RAINBOW AFTERMATH

Lowman District Ranger Walt Rogers surveys the remains of the latrine the Rainbow Family gathering left behind during a media tour Thursday afternoon.

STANLEY - Trampled meadows, a rutted road and traces of toilet paper in the trees, but no trash or abandoned junk.

The road leading back to Cache Creek, where the main gathering was held, suffered severe damage. It began as a single track with heavy vegetation along both sides and was widened to two or three lanes by the thousands of cars that drove it during the course of the gathering.

Lowman Ranger Walt Rogers personally saw the last handful of Rainbows leave Sunday. They were the final leg of the Rainbow cleanup crew that over the past couple of weeks picked up trash, filled in latrines and scattered logs and rocks from fire circles. They worked to remove signs that nearly 20,000 people, 4,500 vehicles and hundreds of dogs had gathered over the Fourth of July weekend for the annual hippie celebration of world peace and love of humankind. In Rogers' opinion, it's laughable that the Rainbows say they leave the forest in better condition than they found it, but he

Serb commander led troops during killing of Muslims

THE HAGUE, Netherlands - The Yugoslav war crimes tribunal handed down its first conviction for genocide, finding a Bosnian Serb general guilty Thursday for the deaths of up to 8,000 Muslims at the U.N.-protected enclave of Srebrenica.

Both are fugitives. The ruling could also provide a precedent for possible indictments against former Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, who faces lesser charges in the persecution of ethnic Albanians in Kosovo. It was the first time that the U.N. court, established in 1993 to prosecute war crimes in the former Yugoslavia, convicted a suspect of genocide. Activists sue to protect wolves

Plaintiffs contend. Forest Service gives priority to livestock

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE - Two environmental groups sued the U.S. Forest Service Thursday, accusing it of putting livestock ahead of gray wolves in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The Sawtooth is a national recreation area with a special purpose to protect wildlife, but very little has been done to deal with the specific circumstances of wolves, said John McCarthy, the league's conservation director.

House backs bill of rights; Bush likes deal

The Associated Press WASHINGTON - In a victory for President Bush, the Republican-controlled House passed patients' rights legislation Thursday night giving millions of Americans sweeping new health care protection but a limited right to sue their HMOs.

Lawmakers reject gun buy-back

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate voted Thursday to back President Bush's plan to kill the government's gun buy-back program, handing a victory to gun-rights forces.

Senators voted 65-33 against a proposal by Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., to provide $15 million for the program, created less than two years ago by President Clinton. Idaho Sens. Larry Craig and Mike Crapo voted with the majority to kill the program. The Bush administration announced last month that it was ending the program, saying there was no proof that it was taking guns from criminals.

Schumer tried adding the provision to a $113.4 billion measure financing housing, environment, veterans and science programs for next year that the Senate approved by 94-5. The House version of the bill, approved last week, contained no money for the firearms purchasing program.

Under Buyback America, local police departments have received up to $500,000 to buy guns in and around public housing projects for about $50 each. The weapons were then destroyed. "Someone is alive today because of this program," Schumer said.

Opponents said the program was a failure that siphoned money that public housing authorities could better use to upgrade housing or to help the homeless or others.

"Do they take away the semi-automatic and the .38 used in commission of crimes? Absolutely not," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

The vote was not a clear referendum on the Senate's sentiment on gun issues. To pay for his amendment, Schumer would have taken the money from funds provided to public housing authorities for anti-drug efforts, a program some lawmakers were reluctant to raid.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dino researchers have assumed that the noses of the extinct animals were just below the eyes. This was where the nasal passage dips into the skull, and most experts assumed the outside opening to this breathing airway would be nearby.

Since the tissue and cartilage of a nose are too soft to fossilize and never have been part of recovered dinosaur remains studied by scientists, said Witmer, researchers made an educated guess about where the dinosaur nose belonged.

After some of the first dinosaur fossils were found in the late 19th century, he said, "experts thought they were so large that these animals couldn't have supported themselves on land and had to be aquatic so the water would support their bulk."

