of the fleet "more efficiently" than regular Air Force units.

"If they are going to reduce costs, do it where it's least efficient, in Texas and South Dakota," Crapo said.

The Air Force says the B-1Bs cost more than $200 million apiece. There originally were 104; 93 remain. The last one was built in 1986.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld is asking Congress for authority to retire 33 of the 93 B-1Bs and consolidate the fleet at just two bases - Dyess Air Force Base in Texas and Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota.

The Pentagon's chief financial officer, Dow Zickman, said this would save $165 million in 2002, and that the savings would be used by the Air Force to modernize the remaining B-1B fleet.

The Air Force said Mountain Home's B-1B squadron is made up of seven planes supported by about 300 military and civilian personnel. Crapo, however, said he's heard reports that up to 550 jobs could be lost in the shuffle.

"That's obviously going to have an impact on local housing and business," Crapo said.

The B-1B nicknamed the "Lancer," originally was built as a long-range nuclear bomber but was converted during the 1990s to a strictly non-nuclear role.

The first version of the B-1 - called the B-1A - was built in 1977 after the prototype bombers were built. Flight tests of B-1As continued through 1981, when President Reagan took office and ordered production of an improved variant, the B-1B, which is the version flying today.

To offset some of the military and economic setbacks taking the B-1Bs out of Idaho, Crapo and the rest of the state's delegation are pushing for the establishment of the Air Force's state-of-the-art fighter, the F-22, at Mountain Home.

Mountain Home is one of five bases being considered as a site for the new aircraft, although it is not the Air Force's first pick. The No. 1 spot is Langley Air Force Base in Virginia.

If Mountain Home were picked, the first new aircraft would arrive in 2004. The new wing of 72 planes would replace 18 F-15Cs now stationed at Mountain Home - an increase of 54 aircraft. The environmental impact statement for the F-22s would bring an addition of 1,200 military and civilian personnel to the base as well as the construction of additional facilities and a new runway.

The 366th Air Wing based at Mountain Home is currently made up of seven B-1Bs, as well as F-15 and F-16s, and employs about 5,000 military and civilian personnel.

The proposal for the B-1s is part of the Bush administration's $329 billion defense budget for 2002 that also proposes retiring all 50 Peacekeeper long-range nuclear missiles and planning an unspecified number of base closings in 2003. The budget was submitted to Congress on Wednesday.

Rainbows to move their camp elsewhere. But recognizing the probable logistic impossibility of moving the huge gathering on such short notice, Boyer asked the Rainbows to promise to leave the land as they'd found it.

Barry Adams, who did most of the talking for the Rainbows, said that didn't sound unreasonable.

"Whatever the Great Spirit gives me the way of power to keep that promise, I will do," he said.

Although Wednesday's meeting brought no final resolution to the problem, it got the Rainbows and members of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribe talking, McConaughy said. He said he hoped to return with the tribal elders Friday afternoon to help decide if and where the Rainbows could move or what steps could be taken to ease the tribe's concerns.

As of Wednesday afternoon, an estimated 3,600 or so Rainbows had gathered at campsites that were scattered throughout the forest up to two miles from the group's parking area, said U.S. Forest Service law enforcement officer B.J. Wren. As many as 25,000 people could show up for the gathering, which is expected to climax on July 4.

Along with possible problems with salmon, the tribes are also worried about damage to sacred and archeological sites in and

Man finds fiancee, kids dead in garage

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) - A woman and her three young children found dead in their home's garage by the mother's fiancee were victims of carbon monoxide poisoning, a medical examiner said Wednesday.

"There was a car sitting in the garage with the motor running," Heise said. "The bodies were on the floor of the garage, said Charles Garrett, regional pathologist for South Carolina's medical examiner. Garrett said there was no evidence of any other injuries to Robin Parker, 33, and the three children, who were dead in sleep.

Authorities have not yet determined whether the deaths were accidental or the result of a murder-suicide.

Daughter

did what we did," Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson said during a break.

Earlier Wednesday, McGuckin's eldest daughter testified against her. Erinna McGuckin - who left the family home last year to join the Navy - was the source of information that led Bonner County sheriff's deputies to arrest her mother.

JoAnn McGuckin, who arrived at the courthouse in chains, has been in jail since her arrest, though Magistrate Judge Debra Heise had ordered her release on her own recognizance weeks ago. McGuckin, 46, refuses to accept release conditions that include supervision during any contact with her children.

The children, ages 8 to 16, have been living in a foster home since coming out of their home June 2. They have visited their mother once in jail.

Heise is considering whether the case warrants criminal charges and a trial.

McGuckin testified that the family home "was unsanitary. It was squalid."

The family drew water from a small lake on their property, used the toilet or shower for toilet had little food and did not do laundry in the winter, she said. And her mother would spend some of the family's limited money on liquor.

"When she was dead drunk, she was usually more affectionate to all of us than when she was sober," Erinna McGuckin testified.

She also said the property was overrun by more than a dozen dogs and that mice and other wild animals often came into the decrepit house. "Mice would crawl into bed with me when I was sleeping," she testified. "They'd run around under our covers."

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Bryce Powell, the daughter said food was available, but the family would go 36 hours between meals.

Dairy

Department of Ag said we should do. There are advisers working with us, and we're doing what they suggested."

But the odors have not stopped, and local and state officials are taking the next step by filing the lawsuit.

The action will be filed in 5th District Court by the IDEQ, Department of Agriculture and Twin Falls County, collectively, Loebbs said.

What the lawsuit will ask for has not been determined, Loebbs said.

The conclusion is that the state and the county are going to file a lawsuit. It's going to be drafted in such a way so the county can join in, and we'll probably proceed on more than one particular act. How the words will be done will be difficult," Loebbs said. "My goal is not to fine the guy and not to put him out of business, but to solve the problem. I think we need to structure the suit so it strives for some injunctive relief so we can solve the problem out there."

According to state law, two things could happen to Hagfliger's dairy:

- He could be fined $10,000 a day until the odor problem is solved.
- The dairy could be shut down.

Loebbs said state officials are drafting the lawsuit, which should be ready for filing within a few days. County officials will then review the lawsuit and make any necessary additions, Loebbs said.

"The overall feeling is everybody is determined to solve this problem," Loebbs said. "Nothing was excited about putting Mr. Hagfliger out of business. That's not the goal. The goal is to get the problem solved in the most efficient way we can do it."

In the meantime, Hagfliger's neighbors, along with local and state officials, have scheduled a meeting tonight in Filer to discuss the recent developments.

Grinstead is scheduled to speak at the meeting. He has supported shutting Hagfliger's dairy down until the odor problems are solved.

Also, Pat Takasugi, director of the Department of Agriculture, is scheduled to attend the meeting.

Edwin Thabeta, of the South African based youth organization LoveLife, moderates a panel discussion on the role of world youth in HIV/AIDS prevention, Wednesday at the United Nations during the U.N. AIDS conference in New York.

U.N. AIDS conference closes with agreement

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In the first global approach to battling a disease, the United Nations adopted an AIDS blueprint Wednesday setting tough targets for reducing infection rates and protecting the rights of people with the virus.

Under pressure from Islamic countries, Western nations were forced to back away from specifically naming the most vulnerable populations, including homosexuals and prostitutes. But experts said Wednesday that the heart of the document was in the details of the plan, not the language.

"It's not a perfect text but it is a good text, action-oriented and practical," said Australian Ambassador Penny Wensley, who co-chaired negotiations on the draft.

With the rap of a gavel and a round of applause, the 16-page Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS was adopted by consensus by the 189-nation General Assembly, it calls for accelerating efforts to find a cure for disease that has taken more than 22 million lives.

"After today, we shall have a document setting out a clear battle plan for the war against HIV/AIDS, with clear goals and a clear timeline," U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said Wednesday. "It is a blueprint from which the whole of humanity can work in building a global response to a truly global challenge."

The three-day U.N. conference brought together over 3,000 health experts, scientists, lawmakers, aid workers and people living with the virus.

First detected in homosexual men in the United States 20 years ago, the AIDS virus has exploded across the developing world, with more than 36 million people now infected. More than two-thirds of those afflicted are in Africa — most of them women.

A last-minute compromise on the declaration came after Western nations reluctantly agreed to drop language specifically naming groups vulnerable to the disease — including homosexuals and prostitutes — because it was offensive to some Muslim nations.

Instead the new language refers to those who are at risk due to "sexual practice" and "livelihood," and prisoners as those made vulnerable through "institutional location."

Egyptian diplomat Amr Rashdy, who led the push to change the language, said his country could live with the final document. "The outcome is fair and we accept it," he told The Associated Press.

Rumsfeld: Trim funds for defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Wednesday submitted to Congress a $329 billion defense budget for 2002 that proposes cutting the Air Force fleet of B-1B bombers, retiring all 50 Peacekeeper long-range nuclear missiles and planning an unspecified number of base closings in 2003.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said the administration's amended 2002 defense budget is $18.4 billion more than President Bush had proposed in February and $33 billion more than the current defense budget.

"If we are to extend this period of peace and prosperity, we need to prepare now for the new and different threats we will face in the decades ahead and not wait until they finally emerge," Rumsfeld said.

Critics in Congress quickly accused the administration of playing politics, noting that the only two B-1B bases left would be in the decaying Bush's home state of Texas and South Dakota, the home state of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

Rumsfeld told a Pentagon news conference that the $18.4 billion increase is the biggest for any year since the mid-1980s. Nonetheless Rumsfeld acknowledged that the increase does not meet all of the military service's needs for 2002 and leaves some important areas of military operations on a trend line that is "still negative."

He blamed the Clinton administration for allowing spending in critical areas to slip year by year.

"The coasting went on too long," he said. Doy Zakheim, the Pentagon's chief financial officer, told reporters that although the administration has no plans to close military bases in the coming year it hopes to persuade Congress that bases should be closed in 2003.

He mentioned no specific bases and said the Pentagon was in the midst of developing a plan for how to proceed on this politically sensitive subject. "We are all across the map on this," he said.

Panel backs hike in foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel endorsed spending $15.2 billion in foreign aid next year, amid disputes over the size of funds to wage drug wars in South America, congressional meddling in foreign policy and President Bush's ban on aid to foreign pro-abortion groups.

The $15.2 billion for fiscal 2002, which begins Oct. 1, represents a 2 percent increase over the current year and matches Bush's request.

The proposal cleared the House Appropriations foreign operations subcommittee.

As requested by Bush, it would provide $474 million to combat HIV/AIDS overseas, including $100 million for a global trust fund, and $200 million for international disaster assistance. Separately, the House International Relations Committee voted 32-4 to authorize $1.36 billion for international AIDS efforts, including $750 million for the AIDS trust fund. Authorization does not mean the money will be appropriated for spending next year.

The House Appropriation measure undercut other Bush requests: The South American anti-drug plan would get $676 million, $55 million less than Bush sought, and assistance for independent states of the former Soviet Union would total $768 million, $42 million less than this year and $40 million less than Bush wanted.

Some Middle East countries would see changes in their aid package.

Israel, for example, would get $2.04 billion in military financing, up from $1.36 billion, and $720 million in economic assistance, a $120 million decrease. This is part of a 10-year plan for annual cuts of $120 million in economic aid and increases of $60 million in military aid, changes Israel requested.

U.S. contributions

It seems the United States really is miserly when it comes to giving aid to needy countries, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

"For every individual in the United States, our country contributed an average of $3.9 a year in development aid to poor countries in 1998-1999," wrote Isaac Shapiro, director of "the" center's International Budget Project. "This was the third-lowest level of per capita contributions among the 22 countries examined." Denmark, for example, contributed $326 per person.

Overall, President Bush is expected to spend $10.9 billion on development and humanitarian aid next year, down from an average of $13.4 billion in the 1990s.

Funeral of postpartum depression — became a bull's eye for public debate and speculation, sympathy and wrath.

But on this sticky Wednesday morning, Andrea Yates faded into the background, if only for a few hours. Through mundane accounts of party-training exploits, T-ball games and bunk beds, Rusty Yates sketched his children into vivid, distinct people.

"They weren't just some generic children who happened to be mine," he told some 300 family members, co-workers and neighbors. "They were my friends."

By all accounts, few people really knew the children. The eldest, Noah, had just turned 7 in February. The youngest, Mary, was born last November.

Instead of trundling them off to public school, Andrea Yates taught her children their lessons in the family's Spanish-style house. Aside from joining the T-ball league that Rusty coached, the kids played with their parents, mostly, or with one another.

Until this week, none of the Yates clan had set foot inside the Clear Lake Church of Christ, the neighborhood sanctuary that hosted the children's funeral. As far as anybody can tell, the non-denominational Christian family belonged to no particular congregation.

Instead, the Yates kept their religion — like most of their activities — behind closed doors.

"I don't know anything about the children," minister Byron Fike said as he paused on the church's tidy lawn before the service.

But inside, photo collages greeted the mourners. There were glossy shots of puppies, birthday cakes and hot-air balloons; there was one of Noah in the bathtub.

At the altar, grinning photographs glowed on a movie screen overhead as Yates described his brood. Sometimes, lulled by talk of the past, the young father's limbs relaxed, his eyes brightened and a wry chuckle crept into his voice.

But when he'd catch a glimpse into one of his babies' coffins, his voice faltered and his features fell. He'd turn his gaze up into the ceiling beams, heave a deep sigh and — finally — resume his speech.

He talked about Noah, the smart, slightly aloof oldest boy, a bug connoisseur who trapped everything frombumblebees to frogs in a glass jar. Consulting a packet of note cards, Yates bragged about "perfect, precious Paul"; about Mary, his "little princess." There was mischievous

Luke, 2, and John, a clever 5-year-old.

The subtleties dwindled as the ages shrank. By the time Yates got to 6-month-old Mary, about the only thing he could talk about was her smile.

"I'm sorry," he said, bending over her coffin, "that I never got to see you grow up."

Andrea Yates, in her downtown jail cell, faces capital murder charges. Harris County District Attorney Chuck Rosenthal said Tuesday that he'll decide, at some point in the next three weeks, whether to seek the death penalty.

Police say Andrea Yates had waited until her husband left for work that day, then filled the bathtub and drowned the kids, one by one. They say she wrapped four of the bodies in linens and stacked them on a bed. Noah's body was found in the tub.

NATION

Once-mighty river is now just a trickle when it reaches gulf

BOCA-CHICA STATE PARK, Texas (AP) - The once-mighty Rio Grande is so tapped out it doesn't even reach the Gulf of Mexico anymore.

Nine years of drought, a proliferation of choking river weeds and the drawing off of water by farms and municipalities have taken their toll on the nation's second-largest river, which serves as the boundary between Mexico and the United States.

Once a navigable waterway that swelled under bridges and made fertile an otherwise dry coastal plain, the river becomes a mere trickle before it gets to the Gulf of Mexico, disappearing about 300 feet short of its destination in a big expanse of sand.

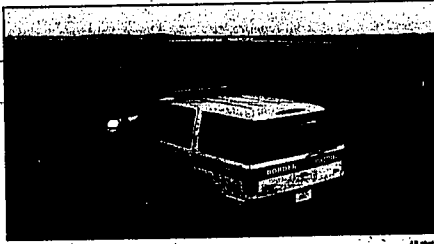

The actual U.S.-Mexico border is now marked by a few sticks in that sand.

"My parents are still alive - Dad is 83, Mom 76. They've never heard of something like this," U.S. Border Patrol agent Reynaldo Guillen said.

Would-be illegal immigrants need only walk up the beach that used to be an estuary to reach the border, where U.S. agents are posted to stop them from coming across. Horses and cattle can wander across, meaning added work for the "tick patrol," federal agents known to hassle animals that may be carrying fever ticks that could devastate U.S. livestock.

The sandbar replaced the river mouth around March and has continued to grow. The river ends in a placid, almost crystalline pool on the Mexican side, so shallow that Mexicans have taken to wading around the water with fishing poles.

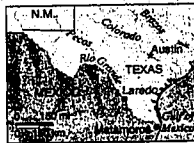

The river carries an approximately 2,000-mile border between Texas and Mexico, serving as a gateway for North American Free Trade Agreement commerce. It serves roughly 1 million people on each side of the border, with agricultural interests and municipalities

A member of the U.S. Border Patrol stands guard on the U.S.-Mexico border near the Rio Grande River Saturday at the beach in Boca Chica, Texas.

Rio runs dry

The waters of the Rio Grande, the river that forms the border between Texas and Mexico, no longer flow into the Gulf of Mexico, due mainly to drought, choking river weeds and the drawing of water.

SOURCE: ESRI AP drawing from the river in a complex system of 1,600 water-rights accounts.

Old photos show a river deep enough and wide enough at its mouth for ocean-going ships. At Brownsville, which is about 10 miles from the Gulf, the water was about 100 feet across decades ago. Now it is down to maybe 15 or 20 feet across. Sometimes it goes dry altogether.

Grain sorghum, cotton and corn fields - mostly on the Mexican side of the border - are withering, in part because of the lack of irrigation water.

For several days in May, water released from the Falcon Dam just south of Laredo did not reach Matamoros, Mexico, the last city to receive Rio Grande water, causing at least 100,000 city taps to run dry. Matamoros officials are now talking about rationing.

At Falcon Dam, the water is so low that the rubble of towns that were flooded when the dam was built in 1953 have emerged from the depths. Some people on the Mexican side have even moved into the homes.

There is no talk of dredging. The official solution seems to be to await a tropical storm or hurricane, for which South Texas is long overdue. Such storms, which tend to occur during the summer and early fall, can provide enough water to fill the Rio Grande and its dams.

The situation for U.S. farmers and municipalities may improve by the end of July, when Mexico is due to release half of the nearly 500 billion gallons of river water it owes the United States under a water-sharing treaty.

Commissioners spar over report

WASHINGTON - Members of the nation's Civil Rights Commission called each other liars. Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris accused the Democratic chairwoman of focusing on her state simply because Al Gore lost.

Partisan sparring was the rule of the day Wednesday as the Senate Rules and Administration Committee heard testimony on the commission's report concerning Florida's presidential election results.

In that report, approved by a 6-2 vote, the commission found that black voters' ballots were disproportionately tossed out. The report suggested widespread violations of the Voting Rights Act.

At Wednesday's hearing, Republican appointee Abigail Thernstrom said the findings were flawed and accused Democratic members of withholding data on the results. Chairwoman Mary Frances Berry, appointed by Democrats, denied the charges.

The commission's six-month investigation of the contested Florida vote found the election was plagued by faulty machinery, problems with access to polling places, faulty purging of voter rolls and a lack of attention by state and county officials to evidence that growing numbers of voters would overwhelm outdated systems.

Author denounces his role attacking Anita Hill

WASHINGTON - An author who strongly criticized Anita Hill after the confirmation of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas has backed off his claims.

David Brock wrote the best-selling 1993 book, "The Real Anita Hill," challenging her allegations of sexual harassment that almost derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

"It was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," Brock says in the August issue of Talk magazine, which ran excerpts from his upcoming book "Blinded by the Right."

Thomas had no comment, said Supreme Court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg.

Forecasters track giant dust cloud moving over Texas

McALLEN, Texas - A huge dust cloud that originated in the Sahara Desert has spread into Texas, impairing visibility and reducing air quality, forecasters said.

The dusty veil stretched from Cuba and the eastern coast of Mexico to South Texas on Tuesday and was expected to reach into North Texas by Thursday. It wasn't expected to pose serious health concerns, forecasters said.

Air currents can carry volcanic ash, smoke from forest fires and other matter long distances, including from as far away as the Sahara Desert, off Africa's west coast, said Skip Ely, a National Weather Service meteorologist. The clouds can travel halfway around the world, usually at an altitude of about 10,000 to 12,000 feet.

Court rules employee deserved compensation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - Going to the restroom is part of the work day and a worker injured during a break deserves compensation, the Arkansas Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday.

The court said Erika Matlock should have received benefits for knee, ankle and back injuries suffered when she fell on a stairway while returning from her work station from a bathroom at Arkansas Blue Cross Blue Shield.

Matlock filed a worker's compensation claim, but the insurance company contended she was not performing employment services when the accident occurred from the station from a bathroom at Arkansas Blue Cross Blue Shield.

