House passes charities bill

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON - The House approved President Bush's proposal to expand the role of religious charities in social programs Thursday after Republican moderates swallowed their misgivings that the measure could lead to discrimination against minorities and voted with the GOP leadership.
The 233 to 198 vote represented a victory for the president on one of his top domestic priorities - an attempt to allevi-

GOP moderates give up objection; Senate leader expresses concerns over potential for discrimination ate the country's social problems by directing more federal funds to religious organizations that provide social services to the poor and needy. It would expand religious groups' opportunities to obtain government money for an array of social services such as hunger relief and domestic abuse counseling, and would provide modest tax breaks to encourage charitable giving by Americans who do not itemize their taxes.

Idaho Reps. Mike Simpson and Butch Otter voted with the majority.
Bush welcomed the vote as a step toward achieving his goal to "infuse good people of faith and works in every community in our country." In a statement issued in London, the president urged quick Senate action "to quickly unleash this enormous force for good."
But two days of contentious debate in the House over the proposal, particularly its language that would pre-empt state and local anti-discrimination laws, signaled the difficulties confronting the White House in enacting the bill into law.
Republican moderates said they hoped the Senate would amend the legislation to require charities taking federal money to

Paralyzed woman undergoes experimental treatment

The Associated Press
DENVER - As Melissa Holley lay in a hospital bed paralyzed from her chest down after a car accident, her father spent two sleepless nights surfing the Web, hoping to find a way to heal her.
Roy Holley didn't believe the doctors who said his 19-year-old daughter would never walk again.

What he found on the Internet was a highly experimental procedure that had proved successful in restoring some movement to rats with severed spinal cords. It had never been tried on humans.

With no other hope, her family flew the young woman to Israel, where she underwent the procedure, in which the patient's own activated white blood cells are injected into the spinal cord in the hope that they will swallow up dead tissue and also cause regeneration to the tissue.

Hospital faces lawsuit by former associates

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two health care professionals have brought a tort claim against Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, claiming wrongful termination, breach of contract and other business-related grievances.
Damages sought by therapists Cherril Suter and Mindy Harmer total more than $2 million, and they seek punitive damages of more than $250,000.

The tort claim boils down to the contention that a business relationship evolved between the therapists' company, Cornerstone Therapy LLC, and Magic Valley Regional that resulted in a hospital takeover of Cornerstone.
Brian Harper, Cornerstone's Twin Falls attorney, said his clients basically wound up giving away their business and are trying to recover.
"The hospital used its superior management and management skills of Cherril Suter and Mindy Harmer to establish its own physical rehabilitation department - and now it set up in direct competition with them," the tort claim says.
While the claim names Twin Falls

County - the owner of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center - it was served on both agencies, and it is the hospital that the claim is brought against, Harper said.
The hospital has its own insurance and legal department for handling the matter.
Hospital spokesman Shawn Bissett said the hospital cannot comment on pending litigation.

"We have received notice of the tort claim," he said. "No official litigation has been filed."
A tort claim is a precursor to a lawsuit. If a government agency does not respond to a tort claim within 90 days, the claimant can file a lawsuit against the agency. Cornerstone's tort claim was filed at the end of June.
Claimed are wrongful termination, violation of due process rights, breach of contract, bad faith, defamation, loss of reputation, loss of business opportunity and financial standing, interference with prospective economic advantage, conversion of Cornerstone property, trespass and invasion of privacy, negligence, civil conspiracy and infliction of emotional distress.
Please see HOSPITAL, Page A2

Despite repeated requests by Cornerstone and repeated assurances from the hospital, a contract never was written to formalize their business association, the tort claim says.

EPA issues regulations for genetically engineered crops

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Environmental Protection Agency on Thursday issued rules for regulating crops that are genetically engineered to ward off pests.
The decision came seven years after the rules were first proposed. The rules are supported both by environmental groups and the biotech industry, and EPA has been following them informally. However, there had been some dispute over the regulations among researchers who felt they went too far.
Cotton and corn that have been genetically engineered to produce their own pesticides already are in wide use.

Crops that are developed by conventional methods are exempt from the regulations, although manufacturers must report any adverse effects.
The rules include a provision that says all DNA of the gene-altered crops is safe for food use. Any pesticide substances in the plant, however, could be subject to restrictions.
Industry officials say that the DNA exemption could make it more difficult for the government to demand recalls of food made with StarLink corn, a genetically engineered corn that was discovered in the food supply last fall although it had not been approved for human consumption.

Bush concedes he has 'vague notions' of missile plan

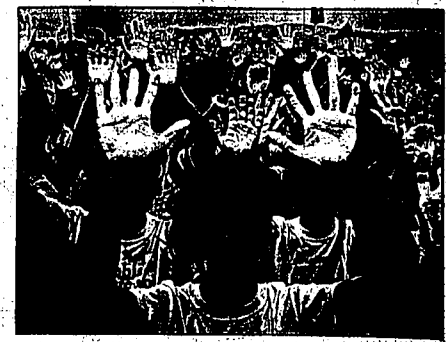

Combined wire reports
HALTON, England - President Bush said Thursday he is having a hard time selling a missile defense plan to skeptical allies in Europe because he has only "vague notions" about what it would entail. Bush also bristled at criticism of his climate change policy.
"Our strategy must make sure working people in America are not thrown out of work," Bush said at a joint news conference with British Prime Minister Tony Blair. Their meeting, the second of Bush's presidency, underscored how much divides the United States and its closest allies.
"Though the two leaders papered over their differences, the session at the prime minister's 436-year old retreat served as a preview of thorny issues awaiting Bush when he travels Friday to Genoa, Italy, for a three-day summit of the world's wealthiest nations, plus Russia.

The key issues - A2 Tough talks on climate - B7

The global warming issue comes as a report is set to be released today stating that the odds are dead even that the world's average temperature will increase at least 5 degrees by the end of the century, enough to trigger flooding, famine and drought across much of the globe.
It's the first time scientists have computed the likelihood that Earth would get warmer by specific degrees. The study, in today's edition of the journal Science, addresses a key criticism about the issue of global warming, that of scientific uncertainty, which the Bush administration has cited for its go-slow approach to the issue.

The study was done by Tom Wigley, a senior scientist at the U.S. National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., and Sarah Raper of the University of East Anglia in England.
Their study concluded that there is a 90 percent chance global warming will increase Earth's temperature from 3 to 9 degrees by 2100. Wigley and Raper consider a 5-degree increase most likely.
There is a 50-50 chance that the world will get at least one degree warmer by 2030.
Scientists are beginning to use these probability studies, which mathematically set the odds for an event, to try to understand

Demonstrators, their hands painted white to symbolize their opposition to the summit, protest Thursday in Genoa, Italy, the meeting today of the leaders of the world's richest nations. President Bush is scheduled to arrive today.

GOP pushes energy bill with billions in tax breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Republican leaders hope to pass a broad energy package in the coming weeks that offers billions of dollars in tax breaks and favors for the coal, oil and nuclear industries as well as conservation incentives.

Much of the legislation, which emerged in bits and pieces this week from four House committees, mirrors - and in some cases goes beyond - the energy blueprint outlined by President Bush two months ago.

House GOP leaders have promised to enact energy legislation before Congress leaves for its summer recess in August.

The energy package includes drilling in an Arctic wildlife refuge, a top priority of the White

Experts say it is too soon to tell whether white blood cells with stem-cell genes hold, and all must be performed within days of the accident, meaning they offer no benefit so far to the 200,000 or so people in the United States who are already living with spinal cord injuries.

Most researchers believe that early action is vital in restoring movement after a spinal cord injury. Some nerve cells die because of the initial injury, but more die later because of a chemical reaction triggered by the injury.

In Holley's case, doctors incubated white blood cells with stem-cell genes under her left arm. The activated cells, called macrophages, were then injected.

It is not clear whether the macrophages are promoting regeneration or just wrapping nerve cells from dying, said W. Dalton Dietrich, scientific director at the Miami Project to Cure Paralysis at the University of Miami. The latter is more likely, according to Dietrich and Howard, research director at the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation in Springfield, N.J.

Cheney deflects questions about who helped plan energy policy

WASHINGTON - Vice President Dick Cheney gave little ground Thursday in his battle with senior House Democrats pressing him to reveal who helped develop the administration's energy policy.

Cheney said in an interview with Knight Ridder that such a disclosure was "beyond the realm of what is reasonable." He said that his critics were essentially saying "who... the vice president and president cannot have a conversation with."

Cheney said he had a meeting with the vice president on or designated as the day of the week on which legal notes will be published.

what global warming might mean in the decades ahead.

Bush's fellow leaders plan to challenge his positions on this issue, and missile defense, generally produced food and other goods.

With Blair at his side, Bush said the landmark 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty forbids the United States from even testing a potential system - let alone setting up a shield and deploying it.

"Therein lies part of the dilemma for the prime minister. He said, 'What do you want me to support? What are you proposing?'" Bush said, offering an unusually candid assessment of one ally's doubts about his missile system plans.

"It's hard for any country to commit to vague notions," Bush said.

Tens of thousands of protesters were expected in the Italian port city for the latest international gathering of demonstrators, loosely grouped under the banner of the anti-globalization movement.

In a direct challenge to protesters, who White House aides fear will overshadow the summit, Bush said, "For those who want to shut down trade, I say to them as clearly as I can: You're hurting poor countries. For those who want to use this opportunity to say the world should become isolationist, they're condemning those who are poor to poverty."

Hospital

Harper said he soon will be filing a lawsuit to address contractual and whistle-blower damages listed in the tort claim. They do not require a tort claim as a first step. He said he included them initially to notify the hospital of the full scope of damages claimed by his clients.

Cornerstone's business relationship with the hospital began in 1997, when Cornerstone helped the hospital resuscitate an adult cardiac patient therapy services after a former hospital contractor was investigated for Medicaid fraud.

Despite repeated requests by Cornerstone and repeated assurances from the hospital, a contract never was written to formalize their business association, the tort claim says.

The tort claim says the following occurred:

"Cornerstone's staffs eventually became hospital employees through an oral agreement that the hospital would buy out Cornerstone's revenue stream, although the buyout agreement had not been finalized."

"As a hospital employee, Suter discovered inappropriate Medicare billing practices in the transitional care unit and reported it to administration."

"We don't know of any inappropriate billing issues," Barigar said.

"The hospital then accused Cornerstone of withholding Cornerstone revenue from a pre-buyout partnership Cornerstone had with the state and continued to work while the buyout was in progress."

"The hospital had not yet purchased their income tax records from Cheri Suter and Mindy Harmer. As a result, the revenue, less those clerical and mileage expenses, belonged to the hospital," the tort claim says.

"The money is in a trust and has not been mishandled," Harper said.

"The hospital had been aware of Cornerstone's handling of the money and had disclosed applying it toward the buyout. But the hospital then told Suter and Harmer to resign because it could not condone the use of hospital employees to work the contract. Suter and Harmer refused to resign and were fired."

"Claimants were retaliated against by the hospital for reporting the billing inaccuracies and the contract buyout whole or in part was a result of this action on the claimants' part," the tort claim says.

abide by state and local nondiscrimination laws. Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Thursday that it was unlikely the bill would pass the Senate if it maintained its current language exempting recipient groups from anti-bias laws.

"I think we have to continue to insist that tolerance be a part of our culture and that we find ways, both through incentives as well as mandates, to eliminate discrimination of all kinds," Daschle told reporters. "I can't imagine that we could pass any bill that would tolerate slipping back to a level of tolerance that would be unacceptable in today's society."

Backers of the president's "faith-based initiative" said the vote had given the proposal new momentum. "The House has paved the way for new models and new solutions to combat child problems," said a House Republican Conference Chairman J.C. Watts, Okla., who authored the legislation. "We have seen the energy and enthusiasm behind this idea, and I am confident the faith-based initiative can overcome any hurdles in the Senate."

Documents detail Dems' work with unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Documents that the Democratic Party and unions have used to keep secret reveal a campaign strategy in which labor and party officials served side-by-side on committees that directed the Democrats' election activities in each state.

While labor's support of Democrats is well known, the documents show labor leaders had veto power over Democratic Party plans in 1996 by virtue of their large donations and seats on the steering committees in each state.

"When the DNC and its National partners including... the AFL-CIO and the NEA (National Education Association) agree on the contents of a plan, each national partner will give their funding commitment to the state," an internal DNC memo titled "Rules of Engagement" said.

Lawrence Noble, the nation's former top election regulator, told The Associated Press on Thursday he was surprised by the degree of control unions held over Democratic decisions. Noble headed the investigation into GOP charges of illegal coordination between the unions and Democrats.

"The AFL had a certain amount of control over what political parties and candidates did. That is what is striking," Noble said.

The AFL-CIO donated $35 million in 1996.

At the request of the Democratic Party and labor unions, a federal judge has forbidden the Federal Election Commission from releasing the documents it gathered during its four-year probe.

AP obtained the documents from officials involved in various federal investigations of unions and from groups that got some documents when they were briefly released by the FEC this spring, then abruptly pulled from public display under threat of litigation.

The documents detail extensive discussions between labor and party leaders on how to contact, register and influence voters to support Democrats and show where unions in some instances drew their money to accomplish the mission.

State of the nation's children is better, but not perfect

WASHINGTON (AP) — By several standards — lower child poverty, more working parents, greater family wealth — life is getting better for American children, the government said.

But scholars pointed to persistent lags in trends that affect children under 18. Test scores and other measures of student achievement remained flat. Bad habits like smoking and drinking persisted at about the same pace as before, according to the America's Children report, an annual look at government statistics.

Government agencies boasted of short-term gains. In recent years, teen pregnancies, youth violence and deaths declined from earlier in the 1990s, the figures showed.

The annual study, released Wednesday, is compiled by the Federal Interagency Forum on Child and Family Statistics using information from 20 federal agencies.

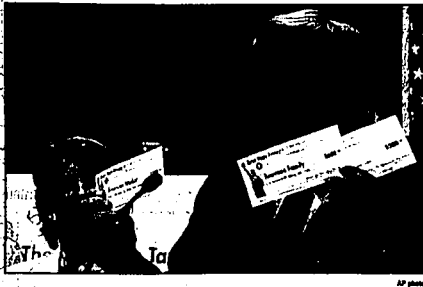

"It's a good time to be a child in America," said Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, who promised more money to deal with youth problems.

From 1980 to 1999, the share of children growing up in high income homes doubled from 16.8 percent to 23.9 percent, according to the annual look at federal child statistics released Wednesday. A high-income home is at least four times the federal poverty level in 1999; that meant at least $68,116 in annual income for a family of four.

"These findings represent important victories for children and adolescents," said Dr. Duane Alexander, director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, an HHS agency that specializes in child research.

However, U.S. youngsters statistically marched in place by many other measures.

Report says Social Security faces crisis without reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of a presidential commission charged with proposing stock market investment options for Social Security is making the case in a draft report, saying the system cannot meet future retirement benefit obligations and actually has no real assets to do so.

"The crisis of confidence is real," said the draft report obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

Without changes, promises to future retirees can be kept only through benefit cuts, tax increases or massive borrowing, the draft report concluded. And workers have no legal ownership of their benefits.

"What they have is a political promise that can be changed at any time, by any amount for any reason," the report said.

