the pride of men who don't want to be upstaged by the kid who has become a sensation.
"If you lose to a high school kid and you're a collegian or a pro, it's a shame," said Stanford senior Gabe Jennings, the 2000 Olympic trials champion in the 1,500 meters, known as the metric mile.

greatest contender, but I'm still going to beat him."
That would be in Saturday's 1,500-meter final at the U.S. Track and Field Championships, for which Jennings and Webb each qualified as winners of one of Thursday's three heats. The top three in the final make the world team, provided each meets a qualifying time standard.

alone a high school kid."
Fifth and nearly boxed into the inside rail with 300 meters left, Webb extricated himself and blasted the final 200 meters in 25.5 seconds. That move was easier because of the slow pace in Webb's heat, which he won in 3 minutes, 45.77 seconds, five seconds slower than the winning time in the other heats.

used to seeing that in high school, but he is going to see it from now on out. He's the real deal."
Webb, trying to become the first teenager to win a U.S. mile or 1,500 time since Barry Liguori in 1969, showed poise beyond his years as he got out of the backstretch trap on the final lap. He swung around a group running four abreast to take the lead.

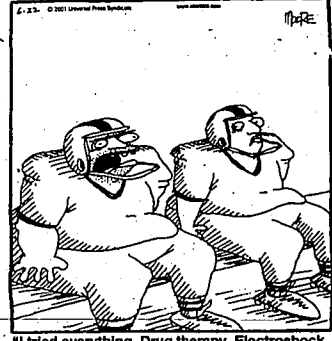

opportunity to get outside, and it worked out... just in time."
Webb came to the national meet Sunday afternoon in the favorably lit track. His record-breaking mile-3:53.43 turned the last month of his high school year at a Reston, Va., high school into a maelstrom of meets, media, prom and graduation.

The stakes this time involve a national championship and places on the U.S. team at

"With the stuff going on, things that happened last week seem like they happened a year ago," Webb said.

Supermodified Racing League hits MVS

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—The two-year old Supermodified Racing League roars into Magic Valley Speedway today.

Though SRL co-founder and driver, Davey Hamilton, won't be in attendance after suffering injuries to his lower extremities in a crash June 11, the Nampa native's spirit will most certainly be at the show in the form of his father, Kenny Hamilton, who will drive in his son's place.

Speedway promoter Steve York said he expects 16 of the cars, which reach peak speeds of roughly 130 mph, to perform on Saturday.

Meridian driver Kirk Wartman is one of several Idaho drivers who compete in the Supermodified Racing League.

"These are the fastest cars we run at the race track," he said. "On our track, they'll turn 12 seconds and their average will be about 97-98 mph."

The SRL main event will be 35 laps.

Magic Valley Speedway is one of 14 tracks the ultra-fast, ultra-loud racers inhabit during their 17-race season, which concludes Oct. 13 in El Cajon, Calif.

Troy Regier, of Dinuba, Calif., is the current points leader in the No. 10 with 148 points. In second is Emmett's Rick Veenstra, with 145 points.

Lionie Adamson, who held off Veenstra over the final seven laps to win last year's Magic Valley Speedway debut of the SRL, is currently seventh in the points.

There are 31 drivers, including four rookies, listed on the SRL

Web site (www.supermodifiedracing.com).

Along with the Pepsi-sponsored Supermodified Racing League will be the Mountain Dew Modifieds and Idaho Midget Racing Association.

The Modifieds return after a two-week absence with two-time track champion and 1999 Modified points champion Bruce Quale leading the way with 486 points. Reigning class champion Steve Jones is in hot pursuit in second with 455 points with Rick Corbridge in third with 442 points.

Time trials begin at 6 p.m. with heats and main events starting at 7 p.m.

Rice hits his stride at track

By Joe Sunnan
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—When the racing bug bit Jerry Rice, it bit him hard.

And while the passion for racing came easy, the winning hasn't.

Rice has steadily climbed the points standings in his three seasons at Magic Valley Speedway, moving up from deep in the Thunder Stocks standings his rookie year to first place this season with 410 points. His three wins and five top-five finishes in eight races this season are a far cry from his initial track experience.

"I thought I'd have a chance to compete right away," Rice said. "Being a mechanic, I thought I could put together a car that would compete. And I got lapped in my first race."

It took Rice and his brother Bill most of that first season to not only learn how to drive in the accident-prone Thunder Stocks division but to also just get a feel for their car. But by the end of the season the two were finally starting to win.

"We built that first car in two weeks," Rice said. "We thought you just took the interior out and went racing."

It's a dry-as-a-bone split-time behind the wheel the first two

Jerry Rice

Age: 39
Nicknames: Little E
Family: Wife LeeAnn, daughters Laurie 22, Christina 18, Jennifer 14
Home: Twin Falls
Business: Mechanic at Gary's Westland Motors

Car: No. 8, 1975 Chevrolet Monte Carlo
Sponsor: Gary's Collision and Repair; Harris Automotive; Kuest Drywall
Years at speedway: Third
Hobbies: "Anything with wheels."
Pit Crew: Troy Chandler, Steve Bell
Best speedway experience: "I don't know if I really have a favorite moment. In our second season at the speedway, my brother and I won four races in a row towards the end of the season. That was cool."
Worst speedway experience: "When my brother hit the wall coming out of turn 4 a few weeks ago in the Pony Stocks. He just smashed into the wall and I thought he was hurt, but he was okay."
Outlook on season: "I definitely want to win this class this season. And I know it's going to take consistency, experience and luck."

seasons, alternating starts and for a stretch of time victories, until Jerry injured his finger midway through last season and couldn't race. Bill finished the season and jumped to the Pony Stocks this year while Jerry traded the familiar black No. 3 for a red No. 8 1975 Chevrolet Monte Carlo and prepared for the season as full-time driver.

"I like being able to drive in every race now," Rice said. But I miss having my brother there. It's just like when we were little kids, but instead of racing bicycles we're racing cars."

As an every day racer, Rice has been able to use the experience he acquired over the past few seasons to become a contender for the Thunder Stocks title.