The appeals court said Matlock was advancing the employer's interest by returning to work after an authorized or permitted rest period.

LEGAL EASE

Take this simple quiz to see if you're legally healthy.

1. Do you have all of your important personal documents and records on hand and in a secure place, such as a desk, file cabinet or safe deposit box (These include birth, marriage, adoption, divorce, naturalization or immigration, and military discharge papers.)
2. Do you have a basic legal document, such as a will or a trust, which directs what happens to your assets when you die?
3. Do you have the basic legal documents to designate who will make personal decisions and handle your financial affairs in the event you are unable to do this for yourself? (These include power of attorney and health care proxy.)
4. Do you have all of your financial records on hand, in some order, and up to date? (These include tax returns, deeds, insurance policies, investment records, pension records, and bank statements.)
5. Do you know how your assets are titled and why this is a crucial issue?
6. Are your insurance needs met to the extent practical?
7. Are you comfortable that your investments are both safe and productive?
8. Are you receiving all of the public or private benefits to which you are entitled, including Social Security, Medicare, and private pensions? If not, do you know when and where to apply for them?
9. Do you know which changes in your life will require a review of your "legal health" status?
10. Do you have a resource, (i.e. attorney or accountant) in the event you require professional advice or assistance?

Clinton tells high school grads president was toughest role

New York Daily News

NEW YORK - Former President Bill Clinton told students graduating from Manhattan's Professional Performing Arts School that he would gladly trade places with them. He said his two terms in the White House were nothing compared to the thrill of coming of age in the 21st century. "I'd take a chance not to be President again to be 35 or 40 years younger," Clinton, 54, said during the graduation ceremony Tuesday night. "I believe you will live in a time of the greatest peace, prosperity and scientific progress in all history." Clinton agreed to speak at the high school's commencement after senior Sophia Velez hand-delivered an invitation letter to his home in Chappaqua, N.Y. Clapping along to students' gospel songs and elaborate dance routines, he told the 51 graduates to relish their indispensable role in society. "Life is a performance art, not a spectator sport," said Clinton, who basked in cheers from a crowd of 300. "The greatest artists have given not only their genius but a new take on our common humanity." He said he had dreamed of becoming a performer but didn't have the talent to make it as a singer or saxophone player. Turning serious, he called serving as President the toughest role of all. "There are a lot of days when there are only critics in the audience," Clinton said. "I had to remember the script I wrote for this country's future." Parents and students left the graduation gushing over Clinton's common touch and approachability.

Time-tested sources can meet USA's energy needs

Things are changing fast in the electrical industry, but there are still a few unwavering facts that aren't easily appreciated by the general public.

Some of those facts were aired at a conference sponsored by the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry earlier this month in Sun Valley. (In the interests of full disclosure, the publisher of this newspaper sits on IACI's board of directors.)

With electrical supply unable to keep pace with demand, additional generating capacity clearly is needed.

Titled "Idaho's Energy Future: Keeping The Lights On," the conference yielded a number of observations that everyone - including ratepayers - would be wise to keep in mind.

After years of relative stability, recent price changes in the cost of electricity are the free market's attempt to re-establish the commodity's true value. That process will be blunted by price controls ordered last week by federal energy regulators. But, given the political consequences of spiraling prices, some form of price restraints was inevitable.

"Price increases are the signal the market needs to bring new generation into place," said Jan Packwood, who knows a thing or two about electricity pricing because he's the chief executive officer of the Idaho Power Co. With supply unable to keep pace with demand, additional generating capacity clearly is needed. Just as important ly, more transmission capacity also is required.

"The push for electrical deregulation began in the eastern and mid-western states to break the economic advantage that cheap electricity has given the West. Attaining nationwide parity in electricity prices would slow the exodus of energy-dependent companies from states with high power rates."

Alternative energy sources, such as solar power, wind power and biomass, of America's energy needs. Even the most optimistic forecast doesn't predict that figure will exceed 6 percent in the next 20 years. Moreover, it costs money to patch these sources into the power grid.

The moral of the story is that conventional energy sources, such as coal, natural gas and - horrors! - nuclear power, will continue to provide the bulk of America's electricity for the foreseeable future.

As Cyrus Noe, chief executive officer of Energy News Data, told the crowd: "No one in this room will outlive fossil fuels, nor our children, nor our grandchildren, nor our great-grandchildren."

The answer to America's nagging electrical question is obvious: We should develop additional generating capacity from proven sources.

'Motor Voter' law has run off road

More than six months after the 2000 presidential election, Washington has as many election reform ideas as Florida had different kinds of mishandled ballots.

While many agree on the need to replace old voting machines, there is less consensus on the need for improvements "upstream," where the real problem lies.

Missouri has learned the hard way that sloppy voter rolls caused many of the newer-infanous Election Day woes. The deeper we dug into the problem, the more we learned that the National Voter Registration Act of 1993, a.k.a. "motor voter," not only caused sloppy voter rolls, it actually facilitated organized voter fraud.

The enormity of the problem in St. Louis is mind-boggling:

- The number of registered voters threatens to outnumber the voting age population. A total of 247,135 St. Louis residents, dead or alive, are registered to vote compared with the city's voting-age population of 258,532. That translates to a whopping 96 percent registration rate, the envy of even Pyongyang.
- Almost 70,000 St. Louis city residents, or 28 percent of registered voters, are on the inactive voter list. That means one in four eligible St. Louis voters cannot be located by the U.S. Postal Service.
- More than 23,000 people on St. Louis voter rolls are also registered elsewhere in Missouri. Almost 700 of these are registered twice in St. Louis. No fewer than 400 are registered once in the city and twice more elsewhere in the state. Five

CHRISTOPHER S. 'KIT' BOND

Missouri voters are even registered once in the city and three more times elsewhere in the state.

• Though dead for 10 years, St. Louis Alderman Albert "Red" Villa actually registered to vote this spring in the city's mayoral primary. Ritzy Melker, a mixed breed dog, was also registered to vote in St. Louis. And a recent canvass found that hundreds of city voters apparently are mailing in absentee ballots from abandoned buildings and vacant lots.

• An Election Day lawsuit was filed to keep the city polls open late because the plaintiff feared he wouldn't get a chance to vote. Then it turned out the plaintiff was a dead man. When he was replaced by a live U.S. congressional staffer with a similar name, the suit proceeded anyway, even though the staffer had already voted earlier that day. Despite the case's obvious insanity, the judge ordered the polls kept open late, in violation of Missouri law.

You may call me cruel and even discriminatory, but I will persist in trying to limit the voting franchise to human beings who are not dead yet. Clearly the city of St. Louis, like many others, desperately needs help to improve the accuracy of its voter rolls. But current federal law actually complicates those efforts.

For example, the motor voter act blocks states from requiring notarization or another form of authentication on small-in registration cards. Why do we so easily require photo ID to board a plane or to buy beer and cigarettes while leaving the ballot box so undefended?

In addition, once registered, it's almost impossible to get off the lists. Current federal law blocks a person's removal from the voter rolls unless he or she is (1) reported dead, (2) requests removal (3) the U.S. Postal Service returns certified election board mailings to the person as "undeliverable" and the person fails to vote in two successive federal elections.

Congress passed the motor voter bill with the best intentions. Unfortunately, we now have proof that the very mechanism used to boost voter participation has turned the nation's voter rolls into a tangled mess.

In Missouri we saw how motor voter laws paralyzed the St. Louis electorate by its lists invited voter fraud, now, the subject of a federal criminal probe.

In Florida, St. Louis and elsewhere, sloppy maintenance of voter rolls fueled charges of minority disenfranchisement. The legacy of the St. Louis election is reduced the integrity of and confidence in our elections. The best election "reform" Congress can undertake this year is to go back and fix the flaws in the law we passed seven years ago.

LETTER

Hispanics have helped America

The following is in response to a letter to the editor titled "Make Mexico a better country" (June 22).

Hispanics have contributed to the success of our great country at every level. They have helped instill in American society the Hispanic community's commitment to a cohesive family structure, a strong work ethic and an immutable belief that the American dream can be a reality for all. The contributions of Hispanics to the U.S. economic, social and political landscapes are widely recognized and essential to this nation that attracts much of its vitality from the diversity of its people and cultures.

While I applaud the author's suggestion that we treat each other more humanely, poverty is not inherent to specific groups of people. Such generalizations can lead to stereotypes that limit the progress of us all.

Computers might be overated in the America's growth boom

One curiosity of this economic slowdown is that Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan is trying to talk the country through it. For roughly 18 months he has engaged in the quiet exercise of confidence building. Even as the Fed has raised interest rates (in 1999 and 2000) to prevent inflation and cut them (this year) to prevent recession, he has consistently laced his speeches and congressional testimony with glowing appraisals of new technologies and the country's long-term prospects.

Here's how he ended a major speech in May: "With all our concerns about the next several quarters, there is still - in my judgment - ample evidence that we are experiencing only a pause in the investment in a broad set of innovations that has elevated the underlying growth rate in productivity." Despite the convoluted syntax, the message was emphatic: keep the faith.

Productivity is the crux of the matter. From 1973 to 1994, non-farm labor productivity (output per hour worked) rose at an average rate of 1.4 percent annually. From 1995 to 2000, the rate doubled to 2.8 percent. In 2000 the gain was an astounding 4.3 percent. These are huge improvements that inevitably get passed along in higher personal incomes (wages, salaries) or corporate profits. Consider how. With annual productivity gains of 1.5 percent, average incomes take 46 years to double. With 3 percent gains, the doubling occurs in 23 years. There are similar effects on profits and projected federal budget surpluses.

As Greenspan knows, psychology matters - and, to a large extent, today's attitudes about incomes and profits are the creatures of buoyant productivity. If people view the present economic slowdown as only temporary, then they will stay optimistic. But suppose they decide that were flukes, mere artifacts of the economic boom. Then people would become more pessimistic. Stock prices (already down) might plunge further. That means conditions of future profits would decline. Consumer spending might weaken, because people would be less upbeat about income increases. A slump could become self-fulfilling. Greenspan knows this, too.

There are essentially two ways to improve productivity. First, you can cut the cost of producing something by doing it quicker, cheaper or with less waste. Second, you can expand your market or your fixed costs - product development, overhead - are spread over larger sales base. Computer and communications technologies arguably allowed companies to do both. With more information and quicker cycles, control inventories more tightly and can sell to more customers, both at home and abroad.

Greenspan's message is that the optics is real and ongoing. Ample opportunities remain for more improvements in productivity and profits. This implies that the present drop in computer and communications investment won't last. Among economists, Greenspan's position is widely shared. In its latest 10-year forecast, the Congressional Budget Office assumes average annual productivity growth of 2.7 percent.

All this sounds plausible - but it might not be true. The best-known doubter is economist Robert Gordon of Northwestern University. Gordon has argued that computers and the Internet don't compare with many earlier new technologies (railroads, electricity, automobiles) in their impact on living standards. In addition, he contends that recent productivity growth has been skewed upward by the economic boom. This is possible.

Labor productivity - the statistic - is long division: economic output divided by labor input (measured by hours worked). During a boom, fixed costs (and the hours they represent) are spread over more sales. Productivity benefits. Once the boom collapses, extra productivity gains vanish. Ironically, computers and communications equipment may compound this effect. These sectors experienced huge productivity gains. Chips and networks got much faster. The improvements counted heavily in overall productivity statistics, because computers and software represented nearly 20 percent of economic growth from 1995 to 2000, says Commerce Department economist Barbara Fraumeni. (Now the computer slump reverses this effect. In the first quarter of 2001 productivity dropped at a 1.2 percent annual rate.)

Who's right in this debate? The answer is no one knows. But Greenspan is right in believing that companies have over-invested in computers and communications networks. Pure technology may have reached ahead of practical applications. In times of rapid change, uncertainty and disagreement are normal. Greenspan is right to try to put his spin - an honest view reflecting his own analysis and experience - on the present confusion.

Optimism deserves the benefit of the doubt, because if people act on their worst fears, the Fed's interest-rate cuts will have scant chance of averting a recession. But all therapies have limits. Although they can help us cope with exaggerated dangers, they cannot protect us from stubborn realities. If the boom left no consumers and businesses overextended, no amount of talk will prevent a painful reckoning.

OPINION

Farewell, bluesman John Lee Hooker

The great blues musician John Lee Hooker died a week ago today. The facts of his life were often clouded, as much by him as by anyone else. This is a trademark of the blues, stretching back to pioneers like Charlie Patton and Robert Johnson. The blues is myth.

Hooker made an imprint on a diverse set of musicians from Eric Clapton, Carlos Santana and British bands, such as the Rolling Stones and the Animals (who did covers of his songs), to the modern blues practitioner Robert Cray. The blues is power.

And like other old-line blues artists, his royalties were ripped off, and he was credited for songs he wrote. The blues is sacrifice.

But that Hooker made it through and that he lived long enough to recoup lost revenues testify to the endurance of the slight man with the panther's growl of a voice.

It's only fitting that Hooker was born near Clarksdale, Miss. For it is in Clarkey that the singer Bessie Smith died, and where you can find the fabled crossroads of Highways 61 and 49. It is there, the myth goes, that a mediocre guitar player named Robert Johnson sold his soul to the devil in order to lay his on his strings in the jukes of the Delta.

Hooker was born in 1917, at a time when lynchings of black folks were not uncommon. And in Mississippi, Jim Crow was the norm. He was one of 11 children of a sharecropper and Sunday preacher, William, and his wife, Minnie. Hooker was small for his age and was plagued with a stutter.

He sang gospel in his dad's church, but the elder Hooker did not approve of his son's extracurricular guitar strumming and songs that did not reflect the pious life, according to Charles Murray's biography, "The Boogie Man: The Adventures of John Lee Hooker in the American Twentieth Century" (St. Martin's Press, 2000). The young John Lee was not allowed to play that instrument in the house.

His mother and father divorced, and Hooker went to live with his mother and stepfather, Will Moore. Hooker credits Moore with teaching him how to play the guitar, and the two performed at local dances together. At age 14, Hooker ran away to Memphis, to the fabled Beale Street, to seek a life different than working in the fields.

But it didn't happen right away. He made records under different names, scrambling to survive in a cutthroat business with a long history of ripping off uneducated artists. He was Birmingham Sam and Delta John, Johnny Lee and Texas Slim, among other guises. Always moving, always touring, when he was hot and when his career was cold, Hooker played the blues.

He was the progenitor and the proselytizer, the heretic and the prophet. Songs like "Crawlin' King Snake," "It Serves Me Right to Suffer," "T.B. Sheets" and "House Rent Boogie" were the blues that reflected the African-American experience.

His artistry also told of the joys and pains lived by those like him who came from the Deep South to the industrialized urban North. His songs had the message that things were hard for black people, no matter where they sojourned. John Lee is reported to have worked on an auto assembly line in 1940s Detroit.

And like the prodigal son, he faded away and yet was rediscovered more than once. Finally, he enjoyed the respect and stature as the statesman of the blues in his later years.

Artists like Los Lobos, Bonnie Raitt, Santana and B.B. King recorded songs with him, and the albums these couplings produced did well in the '80s and '90s. He was inducted in 1991 into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and was conferred the Lifetime Achievement Award at the Grammys last year. He did work on a couple of movie soundtracks.

But even if he never saw a nickel of his music, Hooker would have kept on playing. He was that ornery and that committed. As he himself wrote in "Boogie Children": "It's in him, and it's got to come out."

In "Burning Hell," Hooker reiterated the existentialism underscoring many of his songs and defied the teachings of his Baptist minister father. A line of it goes, "Ain't no heaven, ain't no burning hell, when I die, where I go, nobody know."

Wherever he has gone, ornery John Lee Hooker is forever committed to the blues.

Other energy is do-able now

While our politicians are unwilling and afraid to respond to me, at least Joe Morgans' letter attacking me is willing to spell out his mistakes in a public forum (The Times-News, June 25).

Joe starts with the usual attack, "What's the correlation between fear and nuclear energy? Given Dr. Rickard's podiatry background, is his letter's information worthwhile?"

Well, Joe, I think we should look at the information, not attack the messenger. I hear, even if a guy is a carpenter, they sometimes have some thoughts worth sharing. While I'll turn the other cheek on your personal attack, I must correct some of the misinformation in your letter.

When I support nuclear power and state, "That's because there are no air emissions from a nuclear power plant."

Sorry, Joe, that is not true. As a member of the Centers for Disease Control's advisory panel for Idaho's nuclear facility, I can give you all sorts of documents on the problems with the filters that try to contain these deadly radioactive air emissions. In fact, The Times-News court-ordered Blue Ribbon Panel agreed with my testimony and documents when they called for testing the documented flaws in these nuclear filters.

When I recently asked Congressman Simpson, on live PBS Dialo, why he supports energy research in half, Simpson gave no answer. Instead, he spoke for 10 minutes on how important alternative energy is to him. No explanation of the budget cut.

On May 25, all of our four federal politicians wrote to the Pocatello paper claiming to have "held alternative energy as a priority for years."

I asked them for proof but no response yet. These politicians all take money from nuclear, oil and coal businessmen. They are vulturing Idaho for more nuclear front-line duty, while they smile and tell you that "alternative energy is their priority."

Mr. Morgans, you forgot to mention the hydrogen fuel storage we can create from our sewage, for clean energy. Why not convert all of America's sewage plants to clean energy providers?

Why not build a million wind-mills and solar panels in Idaho by rechanneling the nuclear subsidies? Mass production lowers cost. Why not aim for 80 percent clean energy in 10 years?

Bush wants to accelerate down the dead end road we are on. Alternative energy is do-able now. Our children's health depends on our wisdom.

Privacy concerns arise as interactive TV takes hold

Knight Ridder News Service

The next battle over electronic privacy may well center on your television set.

The ability of interactive set-top boxes, personal video recorders and other devices to collect information about your viewing habits — and to match that data with your age, occupation, income and other personal information — is the focus of a report released Tuesday by the Washington-based Center for Digital Democracy, "TV That Watches You: The Frying Eyes of Interactive Television."

The data collection is possible because cable and satellite set-top boxes are becoming two-way devices that combine TV, Internet and computer into one technology — making it possible, perhaps, for you to click on and purchase a dress you see on, say,

"Sex and the City."

"Every show watched, every ad viewed, every click and every download becomes fodder for the compilation of data and the creation of user profiles," the report said. "The same technologies that threaten privacy on the Internet are now being adopted by the U.S. television industry."

Such data collection will allow advertising to be targeted at individual households. Instead of seeing a Pampers ad, a single man might see ads for beer or sports cars.

Other businesses, such as insurance companies, might even use the data to assess whether individuals are risk-takers or risk-averse, researchers from the public interest group said.

Interactive TV technology, because it is so new, affects very few families now. In addition, the 1984 Cable Communications Policy Act prohibits cable companies from collecting personal information without a customer's consent except for legitimate business activity involving cable service.

The law also prohibits cable companies from sharing the information without the customer's consent.

That federal law is one of the toughest privacy statutes, the report said — but it questioned whether the law was being enforced and noted that it does not apply to satellite, wireless or telephone technologies.

"This report is an early warning for the public on interactive TV and privacy, which is an issue that is flying under the radar screen of consumers and policy makers," said Jeff Chester, executive director of the Center for Digital Democracy.

Bears maul Twin Falls in sweep

By Holly Key
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In a battle of two teams headed in opposite directions, the Bear Lake Bears shut down the Twin Falls Cowboys American Legion A team 16-3 and 9-6 on Wednesday.
The Bears (4-1 Area C, 9-5 overall), runners up at last weekend's Donnelley Sports American Legion Invitational at Bruin Field totaled 21 hits in the doubleheader sweep.

The losses dropped Twin Falls to 0-8 in the league, 1-18 on the season.
In Game 1, both teams went errorless until the bottom of the fifth when the visitors bobbled a grounder. Although Twin Falls was perfect in the field and racked up nine hits, the Cowboys ran into pitching problems and couldn't string together any clutch hits.
“We hit the ball OK,” Twin Falls coach A.J. Watson said. “We just got down in a hole so bad it didn't do us any good.”

