Analysts: No recession

Economy still struggles, but consensus grows that the worst is over

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy endured its weakest growth rate in eight years in the spring as American companies cut back on investment spending by the biggest amount in two decades. Yet, many analysts said they believe country has likely avoided a recession.

Resilient consumers kept the economy afloat, although just barely, as the gross domestic product — the country's total out-

Stocks and services — eked out a 0.7 percent growth rate in the April-June quarter.

Looking for glimmers of hope in the midst of a slowdown that began last summer, many analysts said the country has now passed the maximum danger point for a recession. They forecast steady improvement for the rest of this year.

"I think we have seen the bottom for this economic cycle," said Sung W. Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis. "Consumers have prevented the economy from sliding off a cliff and now they will be getting some help."

Sohn and other analysts pointed to falling interest rates, lower energy prices and the $40 billion in tax rebate checks taxpayers have started to receive as positive developments.

"While we're still skating on the edge of a recession, I think the outlook for the economy is now quite encouraging," said Bill Cheney — at John Hancock Financial Services in Boston. The current economic expansion is now in a record 11th year.

Many analysts said they looked for growth to rebound to around 2 percent in the current quarter and 3.5 percent in the fourth quarter. They predicted the Federal Reserve would cut rates for a seventh time at its Aug. 21 meeting.

Mom says 'wash your hands'

Jerome fair display gives a lesson in the stubbornness of dirt

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

JEROME — Mothers who constantly tell youngsters to wash their hands enjoyed reinforcement Friday at the Jerome County Fair.

Germ City made a one-day appearance at the fair, which wraps up this weekend.

University of Idaho Cooperative Extension educators used glitter lotion and black light to teach adequate hand-washing techniques. A quick rinse won't do it.

"It took 8-year-old Neil Jackson three tries to scrub off all the glitter."

"It was amazing," he said.

The Germ City glitter was visible only by black light — an effect that illustrated the presence of germs lurking on the skin but unseen by the naked eye.

It took Jaime Palmer, 15, and Kimberly Harrison, 11, two scrubs before they were glitter free.

Livestock regs head for legal review

Then comes chance for public comment

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners Friday turned controversial livestock operation regulations over to the county prosecutor's office for a final legal once-over before opening the measure to public comment late next month.

Built on state laws approved this winter and state agency rules being ironed out this summer, the 25-page county ordinance outlines a number of regulations to help mitigate effects the dynamic dairy industry has on its neighbors and the environment.

Although dubbed a "livestock ordinance," the measure is a direct result of the ongoing and at times heated debate over the dairy industry's place and responsibility in the community.

Dairy industry representatives say the proposal is too strong — especially provisions putting restrictions on existing dairies. "We expected restrictions on new dairies, but they're hounding the guy that's already there. That's not right," said Louis Eilers, executive director of the Idaho Dairymen's Association.

But at least one member of the ordinance committee, Buhl resident Jim DeKleinhaus, questions whether the proposal is strong enough.

The ordinance was written over seven months by a citizens' committee that at times was at odds over fundamental issues. Commissioners hope to have

House votes to block Bush's look at Clinton's tougher arsenic rules

Idaho lawmakers back move to ease standards

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — In another rebuff of Bush administration environmental actions, the House voted Friday to require the Environmental Protection Agency to reduce by 80 percent the allowable level of arsenic in drinking water.

The provision, which passed 218-189, would halt an EPA reassessment of a new tougher arsenic standard

Rep. Butch Otter

Rep. Mike Simpson

New rules could be pricey for rural residents. The Environmental Protection Agency is considering tougher standards for arsenic in drinking water. The new standards would require the EPA to reduce the allowable level of arsenic in drinking water by 80 percent. The provision would halt an EPA reassessment of a new tougher arsenic standard approved during the waning days of the Clinton administration. Idaho Reps. Mike Simpson and Butch Otter sided with the minority to loosen the standards. "Americans may disagree on a lot of things, but drinking arsenic isn't one of them," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., chief sponsor of the amendment. "When you turn on the kitchen sink, you ought to be able to drink what comes out, without worrying about being poisoned." The proposal, offered as an amendment to the Veterans Affairs, HUD, and EPA funding bill, would lower the maximum acceptable level of arsenic in drinking water from 50 parts per billion to 10 parts per billion. The Senate is expected to Aircraft firefighting effort even more difficult by dishing up 40 mph winds and lightning but no rain.

The neighborhood, nearly hidden in a dense, bone-dry forest, can be reached only on winding, steep and narrow roads, limiting the number of fire engines which can stand watch and spray water or foam, and the ability of fire vehicles to turn and flee.

Mandatory evacuations were ordered for two more subdivisions comprising 30 homes in Woodland Hills and Deep Power, but most residents had already left.

John Sherman, a wine broker, who fled Wednesday from his home in Woodland Hills, remained upbeat. "You gotta laugh to keep from crying, and I'd rather laugh," he said. "I think we're all a little nervous."

Aircraft dropped retardant not only on the flames but next to the houses as a pre-emptive strike.

Nine hundred firefighters were on the scene.

"We're fighting this thing hot and heavy, about as hot and as heavy as you can do," fire spokesman Bobby Kitchens said.

The situation was critical, with the wildfire at its closest point to the houses - 200 feet - and forecasts of higher winds and hotter temperatures throughout today.

A dizzying array of aircraft circled and disappeared at times into a towering plume of smoke that loomed ominously over the Jackson Hole valley.

Extension educator Sandra McCurdy said many people say they wash their hands but don't act in actual practice.

"It really is probably the most important thing people can do to prevent colds and flu," she said.

A quick wave of the hands under the faucet doesn't count. Adequate sanitation requires 20 seconds of a wet scrubber, McCurdy said. Drying hands is important, too. Wet hands make it easy to pick up bacteria.

Besides washing hands after using the restroom and when handling food, washing after contact with farm animals is important.

Twin Falls County Fair last year installed a hand wash station near the petting zoo.

Legal corrections completed by early next week and allow for two weeks of public examination and comment before final approval of the measure.

Aside from addition of enforcement measures, the committee recommendations were changed very little.

Many of the proposal's points, such as lagoon and waste systems requiring engineer-approved designs, mirror county laws passed by the Legislature this winter.

The county proposal also relies heavily on state requirements and resources - a siting support team made up of representatives from relevant state regulatory agencies, for example.

However, some provisions, such as lighting restrictions, are either original to the county ordinance or were rejected by lawmakers as too restrictive on the state's agriculture industry.

County commissioners have been reviewing the ordinance, with help from county Planning and Zoning Administrator Bill Crafton.

Much like the Legislature's new laws, the county measure is a product of at least some compromise between the activists and residents seeking to rein in the dairy industry's growth and the industry itself - a powerful economic and political force.

An early draft of the proposal was deemed too restrictive by some members siding with industry officials who said the ordinance was overbearing. Some suggested changes, leading county officials to call the measure a compromise.

"We tried to incorporate some of the things both parties wanted in the ordinance," Crafton said recently. "I think the aim of the commissioners was to try to be as reasonable as possible. I think neither side got everything they wanted, but that's part of the art of compromise. But I do think the commissioners tried to compromise as much as possible while trying to protect the best interests of the industry and the citizens of the county."

The new ordinance, if approved, will take the place of the county's 3-year-old ordinance. But everyone agrees the new ordinance is more restrictive than the old.

Since work began on the ordinance, county officials have imposed several moratoriums on new dairies or dairy expansions. The most recent moratorium was imposed in June. That moratorium will last for four months, until Oct. 2, or until the new ordinance is adopted.

The proposed dairy ordinance

If final approval is given by county commissioners, the ordinance now being considered. The following are some of the major provisions of the ordinance now being considered. Note: One dairy cow equals between one and 1.5 animal units.

Zoning

- CAFOs allowed only in areas zoned for agriculture.
- The new ordinance creates separate zones for operations under 2,500 animal units and those over 2,500.
- Existing operations in zones now prohibiting CAFOs are not eligible for expansion.
- Any existing animal loading operation not regulated with the county has 90 days from the approval of the provision to register.

CAFO size

- New or expanding CAFOs under 1,000 animal units must gain the approval of county planning and zoning officials, as well as a state site advisory team. A public hearing could be required for approval of the operation, at the discretion of planning and zoning officials. Planning and zoning decisions, however, can be appealed to the county commissioners.
- All CAFOs are larger than 1,000 animal units are required to undergo a public hearing process, as outlined in county ordinances.
- Existing operations wanting to expand beyond 2,500 animal units must go through a public hearing.
- All expansion must be done in various increments, depending on how large the operation was originally.

Siting permit requirements

- Proof of a valid water right appropriate for the proposed operation - including a letter from the Idaho Department of Water Resources about the water right.
- Detailed information on the operation's logistics, surrounding areas and the resources it could affect.
- Written description of the waste treatment system.
- Letters from local canal companies or water districts, the Idaho Department of Water Resources or the state of Idaho, and the local high-water districts about the proposed expansion's effects.

- Nutrient management, pest abatement, and odor abatement plans.
- Necessary information for the state's site advisory team.
- Monthly prevailing winds information for at least one year.

Lighting

- All lighting used at new or expanding CAFOs must be fully shielded to keep light from shining outside to keep neighbors' boundaries.
- A detailed lighting plan for the operation must be submitted showing location of light fixtures and a description of their fixtures.

Waste management

- All CAFOs over 1,000 animal units using a liquid waste system must have a waste and odor management system designed by an Idaho-registered professional engineer.
- Lagoons and storm runoff containment must meet state and federal standards for leakage and construction.
- Operators must have signed contracts with an entities using the CAFO's waste for field application.
- Operators must submit annual reports about the number of animals on site.

Setbacks

- Lagoons or waste treatment systems must be at least 1,320 feet from the nearest residence not belonging to the operator; no residence not belonging to the operator can be built within 1,320 feet of the operator's nearest lagoon or waste treatment system.
- All waste treatment systems, storm runoff containment and corals must be 300 feet inside the property line of the operation.
- Waste systems, storm runoff containment and corals must also be 300 feet from a domestic well and 1,000 feet from a public water supply.
- Flood products storage areas and "corals" must be 300 feet from residences not owned by the operator; residences not owned by the operator cannot be constructed within 300 feet of an operator's feed product storage areas and corals.
- New CAFOs must be at least one mile from a city's area of impact, any city limits, any residential zones, outdoor recreation zones, or existing platted subdivisions; non residential developments are not allowed within one mile of existing CAFOs.
- New CAFOs can be built within one mile of the Snake River Canyon; and all new operations must be 1,320 feet from Cedar Drop, Salmon Falls Creek, Rock Creek, Deep Creek and McMullen Creek.
- No new CAFO can be constructed within one mile of an existing CAFO, unless they're constructed to share waste systems.
- The state will conduct setbacks for special circumstances, such as type of waste system and the operator's violation.

Enforcement

- Violation of the ordinance can result in a civil penalty for every violation violation until the violation is corrected.
- Each violation can be considered if not corrected within 30 days or 300 fine.
- If the violation threatens public health or general welfare, the county commission may take any actions it deems necessary for the amendment and only six Democrats voted against.
- Public opinion polls show that Bush is vulnerable on environmental issues and members of Congress in districts considered politically more conservative are only six Democrats voted against.

Arsenic

Arsenic levels exceeding 10 parts per billion are found in 3,000 water systems serving 13 million people, most of them in the West states, according to the EPA.

EPA administrator Christie Whitman was roundly criticized by environmentalists and congressional Democrats in March when she delayed implementation of the stricter arsenic standard so the agency could study anew where to set the level.

The agency has ordered an update of the arsenic National Academy of Sciences to update its findings. The results of both studies are due in early fall.

Nose spray flu vaccine? Not yet

On Friday, a Food and Drug Administration advisory committee voted not to approve FluMist, a flu vaccine that is sprayed into the nostrils. Scientists say it is a protect against the flu but safety questions need to be answered before it is made available to the public. Here's how it compares to a conventional flu shot.

Advisers cite safety concerns over flu spray

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) - A long-awaited, painless flu vaccine suffered a setback Friday as government scientists declared there are too many safety questions for Aviron Inc.'s nasal vaccine to be sold yet.

Advisers to the Food and Drug Administration said FluMist clearly can protect against the flu and probably one day will prove safe enough for certain Americans to use. But unlike today's flu shots, FluMist is made with live influenza virus, so the nation needs more proof that squirling live virus into people's noses - especially the toddlers who would be prime targets - is safe, panelists concluded after two days of debate.

Concerns include how well FluMist combines with other vaccines that toddlers receive, and whether there might be a rare risk of pneumonia or asthma among certain children.

"The FDA is not bound by its advisers' recommendations but typically follows them.

Taxpayers flood IRS with questions on tax refund

WASHINGTON (AP) - After widespread publicity and mailing of official notices, millions of taxpayers are calling the IRS with questions about the tax refund checks going out this summer.

Internal Revenue Service officials say they've received more than 8.6 million phone calls since July 16, when taxpayers began receiving the 112 million IRS notices describing details of the checks, such as when they would arrive and why some people wouldn't be getting one.

That kind of call volume usually only occurs during the height of spring tax filing season, said IRS spokesman Terry Lemons.

About 92 million checks of up to $300 for single taxpayers, $500 for heads of households and $600 for married couples filing jointly are being sent weekly through Sept. 30 as the first installment of the 10-year, $1.35 trillion tax cut signed into law in June by President Bush.

The checks represent this year's payment for the new 10 percent income tax bracket, which was made retroactive to Jan. 1.

The Treasury Department on Friday mailed out a batch of 8.1 million checks totaling $3.4 billion to taxpayers whose Social Security numbers end in 10 through 19.

Some questions and answers from the IRS:

Q: Who doesn't qualify for a check this year?

A: People who paid no income taxes in 2000 are not eligible for the 1040 form, if line 51 shows a zero, no tax was paid. Form 1040A filers should look at line 33 and for form 1040EZ filers, see line 10.

In addition, anyone who could be claimed as a dependent on another person's tax form in 2000 will not get a check. This information is on box 6a on forms 1040 and 1040A; on the 1040EZ form, look for a blank in box 6a or a "yes" check on line 5.

Q: What about those who paid taxes and were not dependents but still get no check?

A: Many people may have paid taxes for Social Security and Medicare or self-employment tax, but only income taxes count. Millions of taxpayers also had income taxes deducted from their paychecks during 2000, but got it all back through a refund because of exemptions, deductions and credits that reduced the tax ultimately to zero.

Q: Did some people make too little money to get a check for the full amount?

A: It's important to distinguish between taxable income and gross income. To qualify for the maximum, a single person had to have $6,000 in taxable income, a married couple $12,000. The IRS says a couple with two children would need gross income of at least $30,550 to have enough taxable income for a full $600 check.

Q: Besides back taxes owed, what else can reduce the check amount?

A: Checks can be reduced, even to zero, if a taxpayer owes debts such as certain child support obligations or student loans.

Q: What about people who moved since filing their tax returns?

A: Filing a change-of-address form with the U.S. Postal Service will ensure that the checks reach the new address.

Q: What about taxpayers who never got an IRS notice about their checks?

A: Processing of the returns filed in April takes the IRS until mid-July every year. That first batch of notices didn't include some of those final returns, but IRS officials insist they will send notices to every taxpayer before any check arrives.

WASHINGTON (AP) - American employees holding "non-organic" positions at the U.S. Embassy in Macedonia, along with their dependents, have been ordered to leave the country, the State Department announced Friday.

U.S. citizens in the area also were encouraged to leave because of the ongoing tension between ethnic Albanians and the Slav-dominated government.

The State Department would not say how many Americans had left.

The United States recently increased security at the embassy by sending in Marines to protect the building against further attacks prompted by anti-American sentiment.

Earlier this week, mobs of Macedonian protesters, angered by reports that Western mediators had sided with ethnic Albanian rebels, stoned the U.S. Embassy. Demonstrators also damaged the entrances of the British and German embassies. The State Department also reported that armed gunman have set up checkpoints and claimed control of some villages

U.S. orders workers out of Macedonia

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration threatened Friday to sit out a United Nations gathering on bringing up slavery reparations and a resolution equating Zionism with racism. The stance drew support from U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, European nations and Canada.

President Bush believes those subjects would detract from the main purpose of the gathering, said White House spokesman Ari Fleischer.

"How can you say this is a conference to combat racism if it borders on anti-Semitism?" Fleischer asked. The conference is planned for late August in Durban, South Africa.

The U.S. Marine Corps Fleet Anti-Terrorist Support Team arrived Wednesday night in the Macedonian capital of Skopje "to augment security there," State Department spokesman Phillip Reeker said Thursday. He said the measure was "a fairly standard step."

In Tetovo, Macedonia, meanwhile, western envoys met with Macedonian officials and ethnic Albanian representatives in separate talks ahead of a new round of high-level peace negotiations. The two feuding groups had agreed to resume talks in the embattled northwestern city of Tetovo. But today's talks were moved to the southern city of Ohrid to avoid potentially hostile crowds, a Western diplomat said.

Fighting raged early this week on the outskirts of Tetovo, and four area villages were captured by ethnic Albanian rebels.

The rebels have pulled back to lines they held at the start of a cease-fire July 5, but tensions remain high in and around Tetovo, a city of 60,000 where ethnic Albanians constitute a majority.

Bush might sit out U.N. meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration threatened Friday to sit out a United Nations gathering on bringing up slavery reparations and a resolution equating Zionism with racism. The stance drew support from U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, European nations and Canada.

Bush avoids showdown with environmentalists

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration stepped back from a showdown with Congress, agreeing to give a Senate committee access to documents regarding environmental policy after Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., threatened to subpoena the information.

The dust-up with Lieberman was the latest effort by Congress and its entities to pry information from a Bush administration eager to protect the confidentiality of its decision-making. Lieberman, chairman of the Government Affairs Committee, said Friday the agreement avoided "a constitutional and legal confrontation at least for the time being."

Other disputes are already underway. The General

Accounting Office sent a first-of-its-kind "demand letter" to Vice President Cheney, with an implicit threat of legal action. Members of Congress also have demanded - and the White House has resisted - documents relating to a range of Bush administration actions: energy policy, personnel appointments, the 2000 census, workplace bias regulations, charges of White House vandalism and talks with corporate interests.

The standoff between the White House and Congress has elements in common with perennial balance-of-power disputes dating from George Washington's administration. The executive branch worries that if it is forced to govern in a fishbowl, sides won't be able to give honest, confidential advice to the president.

High court reverses ruling

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — Convicts have no right to contest reports on their performance in the state's retained jurisdiction program before a judge decides whether they deserve prison or probation, the Idaho Supreme Court said.

The high court, in two 4-1 opinions issued Friday, upheld district judges in Twin Falls and Kootenai counties and reversed an Idaho Court of Appeals ruling that convicts' rights to due process of law were violated by a 1995 change in the state's so-called rider program.

The appellate court said the change unconstitutionally denied convicts a chance to formally rebut Department of Correction sentencing recommendations after their six-month terms at the North Idaho Correctional Institution in Cottonwood.

But the Supreme Court, in opinions written by Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout, said the decision to grant probation or send a convict to prison is solely up to the district judge who retained jurisdiction over the case.

"Since a judge need not follow the recommendation of the NICI and the ultimate decision is discretionary, the chance of probation based upon an NICI recommendation is at most a mere possibility or a 'coveted goal,'" Trout wrote.

"Furthermore, the interest of the state and the prisoner in the fairness and accuracy of the report is not a constitutionally protected liberty interest," she wrote. "It is the chance for freedom and not the accuracy or fairness of the report that is relevant in determining whether a liberty interest exists."

The rider program allows judges to impose a prison sentence and then retain jurisdiction for 180 days to determine whether probation would be justified based on the felon's performance in a boot camp-style environment. The state is relied on the program to ease its escalating prison population.

Friday's rulings on state challenges to Court of Appeals decisions were on the Twin Falls County case of John Cossello and the Kootenai County case of Jay Statton.