Commission spokesman Randy Clerihue said staff members wrote the report based on input of commissioners, who have not yet endorsed it and were to receive a copy Thursday. They will meet Tuesday to consider the report.

Bush created the commission to devise a plan to let younger workers invest a portion of their payroll taxes in private investment accounts, which supporters say would shore up future funding of the program. A final report planned for fall will propose a solution.

Opponents accused the White House and the commission of trying to manufacture a crisis to scare the public and make the stock market component more palatable.

Bush chooses official to head wildlife service

Knights Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush has nominated Steven A. Williams, secretary of the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks, to be the director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"Steve Williams is an avid outdoorsman whose professional experience and leadership skills make him an excellent candidate," said Gale Norton, secretary of the Department of the Interior, which oversees the service.

His nomination now goes to the Senate for approval. Under federal law, the director of the Fish and Wildlife Service must have a scientific background and experience in the fields of fisheries and wildlife management.

Williams, appointed in 1995 to his current post by Kansas Gov. Bill Graves, has held related positions in other states. He was deputy executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission before arriving in Topeka, Kan., and he was employed by the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife as a wildlife biologist and later as assistant director for wildlife.

University alters minority enrollment policy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Six years after doing away with affirmative action, the University of California approved a new admissions policy Thursday intended to open the door wider to blacks and Hispanics and give a boost to good students from bad high schools.

Starting in 2003, California students who graduate in the top 12.5 percent of their high school class can be sure a place at the University of California — though some may have to go to community college first.

Currently, UC guarantees admission to the top 4 percent of each of the state's high schools.

The UC Board of Regents approved the new standard 14-3, effective for the fall of 2003. UC has 135,000 undergraduates at eight campuses.

New York Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton shakes hands Saturday with people gathered to see her in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Sen. Clinton's verbal mishap fuels presidential speculation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, trying to quell questions about her presidential ambitions, ended up fueling them instead Thursday in front of a roomful of reporters.

At a speech before the National Press Club in Washington, the New York Democrat was asked whether she might run for president or vice president in the future.

"I have said that I am not running," Clinton said.

Tire firm: No need for more recalls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. will not issue a broader recall of Firestone tires, saying Thursday the federal government has failed to show that other tires made by the company pose a danger to motorists.

The tire maker recalled 6.5 million tires last August after determining they had a high rate of failure. Since then, federal safety officials have been reviewing the safety of millions of other Firestone tires.

The National Highway Traffic

"I'm having a great time being pres..." she began.

She quickly corrected herself and continued "being a senator from New York."

As the audience erupted in laughter Clinton added, "You're going to get me in an awful lot of trouble."

Clinton has ruled out running in 2004, saying she would serve out her six year Senate term. But questions remain over whether she has slammed the door on running entirely.

Safety Administration had not publicly called for a broader recall, but Bridgestone/Firestone spokeswoman Jill Bratina said at a meeting Thursday agency officials pressed the tire maker to voluntarily do so. Bratina said Bridgestone/Firestone refused and the talks ended.

The agency can order a broader recall. Bratina said the tire maker would challenge such a move in court.

NHTSA spokesman Rae Tyson had no immediate comment.

Feds suspend funds for human research

BALTIMORE (AP) — The government has suspended federally funded research on human subjects at Johns Hopkins University following the death of a healthy volunteer during an asthma experiment, the school said Thursday. The move comes just three days after the university suspended human research by the doctor whose experiment went awry in June, causing the death of 24-year-old Ellen Roche.

Officials with the federal Office of Human Research Protection did not immediately return a call seeking comment. Hopkins called the agency's decision "unwarranted, unnecessary, paralyzing and precipitous."

"We strongly believe that this action was taken in utter disregard of patients' health and potentially of life," Hopkins Medical School spokeswoman Joann Rodgers said. The school said the effect could be devastating for ongoing clinical trials.

Hopkins receives more federal research dollars than any other medical school — $301 million last year, making it No. 1 for the ninth straight year.

The university has acknowledged full responsibility for Roche's death June 2 and suspended 10 projects led by Dr. Alkis Togias. Togias remains on staff and faces no other disciplinary action.

Medical school officials said Roche likely died from inhaling the drug hexamethonium, which restricts airways.

Physician senator supports stem cell funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Thursday he would decide the thorny issue of whether to allow federal funding of stem cell research in due course, but the decision would not be political one. "I will make an announcement in due course, when I'm ready," Bush said from a summit in Europe. "And it doesn't matter who's on what side of this."

His comments come a day after the Senate's only physician, who also is a close ally of President Bush, added new momentum to the drive for federally financed medical research with embryonic stem cells.

Sen. Bill Frist, R-Tenn., said Wednesday he opposed abortion but felt compelled to support research that could save lives. The senator — who has often transformed the president's views into Senate proposals — also proposed several limits to the new funding. Namely, he'd limit the number of sets of cultured stem cells to come from a single embryo.

Frist offered a compromise that he said would allow stem cell research to progress in a manner respectful of both the moral significance of human embryos and the potential of stem cell research to improve health.

Drug store owners sue over president's discount plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug store owners have filed a lawsuit to keep the Bush administration from promoting prescription discount cards in the Medicare program, pharmacy trade groups said Wednesday.

The stores say the Bush plan is "clandestine and unlawful" and would force them to bear the burden of trimming the cost of medicines for the elderly insured by Medicare.

As soon as this fall, Medicare would endorse and promote several privately administered prescription drug discount cards, like those currently offered by pharmaceutical and other companies, Bush said last week.

The cards would be free or cost at most $25, and save Medicare recipients 25 percent in typical pharmacy purchases, or as much as 50 percent for mail-order drugs. White House officials said, adding that the administration could begin the program without congressional approval.

U.S. warns of possible terrorism attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — A communications intercept is prompting a State Department warning of possible imminent terrorist actions against the United States in the Arabian Peninsula.

A senior official said Wednesday night that Saudi Arabia and Kuwait were the focus of attention, but he could not rule out the other five countries on the peninsula.

The State Department public announcement urged U.S. citizens to remain vigilant and to exercise caution. There was no information on specific targets, timing or method of attack.

CBS ends silence over Chandra Levy

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather's silence on the Chandra Levy case is over. The "CBS Evening News" reported on the missing Washington intern on its Wednesday broadcast, ending a holdout that created as much attention in news circles as the case has among the wider public. It came 10 minutes into the broadcast, the seventh story.

Finally, Rather said, there had been a development "worthy of national note." Correspondent Jim Stewart reported that the case had been taken up by an FBI "cold cases" section, suggesting that federal authorities believed too much emphasis has been placed on the possible involvement of Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif. The story has gripped other news outlets for weeks — particularly the all-news cable networks. Rather has decried the "Hollywoodization" of news and says he is particularly cautious in reporting something that could harm someone's reputation without solid evidence. After Stewart's report, Rather said on the air that no crime had been established and that no one had been charged with anything.

Hepburn undergoes test at hospital

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Four-time Academy Award winner Katharine Hepburn was undergoing tests at a hospital Thursday and was expected to go home in a few days. The nature of the 94-year-old actress' illness was not disclosed. Past health problems include arthritis, pneumonia and Parkinson's-like tremors. Hepburn was admitted around

6 p.m. Wednesday and was resting comfortably in stable condition Thursday morning, Hartford Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said. Hepburn, who lives in Old Saybrook, is a Hartford native; her father was chief of staff at Hartford Hospital. In an interview in October 1990, she told The Associated Press: "I'm what is known as gradually disintegrating. I don't fear the next world, or anything. I don't fear hell, and I don't look forward to heaven." During her 60-year career, she was nominated for a record-tying 12 Academy Awards and won for "Morning Glory," 1933; "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," 1967; "A Lion in Winter," 1968; and "On Golden Pond," 1981.

Crossroads was not the right site for WestFarm

News that a Seattle-based dairy processor will not build a cheese factory near the crossroads of U.S. 93 and Interstate 84 is good news indeed. WestFarm Foods now intends to build a milk dehydration plant in the Jerome Industrial Park.

That's a better place for the facility, which is an add-on to WestFarm's existing plant. The industrial park is tucked out of the way, and city services such as water and sewers already are in place.

We strenuously questioned WestFarm's initial plan to build a cheese plant at Crossroads Ranch, because of potential problems with waste disposal. The Crossroads site is highly visible, because it is literally at the most strategic intersection in southern Idaho.

WestFarm deserves credit for recognizing these concerns and choosing a more suitable location. The company's 70,500-square-foot dehydration plant will be a prize addition to Jerome's economy. It will add 23 permanent, full-time jobs when it goes online next summer. When it opens, the plant will be capable of processing 3.3 million pounds of locally produced milk each day. (For those of you scoring at home, that's about 390,000 gallons.) In time, the capacity could expand to 6 million pounds per day.

The fact that WestFarm's new plant will be built alongside its existing milk condensing plant will give the company a powerful presence in Jerome. Together, the two plants will add value to a local product, yielding a refined product to be sold elsewhere while creating good jobs here.

That WestFarm's new plant won't be built at Crossroads is more than just icing on the cake—it is absolutely essential. Remember, the company's initial plan for a cheese factory was to dispose of excess wastewater by pouring it on the ground.

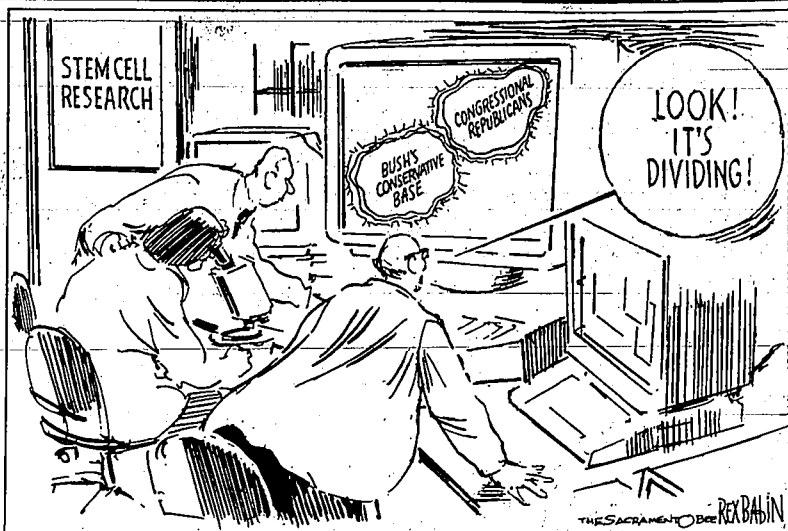

That was bad news for a couple of reasons. First, the aquifer beneath Crossroads supplies most of the drinking water for the city of Twin Falls. Recharging the aquifer with wastewater—treated or not—would have been unwise. As the Magic Valley's primary point of entry, it is important that Crossroads rolls out the right sort of welcome mat. Neither a livestock sale yard (which was proposed a few years ago) nor a cheese processing plant fit that description.

At this point, the site's owners are still searching for the right tenant. That search may take a while longer. With the exception of a major truck stop, the junction area is still pretty lonely. That could change over time as the business and residential mass of Twin Falls shifts north over the Perrine Bridge.

In the meantime, the owners of Crossroads Ranch should be patient and search for a tenant befitting the site's high visibility.

As the Magic Valley's primary point of entry, it is important that Crossroads Ranch rolls out the right sort of welcome mat.

Diversity alone won't stop police

JAMES FORMAN

The recent Washington Post series documenting Prince George's County, Md., police as among the most brutal in the nation exposes a long-hidden truth: A racially diverse police force under the command of black elected officials is no guarantee against police violence.

The notion that racial diversity is the key to fighting police brutality has deep historical roots. In the wake of riots across American inner-cities in the 1960s, the Kerner Commission called for "increased Negro participation in police departments" because "for police in a Negro community to be predominantly white can serve as a dangerous irritant."

But in Prince George's County, where the police force killed more people during the past decade than any police force in America, and where no officer during that time has been fired or demoted for shooting somebody, the police department is 41 percent African-American. Moreover, the county that has become known as America's wealthiest black suburb or black county executive and chief prosecutor. Nor is Prince George's alone: In recent years Los Angeles, Detroit and Washington all have suffered police misconduct scandals. Yet each of these cities has either significant black leadership or black county executive.

Neither black officers nor black elected officials have solved the problem of police misconduct. That we find this result so surprising says more about our country's specific racial history than it does about police misconduct. Police abuse and racism have become so intertwined in the minds of many Americans, particularly African-Americans, that we assume the two may go together. Van Jones, founder of Bay Area Foreclosurewatch and the Ella Baker Center for Human Rights, points out the reality: "Most human rights abuses in the world are perpetrated by people who look like the people they are abusing."

This is why racial diversity in police hiring will never by itself protect communities from police violence. Without independent oversight and meaningful accountability, no police force, whatever the racial makeup, can identify and rid itself of the few rogue officers who cause the bulk of the trouble.

Whatever strategies are necessary for reform, black elected officials and police chiefs are not more willing to impose them than were the white officials they replaced. Some obstacles to reform are the predictable ones, including the awesome power the Fraternal Order of Police. The FOP has blocked reform proposals and won protections for officers who shoot citizens. A notable FOP victory is legislation prohibiting investigators from interviewing an officer for 10 days after a shooting, giving the officer time to hire a lawyer and make sure his or her story is together.

But perhaps the most fundamental explanation for the complacency of black elected officials and police chiefs has been the complacency of the African-American community. Like all elected officials, black officials respond to public outcry. But with some exceptions there has been little pressure from within the Prince George's black community to hold black public officials accountable for police misconduct on their watch.

Some of the complacency stems from the fact that members of the black middle class have not been the principal victims of the most egregious abuse. Notably, the few cases in Prince George's County that got any public attention before The Washington Post's expose were those involving members of the middle class, whereas the overwhelming majority of cases involving poorer African-American victims remained invisible. African-Americans, who have so long chastised America for its infatuation with white victims (such as Chandra Levy), while black missing persons are ignored, must begin to come to grips with the reality that the same double standard occurs within the black community.

Perhaps the most significant explanation for the absence of black pressure on black elected officials has been a desire not to publicly embarrass one of our own. Imagine if America's wealthiest black county were governed by a white county executive and white chief prosecutor and had an all-white police force. Imagine if this force led the nation in fatal shootings of mostly black men. As soon as this scandal was exposed there would be hundreds of African-American citizens and leaders descending on that county, crying, "No justice, no peace." But in Prince George's County's black community, there is mostly quiet.

It appears that after having fought for so long to gain a foothold in the political system, African-Americans are afraid to jeopardize it by calling to task black officials. But this reaction is shortsighted: Gaining elected office is a means to an end, not an end itself. If black elected officials are unwilling to reform the police forces they inherit, then, like rogue officers of whatever color, they too must go. And the African-American community must be willing to say so.

Give wildlife a chance

Alabaster needs help! The unusual, almost-wolf mother of the White Hawk pack has nine pups. She and her mate are trying to provide for nine hungry little mouths in the eastern side of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. But the Forest Service allowed a band of sheep with lambs to move into Fourth of July Creek in the wolves' vicinity. Know what is going to happen? Think of a mother and nine babies being tranquilized and relocated without a mate. Think of trying to keep them all together. Think of them starving. That's the likely outcome.