In the second game, the Cowboys actually held a 3-0 lead after two innings on a Chris Maxfield double and RBI singles by Cody Barnes and Todd Rehbein.
But the Bears answered with six in the third on three hits and three walks. Twin Falls managed

Twin Falls outfielder A.J. Stone dives for the ball in the second inning against Bear Lake on Wednesday at Bruin Field. Stone missed the ball and the Cowboys gave up nine runs to the Bears on route to a 16-3 loss.

NEW YORK — Jerry Krause stole the spotlight from Michael Jordan at the NBA draft on Wednesday, dealing his best player — Elton Brand — to the Clippers for unproven 18-year-old center Tyson Chandler.
On a night when high school seniors were chosen first, second, fourth and eighth, the crowd at Madison Square Garden let out an astonished howl when commissioner David Stern announced the Clippers-Bulls trade.
It was the surprise moment of a night that saw Jordan make history by becoming the first NBA executive to select a high school player overall as the Washington Wizards chose 19-year-old Kwame Brown of Glyn Academy in Brunswick, Ga.

Minico, Burley break out the wood

Ten teams, two fields highlight tournament

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — As long as the Minico Spartans are going through all the trouble of hosting a 10-team American Legion tournament, head coach Russ Wright figures his team may as well go out and give the home crowd something to cheer about.
“We're going to try to win it,” Wright said.
In order for his team to come out on top of the fourth annual Rupert Wood Bat Invitational, which kicks off this morning at Warburton and Bobcat fields, the veteran coach said his team will have to cut down on errors.
Or, in other words, “Not do what we did (Tuesday night).”
Minico fell to Twin Falls 11-2 and 7-0 Tuesday in a doubleheader in which the Spartans committed six errors, resulting in five Cowboy runs in the first game.

But Wright isn't worried.

Roddick wins; Sampras escapes at Wimbledon

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The future of American tennis arrived on Centre Court at Wimbledon, and the reign of Pete Sampras nearly became part of the past.
With a charismatic mix of youthful cool and zeal, 18-year-old Andy Roddick looked right at home on the sport's most hallowed ground, beating talented Swede Thomas Johansson in the second round Wednesday, 7-6 (1), 6-1, 4-6, 7-6 (3).
Sampras, playing on Court 1 a few hours later, nearly fell victim to one of the greatest upsets in Grand Slam history before beating obscure Briton Barry Cowan 6-3, 6-2, 6-7 (5), 4-6, 6-3.
“It definitely got the heart going,” Sampras said.
Cowan, 26, was an unlikely candidate to endanger Sampras' bid for a record eighth Wimbledon title. With a 5 o'clock shadow and disheveled hair, the left-handed Englishman looks like he belongs in a rugby scrum rather than on a tennis court. He has a 4-18 career record, a ranking of 265th and no tournament titles to 63 for Sampras.

At Wimbledon
Chief look at what happened Wednesday, the third day of the Wimbledon tennis championships:
Weather: Plenty of sunshine with variable clouds. High 73 degrees, the coldest day of the tournament.
Attendance: 41,146, a record for the first Wednesday. Last year on the third day it was 38,837. The total of 121,798 for the first three days is a record.
Seeded winners
Men: No. 1 Pete Sampras, No. 4 Marat Safin, No. 6 Tim Henman, No. 8 Juan Carlos Ferrero, No. 13 Roger Federer.
Women: No. 4 Jennifer Capriati, No. 5 Serena Williams, No. 8 Justine Henin, No. 10 Elena Dementieva, No. 12 Magdalena Maleeva, No. 15 Sandrine Testud.
Seeded losers
Men: No. 11 Thomas Johansson, to Arky Roddick.
Women: No. 13 Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, to Lilla Osterloh.

Pete Sampras returns to Britain's Barry Cowan during their second-round men's singles match Wednesday on Wimbledon's No. 1 Court.

Latham touney tees off today

By Kevin Hall
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The “giant” of a golf tournament is here.
The 13th Annual Latham Match Play Championship, which starts today and runs through Sunday at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course, continues to be one of the premier amateur golf tournaments in the West.
Muni PGA pro Mike Hamblin said he expects this year's tournament to be nothing less than extraordinary.
“It's something special,” he said. “This is like a (PGA) Tour event.”
A field of 272 golfers will tee off today vying for a part of nearly $80,000 in prize money.
Though some of the more familiar names are missing, notably the winners of the last four men's titles — Preston Hafer and Tracy Frank. Hafer had won the tourney four times out of the last seven years.
Hamblin said both golfers had prior commitments.
That leaves a wide-open field in the men's championship flight, headed up by No. 1 seed James Milam, of Idaho Falls. Milam, a senior at Princeton University in the fall, said he feels no pressure coming in as the one to beat.
“You just have to play your game,” he said. “I played here as a junior two years ago. (The course) is in great shape. The greens are fast and the rolls are true.”
“I'm just going to try to play my game.”
Milam drew 16th seed Jason Hunteker in today's opening round. The winner will face either No. 9 Jeff Burnham or No. 8 Michael Row.
Third-seed Bob Lutz is the inaugural champion of the Idaho Golf Association Men's Senior Amateur Tournament last week in Eagle. Lutz, a former Sun Valley resident now living in Jerome, is looking forward to trying the match play format.
“I guess the accuracy of iron shots is the most important point here,” he said. “I can't say I've had an awful lot of success with match

Braves win sixth straight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chipper Jones drove in three runs, and Odlis Perez allowed two earned runs as the Atlanta Braves moved into first place in the NL East with a victory over the slumping Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday.

MLB

The Braves, who trailed the Phillies by eight games on June 1, have won six straight, sweeping the New York Mets and Philadelphia on the road. The nine-time defending division champs are in first place for the first time since beating Cincinnati on opening day.

The Phillies, who tied the Chicago Cubs for the worst record in the majors last season, are 7-16 since topping out at 35-18 on June 1 and now trail the Braves by a half-game.

Perez (6-5) gave up three hits, struck out four and walked two in five innings. Randy Wolf (4-9) lost his fifth straight game.

Mets 5, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Joe McEwing hit a two-run homer, and Todd Zelle and Lenny Harris had RBI singles as New York routed the host Chicago and snap a six-game losing streak.

The Cubs lost despite two homers from Sammy Sosa. The victory kept the Mets from being swept by the Cubs for the first time since 1992.

Marlins 9, Expos 1

MIAMI — Jesus Sanchez

allowed two hits in eight innings in his first start of the season, and Charles Johnson and Mike Lowell each drove in three runs as Florida beat Montreal 9-1. The Marlins, who have won 10 of their last 13, trail the Atlanta Braves by two games and the Phillies by a half-game in the NL East.

Pirates 6, Brewers 2

PITTSBURGH — Jason Schmidt pitched a four-hitter and hit one of the more unlikely homers in the majors this season, leading Pittsburgh past Milwaukee for the third straight night.

Schmidt (4-3) struck out seven and walked three in his longest start of the season.

Dodgers 7, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Paul Lo Duca drove in two runs, including the go-ahead single in the fifth inning, as Los Angeles beat San Francisco for the second straight game.

Barton Bonds hit a two-run double, but failed to homer for the fourth straight game. He leads the majors with 39 home runs and remains one homer away from matching Jimmie Foxx for 10th on the career list with 534.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Lance Davis pitched eight impressive innings for his first major league win to lead Cincinnati over St.

Louis. Jason LaRue homered for the Reds, who swept the two-game set for their first series sweep in St. Louis since Aug. 14-15, 1998.

American League

Yankees 15, Indians 5

NEW YORK — Tino Martinez went 4-for-5 with a homer and five RBIs to give some rare run support to Mike Mussina as the New York Yankees beat the Cleveland Indians 15-5 on Wednesday.

The Yankees scored one more run in this game than they had in Mussina's previous six starts. Mussina (8-7) had been averaging only 3.6 runs of support coming into the game.

Devil Rays 9, Red Sox 7

BOSTON — Brent Abernathy hit a go-ahead RBI single in the eighth inning as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the Boston Red Sox for the first time in 12 tries this season with a 9-7 victory Wednesday night.

Steve Cox and Greg Vaughn each hit three-run homers, and Doug Creek (2-1) got the win in relief for Tampa Bay, which blew a 6-0 lead.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Tony Batista hit a tiebreaking, two-run homer against his former team as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays 7-3 Wednesday night.

Batista, claimed on waivers Monday, went 3-for-4 and his homer off Estaban Loaiza (5-8) gave Baltimore a 5-3 lead in the sixth. Loaiza allowed five runs on eight hits in 5-13 innings.

Twins 4, White Sox 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Kyle Lohse scattered three hits over seven innings to earn his first major league victory as the Minnesota Twins beat the Chicago White Sox 4-1 Wednesday night to move back into first place in the AL Central.

Jaque Jones homered for Minnesota, which has a half-game lead in the division after Cleveland's 15-5 loss to New York early Wednesday. The Indians had held the top spot since June 20, the day Lohse was called up from Triple-A Edmonton.

Royals 5, Tigers 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Endy Chavez snapped a 0-for-21 slump with an RBI single, capping a two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning that lifted the Kansas City Royals over the Detroit Tigers 5-4 Wednesday night.

Chavez led off the ninth with a single, his fourth hit of the game. He stole second and scored the tying run on Brent Mayne's single off Todd Jones (3-5).

One match to follow should be the contest between Flier High senior No. 2 Nate Jones and the 2001 putting champion, facing Muni regular and No. 15 seed Carl Sklavos.

The regular and, however, should be the women's championship fight when 2000 champion Karen Darrington takes on No. 8 Tamara Thompson of Hagerman and perennial favorite No. 4 Virginia Undhjem faces part-time playing partner No. 5 Jennifer Hedberg in a rematch of last year's first round.

Undhjem won last year's battle 1-0 up after Hedberg had already completed 10 holes in a junior championship tournament earlier in the day.

"Jenny's tough off the bat," Undhjem said. "This championship fight is going to be tough." Darrington, a six-time Idaho amateur champion, echoed her friend's take.

"What a great field," she said. "It's all about the short game. And of course in match play, anything can happen."

The other side of the draw pits No. 2 seed Janell Howland, who most recently competed at the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links in Long Grove, Ill., against 2001 Idaho high school state champion Jenni Robinson, while No. 3 Nicole Knowles of Hawaii.

Tournament sponsor Bob Iverson said he's just proud to see the tournament here once again.

"It's very exciting," he said. "It gets bigger each year."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

CSI's Porter fails to place at judo event

LOS ANGELES — U.S. national judo champion and College of Southern Idaho student Barbara Porter failed to place in the top 5 at the Pacific Rim Judo Championships June 22-23 in Los Angeles. It was Porter's first international tournament as an official team member representing USA Judo. She lost matches in the over-78 kilogram class to Hsiao-Hung Lee of Chinese Taipei, the eventual bronze medalist, and Vanessa Zambotti of Mexico, who finished fifth.

Lee also won the women's open division. Nanoushka St. Pre, whom Porter defeated for the U.S. title in April, tied for fifth with Zambotti.

Coroner: Former athlete's death was suicide

COEUR D'ALENE — Former NCAA heptathlon champion and WNBA player Corissa Yasen died earlier this year from a self-induced drug overdose, the Kootenai County coroner concluded.

The 27-year-old Yasen, a pharmacist, was found to have ingested a combination of prescription drugs that included muscle relaxers, anti-depressants, anti-anxiety drugs and narcotic pain relievers. She was found dead in her home on May 12 after she failed to show up for work for two days.

Coroner Robert West said in a statement Monday that investigators found substantial quantities of narcotics and drugs in her home.

A 1992 graduate of Coeur d'Alene High School, Yasen was among the first inductees to the Idaho High School Sports Hall of Fame.

She was a basketball and track standout at Purdue, becoming the school's first NCAA women's champion when she won the 1996 heptathlon title. She was twice voted Purdue's female athlete of the year.

Yasen played on the inaugural Sacramento Monarchs WNBA team in 1997, averaging 2.7 points. She did not make the team in 1998.

Manning to opt out of contract with Jazz

LAKE LAKE CITY — Danny Manning plans to become a free agent, but the 35-year-old forward hopes to stay with the Utah Jazz.

Once Manning makes his decision official, he can begin negotiating with any team on July 18. Manning would have earned $1.32 million this season.

Whether Manning plays for Utah again depends on how much the Jazz have left to spend after — presumably — signing point guard John Stockton.

Stockton is a free agent and said he would be back for his 18th season with Utah. Whether the Jazz will pursue other free agents remains to be seen.

Red Sox put Martinez on DL, activate Florie

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Boston Red Sox on Wednesday with inflammation in his right shoulder.

Whether Martinez also activated right-hander Bryce Florie, who is attempting to come back from being struck in the face by a line drive last season.

Boxer remains comatose after fight

NEW YORK — A boxer underwent three hours of brain surgery Wednesday after being punched into a coma just two rounds after ringside physicians nearly stopped his light-heavyweight fight.

Beethaven Scotland, 26, was in extremely critical condition at Bellevue Hospital, where his family was keeping vigil. Scotland was knocked out Tuesday night in the 10th round of his fight with undefeated George Khaliid Jones.

In the last round of the nationally televised fight, Scotland hit the canvas after a left-right combination from Jones. Jordan said the fighter was initially somewhat coherent after the knockout.

Scotland was able to answer questions and follow simple directions, but his condition quickly deteriorated. "We knew it was something serious," Jordan said.

Croce's brother fired from job at firm

PHILADELPHIA — The brother of Philadelphia 76ers president Pat Croce was fired from an insurance company for engaging in "activities that violated his responsibilities and trust," the firm said Wednesday.

Vincent J. Croce, 44, an executive in Independence Blue Cross' building management department, was fired last week after an internal review, the company said.

Pat Croce, who is vacationing in Italy, "was in a great deal of pain after learning of the allegations regarding his brother," Sixers senior vice president Dave Coakley said Wednesday.

Another of Croce's brothers, John, was fired as a team trainer for the Sixers in January after allegedly being caught on videotape stealing money from a pair of Allen Iverson's pants that were left in the locker room.

Gwynn expected to announce retirement

SAN DIEGO — Tony Gwynn, arguably the best pure hitter of his generation, is expected to announce Thursday that he will retire at the end of this season, his 20th with the San Diego Padres.

A baseball source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday evening that he understood that an announcement was to be made after the team returned from a six-day trip that ended Wednesday night in Colorado.

Earlier Wednesday, USA Today's Baseball Weekly reported on USA Today.com that Gwynn will retire at season's end.

College pitcher Sam Hackett, while Cache Valley has won the tournament in the past.

But the Spartans will have plenty of help as Josh Bartomea, a 6-foot-2 right-hander who is undefeated on the season, returns to action against the Seminoles.

John Fennell, a 6-7, 180-pounder, is set to pitch the nightcap.

The Idaho Bobcats also have a difficult first day, facing the Boise Centennial Cannons at 3:30 p.m. at Bobcat Field. The Cannons come into the tourney as the defending champions and are one of the favorites against this year.

"This is when we want to start playing — when we start playing a lot of AA teams," Bobcat assistant coach Matt Harr said. "It prepares us for the postseason."

The Class 2A Bobcats (8-5) will send left-hander Dallas Bristol to the mound against Centennial, Harr said.

For Burley to pull off the upset against the Cannons, Bristol, at 6-2, 170 pounds, will have to come up with a strong outing.

But Harr has confidence Bristol will do just that.

"He just has to do what he's been doing," Harr said. "He's had a good season. He needs to throw strikes and hit his spots."

Andrew McMurray, a 5-11 sophomore, will take the hill for the Bobcats against the Guardians, who breezed through the Donnelley Sports Invitational American Legion A Tournament in Twin Falls undefeated last weekend.

to pull within one at 7-6 in the fifth, but Bear Lake came back with two more in the sixth before closing the doors on the Cowboys' comeback.

"We just kept answering them with runs," Bears coach Craig Culver said. "We fought back. They played a pretty good game."

In the first game, Bear Lake started out hot with three runs off two singles. Pitcher Zach Nate drew a walk, then stole around and came home on a Cory Roberts single. Paul Ludwig singled through the left-Cowboys infield, bringing around Roberts' Twin Falls pitcher Charley Hinton picked up two strikeouts on the next two batters but moved Ludwig to third on a balk. Ludwig came home on a pitch in the dust to end the inning.

Luke Hawkins picked up a single in the bottom of the inning for Twin Falls and made it as far as second, but two groundouts ended the Cowboys' hopes.

"We put runners in position, we just couldn't drive them in," Twin Falls designated hitter Kevin Jussel said.

In the second, Twin Falls trailed the first two batters on a strikeout and a ground out, but then the flood gates opened as 13 Bears stepped to the plate for nine runs off six hits.

"Two outs then they scored nine ... we just walked too many guys," Watson said. "They didn't hit the ball, we just put them on base."

The Cowboys picked up a couple of runs in the bottom of the inning, cutting the Bear Lake lead to 10, A.J. Stone doubled down-left field and Kody Barnes singled through the infield for two runs off two hits.

Twin Falls held the Bears in the third, but allowed five more runs in the fourth.

The Cowboys tried to play catch up in the fourth, starting the inning with three hits. Tim Meafer singled to start the inning. He advanced on a Maxfield single and came home on an Alex Hill double to deep Golden State Warriors with the fifth pick.

College Player of the Year Shane Bieber of Duke went sixth overall to the Grizzlies, whose move from Vancouver to Memphis is expected to be formally approved soon by the league's Board of Governors.

Bauer averaged 19.9 points for the Blue Devils as they won the national championship last season.

"It may sound archaic, but I really enjoyed my four years," said Bieber, the first college graduate selected. The Nets selected 19-year-old Seron Hall freshman Griffin, and Cleveland used the eighth selection on high school senior DeSagana Dip of Oak Hill Academy (Va.), a 7-footer originally from Senegal.

The Detroit Pistons selected Charlotte freshman Rodney White with the ninth pick, and the Boston Celtics chose Arkansas shooting guard Joe Johnson with the 10th pick and junior college player Kendrick Brown with the 11th.

The Seattle SuperSonics, actively exploring trades involving All-Star guard Gary Payton, used the 12th pick on Yugoslavian forward Vladimir Radmanovic. The 20-year-old player kissed Stern on the cheek after shaking his hand.

allowed two hits in eight innings in his first start of the season, and Charles Johnson and Mike Lowell each drove in three runs as Florida beat Montreal 9-1.

The Braves, who have won 10 of their last 13, trail the Atlanta Braves by two games and the Phillies by a half-game in the NL East.

Schmidt (4-3) struck out seven and walked three in his longest start of the season.

Lo Duca drove in two runs, including the go-ahead single in the fifth inning, as Los Angeles beat San Francisco for the second straight game.

Barton Bonds hit a two-run double, but failed to homer for the fourth straight game. He leads the majors with 39 home runs and remains one homer away from matching Jimmie Foxx for 10th on the career list with 534.

Wimbledon

But Cowan's big serve was at its best, and he volleyed brilliantly for much of the match.

"It doesn't matter what he's ranked," Samppras said. "On grass, with his serve, the way he's playing, you can't think, 'This is going to be the upset of the century,' which it could have been."

While Samppras ultimately rose to the occasion, Roddick did the same with much less anguish. Less than a year into his career, it's already apparent the teenager is comfortable on the big stage, and against the 11th-seeded Johansson, he embraced the biggest stage in all of tennis.

"I got goose bumps when I was walking out there," Roddick said. "It's a place like Wrigley Field or Fenway Park or something. It's kind of magical."

Roddick has been touted as the next American Grand Slam champion, and with a booming serve well suited for grass, there's no telling how far he can go during the fortnight.

Playing in fact his third major tournament, he'll likely be back on Centre Court for a third-round match Friday against another big server, three-time Wimbledon runner-up Goran Ivanisevic.

"Goran at Wimbledon - I'm really looking forward to it," Roddick said.

While A-Rod is on the rise, Ivanisevic is trying to resuscitate his career. Because his ranking has plummeted to 125th, he needs a wild card to get into the tournament. Thanks to Wednesday's 6-7 (6), 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Carlos Moya, the colorful Croat has reached the third round at a Grand Slam event for the first time since the 1999 U.S. Open.