Winds cause Nevada wildfire to grow to 6,000 acres

The Times-News

WELLS, Nev. — Erratic winds and rough, inaccessible terrain have caused a wildfire burning west of Loomis Mountain to double in size, the Bureau of Land Management said Friday.

A Type 2 incident management team was arriving to help the 240 firefighters on the scene in battling the 6,000-acre Tabor Creek fire about 20 miles north of Wells, said fire information officer Melissa Peterson.

"The winds are picking up, and the fire weather forecaster says to expect dry lightning and red-flag conditions this weekend," Peterson said. "That's definitely bad news for us."

Other fires

WELLS BLM firefighters were busy with the big Tabor Creek fire in Nevada Friday, other BLM crews were responding to a couple of smaller blazes in the Magic Valley.

• One was a 150-acre fire southwest of Burli started by lightning at 1:30 p.m. Working on the fire in brush and grass were smoke jumpers and six engine crews. There was no estimate of containment.

• Another was a 200-acre fire 23 miles northwest of Paul. It was reported Thursday at 4 p.m. and contained at midnight. DNR-TRM controlled Friday afternoon. Seven engines battled the human-caused fire.

Minidoka County schools focus on reading

By Ruth Straeter
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka County school administrators don't want to be average — at least not where reading is concerned.

"While reading competency in Minidoka County is near the national average, there's not good if it means only 50 percent of students are reading at grade level when they leave third grade."

"It's here to tell you that's way below what's acceptable," said Nick Hallert, superintendent of Minidoka County schools.

The district has realized it needs to make reading a top priority, Hallert said. "But being one of the poorest districts in the state will make that read a hard one, he said."

It means there's no room for twinking — only major overhaul. The district recently jumped aboard a national movement that began in Kennewick, Wash.

The goal of that movement is to have 90 percent of students reading at or above grade level by the end of third grade.

"But doing so has meant curriculum cuts that haven't been easy."

And the district may be making more. Because first through third

Police arrest suspect in Big Smoke robbery

TWIN FALLS — Police arrested a 25-year-old Burley man Friday afternoon in connection with the armed robbery of the Big Smoke tobacco shop Thursday night.

Christopher Sean Jordan is being held in the Twin Falls County Criminal Justice Center in lieu of a $100,000 bond on one count of robbery, said a news release from the Twin Falls Police Department.

With the assistance of the Cassia County Sheriff's Office, Twin Falls police detectives arrested Jordan in Burley at about 3 p.m. Friday, the release said.

A 17-year-old Twin Falls man also has been arrested in connection with the robbery and is in custody, the release said.

Earlier Friday, police had sought the public's help in their search for the man suspected of holding up the tobacco shop at 551 Blue Lakes Blvd. late Thursday.

Witnesses said the man walked into the shop at about 8 p.m., brandished a weapon and demanded money, according to a police report. He then left with an undisclosed amount of money and got into a pickup driven by another person.

The man was described as 6-foot-1 to 6-foot-3 inches tall, with light brown hair. The truck was described as an older green Chevrolet or GM, possibly a 1960s model.

Police remain quiet about Jerome drug bust

JEROME — The Jerome Police Department Friday refused to release any information about a recent drug bust in Jerome, saying an article in Jerome's local weekly newspaper had prompted the silence.

An article in Thursday's edition of the North Side News states that Jerome police recently arrested a man suspected of reported burglaries at his Jerome home.

A suspect in the burglaries told police he had gone into the house looking for marijuana, so police got a warrant to search the house, according to the article. Police found marijuana in the man's house, seized several firearms from the home and arrested the man, according to the article.

During a phone call to The Times-News late Friday, Jerome police Sgt. Patty Ward said the North Side News article contained several errors, so Jerome Police Chief Bill Reid had decided not to release any more information about the case. Ward did not specify what the errors in the article were.

Cowboy musician to perform in Elko

ELKO, Nev. — Glenn Ohrlin, a Cowboy Poetry Gathering favorite, will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Western Folklore Center, 501 Railroad St., Elko. WFC Artistic Director Meg Glaser said Ohrlin has appeared at several gatherings and was selected as a "member's choice" performer for the 2002 event. He was honored with a National Heritage Fellowship award in 1992, the highest national honor awarded to a folk artist, Glaser said.

A former professional bronc rider, Ohrlin resides in the Ozark Hills of Arkansas and has performed on tour for the past 15 years. Glaser said "Ohrlin is known for his 'dry humor and eclectic musical repertoire.'"

Prior to Ohrlin's performance in the Elko Three Bar Theater, the Pioneer bar will be open for cold beverages.

Tickets may be purchased at the door and are $8 for WFC members and seniors and $11 for general admission. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Life goes on as wildfire rages

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Their coach broke down, but Paul and Brenda Lankford of Weaverville, N.C., were in high spirits Friday as their tour group visited this trendy resort town just south of Grand Teton National Park.

"It's just beautiful," Mrs. Lankford said of the area, sitting outside Mountain High Pizza in a light morning breeze, as smoke from a nearby wildfire billowed in the distance. "We're not stressed."

Life here continued as usual Friday, with tourists window-shopping, taking stagecoach rides and renting bicycles as firefighters battled a wildfire several miles away.

But in nearby Wilson, anxious homeowners gathered to get the latest on the fire's progress and chat with neighbors in front of Hungry Jack's General Store.

"We won't feel secure until it's out," said Sally Berman, whose home was not immediately in the blaze's path.

The 3,150-acre fire began Sunday in the Bridger-Teton National Forest southwest of Jackson.

It has maintained a steady march up and down ridges and valleys to the north-northeast, edging toward exclusive housing subdivisions in the forest outside the resort area.

By Friday, the fire was about 5 miles southwest of Jackson, but it posed no threat to the town, fire information officer Tom Ninnemann said. Between the fire and Jackson are the wide Snake River and flat grassland that makes the possibility of the fire spreading to town close to zero, he said.

Still, some business owners have been getting calls from travelers wondering whether it's safe to proceed with vacation plans in and around the tourist town.

"There have been no cancellations, but there have been concerns that the town of Jackson is on fire," said Heather Lindell, who works at Jackson Hole Whitewater.

Bruce James, with Snake River Fishing Trips, was being asked questions, too.

"It doesn't affect us," he said, noting that business has been steady. "It's not hard to do your day-to-day activities."

Getting out word that Jackson is safe has been a frustration not only for local residents but also fire officials, who have repeatedly said the town was out of harm's way, though smoke may be an issue.

"We have gotten calls mostly from people out of town who say they're hearing Jackson has been evacuated or things are being closed," Ninnemann said.

Officials rescind the call to continue Ruby Ridge case

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — Boundary County commissioners have rescinded their call for continuing the case against FBI sniper Lon Horiuchi for killing the wife of white separatist Randy Weaver during the 1992 standoff at Ruby Ridge.

"The issue that we want to see resolved is not that Mr. Horiuchi is tried," Commissioner Kevin Lederhos on Thursday. "It's the ultimate decision on whether a federal employee has immunity from state law."

A divided 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in June that Horiuchi's status as a federal officer did not automatically immunize him from state prosecution for the shooting death of Vicki Weaver.

A three-judge panel of the appellate court had earlier ruled that he was immune from state prosecution as a federal agent in the performance of his duties. In June's decision, the court said Horiuchi could be tried if he was found to have acted illegally in his official capacity.

But rather than press ahead with the case against Horiuchi, Boundary County Prosecutor Brett Benson decided to drop the state manslaughter charge.

Kemphorne will celebrate beginning of Capitol project

The Times-News

BOISE — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and members of the Idaho Capitol Commission will celebrate the beginning of a project to restore the Idaho State Capitol at a special ceremony set for 10 a.m. Monday on the east stairs of the Capitol.

The four-year project to preserve, restore and rehabilitate the Idaho State Capitol will be done in two phases. During the first phase, which begins Monday and is scheduled for completion by spring 2002, the original concrete stairs at the east and west entrances to the Capitol will be removed and replaced and the outside of the Capitol will be repaired and cleaned. The second phase will focus on the inside of the Statehouse. It begins in spring 2002 with completion scheduled for July 2005.

Kemphorne and commission members will kick off the restoration by starting the removal of the east stairs with swings of sledgehammers. The public is invited. For more information, visit the Idaho Capitol Commission website at www.idahostatecapitol.org.

Suspect refuses to waive extradition

VALE, Ore. (AP) — A womanizing itinerant refused to waive extradition on Friday for attempted murder and other charges in three states as investigators looked for evidence linking him with the disappearance or deaths of four women.

Michael John Braae, shackled and wearing black-and-white striped jail garb, appeared only briefly before Circuit Judge J. Burdette Pratt in Malheur County, letting Public Defender Mark Rader speak for him.

Rader also advised Braae not to answer any questions posed by investigators.

Pratt set Sept. 27 as the extradition hearing. Braae, 41, is wanted in Yakima, Wash., for shooting Marcella Morgan in the head and critically wounding her earlier rest of her life.

Braae is also wanted on felony charges for probation violations in both Washington and California and for shooting at law enforcement officers two weeks ago in his unsuccessful attempt to elude capture. He was finally pulled out of the Snake River on the Idaho-Oregon border as he tried to swim away from officers.

Braae remained in the Malheur County jail in lieu of $3.5 million bail. He has an Aug. 20 court appearance on three Oregon misdemeanors — attempted criminal mischief, interfering with a police animal and eluding officers during his attempt to avoid capture.

Authorities in Washington were blaming an out-of-date computer system and poor communications between Washington and California penal authorities for failing to adequately monitor the activities of Braae, known as Cowboy Mike because of his preference for western hats, and boots.

Although no charges have been filed, authorities said Braae was reportedly the last person to see four other women alive.

— Lori Jones, 44, of Lacey, Wash., who was killed July 1 shortly after she had been seen with Braae at a local bar.

— Susan Ault, 39, a waitress, who vanished from Rosburg in southwestern Washington after she was seen arguing with Braae on June 24.

Man tries to save dog from thermal pool

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A man was scalded trying to rescue his dog after it bolted from the family's motor home and jumped into a thermal pool, Yellowstone National Park officials said Friday.

Donald E. Hansen, 39, of Shoreline, Wash., was taken to University of Utah's burn center in Salt Lake City after Thursday's incident.

He was released Friday after being treated for first- and second-degree burns from his elbows down and first-degree burns to his knees, park officials said. The dog, a brown Labrador retriever named Mocha, ran after the family stopped the motor home and jumped into a thermal area near the Firehole River in the Lower Geyser Basin, about five miles from Old Faithful, officials said.

Hansen called for the dog, but it ignored him and jumped into the 192- to 200-degree unheated pool, officials said. Hansen knelt behind the pool and was able to grab the dog, but the hot water prevented him from pulling the dog out.

The dog was dead by the time

injuries sustained in an accident on Hwy. 30, east of Kimberly, Idaho. Kelly was born February 27, 1974, in Monterey, California. The son of Sharon L. Olson. He first moved to Idaho at the age of 4 with his mother and siblings. At a very young age, Kelly was determined to work in masonry, and make a career of it, as soon as he graduated from Curlew, Washington. Determined to fine tune his skills and ply his trade, he moved to North Carolina. He loved to travel and through this, he became a volunteer firefighter. His hobbies include horseback riding, roller blading, working out and also Renaissance role playing. He was a role model and strong influence in the life of his niece and nephew. Kelly is survived by his parents, Sharon L. Olson of Hansen, Robert S. Olson of Utah; two brothers, Rann B. Crysler and Stewart of Twin Falls, Idaho; Brian N. Olson of Utah; one sister, Lanore R. Rasmussen of Hansen, Idaho; grandmother, Kathleen Maguano of Hansen, Idaho; three nieces and nephews; and his beloved 35 lb. dog, Stubbs. Kelly was preceded in death by his great-grandmother, one niece and one nephew.

Memorial services for Kelly will be held Monday, July 30, 2001, at 4 p.m. at the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, Idaho with the Rev. Mike Seward officiating. Cremation will precede the services and no visitation is planned. All arrangements are under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Kelly was a beloved son, brother and grandson and will be dearly missed by all who knew and loved him.

Explosion rocks shopping center

BURLEN, Wash. (AP) - An exploding water heater shattered the fronts of three businesses in a shopping center and injured several people Friday as it rocketed into a Pizza Hut parking lot about a block away. Initial damage estimates were $750,000 to $1 million, said Bill Harm, King County assistant fire marshal.

The "pressure relief valve had been capped, and the tank was partially drained of water," Hudson said. "It built up steam pressure. It was a steam explosion." The thermostat on the water heater also may have malfunctioned, Harm said. Harm didn't know whether the building housing the busnesses would be repaired or demolished. "It will be a few days before the insurance company and the contractor make that assessment," he said. Plumbers had been at the building Thursday, but it was not clear if they worked on the water heater. Brocken said the explosion damaged a gas meter and caused a leak, but that the gas was not involved in the blast. The water heater, a cylinder about the size of an oil drum, rocketed through the building's roof, over a Taco Bell restaurant and into a Pizza Hut parking lot 460 feet away, Hudson said. It did not strike anyone.

Visitors peruse the botanical garden by the caboose, adjacent to the Burley Municipal Airport. The Oregon Trail Botanical Foundation, Inc. is holding a grand opening ribbon-cutting ceremony there at 10 a.m. today.

Minorities complain about racial profiling

SPOKANE (AP) - Members of minority groups have complained to Spokane's top law enforcement officers about racial profiling, including being stopped for dirty license plates and being followed by officers when they did nothing wrong. "I had a new Cadillac for five hours and was stopped by one speaker told Spokane County Sheriff Mark Sterk and Spokane Police Chief Roger Bradon at a Thursday evening meeting. About 150 people attended the meeting, hosted by the National Association for the Advancement for Colored People. Racial profiling is the practice of stopping and questioning motorists or even pedestrians based on their ethnicity. Tia Griffin, who is black, said she was frightened after police stopped her, released her, then chased her down a second time for a dirty license plate. She said officers twisted and sprained her wrists. Steph Nobles-Beans said the 10 black students she meets with at Whitworth College have all been pulled over unnecessarily by police.

Foreign students from Ghana were stopped while walking from Safeway to the Gonzaga University campus, she said. "You have 'driving while black' now we have 'walking while black,'" Nobles-Beans said. Bob Lloyd, former publisher of the African-American Voice newspaper, said he was stopped three times inappropriately. Once while taking his son to St. George's, a private school, he was pulled over. "They said they were looking for a bank robber that looked just like me," Lloyd said.

Garden ceremony to take place

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News correspondent BURELY - A caravan of women from Montana pulled off the interstate and headed toward Burley looking for antiques. Check out this beautiful garden, they were saying to each other as they pulled in at the Oregon Trail Botanical Garden next to the caboose near the Burley Municipal Airport. "We have to stop here," said Kim Lapp, as the group pulled up next to the garden. "This is gorgeous. It would make anybody stop," said B.J. Olson, who along with others in the group were headed for a teachers conference in Boise, but stopped to ooh and ah over the flowers. In the future, members of the foundation hope to have signs up at the garden which will lead tourists like Olson and Lapp to places like Monica's Antiques in Burley. Owner Monica Rasmussen is one of the volunteers who has worked on the garden by the caboose. "It's going to really help our community," she said. "It's a lot of effort by a lot of people for one goal." Seeing the group of Montana women stop to admire the gardens illustrated the goal Rasmussen and other members of the foundation had in mind. "When I first came to this end of the place, it was a pretty dingy place," said Craig Felt, one of the many volunteers who work a plot at the garden. "It's beautiful now."

started working with the group while he was working in a garden he developed next to The Book Plaza, the business he has owned in Burley for a number of years. Whipple organized the group of volunteers and met with the city of Burley about developing the garden plots. The land where the botanical garden is located is owned and maintained by the city. Several events were organized, such as spring and fall festivals in Burley, and money was raised for maintenance costs. The garden foundation applied for and was just recently recognized by the federal government as an official nonprofit organization, which allows the group to apply for federal grant money. The group plans to apply for money for projects such as walking and bike trails, and more gardens in places throughout Mini-Cassia, Whipple said. The foundation also hopes to eventually find a building for its headquarters. Beautifying the community to help attract visitors to the area is one of the group's main goals, he said. "With the farm economy so low, we need those tourist dollars," Whipple said.

Each plant in her plot is a gift somebody has given her: a rose bush for being a past president of Minico Sorptomist International; a hen and chicks plant from her grandmother; cactus plants from her mother and other plants given to her by her brother. While many volunteers have come together to produce the garden, most insist there is one binding factor - Dale Whipple, president of the Oregon Trail Botanical Garden Foundation. "Dale twisted my arm," said Dan Crane, vice president of the group. Crane laid the bricks for the walkways throughout the garden. Whipple has been gardening for many years. His ideas for

Reading

Continued from A4 grades are such critical years for reading skills, last week the School Board elected to replace the district's elementary school art education coordinator with a reading instructor. That decision was based on a recommendation by district principals, which was based on the recommendation of a separate committee. Penny Neibaur, the district's art coordinator criticized the decision Monday, calling the principals' recommendation "ludicrous." Board member George MacDonald also lambasted the district for its recommendation. The decision passed by a four-to-one vote. Other school board members said the art program is only being restructured. Hallett acknowledged that a sacrifice is being made, but that students will still get art in their diet.

teaching-skills, trained volunteer art moms and tried to develop the concept of an art museum that would take advantage of a 60-year-old 49-painting collection at Heyburn Elementary School. Neibaur's job description was recently dusted after the public said it did not think the district should be "in the art museum business," Hallett said. School principals took that into consideration in addition to the district's emphasis on reading, and subsequently made their recommendation, Hallett said. Art will still be part of the curriculum, as required by the 1999 fine art curriculum that establishes several benchmarks for students in K-6 regarding art aesthetics, history, criticism and production. The volunteer art moms will visit schools, although there will be no one to train new volunteers, Hallett said. The district will still have occasional in-service art training for teachers, but not as frequently as an art coordinator allows. But MacDonald said that in losing Neibaur, the district will lose a vital part of the art program. Nobody disagrees with the decision to discontinue reading, MacDonald said. But he questions whether the district is taking the right approach to meeting its goal. "It's been proven that children who partake in art do better through the entire curriculum," he said. "What we're finding across the nation is that art is becoming a 'fourth R,'" MacDonald said, referring to the "three Rs" - reading, writing and arithmetic. MacDonald also credits Neibaur's position with much of the art program's successes - successes that otherwise wouldn't have been possible. These successes include a grant that brought an artist-in-residence to Big Valley Elementary School, the creation of the volunteer art mom program, and a teaching seminar that was led by an out-of-state art professor. "A lot of things don't happen unless you have somebody that's working on the project day in and day out," MacDonald said. Neibaur could not be reached for comment this week on the board's decision. Other casualties Nancy Kuneau, the principal of Heyburn Elementary School, may also face heartbreak if the district opts to eliminate the swimming program for similar reasons. Kuneau - for whom the swimming program is near and dear - said she'll fight to keep at least a portion of the program. But if it must be cut, she said she would understand. Students currently receive 1 hour and 15 minutes of swimming a day for 10 days. Hallett said there's no denying the importance of activities such as swimming and art, but he wonders whether quantity is replacing quality. "If you try to do everything, you don't do everything well," Hallett said. The district has also sacrificed part of the K-3 science regimen. The district cut nearly 500,000 for science textbooks toward reading. That money is used for updating science textbooks every five years. Students will still have access to the school library's science resource books, Hallett said. High school and junior high school science teachers have both said that the reading skills acquired in those early years are more important than an introduction to science during that time, Hallett said. Such a decision won't affect a student's science ability in later years, Hallett said.