"I've only really had one bad race this season," Rice said. "And that was really early in the season. It's really about experience and luck. It just takes some time to get a feel for the car."

And while the first goal for Rice this season is stay atop the Thunder Stocks points standings, the second is to prepare to make the jump to the Grand Nationals class.

"I knew at the beginning of this season that this would be my last in the Thunders," Rice said. "I really like the Grand Nationals. It's more about racing. In the Thunders, the first five or six cars are racing, but if you get stuck in the back it's just dodging cars."

Rice's racing fever has also spilled over from the track and into his home. Rice said he has a wall of Dale Earnhardt memorabilia and over 95 die-cast cars.

"I'm been a NASCAR fan and an Earnhardt fan since 1985," Rice said. "I have so many cars I can't put them all on the wall."

Jarrett knows he's not favored, but don't cut him out

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Dale Jarrett, second to Jeff Gordon in the Winston Cup point standings, realizes he's hardly the favorite going into Sunday's Dodge-Save Mart 350 on the road course in scenic Northern California.

That honor goes to Gordon, who has won the event the past three years. In fact, Gordon has claimed six of the last seven road races at Sears Point Raceway and Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Jarrett has never finished higher than fourth in Sonoma. Last year he finished seventh, and the year before — when he won the Winston Cup championship — he ended in sixth.

Still, challenging Gordon this weekend doesn't daunt him.

"I know I'm capable of running in the top five," Jarrett said Thursday. "If he (Gordon) makes a mistake, that could turn things around."

Jarrett comes into the twisting 10-turn, 2-mile course with a new Ford, designed to make both right and left turns. He took it out for a spin recently on a course in Kershaw, S.C., and was pleased with the results.

"It's the first time I've had a new road race car in quite awhile," he said. "The car he had before was so old that it limited what we could do."

Jarrett also is encouraged by his steady recovery from a crash on May 26 in Charlotte. He cracked a rib and tore a chest muscle in the accident.

"I'm not 100 percent now, but it's really gotten better over the last two weeks," he said.

Dale Jarrett still is nursing a rib injury he sustained last month in a crash at Lowe's Motor Speedway. He trails Jeff Gordon by 36 points in the standings.

In addition to Gordon, Jarrett will face competition from teammate Ricky Rudd, who snapped an 88-race losing streak last weekend in the Pocono 500.

Rudd, known for his road course prowess, won at Sears Point in 1989. He has started on the pole four times; a track record.

Rudd is third in the point standings behind Gordon, who finished second at Pocono Raceway, and Jarrett, who was third.

The trio will be among 43 drivers to take on the reconfigured course in California wine country. A segment dubbed "The Chute" was lengthened, giving drivers an additional opportunity to pass.

Rookie points leader Kevin Harvick, who is from Bakersfield, Calif., won a Winston West race at Sears Point in 1998, and tested on the Sonoma course earlier this year.

"It's got hills and curves and a lot of places to make mistakes," said Harvick, who took over Dale Earnhardt's Chevrolet after Earnhardt was killed in the Daytona 500. "And it's a lot of fun when you do it all right."

Jarrett agrees that there's plenty of opportunities to err on the course, but remains coolly confident. About the only thing that mildly irks him this weekend is his golf game.

Australia's Lleyton Hewitt eyes the ball in his match against Croatian Goran Ivanisevic at the Heineken Trophy tennis tournament in Rosmalen, central Netherlands, Thursday. Hewitt won in two sets with 6-4, 7-5.

Top seed Hewitt advances at Heineken

TEN BOSCH, Netherlands (AP) — Top-seeded Lleyton Hewitt of Australia held off Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia 6-4, 7-5 on Thursday to move into the quarterfinals of the $570,000 Heineken Trophy tournament.

Playing on grass at this warmup for next week's Wimbledon, Ivanisevic led 4-2 in the second set before four missed volleys on serve in the 11th game cost him the match.

In the women's event, top-seeded Kim Clijsters of Belgium advanced to the semifinals with a 6-3, 6-4 win over Kristina Brandi of the United States.

Clijsters, seeded seven at Wimbledon, will meet Jelena Dokic of Yugoslavia. Dokic, the No. 4 seed here, beat No. 5 seed Henrietta Nagyova 6-2, 6-0 of Slovakia.

Also, No. 2 seed Justine Henin defeated Elena Bovina of Russia to advance to a semifinal against Iroda Tulyaganova of Uzbekistan, a 1-6, 7-6 (2), 6-4 upset winners over No. 7 seed Tatiana Panova of Russia.

Davenport hits back to reach Samsung semifinal

EASTBOURNE, England — Lindsay Davenport rallied for a 3-6, 6-2, 6-1 victory over Sylvia Farina Elia of Italy on Thursday to reach the semifinals at Eastbourne.

The top-seeded Davenport next plays fellow American Chandra Rubin, who beat Lisa Raymond 6-4, 6-4 in the grass court, pre-Wimbledon tournament.

Tamarine Tanasugarn of Thailand, who upset Nathalie Tauziat on Wednesday, was beaten in the quarters by Elena Likhovtseva of Russia, 6-3, 6-1. Likhovtseva will play Magui Serna of Spain in the other semi; Serna defeated Meghann Shaughnessy of the United States 6-0, 7-6 (3).

Rusedski, Roddick reach Nottingham semifinals

NOTTINGHAM, England — Andy Roddick moved into the semifinals of the Nottingham grass-court tournament Thursday with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Michel Kratochvil of Switzerland. Roddick, the unseeded American teen-ager, looked sharp against his Swiss opponent and will play Harel Levy of Israel today. Levy upset second-seeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa, 6-2, 6-4.

The other semifinal will match Greg Rusedski of Britain against Thomas Johansson of Sweden.

In earlier matches Thursday, Rusedski beat Davis Cup teammate Martin Lee 6-3, 6-2 and third-seeded Johansson defeated Wayne Arthurs of Australia, 7-6 (2), 7-6 (3).