"When I play good, then I think I can beat anybody here," Ivanisevic said. "But when I play bad, then I cannot even beat some women on the tour."

U.S. Open champion Marat Safin also won Wimbledon advancing included Jennifer Capriati and Serena Williams.

With the Williams sisters on course for a showdown in the final, their father, Richard, renounced his criticism of Britain's developmental system. Only one British woman reached the second round, and she lost Wednesday.

"I can produce two kids, this country should be able to produce at least one," Williams said.

Capriati continued her bid for a Grand Slam sweep by beating Francesca Schiavone 6-3, 6-1. With the victory, Capriati improved to 16-0 this year in major tournaments.

But as Roddick's popularity soars, he's beginning to challenge even Capriati for attention.

"Yeah, I've been getting asked a lot about Roddick," she said. "It's great. I mean, he's got a lot of pizzazz."

With his hat brim pulled low over his eyes like a young gun-slinger, Roddick outdueled Johansson, who had won his past 11 matches all on grass. By the final set, the not-so-stoic Swede was tossing his racket to the ground in frustration.

When Roddick closed out the win with a 125 mph serve, he gave the crowd a thumbs-up sign.

"Centre Court is probably the most prestigious place to play in tennis," he said. "To get a chance at such a young age, I really cherish that."

Andy Roddick celebrates after winning a point against Sweden's Thomas Johansson during their match's singles, second round match Wednesday on Centre Court at Wimbledon.

Local bowlers have a chance to go national, win scholarship money

FLIER - Cedar Lanes in Flier hosted the BPA International Family Tournament May 19. All junior and teen bowling winners in the parent-youth and parent-teen divisions advanced to the national finals. The junior and teen bowling winners in the adult-teen and adult-youth received $250 scholarships.

Scholarship winners were Jerome Bowl's Josh Benedictus, who bowled with Alvin Olsen. They tallied a 1,289. Brennan Hayes, partnering with Tracy Ridgevay, rolled 1,371. Both are from Cedar Lanes.

Those earning an expense-paid trip to the national tournament July 26 - 29 were Christina Benson and Ann Benson. Their winning score was 1,360. The Bensons are from Sunset Bowl in Coeur d'Alene. Mathew Graham and Gary Graham, of Boise, rolled 1,409 to earn their trip to Greenville, which will be held in August.

As many of you know, one thing I enjoy is talking to the bowlers. That's what I did recently and asked them two questions: What do you like about bowling in the summer? And, since this was a No Tap group, what do you like best about No Tap bowling? Here are their responses:

Betty Taylor: "I like to bowl and need an activity to release the pressures of life," she said. "Because I'm good at getting only nine pins. (No Tap) lifts my morale and makes me feel like a better bowler." Gail Newbury: "(Bowling is) something fun to do. (No Tap) increases my average by leaps and bounds. I get out and meet people - socialize, and it's a great stress release."

LET'S GO BOWLING Thelma Tucker

Ron Marshall: "I like to bowl in the summer for practice to be ready for next fall," he said. "I like the money I can earn at No Tap."

Neathery Fischer: "I haven't bowled since junior high and recently got started open bowling." Fischer said. "My partner, Justin Garner, asked me to join up and bowl No Tap. I like the fun of meeting the people and I love bowling."

Justin Garner: "(Bowling is) a good extracurricular activity. Being here and meeting people and having fun. Nine pin strikes are fun and gives me practice for fall."

Penny Brown: "I have bowled with my family for fun and practicing off, but this is the first time I've been able to bowl on a team with my husband. (With No Tap), don't have to pick that single pin."

Art Brown: "Just being able to get out with my wife and do something we enjoy together. The challenge of getting that nine-pin count."

Shari Wisk: "It bowl for the time away from work and the kids. (In No Tap), only have to get nine pins."

Crystal Malone: "It's more relaxed and good practice. I got a chance to see high scores."

Brad Eslinger: "I like being able to bowl with Mom. It's great to get a strike on only nine pins."

Patti Eslinger: "The fun of being a sport that I can handle with my son. (In No Tap), you don't have to roll so many balls."

Charles Cooper: "I bowl for the camaraderie with the other players. (In No Tap), you only have to knock down nine pins and it's such you have a better average."

They all have fun... so... Let's Go Bowling!

I'LL TUMBLE FOR YOU

Magie Valley Gymnastics' trampolining and tumbling teams competed in the Junior Olympic National Championships held June 9-19 in San Antonio, Texas. There were 174 teams and over 800 athletes competing in the championships. The athletes competed in three events - trampolining, double mini and roof - by age and level. Brandon Reed and Kameron Fischer brought home the gold medal on double mini. Reed also scored the silver medal and Fischer took the bronze medal on trampolining.

Woman dies after one-vehicle accident

TWIN FALLS - A 27-year-old Twin Falls woman died Wednesday morning after flipping her pickup truck and being ejected from it. Celeste Marie Gentry was driving eastbound on Highway 26 near Carey when she lost control of her black 2000 Toyota Tacoma pickup, driving off the road and then overcorrecting. She flipped her truck end to end and was ejected from the vehicle, said Trooper Quinn Carmack of the Idaho State Police. The accident happened about 7:08 a.m. Gentry was not wearing a seat belt, Carmack said. Gentry was apparently returning home from her boyfriend's house in Carey when she crashed. The exact cause of the accident had not been determined as of Wednesday afternoon. "We've not determined if speed or other factors, like she may have fallen asleep, were involved," Carmack said. The Lincoln County Quick Response Unit responded to the accident. Gentry was taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where she later died of severe head and internal injuries. The location where Gentry lost control is an accident-prone area, Carmack said. The road slopes downhill and around a corner. The speed limit is 55 mph, he added.

State names new chief for school for deaf, blind

GOODING - A new superintendent for the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind was announced at last week's Idaho State Board of Education meeting. Angel M. Ramos, the second-in-command deaf Hispanic to earn a Ph.D. and the first Hispanic to be a Fulbright scholar, was appointed to head up the school. He is also a well-known international multi-lingual presenter, having presented in Canada, Taiwan, Saudi Arabia, Colombia and Mexico. Ramos' degree is in special education administration. He comes to Idaho from Texas and says he's impressed with the state's own atmosphere of Gooding and the excellent reputation of the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind. "The Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind is one of the best schools in the country, and I eagerly anticipate taking it to the next level," Ramos said. The school provides programs and services to support students from birth to 21 years who are deaf, hard of hearing, blind or visually impaired.

JF schools seek bids for security, energy contracts

TWIN FALLS - District 411 schools got the once over Tuesday as bidders walked through facilities to determine where security cameras should be placed. Earlier in the year, a citizens' committee set up a security issues as the top priority in addressing building improvements. Contractors have until July 2 at 10 a.m. to submit sealed bids. Also Tuesday, those interested in bidding energy-saving contracts took turns. Special grants are available to school districts for reducing heating and energy costs. The citizens' committee made saving energy the second priority. Additional information is available from Director of Operations Wiley Dobbs. He can be reached at 733-6900.

Kimberly council selects banks to handle finances

KIMBERLY - The City Council Tuesday night selected banks to handle the city's finances. With Wells Fargo buying First Security, it left the city with a change in bank policy that didn't meet the city's banking needs. The council voted to contact the Evans First Federal and Magic Valley banks in an effort to find an institution that could provide services that would meet the city's banking needs. The Magic Valley bank responded with a system compatible with the city's system. The council voted the services of attorney Will Herrington to update the city zoning ordinances. Herrington works with cities in the state on zoning issues. The council also voted to allow the county to oversee the city election. Compiled from staff reports

City skate park opens; Skateboarders and in-line skaters show up at dawn

By John T. Huddy Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Rolling up from the bowl of the concrete skate park, a skateboarder grinds the rail, turning with ballet-like form back into the bowl where he speeds to another section of curving wall. The skateboarder is Shawn Black, and he is demonstrating some of the tricks skaters will be turning on the newly built, and opened, 10,000-square-foot skate park at Harmon Park. "Boy, it's getting hot," says Black, 30, of Twin Falls as he wipes sweat from his brow. "This is terrific." Black, a professionally sponsored skater, is also a member of the Magic Valley Skateboarders' Association, which helped spearhead the efforts to build the new skate park.

Contests The city's new 10,000-square-foot skate park at Harmon is open for riding. Two contests are scheduled at the park to celebrate its opening: a skateboarding contest on July 14 and an in-line skater contest July 15. Product prizes, including helmets and safety pads, will be given out.

The park - built at a price tag of $169,999 - was scheduled to open in July. But the concrete cured ahead of schedule, making the park ready for ripping, said Dennis Bowyer, the Twin Falls City Parks and Recreation Department superintendent. "We decided since the concrete was ready to go, let the kids have fun," Bowyer said, looking out over the slew of skateboarders and in-line skaters rolling through the park and sitting on its grassy edge. By Wednesday, skateboarders and in-line skaters lined up to ride the rails and catch air - some arriving at the crack of dawn to skate. "I've been here since 5:30 a.m.," said Mike Tante, 14, of Twin Falls as he took a break from skateboarding to talk with a reporter. "There's nobody else here that time of the day." His buddy, Kyle Arguello, also 14 and of Twin Falls, echoed Tante's thoughts, agreeing the new skate park is a good addition to the city. But Arguello, who proudly showed off his scrapes and bruises, said that, while skateboarders and in-line skaters have free reign over the park, bike riders don't. Please see PARK, Page C3

Board-fin-sponsored professional skater Shawn Black tries some tricks on the new half pipe. Black and his father Ron Black were instrumental in securing the park space and helping to raise more than $100,000 to go toward building the park.

Opposition halts expansion of Hagerman's impact area

By Gina Mulder Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Strong opposition from county residents has killed Hagerman's proposal to expand the city's area impact. Gooding County Planning and Zoning commissioners on Wednesday agreed with Hagerman's planning board that there would not be any alteration of Hagerman's area of impact. Currently, Hagerman's area of impact encompasses land that lies just one mile beyond the city limits. Hagerman's proposal would have tripled the amount of land in the area. Many of the 75 in attendance at last week's public hearing in Hagerman testified that this was just a land grab by the city of Hagerman. The larger the area of impact, the more lands the city could annex later on down the road. That strong resistance convinced city leaders to back away from the expansion proposal. "We just wanted to expand the area so that the city would have more control as to what went into the valley," Hagerman Planning and Zoning Commission Chairwoman Betty

Lindley said. "We never had any intention of annexing any of the property." Until recently the city of Hagerman had jurisdiction over its area of impact. However, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled it was unconstitutional for a city to have control over its area of impact because the county residents didn't have representation in city government. During transition negotiations with county planners, Hagerman's P&Z commissioners requested the area of impact be expanded, a move they hoped would help preserve and protect the valley surrounding the city.

Hagerman P&Z member Tina Harrington said the majority of the opposition stemmed from an anonymous letter sent to several county residents prior to the public hearing. The letter included a map of the expanded area and information about annexation - information that Hagerman's P&Z members believe misled many residents to believe the purpose of expansion was annex more land. "I believe a great injustice has been done to the people we're trying to serve," Harrington said. "I believe the intent of this letter was to cause dissension. The people now believe we're trying to put something over on them. In the end, everyone will have lost." In order to keep open dialog between the city and county, both planning boards agreed to work together on issues relating to Hagerman's area of impact. Gooding County P&Z Chairman Bill Stouder said that even though Hagerman would have a voice in all discussions, all final decisions would be left up to the county. Burley library celebrates reopening

By Ruth Streeter Times-News writer

BURLEY - No more long drives to Rupert for the Portrey family, as their local library is once again. "How can I read the paper I don't take?" David Portrey said Wednesday as he flipped through a USA Today at the Burley Public Library. For 10 weeks, the library was closed due to an April-18-fire that left much of the collection permeated with smoke. The closure forced many patrons to either visit the DeMary Memorial Library in Rupert or take more advantage of a demonstration Mini-Cassia bookmobile or buy their reading material. "I can't tell you how many people I have spoken to that have said we had to go buy books while you were closed, and myself included," said Burley library director Julie Woodford. "I gotta tell you, it made me really grumpy to go out there and buy books for myself." Gene Stoker and his wife, Shirley, were patiently waiting for the library to open since mid-May. They'd just discovered the world of computers during their winter in Arizona and were itching to have a go on the library's computers. Now the Stokers and the Portreys are both happy.

"We drove by about four times looking for it to be open," Portrey said. To celebrate, the library is having an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. with refreshments. At 3:30 p.m., children are invited to attend a special story time with Mayor Doug Manning. Woodford is also making the open house a chance for the public to get a behind-the-scenes glimpse of how the library operates. The city's insurance covered repairs and remodeling, which will probably total between $50,000 and $60,000. That includes new carpets, new paint, the book-cleaning process. Please see LIBRARY, Page C3.

A welcome sign greets patrons at the Burley Public Library this week during the library's grand re-opening. An open house is scheduled today from 1 to 5 p.m.

Gooding High School to get new principal

By Almee Metcalf
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Gayle Yakovac, a business education teacher, will become the new principal at Gooding High School.

The School Board announced Tuesday that Yakovac will replace David Hocklander, who declined to renew his contract.

Yakovac's salary has not yet been negotiated. She currently makes $46,000 annually as a teacher and $7,000 annually as the school's technical training coordinator, according to the district.

Also Tuesday: • The board decided to postpone naming a new elementary school principal.

• The board accepted the resignation of first-grade teacher Terri Holland.

• Gooding City Superintendent Todd Bunn announced that the groundbreaking for the Splash pool will be held at 2 p.m. July 10 at East Park. Bunn said the Splash Committee is about $20,000 short of their fund-raising goal.

Death threats prompt attorney to buy gun

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Juab County Attorney David Leavitt, who successfully prosecuted polygamist Tom Green for bigamy last month, bought a gun, ammunition and concealed-weapons permit following death threats against himself and his family during the trial.

Leavitt, a younger brother of Gov. Mike Leavitt, said he never took the gun — now county property — into court during the trial. He declined to discuss the threats in detail. "I don't want to comment on the nature of the threats because rightly or wrongly, I feel like the more you talk about it, the more threats it spawns," he said.

Green's attorney, John Bucher, said his client "has never threatened anyone and has never acted like he threatened anyone. Green doesn't hang with anyone who threatens people. I don't see the need for Leavitt to have a gun."

Judge rules against sexual evaluation of polygamist

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A judge on Wednesday spurned convicted polygamist Tom Green from undergoing an evaluation as a possible pedophile, saying the process — including a machine that measures sexual arousal — would be unnecessarily intrusive and unpleasant.

Prosecutors had sought the evaluation as part of a sentencing evaluation. They argued that the fact that he married some of his five wives when they were younger than 15 might indicate tendencies that could affect his sentence.

Defense attorney John Bucher argued the request was an attempt to smear his client's character. "He should be treated like any other third-degree felon in a nonsex case. ... He should not be subjected to an evaluation that invades his privacy and holds him up to public ridicule," Bucher told the judge.

Green, 52, was convicted last month of four counts of bigamy and one count of failure to pay child support in Utah's first bigamy trial in a half-century. He faces up to 25 years in prison when he is sentenced Aug. 24.

Brian Lee Cooper

Brian Lee Cooper, 40, of Twin Falls, passed away June 22, 2001, at Alphonso Hospital in Boise, Idaho.

He was born Aug. 20, 1960, in San Jose, Calif., the son of Gary Cooper and Roxanne Shepherd Cooper. When he was just a young boy, he moved to South Dakota and was raised around the Lead-Deadwood Area. He attended Lead High School. He served his country in the Army for a short time. He moved to Sioux City, Iowa, until five years ago when he moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. On Sept. 1, 2000, he married his wife, Michelle in Twin Falls, Idaho. Brian's hobbies included fishing, playing pool and his love for animals, especially cats. Brian was a very caring person who put others first, even in death he helped others by selflessly donating his organs so that others might live. Brian is survived by his wife, Michelle; son, Tyler Cooper; daughter, Tawny of Sioux City, S.D.; grandmother, Evelyn Grant of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; parents, Gary and Deanna Cooper of Whitewood, S.D.; sisters, Shelly (Curtis)

Buchholz of Lead; S.D., Tracy Cooper of Lead, S.D.; brother, Donald Cooper of Aberdeen, S.D.; brothers, Britt (Wicki) Strickland of Twin Falls, Idaho, Leeyn (Sarina) Strickland of Whitewood, S.D., sister, Melany (Lae) French of Sutherland, Neb.; aunt and uncle, Mary and Harry Daniels of Deadwood, S.D.; in-laws, Gawn and Dorothy Anderson of Twin Falls, Idaho; brothers-in-law, Jeff (Lilly) Anderson of Twin Falls, Idaho, Mitch (Della) Anderson of Twin Falls, Idaho, Grant (Kathy) Terrell of Fossil, Idaho; sisters, Vicki (John) Reeve of Olympia, Wash., Yolanda Robertson of Visalia, La., Stephanie (Howard) Elliott of Lewiston, Idaho; several other aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his infant brother, paternal grandparents, maternal grandfather and two aunts. Services for Brian will be held Thursday, June 28, 2001, at 11 a.m. at the Park's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, Idaho. Burial will be held following services at the Twin Falls Cemetery.

Visitation will be held Wednesday, June 27, 2001, from 5-7 p.m. at the funeral home. Arrangements and services are under the direction of the Park's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Kimberly schools OK budget

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The School Board approved the district's $6 million budget Tuesday.

After hours of study and meetings that ran well into the night, the School Board was finally able to come up with a balanced budget.

Superintendent John Garner said he never worked as hard on a budget, which was complicated by many one-time expenses due to moving into a new high school.

The construction on the new high school/gymnasium is nearing completion. The floor in the school area is concrete with a bulldozer in the file in the entryway. Cabinets and doors are being completed and lights are being erected in the parking area this week.

Also Tuesday, the board approved Idaho State University student Stephanie Rasmussen as a student teacher in Mary Wilson's third grade class. She will work during the months of September and October.

Other School Board business:

• The board approved the selection of furnishing and telephone system for the new school.

• The board will hold its annual reorganization at the July 19 meeting. The board will select a chairman, vice chairman, treasurer and clerk for the 2001-2002 school year.

• District officials will meet with city planners July 3 to discuss putting up a Pepsi-Cola reader board at the new school.

Nampa legislator suspects gerrymandering

NAMPA (AP) — Canyon County would become Idaho's first minority stronghold if Hispanic leaders have their way, but a local legislator calls it gerrymandering.

With legislative districts being redrawn to reflect the 2000 census, Attorney General Frank S. Sanchez said the Hispanic Caucus plan would not have an immediate effect on elections or government operations but could give Hispanics a voice and possibly enough power to elect an Hispanic legislator.

The only time that has happened was in 1992 when Boise voters sent Republican Jesse Berain of Boise to the Idaho House. He was re-elected in 1994.

But Republican Rep. Dolores Crow of Nampa said she considers Sanchez's plan gerrymandering and unconstitutional. She said she represents her constituents equally, regardless of their ethnicity.

That ethnic group is Idaho's largest minority, doubling in size during the 1990s to make up 8 percent of the population, but there are significant concentrations in Canyon County and in Mindok and Cassia counties.

Sanchez said the Hispanic Caucus plan would not have an immediate effect on elections or government operations but could give Hispanics a voice and possibly enough power to elect an Hispanic legislator.

The only time that has happened was in 1992 when Boise voters sent Republican Jesse Berain of Boise to the Idaho House. He was re-elected in 1994.

But Republican Rep. Dolores Crow of Nampa said she considers Sanchez's plan gerrymandering and unconstitutional. She said she represents her constituents equally, regardless of their ethnicity.

When you start drawing strange lines to accommodate certain groups — I don't care who they are — you get into dangerous territory," Crow said.

Hispanic groups lost a lawsuit against the state after the 1992 redistricting process. They argued legislators, who drew the lines themselves, had deliberately split them up.

This year is the first time a bipartisan redistricting commission is drawing the lines.

This year is a great opportunity to correct what happened in 1992, state Democratic Chairwoman Carolyn Boyce said. She opposed Sanchez's efforts but said it would not necessarily help Democrats regain the power they lost in the last decade.