The prompt and heavy response, Cannady said, is what prevented the fire from spreading any further. Hundreds of occupants of homes and condos concentrated in the Warm Springs area where the fire began might well have suffered a worse outcome. Had winds shifted, flames away from the hill toward the densely developed area near the Mt. Baldi lifts, fire officials argue a major disaster could have developed with scores of dwellings consumed in flames. COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Puppies rescued from the McCuckin home after a five-day standoff with authorities and others born at the Kootenai Humane Society Animal Shelter were euthanized this week. They had health problems. "Most of the staff was in tears over losing those dogs," shelter manager John Davis said. "But there are tears of joy and tears of sadness every day over there." Shelter spokeswoman Barb Harrison said the 14 puppies were kept with their mothers in a room isolated from the main shelter population of strays and castoffs. But she said they were growing lethargic and showed signs of respiratory problems. After it became apparent they would not recover, they were euthanized on Tuesday. "We were fully expecting to adopt them out," she said. "We were hoping for that." The six McCuckin children, who staged the stand-off with authorities after their mother, JoAnn McCuckin, was arrested on child neglect charges, have been rendered to authorities on June 2. The stand-off between the children siced a pack of vicious dogs on sheriff's deputies, who had to place them in the custody of state welfare officials. Nine of the coyote-chow hybrid puppies were born at the McCuckins' home near Sagle and five later at the shelter.

What is changing

According to winter 2001 Idaho Reading Indicator results, 49 percent of Minidoka County third graders were reading at grade level. Half of the 90 percent reading goal program is getting parents to help their children with reading before they enter kindergarten. The district will still have occasional in-service art training for teachers, but not as frequently as an art coordinator allows. But MacDonald said that in losing Neibaur, the district will lose a vital part of the art program. Nobody disagrees with the decision to discontinue reading, MacDonald said. Fire

Now Ketchum and BLM and Forest Service investigators must decide whether to charge the operator of the lawn mower in an effort to recover all or some of the costs of fighting the blaze. Initial estimates peg costs at well over several hundred thousand dollars. For example, the large twin-engine Chinook helicopter costs the government $2,000 per hour when in service. Officials are delaying declaring the fire officially under control by 24 hours until Saturday at 6 p.m. Ground crews on the ridge have set up several water storage tanks, which can be replenished by small tanker helicopters that are on standby. Cannady said some concern has been expressed by Incident Commander, Dennis Pratt about a cold front with strong winds that reportedly will move through the Ketchum area today. The winds, Cannady said, could supply more oxygen to burning embers and cause a flare-up. The major concern of firefighters is the first draft of the fire was that flames sweeping through relatively thin growth of sage and grass would leap across the ridge and spread to the pine stands of pine and combustible undergrowth. But Cannady said firefighting resources were marshaled quickly - air tankers and helicopters flew in from several Idaho bases, fire engines from Ketchum, Sun Valley, the BLM and Forest Service arrived promptly, firefighters from Idaho and Utah were rushed to the scene.

The prompt and heavy response, Cannady said, is what prevented the fire from spreading any further. Court

Coasolo, of Kimberly, pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the delivery of methamphetamine and was sentenced to 4 to 8 years in prison by 5th District Judge Roger Burdick. The judge retained jurisdiction and placed Coasolo in the rider program at NICR. At the end of that program, NICR submitted a report on his fitness for rehabilitation, and after reading the report, Burdick denied Coasolo probation and ordered him to begin serving the term in the Kootenai County case, 1st District Judge Gary Haman denied Statton probation and ordered him to begin serving a two- to 10-year prison term for first-degree arson after receiving an evaluation of Statton's performance at the Cottonwood boot camp. Justice Gerald Schroeder dissented from the high court's majority decision. He argued that the 1995 law required that Department of Correction recommendations be considered additions to the convict's presentence report. "Anything that is in the presentence report" involves the defendant's right to be heard prior to final sentencing by the court, Schroeder wrote. "In the past that forum was at the correctional facility where those most concerned were located." The change in the law "removes that convenient and economical forum. It does not, however, eliminate the due process right of a defendant to be heard in a meaningful manner before final sentence is pronounced." Trout said the court's decision should not be interpreted as impugning the value of the rider program, or the importance of Department of Correction reports on convicts' chances of success or probation. "In the interest of fair judicial process, the district judge should also receive in writing any response the defendant may choose to make to the NICR recommendation," she wrote. "The district judge must then, if the judge feels it necessary, hold a hearing but it is not constitutionally necessary."

State park ranger Mike Murray points to a partial dinosaur print, the only remaining track of a three-point track way severely damaged by Boy Scouts at Red Fleet State Park near Vernal, Utah.

Park ranger shows disappointment after Boy Scout ruins dinosaur tracks

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Three Boy Scouts on a troop outing tossed a 190 million-year-old set of dinosaur tracks into a reservoir last week, prompting a park ranger to call on Scout leaders to do a better job of teaching environmental ethics.

Curt Sinclear, the park ranger who saw the boys vandalizing the rocks at Red Fleet State Park in eastern Utah, said Friday he was "angry, sad and disappointed that the Boy Scout's environmental message is getting lost."

"What are they teaching these kids?" said Sinclear, who was a Boy Scout as a youth. "To me this is a double blow, because we've lost something irreplaceable and these were Boy Scouts that should have been supervised."

Kay Godfrey, information officer for Great Salt Lake Council of the Boy Scouts of America, said the Scouts take responsibility for the incident and may review their policies to avoid vandalism in the future.

"This reflects a disregard for the principles that Scouting promotes," Godfrey said. "It ought to be a warning to our leaders to always be aware of their surroundings and conscious of the conduct of our youth." Sinclear said he witnessed last Thursday's destruction, seeing the splashes in the water caused by the two boys throwing the prehistoric rocks at floating buoys.

— Park ranger Curt Sinclear, after a Boy Scout reportedly destroyed dinosaur tracks

One of the 15-year-old boys, whose name is not being released, put his fingers into cracks in the dinosaur tracks and pried them apart. Two other boys threw the chunks, while a fourth boy stood nearby, according to Sinclear. More than 120,000 visitors every year marvel at the site near Vernal where about 300 dinosaur tracks are preserved in beds of sandstone.

The tracks are about a foot long and 8 inches wide, according to Jim Kirkland, the state's paleontologist. At least three tracks were destroyed.

Although there are other Dillophosaurus "track ways," or more than three tracks made by the same dinosaur, these were among the best, Kirkland said. The tracks, which appear to have three toes, some with claws extended, were caused by meat-eating dinosaurs that came to an oasis to drink. The prints help scientists learn about the way dinosaurs move and their inclination to herd.

By ripping up the slabs, the boys left two scars, each about 6 inches deep, on the ground near the water. One was about 3 feet by 2 feet, the other just over a foot long. The dinosaur tracks are normally available for the public to look at and walk on. Kirkland said that is unlikely to change.

Officials said it may be possible to find some of the thrown pieces. However, much of the rock was broken and would be difficult to put together again, Sinclear said.

The boys were unsupervised on the shore because their troop leader took other boys for a ride in a boat. The group had been hiking and water-skiing in the area.

Councilman apologizes for jokes

NAMPA (AP) — A white city councilman has apologized for engaging in racially loaded banter with a black friend at a public event.

Nampa Councilman Martin Thorne said his joking at a July 17 Rodeo Idaho luncheon July 17 was not intended to be offensive and was part of a long-running, friendly exchange of jokes between himself and rodeo clown Leon Coffee.

Thorne said he values his friendship with Coffee and that their mutual badgering is meant to be funny, not offensive.

"If it was uncomfortable for the community, then an apology is necessary," he said in an interview with Idaho Press-Tribune.

Managing Editor Vickie Holbrook. "I guess I was out of order, and I apologize for that. There was no malice. I never intended to offend anyone."

Coffee, who could not be reached for comment, said earlier that he was not offended by Thorne's words and he was "killing" prejudice by laughing at such jokes. Thorne's barbs included comments about watermelons, fried chicken and sexual potency.

Thorne's remarks at the luncheon drew the attention of Nathaniel Hoffman, a white reporter from the Idaho Press-Tribune, who covered the event. Hoffman wrote a personal column critical of the exchange.

Thorne said his friendship with Coffee stretches back for nearly two decades and the ribbing has gone both ways. Coffee has joked about Thorne's membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Holbrook said she contacted Thorne because she wanted to give him the opportunity to respond to letters to the editor that the newspaper had received.

Rodeo board member Steve Tester said Coffee's race has traditionally been a part of his clown act.

"Way back when, people accepted that type of joking, but now we've grown above that," Tester said. "We've matured as a community. We are trying to get away from racial jokes."

BLM seizes cattle from rancher in dispute

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management seized 62 cattle from a Nevada rancher and plans to auction them off unless he pays $70,000 for grazing livestock on federal land without a permit.

Ben Colvin, owner of the Colvin Livestock Co. in Goldfield, repeatedly has refused to comply with BLM requests to remove the unauthorized livestock since 1995, the BLM said.

"This announcement is an action of last resort," said Craig MacKinnon, BLM's assistant field manager in Tonopah.

Federal contractors seized the trespassing cattle without incident Thursday from the desert range south of Goldfield about 150 miles north of Las Vegas.

But BLM officials said they were forced to call in Churchill County sheriff's deputies Thursday night when two property rights' activists began harassing the workers impounding the cattle at the livestock auction yard in Fallon. The protesters left and no arrests were made.

"There was no hostility. It was characterized to me as a cattal type of thing," BLM spokesman Bob Stewart said Friday.

Murder suspect waives hearing

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A man charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Rosell Armenta Torre waived his preliminary hearing after receiving assurances that he will not face the death penalty.

Bingham County Prosecutor Scott Andrew said he was not confident his office had enough evidence against Manuel Sarmiento Moreno, 22, to meet legal requirements for imposing death.

The body of Torre, 22, Idaho Falls, was found by a passing motorist lying on a county road northeast of Shelley on the morning of May 7. Police believe he was shot and left there the previous night.

Moreno had fled the state but was picked up in a drug raid in Elko, Nev. on May 9. He waived extradition there in exchange for dropping the Nevada charges.

Two men and one woman are also being held on charges linked to the murder.

Center reportedly costs regional facility money

LEWISTON (AP) — The state Department of Juvenile Corrections' new jail is fast becoming a financial drain on the regional detention center run by north-central Idaho counties.

With fewer state prisoners coming into the regional center, and those who do staying for shorter periods of time, expenses are running well ahead of income, said John Triplett, head of the Nez Perce County Court Services Department.

Triplett said the trend would quickly deplete $244,000 in operating reserves that the centerwater — and managed by Nez Perce County under the direction of an advisory board made up of one commissioner from each county.

Only two were represented at Thursday's quarterly meeting, making it impossible to implement Triplett's suggestion that the daily cost to counties for housing each young offender be increased from $125 to $135.

Nez Perce tribal law enforcement also has suggested more tribal youth might be sent there instead of Yakima, Wash., if the price were reduced from $145 to the same rate as paid by the counties, Triplett said.

Both issues will be considered at the next meeting, Sept. 27.

Premier says there won't be cover-up

ROME (AP) - Facing an outcry in Italy and abroad, Premier Silvio Berlusconi promised on Friday there will be no cover-up of the truth regarding charges of police brutality against protesters during the Group of Eight summit in Genoa.

But Berlusconi defended his government's handling of the summit and gave no indication he will agree to opposition demands for a separate parliamentary investigation of the events that included the first death during anti-globalization protests.

Addressing the Senate, Berlusconi said the summit was a "political and diplomatic success for our country."

Protesters in Britain, France, Germany and elsewhere have claimed upon returning home that they were beaten by police and denied access to their consulates after their arrests.

Much of Berlusconi's 40-minute address was devoted to a defense of his government's actions and to noting that the summit was largely prepared by the center-left opposition. The prime minister took office five weeks before the summit.

Police in Genoa were unable to quell the violence, which cost millions of dollars worth of damage and shocked the nation. One protester, 23-year-old Carlo Giuliani, was fatally shot by police.

More than 100 foreigners were arrested in Genoa, including dozens of Germans. Almost all had been freed by Friday.

Foreign Minister Renato Ruggiero, visiting Austria on Friday, assured Foreign Minister Benita Ferrero-Waldner that Italy would spare no efforts to get a "full clarification" of the riots, news reports said. Seventeen Austrians were arrested in Genoa.

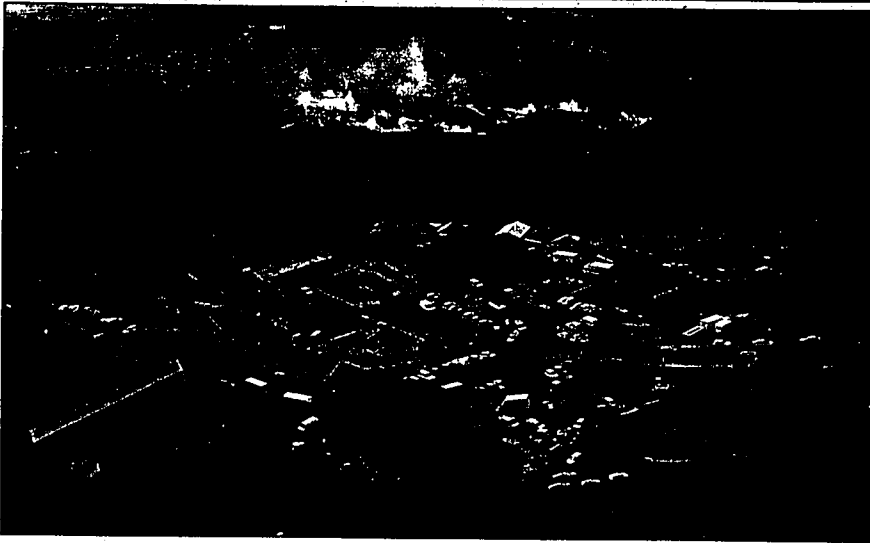

Ferrero-Waldner also said lines of communication should be established with nonviolent anti-global groups. The Italian media has carried reports about violent groups - some of them from the far right - infiltrating the Global Social Forum, the umbrella for hundreds of protest organizations.

Prime minister repeats vow to visit war shrine

TOKYO (AP) - Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi said Friday he will visit a shrine honoring Japan's war-dead as planned, despite criticism from Asia and concerns at home.

Koizumi said he would not change his mind even though one of his closest allies, Foreign Minister Makiko Tanaka, has said she will try to discourage him from going to Tokyo's Yasukuni Shrine next month.

"As I have said before, there is no change," Koizumi told reporters, when asked if he would reconsider his plans to visit. "It is not a matter to be decided by the Cabinet."

Lava from Mount Etna approaches the Sapienza Hill in Nicolosi, Sicily, Friday as bulldozers work to divert the lava stream threatening the tourist area.

Volcano threatens shops, cable car base

ON MOUNT ETNA, Sicily (AP) - With Mount Etna belching plumes of flame and ash, workers relentlessly bulldozed dirt and volcanic rock into 10-foot walls Friday, hoping to prevent lava from swallowing a string of souvenir shops and a cable-car base.

The work became more frantic after the flow from Europe's most active volcano burned a wooden warehouse Friday morning, just hours after it poured over a protective embankment and across a parking lot that had been cleared of cars.

Officials said the lava was slowing down, but that it still threatened Rifugio Sapienza, a collection of souvenir stands, a restaurant and a ski lift base more than halfway up the volcano.

"We live here with our families and we're worried, of course," said Alfio Carone, one of the owners of La Cantoniara restaurant, which stood 200 feet from the lava Friday afternoon.

Carone was still serving food Friday - but only to journalists and emergency workers as the main road to the restaurant is closed to tourists. He said he hasn't been told when he should leave but that it might be soon.

"Lava is getting closer every day," he said.

Late Friday, two new fractures opened elsewhere on Etna's side, but officials said they weren't threatening any structures and in fact might help ease the pressure propelling the two main lava fronts toward the Sapienza base and a town further down the volcano.

About 20 bulldozers and scores of workers, their faces blackened by ash, relentlessly pushed earth and debris to create barriers to save the Sapienza base, which sits at an altitude of 6,266 feet.

The march began in Wad Medani, 90 miles southeast of Khartoum, with about 1,000 marchers. Within a few hours, the count had reached 25,000.

Many of Sudan's leading actors and comedians were taking part in the march, which was to take them past the cities of El-Hassheisa and El-Kamlin before reaching Khartoum.

The march, organized by UNICEF and the Sudanese Movement for Children, aimed to highlight the stark conditions in the country devastated by civil war and famine, and the humanitarian needs of its children.

Sudan has been embroiled in civil war since 1983, when the Sudan People's Liberation Army took up arms, demanding greater autonomy in the south where most of the people follow traditional African beliefs.

About 5 percent are Christian. The north is mostly Arab Muslim.

The war has pushed 4 million people from their homes and more than 2 million people have died in fighting and famines.

Thomas Ekvall, UNICEF's representative in Sudan, said past reliance on a single government ministry or group may explain why aid programs have not always succeeded.

Thousands begin march for peace

WAD MEDANI, Sudan (AP) - Tens of thousands of people - including thousands of children - began a two-day peace march through war-ravaged Sudan on Friday.

"We are appealing to all sides to stop the war in our country and achieve peace here, in the continent and in the whole world," said 12-year-old participant Omar Awad el-Basha.

The march began in Wad Medani, 90 miles southeast of Khartoum, with about 1,000 marchers. Within a few hours, the count had reached 25,000.

So You Want to Be...

Have you ever dreamed of being in the music business? Besides singing or playing an instrument, there are other jobs.

Music producers are responsible for how music sounds and feels. After a preproduction session with an artist or band, recording begins. Every instrument and voice is recorded separately, and then producers mix and blend them so they all work together.

Many producers have experience as artists or engineers. Not only do producers need to have a good understanding of music and its production, they also need to have good communication skills, creativity and be able to work under pressure. It's very important that music producers stay on top of music trends, too.

Along with the record, a video is produced. Record companies hire a video director to come up with ideas for the video. A video producer selects a crew to make the video, and a casting director hires people to be in the video.

To get in this side of the music industry, you need video production experience. Some colleges have media production courses. In addition, business and people skills are important, too, along with creativity. With so much competition, it never hurts to try to get a foot in the door as an intern or helper at a radio station or record company.

Should Congress increase the minimum wage?

Yes

The working poor need help

JARED BERNSTEIN

An evenly divided Congress appears set to raise the minimum wage, and the president will likely sign it. A recent poll conducted by the New York Times and CBS News found that nine out of 10 respondents support such an increase. Meanwhile, living wage ordinances are being adopted in cities throughout the country.

At a time when free-market ideology dominates policymaking at every level of government, one might well wonder why wage mandates are so popular.

Wage mandates, however, have long played an important - and popular - role in the U.S. labor market. The original debate over a national minimum wage began in the heart of the Depression, when our nation's most severe market failure drove wages offers down to socially intolerable levels. It was enacted, at 25 cents an hour, in 1938.

Economic conditions have never been this dire since, but the forces of supply and demand, in tandem with the weak bargaining power of our least advantaged workers, still manage to push wage offers below poverty levels. Opponents of wage mandates raise numerous objections. Their first argument used to be that these policies would upset the delicate equilibrium in the low-wage labor market, leading to job losses and other economic distortions. But purely competitive markets exist only in theory, which is why these four predictions fail to materialize each time there's a minimum wage hike.

Critics have lately focused on targeting, arguing that since these wage mandates aren't linked to family income, it's possible that some of the benefits are going to low-wage workers in high-income families. This is an empirical question, and evidence shows that most of the benefits of the minimum wage - about 60 percent - go to those who need the extra pay to make ends meet. But these policies are not solely about targeting. Like any other regulation, they are about standards that are accessible to the broad public. Rock-bottom wages, regardless of family income, are no more acceptable than unsafe food or unclean air. And the popularity of minimum wage increases isn't based on self-interest: 90 percent of the public supports a higher minimum wage, but only ten percent will reap its benefits.

Finally, some argue that instead of wage mandates, we should stress better education and tax credits. Both are worthy, but neither is a panacea. Low-wage workers are actually more highly educated than ever before. Since the late 1970s, the share of low-wage workers that are high-school dropouts has fallen by eight percentage points, with a commensurate increase in the shares of those with higher education levels. Yet this educational upgrading has coincided with wage downgrading.