Two wolves from that pack have already been shot. Think how much easier it would have been to have the sheep move into another drainage in the first place. Sheep permits are more fluid than cow allotments; they are always moving. Meanwhile, Alabaster has a job and a half just providing for her brood. After all, the Sawtooth National Recreation Area was established primarily for wildlife and recreation and conservation of natural habitat. Call your Sawtooth National Forest supervisor, Bill LaVere, at 737-3200. Give wildlife a chance! JANEY O'ROWLEY Carey

Storm clouds gather over economies all around the world

Gathering this weekend in Italy for their annual summit, the leaders of the major industrial countries seem almost indifferent to the threat of a global recession. Economic forecasts have consistently been too optimistic. The United States is sputtering. Growth is slowing dramatically in Europe. Japan is in recession. China's economy has been hit hard by the U.S. slowdown. Argentina may default on its debt. The danger does not lie in any one of these developments but rather in their convergence, which could create a snowball effect weakening global trade, confidence and stock prices. The world's leaders ignore these problems at their peril. Welcome to globalization's darker side. Connections among economies have multiplied in ways that are only barely understood. Almost universal trade has grown in importance—and it's not just trade.

European multinational companies have multinationality. To restore profits, they look for savings (including layoffs) everywhere. The same is true of U.S. multinationals, and the impact is multiplied by the exploding global investment. From 1995 to 1999, foreign direct investment in the United States nearly doubled to $1 trillion. More than that went to Europe. Meanwhile, U.S. direct investment abroad was $1.1 trillion. Nowhere are trade and investment connections greater than Asia. Computers, electronic components and telecommunications equipment represent 50 percent of Taiwan's exports, 41 percent of South Korea's, 77 percent of Singapore's and 60 percent of the Philippines', reports the Bank for International Settlements. Little wonder that these economies have reeled from the collapse of the computer and communications sectors in the United States and, increasingly, Europe. Since the end of 1999, prices of 128-megabyte memory chips have fallen from roughly $20 to about $2.50, says Gregory Fager of the Institute of International Finance. Naturally, investment in new factories suffers. In 2001, Fager expects economic growth in South Korea, Malaysia and Hong Kong to drop by half or more from last year. Among economists, the consensus is that lower interest rates and resilient consumer spending will rescue the United States. Europe will benefit from belated interest rate cuts by the European Central Bank (ECB). Consider first Japan and Europe. Japan's prime minister, Junichiro Koizumi, promises to end his country's stagnation. The idea is to deregulate industry, spur investment, accelerate bank write-offs of bad loans and reduce the economy's reliance on government budget deficits. The trouble is that the first effect might be to deepen the recession. Lower budget deficits would curb public works spending,

Here is a recipe for global recession. No region generates strong expansion. Surplus manufacturing capacity—everything from cars to computer chips—reduces investment, prices and profits. Stock markets trend weaker. The recipe, though not preordained, isn't implausible. Once started, a global recession could increase protectionist pressures, intensify the backlash against globalization, spark global discord (countries would blame each other) and threaten the survival of leaders in rich and poor countries alike. At their Italian summit, the world's most important leaders ought to discuss how to minimize the danger. Global cooling (not global warming) ought to be their preoccupation. Missing the opportunity, they will surely be blamed for the consequences. Robert J. Samuelson is a Newsweek columnist.

OPINION

WHEN YOU SAID YOU HAD A 401(K) PACKAGE FOR OUR RETIREMENT, I PICTURED SOMETHING DIFFERENT!

FBI's embarrassments mount

From the Los Angeles Times

It was bad enough when the FBI lost track of thousands of documents that should have been turned over to lawyers for Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh. Now comes the more embarrassing disclosure that over the last 11 years it has lost hundreds of weapons and laptop computers, some to theft, some to retired or fired employees who took equipment with them, some to sloppy inventory controls.

Significantly, the survey of lost equipment didn't originate with the FBI. It was requested by Congress and former FBI Director William Webster, who is heading an investigation into the bureau's security problems.

OTHER VIEWS

Without that prod, the missing 449 firearms and 184 computers might have remained a deep secret. This latest revelation of lax management supports the growing congressional consensus that the FBI, which has always cultivated an image of model efficiency while resisting outside scrutiny, can't be trusted to recognize and remedy its own failings.

The Senate Judiciary Committee learned at its hearing Wednesday that no one was held accountable for the lost weapons and computers.

The FBI is not a hardware store, where missing inventory can be written off as a cost of doing business. If it can't keep track of its guns and computers, Americans can reasonably wonder how it can be counted on to keep track of the crooks and spies the FBI is supposed to catch.

President Bush has nominated as the FBI's next director Robert Mueller, an experienced prosecutor whose reputedly strong management skills the bureau badly needs. Also needed is a closer examination of its recent past. Were the bungled Richard Jewell and Wen Ho Lee investigations and the long failure to detect Robert Hanssen's spying simply aberrations? Or were they signs of a more pervasive systemic problem yet to be explored?

Three remain critical after Highway 93 crash

TWIN FALLS — Three people injured in a two-vehicle crash Wednesday on U.S. Highway 93 near Shoshone were still listed in critical condition late Thursday at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

A fourth crash victim, Luis Tarango, 15, was listed in fair condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls, a hospital spokeswoman said. A fifth victim, Emma Silva, 11 months old, had been treated at St. Benedicts Medical Center in Jerome for a broken arm after the accident late Wednesday.

Emily Silva, 9, Rebecca Silva, 16, and Nicole Keno, 19, were all in critical condition with head and face injuries at Saint Alphonsus, a hospital spokesman said.

All the injured people were riding Wednesday in a 1988 Chrysler New Yorker that rear-ended a 1986 Chevrolet pickup that had been stopped partially in the northbound lane of U.S. 93 at about 7:22 p.m., according to the Idaho State Police. The pickup had been driven by Thomas E. Coberly, 34, of Tacoma, Wash., who had Barbara Cantrell-Ferguson, age not listed, as a passenger, according to the ISP. Coberly was listed in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Thursday, while Cantrell-Ferguson had been treated and released from St. Benedicts Wednesday.

The accident was still under investigation late Thursday, according to the ISP dispatch center, and alcohol-related charges might be pending. It had still not been determined who had been driving the Chrysler. Coberly was charged Wednesday with driving without privileges. Coberly was also wanted on a felony warrant issued recently by a judge in Olympia, Wash., according to the ISP.

Agriculture department opens odor complaint line

BOISE — The Idaho State Department of Agriculture has established a statewide toll-free complaint line for agricultural odors, in response to new responsibilities the department received July 1.

The 2001 Legislature charged the Department of Agriculture with regulating agricultural odors.

"We know the odor issue is of great concern to many Idahoans, and we will continue to work to become more responsive," said Pat Takasugi, director of the department in a news release.

The toll-free number is 1-866-435-0490. The complaint line is manned 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, except holidays.

Complaints received after hours will be responded to the following business day, the release stated.

Those requesting further information will receive a follow-up communication explaining where a particular complaint may be in the process.

"Everyone is entitled to due process, and I believe our system protects both the complainants and those with other complaints lodged against them."

"By logging in each complaint and responding to what people are telling us, I think we can use this process to continue to address agricultural odor issues in the state," said Takasugi.

Simplot must provide rate analysis study

By Ruth Stroeter
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The J.R. Simplot Co. reluctantly agreed Thursday to conduct a rate analysis study to support a lawsuit alleging that the city of Heyburn charges the company unfair electric rates.

Simplot filed a lawsuit against the city in December, arguing that Heyburn charges unfair electric rates. The suit also argued that Heyburn can't force the plant to purchase power from the city.

Simplot attorney Joe Miller argued Thursday in 5th District Court that the Electricity lawsuit against Heyburn may also hinge on validity of recent annexation city should prepare a model of rate costs off of which Simplot could base its own model. Doing so would be the least complicated and least expensive option, he said.

But Heyburn attorney Steven Tuft argued that in a lawsuit, it is the ratepayer's responsibility to prove that rates are unreasonable.

"They have the burden of proof. They filed this lawsuit," Tuft said.

Tuft offered the use of a preliminary rate study which the city has already completed, but asked to be compensated for the study, which was expensive to put together, Tuft said.

Miller said that if Simplot had to pay for the study, the company would just as well conduct the study on its own.

Thursday's ruling was the second setback for Simplot within the last week. In a judicial order dated July 12, 5th District Judge John Melanson ruled that unless an annexation ordinance passed by the city in May is declared invalid, the city has the authority to sell power to the plant.

At the time the electricity lawsuit was filed, only a portion of the plant was within city limits. Since then, Heyburn has annexed the 32 acres of Simplot property that was outside municipal boundaries.

That action immediately sparked a second lawsuit from Simplot challenging the validity of the annexation.

Filer School Board selects new officers

By John Swazy
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Members of the Filer School Board on Wednesday selected officers for the 2001-2002 school year.

Bill Bitzenburg, the district's Hollister representative, accepted the position of chairman and Gary Davis, the representative for Zone 2 in Filer, was chosen as vice chairman.

Gerald Orthel and Dave Ramseyer were sworn in as board members for three-year terms.

Orthel represents Zone 4 and Ramseyer represents Zone 1 in Filer. Both were re-elected May 15.

Also on Wednesday, the board heard some architectural estimates for a new track on land west of the high school. Jeremy Alnowarth, from The Land Group Inc. in Eagle, offered a $15,850 proposal that includes:

- Preparing a conceptual site plan to define the character an essentials of the project for $1,585.
- Design of working drawings and technical specification for construction for $11,095.
- Administrative costs of on site inspections and making sure the work complies with the construction documents for $3,170.

The board agreed that a professional needs to oversee the work, but voiced that expense is a concern.

"It's more than we want to spend," Bitzenburg said, "We're trying to cut corners all we can."

WOLF IN SHEEP'S COUNTRY

Killing of wolves broods empathy for beleaguered pack

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

STANLEY BASIN — It was the wind — not the wolves — doing the howling, as Carole Lewis invoked the name of Gandhi in a prayer for the animals on a hillside overlooking Alluras Lake.

According to Gandhi, a nation's greatness is known by the way it treats its animals, said the Halley woman.

About two dozen people and a documentary film crew gathered this week on Horton Peak to pay tribute to wolves — particularly, 17 wolves that have been killed in Custer County during the past two years for their parts in killing livestock.

The event was precipitated by the killing on June 29 of two wolves suspected to have been involved in the death of five sheep grazing on the lower part of Horton Peak.

"One was a big black wolf that people had been seeing and hearing all spring in the Stanley Basin," said Lynne Stone, director of the Boulder-White Clouds Council.

The wolves were apparently providing food for a white wolf and its nine pups, which would be three months old now. Now the mother has only one other wolf to help her feed her brood, and it's likely they were not well off to begin with, considering how skinny the wolves were that were killed, Stone said.

"I don't think the pups have a chance — they will likely die of starvation," said Bellevue resident Richard Wallgorski.

who has been camping out with the sheep since the killings to try to prevent attacks by wolves.

"They don't have a group to hunt with. They're too young to take down deer or elk. The best they can do is squirrels," he said.

for killing wolves that prey on livestock, had been invited but did not attend.

About a mile out, the group found sheep wool and pieces of hooves at the site where the sheep — owned by rancher Bill Bealstead — had been killed.

Near a rocky outcrop that served as the backdrop for fast-paced showers moving through the area, many of those in attendance offered biblical quotations talking about the value of wildlife.

Stone read from Aldo Leopold's "Sand County Almanac" that stated just as deer live in mortal fear of wolves, so do mountains live in mortal fear of deer. Deer on a wolfless mountain tear down mountains by creating the steep slope to death and tearing paths into the mountainside belly.

Defenders of Wildlife compensates ranchers $50,000 for calf and sheep kills to try to enlist livestock operators' help in the establishment of wolves in the area. The Western Watersheds Project has offered to buy some livestock operators' leases but has had no takers yet. Other environmental groups have offered ranchers tax breaks for allowing their land to be used for the benefit of wildlife, rather than livestock.

The Sawtooth National Recreation Area was created in 1972 to protect the values of fish, wildlife, scenic, recreational and pastoral attributes. Some believe the area is putting sheep and cattle above all other values. In fact, the Western Watersheds Project plans to sue the U.S. Forest Service over the belief that the Forest Service is violating its mandate to protect wildlife by permitting sheep to be in areas where it knows wolves are present.

Farmers plan to pirate irrigation water

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. - Farmers protesting water cutoffs in the Klamath Basin on Thursday began work to build an underground pipeline they say will draw water from the Upper Klamath Lake and bypass the federal-government controlled head gates to the irrigation project.

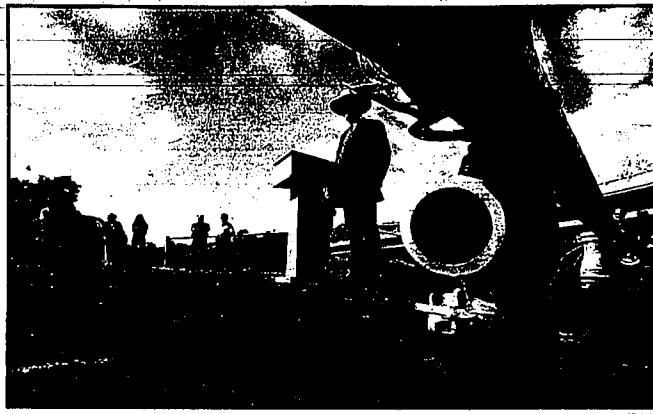

The farmers first used crowbars to pry open the gates four times. When federal police were guarding the gates last week, farmers laid out an eight-inch white plastic pipe around the gates and fired up a pump.

Now they plan to build a larger, 36-inch underground pipe that would be a more permanent pathway for the water.

Most of the fields in the Klamath irrigation project are already fallow this year. Farmers say they have the right to remove water from the lake to demonstrate their frustration with federal agencies. Coming out of their pipe, water splashes into an irrigation canal and flows toward fields that have not been sowed.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation ordered the water shut off from the irrigation canals in April to protect the endangered sucker and coho fish in the lake and the river downstream.

By Thursday afternoon, protesters had brought an excavator and a front-end loader to dig a trench for the underground pipe.

Klamath County farmer Marty Macy speaks at a demonstration in Klamath Falls, Oregon, Thursday held by farmers who put out irrigation pipe and pumped water to a lawn that has been without water this summer.

Supporters of the farmers are trying to prove with court records that the land around the head gates is not owned by the federal government. "We may just have to escort the feds off," said protest leader Barbara Martin, a real estate agent who has researched the land titles.

McDermott bill would allow breaching of dams

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - A bill to allow the federal government to remove four Snake River dams if other efforts to restore salmon fall were introduced Thursday by Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash.

Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., who represents the Tri-Cities area, denounced the bill as a thinly veiled effort by environmental groups to destroy the dams.

"It is unfortunate that Eastern Washington is again hit with a broadside out of Seattle," Hastings said in a swipe at the Seattle congressman.

The bill came just two weeks after members of the Seattle City Council visited Eastern Washington to apologize for passing a resolution last year calling for removal of the dams.

McDermott's bill asks the General Accounting Office to study the economic and environmental impacts of breaching the dams, and the consequences of the extinction of salmon and steelhead species. A report is due by Dec. 31, 2003.

The bill would allow the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to breach the dams if that is deemed in the best interest of the Snake River salmon, meet Indian treaty obligations or meet the requirements of the Clean Water Act.