Nevada challenges standards for Yucca Mountain

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The state of Nevada filed suit Wednesday in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, challenging recently issued federal radiation standards for a possible high-level radioactive waste dump at Yucca Mountain.

Attorney General Frankie Sue Del Papa said the state agrees with some aspects of the Environmental Protection Agency standards, but objects to limiting the standards to 10,000 years.

Del Papa, joined by Gov. Kenny Guinn, said 10,000 years does not cover the entire period during which most radioactive waste put in the dump might still leak into the environment.

Any standard is inadequate if it does not include the time when the risk to the public is the greatest," Del Papa and Guinn said in a statement.

The Energy Department, which has spent $7 billion and 20 years studying the dump site, plans to include the state's ground water model in its final calculations as it prepares to recommend whether Yucca Mountain is suitable for a dump for nuclear waste, including some stored at Idaho's National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

The EPA rule also challenges part of the EPA rule that would let the federal Department of Energy pollute part of the Amargosa aquifer, the large groundwater area beneath Yucca Mountain.

The standard that allows DOE to use a portion of one of the most important aquifers in Nevada to dilute and disperse radiation from the repository not only violates state law but is simply unacceptable," Del Papa said.

The standard "appears to be designed to allow the repository to pass judgment notwithstanding its major scientific flaws," Guinn added.

In related developments, preliminary results of state testing suggest the government's calculations on direction and speed of ground water at Yucca Mountain could be wrong.

That means radiation from 77,000 tons of high-level nuclear waste that might wind up in the dump 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas could escape and expose people sooner than the 10,000-year life span for the facility.

State seeks comment on dairy waste regulations
TWIN FALLS - Proposed renewal is sought on the state's method of regulating dairy waste disposal. Since 1995, waste inspections have been handled by the Idaho Department of Agriculture, which already had been inspecting dairy operations for milk-sanitation compliance. The duty shifted from the Department of Environmental Quality and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Since the 1995 "Dairy Pollution Prevention Initiative Memorandum of Understanding" was signed by the three agencies and Idaho Dairyfarmers, the DEQ says the Agriculture Department has inspected 14,000 dairy farms. During the same period, DEQ and EPA would have had resources to inspect fewer than 400 dairies, and usually only those with more than 200 cows, the DEQ said. The agreement has expired and is proposed for renewal through 2006. Copies of the agreement are available for review on line at www.agri.state.id.us/dairy/MOU.html. Written comments will be accepted through July 20 at the Idaho Department of Agriculture, 2270 Old Penitentiary Road, Boise, 83712-8298; by fax at 208-334-4062; or by e-mail at mpat-ten@agri.state.id.us.

Fish and Game sets fire restriction early this year
JEROME - The Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Magic Valley Region office has set fire restrictions on all department property in the region. As a result of the extremely dry conditions and the potential for fires so early in the summer, the region has decided to impose restrictions now. Last summer, fire restrictions on department land were not put into place until August. The fire restrictions specifically prohibit any open campfires, smoking outside of enclosed vehicles and a total ban on all fireworks. The wildlife management areas in the region that are affected include Hagerman, Billingsley Creek, Niagra residential customers. The entire project is on track to be finished in September, the power company reported in a news release. Idaho Power in March announced its plans to build the 90-megawatt combustion turbine power plant. A megawatt is a million watts - enough power to light 10,000 hundred-watt light bulbs. The company says the plant will help reduce the amount of electricity it must purchase from the wholesale energy market. The $40 million plant is the first natural gas plant to be built by the utility. The five-acre site will contain two 45-megawatt generators and all associated substation equipment. Idaho Power says it will use the small power plant as a way to meet peak demands for electricity from Idaho Power customers. - compiled from staff reports

Rupert gears up for Fourth of July

Train rides will be part of celebration
 By Loraine Cavener
 Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - The Spirit of Idaho was formerly a passenger train car in New York City. But when the city recently retired the car, Eastern Idaho Railroad was ready to buy it. "We had been looking for something like this for a long time," said Jack Lisle, general manager of Eastern Idaho Railroad. The railroad bought the car as a public relations tool, and the car's first gig will be on Wednesday in Rupert, when the car will make three trips carrying passengers for free from Rupert to Burley and back. The railroad bought the car to promote safety and show community spirit, Lisle said. The railroad serves the community by helping get products to market. "We're part of the community and proud of it," he said. The car was built by American Car and Foundry in 1954 and was in commuter service for Long Island Railroad in New York until 1999, Lisle said. Eastern Idaho Railroad bought the car last year. Robert Christensen, of Rupert's Fourth of July entertainment committee, said people who want to ride the train will be able to get tickets at Showkase in Rupert until August. Tickets will also be available at the information booth on the Square. Tickets are free, but necessary because seating is limited, she said. The car holds about 95 people, Lisle said. When people get tickets, they will also need to sign waivers releasing the railroad of any responsibility for injuries, she said. Wednesday, passengers can

Three rides from Rupert to Burley will be given on the Eastern Idaho Railroad's Spirit of Idaho on Wednesday. The first ride will begin loading at 9:30 a.m., leave at 10 a.m. and be back in time for the parade at 11 a.m. The second trip will begin loading at 12:30 p.m. and leave at 1 p.m. The third trip will load at 2 p.m. and leave at 2:30 p.m. Each ride will go from Rupert to Burley and back. Those interested in riding the train can get tickets and sign waivers at Showkase in Rupert until the Saturday, when tickets will be available at the information booth at the old Rossell Drugstore on the Rupert Square.

board the Spirit near the new Chinese restaurant, formerly the Pancake House, on the west side of the tracks. People should not walk on or near the tracks, Lisle said. An old show poster on the wall inside the car boasts of free rides given by the Long Island Railroad to the music of the night, Phantom of the Opera. Although passenger service has not been available to Rupert for many years, Rose Bryan, a friend of Christensen, said she remembers being escorted by a white jacket-clad conductor onto the train in Burley for a 10-cent ride to Rupert, before Burley had a swimming pool. Bryan is planning to take her mother and grandchildren on the Fourth of July Spirit of Idaho ride, she said. Christensen said she is excited about being able to take the ride on the train as well as participate in many different activities during Rupert's Fourth of July celebration.

State recognizes Heyburn grant writer as she resigns

HEYBURN - The Heyburn City Council Wednesday approved the resignation of the city's grant writer. Celia Spaulding notified the council of her intention to resign effective July 6, citing health-related issues. Spaulding will receive a plaque from the state for her work for the city. "It shows what esteem she's been held (in) at the state level," Councilwoman Flossie Kay said at Wednesday's council meeting. In other business, the council tabled a decision to auction off

2,274 square feet of property east of the police station at 1800 J St. The property has been appraised at $2,000. The council opted to table the decision after a resident raised questions about the location of the easement on the property. City attorney J. Scott Spevick told the council it may cost only half as much as was initially thought to repair Seventh Street outside the J.R. Simplot plant. Instead of tearing up the road at a cost of $98,000, the city may be able to repair the road with a fabric layer covered by an overlay at a cost of around $40,000.

Volunteers dig for artifacts at site of abandoned outhouse

BOISE (AP) - Lillian Azevedo lifted herself from the 4-foot pit in the Statehouse lawn, wiped the beads of sweat from her brow, and considered a shard of porcelain. The nugget of Idaho history, unearthed nearly a century, was among a few tiny pieces of Idaho's past that volunteers like Azevedo found as they sifted through earth. "We've found some square nails and some brick pieces," the recent Borah High School graduate said. The dig is being done to help showcase the $64 million effort to renovate the Statehouse which is getting under way. Volunteers from the Idaho Archaeological Society and staffers from the State Historic Preservation Office are trying to find artifacts from what they say was an abandoned outhouse. Associate State Archaeologist Mary Anne Davis said privies like the one being explored are common targets for such digs, because they often contain trash from bygone eras.

"They were used as dumps," Davis said, adding that artifacts can range from everyday articles such as buttons and hardware to things people wanted to secretly dispose of, such as liquor bottles. The dig is being done mostly by volunteers, with some funding by the State Historic Preservation Office. "This just kind of brings us out to the public," Davis said. "Seldom do people get a chance to see an operation like this in action." So far, it has not produced loads of significant material. "We're in the process of discovering how much that lawn has been built up over the last 130 years," State Archaeologist Ken Reid said. Reid said workers are still trying to determine whether they are digging in the right place and left open the possibility of bringing in a backhoe to expand the dig as more of the early exploratory work turns up clues on what is buried much deeper. The dig is expected to continue through around July 4.

Three die in auto accidents on eastern Idaho roads

 Six girls returning home to Archer after a shopping trip and a movie were involved in a one-vehicle rollover which killed one and injured the others. And two Missoula, Mont., women died Tuesday morning from a single-car accident on Interstate 15 south of Downey, despite the rescue efforts of passersby. Police said the accident on the Archer highway occurred early

Tuesday. Their Chevrolet Suburban left the road and rolled over. No one was wearing seat belts. Tara Mayeda, 13, was taken to the Idaho Falls hospital, where she later died of injuries. Janel Marie Reese, 16, of Rexburg, the driver, and her sister, Lindsey Reese, 13, also went to the hospital where Janel is in critical condition and Lindsey is in serious condition. Megan Bowman, 15, of Rexburg, was taken to a

Pocatello hospital where she is in critical condition. Kristy Bolton, 14, of Cedar City, Utah, went to Madison Memorial Hospital in Rexburg and is in stable condition. Chance C. Cottrell, of Rigby, was taken to the Rexburg center where he was treated and released. Passenger Shanie Padrotti, 30, of Missoula died at the scene after the Ford Explorer she was riding in drifted into the median, skidding back across two lanes of traffic and rolled. Padrotti was the mother of 6-year-old Trevor Padrotti and 9-year-old Jesse Padrotti, who were riding with her. Jesse was thrown from the vehicle and suffered only minor injuries. Trevor was strapped into a child seat and was uninjured. Sheila Murray, 41, the driver, died after she was transported by helicopter to the hospital. Helen Heath, 69, also of Montana, is in stable condition after being partially ejected.

 Boston had been jailed on charges of sexual abuse of a child, child-custody interference and misdemeanor battery, according to court records. The charges stem from an October 2000 incident in which Boston was accused of trying to strangle a Jerome homeowner who found him in a closet. Boston apparently was having a romantic relationship with the homeowner's 15-year-old daughter, and he had been cramped out in her closet without the homeowner's knowledge for as long as two weeks, according to Jerome police reports. When the homeowner opened the closet door, Boston jumped out and tried to strangle him, according to police reports. Boston, after returning to Gooding via a private plane from San Diego on June 28, was taken back to the Jerome County Jail for booking. He is now being held the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Facility. A preliminary hearing for Boston on his battery, escape and assault charges in connection with his escape is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. July 3 at the Jerome County Courthouse. Boston's mother, Debbie Lagunas, said she hasn't seen her son since he returned home. "I'll see him on Monday," Lagunas said. Lagunas said Gooding Sheriff Sean Gough had worked along with her and Boston's sister, Tara Martinez, in getting Boston back.

Body surfer's death adds urgency to carbon monoxide study

PHOENIX (AP) - A Utah teen's death while bodysurfing behind a motor boat adds urgency to the need to study potential carbon monoxide problems with pleasure water craft, authorities say. Research already determined that the invisible, odorless and deadly gas produced by engine exhausts can be trapped near houseboat swim ramps. Federal authorities directed that rear-exhaust houseboats be altered to correct the problem, but not before a number of people had died, nine of them on Lake Powell. On Monday, Chad Ethington, 18, of Centerville, Utah, was presumed to have drowned on the lake where he and two friends were being towed by a ski boat. They had been "back surfing," a practice, during which one holds on to a boat's swim platform while the boat travels and then lets go to "body surf" the wave the boat creates, park authorities said. Authorities said the two friends felt sick and climbed back into the boat from the swim ramp near the engine exhaust, where all three had been holding on at times. When the boat turned around to pick up Ethington after a surfing run, he was floating face down in the water, said Dr. Robert Baron, Glen Canyon National Recreation Area's medical coordinator.

 "I think they should allow bikes too," Arguello said. The new bikes, with their cranks and pedals, could chew the park's concrete up more than a skateboard and its trucks, wheels and board could. That seems to be the only point of contention so far since the park's opening, though.

"The only problem we've had is the bikers wanting to ride the park," Black said. "But the city is working on a park in the canyon for bikers that should be pretty good too." That park will likely have dirt ramps and jumps, Black said. Some bikers, including Moses McKenzie, 15, of Twin Falls, traded their bike for a board

Wednesday. "Good job, man," Black told McKenzie, clad in baggy jeans and red shirt as he rode one of the concrete walls, kicking up his board and landing back upon it. "Why are you asking me for advice? You look like you're doing pretty good on your own." McKenzie, pausing a moment, beamed at his mentor's encouragement. "The last two days have been the first time I've skated in the past six months," McKenzie said smiling as he too wiped sweat from his brow. Times-News staff writer John T. Huddy can be reached in Twin Falls at 735-3259 or by e-mail at jhuddy@magicvalley.com

Personal income taxes fall short again; revenue estimate in doubt

BOISE (AP) — General tax collections were their weakest of the budget year in May, falling $13.4 million short of expectations and creating serious questions about the economy generating the revenue lawmakers expected when they wrote the state spending plan last winter. May's collections left the state $7.5 million short of the revenue estimate through 11 months of the financial year. May's revenue performance was worse than in other months this fiscal year and reflects continued weakening in both the state and national economies. "Kempthorne administration chief economist Michael Ferguson said in the revenue update released on Wednesday. "With just one month to go in the fiscal year, it appears likely the General Fund will fall short of the current forecast," Ferguson said. The budget year ends on Saturday, but it typically takes about two weeks to balance the books. In writing the state's first $2 billion general tax budget for the year that begins on Sunday, lawmakers did hedge against a contracting economy by leaving $64 million of the anticipated revenue uncommitted. In addition, they have a budget reserve with a balance of $54 million if financial problems worsen. The Legislature based its spending and tax-cutting decisions on the assumption that the economy would generate 9.8 percent more in tax receipts this year and another 2.1 percent more in the coming 12 months.

The latest economic update indicates this year's growth rate will fall short of 9.8 percent, and legislative leaders were already anticipating Gov. Dirk Kempthorne reducing the already anemic 2.1 percent growth rate for the new fiscal year. The economic slowdown in Idaho's once-explosive economy has been underscored by the nearly 3,000 layoffs announced since the first of the year and the administration's scaled back job growth estimates for 2001 from an increase of 2.7 percent last fall to 1.5 percent this spring. Punctuating those figures was the most recent report from the state's Unemployment Insurance Fund, where payments of jobless benefits continued to run at record levels. The weekly payments have been steadily rising in comparison to last year since 2001 began. In just the past 12 weeks, payments have escalated from 22 percent ahead of 2001 to 56 percent ahead. Through last weekend, the fund had paid nearly $79 million in jobless benefits, $16 million more than during the first 25 weeks of 2000. Those figures made it no surprise that the real weakness in state revenue collections was in paycheck withholding, which is a key indicator of underlying job strength. It was $4 million below the estimate for May, the sixth straight month that witholding collections have fallen short of the mark. It left that component of income tax revenue $16 million under estimates.

Study predicts burgeoning Idaho

DENVER (AP) — By 2050, Idaho and 10 other Western states will gain 48 million people, more than the current population of Spain, a new study finds. The Western Futures project, a study by the University of Colorado's Center of the American West, projects 2.6 million acres, roughly the size of Cuba, will be developed during that time. California double in population to 66 million residents, more than the overall population of the West in 2000. "The future of the West is more sprawl," said William

Reibsame Travis, University of Colorado geography professor and project leader. The 11 Western states were among the fastest growing in the nation during the 1990s, and five — Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and Colorado — grew at least twice as fast as the national overall. The 2000 census counted 61.4 million people in the Western states, up 21 percent from 1990. By 2050, 109 million people will live in those states, an increase of another 83 percent, the study estimates. It also forecasts the continued urbanization of Idaho. The state is expected to see another 2.7 million acres of privately owned rural land converted between 1990 and 2050, a 19 percent loss, while urban development will nearly double. Only three other states — California, Utah and Washington — were projected to see bigger percentage declines in rural acreage. The conversion in Idaho is expected to be spread out between urban and suburban development. That acreage will jump from 1.9 million in 1990 to 4.5 million in 2050 with suburban development nearly quadrupling. "Development is a permanent feature — once you get it, it's there forever," Travis said. "Looking out just 20 or 25 construction seasons just really doesn't capture how much this region will develop, so we tried to look 50 years ahead." Dr. Patricia Limerick, director of the Center of the American West at the University of Colorado, said the predicted future is in keeping with Western tradition. "Try to find a calm era in the West," she said. "You'll be looking for a very long time."

Timber imports surge after Canada pact dies

LEWISTON (AP) — Canadian softwood lumber imports have surged since a trade agreement between Canada and the United States expired at the end of March, according to figures from the U.S. Commerce Department. Since the agreement expired, preliminary figures show Canadian imports increased 26 percent from March through May. "The Canadians continuing to dump their subsidized products down here is driving the lumber market down," said Greg Konkol, vice president of the Konkolville Lumber Co. in Orofino. "Most of the operations in the area are pretty beat up and tattered coming off this horrible 18 month lumber market." The 1996 softwood-lumber pact between the two countries controlled the amount of Canadian lumber that could enter the U.S. market duty-free. Now, there are no strictures. So, a lawsuit was filed by more than 250 domestic timber companies charging the Canadian government with unfairly subsidizing the price timber companies pay per tree, as well as dumping Canadian lumber on the U.S. market below the cost of production.

After the pact expired, there was a brief period when dimensional lumber prices rebounded on speculation Canadian companies would limit exports to improve their chances in the lawsuit. The Guy Bennett mill in Clarkston, Wash., started turning a little profit and it looked like spring would be good, said Gary Tragesser, vice president for Bennett Lumber Products. "But then about three weeks ago, around the middle of May, the lumber market started to fall," Tragesser said. "And I had never seen it fall as quickly as it had — back down to a level where the mill is no longer making money." Konkol and Tragesser blame the flood of imports. Doug Smyth with IWA of Canada, a Canadian woodworker's union, said it was the threat of retroactive duties being assessed against Canadian lumber as a result of the lawsuit that caused the April surge. If the U.S. timber industry's lawsuit can prove its case, then a retroactive duty could be levied against Canadian companies. But that duty would only go back as far as April 30, Smyth said.

Man says foe tried to kill him twice

LEWISTON (AP) — A Bovill man is being held in the Latah County Jail on $100,000 bond after two alleged attempts to shoot a Deary man over the weekend. Dale Eugene Porter, 39, is charged with attempted murder for allegedly trying to shoot Richard Beeman, 37, on both Friday and Saturday evenings. Beeman told sheriff's deputies the trouble started Friday in Bailey's Bar in Bovill. He said Porter told him he owed him $600, and back child support to his ex-wife. Beeman said he left the bar and Porter advanced on him with a shotgun. Beeman said one of Porter's friends came up from behind and hit Beeman in the head. He heard a click, then Porter tried to chamber another shell. The gun had possibly dry-fired, sheriff's office spokeswoman Daria Buckley said. Then five shots rang out, fired from an apartment above the bar by the owner, Bill Hartman, who was trying to break up the fight. Deputies arrived later. Beeman told authorities he was driving Saturday night near Deary when he saw Porter's truck coming down the road.

Trooper retires, confesses to sexual abuse

MONTICELLO, Utah (AP) — A retired Utah Highway Patrol sergeant who is a Mormon church bishop has been charged with fending a teenage boy. Doug Hall, 48, took a confession to the San Juan County Sheriff's Office earlier this month, "the first anyone heard of this," San Juan County Attorney Craig Halls said Wednesday. Hall was charged Monday with forcible sexual abuse, a second-degree felony, for fending a 14-year-old boy in the spring of 1999, according to the charges. He was off-duty. "The victim did not make a complaint. Our knowledge of this incident came from Mr. Hall himself," Halls said. Hall said his admission came a day after he retired as a supervising UHP sergeant in Monticello, Utah. "I will face the music for what I've done," Hall told the Deseret News. "I pondered about it for some time and knew that ultimately because of my faith and my religion that it was something that, regardless of how unpleasant it was, would have to happen." Hall, a bishop in charge of a Monticello ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for 1.5 years, will be dismissed from that position on Sunday. Monticello Stake President Terry Eardley said: "He's well-respected and unfortunately has made a mistake," Eardley said. "He realized that there are some consequences that are associated with that, and he's willing to pay (for) those consequences." Hall, a 22-year highway patrol veteran, is expected to make his first court appearance Monday before 7th District Judge Lyle Anderson. The felony sex charge is punishable by up to 15 years in prison.