Low-wage workers need better skills, of course, but that's not enough. Better skills are a long-term solution to an immediate problem. One of the most effective anti-poverty tools is the Earned Income Tax Credit, a wage subsidy that can add $4,000 to the annual income of low-income families. But this is a pure redistribution of resources from taxpayers to low-wage workers. Low-income working families cannot afford to depend solely on those who control the public purse strings.

Wage mandates are complementary to education and tax credits, not exclusive of them, a point recognized by many law-

No

Higher pay eliminates jobs

AMY RIDENOUR

It is better to have a raise or a job? It's a no-brainer. A raise is worthless without a job. Since the passage of the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1938, some have contended that a constantly increasing minimum wage

Sharon Brooks Hodge of the African-American group Project 21 says: "Wages are a reflection of relative work skills. You can trust that no one is out there lobbying for a minimum skills floor to coincide with the demand for more money. Until that happens, this segment of the work force will remain unable to compete for higher wages on their own. What (those) clamoring for a higher minimum wage fail to acknowledge is that boasting pay for that reason alone does little more than spin the endless spiral of inflation."

And put more money in the coffers of labor unions, as well. Other blacks endorse Hodge's view: "Forty years ago, when Jim Crow was alive and well but before substantial increases in the minimum wage, the unemployment rate for black youths was virtually identical to that of white youths. But with the rise in the minimum wage, there's been a rise in the unemployment rates of black youths," says Peter Kirsanow, chairman of the Center for New Black Leadership and a labor attorney.

Black youths, through no fault of their own, disproportionately attend falling inner-city schools. The government thus hits them with a double-whammy: It gives them a bad start by enrolling in public schools, and then it raises the minimum wage, which reduces the number of jobs for untrained people.

Minimum wage increases, while not designed to be racist, simply are. According to the Employment Policies Institute, an increase in the minimum wage has perverse effect of increasing both the school dropout rate and teenage unemployment. This is because higher mandatory wages entice some students into sacrificing school for work while simultaneously compelling employers to forgo hiring low-skill teen-agers in favor of older employees whose experience makes them worth higher wages.

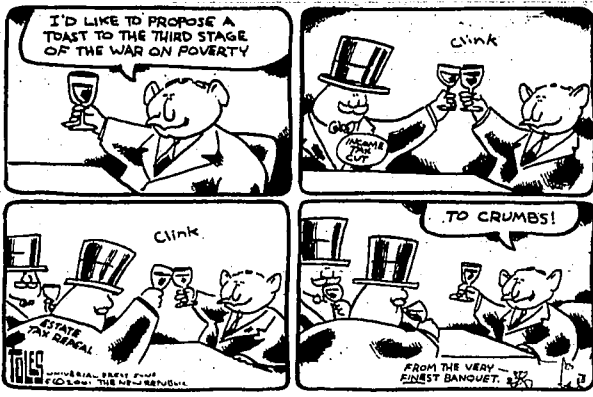

These facts are no secret: A University of New Hampshire poll of economists has shown that nearly 80 percent acknowledge the minimum wage hikes cause job losses.

Nevertheless, the crusade for a minimum wage increase continues. Advocates of increases gloss over the job loss issue. Rarely do they answer the question: If it is good to raise wages a dollar an hour, why not raise them $50 an hour? Wouldn't that be 50 times better?

The answer is that it is much harder to pretend that raising wages by $50 per hour will not kill jobs. The pretense that raising wages by legislative fiat is a benevolent act must be maintained.

If we are going to again raise the minimum wage because politicians love nice headlines and labor unions love cash, we could at least do so honestly, and admit that doing so kills jobs. And that the people who will lose those jobs will be our most vulnerable.

makers at the national, state, and local levels. Together, these policies truly can make work pay for our least fortunate workers.

will prevent the exploitation of workers. Politicians continually trot out the issue, confident that even if its economic effects aren't as advertised, the political benefits of appearing to care about the working poor are.

But yet another of our many dozens of upward wage adjustments will fail to create economic stability for those at the bottom end of the pay scale. As has been a rise in the unemployment rates of black youth," says Peter Kirsanow, chairman of the Center for New Black Leadership and a labor attorney.

Black youths, through no fault of their own, disproportionately attend falling inner-city schools. The government thus hits them with a double-whammy: It gives them a bad start by enrolling in public schools, and then it raises

Industrial farming is in danger

It is time to elevate the nature of the debate about industrial farming. For this discussion, let us use the argument that we should designate large dairies as "industrial." The irrefutable fact is that all livestock operations are industrial in their scope.

We traditionally think of a cow as being used for meat and milk. 32 million are slaughtered each year in the USA. However, only about 60 percent of each animal is used for these reasons. The remaining 40 percent of each animal goes for industrial uses. Among many uses are components in cosmetics, jet engine lubricants, brake fluid, candles, plywood adhesive, strapping, crayons, soaps, synthetic motor oil, coatings for fish line, gel capsules, cough syrups, candy, antifreeze, hemostats, orthopedic implant coatings. The cow pericardium is used in cardiovascular surgery and repair of hearts. The list is huge. Every citizen who uses any of these items has some culpability in our present situation.

Let's analyze the need for larger cattle herds. As non-farm salaries increase, the farmer's service and repair expenses increase. He has to find more efficient ways to survive. Many commodities are raised for the export market. As the price of these commodities rises, so does the price of the farmer's operation to spread out the costs.

If the general public is eating things that are sacred right to eat at the expense of the farmer?

According to our own Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, agricultural commodities and the processing account for 70 percent of total sales in Minidoka Valley. Also, 54,000 employees in agriculture represent 64 percent of all employment. What would our economy be like if the livestock industries were decimated by poor decisions? It is not sufficient for our county commissioners to use the excuse that they didn't see larger operations coming, when in fact farming, including dairy and beef herds, has been growing for the past 50 years that I have been farming and dairying in Twin Falls County. During this same time, confined animal feeding operation permits were being approved.

Is it time for the county commissioners to stand up for the agricultural community or litigate at taxpayers' expense?

I would suggest that we all move forward with the real facts on the table. The wrong reactions may bring about unintended consequences.

Absentee is the best defense

I would like to respond to The Times-News article seen recently about Planned Parenthood.

One of the many statements that frustrated me was, "The pregnancy rates and poverty rates really determined there was a need not being met." The pregnancy and poverty rates have not said we need a Planned Parenthood clinic and needs were not being met, they have said teens need to stop having immoral sex.

How can you prevent teen pregnancy? For one, not going into schools informing kids on "safe" does not mean it can help in not becoming pregnant. That is an idea people leave out when they inform kids about safe sex.

You could also prevent pregnancy by not passing out condoms and/or birth control pills as samples in schools. By doing this, you simply let teens know that sex is OK as long as you are performing safe sex and that there is a way to not admit responsibility, abortion.

Teen sex is not OK and considering the fact that in today's society, you're not normal unless you have sex with numerous partners. Being 17 years old, I think it is a sad day when teens are not "cool" or "socially fit" because they choose to say no to sex.

A-bomb legacy should not be forgotten

JOHN LAForge

On the 56th anniversary of the U.S. bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we need to reflect on the atomic age. And we need to make sure the Bush administration does not push it into another one.

On Aug. 6, 1945, 140,000 men, women and children were turned into powder and ash at Hiroshima. Three days later at Nagasaki, 70,000 died instantly. After five years, an additional 330,000 inhabitants of the two cities died of radiation poisoning.

Nagasaki Mayor Ichio Ito said in August 1999, "From this hellish experience, we have gained the conviction that the existence of nuclear weapons cannot be tolerated."

But the Bush administration does not hold Mayor Ito's position. President Bush wants to bury the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, and the administration wants to abrogate the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. By going in this direction, the Bush administration is turning its back on the advice of an increasing number of Sixty-two retired generals and admirals published a declaration in 1996 calling for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons.

One of these, Gen. George L. Butler, was the former chief of the Strategic Air Command. He helped shape and enforce nuclear policy but now renounces it.

"Too many of us have failed to properly understand the risks and consequences of nuclear war," he wrote for the journal of the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation in 1996. "(Its) effects transcend time and place, poisoning the earth and transforming its inhabitants for generation(s)."

Butler could very well be speaking on current White House plans for sending nuclear power and weapons into space when he wrote that the "likely consequences of nuclear war have no politically, militarily or morally acceptable justification, and therefore the threat to use nuclear weapons is infeasible."

In 1998, 117 world leaders - including former Russian and U.S. leaders Mikhail Gorbachev and Jimmy Carter - called on the nuclear weapon states to declare nuclear abolition as their goal.

In October 1999, 94 U.S. Catholic bishops declared that U.S. plans to use nuclear weapons first "must not be allowed" and charged that "deterrence as a national policy must be condemned as morally abhorrent."

Since then, millions of ordinary people, as well as religious, military, civilian and political leaders have been working for nuclear disarmament. As we recall Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we should also remember selfless of the notion that "the bomb saved lives," and that modern nuclear weapons have a usefulness.

The bomb did not save lives. "I think it can be proven that the bomb was not only unnecessary but known in advance not to be necessary," historian Gar Alperovitz wrote after 30 years of research on the subject.

President Dwight Eisenhower called the bombings gratuitous saying, "First, the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful bomb."

In 1950, Jim. William Leahy, the World War II chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, denounced the atom bomb's so-called usefulness. In what could stand as an epitaph for the nuclear age, Leahy said about Hiroshima: "We not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children."

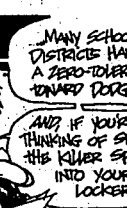

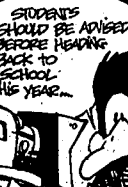

George W. Bush would do well to recall those words.

Compensation begins for nuclear weapons plant workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martha Als thought she'd never see the day when the government would pay for what it did to her father — a former worker at the uranium enrichment plant in Paducah, Ky. But Als' mother, Clara Harding, will receive a check for $150,000 — possibly as early as Tuesday — as part of a federal entitlement plan aimed at compensating sick nuclear weapons workers or their survivors.

The Labor Department is running the new program, which officially begins Tuesday. Labor Secretary Elaine Chao calls it "an absolute priority." But the government hasn't always had that attitude. Before he died of cancer in 1980, Harding's bones were found to contain up to 34,000 times the expected concentration of uranium. Yet while he lived, Harding was denied compensation because official records showed he was only exposed to small levels of radiation. The Energy Department has identified 317 sites that employed more than 650,000 people nationwide for nuclear weapons-related work during the Cold War. The agency initially thought 3,000 to 4,000 might receive compensation, but the accuracy of that estimate is unclear, in part because of poor record keeping.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the program will cost roughly $2 billion over a decade. Harding was among those who pressed the Energy Department to acknowledge workers were getting sick from bomb-making components, and his widow and daughter took up the fight after he died. The government fought back, fearing that improving conditions at plants would be too costly and could derail the nation's nuclear program. "It had gone on, so many years," said Als. "It was like the government just would never admit it." The government finally did concede two years ago that many workers who built America's nuclear weapons likely became ill because of on-the-job exposure. Congress approved the com-ensation program last year. "It's a monumental program that I consider my greatest legacy at DOE," said former Energy Secretary Bill Richardson, who lobbied hard for the program in the Clinton administration. The law provides medical care and $150,000 to sick workers exposed to radiation, which can cause cancer; and silica or beryllium, which can cause lung diseases.

IN BRIEF

Nationals drop first game at regional

HELENA, Mont. - Nathan Robertson hit a three-run home run but the Twin Falls Nationals still fell to Ferndale, Wash., 10-5 at the Cal Ripken, Jr. Pacific Northwest Regional Championships Friday in Helena, Mont. Seven errors hurt the Nationals (30-3), who dropped to 2-1 in pool play at the 10-team tournament. "We didn't take care of the rock," said head coach Kent Knigge. Ferndale's Brian Locker went 3-for-4 with a leadoff home run and three runs scored to lead the Washington team. Twin Falls faces Flathead Valley, Mont., in today's final pool play game at 2:30 p.m. The Nationals must win and hope Ferndale defeats host Helena for the Nationals to advance to Sunday's championship round. Knigge said however the team finishes, it's been a terrific season. "We won four tournament championships this year," he said. "I give the kids a great amount of credit. They've earned their stripes and now they're better men for it."

Jacob Nelson scores 31 at Adidas tourney

LAS VEGAS - Matt's Jacob Nelson scored 31 points as the Magic Valley All Stars beat Carmichael 80-73 at the Adidas "Big Time" Tournament in Las Vegas. Burley's Eric Berg chipped in 11 and four others finished with eight. The tournament, consisting of 34 teams from 11 states and four foreign countries, is one of the largest in the U.S. for high school seniors to be.

Prime Time retires from NFL

ASHBURN, Va. - Backed into a corner, the world's flashiest cornerback made a very quiet exit. Deion Sanders retired from the NFL on Friday, striking a deal with a Washington Redskins team he had disavowed. The announcement didn't come with any Prime Time flash or sentiment or any glowing words - rather just as a one-paragraph announcement in which Redskins coach Marty Schottenheimer told how events unfolded with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker. "It was evident from his comments that Deion Sanders didn't want to play football," Schottenheimer said.

"I've got to really get my head together and figure out what I'm going to do and what I want to accomplish." - Deion Sanders

The announcement comes one day after Sanders left the Syracuse SkyChiefs minor league baseball team, and two days before he was obligated to report to the Redskins' training camp in Carlisle, Pa. Had he not retired, he could have forfeited up to $9.66 million of his $9 million signing bonus by staying away. The Washington Post, citing anonymous sources, first reported Sanders' retirement on its Web site. The paper reported that the settlement reached will have Sanders returning an amount less than $2.5 million of the $8 million - and that the Redskins will receive salary cap relief next season for the returned portion. Area C AA American Legion District Tournament Cowboys earn title shot

Twin Falls advances in 17-14 win over Minico

By Scott Thompson Times-News writer

RUPERT - The Twin Falls Cowboys needed just about every one of their 17 runs and 21 hits in their 17-14 victory over Minico Friday at Warburton field. But it certainly didn't look that way entering the ninth inning. The second-seeded Cowboys (29-15) held a 7-8 lead and looked to be cruising toward a matchup with the top-seeded Idaho Falls Russets for the Area C AA American Legion District championship today. Minutes later, however, the lead was just there at 17-14, with the Cowboys on the plate after a five-run barrage from the Spartans. Just ask reliever Matt Colvin, who was thrown into the game at that juncture, needing one out. "I'm still shaking," he said several minutes after he got the game going out. "Me too," said his coach, Matt Rasmussen. As for his game plan, Colvin said he came out of the bullpen thinking, "Throw strikes and get it across the plate." He did and the second-seeded Cowboys have a shot at the title against the No. 1 Idaho Falls Russets today at 1:30 p.m. "It feels great and we got the win," he said. The loss forced Minico into the late loser-out game against

Armstrong moves up a gear to win Tour stage

The Associated Press

SAINT-AMAND-MONTROND, France - Just when Lance Armstrong's rivals thought they had seen it all, he shifted up a gear Friday to win a Tour de France stage Sunday yet closer to a third straight title. "That was an effort that we've never seen before," he said after winning the individual time trial between Montlucan and this town in central France. "I think that I'm at the highest level of my career." Armstrong's main rival, Jan Ullrich of Germany, remained second overall. But the German's advantage grew to 6 minutes, 44 seconds, a huge margin with only two flat stages remaining before the finish on the Champs-Elysees in Paris on Sunday. He won last year's race with a 6:02 lead over Ullrich and the year before ended 7:37 ahead of Switzerland's Alex Zülle. Barring sickness or accident, Armstrong is certain to become the Area coaches earn Distinguished Coach of the Year awards

The Times-News

CALDWELL - Twin Falls High School football coach Mark Schnal and Minico High wrestling coach Brad Cooper were named Distinguished Coaches of the Year for their respective sports at the annual Idaho State Coaches Association meeting at Caldwell High School on Wednesday.

The awards were given to each coach for their service to athletics, said ICSA media coordinator Jerry Diehl. "It's just a way to honor them," Diehl said. Coach of the Year awards were also handed out to each of the 70 coaches who headed state champions in the academic year 2000-2001. Of those, 11 went to Magic and Wood River valley coaches who won state titles last year. They include Doug Stauffer for Wood River girls' soccer; Roger Carecina for Valley boys' basketball; LaRell Patterson for Filer boys' track; Steve Haugeberg for Minico girls' track; Elmer Mustgrave for Jerome girls' track; Melvin Darrington for Declo girls' track; Cleta Whitaker for Rafi River girls' track; Al Rohweder for Valley boys' golf; Paul Stover for Twin Falls girls' golf; Gary Krumm for Buhl baseball and Mark Scribner for Ketchum Community School tennis. Three other area coaches or administrators were recognized for their achievements. Buhl's Marvin Bartosovski, whom Diehl labeled an "assistant for all sports," received the District IV Assistant Coach of the Year award, while Jerome's Clark Muscat and Klamath Falls' George Arrossa received District IV service awards.

The recipe for beating the Russets

By Scott Thompson Times-News writer

RUPERT - It's as simple as playing a near-flawless game. All the Twin Falls Cowboys have to do in order to beat the Idaho Falls Russets in the Area C AA American Legion District tournament championship today is build an early lead, pitch a two-hit shutout, play flawless defense and swing the bats well, according to some of the coaches at the tourney. "But even that may not be enough. Given the way the Russets looked in their opener when they crushed the Upper Valley Bulldogs 15-1 Thursday and the way they ran through the regular season posting a 20-4 mark in 10 games, Twin Falls has its work cut out. But here are some ideas from the coaches at the tournament on how to beat the raging Russets. "Get ahead early and keep the pressure on," said Idaho Falls Reds coach Gary Gernant. "You have to play a complete game. They have some of the best pitching and some of the best hitting. They can come from behind. So you can't get ahead and let them back in the game." Minico coach Russ Wright had a shorter answer. Pitching. "When we beat them, John Fennell threw a two-hit shutout," he explained. Russel coach Scott Barr even has a thought on the subject. "You have to play clean baseball when you play good teams like Twin or Minico or us," he said. "Don't let teams capitalize on anything you could prevent."

As for the man who has to come up with today's game plan, Cowboy skipper Matt Rasmussen, what are his thoughts? Especially since he is 0-4 against them this season. "We know they have a tough right-hander, Nick Orgill, who we have to take a good approach at the plate and play errorless defense." Barr said it's likely but not certain that Orgill (7-1, 2.02 ERA) will get the start. As for Rasmussen, he is likely to go to Matt Colvin. However, Colvin was forced in to action Friday when he recorded the last out in the Cowboys' victory over Minico. "I'll see how he feels in the morning," Rasmussen said. The championship is slated to begin at 1:30 p.m. at Warburton Field.

Kimberly splits finale with Bear Lake

The Times-News
KIMBERLY — Brett Baldwin struck out 14 and had two hits in his final home game, leading Kimberly to a 7-6 win over Bear Lake in American Legion Baseball Friday at Kimberly.
 In Game 1, Zach Nite had three hits to lead the visiting Bears over the Bulldogs 11-0.

It was the regular season finales for both teams, who head into district play at Pocatello starting on Wednesday.
Legion Kimberly finished 15-20 overall, 8-12 in Area C. The Bears head in to the tournament at 14-6 in league, 22-14 overall.
 Kimberly coach Terry Bohan said the win was a nice way to cap the home season.

 "Brett really shut them down," Bohan said. "We just got some hits in some clutch situations."
 Baldwin allowed just four baserunners after the second inning. Kimberly exploded for six runs in the fifth, which they opened with four straight hits and a walk. Casey Pryor and Brad Butler added two hits apiece.

 Kimberly went 7-7 over the last two weeks, splitting each of its last seven series.