This week, Roddick lost in the first round of the Queen's Club tournament in London. But he's rounding into grass-court form a week before Wimbledon.

"Any time you're in the semifinals of a tournament you feel like you've got a good chance to win," Roddick said. "I'm definitely glad that I've got a few matches on grass."

Norman, Lapentti, Kucera become latest withdrawals

WIMBLEDON, England — Magnus Norman of Sweden, Nicolas Lapentti of Ecuador and Karol Kucera of Slovakia on Thursday became the latest players to withdraw from Wimbledon.

Norman, who was seeded 18th, pulled out with a hip injury and fellow Swede Jonas Bjorkman would replace him among the seeded players at No. 33, the Wimbledon referee's office said. Bjorkman will open against Lars Burgsmuller of Germany, who was supposed to play Norman.

Lapentti, seeded 30th, has an elbow injury and was replaced by Harel Levy of Israel. Levy will play a first-round match against Tommy Robredo of Spain.

Kucera was scheduled to play 17th-seeded Tommy Haas of Germany in the first round.

Other big names already out of the men's event are world No. 1 Gustavo Kuerten, who won his third French Open title 10 days ago, runner-up Alex Corretja, Mark Philippoussis, '96 Wimbledon champion Richard Krajicek and Marcelo Rios, all through injury. Missing from the women's field are Monica Seles, Mary Pierce and Anna Kournikova.

Judge: Contract requires Rahman to fight Lewis next

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Hasim Rahman cannot avoid an immediate rematch with Lennox Lewis by claiming a contract requiring one is unenforceable, a federal judge ruled Thursday.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum came orally, immediately after lawyers in the contract dispute completed three hours of closing arguments.

The judge said Rahman cannot fight for 18 months unless he fights Lewis. She said Lewis would be irreparably harmed if he were not granted the match because evidence offered in a two-week trial without a jury demonstrated that the 35-year-old Lewis likely can fight only two more years.

Rahman became the WBC and IBF champion by knocking out Lewis in the fifth round April 22 in South Africa.

Former Seattle SuperSonics coach didn't get contract extension

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — When Paul Westphal couldn't get a contract extension last summer as coach of the SuperSonics, he knew he was in trouble in Seattle.

"One thing is real clear in the NBA," Westphal told The News Tribune of Tacoma. "There are no guarantees for success, but you can pretty much guarantee yourself of not having success if your coach is in a lame-duck status."

Westphal was fired last November, 15 games into the 2000-2001 season and the last year of his three-year contract in Seattle, after the Sonics got off to a 6-9 start. He said he asked then owner Barry Zuckler for the contract extension and a checkered refusal.

Paul Westphal, CEO and a part owner, that he felt like a lame duck and Walker agreed with him.

Westphal said he told Sonics president Wally Walker, who also the team's CEO and a part owner, that he felt like a lame duck and Walker agreed with him.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Starr Corp. wins CSI construction bid

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls-based Starr Corp. this week said it won a contract to manage construction of an approximately $5.5 million expansion and remodeling of the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center.

The state selected Starr from a list of other contractors after a commission reviewed and ranked the bid solicitations, based on a stringent quality assessment, Starr said.

"We are honored to be selected not only because this project is here in our backyard, but because we were picked in a competitive process as a result of our construction-management expertise," Starr President Glenn Arrington said in a statement.

"Work is already in process to review drawings and perform 'constructability evaluations,' with actual building expected to start this summer, Arrington said. Major features will be the addition of two new theaters, offices and other support areas.

The Fine Arts Center will remain open during the additions and renovation.

The College of Southern Idaho and the Fine Arts Center are as much community resources as they are academic and learning centers," Arrington's statement said.

"Because it is such an important part of the Magic Valley, we are especially aware of the challenges we will face in keeping the facility open and in service while the construction proceeds."

Boise hosts community development institute

BOISE - City and county leaders from throughout the Northwest will meet at the DoubleTree Riverside Hotel in Boise Sunday through June 29 to learn about community development practices.

The Northwest Community Development Institute includes courses on downtown revitalization, economic impact analysis, business retention and expansion, economic infrastructure and strategic planning.

"The institute helps practitioners address complex community issues," said Gloria Mabbutt, community development manager for the Idaho Department of Commerce.

The institute is a partnership between the department and Boise State University's Center for Public Policy and Administration.

The CDI is a three-year certification program that features an inclusive approach to community development through shared responsibilities, leadership and playing of groundwork for local and regional alliances, the department said. Individual certification is available through the National Community Development Council.

Participants also receive continuing education credit.

"Community leaders need the latest information and skills to shape the future of their towns and cities," said Dave Patton, director of the Center for Public Policy.

Registration is $450. Those interested may register by fax the fee by the moment classes begin. Call Mabbutt at 334-2470 for information.

J.C. Penney's stock plunges past $25 per share

PLANO, Texas - J.C. Penney Co.'s stock price closed Wednesday above $25 a share, a level it hasn't crossed since November 1999.

The Plano-based department store chain's share price has been slipping up since its historic low of $8.63 a share in December.

Shareholders may be responding to recent announcements. The company completed the sale of its J.C. Penney Direct Marketing Services business to Aegion Monday, which gives the retailer funds needed to repay debt maturing through 2003.

Sales at the department store chain, which includes stores in Burley and Twin Falls, have been better than anticipated the past couple of months. And Penney affirmed Wall Street's second-quarter and year-end earnings estimates Wednesday.

Penney is expected to report a second-quarter loss of 22 cents a share vs. last year's loss of 10 cents a share. For the year, the company posted a net income estimate of $1.27 per share, down from $1.29 in 2000, when significant write-downs and restructuring charges were recorded.

Investors buy bread company with TF ties

Knight Ridder News Service

HIGH POINT, N.C. - A High Point investment group won't come right out and say they've purchased the next Krispy Kreme Doughnuts.

They do hope, however, their purchase of Great Harvest Bread Co. will draw similar comparisons to product quality and brand appeal with consumers.