"Since the four federal dams on the lower Snake River were constructed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, salmon and steelhead populations have plummeted," McDermott said.

Save Our Wild Salmon, a coalition of environmental groups, celebrated the bill's introduction Thursday night in Washington, D.C., at a Capitol Building reception and laid out 100,000 steelhead and salmon, according to the invitation.

The four dams - Ice Harbor, Lower Monumental, Little Goose and Lower Granite - were built starting in the 1960s and are located on the Snake River between Washington's Tri-Cities of Richland, Pasco and Kennewick and Lewiston, Idaho. They provide electricity, irrigation water and navigation for barges. The 1,250 megawatts of power produced are enough for a city the size of Seattle.

Utah seeks funding to fight crickets

WASHINGTON (AP) - Like a bad horror film, a wave of scrubby, black Mormon crickets has rolled through rural Utah this summer, devouring everything in its path and leaving state agriculture officials - with no federal money to fight the plague - at a loss.

"In our town, our children don't even dare to go outside or sleep in their own rooms for fear of the big, black creatures," said Michael Anderson, mayor of Oak City, Utah.

On Thursday, Anderson joined

Sen. Bob Bennett, R-Utah, and others who have seen the devastation to ask a House committee to spend $8.7 million to fight the cricket invasion next year and in the future.

If the money isn't spent, next summer could be even worse, said Richard Dunkle, who helps manage U.S. Agriculture Department plant protection efforts. He said each female cricket can lay 86 eggs. If the winter is mild, "the Mormon cricket outbreaks in 2002 could be even more widespread, severe and destructive." So far this year, the pests have swept across 1.5 million acres - an area larger than Delaware - destroying an estimated $25 million in crops in Utah. They have infested another 62,000 acres in Nevada.

Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt has declared 18 of Utah's 29 counties as disaster areas. "We've had crickets and grasshopper infestations in the past, but not to this extreme," said Cary Peterson, Utah commissioner of agriculture and food.

Citizens want voice on watercraft rentals

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY — No man is an island. Even if he owns one.

The latest dispute involving Frenchman's Island near Declo has residents asking for a public hearing at which to comment on the island's watercraft rentals.

An attorney representing two Minidoka County residents and two Cassia County residents argued Thursday before the Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission that Neil Larsen's watercraft rentals are not in keeping with his conditional-use permit.

Commissioners granted Larsen

a conditional-use permit in 1999 that allowed him to build a subdivision and a recreation area with boat docks. Commissioners later approved Larsen's request to replace the subdivision with an RV park, but the recreation area remained in place.

The riverside residents are appealing an administrative interpretation of that permit that allows Larsen to also rent motorized and non-motorized watercraft on the island. A local business is managing rentals.

County Administrator Tim Hurst argues that because the permit allowed a commercial venture, the watercraft rental is in keeping with the permit.

Rupert attorney Rick Bollas said Thursday that Hurst's argument is tantamount to allowing a conditional-use permit to act as a rezone.

A conditional-use permit requires strict compliance to that permit, Bollas said. The resolution of the zoning commission that essentially granted the permit had no mention of watercraft rentals, he said.

Bollas said his clients are simply asking for notice of Larsen's intent and the opportunity to comment at a public hearing.

Larsen argued that those who rent motorized watercraft are no different than the travelers who bring their own.

"I see nothing that is incompatible with our special-use permit," Larsen said.

Bollas rebutted that while the permit does allow for watercraft use, it's the additional boat traffic and safety issues that come with watercraft rental that are a concern.

The planning commission had not ruled on the appeal by The Times-News deadline.

Development of the island has caused a stir since Larsen first proposed his subdivision nearly two years ago.

Times-News writer Ruth Streeter can be reached at the Mini-Cassia Bureau at 677-4042, Ext. 109, or by e-mail at rstreeter@magicalvalley.com.

College won't validate 123-year-old voucher

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In 1888, the Rev. R.C. Hill bought 123-year-old vouchers for McMinnville College, hoping his children or grandchildren could someday attend the small Baptist school southwest of Portland.

Now, 123 years later, his great-grandchildren want to call in the old IOUs and have filed a lawsuit in federal court because the school, now called Linfield College, refuses to honor them.

The family has turned up four certificates, which they say the college honored for four years of tuition until about 1950 — and for their face value of $500 until the mid-1990s.

Now, the college — where four years of tuition runs at $77,000 — says the vouchers are worthless.

Said David Gray, an attorney for Scott Peterson, Hill's great-grandson, who is in charge of the family trust:

"The family trusts, who is Hill's great-granddaughter, said she had planned on using the vouchers to pay tuition for her daughter Courtney, now a sophomore at Linfield.

"Several members of the family have tried to use the vouchers through the years," she said. "We knew that without help, the kids were not going to be able to attend."

Gary said Linfield, located in McMinnville, offered to purchase the tickets at their face value of $500, but will not, as the ticket reads, send to "McMinnville College one scholar forever."

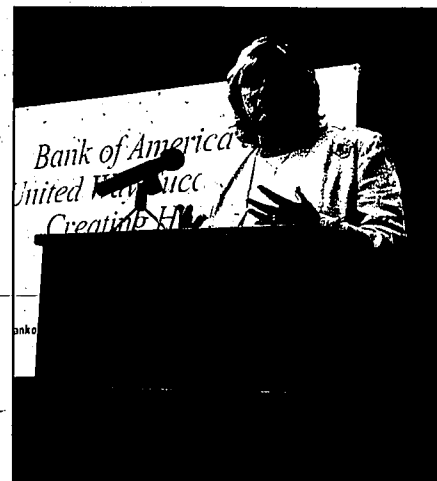

The college refused to do so to attorney David Haugeberg, who declined comment because the case is under review.

The family claims it has a document that lays out the terms of the scholarship that grants "the privilege of forever sending to said College one scholar for each scholarship so secured, free of charge for all tuition."

Stone said Hill once traveled extensively, selling the certificates to help raise money for the school.

"He was very involved in getting the college started," she said.

SUPPORTING SCHOOLS

Idaho first lady Patricia Kempthorne and Bank of America President Rob Stuart visited the College of Southern Idaho's Child Care Thursday to award $50,000 to the United Way of South Central Idaho's Success by Six initiative. The grant to the Twin Falls-based program is part of $200,000 being presented to Success by Six programs around the state. Nationally, Bank of America is donating $50 million over five years to help children develop age-appropriate reading skills so they are able to enter school ready to learn by the age of 6.

Deal will compensate victims of nuke programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uranium miners and residents exposed to radiation from Cold War-era nuclear weapons tests will finally see promised compensation for their illnesses.

In a deal struck Thursday as part of negotiations over a supplemental spending bill, those holding IOUs will be covered. The Senate had estimated outstanding IOUs for those exposed to radiation at $4 billion.

The government had been issuing IOUs to the radiation victims since the compensation program ran out of money more than a year ago.

The compromise budget bill must be approved by the House and Senate and signed by President Bush. Funding for victims under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act is part of a $6.5 billion spending bill designed to address programs in need of urgent funding.

The House hadn't budgeted for it, while the Senate had.

"That's great news and it's a relief for the families of the ill IOU-holders," said Lori Goodman, spokeswoman for the group Dine-CARE, which represents Navajo Indians who worked uranium mines on the reservation. "They're doing the right thing — the humane thing."

"It's a long time overdue," said Ed Brickley, co-chairman of the Western States RECA Reform Coalition. "It's an oversight that shouldn't have happened."

The act, passed in 1990, provided cash payments of $100,000 to uranium miners and $50,000 to "Downwinders" — residents sickened by their exposure to radioactive fallout caused by nuclear weapons tests in Nevada.

Lay said the act was expanded to cover more people but no new money was added. Starting in May 2000, qualifying claimants received letters informing them the program was out of money.

Many have died while awaiting payments.

Bob Key of Fruita, Colo., who suffers from pulmonary fibrosis after working for four years in a uranium mine, was hospitalized this week. He received his IOU last August. Goodman said that doctors believe Key now needs a surgery that he may not survive.

"You would think if there was any sincerity they would at least fund (RECA)," said J. Preston Truman, director of the group Downwinders. "The whole thing has really sent a very bad signal to everybody that there's a lot of hype and very little hope."

According to the Justice Department, which administers the program, there are 191 claimants — either miners, Downwinders or their survivors — holding IOUs worth $10 million in Utah.

In Colorado, 71 claimants are owed $6.5 million. Sixty-eight claimants are owed $3.5 million in Nevada, 47 are owed $3 million in Arizona, 42 are owed $4 million in New Mexico, and 13 are owed $1 million in California.

Other claimants are scattered across the country.

Justice Department spokesman Charles Miller said it is unclear how long it would take for claimants to begin receiving checks once the deal is approved.

"(The department's) hopes are to get this turned around as expeditiously as possible," he said.

The RECA funding was a $6.5 billion spending bill designed to address programs in need of urgent funding. The House hasn't budgeted for it, while the Senate had.

U.S. Supreme Court justices to visit Navajo capital

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Stephen Breyer are visiting the Navajo Nation for 24 hours this week to take a look at the tribal justice system.

The two justices already have visited the Spokane Indian Reservation at Wellpinit, Wash., where they praised a tribal court's holistic approach to helping juvenile drug offenders.

The purpose of their visit is to provide a behind closed doors look at the Navajo justice system and the works and needs of the court," the Navajo judicial branch said in a statement about the justices' trip.

The two justices were welcomed at the Window Rock Airport just before 1 p.m. Thursday by Navajo President Kelsey A. Begaye and tribal Chief Justice Robert Yazzie. After that, most of their visit will be behind closed doors with various tribal justice officials.

They will meet in private with the tribe's chief justice and associate justices, attorney general and Navajo district court judges and the program, they are 191 claimants — either miners, Speaker Edward T. Begay. They then will watch a case that they will apply both traditional Navajo and western law before the Window Rock District Court.

They then will address the 88 Navajo Council delegates at the start of the council's regular five-day summer session.

The two justices will leave from the Window Rock Airport at 12:30 p.m. Friday after lunch with Navajo dignitaries.

Simplot filed two motions asking for summary judgment. One motion asked the court to rule that the city of Heyburn lacks legal authority to set electrical power outside its boundaries. Therefore, the city cannot force Simplot to purchase power from the city, Simplot argued.

The city then filed a cross motion for summary judgment, arguing that annexation made Simplot's argument moot.

Simplot's second motion argued that the annexation ordinance cannot be retroactively applied to defeat Simplot's right to seek alternate energy suppliers.

Fifth District Judge John Melanson agreed with Heyburn's argument that Simplot's argument was moot at this point.

Simplot would also then be able to argue other points in the lawsuit, he wrote.

Also in court Thursday, Miller asked the court to expedite proceedings and schedule the trial for a date within 90 days, in anticipation of high electric rates beginning Oct. 1. The Bonneville, Jonas also said that ranchers must be made to see some sort of economic benefit from wolves, such as the money "wolf walks" could bring in from ecotourists.

In that vein, Kaz Thoma, who heads up the Ketchum office of Alliance for the Wild Rockies, said the Stanley Basin has the potential for being like the Lamar Valley in Yellowstone National Park — a place where you can be assured of seeing wildlife at any given moment.

For now, Stone said, he wants people to start making a stink about the killing of wolves.

"The wolves will be back — this is perfect habitat for them," he said. "And the government will be in the business of killing wolves every year if we continue down this path. If the wolf is to survive, wolf powers must be outshouted and outnumbered."

Bob Jonas of Ketchum has viewed the controversy from several angles, including that of the Laidlaw family, longtime sheep ranchers who are believed to have been the first to drive their sheep over Galena Summit. And he has been a guide, having to deal with regulations imposed by government agencies.

After listening to the rhetoric on the "wolf walk," Jonas concluded that sheep have a place in central Idaho's mountains. But, perhaps stipulations should be written into "The thing that bothers me is that this has been going on for five weeks and all three of you know about it and you do even bother to ask," Norwood said. "You three council members could have

Council members agreed to compile a list of questions pertaining to Weir's issues that each candidate will have an opportunity to answer. Whoever is appointed will serve until the November elections.

High school student Elena Schroeter, 17, a Project Exploration participant, shows a fossilized pine cone Sunday found at the Lance Creek Fossil Area in east-central Wyoming.

Inner-city students hunt for dinosaur bones in Wyoming

LANCE CREEK FOSSIL AREA, Wyo. (AP) — The nondescript little rock resembled a piece of Puppy Chow more than anything, but Elena Schroeter knew better.

It was a tiny, fossilized pine cone from the era of dinosaurs — 65 million years ago.

"Oooohs" and "aaahhs" erupted as nine other inner-city students huddled around her on a hilltop in east-central Wyoming.

The high-schoolers had left Chicago just a day earlier with Project Exploration, a program that introduces underprivileged youth, especially minorities, to the science of paleontology.

For some it was their first stay away from the city — not to mention on a ranch in the least-populous county in the least-populous state.

"When you come here, every day, man, is just so enlightening," said Shaureice Komegay, 17, who will be a senior this fall. "If you're not involved in an intense discussion on the global situation, you're over there studying and trying to find out what type of bane you have. And man, it's so beautiful to be here. It really is."

University of Chicago paleontology professor Paul Sereno and his wife, educator Gabrielle Lyon, founded Project Exploration in 1998.

The couple has been on expeditions all over the world and both have dinosaur discoveries to their names. When Lyon saw how elementary-age children reacted to the slides and fossils she "brought back from the Sahara, she got to thinking: Dinosaurs may be dead as they get, but, boy, can they teach.

"You can leverage this interest that kids automatically have in dinosaurs, educationally speaking, to geography and all kinds of other subjects that otherwise they may not be interested in," said Lyon.

While Project Exploration favors students with good grades, a passion for old bones and fossils is the main requirement, Lyon said. That is not necessarily a natural interest in the students' blighted neighborhoods, even though many attend charter and magnet schools for exceptional students.

Ellin Belz, a geologist with Project Exploration, has experienced those neighborhoods as a literary volunteer.

"You go into the housing projects ... first of all you think about being shot. You get within two blocks of the building and you're thinking about it," Belz said.

"A different gang controls every single different building. They have to know this three-dimensional territory of who's in power and who's not in power, and how to cross this territory, from the time they're knee-high to a grasshopper."

Wyoming also has rough neighborhoods, but here they require a high-clearance vehicle. Just as different a culture is paleontology, which Lyon concedes is dominated by whites with multiple degrees.

"It's a very select group of people who get to lay their hands on the fossils or meet working scientists and understand what they do," she said.

"For me, what we're doing really has a justice aspect. When kids live in the city they just don't get outdoors, they don't get an appreciation for the environment, they don't get to have that sense of place outdoors and those kinds of things."

Goats take on virulent wild weeds

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has found an ally with a strong stomach in its fight against noxious weeds.

The agency is using 500 goats to eat leafy spurge at the Cartier South Wildlife Management Area west of Rexburg.

Goats seek out leafy spurge, gain weight on it and have few health problems, said Kim Ragozkie, regional habitat biologist. Most horses and cattle will eat the weed, and if they do it can cause serious health problems and even death, she said.

The virulent weed threatens to take over grazing lands and wildlife habitat if not controlled. Its taproot can stretch more than 20 feet into the ground.