Area Cal Ripken teams finish season with Twin Falls All-Stars Invitational

By Joe Sumner Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's not quite the state or regional playoffs, but none of the 500 young baseball players taking part in the Twin Falls All-Stars Invitational seem to mind.
 Forty-two teams from around the state and the surrounding area are competing in the double-elimination tournament with 17 teams in the 9-to-10-year-old division and 25 in the 11-to-12-year-old class.
 Minivans and pinstripes are swarming the baseball diamonds at Harmon and South parks in Twin Falls for what is basically the last large tournament of the Cal Ripken baseball season.
 Though the district and state tournaments for each of the age classifications wrapped up a few weeks ago, the tournament is one last chance for the teams to compete with something on the line.

younger kids how to play baseball the right way," said Pete Turner, president of the board of directors of the Twin Falls County Cal Ripken All-Stars. "We want to solidify the Cal Ripken League in the Twin Falls area and also teach the kids how to compete at a higher level while learning the right way to act in and defeat."

 With one team from Twin Falls — the Nationals — already crowned state champs in the 11-12-year-old division and still competing for a berth in the World Series, Cal Ripken baseball has caught on quickly in the Magic and Wood-River valleys.
 Two teams from Twin Falls are competing in each age bracket at the local tournament while teams from Jerome, Wood River, Heyburn and Paul are also represented.
 "We didn't make it to the regional tournament, so this is it," Twin Falls Pioneers coach Perry Shank said. "This is kind of bittersweet. You get to really know the kids as your own and then it just kind of ends and you don't see them as much."
 The Pioneers defeated West Side Idaho Falls 10-9 on Friday to advance to the semifinals of the 9-10-year-old division today at 10 a.m. The Pioneers rallied back from a 9-0 deficit to earn the right to face the Meridian Bandits and a shot at playing in the championship.

 "We're playing pretty well," Shank said. "There's a little more pressure to win as the top team in our group from Twin Falls, but it's really just about teaching baseball."
 Besides the baseball, the participants and families enjoyed a barbecue on Friday. Turner said he expected to feed at least 1,200 people, including players, family and friends.
 "It's really a lot of hard work and sacrifice for the parents involved but it's also a lot of fun," Turner said. "Nobody leaves here hungry and I think everyone has a good time."
 The semifinals of each age group begin at 10 a.m. today with the championships starting at 4 p.m. If a second championship game is necessary it will be played at 6 p.m.

Fever stop Rockers' 16-game home win streak

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gordana Grubin scored a career-high 23 points as the Indiana Fever beat Cleveland 67-63 Friday night, snapping the Rockers' 16-game home winning streak.
 Cleveland had shared the WNBA record for consecutive home victories with the Los Angeles Sparks.
 Indiana's reserves outscored Cleveland's reserves 46-6 as the Rockers lost at the Gund Arena for the first time since July 20, 2000. Cleveland (18-6) also had its seven-game overall winning streak snapped.
 Rushia Brown led Cleveland with 20 points. Merlakia Jones added 15 points.

Sacramento beat Portland for just its second victory in five games.
 Edna Campbell finished with 15 points and Tangelia Smith had 13 points, eight rebounds and four blocks for Sacramento (13-10), which shot 7-for-13 from 3-point range.
 Tamicha Jackson scored 12 points, and Sophia Witherston added nine for the Fire, who shot 27-for-71.

 After Friday's time trial, Armstrong was wary of seeming complacent about the prospect of victory.
 "It's not over," he said. "I have to be smart, to be safe. I would hate to have a problem (Saturday) or the last day. But if you do have a problem and you crash and hurt something or don't finish, then you lose the race."
 He set an average speed of 30.554 mph. In last year's time trial between Freiburg, Germany, and Mulhouse, France, he averaged 33.471 mph, a Tour record for a leg over 15.5 miles. That was his only stage-victory of the 2000 Tour.

Spartans rallied for four runs when they loaded the bases with no outs and scored four runs to make it 11-9.

"That's a big credit to (Mico's) program," Rasmussen said. "You never feel comfortable, even with an eight-run lead."

Thanks in large part to three walks and a hit batman from Spartan relief pitchers James Oldham and Andy Coats, the Cowboys responded to the first rally and scored six runs in the eighth inning to give themselves the seemingly comfortable margin.

"The kids kept pouring runs on," Rasmussen said.

Spartan coach Russ Wright wasn't nearly as enthusiastic about the rally. "I was proud of the offensive side, but our pitching let us down. We worked our tails off to get it to 11-9. And then to go out and give up ...," Wright said shaking his head in disgust.

Starting Seth Merritt had a strong outing for the Cowboys, going six innings and allowing only seven hits while registering three 1-2-out innings.

"Seth threw a great game," Rasmussen said. "He gave us a real good outing. But it was hot out there and he ran out of gas."

The Spartans started Ty Dietz against the Cowboys instead of 6-foot-7 right-hander John Fennell, who is probably their second best pitcher. Wright said he started Dietz because he had been very successful against the Cowboys in a late regular season victory. "Ty had attacked them," Wright said. "And for the first inning, it looked like he might do it again. But then he got out of rhythm."

Dietz lasted only 3 2/3 innings. A three-run Salinas and the bottom of the Twin Falls lineup were the biggest reasons.

Salinas, who struck out three times and went 1-for-5 Thursday, led-off with the second and third innings with base hits for the Cowboys. The hits helped Twin Falls erase a 3-0 lead with three runs in the second, another three in the third and four in the fourth.

Salinas finished 2-for-4 with three runs scored. Teammate Brett Miller, who batted seventh, finished 4-for-6. The eighth hitter, Vonnike Lopez, went 3-for-6 with two runs scored and three RBIs and No. 9 batter Carl Blackwood went 2-for-5 with four runs scored and an RBI.

"(In batting practice), I concentrated on my batics and came back with a better mental approach," Salinas said of his turnaround.

But mostly, he was excited about the victory. Especially since it was over the Cowboys' chief rival.

"It feels good every time," he said. "You never get tired of that."

Boston pitcher sparks Red Sox win

BOSTON (AP) — Bret Saberhagen, pitching in his first game for the first time in almost 22 months, allowed three hits in six innings Friday night to lift the Boston Red Sox to a 9-5 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Tampa Bay's Ben Grieco connects for a grand slam, Friday, off a pitch by Texas' Rob Bell during the third inning in Arlington, Texas.

Soriano's three-run homer off Chris Carpenter (7-8) gave New York a 6-1 lead in the seventh. The Yankees have hit 15 homers in their last 14 games.

Tigers 7, Indians 4

DETROIT — Bartolo Colon won his fourth straight start, and Jim Thome hit his AL-leading 33rd home to lead Cleveland over Detroit Tigers.

Rangers 13, Devil Rays 7

ARLINGTON, Texas — Alex Rodriguez went 3-for-4 with a two-run homer as the Texas Rangers extended their season-best winning streak to five games with a 13-7 win over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays on Friday night.

Boston Red Sox starting pitcher Bret Saberhagen delivers a throw, Friday, during the first inning against the Chicago White Sox at Fenway Park in Boston. Saberhagen, who had been recovering from shoulder surgery, last started for the Red Sox on October 17, 1999.

Maddux wins 10th straight; Piazza homers twice in win

MONTREAL (AP) — Greg Maddux won his 10th straight decision and extended his streak without a walk to 58 in 33 innings, pitching the Atlanta Braves over the Montreal Expos 7-3 Friday night.

EWU quarterback harbors no regrets

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — Three years ago, Josh Heupel and Fred Salanao shared the quarterback job at Snow College in Utah.

Everybody knows what happened to Heupel, who left for Oklahoma, led the Sooners to last season's national title and was the Heisman Trophy runner-up. He's now in camp with the NFL's Miami Dolphins.

Salanao, meanwhile, is a fifth-year senior who will start this fall at Division I-AA member Eastern Washington.

"I have no gripes about it," Salanao said at Big Sky Conference media day. "Josh Heupel is a great guy. He was my roommate on the road. I learned a lot from him, and from what I've known, he's learned a lot from me. We still keep in touch and I'm happy for the guy."

As a freshman, Salanao was the number one top college passer with 3,400 yards and 38 touchdowns. But he couldn't fulfill his commitment to transfer to Hawaii after failing a class.

Those schools that did not consider blacks and Hispanics in searching for a new coach, they violate. (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission) rules," Jackson said.

A svelte Ron Dayne?: New York running back makes good use of training camp

The Associated Press

Ron Dayne and svelte were never likely candidates to appear in the same sentence. But there was the running back for the NFL champion New York Giants, turning the corner for a big gain during a training-camp play Friday.

The 1999 Heisman Trophy winner reported to the Giants' training camp at the University at Albany at 245 pounds.

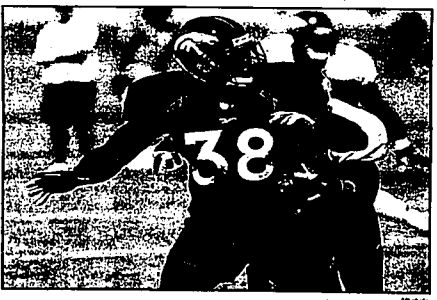

While that might seem a lot for an NFL halfback, that's the least Dayne has weighed since the seventh or eighth grade. It's also 13 pounds lighter than his rookie season, when he gained 770 yards on 228 carries splitting time with Tiki Barber.

"What is he, 5-9, 5-10?" defensive end Michael Strahan said. "There aren't many guys who show up for camp at 5-10 and 245 pounds who you would say look good. He looks good!"

Not only does Dayne look a lot slimmer, he's quicker. "Now that he is so much lighter, out on the field you see a guy who is better moving laterally and more comfortable hitting a corner and sprinting to it," veteran guard Glenn Parker said.

Seahawks

Agent Alvin Keels said Seattle has signed first-round draft pick Koren Robinson. Robinson, a wide receiver from North Carolina State drafted ninth overall, signed a six-year contract.

Denver running back Mike Anderson slips past a defender, Friday, during drills at training camp in Greeley, Colo.

Around the NFL

Bears

Veteran linebacker Sean Harris told Chicago coach Dick Jauron that he is retiring.

Harris left the Bears' training camp without explaining his decision to anyone except Jauron.

Harris was Chicago's fourth linebacker and could play all three linebacker slots. He started last season after injuries to Roosevelt Colvin and Warrick Holdman.

After two seasons of injuries, star running back Terrell Davis is hurting again.

Davis, who has missed 24 games since his 1998 MVP season, was held out of Denver's afternoon practice after aggravating a month-old hamstring injury.

"Believe me, I'm trying to get on this field as much as I can," he said. "I'm close. I feel great except for this right now. I'm too close to get frustrated. It's another little bump in the road. It's not a major one."

Davis tore ligaments in his right knee four games into the 1999 season and was limited to five games because of a stress fracture in his left leg last year.

He entered training camp ready to prove his durability only to tweak the hamstring within the first 30 minutes of the team's first practice. The injury originally occurred during a June minicamp.

Bills

Cornerback Nate Clements, the team's first-round draft pick, signed a contract after missing the first two days of camp.

Terrance "Terry" Wright, who was expected to be close to the five-year, $6.2 million deal cornerback Will Allen received from the New York Giants on Thursday.

Offensive tackle Brent Smith will be lost for the season after tearing a ligament in his left knee in Miami's morning practice, just four plays into their first full-squad workout.

"It's unfortunate," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "This was his opportunity. He worked extremely hard in the offseason and was ready. It's crazy the way it happened, and that compounds the frustration."

Eagles

Second-round selection Quinton Carter agreed to a four-year deal just hours before the team's first practice of training camp.

Carter was a two-year starter at middle linebacker at Arkansas after beginning his career as a defensive end. He expected to compete for a starting linebacker job with Philadelphia.

Smith, who tore his anterior cruciate ligament, wasn't hit on the play. The injury occurred when he turned to block linebacker Derrick Rodgers. His left knee buckled, and he fell to the turf.

Smith, projected to replace Richmond Webb at left tackle, was carried from the field on a cart.

Webb signed with the Cincinnati Bengals after lining up the last 11 seasons for the Dolphins.

Lamar Lathon, a former Pro Bowl linebacker who sat out the last two seasons, worked out for San Francisco.

Lathon, who made the Pro Bowl with Carolina in 1994 and also played for the Houston Oilers, is considering a comeback after missing two seasons following knee surgery.

Rookie defensive tackle Gerard Warren missed two practices with the Browns, who are losing patience with their top pick.

"I think it's lunacy," Browns owner Al Lerner said. "Why did I not see this? Why did I not see this? Why did I not see this?"

Kuerten wins 15th straight

Agassi advances at Mercedes-Benz

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andre Agassi disposed of Jan-Michael Gambill 6-2, 7-5 in the Mercedes-Benz Cup on Friday to set up a semifinal showdown with top-ranked Gustavo Kuerten.

Kuerten, the top seed, breezed past eighth-seeded Tommy Haas of Germany 6-3, 6-3 in just under an hour for his 15th consecutive match victory.

Agassi, the third seed, and Kuerten will meet today on the UCLA campus. While Kuerten is No. 1 based on his finish last year, Agassi leads the Brazilian in the ATP Champions Race, which determines the top-ranked player at year's end.

"I'd rather be playing him here than on clay," said Agassi, who won the Los Angeles tournament in 1998 and was second in 1999.

No. 4 seed Pete Sampras faced seventh-seeded Magnus Norman in a night match Thursday.

Shaugnessy upsets Williams; Davenport advances

STANFORD, Calif. — Meghann Shaughnessy upset Wimbledon champion Venus Williams 2-6, 7-5, 7-6 (4) on Friday to advance to the semifinals of the Bank of the West Classic.

After Shaughnessy — who at times flashed a fiery temper — finally took the match with a shot that Williams couldn't reach, she pumped her fist and raised her racket to the sky.

The crowd at Stanford's sunny Taube Family Stadium awarded her with a standing ovation. Shaughnessy, seeded fifth, had never defeated an opponent ranked as high as Williams, the No. 2 player in the world.

"My main focus today was to control the match," Shaughnessy said. "It's really important to stay focused and make sure she doesn't control the points."

For a while it looked like Williams, the defending champion of the Bank of the West, might pull it off.

But fifth-seeded Shaughnessy held serve to pull even again and force the tiebreaker in the two-hour, 18-minute match.

Top seed Ferrero loses to Lapentti at General Open

KITZBUHEL, Austria — Top-seeded Juan Carlos Ferrero failed in his bid for a fifth title this season, losing to Nicolas Lapentti of Ecuador 7-6 (6), 6-2 Friday in the quarterfinals of $900,000 General Open.

"I have had my ups and downs this year," said Lapentti, seeded sixth. "I just needed that little extra to win the big matches and I seemed to find it today."

Earlier, fifth-seeded Guillermo Coria of Argentina advanced to the semifinals by beating Stefan Koubek of Austria 6-4, 6-0. He next meets Albert Costa of Spain, who defeated Hugo Armando of Miami 6-4, 6-4.

Portas advances to semifinals in Poland

SOPOT, Poland — Spaniards Alberto Portas and Tommy

Robredo advanced Friday to the semifinals of the $570,000 Idea Prokom Open.

Portas, seeded second, dined Costa Rica's Juan Antonio Marin 6-3, 6-1. Robredo, seeded third, rallied to beat Irakli Labadze of Georgia 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

In another quarterfinal, David Nalbandian of Argentina defeated Oscar Serrano of Spain 6-2, 6-3.

In women's competition, top-seeded Anke Huber of Germany was upset by Gala Leon Garcia of Spain 6-3, 7-5.

Third-seeded Jelena Dokic of Yugoslavia defeated eighth-seeded Marianne Diaz-Oliva of Argentina 6-3, 6-3, and Cristina Torrens-Valero of Spain beat fourth-seeded Henrieta Nagyova of Slovakia 1-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Injury to Ruiz postpones fight with Holyfield

BEIJING (AP) — China promoter Don King likes to say, his client has 5,000 years for a heavyweight championship bout. Now it'll have to wait a little longer: "The Quiet Man" is hurting.

China's first heavyweight title fight was postponed Friday after Boxing John Ruiz injured his neck during training to defend his WBA title against Evander Holyfield. No new date was set for the bout that was scheduled for Aug. 5 in Beijing.

"There are things you can't control in life and this is one of them," Ruiz said at a news conference. "I definitely want to apologize to the people of China. No one is more disappointed than myself."

Ruiz first complained of a stiff neck Tuesday evening. His condition had worsened by early Wednesday; manager Norman Stone said, by Friday morning, King said, Ruiz was "almost ... paralyzed, and he was suffering excruciating pain."

The bout had been eagerly awaited in China, a nation of rabid sports-lovers. The fighters' camp promoters insisted it will go forward.

"This fight definitely will take place," said Niu Lixin, King's Chinese co-promoter. He said he wanted a plan in place by early next week.

Ruiz sat ramrod-straight for more than an hour during the news conference, his eyes cast down toward his water bottle or staring into space. Given his usual silence, it was hard to tell how much he was hurting. Holyfield, by contrast, posed for photographers and offered occasional bemused grins at the Chinese spoken around him.

"Injuries are a part of boxing," Holyfield said. "John was very gracious when I suffered an injury before our first fight was postponed. I know he came to Beijing to fight and when he's ready, so am I." The fight would have been the third between Ruiz and Holyfield for the WBA title. Ruiz became champion by outpointing Holyfield on March 3.

Julio Gonzalez relishes underdog role

LOS ANGELES — Julio Gonzalez likes the underdog. He's a good thing because that's the position he'll be in tonight when he challenges WBC, IBF and WBA light heavyweight champion Roy Jones Jr. at Staples Center.

"I know the odds, I know I'm a huge underdog," Gonzalez said with a grin. "It's good. I like people who are underdogs, and I'm one of them."

"I'm confident, I'm relaxed, I'm ready." Gonzalez is 27-0 with 17 knockouts yet Jones is a 20-1 favorite. That's no surprise, since Jones, 44-1 with 36 knockouts, is considered along with Shane Mosley, Felix Trinidad and perhaps Oscar De La Hoya as the best pound-for-pound fighters around.

However, Gonzalez likes his chances because of his style, and because he believes the 32-year-old Jones has lost a little quickness.

"But he's still very fast, more than all of us out there," said Gonzalez, who turns 25 on Monday. "I just have to put a lot of pressure on him, make him fight. He doesn't like to fight toe-to-toe. The key is pressure him, and the desire to win."

Gonzalez has certainly shown that desire, especially Feb. 2 when he won the NABO version of the light heavyweight championship with a unanimous 12-round decision over previously unbeaten Julian Leterlough.

Gonzalez won despite being floored in the third, fifth and 10th rounds. He has two 100-90 bouts and 13 rounders.

Ervin's gold sparks American dominance in pool

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — The older guys have the nicknames. Anthony Ervin has the gold medal from the 100-meter freestyle at the world swimming championships.

A self-declared longshot against superstars Ian Thorpe and Pieter van den Hoogenband, Ervin broke up their personal duel with a meet record Friday that highlighted the best night yet for the American team.

He had to overcome the latest technical difficulty at the championships to do it.

Ervin, the Olympic world champion at 50 meters but relegated to an outside lane in the 100, won in 48.33 seconds to help the United States to the top of the medal standings for the first time.

The Americans have 21 world medals — eight gold, seven silver and six bronze — and are just ahead of China (17) and Australia (16). The Chinese have eight gold, including six in diving, and Australia has collected eight gold in the swimming pool.

Maggie Bowen of Jackson, Mo., ended the domination of women's individual medley events by Ukraine's Yana Klochkova, overthrowing the dual Olympic gold medalist in the dual freestyle leg to win the 200 IM in 2:11.93.

And Aaron Peirsol, the Olympic silver medalist from Irvine, Calif., set a meet record of 1:57.13 in winning the men's 200 backstroke.

Ervin's victory surge came with a couple of stutters. The 20-year-old University of California biochemistry major from Phoenix said he was in serious pain in the second 50 after leading through the turn at under world-record pace.