The group, led by Chairman Nido Qubein, Bill Mills and Andy Bills, said this week they have bought the 175-store chain for an undisclosed amount.

The chain has a Twin Falls tie: A pair of new local franchisees of Dillon, Mont.-

based Great Harvest Bread earlier this year started building their new 2,080-square-foot bakery at 1667 Locust St. N.

While the chain's buyers will keep the headquarters based in Dillon, they will oversee the company from High Point and Charlotte, N.C., where Chief Executive Officer Mike Ferretti will be.

"Bill Mills approached the group about investing in Great Harvest after hearing some great things about it," Qubein said.

"In the course of going around the country on speaking engagements, I would ask audiences if they had heard of Great Harvest Bread."

"The number of hands shooting up depended, of course, on whether there was a store in that city. But hands went up everywhere I spoke, and it spoke volumes to me about the business."

Great Harvest was founded in 1976 by Pete and Laura Wakeman in a small Montana bakery.

It has since evolved into the nation's largest whole wheat bread baking franchise, with annual gross revenue of more than $63 million. In October, Success magazine ranked Great Harvest 70th out of 2,500 national franchises in terms of business model and growth potential.

The company focuses on baking loaves big enough for sandwiches and toast. Each loaf, which comes in regular and "designer" flavors, costs $3.

That established success rate, the potential for rolling out stores in more markets and the rising brand recognition of Great Harvest convinced the investment group to buy the company.

"We're looking to add two new stores a month and expand as rapidly as we can as wisely as we can," Qubein said. "We could do five stores alone in Atlanta, and most of the Southeast remains untapped."

That growth potential also helped convince the Wakemans it was the right time

MARTHA'S EMPIRE

Chuck Conaway, chairman and CEO of Kmart Corp., and Martha Stewart, chairman and CEO of Martha Stewart Omnimedia Inc., walk the trading floor of the New York Stock Exchange after signing the opening bid Thursday. Kmart and Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia announced Thursday that they have signed a new long-term merchandising agreement that will significantly lengthen the terms and expand the scope of the Martha Stewart Everyday brand of home and garden related products. Under the agreement, her products will continue to be available exclusively at more than 2,100 Kmart stores, such as the ones in Burley and Twin Falls, and online until 2008 with conditional renewal until 2013.

Panel questions economic viability of resort

The Associated Press

CASCADE - A special committee advising the state Land Board has concluded that while the proposed WestRock resort on Cascade Reservoir might eventually clear environmental hurdles, its financial prospects are dim.

"Considering national market forces and experiences with similar projects, it is the committee's opinion that the viability of WestRock's proposal appears questionable," the report said.

"While they may be able to surmount the environmental requirements with time, their ability to procure and maintain the necessary finances is far from certain."

The proposed $1 billion resort and real estate complex being spearheaded by developer Don Wellmunter needs to lease 2,124 acres of state endowment land to make the project work.

Following the collapse of WestRock's predecessor resort project, Valbois, the state has been leery of getting involved with the project, but it left the door open nearly two years ago after Wellmunter and his backers offered to guarantee the state at least $100,000 a year in rent for the first five years of the lease.

There was no immediate comment from Wellmunter or other WestRock officials, but in the past they have repeatedly maintained that the project is financially viable and would be a major economic boost to the Cascade area that has been hard hit by the demise of the timber industry. The project has already been scaled back in response to questions.

But critics still claim it will damage the reservoir and surrounding environment, congest Idaho Highway 55 from Boise and drain local government budgets to provide the resort needed services.

The Lands Department review committee credited the developers with doing what they could to provide information on a complete proposal.

But its conclusions mirrored the questions panel members raised 13 months ago in their first analysis of the project.

They again questioned aggressive projections for a dramatic increase in skier visits to western resorts in the face of figures showing the business to be stagnant over the past 20 years. And they pointed out that the successful western ski resorts like Aspen and Vail in Colorado have regional airports within 30 miles while others without that access like Jackson, Wyo., and Durango, Colo., have struggled to establish themselves as destination resorts as WestRock is intended.

But the big hurdle, the panel concluded, is cash. Six resorts proposed in Colorado have secured federal permits in the past two decades after meeting environmental requirements, the review said, but were never built.

By WestRock's own estimates, the development will lose money for six years before essentially breaking even in the seventh when it will have operating losses of over $22 million and debt of $98 million on $156 million in capital investment.

WestRock officials said in March they wanted to break ground this summer though they have only $7 million in financing. They estimated the cost of the resort infrastructure at $250 million alone, and the committee put the cost of the initial phase at $60 million or more.

And the review panel pointed out that the success of the resort is totally dependent on the success of the real estate development, which requires selling "high-priced real estate in an unproven market."

The committee included ski industry consultant Jerry Groswold, Valley County engineer Leslie Ankenman, state tourism director Carl Wilgus, James Burns of the state Finance Department, Sheldon Keafer of the state Lands Department, Ed Ryberg of the U.S. Forest Service and Craig Sheppard of the state Department of Environmental Quality.

As big chains come, small shops innovate to win loyals

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - Stuart Kaufman knows all about the "Wal-Marting" of America. That's because he's been getting "safewayed" for years. Farooq Munir's getting "Starbucked" and Mark LaFramboise is doing his best to avoid getting "Barnes and Noble'd."

Each of these small business owners in the District has been shaken by the arrival of megastore chains - like Starbucks and Barnes and Noble - into their neighborhoods. Customer loyalties have been challenged by big, shiny new stores with beautiful decor, competitive prices and a sense of hipness that comes with the latest trend.

The big chains arrive like new kids on the block, and many small shop owners are having a tough time competing. But many also are finding that when the dust settles, loyalty can be regained with good products, good service and a lot of one-on-one attention to customers.

Americans really like to buy things they've heard a lot about. Everyone knows about Starbucks

Zilog to cut 140 jobs by January

Micron reports third-quarter loss

The Associated Press

NAMPA - Zilog Inc. plans to cut 140 jobs from its electronics manufacturing plant by year's end, but it is offering bonuses and severance packages to keep those workers around until then.