Court charges former Boy Scout leader

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A former Boy Scout leader and high school teacher has been charged with sexually abusing a 17-year-old while he was working at a Boy Scout camp. Vincent Lawrence, 33, of Eagle Mountain, appeared in 4th District Court Tuesday to face three counts of forcible sexual abuse of a child, second-degree felonies. Investigators with the Utah County Sheriff's Office allege Lawrence molested the teen-ager while working as a Boy Scout camp director near the Scofield reservoir.

Lawrence is a teacher at Orem's Timpanogos High School, where he taught art and photography. Officials at Alpine School District have notified Lawrence by certified mail that they intend to suspend him without pay. He was arrested June 15 and booked into the Utah County Jail after an investigation. Lawrence's bail was set at $10,000 and he was ordered not to have any contact with the victim or the victim's family. Utah County prosecutor Mariane O'Bryant said she did not object to the bail amount, given the age of the victim and that Lawrence is a man with no criminal history. But O'Bryant stressed the gravity of the charges against a person who was a teacher and youth leader.

Test near Ketchum finds E. coli in water

KETCHUM (AP) — Tests of well water in the McHanville area have found the presence of the E. coli intestinal bacteria, signaling the kind of fecal pollution that can breed diseases like typhoid, polio and hepatitis. Residents of the area south of Ketchum say bad water has made one person sick, although the report has not been confirmed. "Any time you get a cluster of septic systems and wells in close proximity, you're asking for trouble," said Bob Erickson, a senior environmental health specialist for the South Central Health District. New health district rules prohibit more than one housing unit per acre to be built where septic systems are used. But most properties in McHanville, where densities are much higher, were developed before the restriction was imposed. Still, Erickson is not certain that is the cause. "But whatever the reason, Lee Brown, a former San Diego State University water resources expert, plans to keep prodding the powers that be to look more seriously at protecting water quality. "The private consultant lives just south of McHanville and worries more about water quality than about water supply as the population of the Wood River Valley increases.

Affair that cost respect saddens man

DEAR ABBY: I have a true story to share. It's the story of a man who married his high school sweetheart. She supported him through college, encouraged him to pursue a degree, and gave him two beautiful children. She became a wonderful mother. She never missed a ballgame. She took the children to church. She worked full time and went without in order to give us more, and he, on the other hand, never helped around the house and became obsessed with his job.

A female co-worker with a questionable reputation began to flirt, flatter and confide in him about her inattentive husband. He allowed himself to be convinced an affair was justified, since his wife was so busy raising his children. Soon the affair became common knowledge. He had to leave his home and family, which suddenly seemed invaluable, beyond belief.

Abby, I traded everything important in life for a woman who's not fit to wipe my wife's

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

change everything I have done. —SADDER BUT WISER
DEAR SADDER: I'm printing your warning. Anyone who reads it and fluffs it off thinking your story is unusual, please read on:

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I met "Liz," the woman of my dreams. My marriage of 1 1/2 years was rocky. Liz was ambitious, hard-working, exciting and fun — everything I thought my wife wasn't. Liz was an airline pilot. Over dinner we told each other our tales of woe. I walked her to her car, she kissed me. Two hours later I was an adulterer.

Because we're both pilots, we could meet without suspicion during overnight layovers in other cities. We discussed marriage and children. I felt some guilt about what this would do to my 1-year-old son, but the thought of divorcing my wife was surprisingly easy. After three months, Liz suddenly became cold and distant. She said she needed time to think things through. Several months later, I learned she was marrying a wealthy man she had met while we were involved. I was devastated.

I'm now divorced. My ex and I are trying to reconcile, but it doesn't look good. If things don't work out, my desire to become involved with another woman is completely gone.

The expensive lesson I learned is don't take the easy way out. If your marriage is unhappy, get professional help. Identify what's wrong before venturing down a destructive path. I have lost everything important to me — my son, the respect of my ex-wife, family and friends — and my own self-respect. I'm reminded every time I look in the mirror.

—SO SORRY IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR SO SORRY AND OTHER MARRIED MEN WITH THE URGE TO WANDER: There you have it — not one object lesson but two. Let me add a thought for the day: If you don't value what you have, you're sure to lose it.

Wild rat helps Buffalo animal control official snare alligator

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Note to New York City: Alligators grow bigger in Buffalo.

A 4-foot American alligator, weighing about 80 pounds, was in custody Wednesday after being snared by a city animal control officer.

Earlier Tuesday, animal control officers had to suspend their hunt because of spectators and amateur gator trappers.

It wasn't a chicken-baited trap that led to the critter's capture, but a wild rat that swam too close to its jaws.

Animal control officer Chuck Loubert Jr. spotted the gator late Tuesday in Scajaquada Creek, in an area where the stream runs under highway bridges.

"I seen the two eyes glowing in the water," Loubert said. "There was a rat practically 2 feet from me. (The gator) was just treading water until he seen that rat."

With the gator distracted by the rat, Loubert leaped a dog snare around the reptile's neck.

The animal, first reported on Saturday, was believed to have been set free by someone who had it for a pet.

Rocker ends up being a nice guy

PHOENIX (AP) — It turns out rocker Alice Cooper really is a nice guy.

The man who sang "No More Mr. Nice Guy" — a 4-foot American alligator, weighing about 80 pounds, was in custody Wednesday after being snared by a city animal control officer.

The donation was announced earlier this month by the Solid Rock Foundation, which Cooper created.

Plans for the $2 million, 8-acre youth center being built by a Christian nonprofit organization, Neighborhood Ministries, include classrooms, a cafeteria, medical clinic, ball fields and a food bank.

In her element

Cinco de Mayo queen represents Hispanics with pride

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - Whether it's baby-sitting or volunteering for a children's program, Leticia Gomez is in her element.

But this down-to-earth 18-year old says it will be awhile before she has a family of her own.

The Cinco de Mayo queen is busy investigating career paths through the Job Shadowing program to find a job she will love. In the program, students "shadow" professionals in various jobs.

"I'll be looking at child care, dental assisting, things like that," Gomez said. "I really enjoy being with the children at EvenStart." EvenStart is a pre-school program for Latino children to get them started in English and Head Start-type activities.

Being chosen queen of the Cinco de Mayo festival in May was a real highlight for Gomez. She'll be busy representing the Hispanic community until next May, when her successor will be chosen. She will ride in the Fourth of July parade and attend Mexican rodeos. Gomez emphasized talents this year over beauty, "said Helen Almanza, who headed the queen contest. "We also ask (the contestants) to sign a statement regarding their moral standards, since they will be representing the Hispanic community."

Gomez sang and danced for the talent part of the contest. Almanza's assistant, Sylvia Lujan, said the demands on all contestants were strong for the duration of the contest.

"We encourage the girls to present their own anti-drug message, to highlight community involvement," Lujan said.

The Minico High School senior was born in Rupert. Her favorite class is government. She plays basketball, attends St. Nicholas Catholic Church and loves spending time with her family. Her father is Jorge Gomez. Her mother, Maria Alicia Gomez is deceased. She has one brother, Jorge Jr.

Gomez visited her father's homeland about two years ago when she journeyed to Coeno, Michoacan, Mexico to visit her father's family.

"It was so nice," she said. "It was at Christmas time, and the holiday there is very religious. We saw pasadas, beautiful masses. Everyone is so into it."

She'd like to go again, when the time is right. The Cinco de Mayo Queen has some advice for her younger hermanas, some of whom may choose to compete in the pageant one day.

"Don't let anybody say you can't do it, because you can do it," Gomez said. "Keep your head up."

Hispanic cultural center of Idaho names director

BOISE - The Hispanic Cultural Center of Idaho announced the appointment of Janie Aguilar as executive director.

Aguilar, who is bilingual, has experience in marketing, management, human resources and communications, and a rich history in community service, said Ana Maria Schachtell, board president.

"We are very fortunate to have found someone of Janie Aguilar's caliber," Schachtell said.

The center says it is dedicated to the identification, preservation and enhancement of the Hispanic arts and humanities.

Author moves seamlessly from journalism to fiction

Compiled from wire reports

Ana Menendez's characters ride out turmoil in a tapestry of bizarre explosions and silent conflict: a change to the thermostat, a banana assassination, an escaped parrot - all represent the power struggles among people and within them in the story collection "In Cuba I Was a German Shepherd" (Grove Press, $23).

Menendez is the daughter of Cuban exiles. The book's surreal twists and multiple viewpoints defy any comparison between the author's experience and those on the page; Menendez would not have it any other way. "I would never think of doing anything autobiographic because, you know, I'm only 31 and haven't really had an eventful life," she says. "I haven't been shocked in any way; I haven't been moved out of my house; I haven't had any major disappointments. I mean, it's a very middle-class, boring American life that I have, so I think it would be harder to write about myself."

After growing up in Tampa, Fla., she worked as a reporter for the Miami Herald, leaving journalism in 1987 to enter New York University's writing program. She then spent time jetting between the United States and India, where her husband was a bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times.

It was during her time in India that Menendez had, a series of publishing victories. The first short story she wrote, "In Cuba I Was a German Shepherd," got noticed by her NYU professor, Edna O'Brien, and connected Menendez with the hip journal Zoetrope, where the story was published and won a Pushcart Prize. Menendez got a new agent, and within two weeks the agent had sold her story collection to Grove, she says, "for more money than I thought I would ever get."

Navarro cuts first solo album

By Richard Cromelin
Los Angeles Times

'HOLLYWOOD' - Mick has his Keaton and his Edge. And in Jane's Addiction, Perry Farrell has his Dave Navarro.

More than 10 years after Los Angeles legend Jane's Addiction broke up, Navarro is finally ready to go solo.

His first solo album, "Trust No One," bears some of his old band's majesty and mystery, but its emotional signature is a sense of overwhelming release, as if the musician has popped open a lid holding down a lifetime of compressed pain.

"I've been asked by a lot of people, 'Why has it taken you so long, why haven't you done it before?' I just have to trust that there's some kind of spiritual rule at play here. It's not that I haven't tried to force these things for a long time, so it's almost in spite of my actions I'm here, whether I like it or not."

He's also assembling a book of documents, Warhol-like, a chilling descent into a drugged numbness.

Navarro, now 33 and drug-free, has more than his generation's usual list of goblins to blame. But now that he's on the other side, he's reaching saturation with the "poor me" victim role.

"I didn't have the foresight to know that years later I'd still be discussing it," he says. "Because I feel like I've hampered the darkness enough, and where I'm at now is what's really exciting to me. I've gotten a sense from a lot of people that they're wondering why I'm not the over-the-top rock guitarist guy anymore."

Christina soaps up, adds Latin note to 'Passions'

By Allissa MacMillan
New York Daily News

Talk show host Cristina Saralegui is joining NBC's soap "Passions," adding another Latino face in daytime.

Beginning July 11, Saralegui will appear on nine episodes of the drama. Her arrival coincides with NBC launching its Spanish-language closed-captioning on "Passions" and "Days of Our Lives," in hopes of drawing in more Hispanic viewers.

With the recent census indicating more than 35 million Hispanics in the United States, Saralegui believes daytime shows are getting a jump start on a coming trend.

"I think the reason soap people in general got smart real quick is that they saw the (ratings) numbers on Univision and Telemundo for the Spanish soaps," Saralegui said.

Saralegui hosts Univision's "The Cristina Show," and opened Blue Dolphin studios earlier this year, making her the first Latino woman and the fourth woman in history (following Mary Pickford, Lucille Ball and Oprah Winfrey) to own her own facility.

On "Passions," she'll play Aunt Cristina Lopez, who comes to town for the wedding of her niece and nephew.

Last month, CBS started a Spanish-language audio feed for its soap "The Bold and the Beautiful" available in 40 cities, and added two new Latino actors to the cast, Argentine model Sandra Vidal and Colombian Paulo Benedetti.

ABC, too, is on to the trend.

"The biggest audience growth is the Hispanic audience, and we would be foolish not to acknowledge that," said Felicia Minei Behr, ABC's senior vice president of programming.

Separate filings will protect spouse's earnings record

What you don't know about Social Security could keep you from being eligible for benefits. To illustrate the point, I have a sad, but true story about a woman and her husband who worked side by side on their farm for many years.

In her mid-50s, this woman learned she had cancer and could no longer continue working. She came into our office to file for disability benefits. It was then that both she and her husband learned that none of her earnings from the business were listed on her Social Security record. Although she had worked and paid into Social Security shortly before her marriage, this woman did not have enough work credits to qualify for disability benefits.

For some reason, although the couple filed a joint income tax return each year, they did not know they needed to file separate self-employment schedules with their tax return for both partners to get Social Security credits. And so all the earnings were reported under the husband's Social Security number.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND YOU
Maria Gonzalez

Unfortunately, this is not an isolated case.

If you and your spouse own and operate a business together, be sure you each protect your earnings record and your eligibility for Social Security benefits.

For more information, go to the publications section on our Web site at www.ssa.gov and print this booklet, Social Security: What Every Woman Should Know. You can also call 1-800-772-1213 to order a copy or get one at your local Social Security office. And remember, the Social Security rules apply to men the same as they do for women.

Scouts, business make city a little greener with trees

The Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department would like to thank Cub Scout Packs 60 and 104 for planting three trees at the city's newest neighborhood park, Vista Bonita. I would also like to thank Kimberly Nusslein, the Home Depot and Shopko for donating the trees to this project.

Twin Falls is a great community that we still have businesses that donate products to help our youth and the community.

Thanks to all that were involved in this project.

Morningside students learn about land, water from experts

Morningside Elementary third-graders finished a year of learning, supported by the Twin Falls community. We would like to thank all the businesses and volunteers who gave of their resources and time to make our learning a richer experience.

We studied water cycle, weather and clouds and visited the canyon to see where our water comes from, had a tour of the pump house and saw the water tank on Harrison. We visited KMYT to see how weather researchers collect data and report the news. We studied land forms and soil. Kelley Garden Cent' helped us plant a tree to celebrate Earth Day. We had a tour of Malad Gorge and two museums in Hagerman. We studied "communities" and visited the public library, First Federal Bank, the courthouse, jail and clinic. We studied the way our body works, and David Woodhead from the Lamphouse Theater showed our students the movie, "Madeline."

Family thanks those that helped after rollover accident

We want to thank those who stopped at our car rollover west of Fairfield on May 25. Someone called 911, someone got two people out of the wreck and then helped two adults get out. The Fairfield Fire Department used the "Jaws of Life" to extract Leah. The Fairfield Ambulance took three of us to St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center. Stacy and Jade were life-flighted to Boise. Thanks to all for their concerns and care. We are all recovering.

Thanks to Dr. David Hanscom and staff who did Leah's neck surgery. The care during and after her surgery was so attentive and caring. Thanks to the Sun Valley Lodge for being so kind during this trying time.

It is so important to buckle up. It saved our lives.

We will always be so thankful and grateful for all the people's kindness. Bless all who were there for us.

TF family gives thanks for random acts of kindness

I will address this letter to our guardian angels.

My husband and I friend were driving to work May 8 when a man ran a red light. Luckily, no one was seriously hurt. The reason for my letter is to thank two people who took time to help a stranger.

First, the lady who witnessed the accident. She is police officer who was off duty at that time - thanks for never fully going off duty. The second person is the gentleman who towed my husband's truck home. Both did random acts of kindness.

I wish we could have met these people under different circumstances. The man who hit my husband didn't have a license and was not insured under the car he was driving, so his mother and my husband were without vehicles. I would like to thank my guardian angels

Benefit helps wishes come true for Valley House shelter

On behalf of the board of directors of the Valley House Homeless Shelter, I would like to express our appreciation to all who continually help to make our organization a success. Because of the generous donations and supporters, more than $30,000 was raised at "An Evening in May to Make Wishes Come True" benefit dinner to help those in need.

We sincerely thank all our donors and underwriters who gave so generously. Special thanks to our master of ceremonies, Danny Maroon; Sawtooth Chiefs; Blue Lakes Country Club and staff; volunteers and raffle participants. We are proud to be a United Way recipient and appreciate the community and our supporters for their trust and generosity in assisting us to meet our goals. These funds will help us continue our long-term efforts to improve and upgrade facilities for shelter and to help those less fortunate gain self-sufficiency.

Thank you for your support!

Fry Shack makes big hit, benefits baseball program

Buhl American Legion Baseball would like to thank Lamb Weston for its past and continued support of our program. The Lamb Weston "Fry Shack" was again a hit at the Buhl High School Mid-Summer Classic Baseball Tournament. The "Fry Shack," in conjunction with our regular concessions, helped to feed many of our players and guests during the tournament.

Lamb Weston employees and family members gave of their time to deliver and construct the shack. They also manned the cookers and concessions windows throughout the tournament. All proceeds from this endeavor and subsequent Lamb Weston product sales were then donated back to Buhl American Legion Baseball. All of this is above and beyond Lamb Weston's direct annual support of our program.

Buhl American Legion Baseball feels very fortunate to have Lamb Weston on the team. We thank all of the Lamb Weston staff and employees for their support.

Family is deeply touched by generosity, compassion

We extend a sincere thank you to our friends in Rupert for the wonderful reception of cancer survivors we experienced on June 8. Our family has been deeply touched by all the generosity and compassion shown during your town's celebration of the "Relay for Life." As five of my grandchildren, three daughters, a son-in-law and husband were in my chair around the City Square, we were met each step of the way, with constant hand-clapping, shouts of encouragement, friendly "high fives," a sea of smiles and bushes of tears.

The fight for cancer eradication and survival will be won by this kind of spirit, the memories of which will inspire us to remain in the fight and to return to the relay next year.

Thanks, Julie and the team from Burlay Junior High School, for "walking for Grammie."

Huband grateful for tender, kind care given to wife

My beloved wife, Norma Werry, passed away a few days ago after spending her remaining days at Shoshone Rehab and Living Center.

I want to sincerely thank all the professional staff that had contact with Norma in her last days. I want to especially thank all those who had hands-on contact with Norma. I can't say enough about their excellent care and concern for her comfort. Everything she asked for was given in a cheerful manner.

Honoldy, I do not have the capability to express my thanks and feelings to those who served Norma in her last days. I cannot, ever, express my gratitude to those young people who made Norma so comfortable as possible.

An unidentified man holds a poster that reads: 'Death Penalty for Terrorists Montesinos' with the face of Vladimiro Montesinos Wednesday in front of the Justice Palace in Lima, Peru.

With ex-spy chief, Peru will put its past on trial

The Washington Post

LIMA, Peru - For years, a death squad operated here. Its most notorious crime was the murders of 15 people in the Barrios Altos neighborhood. The killings occurred in November 1991, but the first arrests in the case came only this month - five military officers operating under the direction of former intelligence chief Vladimiro Montesinos.

Vladimiro Montesinos

Arrests for such old crimes have become commonplace in Peru, a country exploring a recent past scarred by state-sponsored murder and by guerrilla terrorism that killed more than 30,000 people. Saturday's capture of Montesinos, wanted here for the Barrios Altos killings and others, has brought a potentially explosive source of information to the judicial process and fresh hope for many that Peru's mysteries of the past two decades may soon be explained.

"This is the start of a new chapter for this country, one of transparent self-criticism," Enrique Bernales, a lawyer for the Andean Commission of Jurists, said Tuesday at the start of an anti-corruption conference. That self-examination will be carried out during Montesinos' impending trial on corruption, drug trafficking and murder charges as well as by a national Truth Commission, created this month by President Valentin Paniagua to examine the past 20 years of violence. The panel will operate much like those in El Salvador, Guatemala, Chile and South Africa, weighing as it goes along the value of amnesty vs. punishment, financial compensation vs. public apology.