And after appearing to score a fingertip win over van den Hoogenband — "Hoogie" to his fans — the scoreboard showed the Dutchman in first place in 48.43, followed by Lars Frølander of Sweden. Thorpe, AKA the "Thorpedo," was third. Ervin's time didn't appear on the board at all.

On cue, the U.S. squad got behind him, booming "USA, USA" from the stands, and the crowd at Fukuoka's Marine Messe pool joined the chant.

Ervin's touchpad had failed to automatically register his time, and officials went to the backup video. After a couple of anxious moments, the scoreboard showed the American as the winner.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Promoter pulls tournaments from casino hotel

INDIANAPOLIS — The promoter of three college basketball tournaments slated for Las Vegas moved them from a casino hotel Friday following pressure from the NCAA and several teams.

Pending NCAA approval, the tournaments will shift from the Paris Hotel and Casino to a new location in the city, said promoter Chris Spencer, director of Worldwide Basketball in Cincinnati.

The Washington Post first reported the move on its Web site Friday afternoon and, citing unidentified sources, said it would be to the Cashman Center, about a mile from any casino.

Spencer declined to specify the new location when asked by The Associated Press.

Cincinnati athletic director Bob Goin, whose school is entered in the Dec. 20-22 Las Vegas Classic, said organizers told the Bearcats the tourney would be moved to a convention center.

The NCAA had not yet received written requests to change the tournament sites, spokeswoman Jane Jankowski said.

The sudden relocations came after NCAA president Cedric Dempsey issued a statement Thursday night saying teams were "wrong" for participating in tournaments at gambling casinos.

Purdue and Texas A&M are also scheduled to play in the Las Vegas Classic. The field also includes Mississippi State, Richmond, Southwest Missouri State, Illinois-Chicago and Louisiana-Monroe.

The other two tournaments Spencer is promoting are scheduled for Thanksgiving week.

The Nov. 22-24 Las Vegas Invitational features Illinois, Iowa State, Georgia Tech, Hartford, Saint Louis, Penn; Southern Illinois and Eastern Illinois.

A Nov. 19-21 tournament will include Oklahoma State, UTET, Providence, South Carolina State, Aistinn Peay and Northeastern. Two other teams are to be determined.

Disney inks five-year deal with Tiger

Walt Disney Co. said Friday that it had reached a five-year deal with top-ranked golfer Tiger Woods to play in prime time golf matches on Disney's ABC and ESPN networks.

The deal, which had been expected for several weeks, is scaled down significantly from the wide-ranging endorsement Disney had originally sought.

Disney reportedly wanted Woods to serve as an endorser for Disney's theme parks and other divisions. At the time, some industry experts predicted it would redefine sports marketing.

But that was before the plan was thwarted by his main sponsor, Nike, according to a Disney source close to the deal.

Woods' deal with Nike is said to be valued at $20 million a year, and the company was reportedly concerned the Disney arrangement would dilute the value of its relationship.

Financial terms of the new deal were not disclosed.

Cubs acquire McGriff, who waives no-trade clause

CHICAGO — The announcement flashed across the scoreboard at Wrigley Field a few minutes before 3 p.m. Friday.

The final vote from Florida had been counted. Tampa Bay's Fred McGriff had agreed to waive his no-trade clause to join the Cubs. A wave of cheers followed.

Nineteen days after the Cubs and Devil Rays agreed to swap McGriff for lightly regarded minor-leaguers Manny Aybar and Jason Smith, the veteran slugger finally decided that helping the Cubs chase a pennant beat staying close to his home in Tampa.

"I didn't want to make a hasty decision," McGriff said. "I knew I had time to think about it. I wanted to analyze things."

All along Cubs general manager Andy MacPhail was willing to guarantee McGriff's 2002 option year or let the 37-year-old first baseman depart via free agency. That's all part of the deal.

MacPhail also agreed early in the process to boost McGriff's 2002 salary from $6.75 million to $7.25 million.

In another attempt to accommodate McGriff, MacPhail agreed to a mutual option in 2003. The Cubs either can pay him $8.5 million or buy him out for $300,000. Depending on the team's decision, McGriff either could play for the Cubs or take the buyout and become a free agent.

Nathaniel Brazill, left, hugs his attorney, Lance Richard, after Circuit Court Judge Richard Wennet announced Brazill's sentence Friday.

Teacher-killing teen gets 28 years in prison

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Wearing the same blank look he had on his face during his trial, 14-year-old Nathaniel Brazill was sentenced to 28 years in prison Friday for fatally shooting his favorite teacher between the eyes on the last day of school.

Brazill, who was tried as an adult, had faced at least 25 years behind bars and as much as life in prison for killing Barry Grunow at Lake Worth Middle School more than a year ago.

Wearing a bright red jumpsuit and shackles, the boy said nothing as Circuit Judge Richard Wennet handed down the sentence, which carries no possibility of parole or time off for good behavior.

"I can tell you he's pleased. Nathaniel just wanted to know if there is a light at the end of the tunnel," defense attorney Robert Ullrich said.

The sentence, just three years more than the legal minimum, shocked some relatives of the victim, who had warned that the boy is a danger to society and should be put away for the rest of his life.

The case — along with the life sentence given earlier this year to 14-year-old Lionel Tate, who said he imitating pro wrestlers when he beat a 6-year-old girl to death — has renewed criticism of a tough-on-crime Florida law that allows prosecutors to try juveniles as adults and subject them to mandatory prison sentences.

Brazill's lawyer said the boy will appeal and, after the process is complete, ask the governor for clemency if necessary. "I think the sentence was fair," Gov. Jeb Bush said in Jacksonville. "It really doesn't matter what I think so much as there is an appeals process. Lawyers for the boy will be able to make that appeal and the process will go forward as it normally does."

In imposing the sentence, the judge had to decide whether the teen could be rehabilitated. But he offered no explanation for how he arrived at the 28-year sentence.

The judge ordered the teen to take an anger management course and spend two years in a form of house arrest after doing his time in prison. He also received five years' probation.

Brazill was convicted in May of second-degree murder for killing the 35-year-old English teacher he called a "great man and a great teacher."

The boy had returned to school after being suspended by a counselor earlier that day for throwing water balloons. He shot Grunow after the teacher refused to let the seventh-grader talk to two girls in his class.

At his trial, Brazill had insisted that he only meant to scare the teacher and that the gun went off accidentally.

Prosecutor Marc Shiner had asked for a life sentence without parole Friday, saying, "That's the only way we can be sure he won't hurt someone again."

Democrat gains ambassadorship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hours after Tom Schieffer's nomination as ambassador to Australia was endorsed by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the full Senate confirmed the choice, enabling President Bush to name fellow Texas Rangers baseball team investors to get to work.

Schieffer can now be in place when Secretary of State Colin Powell and Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld meet Monday in Canberra with their Australian counterparts.

Schieffer, a Democrat, is a Dallas lawyer and brother of CBS Washington bureau chief Bob Schieffer. A former president of the Texas Rangers, he was a member of Bush's investment group that bought the Rangers in 1989.

Fellow Rangers investor Mercer Reynolds was approved by the committee Friday to become ambassador to Switzerland and Liechtenstein. Reynolds had invited Bush to join him and his investment firm partner, William DeWitt Jr., in the team purchase.

Of the 14 ambassadorial nominees approved by the committee Friday — including Bristol Myers Squibb chairman and chief executive officer, Charles A. Heimbold, Jr., of Connecticut, and former Republican National Committee Chairman Jim Nicholson — only Schieffer got swift action.

Heimbold, who is up for ambassador to Sweden, is also deputy chairman of the Board of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and is worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

Last year, when he held $205 million in stock and options, Bristol-Myers gave him stock then worth $24 million to keep him on the job past normal company retirement age this year.

In 1999, he earned $3.2 million and an additional $30 million from exercised options.

Nicholson is awaiting confirmation to be ambassador to the Vatican. Roger F. Noriega, longtime Latin America adviser to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the committee's top Republican, was endorsed as permanent representative to the Organization of American States with the rank of ambassador.

Other ambassador nominees whose names were sent to the Senate include:

- Stuart Bernstein of the District of Columbia, ambassador to Denmark.
- Sue M. Cobb of Florida, Jamaica.
- Russell F. Freeman of North Dakota, Belize.
- Michael E. Guest of South Carolina, Romania.
- Thomas C. Hubbard of Tennessee, Korea.
- Marie T. Huhtala of California, Malaysia.
- Franklin L. Lavin of Ohio, Singapore.
- Thomas J. Miller of Virginia, Greece.
- Larry C. Napper of Texas, Kazakhstan.

Armed man dies in Cincinnati police shooting

CINCINNATI (AP) — A white officer killed a black man in a gun battle Friday — the first fatal police shooting in Cincinnati since the city erupted in riots last spring.

There was no immediate unrest after the shooting, which both the police department and one of its chief critics in the black community said appeared to be justified.

Police said they were taking no special precautions in the aftermath.

Police Chief Thomas Streicher said Ricky Moore, 21, opened fire on Officer Thomas Haas, shooting twice before Haas returned fire. Haas was not hurt.

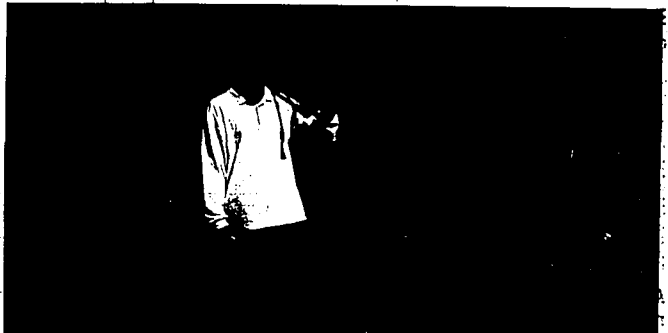

Moore had been warned several times not to fire; the police chief said.

"It was very, very intense. It was an extremely dangerous situation for the officer," he said.

In April, the shooting death of an unarmed black man by a white officer touched off the city's worst racial violence since the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King in 1968. Dozens of people were injured and more than 800 arrested in three days of violence.

The victim in the April shooting was shot after fleeing from officers trying to arrest him, mostly on traffic charges.

The Rev. Damon Lynch III, a black clergyman who criticized police after that slaying, said the latest shooting seemed justified.

"It would seem to make sense if you open fire on officers with anything... you're either going to jail or you're going to go down," Lynch told WLW-AM. Lynch is head of the Cincinnati Black United Front and a leader of a mayoral race-relations commission.

A woman who lives near the neighborhood where the shooting occurred said more police are needed on the street.

"Last night they handled the job in the manner they were supposed to," said the woman, who refused to give her name. "It just doesn't make sense where this crime is coming from. Someone is getting killed every day."

As of Thursday, a total of 73 shootings since the riots had left 85 people wounded or killed, compared with nine shootings and 11 victims for the same period last year. The city has had seven homicides in as many days.

Amtrak plans to cut jobs to fix financial position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak plans to cut its 2,900-person management staff through early retirement incentives in an attempt to improve the railway's finances, president George Warrington said Friday.

All management employees are eligible for the offers. Warrington did not say how many managers Amtrak hoped would leave through the restructuring program.

The incentive packages will be presented to employees next week.

Under orders from Congress to wean itself from federal operating subsidies, the national passenger railway will spend four to six months seeking ways "to eliminate overlapping operations, tighten cost controls and improve revenue opportunities," Warrington said in a statement.

Amtrak's four business units — Intercity, Amtrak West, Northeast Corridor and Mail and Express — will be consolidated under the direction of E.S.

Bagley Jr., a 27-year veteran of Amtrak.

The Transportation Department's inspector general, Kenneth Mead, told Congress Wednesday that Amtrak registered a cash loss of $405 million in the first eight months of fiscal 2001 — $21 million more than had been projected.

He and Javetta Hecker, who monitors Amtrak for the General Accounting Office, testified that they do not believe Amtrak will meet the December 2002 deadline set by Congress to become operationally self-sufficient.

At the same hearing, Warrington said the railway will make needed changes to meet the deadline, but he did not elaborate.

He said the railway will reduce its federal operating support from $318 million in 1999 to $59 million in the current fiscal year. That number must reach zero by the end of 2002 if Amtrak is to meet its mandate from Congress.

California city enacts 'living wage' requirement

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — This wealthy seaside community has become the first U.S. city to require private employers to pay a "living wage."

After several years of debate, the city this week adopted an ordinance that will require the city and its contractors, plus businesses in the downtown and beach areas, to pay workers $42.25 an hour, or $70.50 an hour if they provide health benefits. The state's minimum wage is $6.25 an hour.

The ordinance, adopted 5-2 by the City Council, takes effect next July. The battle now moves to the streets as a coalition of business groups tries to overturn the ordinance by placing it on the November ballot.

Opponents of the ordinance say it will force some businesses to close or to lay off the very workers the measure is supposed to help.

California deputies die after responding to call

INSKIP, Calif. — Two sheriff's deputies who had responded to a call about a shooting were found dead in a cabin, along with the suspected gunman.

Investigators tentatively identified the gunman as Rick Blacklow, who had stored a cache of weapons inside the cabin over the weekend.

Butte County Sheriff's Lt. Bruce Bates and Deputy Bill Hunter had gone to the cabin to investigate a call of shots fired

About three hours later, deputies filed their gear into the cabin and went inside and found the three bodies.

Workplace shootings claim one at Alabama plants

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Gunfire erupted at two industrial plants Friday, leaving one man dead, another wounded and two of the co-workers in custody.

There was no known link between the shootings. Television reports said the death at Dravo Lime Inc. followed an argument between two men over a pack of cigarettes, but police said they were still investigating the motive.

Kenneth Ray Cohill, 40, died after being shot in the chest with a small-caliber handgun inside a dressing area.

Co-worker Cecil Shields, 50, of Alabama was charged with murder after being stopped in his city, a few miles from the plant, police said.

About 35 miles away in St. Clair County, police said a man who lost his job opened fire on a supervisor at Trans-Cycle Industries. The victim was in stable condition in hospital.

James Ronald Roberson, 61, was charged with attempted murder in the wounding of Doug Church, Trans-Cycle's plant superintendent.

Judge: Woman can sue over dog-mauling death

SAN FRANCISCO — The lesbian partner of a woman maulled to death by dog in San Francisco won a surprising victory Friday when a judge said her wrongful-death suit could proceed to trial even though she is not a "surviving spouse" under the law.

The issue was whether the woman, Sharon Smith, had the legal standing to sue. Under California law, only surviving spouses or other relatives can bring wrongful-death claims.

But Superior Court Judge A. James Robertson II said that, because state law does not allow gay couples to marry, the surviving-spouse rule should not apply to same-sex couples. The judge agreed with Smith's attorney that the rule violates the equal protection clause of the California Constitution.

Died who shot down

Japanese admiral dies

TERRACONNE, Okla. — Rex T. Barber, a World War II fighter pilot who spent most of his life seeking sole credit for shooting down the bomber carrying the mastermind of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, has died at 84.

Barber, who had been a mint and hay farmer in recent years, died Thursday.

Barber was one of 16 pilots in specially equipped low-range P-38 Lightnings who were dispatched 400 miles on April 18, 1943, to intercept Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese Imperial Navy, over the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. American forces had broken a Japanese code to learn his flight plans.

Though the American Fighter Aces Association gave sole credit to Barber, the official U.S. Air Force record said that Barber shot off the tail of the Betty bomber carrying Yamamoto and set it on fire.

According to the Air Force record, pilot Tom Lanphier blasted the plane before it plunged into the jungles of Bougainville Island.

Pentagon employees ring up fraud instances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with 1.8 million credit cards, Pentagon employees went on a $9 billion shopping spree last year, a congressional investigators found, was filled with fraud.

Military personnel did personal shopping at Wal-Mart and the Home Depot, parried at Hooters and Bottoms UP nightclubs and charged personal items like DVD players, computers, and pet supplies to their government cards, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press. Congress intends to make the materials public as a hearing Monday.

In the past two years alone, there have been more than 500 purchase fraud cases filed involving military credit cards, according to information gathered by Sen. Charles Grassley's office. One bank company has been forced to write off $59 million in fraudulent debts from military cards.

The rapid proliferation of credit cards to Pentagon employees "is like giving people keys to the federal treasury," Grassley, R-Iowa, said Friday.

In the past, Pentagon employees needed a punch invoice to trigger a fraudulent government check, but that obstacle is gone, he said. "Credit cards provide a shortcut to the cash pile."

Reviewed by Grassley and Steve Horn, R-Calif., chairman of the House Government Reform subcommittee on government efficiency; and the General Accounting Office found the Pentagon has inadequate controls on the cards it issues for off-duty purchases of travel and auto.

Grassley said purchase credits were many times more than $20,000 to $100,000, are being issued without credit checks on the employees receiving them, and purchases are not being checked for legitimacy. "There are no controls, no responsibilities, and no accountability," he said.

The Pentagon, along with other federal agencies, began issuing credit cards to employees in the 1990s to make purchases more efficient. In 2000, the cards were used to make 10 million purchases and $9 billion in debt.

Defense officials say the cards have significantly sped up purchases and eliminated red tape, and the idea shouldn't be judged solely by instances of fraud. They promise to be responsive to problems that will be discussed Monday at the hearing by House subcommittee.

"This administration, and specifically Secretary (Donald) H. Rumsfeld, has made fiscal responsibility a hallmark of the Pentagon spokesman Susan Hansen said. "We will have representatives attending the hearing so we can hear the committee's concerns, answer their questions and make sure that any concerns are fully addressed."

Consultants' report maps strategy

Document lays out ideas for downtown revitalization efforts

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It's test time for Twin Falls.

A test of determination and widespread cooperation. Moscow-based consulting firm Tom Hudson Co. - under contract with the city, Urban Renewal and Historic Old Towne's business improvement district - has created a business development guide outlining ways for the historic district to market itself to new audiences, overhaul public spaces and roadways and bring more jobs and dollars to downtown.

The Hudson firm, along with consultants from Hingson Roach Group and Urban Design Studio, made several visits to Twin Falls, interviewing dozens of individuals, taking photographs and holding public meetings.

Hudson delivered the results this month: more than 150 pages of analysis and action plan.

But the study will do little good if it gathers dust.

The business development guide, which says it is "devoted to systematic action in the immediate future," outlines tasks for teams of volunteers; businesses; Historic Old Towne's BID and its committees and executive director; the city and its Urban Renewal Agency; contracted professionals; the College of Southern Idaho; the local arts and cultural commissions; the historical society; the local farmers' market managers; Region IV Development; the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce; the Idaho Transportation Department; the South Central Idaho Tourism and Recreation Development Association; service clubs; senior citizens; and the University of Idaho.

BID to hold annual meeting

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Next week marks a milestone for downtown.

The Historic Old Towne Twin Falls annual budget hearing is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday at The Ballroom - but it's about more than merely money.

On the agenda are unveiling of the 2002 business improvement district budget, speeches from city leaders on the focus and direction for the coming year and plans for the recently completed Tom Hudson Co. development guide.

Last September, consultant Tom Hudson came to town and returned several times over seven months to help the BID and other city organizations formulate plans to renovate the historic areas of Twin Falls over the next five years.

Displaying visual aids along with discussions of Hudson's objectives will take up much of the meeting, BID Chairman Ron Thompson said.

"Ideally, downtown as a district needs to be a cohesive product," the consultants wrote. "Businesses and organizations must act cooperatively and effectively to be successful."

The recommendations include:

- Target downtown's strategic markets: downtown workers, downtown residents, mid- to upper-middle-income families within 50 miles and mid- to upper-middle-income urban seniors; and secondarily, young adult urban singles, business travelers and visiting retirees.

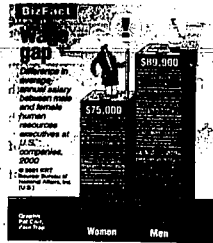

- Support businesses that are candidates for expansion or diversification. Work to retain key destination business that draw people to downtown, such as Everton Mattress Factory, Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital and Vickers Western Stores.