WASHINGTON (AP) - There was nothing in President Bush's energy proposals last spring to directly assist oil and gas companies, which were enjoying record profits, yet by the time the House finished work on the president's plan this week, Big Oil was the beneficiary of $13 billion in new tax credits and spending.

In similar fashion, Bush offered only modest incentives to the coal industry: $2 billion over 10 years for research on clean coal technology. But the bill that emerged from the House late Wednesday included three times that amount, including millions more added by Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman W.J. "Billy" Tauzin, R-La., to establish clean coal technology "Centers of Excellence."

Researchers sniff out new dinosaur noses

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration has backed away from a promise, made by the Clinton White House, that the United States will eventually comply with an international treaty banning land mines because it believes U.S. forces may need to use the weapon, official correspondence indicates.

In a letter to Rep. James P. McGovern, D-Mass., a leading congressional critic of land mines, the State Department's chief lobbyist said the administration is reviewing "the need for land mines on the modern battlefields of the future."

White House backs away from Clinton promise to ban land mines

Paul V. Kelly, the head of the State Department's legislative affairs bureau, added that the department believes that land mine policy should be left "to our colleagues in the Department of Defense for their determination and judgment."

The administration's reluctance to embrace a treaty that has been signed by 140 countries and ratified by 117 of them is the latest example of what critics call an increasing U.S. tendency to go it alone in international affairs.

In a foreign-policy address Thursday, House Democratic leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri said, "The administration has ratcheted up the unilateral rhetoric in just the last few months."

Secretary of State Colin L. Powell, in a CNN interview broadcast Thursday, insisted that the administration isn't turning its back on international cooperation, although it has serious objections to some treaties. "Just because they are multilateral, he said, 'doesn't mean they are good.'"

McGovern said he was disturbed by the letter from Kelly because it didn't acknowledge Clinton's promise that the United States would comply with the treaty by 2006 after giving the Pentagon time to develop a substitute for the weapon, which kills and maims thousands of civilians every year.

domestic energy production after years of neglect by the Clinton administration. Democrats and other critics saw it differently. They said the measure was designed primarily to reward the oil, gas, coal and nuclear industries for their cooperation last spring, when they helped to ease passage of the president's tax-cut bill by not insisting that it include tax breaks of their own.

By winning more than $30 billion in tax incentives - three times the president's request - in the energy bill, industry received much of what it wanted. But its success raised questions about how lawmakers and the administration plan to pay for it in a period of declining budget surpluses, say lawmakers who opposed the bill in budget analysis.

White House spokeswoman Clair Buchen said Thursday that while Bush did not propose any tax incentives for oil and gas production or many of the other provisions that turned up in the legislation. "We're pleased with the overall bill."

Rep. Lloyd Doggett, D-Texas, a member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, complained that House GOP leaders went overboard in responding to industry's pent up demand for tax breaks.

WASHINGTON (AP) - About 850,000 of the nation's 50 million children are being taught at home rather than in schools, mostly by parents who are well-educated and live in cities, a new government study estimates.

The report, released this week by the Education Department, calculates that 1.7 percent of American children were homeschooled in 1999, resulting in a total estimate higher than in the past.

"The number of parents taking direct responsibility for teaching their children through home-schooling is approaching a million, and we expect the next report on home-schooling will reflect growth in the population and new home-schooling opportunities," said Education Secretary Rod Paige.

The new figures come from an Education Department telephone survey of 57,278 households conducted from January through May 1999.

Supreme Court may be ready to set new limits on capital punishment

WASHINGTON (AP) - Almost every week a death row inmate somewhere in America asks the nation's highest court for a reprieve. Almost every week the Supreme Court says no, and another execution goes forward.

Now, as the two female justices publicly express qualms about the death penalty, the high court seems prepared this fall for the most extensive reconsideration of the issue in a quarter-century.

The court is far from a head-on confrontation over whether the death penalty violates the Constitution's prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment. At least three of the nine justices are firm death penalty supporters, and none is an abolitionist on the model of such liberals as the late Thurgood Marshall.