Ragozkie said Fish and Game ran a pilot goat program last year and was pleased with the results.

The animals in the Rexburg-area residents are supervised by a herder provided by Southern Oregon Goat Producers, who directs them to the most urgent areas for two feedings of four to five hours each day, Ragozkie said.

"It's really important to have a herder who understands our wildlife habitat goals," she said.

Goats are being used successfully elsewhere in the state.

Shannon Williams, University of Idaho extension educator for Lemhi County, said goats are chewing up spurge on federal and private land in the Carmen Creek area.

Williams said that while she does not see them as a complete eradication method for leafy spurge, they can be effective in conjunction with herbicides and biological controls such as insects.

Reed Findlay, Bannock County extension educator, said goats are an effective means of control if used over years.

During the first and second years of grazing, the weed often sends up additional shoots, making it look as if the problem has increased. But after three or four years, the root loses energy and the weed can be controlled.

Neighbors worry about dark substance in lake

ST. MARIES (AP) — A federal official said residents have nothing to fear from an unusual odor and what one described as "a dark brown substance" being produced by Hepton Lake and flowing into the St. Joe River.

"This water needs to be tested," former state senator Cy Chase of St. Maries wrote in response to an Environmental Protection Agency questionnaire gauging citizen reaction to the EPA's presence in the region.

But Mark Addy, district conservationist for the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service, said the substance is due to the presence of peat moss in the water.

family.

Addy is involved because after the flood, rather than seeking to have the dike rebuilt, the Hepton family sold a conservation easement on the land to the federal government for about $1.5 million.

Wetlands are prized by the government, Addy said, because they are natural fish and wildlife habitats and can make significant contributions to evolving ecosystems.

Beneath County, however, was never thrilled with the decision to allow the land to become wetlands, county Commissioner Jack Buell said.

Commissioners urge continued prosecution over Ruby Ridge

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — Boundary County commissioners want court resolution of the case against FBI sharpshooter Lon Horiuchi for killing the wife of white separatist Randy Weaver.

In a resolution adopted Monday, commissioners took issue with county Prosecutor Brett Benson's decision to drop the case. U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge dismissed the state manslaughter charge against Horiuchi last month.

Benson also asked that all special prosecutors assigned by former county prosecutor Denise Woodbury — including — Los Angeles attorney Stephen Yagman, be dropped from continuing the case.

Benson said that so much time had already passed since the 1992 shooting death of Vicki Weaver during the bloody standoff at Ruby Ridge that it was unlikely the county could prove the charge against Horiuchi, even though a federal appellate court said it could try. Benson said he wanted to end the division that has afflicted the Idaho Panhandle community for nine years.

A sharply divided 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected federal claims that Horiuchi was automatically immune from prosecution because he was acting in his official capacity when he killed Mrs. Weaver. The majority said Horiuchi could be tried if he was found to have acted illegally in his official capacity.

Mrs. Weaver died on the second day of the 11-day siege that began in a shootout which left the Weavers' teen-age son and a deputy U.S. marshal dead.

Weaver and family friend, Kevin Harris, both were acquitted the next year of murder and all other charges filed against them in connection with confrontation.

Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark had worked for the county without pay as a special prosecutor to reinstate the charges. Clark collaborated with Yagman on the case and believed it could have advanced to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Teen in foster home sees new world

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 14 and live in a foster home. Before I entered foster care, I didn't think much about other kids and teens in foster homes. Now that I'm the one with the title "foster kid," I see everything in a new light. Although foster homes are a blessing to most kids who live troubled lives, it's still very hard to endure. If there is one thing I hate about being a foster child, it is feeling different from others in my new neighborhood and school. My message to your readers is: If there's a foster child you know, please reach out to him or her. We're not different from the rest of you.

Thank you for your time, Abby. Please share this with your readers.

DEAR ABBY
Abby VanBuren

Why the children are in foster care. Children are placed in foster care not because they have done anything wrong, but because, for whatever reason, their parents have neglected them or cannot provide a safe, nurturing environment for them. It is not the fault of the children. Foster children deserve all the attention, affection and encouragement you can give them. It will be returned a thousandfold.

DEAR ABBY: In response to your recent column about women involved with men who have narcissistic personalities, I thought it might be helpful if your readers could read a description of these personality characteristics. They are listed in the "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders" published by the American Psychiatric Association.

DEAR BARBARA: I agree that a description of these traits might be helpful. I found them interesting. Read on.

CRITERIA FOR NARCISSISTIC PERSONALITY DISORDER: A pervasive pattern of grandiosity (in fantasy or behavior), need for admiration, and lack of empathy, beginning by early adulthood and present in a variety of contexts, as indicated by five (or more) of the following:

- 1) A grandiose sense of self-importance - exaggerates achievements and talents, expects to be recognized as superior without commensurate achievements.
- 2) Preoccupied with fantasies of unlimited success, power, brilliance, beauty or ideal love.
- 3) Believes that he or she is "special" and unique and can only be understood by, or should associate with, other special or high-status people or institutions.
- 4) Requires excessive admiration.
- 5) A sense of entitlement - unreasonable expectations of especially favorable treatment or automatic compliance with his or her expectations.
- 6) Interpersonally exploitative - takes advantage of others to achieve his or her own ends.
- 7) Lacks empathy - is unwilling to recognize or identify with the feelings and needs of others.
- 8) Often envious of others or believes that others are envious of him or her.
- 9) Shows arrogant, haughty behaviors or attitudes.

Arkansas woman to celebrate 119th birthday next month

DEWITT, Ark. (AP) - When Mary Thompson was 112, she switched nursing homes to be near a gentleman friend. Next month, the whiskey-sipping woman turns 119.

Thompson, the daughter of former slaves, would be recognized as the world's oldest living person if she only had a birth certificate. Social Security records show that she was born on Aug. 2, 1882, in Shelby, Miss. "We'll present her roses," said Jennie Shepherd, social director of the Crestpark Nursing Home, where Thompson has lived since 1995. "We'll get her a corsage, balloons and have a big cake made, the works."

Nurse Jimmy Brown already gives Thompson money, which Thompson saves in her black leather purse to buy Juicy Fruit gum - which wasn't invented until she was age 11 - and pints of top-shelf Crown-Royal whiskey.

"Usually I give her a dollar every day I work," Brown said. "She looks forward to that. She saves it and someone goes out to get her the whiskey."

The Guinness Book of World Records lists Maud Ferris-Luse, 114, of Michigan as the oldest woman in the world with documentation. A French woman, Jeanne Louise Calment, held the record before she died at 122 in 1997.

- Is not large enough to house all homeless animals and allow adequate time for reuniting lost pets and their owners or finding good homes for abandoned and unwanted animals
- Is too much in disrepair to remodel
- Does not have an isolation area for animals with contagious diseases, and does not meet health and safety standards
- Has no room for meeting the public and providing pet owner education on the premises

Industrial countries display wide gaps on key issues

BONN, Germany — Deep divisions emerged at negotiations on how to rescue a global warming treaty as government ministers gathered the talks Thursday, with European nations opposing a drive led by Japan to loosen carbon emissions controls.

With the talks on the 1997 Kyoto agreement in doubt, President Bush was likely to come under pressure to reverse his decision to abandon the accord when he meets leaders of the top industrialized nations, or Group of Eight, in Genoa, Italy on Friday.

French President Jacques Chirac urged his fellow G8 leaders to press Bush on the deal.

Bush "has declared that it's a bad accord," Chirac wrote in an open letter published in Thursday's Le Figaro newspaper.

"On the contrary, we think it is a good agreement... We must continue to discuss it to convince the United States to come on board."

Without the United States, the Kyoto accord would take effect without the world's biggest emitter of carbon dioxide.

France ships fugitive to U.S. for murder trial

CHAMPAGNE-MOUTON, France — French police took convicted murderer Ira Einhorn from his home in this southwestern village Thursday, speeding him away to waiting American officials for the trip home to the United States.

The extradition was an end to two decades of flight for the 61-year-old former anti-war activist and counterculture figure, convicted in absentia of the blood-soaked death of his girlfriend, Holly Maddux, in 1977. He faces a new trial in Pennsylvania.

Einhorn was led outside, an officer holding each arm, and bundled into an unmarked gray Peugeot.

Reaction was swift from the victim's family. "When we see him in handcuffs in the custody of an American citizen, we will be really happy," said Holly Maddux's sister Meg Wakeman, a Seattle-based nurse who was in Washington, D.C., for the introduction of a proposed extradition enforcement bill.

Japanese prosecutors indict American rape suspect

TOKYO — Japanese prosecutors pushed ahead quickly with their case against a U.S. airman on Thursday, charging him with rape in an alleged attack on a woman outside a bar in Okinawa.

The indictment of Staff Sgt. Timothy Woodland, 24, came a day after a judge on the southern island pushed up the deadline for prosecutors to file charges by four days, to Thursday.

Woodland, who faces a minimum of two years in prison if convicted, has denied raping the 20-year-old woman, and Japan's Kyodo News agency quoted Deputy Prosecutor Junichi Okumura as saying the sergeant insists the two had consensual sex.

The filing of charges was a major step in a case that has riled anti-U.S. military sentiment on Okinawa and provoked a standoff between Tokyo and Washington over treatment of criminal suspects in Japan.

Russia detains soldiers - for crimes in Chechnya

MOSCOW — After weeks of criticism over alleged abuses, officials said Thursday that six Russian servicemen had been arrested for crimes against civilians during house-to-house searches for rebels in Chechnya.

The arrests stem from a military operation this month when Chechen human rights groups and civilians charge Russian soldiers descended on three villages and shot on a rampage while searching for rebels.

Accusations against troops have been plentiful, but prosecutions and punishments are rare.

Spoked about the accusations at a Wednesday news conference, President Vladimir Putin said that some soldiers had "fallen for the fighters' provocations" and ended up committing crimes. But he suggested that the rebels' crimes are more serious.

Did you know that the fighters who killed 40 district heads and dozens - old people? Why don't you ask me about that? Putin said. "Why don't you ask me how we are fighting those criminals?"

Germans to build Dracula theme park in Transylvania

BUCHAREST, Romania — German investors and the Romanian government are planning to develop Dracula Land, a "terror" theme park in Transylvania that officials hope will boost the country's ailing tourism industry.

Plans call for the park to be built in the medieval city of Sighisoara — the hometown of the 15th century prince Vlad the Impaler, who inspired novelist Bram Stoker's "Dracula." To be completed by 2003, the park is expected to create about 3,000 jobs. Hotels and a golf course are also planned.

International officials postpone trip to Macedonia

SKOPJE, Macedonia — NATO's secretary general and the European Union's foreign policy chief postponed a trip to Skopje on Thursday after Macedonian officials rejected a peace proposal, raising fears that talks aimed at defusing an ethnic Albanian insurgency could collapse.

Officials in Brussels announced Thursday morning that the visit by NATO Secretary General Lord Robertson and EU foreign policy expert Javier Solana to the

BEACHED LIONS

The bodies of seven mutilated sea lions are seen on the southern shore of San Cristobal, the easternmost island of Ecuador's Galapagos islands. The bodies of 15 sea lions were found on the island with their teeth and sexual organs extracted, presumably for sale in Asian black markets as aphrodisiacs, authorities said Wednesday. The carcasses were discovered Sunday.

Macedonian capital to discuss the Western-backed peace plan had been put on hold after Macedonian leaders lashed out at international efforts to mediate the conflict. Wednesday, Macedonia's Prime Minister Ijubev Georgievski accused the United States and the EU of interference. "What we have on the table is a document tailored to break up Macedonia," Georgievski said. He called the draft "a blatant violation of Macedonia's internal affairs."

Party orders Turkish health minister to go on vacation

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey's health minister has reportedly been ordered to take a vacation after setting off a public uproar by authorizing virginity tests for high school nursing students suspected of having sex.

Nationalist Action Party leader Devlet Bahçeli told Health Minister Osman Durmaz he had damaged the party and ordered him to take a vacation, according to reports Thursday in the Turkish newspaper Radikal and the English-language Turkish News.

Women's groups, nurses and teachers were outraged this week when Durrmaz introduced a regulation that would expel students at government-run nursing high schools for having sex and subject girls who were suspected of having sex to gynecological examinations to check if they were virgins.

Girls who did not pass the test would be expelled from school and barred from studying at other government institutions.

Girl who lived in closet gets new chance with foster parents

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — The 8-year-old Hutchins, Texas, girl found living in the closet of her family's trailer last month was released this week from Children's Medical Center after making "remarkable progress," officials said.

The girl, who weighed 25 pounds when she was found June 11, went home with Bill and Sabrina Kavanaugh, who plan to adopt her.

The Kavanaughs tried to adopt the girl at birth but were forced to return her when their attorney at the time failed to terminate the birth mother's parental rights.

"Child Protective Services will continue to provide services for the child and her family, and we are hopeful that in the very near future the Kavanaughs will be able to adopt this child," said CPS spokeswoman Marleigh Meisner. "She has made remarkable progress."

The Kavanaughs became licensed foster parents and hope to adopt the child. When reached by telephone Wednesday, Sabrina Kavanaugh said she was not allowed to comment about the child's release. Several family members were gathered at the home.

The couple's attorney, David Cole, said Wednesday that the state has asked the couple not to discuss the case.

"Child Protective Services is the managing conservator. For legal purposes, (the girl) is their child," Cole said. "They are not private people filing suit like we were at the beginning of this case. Employee is the wrong word, but it's a little like that relationship."

The Kavanaughs have said they never stopped loving the girl and have always considered her their daughter.

The child must live with the couple six months before they can adopt. The couple must undergo an adoption study, and the birth parents' rights must be terminated.

The girl's mother has said she is willing to relinquish her rights to the Kavanaughs. Officials are trying to track down the girl's father.

A child placement specialist said in a home study that the Kavanaughs could care for a child with attention deficit disorder and hyperactivity, eating disorders, attachment disorders and learning disabilities, according to court records.

The study recommended the girl live with the Kavanaughs but cautioned that the couple will need help to meet the child's needs. The girl was sexually abused and severely malnourished, according to court documents.

The Kavanaughs can best help the girl by creating dependability, structure and routine in the child's life, said psychologist Karen Sitterle of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

"It's something she hasn't had," Sitterle said. "She will look to them to be sure they can handle that, that they're not overwhelmed or frazzled, but about what she has gone through."

Sitterle, who works with trauma victims, said the child's mental recovery will be lengthy and include ups and downs.

"I would imagine a child like this has many fears. She's bound to be a different child than when they knew her before," she said. "Obviously, they will have to get to know each other again."

While in the hospital, the child underwent music therapy and loved to sing, Meisner said.

The girl will continue therapy, but officials would not disclose her medical needs or specific improvements the child has made.

Officials said the girl had surgery at Children's, but authorities have declined to disclose the procedure. She had several broken teeth and initially had difficulty digesting food.

The emaciated girl was found living inside a lice-infested closet lined with human waste on June 11. Authorities said she lived in the closet and other confined spaces for four years. The girl told authorities she was 2 years old and did not know what the sun and a television were.

The girl's mother and stepfather, Barbara Atkinson and Kenneth Ray Addison, remain at Law Street Justice Center on charges of serious bodily injury to a child. Barbara Atkinson is being held in lieu of $100,000 bail, and Kenneth Addison is being held without bail because of a warrant from Ellis County.