Zilog has about 500 workers in Nampa, or half of its worldwide work force. The Nampa plant does all of the company's design and fabrication for its microprocessors.

The announcement comes on the heels of layoff announcements since the first of the year that total nearly 2,700 jobs statewide.

At the same time, Micron Electronics, which accounted for over 600 of those layoffs, reported a third-quarter loss of $40.6 million, or 42 cents a share, compared with a loss of $1.9 million, or two cents a share, a year ago. But the company said three-quarters of the red ink was associated with its discontinuation of all businesses but its Web-hosting operations.

Excluding those costs, the company met Wall Street expectations for a current operating loss of nine cents a share, or $9.1 million, compared with red ink of $8.3 million, or nine cents a share, a year earlier. Revenue for the three-month period through May totaled $15.4 million, up from $10.2 million during third quarter 2000.

The Zilog complex in Nampa has two main buildings, and the company plans to consolidate all its operations into one and sell the other, valued at $3 million, spokeswoman Kimberly Malanckuk said.

"This will bring our production more in line with our demand," Malanckuk said Wednesday. "The job eliminations won't

Deadline nears for 'No Call List' sign up

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Idahoans who want to be on the attorney general's second "No Call List" have until June 30 to sign up, Attorney General Al Lance said.

So far, more than 24,000 Idaho households who do not want to be called by telemarketers have registered for the list.

To register via the Internet, visit the attorney general's home page at www.state.id.us/ag. Online registration will accept either Visa or MasterCard credit cards. Online registrations completed by midnight June 30 will be included on the second list.

Or register by mail. Registration forms are available in many public libraries throughout Idaho or by calling or writing to the attorney general's Consumer Protection Unit. Call toll free 1-800-432-3545. The mailing address is No Call List, Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Unit, P.O. Box 83720, Boise, ID 83720-1001.

The second Idaho No Call List will be published July 2. Telemarketers are prohibited from calling people on the list 30 days after it is published. The effective date of the second list will be Aug. 1.

"My consumer protection staff will process registrations right up to the end of the day on June 29, and they will do everything they can to make sure that everyone is included in the second list," Lance said. "We expect to receive a lot of registrations in the last few days, so I want to encourage Idahoans planning to register by mail to do so as quickly as possible."

Registrations that do not make the July 2 list will be included on the third Idaho No Call List, which will be published on Oct. 1.

Lance added that Idahoans should be aware the "no call" law does not cover all telemarketing calls. Charitable solicitations are exempt, as are calls from companies with whom the consumer has an existing business relationship.

The program is funded by user fees rather than tax dollars. The initial fee is $10 for three years. Once the initial registration has expired, the consumer may renew the registration for an additional three years for $5.

Telemarketers - subject to civil penalties if they call Idaho residents on the list - can obtain the list from the Consumer Protection Unit for $25. Lists will be published four times per year.

Shareholders sue Raytheon to recover losses

BOISE (AP) - Washington Group International shareholders have sued Raytheon Co. claiming its allegedly fraudulent financial statements cost them hundreds of millions of dollars in investment losses.

The suit, filed in federal court in Boise, asks that Raytheon double the actual losses from the 52 million shares of stock that once were trading at around $9 a share because worthless in Washington Group's bankruptcy reorganization.

The claim mirrors that filed in May by Washington Group. It accused Raytheon of defrauding it later in the sale of the Massachusetts-based company's construction division for $53 million and the assumption of an estimated $450 million in liabilities. Washington Group claims liabilities were actually $700 million. Raytheon denies the fraud charge.

But the shareholders suit claimed Raytheon and its top executives "undertook a scheme whereby they improperly booked revenues that had not been earned by (Raytheon Engineers & Constructors) and failed to recognize expenses."

As a result, the suit claimed, "the prices at which Washington Group securities were initially sold and purchased on the secondary market were artificially inflated."

"The true value of shares were substantially lower than the prices paid."

The suit came as a billionaire Washington Group Chairman Dennis Washington announced he had reached agreement with the creditor bank to provide some cash for the struggling construction and engineering company that he will remain chairman of through reorganization and for at least two years after. The deal also clears the way for Washington to control up to 40 percent of the reorganized company.

Poll: Americans see increasing economic divide

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans increasingly see an economic divide between the haves and have-nots, according to a new poll that also finds a majority of people dissatisfied with the country's direction.

The poll, released Thursday, indicated the economic boom of the 1990s helped the upper middle-class and wealthy, but had little impact on the outlook or financial condition of those who make less money.

"The boom has passed these people by," said pollster Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center for the People

& the Press. Overall satisfaction with the country's direction has fallen in the past six months, with 43 percent now saying they're satisfied and 52 percent saying they're dissatisfied. That drops from a 55-41 positive split in January, said Pew. A decline among women and minorities.

The number of people who think the country is divided between those who have grown and those who have not steadily and now is at 44 percent - up from 26 percent in 1988. - Just over four in 10 in the new poll thought President Bush was mostly concerned with helping those who have enough, while one in 20 said he was interested in helping those who don't. Four in 10 said he was treating both groups about the same.

The president has pitched his 2002 budget as a way to help all Americans. But just over a third said they were looking forward to getting their income tax rebates, while almost six in 10 said they hadn't thought about it.

Less than half, 44 percent, now say they are in good or excellent financial shape personally, a drop of 8 percentage points from a year ago.

"The economic gains the middle class have made seem to be very much threatened by the credit crunch and by energy costs," said Kohut.

The people who say they have more debt than they can afford to owe have grown from a fifth of Americans in 1992 to almost three in 10 in 2001. More than a third of those who have family incomes of less than $50,000 said they have credit card and other debts that are more than they can afford.

U.S. trade deficit narrows to $32.2 billion in April

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans' demand for foreign-made TVs, toys and clothes waned in April, helping to narrow the U.S. trade deficit. Exports fell for the second month in a row.

The country's trade imbalance shrank to $32.2 billion, a 2.7 percent decrease from March's $33.1 billion deficit, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

Imports, hurt by sagging demand, fell more than exports did in April, narrowing the trade gap. The two-month drop in exports reflected the impact of sluggish demand overseas.