Instead, in choosing to hear some death row appeals and in unusually blunt public comments, the court is poking around the edges of the national debate over whether the death penalty is being applied fairly.

"The justices are not immune to this whole new atmosphere about the death penalty, the debate that is under way and the concern about accuracy and fairness," said Richard Dieter, executive director of the Death Penalty Information Center, a clearinghouse that is critical of the way the death penalty is applied.

The court's interest coincides with the high-profile releases of 10 Death Row inmates after DNA tests proved or suggested their innocence and with public opinion polls that show public unease with some aspects of American capital justice.

The American Bar Association, opening its annual meeting in Chicago this week, recommended that states that allow the death penalty examine the process, from trial through lengthy appeals, to improve its fairness.

"Every state that imposes the death penalty has a duty to determine whether its capital punishment system is flawed and, if so, to eliminate those flaws," said Michael Grecco, head of the ABA panel that released a step-by-step guide for reviews of state capital punishment procedures.

law in 1948 after the Nazi slaughter of 6 million Jews in World War II, refers to "acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group."

The 255-page verdict recounted emotional scenes of family separations at Srebrenica in 1995, of bound-and-blindfolded victims slaughtered within sight of the bulldozers preparing their graves, of widows and children haunted by memories of their men, and of an operation to hide mutilated corpses.

Watching television coverage of the verdict in Bosnia, women from Srebrenica wept and held hands as the judge delivered the decision. They screamed at the sentence, saying it was too lenient. "Let him go and come back among us. We will give him a verdict," said Behara Hasanovic. "His people have ripped my son from my arms."

Krstic, 53, received the longest sentence yet passed by the tribunal, although it was less than the eight life terms sought by the prosecution.

Reading a summary of the judgment, Judge Almiro Rodrigues said even though Krstic may have received orders to execute the men and deport women and children, he bore responsibility for genocide.

"You were there, General Krstic," Rodrigues said. "You are guilty of the murder of thousands of Bosnian Muslims. You are guilty of inflicting incredible suffering," he said.

"In July 1995, General Krstic, you agreed to evil."

Rodrigues quoted from a directive issued by Karadzic in March 1995 ordering the creation of "an unbearable situation of total insecurity with no hope of further survival or life for the inhabitants of Srebrenica and Zepa."

In July 1995, some 15,000 troops under Krstic's command launched an offensive on Srebrenica that cleared the region of non-Serbs. In a week of bloodshed, his soldiers rounded up thousands of men and teen-age boys and transported them to execution sites throughout eastern Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Referring to Mladic and Karadzic, both of whom have been indicted on genocide charges for Srebrenica, Rodrigues said the order to kill thousands of innocent people had likely come from Krstic's superiors.

Report: Police arrest former Muslim officers

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) - Muslim Croat federal police arrested three former Muslim army officers indicted by the U.N. war crimes tribunal for alleged atrocities during the 3 1/2-year Bosnia war, the government said Thursday.

Mehmed Alagic and Envo Hadzihanovic - both former generals - are the highest-ranking Muslims so far to be arrested on war crimes charges. Amir Kubura, a senior officer, was also arrested.

The indictments were issued against these people who performed top duties in the army of Bosnia-Herzegovina and refer to their command responsibility during the war, the government statement said.

Bosnian officials did not offer any details on the indictments. Tribunal officials based in The Hague, Netherlands, said the court has issued several sealed indictments to the Bosnian government in recent days ordering the arrest of war crimes suspects.

Senate committee rejects Bush nominee for commission

WASHINGTON - The Senate Commerce Committee on Thursday voted against President Bush's choice to head the Consumer Product Safety Commission, dealing the new administration its first nomination setback.

The vote was a potentially fatal blow for Mary Sheila Gall, who had been accused by Democrats as too pro-business in her votes as a member of the commission.

She was defeated in a party-line vote of 12-11. "My years of public service to this country simply do not merit today's vote," Gall, the only Republican on the three-member commission, said in a statement. "My whole life, both personal and professional, has been dedicated to children and families—I will continue to make the safety and well-being of America's children and families my highest priority."