If convicted, each faces a possible sentence of 5 to 99 years or life in prison.

It's all made.

Divers find body of quadruplets' missing mom

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — The missing mother of week-old quadruplets was pulled from Lake Michigan by divers Wednesday night, a short distance from where police found her car.

The body of Aracely Erives, 27, who was last seen by her husband Tuesday morning when she left their Southwest Side home to go for a drive in her burgundy Nissan, was positively identified by relatives at about 9 p.m., police said.

Erives' husband, Jesus Sandoval, told police she suffered from postpartum depression following the July 12 birth of the quadruplets, said police spokesman Robert Cargie.

Candace King as Lola and Brock Nielson as the young Joe Hardy consider the ramifications of making a deal with the devil in the Oakley Valley Arts Center's production of 'Damn Yankees.'

OVAC reprises 'Damn Yankees'

*Whoever lives long learns full many things:
By naught in this world can he ever be surprised.
I've seen already in my wanderings
Many a mortal who was crystallized.*
—Mephistopheles, in "Faust,"
by Wolfgang von Goethe

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Be careful what you wish for.

Joe Boyd, fan of baseball's classically feckless and now defunct Washington Senators, would give his soul to Satan for fastball hitter with good power to the opposite field.

And so, he becomes one. "Took a catch point and a frustrated fan; I think most people can understand that," said Wayne Blauer, a Burley doctor who plays Joe in the Oakley Valley Arts Center production of "Damn Yankees," which opens Wednesday in Howell's Opera House. "And I think everybody can understand wanting something so bad that you'd give anything for it."

It's a venerable tale — "Orpheus," "Dr. Faustus," "Faust" — were classic riffs on the same storyline — about a man who sells his soul but finds a loophole. It was reimagined by writer Douglas Wallop in a little-remarked 1952 novel, "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant," that became a Broadway classic three years later.

The characters couldn't have been more straightforward: a middle-aged fan, a broad-shouldered palooka, the devil and a temptress.

On Broadway, the latter was Gwen

Verdon, whose steamy and street-smart Lola became one of the great characters of American musical theater. Verdon intimidates would-be Lolas still.

"We cut the Mambo from the production because it was just too much Gwen Verdon's dance," said Candace King, the OVAC Lola. "Hey, I'm a mother with four kids."

Bob Fosse choreographed Broadway's "Damn Yankees," the Oakley production is less ambiguous, but the music no less memorable, Blauer and King agree.

"They're great songs," Blauer said. "Some you remember for a long time." Richard Adler and Jerry Ross wrote "Whatever Lola Wants," "Heart" and "Two Lost Souls," now show-tune standards. Dan Johns plays the devil — Mr. Applegate here — and Brock Nielson is Joe Boyd's uberjock manifestation, Joe Hardy.

The cast also includes Nancy Blauer as Meg Boyd, and Beau Anderson, Joe Wells, Jerry Hale, Ben Peterson and Jared Davis as the less-talented Senators. Burton Anderson is the director.

"Damn Yankees" runs Wednesday and Thursday nights at 8, then twice on July 28 — at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. — in commemoration of Pioneer Days. The production continues July 29 and Aug. 4.

Tickets, which are $8, can be reserved by phoning 677-ARTS.

Gwen Verdon's turn as Lola in the 1955 Broadway production of 'Damn Yankees' was a classic.

'America's Sweethearts' hits theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend: Opinions are by Associated Press, Los Angeles Times and Knight Ridder reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'America's Sweethearts'

Such a sad irony that a movie with a sweet title should leave such a sour taste, that the blindingly brilliant Julia Roberts should be so dull, that nearly every joke from co-stars Billy Crystal - who co-stars, produced and co-wrote the script - should land with such a thud. The combination of Roberts, Crystal, Catherine Zeta-Jones and John Cusack held such promise, and the premise of going behind the scenes of a movie press junker dangled the possibility of biting satire. It's sporadically funny at best, but more often it's ridiculous and over-the-top, until it ultimately spins shrilly out of control. PG-13 for language and some crude and sexual humor. 100 minutes.

'Atlantis: the Lost Empire'

Its gift for wide-screen spectacle notwithstanding, this gee-whiz story of a turn-of-the-century search for the fabled lost continent has the look and feel of the best Disney animated film of 1981 not 2001. (1.35. PG, for action violence.)

'Cats & Dogs'

A very resistible movie made from what sounds like an irresistible premise, it proves one more time that it's easier to make animals talk than give them anything interesting to say. With the human actors (Jeff Goldblum, Elizabeth Perkins) marking time at best (and that best is rare) it becomes a series of expensive special effects in search of a scenario worth the price tag. If anyone had any doubts about what an extraordinary accomplishment the original 'Babe' was, seeing this will put them to rest. (1.23. PG, for animal action and humor.)

'Crazy/beautiful'

Though it's easy (make that irresistible) to mock a film that takes high school romance so seriously, 'crazy/beautiful' is very much of a guilty pleasure. A nifty piece of teenage romantic pliffie, it combines two strong attractive performances by Kirsten Dunst and Jay Hernandez with a shameless 'they live in two different worlds' plot line to amiably entertaining effect. (1.35. PG-13, for mature thematic material involving teens, drug and alcohol content, sexuality and language.)

'Dr. Dolittle 2'

The new item is an improvement over the original 'Dr. D' (not the most difficult feat, perhaps, but true nevertheless) and features an engaging performance by the continually remarkable Eddie Murphy. But precisely because it is an improvement, 'Dr. D 2' is also more depressing than its progenitor. With the application of more intelligence and a different sensibility, this could have been a good film instead of one that's content with not being a complete waste of time. With Kristen Wilson, Kyia Pratt, Raven-Symoné and Jeffrey Jones. (1.22. PG, for language and crude humor.)

'The Fast and the Furious'

Set in the world of L.A. street racing, this bravura presentation not only has jaw-dropping races and chases but characters of unexpected depth and complexity; the result is as intensely involving as it is exciting. Paul Walker and Vin Diesel are well-matched as racers as daring as they are reflective. With Michel Rodriguez, Jordana Brewster, Ted Levine. (1.46. PG-13, for violence, sexual content and language.)

'Final Fantasy: The Spirits Within'

The film features state-of-the-art computer-generated, photo-realistic human beings and the story combines science-fiction with the ethos of self-sacrifice and ecological consciousness that characterized 'Princess Mononoke.' It's an uneasy fit at best, and one that's not helped by a clunky, over-complicated script. This latest example of the videogameization of Hollywood insists on taking this stuff seriously, even though the sight of these characters getting romantic is about as involving as watching two expensive mannequins kissing in a Macy's window. Voices by Ming-Na, Alec Baldwin, Donald Sutherland and Jeff Wood. (1.46. PG-13, for sci-fi action violence.)

'Jurassic Park III'

This franchise seems to be fossilized. Anyone who has seen the first two films can guess the outcome of this one. Anonymous characters are the first to go, then the colorful character names, and one of the leads will appear to die and we will later learn he survived. Paleontologist Alan Grant (Sam Neill) is among the crew stranded on dino island this time, duped into the trip by a businessman (William H. Macy) and his estranged wife (Tea Leoni). Director Joe Johnston ('October Sky') fills in for Steven Spielberg, who only executive produced. PG-13 for intense sci-fi terror and violence. 90 minutes.

'Kiss of the Dragon'

The latest example of the mainstreaming of Asian action stars is a vehicle tailored to the talents of Jet Li, who produced the film and came up with its story of a Chinese secret agent trapped in Paris in addition to taking the lead role. Li's hands have the speed and power of lethal weapons, his legs can direct pool balls with total accuracy, and his fight scenes completely capture our attention. Which is a good thing, because the non-fighting parts are, despite the presence of co-star Bridget Fonda, completely non-compelling. With Tcheky Karyo. (1.38. R, for strong violence, language, some sexuality and drug content.)

'Lara Croft: Tomb Raider'

It's got perhaps the most popular of video games as source material, a sought-after star as its marquee attraction and one of the longest and most convoluted writing credits in recent history, but what it has really got is, as the old song would have it, plenty of nothing. Almost completely lacking in genuine thrills, even the attractive presence of star Angelina Jolie can't keep this leaden, plodding, completely underwhelming film from playing like 'Lara Croft: Yawn Inducer.' (1.41. PG-13, for action violence and some sensuality.)

'Legally Blonde'

A high concept can be a wonderful thing. Up to a point. Starring an impeccably groomed Reese Witherspoon as a Bel-Air airhead wending her way through law school, this is basically 'Clueless Goes to Harvard.' Nothing wrong with that notion, but this is no 'Clueless.' With Luke Wilson and Selma Blair. (1.36. PG-13, for language and sexual references.)

'Pearl Harbor'

An intelligent, briskly-paced and action-filled summer blockbuster that views Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor as the beginning of America's loss of innocence, a point of view that encompasses passion, valor, epic disaster and spectacular aerial warfare. In the foreground are lifelong pals, U.S. Army pilots (Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) both in love with Navy nurse Kate Beckinsale. Directed by Michael Bay, written by Randall Wallace and co-starring Cuba Gooding Jr., Tom Sizemore, Jon Voight and Alec Baldwin. Please see MOVIES, Page C8

This is the time of year when the most water is consumed in the community. Whether watering the lawn, washing the car, hosing the kids down, or cleaning off the driveway, we don't stop to think of how much extra water we are using, and often wasting. How can we conserve water? We can do it by: • Keep drinking water in the refrigerator instead of letting the faucet run until the water is cool. • Wash fruits and vegetables in a basin. Use a vegetable brush. • Do not use water to defrost frozen foods, thaw in the refrigerator overnight. • If washing dishes by hand, use a dishpan for rinsing dishes. • Scrape, rather than rinse, dishes before loading into the dishwasher. • Operate the dishwasher only when completely full. • Add food wastes to your compost pile instead of using the garbage disposal. • Use the appropriate water level or load size selection on the washing machine.

'Waiting for Godot' plays in S.V.

By Karen Bossack Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - The wait is over. Godot is coming.

Samuel Beckett's famous absurdist tragic-comedy "Waiting for Godot" will take the stage at Trail Creek Cabin near Sun Valley Sunday and Monday.

The question is: Will Godot be there? That, really, is up to you.

"The play holds up a mirror, not a mirror of life but a mirror of life to you," said director Gary Hoffman, of the Royal Larkspur Play Troupe.

"There's no certainty about who Godot is, whether he exists, whether he will come or whether he's ever come."

This is the moment that Hoffman, a retired pediatrician who lives in Ketchum, has been waiting for since he saw a black-and-white TV version of the play years ago.

That production seemed slow and ponderous and incomplete, but, as Hoffman got involved in theater, he realized the play's significance.

"It's a world-class play that totally broke new ground," he said. "It is the cornerstone of modern theater. It gave playwrights a chance to experiment with minimal plots, unpredictable dialogue, contradictory characters. There's a lot of Beckett in Sam Shepard, Edward Albee, David Mamet, Harold Pinter."

Beckett, an Irish playwright, wrote "Waiting for Godot" in the aftermath of World War II in Paris where he settled after wandering through southern France as a member of the French resistance.

His work tends to be on the pessimistic side as his characters search for God, hope amidst despair, the meaning of life.

If you're looking for a plot in "Waiting for Godot," you won't find one. There's no plot, no beginning, no end. Instead, the play is centered around two tramped-like characters waiting for their ship to come in.

They wait. Godot does not come. Life goes on. They wait. Godot does not come. Life goes on. Well, you get the picture.

"These two clowns are ourselves without the house and 2.5 children," said Patrick Torelle, who did the play in the Seattle area.

"We all wait for future events only to find life is essentially the same afterwards."

Author Mel Gussow once described "Waiting for Godot" as a cheerful, grating joke that we are waiting for death from the moment of birth and all we can do is watch the passing parade of horrors and hopes, while trusting that our boots more or less fit and that our kidneys more or less function.

"According to Beckett, we pass this time waiting for meaning that will save us from the emptiness of our existence, the feeling that life has no meaning," Hoffman said.

Just when the play begins to get too morose, one of the characters loses his pants. Or something like that.

In fact, there's enough frantic slapstick and inane dialogue in this cosmic vaudeville, that Beckett originally wanted Laurel and Hardy to play the lead roles.

(3:00, PG-13 for sustained intense war sequences, images of wounded, brief sensuality and some language.)

'Scary Movie 2'

Keenen Ivory Wayans' broad burlesque of haunted house movies - plus a prologue skewering 'The Exorcist' - is extremely heavy on gross-out humor involving sex and violence and lots shorter in inspiration than last summer's original 'Scary Movie' was. (1.22, R, for strong sexual and gross humor, graphic language and some drug content.)

'The Score'

A top-drawer heist movie that ratchets up the tension, it will remind you of classic caper films of the past, and that is a good thing. This is as much a character study as a thriller, so having a trio of exceptional actors - Robert De Niro, Marlon Brando, and Edward Norton - is a powerful plus. To make this ensemble work at its best, director Frank Oz wasn't afraid to be traditional, restrained, even old-fashioned. Who would have guessed that lurking inside the man who lurked inside Yoda and Miss Piggy was a thriller director eager to get out? (2.02, R for language.)

'Sexy Beast'

This nifty British gangster film is the feature debut of hot young commercial and music video director Jonathan Glazer, but don't let that worry you. Besides a great look, it has a strong plot and a pair of excellent performances by Ray Winstone as a former hard guy trying to stay retired and Ben Kingsley as his nemesis, terrifying enough to forever banish all thoughts of 'Ghandi' from your mind. (1.31, R for pervasive language, strong violence and some sexuality.)

'Shrek'

A great piece of wise-balding computer animation, this new version of William Steig's fractured fairy tale about an ogre who rescues a princess is all comic attitude, all the time. It especially benefits from its superb voice talent, including Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, John Lithgow and an unstoppable Eddie Murphy as a donkey sidekick named, well, Donkey. (1.29, PG for mild language and some crude humor.)

'With a Friend Like Harry'

French director Dominik Moll's homage to Hitchcock's classic 'Shadow of a Doubt,' this dark comedy is about a family man who runs into a old school chum on vacation and slowly finds him taking over his life. With Laurent Lucas, Sergi Lopez, and Mathilde Seigner. Rated R.

Twin Falls AA takes two from Pocatello

By Holly Keyt
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A pair of big innings lifted the Twin Falls AA American Legion baseball team over visiting Pocatello Thursday in Game 1 of their doubleheader at Frontier Field.

After falling behind by three runs in the first, the Cowboys put together several hits and capitalized on some Indian errors to take the 6-4 win in Area C play.

"It's good for us at this point in the season to come from behind," Twin Falls coach Matt Rasmussen said. "It builds character and it builds confidence."

The Cowboys (26-16 overall, 13-9 in conference) rounded out the night with a 6-1 victory over the Indians (22-21 overall, 9-11 in conference). Seth Merritt had a strong performance on the mound in the win.

Pocatello started the day hot as Jim Roske drew a walk and Kody Kirkland drove him home. Pitcher Mike Webb cleared the left field fence with a home run for two more runs, giving the Indians a quick three-run lead.

Pocatello picked up another run to open the third inning, making the score 4-0.

But Twin Falls picked up its bats in the bottom of the third.