This is really a sign of weakness in the economy, said Paul Kasriel, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co.

On Wall Street, growing anticipation that the Federal Reserve will cut interest rates this week this year to revive the U.S. economy helped lift stocks higher. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 68.10 to 10,715.43.

In April, imports of goods and services declined by 2.2 percent to $119.1 billion, while exports dipped by 2 percent to $86.9 billion.

Stocks rally on Fed report; rate cut anticipated

NEW YORK (AP) - Wall Street sent stocks higher again Thursday, encouraged by a better-than-expected regional Federal Reserve report and growing anticipation of an interest rate cut next week.

The market was unable to hold all of its gains, however. Analysts attributed the pullback to the fact that many companies, particularly in the tech sector, still can't say when their business will improve.

"Nothing fundamental has changed. This is more or less bargain hunting," said Barry Hyman, chief investment strategist at Chrenkrantz King Nussbaum.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 68.10 to 10,715.43, falling back from a gain of as much as 112 points but extending a 50-point gain

Wednesday. Broader stock indicators were higher for a third straight session. The Nasdaq composite index rose 27.52 to 2,058.76, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 19.35 to 1,237.04.

The Fed survey found that business outlooks are improving in the Philadelphia area, although orders and employment levels remain weak. While the news wasn't enough to ease all of investors' doubts, it provided an incentive to buy in a market that has been under pressure for weeks.

The resulting rally was broad, with especially strong gains in financial stocks, including Dow components American Express, which rose 94 cents to $40.40, and J.P. Morgan Chase, up $1.52 at $47.12.

Zions officer allegedly possessed drugs, gave alcohol to daughter

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The chief financial officer of Zions Bancorp was arrested Thursday after he allegedly got his 15-year-old daughter drunk.

Shari deputies also say they found methamphetamine in the Holladay home of Dale Moroni Gibbons, 41.

Both the child abuse and drug charges are second degree felonies.

Following an emergency call to the home, paramedics found Gibbons' 15-year-old daughter drunk and nearly unconscious.

When deputies arrived, Gibbons said he had taken the girl to a nightclub and allowed her to drink several vodka cocktails, KSTU television reported. During the arrest Thursday, investigators also seized a small amount of the drug methamphetamine in Salt Lake County Sheriff's office said.

Bank officials said the charges were inconsistent with Gibbons' performance at work, but they have suspended Gibbons while the matter is investigated.

"We are stunned and saddened by these allegations," said bank president Harris H. Simmons. "As a company, we have absolutely no tolerance for the type of conduct alleged."

Stores

Continued from E1. climate for small business success is getting a bit better, according to a new quarterly report from the National Federation of Independent Business.

The report notes that optimism among small business owners is on the rise, after being down for much of the year, and that more 'shop owners expect higher sales this year.

All of these stores are fighting to stay in business as they lure retailers with more money, more clients, more of everything, more to their turf. But it hasn't been easy.

Small businesses have been on the front lines of the sputtering U.S. economy as more consumers think twice about buying a tall Mocha Java, or a new book. Add to that the growing presence of mega-stores.

According to the Small Business Administration, the percentage of retail businesses with more than one location has gradually ticked upward, from 6.4 percent in 1992 to 6.8 percent in 1997, the latest available figures.

The remaining percentage are single-shop operations. In that same time, the percentage of retail workers employed at chain stores jumped to 67.3 percent, from 59.9 percent in 1992, according to the SBA.

"In this company, franchisees run their stores as they see fit, tinkering with recipes, setting their own prices, and doing what they want to do."

Malanczuk declined to say whether the consolidated plant would start putting out larger-size wafers. Such a retooling would be expensive.

Millennium's first solar eclipse

Wearing protective glasses, a Zambian watches the progress of a solar eclipse in Lusaka, Zambia, Thursday.

Serbian prepare for Milosevic's extradition

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — After years, hailing the glories of Slobodan Milosevic's rule, Serbs are now being told of Kosovo atrocity victims dumped into mass graves, as the media prepare them for what seems inevitable: the former leader's extradition to the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

Police, now under the control of pro-democracy authorities, have discovered at least two mass graves containing a total of about 1,000 bodies of Kosovo Albanians, apparent victims of Milosevic's crackdown in Serbia's southern province.

"This shows that Milosevic and his gang were no patriots, but plain murderers," said Dusan Mihajlovic, Serbia's minister in charge of the police. "This will help the Serb public realize the monstrosity of the former regime."

The recent discovery of the mass graves — one near Belgrade containing mostly corpses of women and children, as well as three heads without bodies — coincided with the efforts by Serbia's new rulers to pass a law that would allow Milosevic's extradition to the war crimes court in The Hague, Netherlands.

Over 3,000 ethnic Albanians are still missing after Milosevic's crackdown in Kosovo prompted a 78-day NATO air war in 1999. Mass graves located far from the province and inside Serbia proper may be a clue to what happened to those victims.

Police have said Milosevic ordered his security confidants to remove the bodies from Kosovo, fearing they could be used as evidence in any future war crimes prosecution.

The latest in a series of media revelations against Milosevic came Thursday as the respected Vreme weekly carried a story by a Yugoslav army reservist who claimed to have driven 10 freezer truckloads of bodies from Kosovo to a copper smelter in Bor, eastern Serbia.

"Soon, I discovered that I was driving corpses," the soldier, who was identified only as Nikola, reportedly said. "They might have been burned in the copper furnace."

The revelations are critical in shattering the illusions created under Milosevic's 13-year rule. A large majority of Serbs were convinced by his propaganda that they were the real victims of the Balkan wars. Milosevic's war campaigns in Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia and Kosovo were approved by most of the Serb public.

People all over Africa gather for spectacular sight

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Street kids in rags, wealthy Zambians on cell phones and hordes of tourists cheered Thursday as the last twinkle of sun disappeared, leaving only a fiery halo around the moon as the first total solar eclipse of the millennium streaked across southern Africa.