Democrats on the panel disputed that view. "They can call it whatever they want," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., referring to the accusations of partisanship. "Call me old-fashioned, but I thought the chairman of the CPSC should be fighting for consumers."

Committee recommends designate to be FBI director

WASHINGTON - FBI Director-designate Robert Mueller came a step closer to confirmation Thursday as the Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously recommended his nomination to the Senate.

The vote in the committee was 19-0, and the Senate is expected to approve the nomination either late Thursday or Friday.

Mueller, U.S. attorney in San Francisco and a former Justice Department official, who has served under both Republican and Democratic administrations, was tapped to help steer the FBI back on course.

The bureau has been under fire for mistakes in investigations involving Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, spy Robert Hanssen, the bloody Branch Davidian and Ruby Ridge standoffs and Los Alamos National Laboratory nuclear scientist Wen Ho Lee.

Poll: Reno would win Democratic primary

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Janet Reno would easily win a Democratic gubernatorial primary, but would lose to Republican Gov. Jeb Bush if the general election were held now, a new poll shows.

Bush would get 54 percent of the vote compared to 39 percent for the former attorney general, according to the poll by Mason-Dixon Polling & Research Inc. Reno said she won't make a decision to run for another month, but the poll showed she would win a six-way Democratic primary with 47 percent of the vote. "I'm trying to do this in a comprehensive way, not piecemeal," she said.

She was up against former ambassador to Vietnam Pete Peterson, Rep. Jim Davis, state Rep. Lois Frankel, state Sen. Daryl Jones and attorney Bill McBride. All but Davis and Reno are officially in the race.

Nation in brief

Son of Kentucky senator gets federal judgeship

WASHINGTON - President Bush on Thursday nominated the son of Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., to be a federal judge in Kentucky, one day after he picked the son of Sen. Strom Thurmond to be South Carolina's U.S. attorney. Bush selected David Bunning to be a U.S. judge for the Eastern District of Kentucky. He is currently an assistant U.S. attorney in the district.

On Wednesday, Bush picked Strom Thurmond Jr., an assistant state prosecutor in Aiken, S.C., to be that state's top federal prosecutor. Bunning's nomination was one of 16 for the federal judiciary that the White House announced Thursday.

Officials offer cash prizes to get people to quit smoking

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Forget personal goals, will power or resolutions. Kentucky health officials are using the lure of cold, hard cash to get people to end their addiction to tobacco.

As part of a statewide contest called "Bluegrass Quit and Win 2001," smokers who are able to live without tobacco for a month will be entered into a drawing for a $2,500 grand prize or one of five $500 runner-up prizes.

According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 29.7 percent of Kentucky's adult population smokes. It trails only Nevada in the percentage of smokers and the rate of tobacco-related deaths.

Anyone 18 or older statewide who smokes cigarettes, cigars or pipes, or uses smokeless tobacco is eligible to participate. They must pair up with non-tobacco-using partners to witness that they are actually tobacco-free from Sept. 10 through Oct. 9.

Three brief perspectives on federal wrong turns

The ambitious overachievers inside the Beltway produce a good idea now and then. The trick is sorting out the occasional gem from the fusillade of folly.

Here are three examples:

Poisonous meddling

Whoops, your water bill just went up.

Goaded by environmentalists, the U.S. Senate is backing a tougher standard for arsenic levels in drinking water. Of course, nobody knows whether the new standard is the right standard. And never mind that a little arsenic occurs naturally in lots of Western water supplies. By golly, it's a symbolic victory for clean water.

Lost in the debate was the common-sense approach of the Bush administration. Bush agrees that the current standard, 50 parts per billion, needs changing. He merely wants the National Academies of Science to recommend what the new standard would be.

That's a question Bill Clinton didn't ask before mandating a 10 ppb standard - during Clinton's final, frantic hours in office.

The details make a difference. The Twin Falls water system, for example, could meet a standard of 20 ppb. But upgrading the system to meet a 10 ppb standard could cost as much as $10 million.

Chalk it up as the price of symbolism.