"Early in the game, he (Webb) was landing all three of his pitches for strikes," Rasmussen said. "As the game got a little deeper, he was struggling with his curve and change-up so he had to come with the fastball and I think that was the difference for us."

Junior-to-be Andy Coats started the rally for Twin Falls with a single to left field with a hit-and-run on.

"It was pretty key because I think that was the first run we had and that kind of got us going," Coats said.

Carl Blackwood reached on a fielder's choice and Derrick Tenney kept things going with an RBI double to left-center. Jake Asher stepped to the plate next and ripped a two-run homer to put Twin Falls back in the game, 4-3.

The Cowboys had another big inning in the fourth. Scott Spritzer reached on a grounder to the shortstop and moved to second on a Ben Mueller sacrifice bunt.

A bloop single by Brett Miller to left field advanced Spritzer, and he came home on an error. Miller scored on a Blackwood grounder to third. The inning ended with Twin Falls leading 6-4.

The Indians couldn't seem to get back in the game as Twin Falls scored again in the fifth. Please see TWIN FALLS, Page D2

Montgomerie takes early control of British Open

The Associated Press

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — The loudest cheers in the first round of the British Open came after Tiger Woods had already left the course.

Ever more unlikely was the guy accepting the trophy.

Colin Montgomerie no longer wore a scowl and a slump in his shoulders. Left behind was all the other baggage he usually brings to a British Open. In its place was a confident smile that only got wider when a 40-foot birdie dropped on the final hole to a deafening ovation.

A 6-under 65 at breezy Royal Lytham & St. Annes gave him a three-stroke lead Thursday and legitimate hopes that he can win his first major championship — even the one that has tormented him for 11 years.

"It has always been catch-up in the past. Now, I seem to be in the lead," Montgomerie said. "The whole psyche of the championship changes for me."

The dynamics are different, for sure. Montgomerie's best round and best start at the British Open left him three strokes ahead of Brad Faxon, Chris DiMarco and former British Amateur champion Mikko Ilonen of Finland.

Better yet, he was six strokes ahead of Woods.

Woods failed to break par in the opening round at his fourth straight tournament, spending much of the day slashing out of the rough, getting reacquainted

In the hunt: Brad Faxon and Finland's Mikko Ilonen, playing in his first major championship as a pro, were three shots back after 65s. Another 15 players were tied at 69.

Where's Tiger?: Woods was six shots back after a 71.

Weatherwatch: After two days of practicing in strong, gusty wind and rain, players got to the course Thursday to find light wind and moderate temperatures.

Three reasons to be happy Armstrong, Tour head to Pyrenees

The Associated Press

PERPIGNAN, France — Heading into the Pyrenees for what should be the decisive final mountain stages of the Tour de France, Lance Armstrong had three reasons to be a very happy man.

First, he was on course for title No. 3, after a stunning performance in the Alps that left his rivals in awe and in despair.

Second and third, he will soon be the father of twin girls.

Armstrong found out the twins' gender after his triumph in the mountain time trial at Chamrousse. His wife, Kristin, brought him two envelopes containing ultrasound test results and they opened it together.

"I didn't expect two girls," Armstrong said. "The easy expectation is one boy, one girl. My second expectation was two boys."

"It's a beautiful surprise. Perfect."

Armstrong already is the father of toddler Luke. A survivor of advanced testicular cancer, he underwent treatments that made him sterile but banked his sperm beforehand. His wife, who is due to give birth in December, became pregnant through in vitro fertilization.

Armstrong had a day to dwell on the good news before the next stage of his title campaign.

On Thursday, the first of two rest days during the three-week Tour, riders were flown from Grenoble, at the foot of the Alps, to this southwestern city close to the Pyrenees.

The race resumes today with a 103.4-mile stretch from Perpignan to Ax-les-Thermes, 4,538 feet high in the Pyrenees.

Minico splits with Idaho Falls

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minico Spartans rode the long right arm of John Fennell and the hot hitting of Andy Coats in Game 1 of Thursday night's 2-0 victory over the Idaho Falls Russets at Warburton Field.

Coats led off with a triple and later came around to score on a wild pitch in the first inning. Later in the inning, Spartan catcher Adam Frank drove in Ty Dietz, who was hit by a pitch.

"It felt pretty good," Coats said of his triple. "They threw me a breaking ball so I just stayed back a little longer and drove the ball the other way."

In the second game, Dietz hit a home run and James Oldham worked a complete game on the mound but it was enough as the Russets beat Minico 6-3. A four-run fifth inning by Idaho Falls won the difference.

In the first game, it was a good thing the Spartans (31-11 overall, 15-7 in Area C play) capitalized on the early mistakes from Russet pitcher Nick Orgill because from here on out, chances were few and far

While Coats, who finished 2-for-3 from the plate, provided the offense, it was pitcher John Fennell who made sure the Spartans' first inning held up.

The 6-foot-7 right-hander struck out seven without issuing a walk and allowed only six hits over seven innings.

Johnson almost perfect in relief against Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Randy Johnson struck out 16, a major league record for a reliever, and came within four outs of combining with Curt Schilling on a no-hitter as Arizona beat San Diego 3-0 Thursday in the completion of their suspended game.

The game was suspended in the third inning Wednesday night after explosions knocked out a bank of lights over left field.

Johnson (12-5) relieved Thursday, and his strikeouts were one more than Washington's Walter Johnson fanned in the final 11.1-3 innings of a 15-inning game on July 25, 1913.

In the regular game, Kevin Jarvis (7-7) won his third straight start. Trevor Hoffman got his 21st save and Phil Nevin hit a two-run homer. Robert Ellis (6-5) allowed six runs and five hits in 2-1-3 innings.

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls American Legion baseball team might be winning more regularly, but they still haven't found a way to win a game in Area C play.

Vick makes Falcons debut as backup

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — As Michael Vick walked off the field after his first day of training camp with the Atlanta Falcons, teammate Doug Johnson dropped off some shoulder pads.
 "A little gift for you to take," Johnson admonished.
 "Oh, it's starting already," Vick said, rolling his eyes.
 He may be the $62 million man and the savior of the franchise, but Vick is still a rookie. That means he has to carry a veteran's pads after practice, in addition to his own.

 "I'm trying to keep myself humble," Vick said after Thursday's two-hour workout. "It's very important that I show people I'm no different than anyone else."
 Of course, Vick is much different. Several hundred people showed up on a cloudy day at Furman University to watch his Falcons debut. The only jersey on sale at a concession stand above the practice field was No. 7 — Vick's number.
 Coach Dan Reeves is so eager to see what Vick can do that he's already bumped his prized rookie to No. 2 on the depth chart behind veteran Chris Chandler. That's a significant development considering the Falcons also have Eric Zeier and Johnson, both with NFL starts on their resumes.

 "We've got to get Michael ready as quick as we can," Reeves said. "The only way we're going to get him ready is to get him involved."
 The coach also is looking into keeping three quarterbacks active for regular-season games, rather than designating a third QB just for emergency duty. Such a move would cost the Falcons use of a potentially valuable special teams player on an already tight 45-man roster.

 "I'm checking with the league to make sure it's OK," Reeves said. "I've never done that before."
 "I was a little rusty," Vick said. "But I'll get better and better every day. If I make a mistake one day, I shouldn't make the same mistake the next day."

 He signed for a 71 and figured it could have been worse.
 "At least I got it around where I was at even par," Woods said. "I did not put myself out of the tournament."
 Hardly anyone was a lost cause.
 On a cool, breezy day that wasn't nearly as vicious as it started out, 35 players broke par and more than 60 players were no worse than 2 over.
 "Tiger is only three off second place," Montgomerie noted.

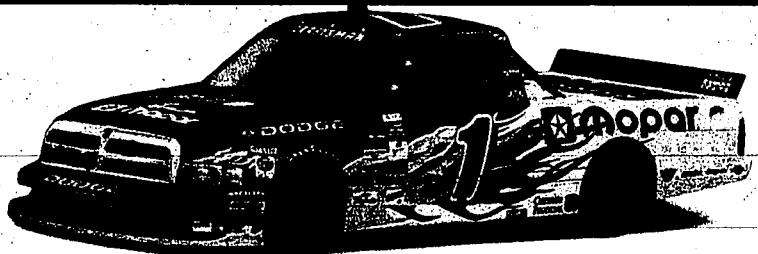

"There's nothing wrong with that score," David Duval, a contender in the first two majors, was in a large group at 69 that included Jesper Parnevik and two-time Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal.
 Another stroke back was Sergio Garcia, Vijay Singh and Phil Mickelson, who checked in with another wild round — back-to-back eagles, three birdies and the mistakes that have hounded him in the majors this year. At one point, Mickelson was 3 under through 13 holes and had only three pars.

Howland hits hole in one at Jerome CC
JEROME — Janell Howland of Boise hit a hole in one at the Jerome Country Club on Wednesday. The ace came on hole No. 5 with a 7-iron while she was practicing for the Idaho Golf Association Women's Amateur tournament. Witnesses were Jean Smith and Ed Howland.
Cowboys sign top draft pick
AUSTIN, Texas — Dallas Cowboys rookie quarterback Quincy Carter, the team's top draft pick in April, has been given a five-year, $3.3 million contract.
 The Cowboys, who didn't have a first-round pick in April, took Carter in the second round as the 53rd player overall — higher than most draft lists had listed the former Georgia quarterback. It was the first time since drafting Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh in 1989 that Dallas used its top pick on a quarterback.
Three-time All-Star Majerle returns Suns
PHOENIX — Dan Majerle never made a secret of his desire to return to Phoenix, his first NBA team. He accomplished his goal Thursday when he signed a one-year contract with the Suns.
 The 13-year veteran accepted the $1 million salary the Suns were able to offer a player with 10 or more years of tenure. The contract counts $590,000 against the salary cap.
Padres to see the lights by tonight
SAN DIEGO — Qualcomm Stadium's big bangs weren't as bad as originally feared, and the San Diego Padres will have their lights back tonight.
 Two explosions in the light tower above left field in the 34-year-old stadium on Wednesday night darkened a bank of lights and forced the suspension of San Diego's game against Arizona.
 Stadium manager Bill Wilson originally thought a 12,000-volt transformer had blown, which would have been bad news for the Padres and the city of San Diego.

American Race Trucks headline Speedway

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Three races and three top 5 finishes. Burley's Nick Lynch knows how to handle the track at Magic Valley Speedway. The American Race Trucks will be making their fourth appearance of the season Saturday night, with Lynch hoping to continue his string of successes on a full night of racing. Five classes will be running at the NAPA Auto Parts Pony Stocks, the Budweiser Grand-National Sportsman, the Mountain Dew Modifieds and the Dairy Queen Thunder Stocks. Lynch, the defending Race Truck champion, has finished in the top 5 in each of the three previous races and holds an 80-point lead over John Newhouse of Twin Falls for the track title. The points race between Bruce Quale and Steve Jones in the Modifieds division could tighten, with Jones trailing by only 31 points. Also lurking in third place in the points standings is Rick Corbridge just 55 points back. In the Pony Stocks, overall points leader Alan Larson will be looking to repeat last weekend's thrilling win. Larson and Mike Prara battled bumper-to-bumper most of the race until Larson attempted to move around Prara with two laps remaining. The move brought Larson even with Prara and the two crossed the finish line side-by-side. The win was Larson's fourth of the season and his 11th top 5 finish. Ray Van Holland will be gunning for his third win of the year in the Grand National Sportsman division. To do so, the overall points leader will have to get around Michelle Meads and Randy Price as well as a strong field of drivers. And Jude Jasper can pad his newly acquired points lead in the Thunder Stocks division with a strong finish. Jasper moved past Jerry Rice in the points standings when Rice failed to run last week end. Both Jasper and Troy Chandler jumped past Rice and now the title is Jasper's to lose.

Blaney sets the record straight in mixup with Stewart

Blaney said after reviewing the tapes, "I left Tony too much room to get in and he stuck it in there. If I'd been in his shoes, I would have done the same thing. At the time, I didn't think I did, but I got myself in that predicament. I called Tony and talked to him. The first thing he said was he was sorry, and I told him there was no need to be saying that. I shouldn't have mouthed off before I saw what happened. We're friends anyway. He walked by me Saturday night, and I yelled at him and that was it. Everybody gets mad when they're put in these spots. It's just that type of racing. I'm still steaming about it because we had a chance to get a good finish. I'm mad at myself more than anybody else. You run the whole race trying to stay out of trouble, and we had an excellent chance to do something at the end, and I gave it away."

Best ratings ever: NBC has gotten somewhat mixed reviews for its first Winston Cup telecast, last week in Daytona, but Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s victory was a boon to the ratings. The network's coverage was the highest rated NASCAR prime-time race in history, drawing 25 million viewers. What's more, it thrashed the competition. The Pepsi 400 was network television's highest-rated program July 7. It won the significant 18-49 adult demographic, as well.

The telecast gave NBC a ratings victory over competitors ABC, Fox and CBS. The Pepsi 400 drew a 6.1 rating and a 13 share. ABC and Fox each averaged an identical 4.1 rating/8 share, while CBS posted a 4.0/8.

Past, over here: Andy Petree, who is looking for new sponsors for both his Chevrolets, the No. 33 of Joe Nemechek and the No. 55 of Bobby Hamilton, was putting special emphasis on last weekend's opportunities for exposure at Joliet, Ill.

"It's no secret we're working hard to nail down sponsorship for this team next season," Petree said.

"Heading into a market like Chicago, and knowing those companies are going to be seeing a lot of NASCAR, one way or another, over the next few days, we see this as a really good opportunity to show what we can do and what we can bring to a potential sponsor."

Job-creation campaign still lacks chairman

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's Business Plus II job-creation campaign is still without a chairman. The campaign's governing committee met Thursday but did not elect a chairman from its ranks to replace former Chairman Lee Wagner, chamber executive Kent Just said.

Wagner, longtime general manager of KMYT-TV, left town this week to lead CBS affiliates in Fargo and Grand Forks, N.D. His replacement at the helm of Business Plus II will be someone already on the committee that leads the local economic-development campaign.

"No one has stepped forward and said 'I want this job,'" Just said Thursday.

But several committee members have said they'll think about taking the helm, he added. He expects a chairman to be chosen when the committee meets in August.

In the interim, Times-News Publisher Stephen Hartgen will run Business Plus II as vice chairman, Just said.

Ameristar Casinos names information tech director

JACKPOT, Nev. - Vio Nicola was recently appointed project director for the information technology department of Ameristar Casinos Inc., a Las Vegas-based gaming company that is a major employer at the Magic Valley. Nicola will manage corporate systems projects and coordinate their implementation throughout the company's properties. Prior to joining Ameristar, Nicola was vice president of operations and chief information officer for Adspene Networks Inc. He also has held management positions in information systems and network computing for Cap Gemini America, Cadence Design Systems, the Vanstar Group and the American Express Co. Also at Ameristar, certified public accountant Tom Malone was appointed director of internal audit and will oversee compliance with gaming regulations. He also will be in charge of the company's operational audits.

Washington Mutual Inc. reports record earnings

SEATTLE - Washington Mutual Inc. generated record earnings of $79.6 million for the second quarter, up sharply from second-quarter 2000 earnings of $49.8 million. Earnings-per-share basis for the quarter were a record 91 cents, up 40 percent from 64 cents a year ago. Washington Mutual does banking business in the Magic Valley.