"It's mystical," whispered Odette Malowa, a 22-year-old Congolese woman living in Lusaka.

In Zambia, eclipse day was declared a national holiday and thousands of people gathered for barbecues at Lusaka's airport or listened to rock music at the University of Zambia.

"With little more to offer than a long, grassy hill facing west, the area around a shopping center parking lot turned into an eclipse park."

The hill was covered with thousands of people — backpacking foreign tourists and panhandling street kids, picknicking families and businessmen chatting on cell phones. A few Zambian soap opera stars gave autographed pictures of themselves to screaming women.

A few children squeezed into the beds of pickup trucks and stared at the sky through protective eyeglasses during the agonizing 90-minute wait as the moon slowly slid across the sun.

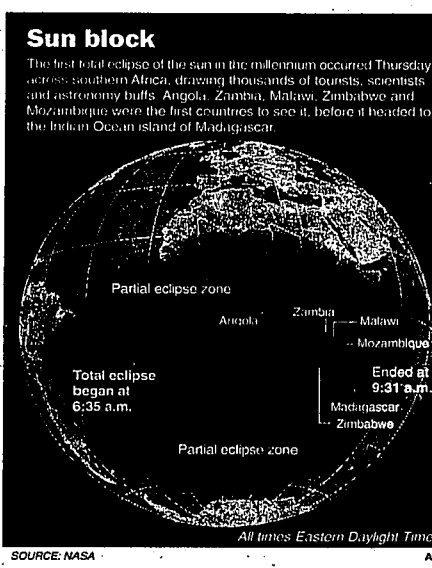

"It's getting dark. I hope it doesn't get dark forever," David Phiri, a 20-year-old accounting student, said, laughing. "Somebody was saying we probably won't go to hell because we are being cleansed."

Phiri gave an excited commentary, watching in awe as the last glint of sunlight combined with the halo around the moon to create a celestial diamond ring.

"I wish I could take that and give it to my girlfriend, just put it on her finger," he said.

Some in the crowd began a countdown. Others jumped to their feet and began cheering, whistling and setting off firecrackers in a rumble of noise that lasted the entire three-minute-and-14-second phenomenon.

The sun finally disappeared, leaving the moon outlined by the flaming ring of the sun's corona. The temperature plunged and Lusaka was cast into the shadow of dusk.

Iraq says alleged U.S.-Britain attack will not go unpunished

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq warned that an alleged U.S.-British airstrike on a soccer field "will not go unpunished," the official Iraqi News Agency reported Thursday.

Iraq claimed that an allied airstrike Tuesday killed 23 people in Tall Afar, 275 miles northwest of Baghdad, but Washington said if there were deaths, they were likely caused by Iraq's own "misdirected ground fire."

"Iraqis will not be terrorized by such criminal acts," Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammed al-Douri, told the agency.

U.S. and British defense officials said a mission was flown over Iraq's no-fly zone Tuesday, but no warplanes fired on any positions.

The Pentagon said Iraqi forces had fired several surface-to-air missiles at allied planes and it appeared that part of at least one of the Iraqi missiles malfunctioned and landed on the soccer field.

"How do the U.S. officials know the missile malfunctioned?" an Iraqi Foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, asked The Associated Press. "Do they have representatives working with our anti-aircraft missiles?"

Lauren Cannon, the leader of visiting American and British activists currently visiting Iraq, said the group will travel to Tall Afar "to see for ourselves who was behind the death."

The newspaper of Iraq's ruling Baath party, Al-Thawra, accused the U.N. Security Council on Thursday of "turning a blind eye to U.S. and British aggression because it is dominated by the United States."

The Security Council imposed sanctions on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

"This new aggression is more proof of America's political and moral bankruptcy," the paper said in an editorial.

Allied aircraft patrol zones over southern and northern Iraq, which were established after the 1991 Persian Gulf War to protect Shiite Muslims rebels in the south and Kurds in the north. British and American jets enforcing the northern zone are based in Turkey.

Iraq does not recognize the no-fly zones and has challenged allied aircraft since December 1998.

Israeli lawmaker wants rid of insults

JERUSALEM (AP) — A rookie lawmaker fed up with brusque discourse in Israel's parliament has circulated a list of 68 insults — including swamp fly, gut-ripper and poodler — that she wants banned under threat of reprimand and suspension.

Colleagues of Ethics Committee chairwoman Colette Avital admit they've misbehaved on occasion, but many say calling in the language cops is too much.

"Parliament is not a manners school," one of the offenders, Tourism Minister Rehavam Zeevi, grumbled Thursday. "It's a place where people argue, get heated up and then go out to the hall and drink coffee together."

Free-wheeling debate goes back to the early days of the Knesset, when Israel's founding fathers would lapse into Yiddish in the heat of battle, branding a rival "vagabond" or "nish gitter!" — roughly meaning "no-goodnik."

Israel's first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion, had such contempt for his political nemesis, then-opposition leader Menachem Begin, that he'd refer to him only indirectly as "the gentleman sitting next to Dr. Bader."

Over the years, Israel's political climate has grown more divisive, pitting Arabs against Jews, religious against secular, immigrants against veteran Israelis. The vitriol has increased accordingly, and speeches are often drowned out by shouting legislators leaping out of their seats, pointing fingers and running about the chamber.

In a debate a year ago, the 120-seat plenum erupted into catcalls when a hard-line Jewish lawmaker, Zvi Hendel, insulted the Muslim prophet Mohammed by asking "Who is this Mohammed anyway?"

"There is more verbal violence now than in the past," said Avital, a longtime diplomat who served as Israel's consul-general in New York and joined parliament in 1999 on the Labor Party ticket.

"The public is getting tired of us," added Avital, who rarely raises her voice.

A survey commission by the Knesset supported the claim. Israelis gave the lawmakers a failing grade of 3.9 out of a possible 10 on average. Fifty percent said they're embarrassed by the parliament, while 17 percent were proud. The poll of 1,145 Israelis had a 2.9 percent margin of error.