Paniagua is scheduled to name its seven members Friday and they will begin gathering testimony as President-elect Alejandro Toledo takes office later this month. At the same time, the Peruvian government is pressing for the extradition from Japan of former president Alberto Fujimori to answer accusations of corruption and murder leveled against him since he fled Peru in November.

"It is extremely important for us to realize what happened, officially and unofficially," said Gino Costa, former head of the national ombudsman's human rights division who now runs Peru's prison system. "Why did violence begin? How did it happen? And how can we prevent it?"

SEARS In our June 24 insert, we advertised men's and misses' patriotic tees. Due to quality issues, these items are no longer available. We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause our customers.

from happening again? We also hope it brings a measure of relief to the families of the victims."

Peru's most recent period of violence, rooted in a distorted distribution of wealth and a tradition of racism against Indians, the country's largest ethnic group, dates to the creation of the Shining Path guerrilla movement in 1980. The group never had more than 2,000 armed members, analysts say, but its leader, Abimael Guzman, said Peru had to be destroyed for a new Maoist system to take its place. Mostly a rural movement until arriving in Lima in 1990, the group terrorized people in towns and villages, killing suspected government collaborators, attacking military installations and planting car bombs.

A second, smaller guerrilla group called the Tupac Katari Revolutionary Movement emerged in 1984, operating mainly in urban centers, where it carried out mass kidnappings and bombings. Former president Alan Garcia, who lost to Toledo in the recent presidential election, tried unsuccessfully to take on the guerrilla groups from 1985 through 1990. But the movements grew, and Peruvian human rights groups have since identified more than 228 civilian murders carried out during that time by paramilitary organizations allegedly linked to the Garcia government.

Fujimori and Montesinos had far more success. Guzman was captured in 1992, two years after Fujimori took office, and a brutal anti-guerrilla campaign, eventually extinguished the Shining Path. But the rosy legacy of those years, surfacing more accurately Tuesday in the mass graves discovered around Peru almost every week, is being re-examined as Montesinos awaits his trial.

Court: U.S. should have delayed execution

The Washington Post

BERLIN - Justice, the International Court of Law, the United Nations and the highest tribunal ruled Wednesday that the United States broke international law in the 1999 execution of a German national. The court also sought to expand its authority, declaring for the first time that interim decisions it issues are binding.

Wading into two of the most emotional transatlantic issues, the death penalty in America and U.S. reluctance to bow to international bodies, the 15-member

"world court" effectively claimed influence over the American legal system. The 14-1 decision punished opponents of capital punishment in Europe and seemed certain to infuriate Americans who feel that international organizations and treaties intrude on U.S. sovereignty.

The case grew out of the first-degree murder convictions of brothers Karl and Walter LaGrand, who moved to the United States from Germany in 1967 as children but never gave up their German nationality. They were convicted of the 1982 killings of a bank manager during a botched robbery in Tucson, Ariz.

Karl LaGrand was executed first in Paris, just 27 hours before Walter was to go to the gas chamber. Germany sued in the World Court, alleging that the brothers been denied access to German consular officials after their arrest. The court asked for a postponement, but Arizona went ahead with the execution.

The LaGrand case was watched closely in Germany and other countries of the European Union, where the death penalty is illegal.

European citizens put on American death rows often attract wide public attention in Europe.

Wednesday's ruling comes at a time of widespread disgust among European politicians with capital punishment in the United States and deep American suspicion about legal globalization, including, for instance, a proposed U.N. treaty to set up an international criminal court to prosecute war crimes.

The verdict is binding and not subject to appeal; however, the World Court has no way to enforce compliance.

Sharon leaves Washington with disagreements instead of backing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Inviting himself to the White House, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon was hoping for talk of unity at the expense of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Instead, Sharon wound up his Washington visit Wednesday after a show of public disagreement with President Bush. Sharon and Bush clashed in public over how much reduction in Mideast violence would be enough to trigger further political moves. And in a closed meeting they disagreed over the explosive issue of freezing construction in Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"There must be a total cessation of violence" before any negotiations, Sharon said at every opportunity, even correcting a reporter who asked about "cessation."

"Total cessation," Sharon interjected. Bush made it clear from the outset that his administration does not share the all-or-nothing Israeli view. He spoke of a need for an all-out effort by Arafat to stop the violence, but he also said he would concentrate on "what's realistic and what's possible."

The president sent Secretary of State Colin Powell to the Middle East ahead of Sharon's departure Wednesday to nudge the peace effort forward.

"This is going to be a long and difficult process," Powell said in Egypt, his first stop before talks Thursday in Israel with both sides. Sharon and Bush face different pressures, so the tension at their meeting was not surprising, said David Makovsky of the

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon

Thinks there must be total cessation of violence

Sharon has political pressures because of a spate of killings of settlers on West Bank roads," Makovsky said. Settlers have run funeral corteges past the prime minister's office, he noted.

Bush, Makovsky said, is being pressured by Arab allies to force Israel to accept terms to end a conflagration they fear could spread to their countries.

Powell's mission in the Middle East is to shore up the shaky cease-fire negotiated two weeks ago by CIA Director George Tenet and to press the sides to adopt measures recommended by an international commission headed by former U.S. Sen. George Mitchell.

The Mitchell report calls for a cessation of a cooling-off period, confidence-building measures including a freeze on settlement construction in the disputed areas, and, finally, peace negotiations.

Sharon insists on a complete halt in Paris, just 27 hours before Walter was to go to the gas chamber.

Sharon insisted on a complete halt in Paris, just 27 hours before Walter was to go to the gas chamber. Sharon insisted on a complete halt in Paris, just 27 hours before Walter was to go to the gas chamber.

Palestinians contend Sharon is stalling to avoid dealing with the settlement issue. Palestinian negotiator Ahmed Qureia says delay will kill the peace process.

Sensing a crack in "what appeared to be a tight U.S.-Israeli front against them," the Palestinians released a five-page outline of the issues they plan to raise with Powell, including a complaint that Sharon intends to "reset the clock" after every act of violence.

Sharon said construction must continue within the settlements to accommodate the needs of the 200,000 settlers. Accepting a freeze would suggest the fate of the settlements is predetermined, Sharon says, while it must be discussed in negotiations.

The Palestinians say the settlements are an illegal encroachment on their land and must be removed. The United States has labeled them obstacles to peace. Serving in previous governments, Sharon approved construction of many of the settlements, especially in crowded Palestinian areas.

While this was Sharon's second visit to the White House in three months, Arafat has not been invited.

Hoping to show that the Bush administration is in his corner, Sharon asked for Tuesday's White House meeting after accepting an invitation to address a banquet of the American-Israel Friendship League in New York.

Police patrol Somalia's capital for first time in decade

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) - Hundreds of armed policemen began patrolling the streets of Somalia's capital Wednesday for the first time in 10 years, as the fledgling government tried to take back the streets from clan-based militias.

In the first major police operation since President Mohamed Siad Barre was ousted in 1991, more than 2,000 uniformed officers and 45 pickup trucks fitted with anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns deployed at dawn at strategic points in Mogadishu, police Col. Abdi Hassan Awaleh Qeybdiid said.

One gunman was killed by police and another 50 arrested. However, police reported no serious battles.

Barre's ouster set off a decade of factional fighting that left Somalia without a central government until last August, when 245 Somali legislators meeting in neighboring Djibouti elected Abdiqassim Salaid Hassan as president.

Abdiqassim's government moved to Mogadishu from abroad in October and has slowly tried to establish its authority in this African nation of 7 million, starting in Mogadishu. Its previous attempts to flex its muscles have failed, with gunmen loyal to faction leaders forcing government forces to retreat.

The government had launched a recruiting drive to reform the police, which disappeared during the years of anarchy. Former police and army officers were asked to return to service and camps were set up to train militiamen. Police receive a $60 monthly salary.

On Wednesday, nearly 150 police and four trucks had replaced the usual ragtag band of gunmen at a junction near the main Baka market long famous for bank robberies among militias that often ran extortion rackets.

"We chased them (the militia) away. At the end there were five of them who opened fire at us, but fortunately none of our men was hit," Qeybdiid said. "Unless all roads are open and accessible for the police, the threat of insecurity will exist."

Deputy Minister of Information Ali Mohamed Arraleh, who is also a member of the national security committee, said the time had come for the government to take "drastic measures" against the lawlessness that plagues Mogadishu.

"We will no longer stand the banditry, and this operation will continue until Mogadishu is safe for the children to go to school and for businessmen to exercise their businesses without fear," Arraleh said in an interview.

It might be Atlantis, but who knows.

BIMINI, Bahamas - Mystics chant over it. Divers swim around it. Porcupinefish hide in it. But nobody can agree on the origins of the unusual, shaped rock formation known as Bimini Roads, located in 18 feet of water off the north end of this Bahamian island.

I had to see it for myself. For years, I had heard the double row of rectangular beachrock was believed to be the remains of the lost continent of Atlantis, an ancient civilization first mentioned in the writings of Plato. This theory was advanced by psychic Edgar Cayce, who predicted in the 1930s that Atlantis would rise near the island of Bimini between 1967-68. Cayce's prediction grabbed everyone's attention in 1968 when a private pilot flying over Bimini spotted the odd rock formation in the clear, shallow water. The pilot hired a bonefish guide to take him to the site and shot some underwater photographs that were published around the world. Ocean pioneer Jacques Cousteau filmed a television documentary on the Bimini Roads, and other researchers quickly descended upon it.

BEND IN THE RIVER

Some concluded it was man-made - not necessarily Atlantis, but possibly the remains of an ancient civilization that collapsed when worldwide water levels rose after the last Ice Age. Others declared it was beachrock, like the ledges lining the island that you can see from the water.

Whatever. Fascination with the site is a boon to Bill & Nowdia Keefe's Bimini Undersea, which offers guided snorkel and dive tours.

"I've been here 17 years, and while I won't tell you I believe it's Atlantis, I have seen some unexplained things there," Bill Keefe said.

I couldn't wait to see the Bimini Roads. I joined a group of six that set out aboard the Keefe's boat with captain Alan Forestal and dive master Theo Duncombe.

When I finally got on my scuba gear and dived in, I was somewhat disappointed. The would-be Atlantis - about half the size of a football field - appeared to be little more than scattered, squarish boulders covered with marine growth. Sea whips and sea fans grow on top of the rocks. Grunts, goatfish, angelfish and other assorted tropicals swim between them.

But when I kicked over from the curved part of the J to the straight-line segment, I was struck by the precision of the boulders. It reminded me of what Keefe said just before we left:

"My teacher told me there are no straight lines and right angles in nature," he said. "But you are going to see straight lines and right angles."

He was right. It was a bit disconcerting, but not enough to stop me from pursuing a porcupinefish that was trying to hide behind a ledge.

After burning up only about half my tank of air, I returned to the surface with my two dive buddies, a father and son from Orlando.

"So, what did you think?" I asked the father, David Gouge.

"I'd be hard-pressed to say people put those rocks there," he replied. "They look like a pile of rocks to me."

What about it, I asked Forestal, a lifelong Bimini resident.

"An ancient civilization, yeah," he replied. "But Atlantis? Who knows?"

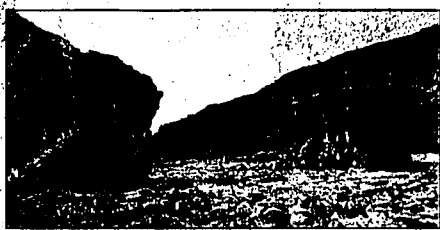

It seems the legend of Atlantis in Bimini ebbs and flows with the tide, but there's likely to be a huge surge in interest now with the release of the animated feature film, "Atlantis: The Lost Empire". The intermittent trickle of crystal-toting, chanting mystics who have visited the site over the years aboard the Keefe's boat could grow into a tidal wave.

Duncombe, the dive master, is ready.

"Feel the power," he intoned, mimicking their incantations. He rolled his eyes and burst out laughing.

TOWERS OF STRENGTH

Though no less impressive, the towers at Let's Make A Deal aren't as finely sculpted as those at Pillar Falls.

The six stone towers at Let's Make A Deal, just west of the Hansen Bridge, are a remarkable sight.

With the Snake River low, this is a great time to visit these incredible structures

The Snake River is running mighty low this summer, so this is an ideal time to explore two unearthly collections of stone towers that jut from the riverbed: Pillar Falls and Let's Make A Deal.

They are amazing places, where a handful of 40- to 60-foot towers defiantly beside the Snake. They have withstood the onslaught of Idaho's mightiest river for millennia and, chances are, they will continue to stand for a few years more.

Though they are similar, there are subtle differences between Pillar Falls and Let's Make A Deal. At Pillar Falls, the towers are gracefully sculpted - some with bases narrower than their upper reaches. At Let's Make A Deal, the towers are squat and blocky chunks of stone.

In both places, the Snake River is almost hop-across wide, which makes them prime candidates for a leisurely heel-and-toe inspection.

Pillar Falls

Though it's a stone's throw from the modern amenities of Twin Falls, Pillar Falls would make an ideal backdrop for a dinosaur movie. Squint your eyes, and you can almost picture a brontosaurus rubbing up against the 60-foot towers.

There are a handful of towers, but only two of them are easy walk-ups. They are on the south side of the river and, unfortunately, they are the least pillar-like towers in the bunch.

But there is one tower that can be scaled with a little low-level rock climbing. The center-most tower on the downstream edge of the group is outfitted with a sturdy old ladder. The

Getting there: Pillar Falls

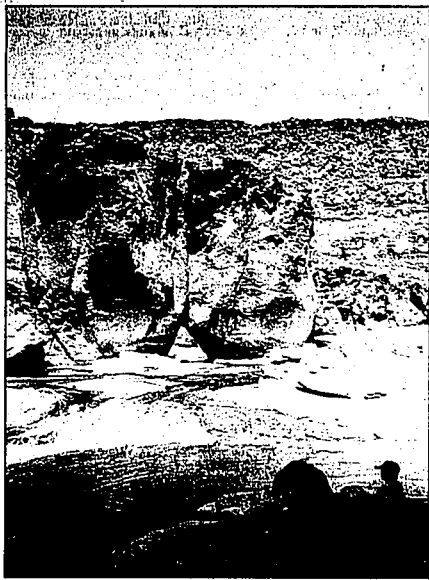

To be classic, approach Pillar Falls by boat. To get there, launch at Centennial Park and head upstream, under the Perrine Bridge. For a little more than a mile, the sinuous towers at Pillar Falls rise from the river. The other approach is by land. Hard, hikers can follow a rough, steep, rocky trail that drops into the canyon. To get there, drive west on Pole Line Road and keep going past the junction of Pole Line and Eastside Drive. The road narrows to a single-lane street and, after a while, the access road will be on your left. Park at the top and start hiking from there. The scenic look is gorgeous, and motor vehicles are prohibited. There are several homes in the area, so be quiet and respectful; be sure to carry out your garbage.

ladder is hidden in a cleft on the downstream edge. The ladder reaches all the way to the top, but it doesn't extend to the bottom. Instead, its feet rest on a ledge about 10 feet from the bottom of the tower. Bring your own step ladder or, alternatively, fish around on the right-hand wall for the necessary handholds; two or three moves should get you to the ladder.

It's worth the climb, because the summit is both spacious and grassy. Bring a picnic lunch and plan to stay a while.

Be forewarned: Even in a good water year, there is no waterfall at Pillar Falls. Instead, it is a series of whorled ledges with only a few feet of elevation differential. Now that the Snake is almost bereft of water, the ledges are great places for scrambling.

Please see TOWERS, Page D2

Some of the towers at Pillar Falls are remarkably slender at their base. The Snake River is running even lower today than it is in this file photo.

Weekend event will teach safe paddling

The Times-News

TUTTLE - The Fourth Annual WaterWise event, which teaches safe boat handling skills, will be held this weekend.

Participants will learn basic canoeing and kayaking skills. Paddling strokes, rescue techniques and essential equipment also will be covered. A variety of boats will be available to test paddle. Participants also will learn the location of access points along the Snake River.

The event will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Malad Gorge State Park. At 9 a.m. Sunday, participants will take to the water and paddle the Snake River from Banbury Hot Springs to Sligars Thousand Springs Resort.

The fee is $10 per person, which includes the use of boats and equipment - as well as a Dutch oven lunch prepared by Kevin Lynott, manager of Malad Gorge State Park. There will be a raffle and prizes will be awarded.

Sponsors include the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, the College of Southern Idaho Outdoor Recreation Program, River Whitewater Toys, High Adventure River Tours, Snake River Canyon Tours and the Wendell Optimist Club.

Idaho study focuses on catching hatchery fish

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Fish and Game researchers are seeking the help of Idaho anglers to send in the jaw tags of hatchery fish to help determine if it is possible to breed more catchable fish. Researchers Dan Schill and Joe Kozlaky are hoping to produce better fishing for anglers by selectively breeding hatchery trout to be more catchable. The study began in 1998 when 2,750 rainbow trout from the Hayspur Hatchery were tagged and caught and released while researchers kept track of how many times each fish was caught. The fish that were caught more than twice during the study were bred with other easily caught fish. The offspring of the easy-to-catch fish are now large enough to stock Idaho waters. Now the researchers want to know if these offspring are easier to catch than other trout.

Equal numbers of the experimental and normal fish are being tagged and released into 16 streams and reservoirs in eastern Idaho and the Sun Valley area. "We know hatchery trout stocked in Idaho are caught at rates similar to trout stocked in other states," Schill said. "Still we are trying to do better by breeding only those fish that appear unusually catchable." The researchers not only hope to give anglers more fish, they also want to stretch the money brought in from license fees. On average, only one in three trout stocked in streams are caught, that means it costs Idaho sportsman about $1.50 for each stocked trout caught and kept. "Anything we can do to increase the percentage of stocked trout caught by anglers is just good business, not to mention making fishing better," Kozlaky said.

Towers

Let's Make A Deal

Just west of the Hansen Bridge are six towers that comprise Let's Make A Deal. Four of the towers are arranged in a ragged row across the river, creating five gaps — or doors. The name Let's Make A Deal comes from an old television game show in which contestants were confronted with three closed doors; a valuable prize was hidden behind one of the doors, while less-attractive offerings were waiting behind the other doors.

When the Snake River is flowing, Let's Make A Deal is the site of a memorable whitewater rapid. Kayakers and rafters must choose which door to navigate — but Monty Hall and Carol Merrill aren't standing by to fish them out. Paddlers who choose wrong get run through the Snake's very own rinse-and-spin cycle.

CAUTION: This is not a good place for small children. The approach is demanding, and the riverbed is uncompromisingly rough and uneven. There is plenty of potential for a nasty tumble.

But the roughness of the riverbed is part of the charm at Let's Make A Deal. The river's relentless flow has sculpted the basalt into something resembling Swiss cheese. Round potholes, some large enough to stand in, have been sculpted from the rock. In some places, the holes are separated by wildly fluted ribs of rock.

Bear River: Little refuge for waterfowl

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Waterfowl expecting to spend any time at the Bear River Migratory Bird Refuge this fall need to change their reservations. The rooms are still nice, but the pool is dry and may not be working again until next spring.

While other northern Utah refuges appear to be in good shape heading into the mid-summer, officials at Bear River have already made drastic plans for the fall because of recent water flows more typical of August than June.

Al Trout, manager of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service refuge west of Brigham City, says the Bear River is trickling into the marshes at a rate 90 percent lower than normal years. "I have never seen it this low this early," he said. "We are going dry unless the Lord intervenes and sends us a lot of water."

Officials have written off any chances at storing water in four of the five units on the 74,000-acre refuge this summer, but will try to hold water in Unit 1, closest to the Great Salt Lake. "Projections show we will just barely be able to maintain a semblance of water in that unit," he said. "The rest of the refuge will go dry. We are in really tough shape and it is going to get really bad."

Normal Bear River flows into the refuge this time of year are 6,000-acre feet a day. A mild winter on the North Slope of the Uinta Mountains, in western Wyoming and southern Idaho, means low water for the Bear River. The Bear is a major source of water for agricultural purposes through three states. By the time it gets to the refuge, it has been reduced significantly.