More rights for criminals

After Florida's election free-for-all last year, former Presidents Carter and Ford agreed to lead a bipartisan reform commission. This week the commission offered a number of potentially useful ideas (such as consistent standards for recounts, and a state master list of qualified voters).

But at least two of the commission's suggestions should be dismissed out of hand.

First, the commission proposes barring news organizations from projecting winners until polls close. Muzzling TV's talking heads might be fun, but it violates free speech.

Second, the commission wants to let convicted felons resume voting once they've completed their sentences. Does anyone really think that bringing thieves, killers and rapists to the polls will enhance elections?

The chief problem with American elections isn't any legal barrier to voting. Rather, it's the widespread perception that political campaigns are dull, dishonest and utterly disconnected from people's daily lives.

If anything, America has made voting too easy. The "motor voter" law, inviting easy abuse of voting rights, should be repealed. Consider this principle: Voting should be a cherished right. Anything that cheapens it will further erode the dismal stature of national politics.

How about a skateboard?

Life is full of tradeoffs. If you drive a sport-utility behemoth, your four-wheel dreadnought will encase you in a steel cocoon of safety and comfort. But your monthly payment (and your gasoline bills) will be substantial.

As an informed consumer, you make your own choice. Unless the government makes it for you.

That's exactly what's on the minds of congressional busybodies this week. Millions of Americans choose to drive big rigs. But Democrats and environmental lobbyists hope to thwart the free market by raising gas-mileage requirements.

Stricter mileage requirements translate directly to smaller, lighter vehicles. Less comfort, less safety.

That's OK if an econobox suits your lifestyle. If it doesn't - well, too bad. The federal government knows what's good for you.

Efficiency craze comes back to bite us

JOHN BALZAR

I keep pondering this matter of productivity in our economy. Huff huff, the United States is supposedly a leader in productivity. We're warned that we'd better get more productive still if we're going to keep our edge.

I wonder how such things are measured. In my everyday experience, our greatest determinant to be efficient has now come around to bite us on the ankles. We think we're getting somewhere, but are we really?

According to the federal government, productivity is a simple measure. The nation's economic output, excluding farms, is divided by the number of hours worked to produce it. The percentage change in this number measures our efficiency back to 1947, when someone first dreamed up the idea.

Thus, we have become 2.2 percent more efficient each year, on average, for 53 years. No wonder life is so great, huh?

I see productivity differently. I've been wrangling with the telephone company again. Six weeks ago, I paid $215 to have a second telephone line installed in the house. Ever since, it's been like living with a newborn. Sometimes when the phone rings I hear a voice. Other times I receive only an ear-piercing scream.

Seventeen repair calls and complaints to four supervisors later, I have learned a lesson in efficiency. Each time I contact the company, a "ticket" is opened on my case. The overriding goal of the repair department is to close this ticket. If the line can be made to work, good. Otherwise, well, closing tickets, not making repairs, is how the phone company measures productivity.

When the ticket is closed, I get a pre-corded phone call that tells me the problem with my line has been located and repaired as of 3:58 p.m. or 6:02 p.m. I call back and say, but it's not fixed. Sorry, but when the ticket is closed, the automated system must dispense its rewards.

Company experts blamed my telephone, not their line. So I bought another phone. They closed the ticket. When the line screamed anew, I was advised that my new telephone could be, coincidentally, faulty too, and in exactly the same way. I refused to buy another phone. They closed another ticket.

As I figure it, the telephone company has been fiddling for six weeks to no certain outcome. By its accounting, all repair calls resulted in the rapid closing of tickets. The productivity tyrants are pleased.

Meaningless productivity like this permeates everyday life. During intervals when my telephone functions, I am alerted by threatening calls. It seems I was assigned a phone number that recently belonged to a deadbeat. This woman defaulted on her government-guaranteed student loan. So I am drawn into another round of efficiency madness.

Get 10 percent of the wages of recorded messages that I can't stop. I don't have the necessary Social Security number to penetrate the lender's automated call-back apparatus, and there is no live person to talk to.