- Encourage outdoor dining and entertainment.

- Extend business hours.

- Investigate shuttle options for students, tourists and seniors.

Bolse Cascade sets quarterly dividend

BURLEY - Bolse Cascade Corp. on Friday announced a regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents per common share, payable Oct. 15 to shareholders of record Oct. 1. In addition, a regular semi-annual dividend of $1.659375 on the company's convertible preferred stock, Series D, was declared. That dividend is payable Dec. 28 to shareholders of record Dec. 13, said the Boise-based company, whose Corrugated Container Operations plant in Burley is a major Minigassia employer.

Ameristar Casinos Inc. names senior counsel

JACKPOT, Nev. - Ameristar Casinos Inc., a Las Vegas-based gaming company with Jackpot casinos, appointed Jason Schulhofer as senior counsel. He will oversee litigation and claims and contract drafting and negotiation affecting the company's operations. In addition, Schulhofer will oversee intellectual property management and protection, and will counsel management on operational business matters. "The expansion of our department exemplifies the dramatic growth experienced by Ameristar in the past two years," Senior Vice President of Legal Affairs Gordon R. Kanofsky said. "Jason will broaden our legal team by significantly enhancing our capabilities to supervise litigation and manage risk in our contractual relations."

Before joining Ameristar, Schulhofer spent about six years in private practice, mostly with the Las Vegas firm Kirby R. Wells and Associates. His areas of concentration were civil litigation, including complex commercial litigation, insurance defense and other debtor-creditor relations, and commercial transactions.

American General profit rises, net falls on charges

NEW YORK - American General Corp., one of the largest U.S. life and annuity insurers, said its second-quarter operating income increased, but reported a net loss due to charges surrounding its pending sale to American International Group, the world's largest insurer.

Houston-based American General reported second-quarter operating income of $360 million, or 71 cents per diluted share, compared with $325 million, or 64 cents per diluted share, a year ago.

Including charges, the insurer said it lost $312 million, or 62 cents per diluted share. These results compare with earned net income of $34 million, or 64 cents per diluted share a year ago.

When American General accepted AIG's $23 billion bid in May, the insurer was obligated to pay Prudential PLC a $600 million breakup fee, since the UK's second largest insurer had made a previous offer to buy American General. American General took on a $425 million charge related to this termination fee.

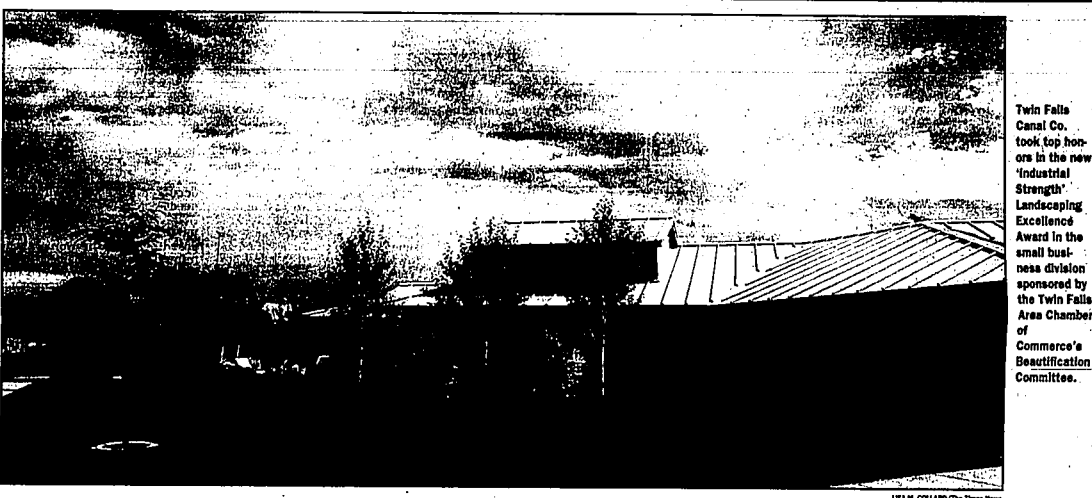

The Houston insurer also faced net investment losses of $198 million as the company adjusted its book to prepare for the completion of its sale to AIG.

Finally, American General had to pay a $49 million charge due to changes in accounting rules for collateralized debt obligations.

As AIG said Thursday in its own earnings report, American General expects the acquisition to close sometime in August, as does all the states approve the deal.

BUSINESS BEAUTY

Twin Falls Canal Co. took top honors in the new 'Industrial Strength' Landscaping Excellence Award in the small business division sponsored by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's Beautification Committee.

Twin Falls area chamber honors landscaping efforts

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - A precision-plant manufacturer and a local canal company claimed the first awards in a new contest that aims to dress up the industrial areas of town.

A manufacturer's customers may never see the grass and greenery outside its plant.

But an industrial business' landscaping has economic importance nevertheless, said Janet Neel, a Twin Falls accountant and chairwoman of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's Beautification Committee.

Attractive landscaping, communicates success, and that can help bring new employers to town, Neel said.

So the Beautification Committee created a new "Industrial Strength" Landscaping Excellence Award, patterned after the chamber's existing landscaping award but with a focus on industrial areas.

Cosponsored by the city, the

"The Beautification Committee hopes the community will thank these businesses for the generous effort they make to enhance our town."

- Janet Neel, committee chairwoman new annual award went to one large and one small business in industrial areas of town: Seastrom Manufacturing Co. Inc. in the large division, and Twin Falls Canal Co. in the small.

Honorable mention went to Specialty Painting Inc.

There were nine contestants for the "Industrial Strength" contest's first year, Neel said.

"The Beautification Committee hopes the community will thank the generous effort they make to enhance our town," she said.

The chamber's Beautification Committee also judged another landscaping award - the Business is Blooming Award is in its eighth year.

Business is Blooming winners for 2001 are: Kimberly Nurseries in the container division, the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation in the small in-ground division and Kimberly Nurseries in the large in-ground division.

Honorable mention went to the Office complex of Waddell & Reed Inc., Dr. Alan Olmstead and the Idaho Housing and Finance Association.

"There were 19 contestants this year, and the competition was close," Neel said.

Drop in worldwide production pushes up prices for wheat

The Associated Press

The golden hue in Idaho's wheat fields is beginning to look a lot more like money for growers who have suffered through several poor years including a worldwide grain glut.

Prices are rebounding and appear likely to continue the trend following a global crop failure this year.

The prices of a year ago were 25-year lows caused by oversupply and glutted demand," said Jonathan Schlueter of Pacific Northwest Grain and Feed in Portland, Ore. "By comparison, the 2001 crop production, are low in the U.S. and supplies are being depleted. That does influence price."

The price in Portland for soft white wheat this week was $3.60 a bushel, up a dollar from a year ago and an increase of 20 cents from only three weeks ago.

American farmers producing a monumental crop saw prices collapse in 1997, amid the Asian economic crisis and record wheat production worldwide.

This year, however, wide-spread drought or relentless rain in some nations has slashed production.

China - the world's largest wheat producer and consumer - will see its crop yield dive by about 10 million tons from a year ago. In this country, the crop is forecast at 11 percent below 2000.

vest has been completed, so the cards are still being dealt," Schlueter said. "But weather conditions are very good for harvest, allowing for the ripening of that grain."

In Idaho's southern tier, farmers are glad to even harvest a crop following frost and then the drought.

"It's dry and dusty," said Randy Knighting of Blackfoot as he worked on his combine. "The wheat is better than I expected with it being as dry as it has been."

On the first land Knighting cut, he averaged between 25 to 30 bushels to the acre on his white winter wheat. In the past he has averaged between 110 to 120 bushels to the acre, but that was irrigated wheat.

New Micron plant to produce electronic templates in Boise

The Associated Press

BOISE - Micron Technology Inc. plans to open a 90,000-square-foot manufacturing plant on its Boise campus next year in a joint venture agreement with DuPont Photomasks Inc. of Tega.

A final agreement is expected to be signed in the next six weeks, Micron spokesman Sean Mahoney said.

Micron will build the $30 million to $40 million plant just east of its current campus and then will lease the facility to the joint venture. Equipment and supplies would cost more than $100 million for production of photomasks, which are reusable template discs that contain electronic patterns.

The new plant will employ about 150 workers, with most being Micron employees and fewer than 20 being hired by DuPont, said Mark Durcan, Micron's chief technology officer and vice president of research and development. Photomasks are used to project electronic patterns onto silicon wafers that are made into computer memory chips. As the industry moves toward smaller chips, requiring pattern lines narrower than the wavelength of light, leading-edge technology in photomasks has become critical in this highly competitive industry.

As we continue to shrink our devices smaller and smaller, we're shrinking our geometries smaller than the wavelength of light," Durcan said Thursday. "These devices are critical to our advanced processes roadmap."

Micron has been in the photomask business since 1996 as a partner in the DPI Reticle Technology Center in Texas, a joint venture between Micron, Dupont, AMD and Motorola. That five-year partnership is set to expire at the end of 2002.

Durcan said the new plant will be completed by next fall and producing photomasks by the end of 2002. Micron spends about $50 million annually on photomasks.

NASDAQ tests lows, tech investors' nerves

NEW YORK (AP) - The Nasdaq composite index appears poised to go where market analysts figured and investors feared it would - down to its low. But a drop might be all bad for the Nasdaq, which has fallen around 2,000 since April. "The market has been hovering at the low end of the range, unable to put in any real kind of bounce. It looks like we might need to go a little further down," said Scott Bleier, chief investment strategist at Prime Charter, of the tech-focused index. It's normal for the major stock indexes to drop back to their most recent lows - which for the Nasdaq was 1,619.58, reached during trading on April 4 - before heading higher again. If the Nasdaq doesn't crash below that level, it's the expectation that it will - investors could get a psychological lift that will get them buying, and help send the Nasdaq climbing again.

Looking for the technology sector to lead the overall market higher. The Nasdaq "has been blocking and tackling and struggling. But it has never tested that low," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst for Raymond, James and Associates. "The process has been tedious." For the week, the Nasdaq was almost unchanged, slipping 0.30 or 0.01 percent. It rose 6.11 to 2,029.07 Friday. The Dow fell 159.98, or 1.5 percent, for the week after falling 38.96 to 10,416.67 Friday. The S&P 500 index lost 5.03 for the week, a 0.4 percent drop. It gained 2.85 Friday to 1,205.82. The Russell 2000 index, which tracks the performance of small-company stocks, slipped 0.06 to 485.01 Friday. It ended the week down 2.92, or 0.6 percent. The Wilshire Associates Equity Index, the market value of New York Stock Exchange and Nasdaq issues was $11.165 trillion Friday, down $47.170 billion from last week. A year ago, the index was $13.196 trillion.

Government opposition kills airline mega-merger

CHICAGO (AP) - United Airlines and US Airways ways announced Friday they called off their merger after the Justice Department said it would sue to block the acquisition, according to airline statements.

UAL Corp., the parent of United Airlines, agreed to pay the $50 million termination fee provided for in the merger agreement.

The Justice Department said Friday the proposed acquisition, which would have been the largest-ever airline purchase, would have reduced competition, raised fares and harmed consumers.

"UAL Corporation intends to work with US Airways to determine the appropriate steps that need to be taken now that US Airways has acknowledged that the merger with United will not go forward," United said in a statement. US Airways said it was disappointed that the deal was called off.

"We nevertheless must respect the Justice Department's decision," US Airways said in a statement.

Vacationing families, corporations and the federal government, which spends millions on air travel, would pay the price if the merger were allowed to go forward, federal government officials said.

"While mergers can further competition, this one does not," said Attorney General John Ashcroft. "If this acquisition were allowed to proceed, millions of consumers... would have less choice but to pay higher fares and accept lower quality air service."

Shares of JDS Uniphase fell 12.0%, or 12 percent, to $3.30 in morning trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading had been halted Thursday after a hacker broke into a computer system and stole a copy of its earnings release.

The company, like other high-tech companies that focus on communications components, has been hit hard as the aggressive rollout of network infrastructure slowed down amid the economic downturn.

A total of 9,000 jobs had already been cut as of June 30. An additional 7,000 reductions will take place in the first quarter. When complete, the company will have shed 35 percent of its workforce since February.

"We are now building what we believe will be a stronger, more integrated company," Greg Dougherty, JDS' chief operating officer, said Thursday. He called the steps "painful and difficult but necessary."

JDS Uniphase had about 29,000 workers at the start of the year.

Boise tabloid newspaper finds buyer BOISE (AP) - A tentative agreement has been reached with Mark "Bingo" and Sally Barnes of Las Vegas to purchase the Boise Weekly from City of Roses Newspaper Co. of Portland, Ore., publisher Sean Flaherty.

The newspaper's owners announced in May that they were seeking a buyer for the weekly tabloid. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed, but Flaherty said on Thursday that the deal would be finalized in about a month.

He said Barnes would assume the title of publisher, but that Flaherty would remain with the newspaper in some capacity. "I think it will be great for the paper," Flaherty said. "They are really good people, and I'm excited to get them back in town."

Barnes has a degree in journalism from Texas A&M University and has worked for nearly a decade for such media outlets as the Dallas Observer, Inline Skateboard and Collector's Weekly. His most recent job was director of creative services for the Greenspun Media Group's newspaper division in Las Vegas.

Sally Barnes is a certified public accountant with a master's degree from the American Graduate School of International Management. Flaherty said the currently is manager of information systems for National Alliance.

Basketball star considers law enforcement career

OXNARD, Calif. — Shaquille O'Neal recently expressed an interest in a law enforcement career after basketball. Now he's got an offer that includes a four-day work week, a customized uniform and a sport utility patrol vehicle.

"I would like to extend an invitation to you to come to Oxnard and see what we have to offer with respect to a position with our department," Oxnard Police Chief Art Lopez said in a letter dated Wednesday to the 29-year-old Lakers center.

The job comes with a few perks. Lopez said the department would special order his uniform and equipment to ensure the right fit for the 7-foot-1, 315-pounder.

O'Neal also would get his choice of patrol vehicles.

"Further, with your affinity toward Lincoln Navigators, we plan to special order one with extra legroom and a moon-roof over the driver's side that should serve nicely as your patrol vehicle."

Although Lopez's letter was in fun, he encouraged the basketball star to visit the city, about 60 miles northwest of Los Angeles, and ride along with an officer.

People in the news

The bodyguard's gun fell from his holster and clattered across the sidewalk as he tried to move aside photographers waiting for the 19-year-old prince, who had been dining at a Vietnamese restaurant with friends.

The officer quickly recovered the pistol.

"We are aware of the incident and there was no risk to any individual," said a spokesman for the Metropolitan Police, which provides royal bodyguards.

IF JULY 28TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... you are an independent thinker, romantic to degree of passion. You are a firm believer in "love at first sight."

Leo, Aquarius individuals play major roles in your life, could have these letters, initials in names: A, S, J. During August your outlook on life changes, and there will be a new kind of romance. During September, focus on partnership, marriage.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Don't play games with emotions. What begins as playful flirtation could get too hot to handle. The "other party" may not be legally free to play.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Lie low, play waiting game. Details have yet to unravel; you might get complete story tonight. Leo, Scorpio and another Taurus play major roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your kind of day! Give full play to intellectual curiosity. You are very attractive, mentally and physically. Take notes, especially of dreams.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Attention revolves around where you live, marital status. Be diplomatic, but hold tight to principles. You will receive gift, luxury item involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spotlight on real estate, value of land. Check measurements, financial claims. On personal level, protect self in emotional clinches. Deception exists!

HOROSCOPE

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stand pat on offer to buy or sell. You are in driver's seat whether you're aware of it or not. Short trip involves relative who offers "tons of advice."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Added recognition due. What you held on to becomes valuable. Don't give up ship, speak up for beliefs. Reunion at dockside tonight will be dramatic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take cold plunge into future! Focus on original thinking, daring and pioneering spirit. Cycle is such that you will be at right place at special moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Focus on partnership, marital status and division of property. Refuse to be talked into or out of vital transaction. You have legal right for fair play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get almost everything you want and dreamed about. Light touch wins. You gain admirers and influence people. Broken promises will be mended, Gemini featured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Roadblock removed; path is clear or you. Career gets boost. You'll be given position of authority. Taurus, Leo and Scorpio play outstanding roles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Emphasis on movement, travel, reading, writing and teaching. You have become a major player; know it and act as if aware of it.

Floodwaters hit West Virginia again after record deluge earlier this month

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Streams returned to their banks Friday, allowing residents and officials to begin calculating the damage from the second severe flood to hit West Virginia this month.

Thunderstorms that dumped as much as 1.5 inches of rain per hour are being blamed for flooding homes in seven counties, washing away at least five private bridges and sending an undetermined amount of coal-polluted water into the Big Coal River.

Thursday's rains drenched many of the same areas trying to recover from July 8's record flooding. Two people were killed, 1,500 homes destroyed and 3,500 damaged in those floods. The Federal Emergency Management Agency estimates recovery efforts will cost about $180 million.

"You just start putting your life back together and it gets washed away again," David Neal, deputy director for emergency services in Fayette County, said Friday. "After three weeks of this, I'm pretty tired."

Several homes were flooded in Minden and access to Pax and Mount Hope was cut off Thursday night by high water, according to the state Office of Emergency Services. Ten families in the Putnam County town of Hurricane were evacuated.

"I am heartsick," Pax Mayor Shirley Roberts told the Charleston Gazette. "It's hitting the same places in the exact same identical way."

Fifty families from the Kilsyth area were evacuated after their homes were flooded for the second time this month, and people in another 50 homes were stranded when four private, one-lane bridges were washed out in Boone County, officials said. A fifth bridge was washed away in McDowell County.

"It seems like every time it rains, we get a flood," Boone County Emergency Services Director Jim Lambert said. "We can't deal with any more rain."

An undetermined amount of blackwater spilled from an Elk Run Coal Co. operation into the Big Coal River. Blackwater is a mix of coal dust, dirt and rock.

State Department of Environmental Protection inspectors were inspecting coal mines in the area Friday. Residents claim runoff from mines contributed to the July 8 floods.

"All the ones we could get to were in pretty good shape," said the DEP's Jeff McCormick.

An unidentified bicyclist watches Fayette Street turn into a river of muddy water Thursday in Mount Hope, W. Va. Rain fell sporadically across the state throughout the day, with some areas getting more than 1.5 inches in a one-hour period.

Pop theology thrives while mainline media suffers

Last year, the sale of Christian merchandise - books, educational materials, movies, videos and trinkets - resulted in total revenue of $4 billion.

Want to get rich quick? Write a book like "The Prayer of Jabez," published by Mutanoman Press, a runaway best seller that has probably made the author, Bruce Wilkinson, a millionaire. It follows a line of things that says Jesus will make you wealthy if you ask him correctly. Not exactly a popular theme in historic theological circles. But independent and evangelical presses are counting on a few great publishing ventures, such as "The Prayer of Jabez," to push their revenue stream over the top. And if it makes a few people wealthy in the process, that's just a nice byproduct of successful Christian publishing and marketing.

Publishing is a strange business because, while independent and evangelical publishers are laughing all the way to the bank, mainline Christian publishers are fighting for their lives. Just recently, Augsburg Fortress, the publishing arm of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, announced a major reorganization and a cutback of 45 employees out of 25 at its corporate offices, including significant leadership changes. Augsburg finished 2000 with a net loss of $3.037 million and showed a loss of $2.305 million for the first quarter of 2001. Augsburg Fortress hopes flattening its leadership team will clear the decks for a substantial future that will not only serve the largest Lutheran denomination in the United States but also reach into ecumenical markets.

It's true that every mainline denominational publisher has faced major cutbacks and reorganizations in the past few years. Most of those publishers are now content to serve their denomination and reach into other markets only if the opportunities present themselves. The Southern Baptists have indicated a swerve in that direction by changing their name from the Sunday School Board to Lifeway. The Christian Reformed Church's publishing group is now known as Faith Alive. The Presbyterians and the United Methodists are both regrouping.