Pro-Beijing press criticizes Taiwan U.S. Patriot missile test

HONG KONG (AP) — Taiwan's test firing of U.S. Patriot missiles will heighten tensions with China and could harm already delicate U.S.-Chinese relations, pro-Beijing newspapers said Thursday.

"Taiwan missile test hurts ties with China," China Daily said in a page one headline of its Hong Kong edition — one day after Taiwan said it knocked targets out of the sky with the first firing of the missiles from Taiwan's soil.

China Daily quoted Yu Kei, a Taiwan affairs expert at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, as saying the firing of the Patriots, which are designed to shoot down incoming missiles or aircraft, puts the island in a more precarious position.

Yu was quoted as saying Taiwan's purchase of advanced weapons that could be used against China proves that Taiwan opposes reunification with China.

The two sides split amid civil war in 1949 but Beijing says Taiwan remains a Chinese province that must be reunited with the mainland at some point, even if that requires war. Most Taiwanese have been unwilling to reunite on Beijing's terms, however.

One of China's biggest potential threats to Taiwan is an array of missiles pointed at the island.

Police arrest suspects who allegedly forced passengers to jump to death

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Police have arrested the captain of a cargo boat and a crew member wanted for allegedly forcing more than 80 passengers to jump into the sea to their deaths, officials said Thursday.

Captain Muse Yusuf Nur Sanweh was arrested several days ago, and crewman Abdulkadir Abdi Hassan was arrested Wednesday, police Lt. Ali Jama Mohamed said.

"At least 86 people drowned when more than 150 passengers on the Yemen-bound boat were forced overboard by the crew after the vessel developed engine problems, authorities said. Five survivors later died of malnutrition. Police are looking for five other crew members.

"The intelligence gathering in pursuit of these culprits has been continuing ever since the disaster took place," Mohamed said.

The cargo boat left the port of Bosaso in the northeastern region of Puntland on May 8. Ten days into the trip the crew forced the passengers overboard, witnesses said.

"The crewmen of the boat have used axes, strong canes, and the butt of the gun to force the people to jump into the sea," said Abdulkadir Mohamed Farah, one of the survivors. He said he swam for nine hours before making it to shore.

EU security chief gets talks restarted in Macedonia

SKOPIJE, Macedonia — Pushed by the European Union's security chief, Macedonia's ethnic Albanians and Slavs restarted stalled talks Thursday that could clear the way for NATO troops to disarm rebels in the Balkan country and prevent a full-scale war.

Javier Solana, a former NATO secretary-general, made an unscheduled stop in Skopje on his way to the Mideast a day after President Boris Trajkovski declared negotiations on his peace plan at an impasse.

After meeting with both sides, Solana said he was optimistic progress could still be made on a political agreement to prevent the ethnic conflict from exploding into a full-scale war.

"I think we will be able to solve the problem," he said. "I think that we, all of us will move on forward."

Macedonian officials, who had broken off six days of talks on Wednesday, resumed negotiations after Solana left for Israel.

Air show jet crashes in Lake Erie after collision in Canada

PORT BURWELL, Ontario — Two jets from Canada's military aerobatic team collided Thursday while flying in formation, sending one crashing into Lake Erie, the Canadian military said.

The rescue helicopter crew on a military rescue helicopter pulled two people from the water about an hour later. The condition of the two, believed to be the crew, was not immediately known.

Rescue spots two after the crash and saw a life raft, Canadian Coast Guard Capt. Barry Tolmie said.

Capt. Keith Hoey of the Coast Guard rescue coordination center at Canadian Forces Base Trenton, said the planes, part of the well-known Snowbird team, hit each other while flying in a formation of nine aircraft over Port Burwell, Ontario, 120 miles southwest of Toronto.

Israel to get $74 million in compensation for attacks

GENEVA — Israel will receive $74 million in compensation for costs incurred in Iraqi Scud missile attacks during the Gulf War, but a U.N. panel rejected most of a $1 billion military-related claim.

"The commission very early decided that military costs of participating in the Desert Storm operation would not be compensated, but a number of members states went ahead in spite of this," U.N. Compensation Commission spokesman Joe Sills said Thursday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Wisely, and slow. They stumble that run fast." - Shakespeare

If you play quickly to the first trick, you'd be well advised to slow down at trick two. Sometimes a thoughtful play at trick two can erase a blunder at trick one.

Comported by West's spade lead, South impulsively played dummy's nine and held the trick. At trick two, he sealed his fate by leading a low club from dummy.

Desperately, South tried a low heart from dummy, his jack losing to West's queen. When West switched to diamonds, South could no longer win more than eight tricks.

For more flexibility, South should play dummy's spade king at trick one. Since dummy had plenty of entries and South had few, it was correct technique for South to save his Q-J of spades for a sure entry.

South compounded his problems at trick two. Instead of leading a low club from dummy, he should cash the ace. When East discards on the second club, South can safely duck a club, cinching four club winners and nine tricks.

Might South have refused to win East's club jack to save his game? Yes, but at duplicate, this would guarantee a poor score whenever clubs were 3-2.

Bridge score table showing North, South, East, West hands and scores for various tricks.

Vulnerable: North-South Dealer: North The bidding: North East South West 1♣ Pass 1NT Pass 3NT All pass Opening lead: Spade deuce

BID WITH THE ACES South holds: ♦A762 ♠Q7 ♣QJ5 ♠10843 ANSWER: Four spades. Partner promises four-card support and about 18 support points. You should have a reasonable play for game.

The DNA LifePrint Program will be here this Friday • 3PM - 7PM AND SATURDAY • 10AM - 6PM
 Gary's Westland Motors and Gary's Westland Hyundai & Truck Center

This is a safe, non-invasive process. A DNA sample is taken by gently rubbing the inside of your child's mouth for several seconds, and then placed in a testative solution. Your child's DNA is given to you. There is no Databasing. We are very proud to bring this program to the Magic Valley in hopes of protecting our children against violence. This program is free to the public. We invite you to participate in this very important program.