Qwest outlines service improvements

The Times-News and The Associated Press

DENVER - Qwest Communications International met its phone-installation commitments 98 percent of the time during the second quarter, reflecting progress in solving customer-service problems, company officials said Thursday.

The Denver-based telecommunications provider also said that in nine of the 14 states it serves, no customer had to wait more than a month for phone service during the quarter that ended June 30.

"It's wonderful to have the substantiating data to show that we are delivering the progress," said Akin Mohebbi, Qwest's operations president.

Qwest - which provides local

Qwest in Idaho

Qwest Communications said it showed strong improvement in customer service in Idaho through the second quarter - the best results in six years in key areas for residential and small-business customers. At the end of the quarter, it said, no customer in Idaho waited more than 30 days for installation of the first telephone line. In Idaho, Qwest's service data at the end of the quarter for residential and telephone service in much of the Magic Valley - has been providing updates on service improvements since it acquired U S West in June 2000. The company inherited a backlog of orders and sanctions imposed by regulators in some states over poor service. States with no "held" orders for small-business customers:

- More than 98 percent of customer commitments were met on time.
- Repair commitments were met more than 95 percent of the time.
- Repeat repairs decreased by nearly 25 percent from a year ago.
- Qwest repaired nearly 92 percent of all service outages in Idaho in 24 hours or less - an improvement of about 6 percent since a year ago.

Source: Qwest

Mohebbi said complaints to state regulators were down 18 percent over the same period last year, with nearly 90 percent of service outages repaired in 24 hours or less.

As part of its effort to improve service, Qwest will open a new customer service center in Phoenix and add 500 customer service agents throughout its region.

Since taking over U S West, Qwest has hired 1,500 technicians and laid thousands of miles of fiber optic and copper cable in the hopes that improved service would help its bid to once again offer long-distance service in U S West's old territory. The company's campaign in Idaho is beginning to heat up, as lobbyists start to heat up.

The company still offers long distance outside its local phone service region.

Qwest was required to sell its long distance business in U S West's former service region last year when it bought U S West for $44 billion. Federal Communications Commission guidelines prohibit a Baby Bell from offering long distance service in its region unless state regulators deem it has improved customer service and allowed competitors to use its network.

Mohebbi said he did not know when testing of Qwest's compliance with FCC guidelines for handling orders for its competitors will be completed. An independent accounting firm is testing Qwest's system while the Arizona Corporation Commission is conducting its own test.

Qwest plans to file for long distance regulatory approval in some states by the end of this year.

Delta posts net loss

Airline loses $90 million, blames fuel prices, strike

The Associated Press

ATLANTA - Delta Air Lines posted a net loss of $90 million for the second quarter Thursday, blaming low demand for pricey business travel, more expensive jet fuel and a three-month strike at its Comair regional carrier unit.

But the loss was not as severe as analysts had expected, and Delta said it would have turned a profit if not for the Comair strike.

Delta said the loss, equal to 76 cents per share, was alleviated by an uptick in revenue in late June from a fare sale. Delta earned $460 million, or $3.51 per share, in the same period of 2000.

Excluding unusual items, Delta had an operating loss of $123 million, or $1.03 per share, beating the $1.20 per share loss expected by analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial/First Call. In the same period of 2000, Delta had operating profit of $374 million, or $2.85 per share.

The Atlanta-based company had warned in a securities filing last month that it expected to lose $140 million to $160 million in the April-June quarter.

"Delta, like the rest of the industry, faces serious revenue pressures at the end of the year," Leo F. Mullin, Delta's chairman and chief executive officer, told analysts in a conference call.

The company also expects to post a loss in the third quarter, he said.

Tourism exec says grant will help area hit by mine closure

BOISE - A tourism promoter says the Sunshine Mine closure last winter is a good example of why the Silver Valley needs to diversify into recreation and other offerings for visitors.

Comair employees Angie Rowland and Brenda Segal catch up on some on paperwork inside an empty Comair terminal recently at the Cincinnati-Northern Kentucky International Airport in Hebron, Ky., after Comair pilots went on strike. Delta Air Lines lost $90 million in the second quarter, blaming low demand for high-priced business travel, more expensive jet fuel and a three-month strike at Comair.

Money in brief

Regions statewide made plans for tourism dollars during the competition. The $2.5 million represents 45 percent of the $5.5 million collected by the state through the 2 percent "bed tax" from July 2000 through June 2001.

Smith's Food & Drug plans conservation measures

TWIN FALLS - Smith's Food & Drug Stores said Thursday it will power down its store lighting by 50 percent in a voluntary energy-conservation program throughout the company's 114 stores in eight states, including stores in Twin Falls and Burley.

Smith's Salt Lake City corporate vice president, Richard Higgins, said Smith's, a division of The Kroger Co., "The reduction in kilowatt-hours for all stores combined is estimated to conserve enough energy to serve more than 2,300 homes per month throughout the intermountain West," Smith's said in a statement.

All stores will be powered down by July 31. The company said the move won't affect the quality or safety of refrigerated and frozen foods, and lighting won't be reduced in any store parking lots.

Burger King names new chief financial officer

MIAMI - Burger King completed its new senior management team this week with the appointment of a chief financial officer. Bennett Nussbaum, 55, will come from Kinko's, where he has been senior vice president and chief financial officer for the past four years. Nussbaum also spent 25 years with PepsiCo in a number of senior financial and operational roles, including CFO of Pepsi-Cola International.

31, Nussbaum will be responsible for finance, treasury, real estate development and management information systems.

Nussbaum will play a key role in Burger King's future as it separates itself from parent company Diageo Plc, through either a leveraged buyout or an initial public offering.

Nussbaum is the final member of new Chief Executive John Dasburg's four-person executive team, which also includes Chief Marketing Officer Chris Clouser, Chief Operating Officer Kim Lopdrup and Chief Legal Counsel Ben Hirst.

Since he arrived in April, Dasburg has been revamping both the management structure and the operations of the Miami-Dade fast-food chain, which includes several restaurants in the Magic Valley.

United Parcel Service struggles with slowdown

NEW YORK - Earnings fell 9 percent at United Parcel Service Inc., the world's biggest package delivery company, as cost-conscious U.S. customers shipped fewer parcels in the second quarter.

Thomson Financial/First Call were forecasting earnings of 54 cents per share.

Revenue during the period rose 4 percent from a year earlier to $7.6 billion.

Salt Lake City to lobby for AeroMexico service

SALT LAKE CITY - Salt Lake City Mayor Rocky Anderson and airport officials will travel to Mexico City Aug. 6 to try to lure AeroMexico to begin direct daily flights between the two capital cities.

That's relevant to Twin Falls travelers, as Salt Lake City is Joslin Field's only direct destination these days.

If successful, the meeting with Mexico's second-largest air carrier will culminate a nearly five-year effort by Salt Lake City officials to secure a nonstop international air service to Mexico.

"It is hard to say right now whether we're getting closer (to that goal) or not," said Barbara Cannon, spokeswoman for the Salt Lake City International Airport.

Anderson, airport director Tim Campbell and Buzz Hunt, the airport's director of marketing, were scheduled to meet with AeroMexico executives in early June before a brief strike by the airline's flight attendants delayed the visit.

Currently, the only regularly scheduled direct international flights from Salt Lake City are to Calgary and Vancouver, Canada. However, charter flights routinely shuttle vacationers to Mexican beach resorts.

The Utah company that arranges most of those charter flights, Morris Murdoch Travel, hopes to see its passenger traffic into Mexico convinced AeroMexico that at least two flights a week between Salt Lake City and Mexico City and Salt Lake City and Hermosillo in northern Mexico would be profitable.

Retail businesses set up shop on eBay site

The Washington Post

The new seller on eBay was off to a good start. Twenty-nine people went for the sets of girls' polyester pajamas before the high bidders grabbed them for $7 - less than half the retail price. Another happy outcome on the Internet's largest auction site.

But this time, the seller wasn't one of the tens of millions of individuals and small dealers who have made eBay the only profitable large company to emerge from the dot-com era. It was J.C. Penney Co. A few weeks ago, the retailer with a couple of Magic Valley stores began auctioning off its 2001 spring clothes at a Web site better known for inventory like Beanie Babies and Bionic Woman lunch boxes.

Big business is moving into eBay, signaling that the next stage of electronic commerce has begun.

As hundreds of Web stores have disappeared, manufacturers such as Xerox Corp., Sun Microsystems Inc. and International Business Machines Corp. have set up shop on eBay. Now retailers are wading in, though not all as publicly as J.C. Penney. For every large company selling under its real name, a subsidiary like Bionic Babe and Camera as "Itzauctions," others are running tests behind the scenes, scouting out how eBay could fit into their overall business strategies.

Designers, dresses, handbags, Bloomington's, Hanes socks, factory-sealed Bose speakers, diamond-studded Piaget watches and never-worn Ferragamo shoes are a few of the items offered daily for auction or fixed prices.

"A lot of manufacturers are doing it incognito or through third parties," said Jordan Gymboree, a nonstop eBay seller. "We're still in the early stages on eBay. We don't have any comment beyond that," said Jordan Goldstein, Gymboree's president.

Stocks advance early, fall back late

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks advanced in a difficult session Thursday that saw the major indexes rise on growing optimism about the economy and then fall back on a report that muddled hopes for a turnaround during 2001. A profit warning from Microsoft after the market closed positioned Wall Street for another erratic session on Friday. Investors were cheered early Thursday by an upbeat forecast from Dell Computer and a report by the Conference Board, a New York-based industry group, that pointed to an economic rebound. But the market's gains faded during the afternoon when the Federal Reserve's chief economist said business remains quite weak. "The market said, 'Oh, geez, we are not really recovering,'" after the Philadelphia Fed released its report on the state of manufacturing and trading at WR Hambrecht. "That's what did it." In the end, the Dow Jones Industrial average managed to rise 40.17 to 10,610.00, but was well off an earlier 109-point gain. Wall Street's broader indicators closed higher but also gave up some of their early advance. The Nasdaq composite index rose 30.42 to 2,046.59, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index ended 7.31 to 1,215.02.

Early on, the market was heartened by the Conference Board's announcement that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators, a forecasting gauge, rose 0.3 percent last month, ahead of analysts' estimates of a 0.2 percent increase. It was the third straight rise in the indicators.

Among Thursday's gainers was Dell, up $1.18 at $28.38 after the company said demand is improving and that it is standing by second-quarter earnings estimates of 16 cents a share. Chip maker Broadcom rose $3.40 to $42.40 after saying it expects business to stabilize in the second half.

The news from Dell and Broadcom provided a respite from the more than 800 profit warnings that have hit Wall Street during the past six weeks.

But until more companies can say business is picking up, analysts say the market remains vulnerable and that choppy trading will continue. So far, many companies have either issued profit warnings or at least said they can't make predictions about the future because business is so uncertain.

Microsoft, which rose $2 to $27.57 during regular trading, issued a profit warning for the current quarter and fell $3.37 in the extended-hours session.

Leading indicators rise for third consecutive month

NEW YORK (AP) — A key forecasting gauge of U.S. economic activity rose for the third consecutive month, bringing cautious optimism Thursday that the economy may be readying for a rebound.

The U.S. does appear well for the economy early next year," said Mark Zandi, chief economist of Economy.com. "Indicators are growing that the economic downturn is near bottom."

The New York-based Conference Board, a nonprofit research and business group with more than 2,700 corporate and other members worldwide, said its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose 0.3 percent to 109.6 last month after rising 0.5 percent to 105.3 in May.

Analysts were expecting a 0.2 percent increase. "The recovery in the leading indicators is predicted that the economy is poised for growth by late summer," said Conference Board economist Ken Goldstein.

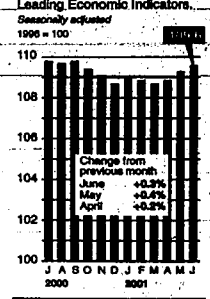

"There appears to be enough economic demand to end the slide in industrial production, though no strong rebound appears in sight."

The index also suggested that the service economy has yet to show signs of weakening. Goldstein said his prediction that continued growth in that sector and some recovery in manufacturing would generate some job, income and gross domestic product growth later this year.

News was not as good for Sun Microsystems Inc., which lost $88 million in the fourth quarter as its customers continued to cancel or delay purchases of high-power computer workstations and network servers.

The Palo Alto, Calif.-based company lost 3 cents per share during the three months ended July 3, compared with a profit of $72 million, or 21 cents per share, over the same time last year.

"In light of the current economic environment in the U.S. and worldwide, the fact that Microsoft has been able to grow revenue as well as operating income is viewed as quite positive," said John Connors, Microsoft chief financial officer.

News was not as good for Sun Microsystems Inc., which lost $88 million in the fourth quarter as its customers continued to cancel or delay purchases of high-power computer workstations and network servers.

eBay

Continued from D6 spokeswoman. "In fact, analysts envisioned most Internet shopping taking place at stand-alone Web sites with names such as Pets.com, Toys.com, Garden.com—all now gone. Manufacturers and retailers also poured hundreds of millions of dollars into their own Web sites in the 1990s, but many are finding it hard to attract large numbers of shoppers.

EBay's community of users, meanwhile, has grown to more than 30 million and has been adding more than 2 million a month. Some 6 million items are offered for sale there on any day, up from 1.6 million in early 1999. About $2 billion in goods changed hands in the last quarter, and eBay collected commissions of 1.25 percent to 5 percent on each transaction.

In addition, eBay's used-car business is growing quickly, along with electronics, clothing and sales of real estate such as timeshare condominiums and undeveloped land. Of course, commerce on eBay remains just a fraction of what is sold in, say, Wal-Mart stores, and some analysts wonder if eBay could lose its focus by expanding quickly into so many new areas. But the Web site's growth has many observers wondering where its natural limit might be.

"eBay is moving to the center of the e-commerce world," said Derek Brown, an analyst with WR Hambrecht & Co. "There are very few limitations to what can be bought or sold across eBay. This is only now starting to come to people's attention."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"People who have no weaknesses are the only ones who take advantage of them."
— Anatole France

In a tight defensive spot, many resort to the vintage maxim "lead through strength; lead up to weakness." By concentrating on the dummy's strength in presents few problems. Identifying true weakness may be another matter. East wins his spade (ace) and recognizes the futility of trying to cash his ace. Instead, he marks time by cashing his diamond king. When both South and West follow low, what next?

If East leads up to apparent weakness, he will switch to clubs. South wins, West discourages with his deuce, and South concedes another diamond. East wins again, but this time he trump, attacking South's real weakness. Unfortunately, it's too late. South wins, ruffs his diamond loser in dummy, and claims 10 tricks.

It wasn't fatal for East to cash the diamond king at trick two. However, he should have made the winning bid at trick three. Instead of leading clubs, he should have led a trump. When South wins and leads another diamond, East counters with another trump. This eliminates South's diamond ruff, and South cannot win 10 tricks.

What clue points to the winning defense? If South has a natural club loser, where can it go? Certainly there are no winners in dummy to provide a discard. By elimination, the real danger lies in a diamond ruff, and thoughtful analysis will lead to the winning defense.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. One no-trump may be a playable spot, but bidding two diamonds opens the door to a possibly safer contract in diamonds, hearts or spades.