Rachael Riensche, vice president of corporate affairs for Augsburg Fortress Publishers, says the pain is being felt across the mainline market. Riensche said the wide problem is that mainline publishers are asked to serve their denominations and, at the same time, they've been eager to serve an ecumenical market. "Now, I think, we're committed to serving the core market - the Lutheran market - and if those materials find a home in other denominations, then we're committed to that," she said.

Some church leaders say it's not fair to compare mainline publishing to independent publishing because there is not the same commitment to pursue traditional understandings of doctrine. In addition to "The Prayer of Jabez," recent big sellers in the Christian market include the controversial "Bible Code," "The Celestine Prophecy," the "Left Behind" novels, any number of end-time prophecy books and demonic-possession novels.

Another reality is that some independent religious publishers will pour money into the marketing of a book, knowing the postmodern mind will almost always latch onto slick advertising. "Like it or not, marketing is the way of the world," says Tony Jones, a youth minister and author of "Postmodern Youth Ministry" (Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House). "You can't avoid that. And we all have to remember the postmodern mind will do anything for a new experience. That's why some of these books are so popular; they offer new experiences."

Twin Falls church performs river baptisms

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Sunday, 10 a.m. Clear skies. Light breeze, 70 degrees. Shall we gather at the river? Well, OK, the lake. Last week, more than 250 people from Heritage Alliance Church brought their lawn chairs and picnic baskets to Dierkes Lake and settled in to witness a river baptism.

Someone began strumming a guitar and singing softly: "Only by grace you may enter; only by grace you may stand." Then Pastor Jim Evans talked about new life. And 12 people of varying ages stepped into the water to bear witness to their decisions to start fresh.

Some had prepared short testimonies of their faith: "I was raised in a Christian home." ... "On June 26 of this year, I gave my heart to Christ." ... "Satan, you lose; God wins."

There were a few tears, and lots of applause.

"Upon your profession of faith in Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior, I now baptize you in the name of the father, in the name of his son Jesus Christ, and in the name of the Holy Spirit," Evans declared, as he lowered new converts into the lake. "I was born in USSR," began Victor Poznyakov, in faltering English. "My wife and I were alone, without friends, without God. One-half year ago, we attended church ..."

Poznyakov and his family suffered persecution before the breakup of the Soviet Union, Evans explained. His wife was baptized in April. The Poznyakovs, like others at Heritage Alliance, have been taught that baptism is one of the first steps of discipleship for the new Christian.

"When people make their own choices to follow Jesus, we encourage them to be baptized," said Evans on Tuesday. "Then they attend discipleship classes." The Christian and Missionary Alliance denomination views water baptism as a symbolic step of obedience, in tune with Matthew 28's Great Commission to "go ye therefore" and baptize. Evans said baptism identifies the believer with the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, who was baptized in the Jordan River by John the Baptist (Matthew 3) but the real power occurs when people accept Jesus into their lives and are "saved."

For example, Edgar Hertel may have been baptized Sunday, Evans noted, but he was saved at a Promise Keepers gathering in Seattle. "Through the ages, various modes of baptism, from sprinkling to pouring to immersion, have been practiced. Some churches baptize infants. Others, like Heritage Alliance, wait until the person is old enough to understand the Gospel. Alliance churches immerse (submerge in water), taking their cue from the Greek word "baptizo," or "immerse." But Alliance churches, unlike some other denominations, do accept Christians who have not been immersed into their membership.

Heritage Alliance Church also views its clergy as "quippers," as defined in Ephesians 4, and allows other Christians, in addition to Jessica Graham was emotional when she was baptized by Pastor Jim Evans at Dierkes Lake on July 22. During Graham's testimony, she said that everyone has trouble, but she has had the "Elizabeth Taylor special," so her baptism represents an important new beginning for her. Below, David Carlen briefly dunks Kendall Johnson under the waters of Dierkes with the words, "Upon your profession of faith in Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior, I now baptize you in the name of the father, in the name of his son Jesus Christ and in the name of the Holy Spirit."

Evans, to perform baptisms. Several of Sunday's baptisms, in fact, were performed by the church's youth minister, his lay assistant and a small group leader.

"We encourage kids to baptize their children too," Evans said, "for the bonding experience." This wasn't Evans' first "river" baptism, although he also baptizes people in his church building.

"We have done baptisms in the Snake River and before at Dierkes Lake," he recalled. "Everyone asks about the temperature of the water, and the water was warm this time, especially compared to the baptisms I've done in Riley Creek."

That would be cold Riley Creek, as in 58 degrees year-round. "If that doesn't wash those sins away, it just might freeze them to death."

Stem cell debate gets 'principle' cards on the table

By Jeffrey Weiss
The Dallas Morning News

The emotional ammunition seems to be all on one side of the argument this time.

One camp brings out Mary Tyler Moore and a cadre of winsome young diabetics waiting for a cure. The other camp's obvious visual is an invisible speck in a petri dish.

The intense debate over federal funding of stem cell research is only the latest example in a series of unusual collisions of ethics, emotion and public policy. What late-term abortions and the "morning-after" pill are to opposite sides of the abortion debate, what Timothy McVeigh was to consideration of capital punishment - that is what embryonic stem cell research is for opponents of this kind of genetic science.

"It has none of the complicating factors. It's the pure case," said Dr. Lawrence Hinman, director of the Values Institute of the University of San Diego. "It gets the 'principle' cards on the table."

Supporters of the research say it may be the road to a cure for many common, debilitating diseases, including diabetes, Alzheimer's disease and Parkinson's disease. President Bush has been agonizing for weeks over a decision whether or not to oppose federal funding of some embryonic stem cell research.

Public opinion is divided. According to an ABC News/Rollins survey, taken three weeks ago, about six of 10 Americans favor the research and favor government money for it.

"I'm not underestimating the power of the emotional argument," said the Rev. Robert Sirico, president of the Michigan-based Acton Institute think tank. "Jesus used parables. You do have to use symbols to reach some people." But as conservative commentator Ramesh Ponnuru put it in the National Review: "Either conception results in a new human being deserving of legal protection, or it doesn't. No amount of sophisticated hair-splitting over bioethics is going to work if it ignores that awkward, obvious question."

The embryos produced in the laboratory that embryonic stem cells are taken from don't fit the usual description of human-

HEAVEN CAN'T WAIT

Hollywood actress takes kaleidoscopic ministry on road

By Roy Rivenburg
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD - If it's true that the Lord works in mysterious ways, then Exhibit A might be inside the CBS commissary in Studio City.

There, dressed in a glittering rhinestone choker, clingy black blouse and indigo slacks, Dyan Cannon stands in the glow of a spotlight, a clutch of bodies lying at her feet. It's almost midnight, and things are winding down at her latest God's Party, a kaleidoscope of gospel and pop music, prayer, dancing, storytelling and Pentecostal-style faith healing.

It's a surreal experience: Across from the sound stage where "Will & Grace" is taped, an actress known for her sex-kitten roles in "Ally McBeal" and "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" is invoking the power of Jesus to literally knock people off their feet.

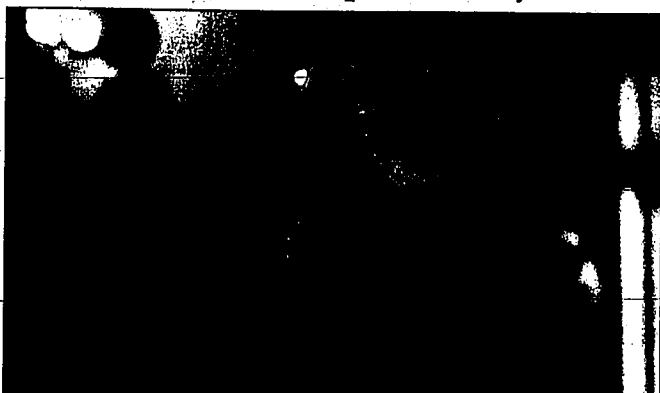

For Cannon, the ministry caps a personal and spiritual odyssey that began in childhood and covers three Academy Award nominations, a bizarre marriage to Gary Grant and dalliances with nearly every self-help fad known to man - from watermelon diets and hypnosis to LSD and climbing inside a Elvis van and pounding its walls.

Now, with two new films and a sitcom role in "Three Sisters" as a retired Playboy bunny, she takes her ministry on the road, franchising God's Party to cities across the United States.

When CNN's Larry King visited one of the parties in April, he came away dumbfounded.

"What happened to you?" he blurted. "You're a Jewish person."

Perched on a sofa in her high-rise Los Angeles condo, the sixty-something actress talks, as a pet Chihuahua named Jeepers

"It just happened. I can't heal a fly, but I'm willing to lend myself to whatever God wants me to do," says Dyan Cannon of her new ministry, a mixture of gospel and pop music, prayer, dancing, storytelling and Pentecostal-style faith healing.

Creepters ricochet around the room. Candles flicker in every corner.

"This was not my plan," she says of GPDC&U, her shorthand for God's Party With Dyan Cannon and You. "My plan, since the age of 4 in Tacoma, Wash., was to star in movies and TV."

Raised by a Jewish mother and Baptist father, she remembers singing "Jesus Loves Me" on the way to synagogue. As an adult, she wanted nothing to do with God. But in the late 1960s or early '70s, she went to the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles to hear faith healer Kathryn Kuhlman and remembers being thrown to the ground by a mysterious wind. Then someone introduced her to Lily Cavelli, a British-born poet, painter and self-described spiritual adviser to the stars.

Says Cannon: "I wanted to find a love that lasts." After seeking happiness through fame, fortune and men, "I knew my life had hit a dead end."

She and Cavelli began meeting five days a week, poring over the Bible and various spiritual precepts.

Matthew Barnett, a friend who coposters the Los Angeles Dream Center (Assemblies of God), concedes that Cannon's theology lacks depth but says "that's not her role." Her mission is to "encourage people to have faith and hope," and then allow more traditional churches or mentors to nurture that belief.

True enough, says Chap Clark, a professor at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, but celebrity preachers can easily veer off course theologically unless they surround themselves with knowledgeable Christians who "aren't afraid to tell them the truth."

Cannon admits she is baffled and even spooked by the healings: "I certainly didn't seek it out. It just happened. I can't heal a fly, but I'm willing to lend myself to whatever God wants me to do."

Actress's life off screen involves faith, kids' camps

By Ken Garfield
The Charlotte Observer

FLAT ROCK, N.C. - She goes by two names, and leads two lives. Around Asheville, she's Rose Qualley - mother of three, faithful church-goer, active in charitable circles, getting ready to build a Tudor-style home in fashionable Billmore Forest. Everywhere else, she's the movie star with long, dark, curly hair and a smile that is part sexy, part girl-next-door.

Prepare to plunk down $7.50 for any one of the three movies she has coming out, plus a fourth on HBO. Turn on the TV and there she is laughing at Bill Murray in "Groundhog Day." Click, there she is making goo-goo eyes at John Travolta in "Michael." Click again and there she is selling L'Oréal to women drawn to the beauty of celebrity.

The face behind the makeup, of course is Andie MacDowell. But that's only half the story. Get past the great looks, popular movies and all that star power and what you have is a 43-year-old woman who'd just as soon be home in Asheville.

At Andie's Camp for Kids, where youngsters with diabetes come to the North Carolina mountains for a week of fun and games, the kids have a different reaction when they meet their benefactor at the climbing wall...

"SHE HAS A FIGHT SCENE WITH MISS PIGGY!" shrieks 9-year-old Olivia Cullipher-of-Mebane, giving thumbs up to MacDowell's cameo in "Muppets from Space." A star with a larger ego might have been hurt that no one mentioned her breakthrough role as a repressed wife in the 1989 "Sex, Lies and Videotape." Or her star turn as Hugh Grant's leading lady in the lovable 1994

Andie MacDowell

comedy, "Four Weddings and a Funeral."

But about the time she starts cackling like she did in the 1999 Muppet movie, it's clear MacDowell is OK with being famous opposite Miss Piggy. She hugs the child and brags, "Hey, I can make some really good chocolate-chip cookies."

Working through the Ruth and Billy Graham Children's Health Center, she sponsors separate summer camps for children with diabetes, cancer and asthma. If you grew up in Gaffney, S.C., a child of divorce who helped care for a mother troubled by alcohol, stardom cannot blind you to what matters most.

MacDowell dropped out of Winthrop University in Rock Hill, S.C., in the late '70s to pursue a modeling career. Today, she is happy to live far from the glare - first on a ranch near Missoula, Mont., with her then-husband, former model Paul Qualley, and now as a divorcee raising three children in Asheville. MacDowell prefers not talking about the divorce.

MacDowell limits her film work to five months a year, which gives her the other seven months for her favorite role: Rose, dedicated mother and devoted Christian. She spends time with her four siblings and father, all of whom live within a couple hours of Asheville. (Her mother died when she was 23.) She dotes on her children - Justin, 14, Rainey, 12, and Sarah Margaret, 6. Raised Episcopal, she's a regular at Central United Methodist Church in Asheville.

Church president tells Mormons to welcome non-Mormons to celebration

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Mormon church President Gordon Hinckley said followers celebrating their pioneer past should not ignore their duty to befriend non-Mormons.

"We must not be clamish. We must never adopt a holier-than-thou attitude," he told a crowd of 20,000 at a Pioneer Day Commemoration Concert Sunday at the church's Conference Center.

The leader of the 11-million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints noted that both Salt Lake City and the state have become more religiously and culturally diverse since Mormon pioneers were led by Brigham Young into the Salt Lake Valley on July 24, 1847. The 91-year-old church leader also noted that the 2002 Winter Olympics in Utah will draw people from around the world.

"I plead with our people to welcome them, to befriend them, to mingle with them, to associate with them in the promulgation of good causes," he said. "We are all sons and daughters of God."

Priest's confession: Catholic law is tested, amid questions over confession in New York murder case

By Tom Hays
The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The Rev. Joseph Towle saw himself as a "street priest" on a mission to get hoodlums to cleanse their souls. But last week in federal court, it was Towle's turn to make a confession.

For 12 years, he said, he did not tell anyone that a teen-ager had admitted to a murder for which two others are now serving time.

Towle, 65, testified that he kept quiet because he considered the 1989 confession by Jesus Fornes confidential. But when the priest learned his heart-to-heart talk could be central to an appeal by the two men, who say they were falsely convicted in the 1987 slaying, he questioned whether it was a sacramental confession as defined by Roman Catholic law. He reached the conclusion that it wasn't, even though he had absolved Fornes of his sin.

Besides lending high drama to the case, the priest's decision to come forward has posed the question of what constitutes a confession in the Roman Catholic Church.

Prosecutors oppose the request for a new trial, saying eyewitness accounts and other evidence prove the two defendants are the killers. They also say that Fornes' words are a theologically valid confession and are thus inadmissible in court under a state law establishing the "clergy-penitent privilege."

Under the law, the privilege

The Rev. Joseph Towle leaves New York Federal Court Tuesday after a federal judge threw out Jose Morales' 1988 murder conviction. Towle testified that another man, not Morales, had confessed to him that he had committed the murders.

can be waived if the confessor agrees. However, Fornes is dead; he was killed four years ago.

A federal judge is expected to rule soon on whether the two men deserve a new trial. Across the country, state courts have generally ruled that priests and other clergy are not required to disclose admissions made by congregants. The disclosure by Towle was cleared beforehand by the Archdiocese of New York. But Rev. John Beal, head of the canon law department at Catholic University of America, said the priest's testimony raises serious questions.

Was it a sacramental confession?

"If he gave him absolution, I don't know what else it could be," Beal said.

Beal said granting absolution - "I grant you pardon and peace,

Jose Morales, center, is escorted out of New York Federal Court Tuesday. He served time for a beating and stabbing death, until a priest testified that another neighborhood gang member told him Morales was not involved in the slaying.

in the name of the father, the son and the holy spirit" - should have bound Towle to absolute secrecy.

The theological dilemma arose from the gritty streets of the South Bronx in the late 1980s. Fornes, a member of a street gang called the Wolf Pack, told Towle that he and two others stabbed and beat to death a man who had attacked one of them during an earlier dispute. Towle recounted, and also claimed two defendants convicted of the murder (Ruben Montalvo and Jose Morales) were never there.

Towle had told church officials that his quondary did not involve a sacramental confession, only a confidential conversation. So law, archdiocese spokesman Joseph Zwilling said.

Stem cell

They have no face or heartbeat and look as much like lumpy soccer balls as anything else. For every baby ever born, similar tiny human performance biologic magic is in the womb, transforming themselves into bone and muscle and brain and spleen.

Some researchers believe they will eventually be able to coax these special cells into similar magic in a test tube - creating pancreatic cells to cure diabetes, brain cells to cure Parkinson's disease and a host of other longed-for treatments. But to do that, embryos must be destroyed.

That's the danger of leaning on image and symbols, according to some who say they take their stand on an unbending principle. "Our position has never been based on the idea that a particular class of people are nice-looking," said Richard Doeringer, spokesman for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. "They (embryos) look exactly like you looked when you were their age."

FOCUS ON PEOPLE

Old Time Fiddlers name new chairman for district
The Idaho Old Time Fiddlers Association has announced the appointment of Ken Worthington, Bellevue, as the new chairman of District VI chairman for a one-term.

Former Chairman Archie Turner of Twin Falls had held the position for 38 years.

A long-time Wood River Valley resident, Worthington has been associated with the "Fiddlers" for five years. An accomplished guitarist, Worthington has accompanied many fiddlers at various contests in and around the state, the Hailey Chamber of Commerce reports.

Region VI encompasses fiddlers in the towns from Glenns Ferry to Twin Falls to Burley-Rupert and up to the Wood River Valley. There are approximately 15 members in the region with many traveling and performing to promote the art of old time fiddling.

The fiddlers have performed at many events and venues throughout the area such as the Springfest in Hailey, senior centers, retirement homes, Ketchum's Wagon Days Parade, Bles 4th of July barbecue, Kimberly Park Days, area schools, Twin Falls Western Days, Jackpot casino events, and county fairs, not to mention wedding funerals, birthdays, and family reunions.

The main function of the state association is to coordinate the districts to promote the art of old time fiddling. Each district sponsors a fiddler jam session at least once a month at various locations. Region VI meets at the DAV Hall in Twin Falls once a month for its business meeting, workshops, potluck dinner and jam sessions that are always open to fiddlers or interested spectators.

Jerome student wins Cargill scholarship
Cargill has awarded a $1,000 scholarship to Ben Newman, a 2001 graduate of Jerome High School.

Newman, son of Tim Newman, plans to attend Brigham Young University next fall.

Each year, Cargill's Scholarship Program awards a total of $1,000 scholarships to 250 students from families who derive at least 50 percent of their income from farming. Students are selected based on financial need, academic achievement and involvement in extracurricular activities. The program is administered by the National FFA Organization.

Wild cow riding takes off at fair
RUPERT - Wild cow riding will be held Friday and Saturday at the Minidoka County Fair.

Sign up fee for a three-man team is $45. Pre-registration is required and can be done at the McGreggor Center at the fairgrounds.

Minors must have a parent or legal guardian to sign for them.

I NEED YOUR HELP!

I am a graduate student working on my Masters in wildlife resources at the U. of Idaho-Moscow. My goal is to locate old landscape photos of the area so that I can use these photos from the same spot and get an idea of how the area has changed over the past 100 years. If you have any family photos of the area that you would like to share, I would be very interested in looking at them. We know these photos exist and we need your help in finding them. Please call me toll free at 1-888-500-6551 or email at: swan718@uidaho.edu. Thank you, Marcus Swan, Dept. of Fish and Wildlife, CNR Room 105, U. of Idaho, P.O. Box 441136, Moscow, ID 83844-1136.

ANSWER: One no-trump. With no obvious eight-card fit in the black suits, try one no-trump. It would be wrong to rebid the five-card heart suit.