The trickle that does reach the refuge provides water for the 208 species of birds and numerous mammals such as deer, elk, fox, coyote and raccoon, that frequent the area in the summer. "The snow pack for the Bear River is about 60 percent of normal and that doesn't sound so bad," Trout said. "You would think that it means we would get 60 percent of normal flow into the refuge, but it doesn't happen that way. Things like a low water table translate into a much lower stream flow."

Tom Aldrich, waterfowl coordinator for the first Division of Wildlife Resources, said some areas may feel the effect of low water this summer, but that large refuges such as the Ogden Bay and Farmington Bay waterfowl management areas should be close to normal come fall and the 2001-02 waterfowl hunt. "Wetlands on outer dikes and unmanaged areas may have some problems, but we should have enough water to fill our impoundments," he said. "Waterfowl management areas administered by the DWR rely on rivers not as affected by the mild winter as the Bear River."

Peterman said flows on the downstream portions of the river also are dropping and could force additional river closures later this summer. The closure along the upper Big Hole is likely to remain in effect throughout the summer, Missouri said.

Once abundant in the Missouri River above Great Falls, the population of Arctic grayling in the upper Big Hole River is the last remaining native population in the lower 48 states.

Now there's a fisherman!

A small wildfire earlier this month is not going to keep J.W. Stroder from testing his luck near his trailer home in Broward County, Fla. The fire threatened the Sawgrass Recreation Park but firefighters managed to control it.

Montana agency closes part of river to fishing

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Wildlife officials are closing a 19-mile stretch of the upper Big Hole River to fishing, citing extremely low water that could threaten the river's rare Arctic grayling population.

The closure went into effect at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday. Streamflows have fallen to just 7 cubic feet per second, one of the lowest on record for this time of year, said Larry Peterman, chief of the Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks' Fisheries Division. Normal streamflow at this time of year is about 320 cubic feet per second.

"Like last year at this time, the flows and water temperatures in the upper Big Hole River are at levels that are detrimental to the river's native grayling," Peterman said.

The same stretch of the river also was closed the last week of June 2000 and remained closed until early October. Tuesday's decision is the fifth time since 1988 that authorities have closed the upper stretch of the river to fishing.

The Big Hole is a nationally recognized trout stream, as well as a water source for area farmers and ranchers. Peterman said flows on the downstream portions of the river also are dropping and could force additional river closures later this summer.

The closure along the upper Big Hole is likely to remain in effect throughout the summer, Missouri said.

Utah park offers new picnic areas, sandy beaches

Willard Bay, one of Utah's three main state parks, receives a facelift

WILLARD BAY, Utah (AP) — People really don't want much. Give them a place to park, dip a toe in the water, burn a hamburger and walk on soft sand, and they're happy.

Anything to break routine. Now, with the completion of Phase I improvements at Willard Bay State Park's North Marina, they will be even happier as they bask in luxury.

The park has undergone a makeover. "What we've done," said Courtland Nelson, director of the Utah Division of Parks and Recreation, "is take old (Bureau of Reclamation) facilities that were, literally, pounded to death and put in new, modern facilities."

This would include new camping areas, restrooms, covered picnic tables, group pavilions, a larger launch ramp and improved sandy beach-front property.

It was made possible through a dollar-for-dollar matching agreement between the BOR and the DFR. Each agency put $1 million in this past year and will put in a combined $2.25 million this year toward completion of Phases II and III.

Jay Henry, with the BOR, said his agency was able to direct a larger amount of money into the park, "because we consider (Willard Bay) a high priority. And, because of the state's participation with us, we had the authority to enter a 50-50 partnership."

Without such a partnership, said Nelson, "it's obvious this program would have taken twice as long to complete."

Willard Bay is, in fact, one of the "Big 3" state parks in Utah. Antelope Island, Wasatch Mountain and Ward account for about 75 percent of the total visits to state parks each year.

This will be the third park renovated under the partnership. Work at Rockport and Deer Creek has been completed, and workers are entering their second year at Willard Bay. Once work is done at the North Marina, crews will shift to the well-used and very needy South Marina.

Utah parks department officials earlier this month tour the newly renovated Eagle Beach area at Willard Bay State Park, just north of Salt Lake City.

Currently, there is no overnight camping allowed at the South Marina. Nelson said planned improvements call for "some consideration for nighttime fishermen. What we would allow is some short-term parking for camping. A lot of people like to fish Willard at night, but there's nothing to facilitate their needs."

Next on the list of parks to be improved under the partnership are East Canyon and Lost Creek and possibly, if time and money hold out, Scofield. Nelson said he expected it would take three to four years to get to East Canyon.

Even with only part of the work completed, Willard Bay is a different place.

"This past Memorial Day was the first time in years we didn't have to close the park because of overcrowding and where we didn't have the long lineup of cars waiting to launch boats," said Roland Bringhurst, park manager.

"We have a big body of water here, about 10,000 surface acres. If you go by the national standard, which is one boat per 10 surface acres, we should be able to handle 1,000 boats. With the land base we had before improvements we could only handle 400 boats. Now, with the improvements, additional camping and parking, we can easily handle 600 boats."

What is certain to be one of the more popular attractions is Eagle

Beach, which is in the heart of the park and fronts the reservoir.

Once a sliver of sand along the water's edge, Bringhurst said high-maintenance grass was removed and truckloads of sand were bright in to build up the beach. Now the secluded cove carries a certain air of the tropics.

Washington Federal increases dividend

TWIN FALLS — Washington Federal Inc. — parent company of Washington Federal Savings, which has banking locations in Twin Falls and Jerome — this week announced a 4.3 percent increase in its quarterly cash dividend to 24 cents per share from 23 cents.

The dividend will be payable July 27 to common stockholders of record July 6. This is Washington Federal's 74th consecutive quarterly cash dividend.

"This is the 36th such increase since Washington Federal began publicly trading in 1982 and underscores management's confidence in the company's future prospects," Chief Executive Officer Roy M. Whitehead said.

Washington Federal Savings, with 111 offices in seven states, said it had $6.9 billion in assets and $3.6 billion in deposits March 31.

Broadcasting company moves offices to Idaho

TWIN FALLS — Formerly Washington-based Horizon Broadcasting Group LLC this week said it has moved its corporate headquarters to Boise.

The company owns the full-service KFTI-AM and the classic rock KIKX-FM stations in Twin Falls.

"A majority of our properties are located in Idaho, and we are pleased to have a greater presence in one of America's most vibrant communities," Chief Executive Officer Bill Ackerman said in a statement.

HBG's new headquarters, at 888 Cole Road in Boise, will also house the company's Boise radio properties and the front-office staff of the Boise Hawks Baseball Club.

Nextel Partners inks deal to expand wireless service

TWIN FALLS — Kirkland, Wash.-based Nextel Partners Inc. this week announced it has signed an agreement with Fremont, Calif.-based @Road to deliver "location-enhanced wireless services" to help subscribers — including those in its Twin Falls office — manage their mobile work forces.

Utilizing @Road LocationSmart technology, the new services allow companies with mobile workers, such as those in the service and transportation trades, to track the location, speed and number of stops made by their fleets; schedule maintenance reports; and enable two-way messaging between dispatchers and mobile workers with Nextel Internet-capable phones.

The services expand Nextel Partners' wireless data offerings, which already combine digital cellular, digital two-way radio, wireless Internet access and text/numeric messaging in one phone.

The partnership with @Road arms our customers with even more tools to collaborate and track productivity, which ultimately helps the bottom line," said John Chapple, Nextel Partners president and chief executive officer. "The training and management tools are especially helpful for businesses managing a fleet of workers, where knowledge of staff, vehicle locations and schedules can greatly enhance efficiencies."

Zions CFO faces charges of child endangerment

SALT LAKE CITY — The suspended chief financial officer of Zions Bancorp — which has Magic Valley banking branches — was charged with possessing drugs and endangering his 15-year-old daughter.

Dale Gibbons was arraigned Wednesday but waived his right to have the charges read in court. He faces three felony counts: methamphetamine possession, dealing in material harmful to a minor and endangering a child.

Gibbons, 41, was arrested last week after he called 911 to report a young woman had overdosed at his house. Gibbons' daughter and a 19-year-old woman were hospitalized in critical condition.

According to court documents, the older woman tested positive for cocaine and either GHB, commonly known as the date-rape drug, or ketamine, an animal anesthetic referred to as "special K."

His daughter had an "unknown substance" in her system and both women had consumed "significant amounts" of alcohol, court documents said.

Bank officials have suspended Gibbons, who is free on $150,000 bail, while the matter is investigated. Plans are under way for an outside audit of bank records.

Urban Renewal Agency drafts lease

Everton Mattress Factory wants space

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A space-crunched mattress manufacturer may find its way cleared within days to expand near its Old Towne plant.

Everton Mattress Factory earlier this year looked at moving part of its operations away from Second Avenue South, but the company has settled on its original top choice: Stay home and grow there.

Vice President Larry Everton last fall said the business urgently needs room to add machines and employees, and he appealed to the city's Urban Renewal Agency.

After months of deliberation, Urban Renewal representatives and Everton Mattress leaders are drafting a lease of Urban Renewal-owned buildings and land near the mattress factory in Old Towne, said the city's economic development director, Dave McAlindin, on Wednesday.

Seeking leaders

Twin Falls' Urban Renewal Agency needs a few board members to help lead development efforts on the south side of town.

The terms of Urban Renewal board members Fred Harder and Donna Birtze expire July 5, and member C. Alan Homer resigned about two weeks ago, leaving a board position vacant, said Dave McAlindin, the city's economic development director.

His office is trying to set up an Urban Renewal board meeting

Both Harder and Birtze have indicated interest in being reappointed, McAlindin said, but the City Council wants Urban Renewal to solicit other candidates in the community.

Candidates may send letters of interest and information about their professional backgrounds to McAlindin at City Hall by Tuesday. The Urban Renewal board will recommend its picks to the City Council, which makes the final appointments.

in the next few days to vote on the lease.

"We're hopeful," Everton said last week, adding that the Old Towne site is the best fit for the manufacturer. "We're just trying to get it to go."

Here's the situation in Old Towne:

Urban Renewal in 2000 swapped land north of Victory Avenue, plus $50,000, for Salt Lake City-based Swire Coca-Cola USA's buildings and land at the corner of Third Avenue South and Third Street South.

Everton in September asked Urban Renewal to sell the mat-

Federal Reserve cuts rate one-quarter point

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve cut a key interest rate Wednesday for a sixth time this year. But the reduction was only a quarter-point, instead of the half-point moves taken since January.

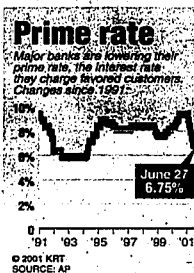

In a brief statement, the Fed provided no explanation why it switched to a smaller cut, other than citing that "continuing favorable trends bolster long-term prospects for productivity growth and the economy."

Many economists had expected the smaller reduction, saying some Fed officials were growing concerned that its most aggressive credit-easing campaign in nearly two decades was laying the groundwork for higher inflation next year.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average gave up a 33-point gain and lost another 35 points within 15 minutes of the Fed's announcement.

The Fed cut its target for the federal funds rate, the interest banks charge each other on overnight loans to 3.75 percent, the lowest since April 18, 1994, when the funds rate also stood at 3.75 percent.

Almost immediately, commercial banks, led by Bank of America and Bank One, began cutting their prime lending rates, from 7.0 to 6.75 percent, lowest since 1994. The prime is the benchmark for millions of consumer and business loans.

Economists widely expected the Fed policy makers to administer another bracing tonic to the economy in the form of a sixth interest rate cut. But they were divided over what they believed to be the right dosage: another half-point or a quarter-point reduction.

General Mills posts strong quarter

BridgNews

KANSAS CITY — Strong cereal sales helped boost fourth-quarter profits at food conglomerate General Mills Inc., which is still waiting for regulatory approval to complete its purchase of baking giant Pillsbury Co.

For the period ended May 27, Minneapolis-based General Mills — which has several grain operations in the Magic Valley — earned $146 million, or 50 cents per share, compared with $109 million, or 37 cents, a year earlier. Excluding one-time items, the company met Wall Street's forecasts of 42 cents per share.

Revenue in the fourth quarter increased 7 percent to $1.8 billion as sales of cereals such as Cheerios, Kix and Wheaties rebounded from recent sluggishness. The company's cereal line accounts for almost half of its total revenue and about a third of its cereal sales.

General Mills also sold more products in the fourth quarter compared with a year earlier. Its unit volume climbed 6 percent, better than analysts' expectations of a 4 percent increase. Volume in its convenience food category posted a particularly strong gain of 11 percent, thanks in large part to the company's new Milk 'n Cereal Bars. The division also marketed YoPlait

Yogurt and Nature Valley granola bars.

Though General Mills recently raised prices 2 percent to offset rising energy costs, Chief Executive Officer Stephen Sanger said sales volume growth would slow in the first quarter of fiscal 2002 and rise less than 5 percent. He added that per-share earnings would grow 6 to 9 percent in the period.

Still, the company expects full-year profits in 2002 to grow more than 10 percent for the fifth consecutive year. However, those projections do not include potential earnings dilution from the Pillsbury acquisition. In July 2000, General Mills agreed to buy Diageo PLC's Pillsbury subsidiary in a $1.05 billion deal.

The consensus analyst estimates from Thomson Financial/First Call assume dilution from the Pillsbury purchase and peg General Mills' full-year earnings for fiscal 2002 at $1.91 per share. That's down 13 percent from 2001 earnings of $2.20.

During a conference call with investors and analysts, Sanger refused to speculate how pursuing Pillsbury might affect General Mills' fiscal 2002 ledger.

"I'm leery of giving additional guidance until we get to closing," he said.

But Sanger acknowledged that he like many investors, is getting antsy.

"Obviously, we want to close sooner rather than later," he said. "We wanted to close six months ago."

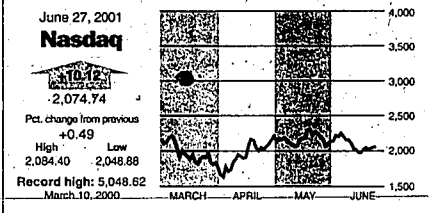

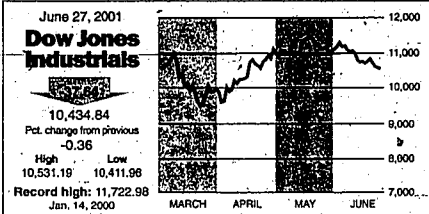

General Mills originally planned to close the deal by the end of 2001. Sanger said the company now expects to complete the purchase by the end of August.

In a research report released early Wednesday, George Dahlman, an analyst with U.S. Bancorp Piper Jaffray, predicted a 75 percent likelihood that the deal will close by the end of August. Conversely, he regards the possibility it may fall apart as slim.

Dahlman said he thinks a trademark licensing arrangement in the merger agreement remains the biggest sticking point with the Federal Trade Commission. The original deal called for a 20-year, license-free use of Pillsbury's Dough Boy, but the FTC may have concern about the open-ended nature of that arrangement and whether it could expand the trademark's scope.

Pillsbury is the No. 1 U.S. maker of refrigerated dough, and it is second only to General Mills in baking mixes. The company also makes Green Giant vegetables and Haagen-Dazs premium ice cream.

Bankruptcy plan says WGI chairman threatened to leave

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Billionaire Chairman Dennis Washington threatened to resign from Washington Group International and require the company to change its name if more than 25 percent of certain divisions are sold before its bankruptcy plan is approved, court documents say. The files in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Reno also relate that Washington might have left the company if he had not been allowed to buy a major stake in the reorganized company. He signed a deal with Washington Group bankers last week that allows him to buy up to 40 percent of the new company. His stipulations were revealed in Washington Group's disclosure plan, the most detailed look so far at how the company is to be restructured. The plan names a one-time international construction giant Morrison Knudsen Co. as the new owner. The plan also says that Washington will receive 15 percent of the reorganized company over a two-year period. He also has agreed to serve as chairman without compensation for at least two years.

Lease

Continued from E1. After the five years Urban Renewal could let Everett Mattress vacate in 90 days. The lease would be effective July 1 and include both several adjoining Coca-Cola buildings and a vacant property near downtown, also owned by Urban Renewal, McAlindin said. Under the lease — at least in the current draft — Everett Mattress would pay for all improvements, maintenance, repair and insurance, he said. The lease amount would reflect "fair value" for the property — but somewhat less than market value, to thank the mattress manufacturer for its continued presence in Twin Falls, he added. The turning point in Urban Renewal's deliberations about the former Coca-Cola property, McAlindin said, was board members' recognition of the mattress business as "an old-line family and community business." The city and county want to help retain it. The proposed lease, as McAlindin described it, addresses that possibility. If Urban Renewal signs off on it, the five-year, renewable lease would include a provision that

ANNUAL CITY OF KIMBERLY DRINKING WATER QUALITY REPORT
We're pleased to report that our drinking water is safe and meets federal and state requirements. The Annual Quality Water Report is designed to inform you about the quality of water and services we deliver to you every day.

Our water source is derived from deep wells that draw from the Snake River Aquifer. We utilize five wells that we treat with chlorine gas at 2 separate storage and distribution centers. The report shows the results of our testing and the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water.

TEST RESULTS
Contaminant Violation Y/N Level Detected Unit MCLG MCL Likely Source of Contamination

Table with columns: Contaminant, Violation Y/N, Level Detected, Unit, MCLG, MCL, Likely Source of Contamination. Rows include Microbiological Contaminants (Total Coliform Bacteria, Fecal Coliform and E.coli, Turbidity), Radioactive Contaminants (Beta/Photon emitters, Alpha emitters, Combined radium), Inorganic Contaminants (Atronic, Barium, Copper, Fluoride, Nitrate, Selenium), and Synthetic Organic Contaminants (DDE, DDE-ethylhexyl phthalate).

No Volatile Inorganic Contaminants were detected. Microbiological Contaminants: (1) Total Coliform, Coliforms are bacteria that are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other, potentially harmful, bacteria may be present.

(2) Fecal coliform/E. Coli, Fecal coliforms and E. coli are bacteria whose presence indicates that the water may be contaminated with human or animal wastes. Microbes in these wastes can cause short-term effects, such as diarrhea, cramps, nausea, headaches, or other symptoms. They may also cause a general health risk for infants, young children, and people with severely compromised immune systems. (3) Turbidity, Turbidity has no health effects. However, turbidity can interfere with disinfection and provide a medium for microbial growth. Turbidity may indicate the presence of disease-causing organisms. These organisms include bacteria, viruses, and parasites that can cause symptoms such as nausea, cramps, diarrhea, and associated headaches.

IV Definitions

Maximum Contamination Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Treatment Techniques: A region of process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Action Level: The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

V Health Information
 Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

Drinking water, including bottled water, may occasionally be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

Contaminants that may be present in source water before we treat it include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally-occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or leaching.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agricultural, urban stormwater runoff, and residential uses.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

Radionuclide contaminants, which can be naturally-occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"No question is ever settled Until it is settled right" — Ella Wheeler Wilcox

"I never know what to do in these situations," complained a defeated South. "The bidding and the fall of the high cards revealed nothing about where the heart ace might be."

"You might have considered West's choice of opening lead, preferred North."

West led his diamond jack and continued with another diamond when the jack won the trick. South ruffed the second diamond and crossed to dummy's club jack to take a losing trump finesse. When West shifted to a low heart, should South play the jack, or the king?

After a tormenting start, South played dummy's jack, crediting East with the ace as part of his overcall. East's queen won a heart-return went to West's ace of a crippling one down.

Based on the bidding and play, South had little information about the heart honors. Either defender could have the heart ace or the queen, without affecting the bidding.

A more substantial clue was available from West's choice of opening lead. When a defender has bid a suit and partner has supported, the opening leader is very likely to lead the suit when he holds the queen. He might not lead the suit if he holds the ace, choosing a safer lead instead.

Accordingly, South should play West for the heart ace when West shifts to a low heart. Dummy's king wins, and South loses only one heart trick, scoring his vulnerable game.