The shock is self-evident: The lender doesn't really care about collecting this loan. But the government requires proof of attempts to collect. These recorded calls are the cheapest way to do it. Maybe this will show up on next year's report as an increase in productivity.

Yes, we could go on all day about this irritating, self-defeating efficiencies we impose on ourselves. Ever more businesses are hiring evermore empty-headed, untrained employees in the belief that reducing payroll is productive for the bottom line.

At the grocery, I call attention to a rack of cheese sprouting green mold. The clerk looks and pronounces the cheese fine. She points to the "sell by" date and explains, "See, it's good until May 2001." At my local home improvement department, they sell closet rods and mounting sockets in sizes that do not fit each other. "I dunno," says the manager when I ask why.

Computer companies, presumably those with the most to gain from efficiency, reduce their customer services to keep ahead of declining profits. My FedEx deliverywoman says she has noticed a corresponding uptick in the return of computers purchased online. She picks up and sends back about half of those computers she delivers now because the customers cannot get them to function. I presume this will soon necessitate another cutback in service hotlines to keep productivity in line with profits.

But enough complaining. I need to turn to productive matters myself. I've got to switch long-distance carriers and earn myself 5,000 bonus frequent-flyer airline miles. If only I can get the telephone to work. Our breathless determination to be efficient has now come around to bite us on the ankles.

Highway district is not broken

The Twin Falls Highway District is not broken, so it doesn't need a lot of fixing as some of the candidates and their supporters contend. There are those advocating change that have axes to grind and a program of revenge. Watch your step when you vote on Aug. 7.

I recruited Dave Sommer to run for highway commissioner. He is anxious to be elected and to serve the district. He doesn't have a preconceived agenda and can work with anyone. It's time for a change. If you want a lifetime job, run for the Supreme Court.

Wildlife belongs to everyone

Your readers need to be aware of a July 10 decision by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission. The average person lost again while the privileged few got another benefit!

The commission decided to give landowners 10 percent of the special (November) buck permits in Units 40, 41, 42 and 56. This is yet another step toward privatizing Idaho's wildlife, which is supposed to belong to everyone.

Several years ago, the commission gave landowners a much better chance (in most cases a guaranteed chance) than the general public of drawing elk, deer and antelope permits in controlled hunts which included their land in "appreciation" of the wildlife habitat provided by private lands. In return, sportsmen got "reasonable access" onto participating ownerships.

Recent changes have ruined the Landowner Appreciation Program. Qualifying landowners now:

- Can assign (read sell) their permits to anyone. One landowner's son has applied for an outfitter's license on Bennett Mountain to take hunters on several ownerships which are eligible for several elk and deer permits.
- Do not have to allow any public access.
- Get 10 percent of the wages of recorded (highly valuable and very difficult to other to draw) permits in four management units.
- Get 25 percent of the bull elk permits in Unit 40.
- Can draw antlered elk and deer permits every year while the general public must wait a year after drawing an antlered permit.
- Can apply for a moose, bighorn sheep or mountain goat permit in addition to elk, deer and antelope permits.
- Get compensated for damage done by elk, deer, antelope, black bear and mountain lions.

Maybe the worst thing about this decision was how it was made. The commission had instructed the Fish and Game Department at an earlier meeting to gather public input on the proposal. On July 10, the commission voted to approve the proposal after a few posturing statements but with essentially no discussion. They chose to totally ignore the public opinion they had instructed the department to gather, and none of them even asked about it!

About 20 minutes after they made this decision (they took a break immediately after the vote), Director Sando reminded them they had asked for public opinion, and handed them the summary sheet. Publically, although it obviously doesn't matter to the commission, only 25 percent of the more than 300 people who commented supported the proposal.

Why should citizens pay for ex-presidents?

Something good might come from Bill Clinton's "homecoming" to Harlem if it focuses our attention on what taxpayers pay to subsidize all of our former presidents.

Congress began helping out ex-presidents in 1958 because Harry Truman was a relatively poor man and because it was thought proper to help ease the transition of former presidents back into private life. Prior to that, no formal federal pension or any other benefit was paid to ex-presidents.

Like most other government programs, the relative pittance ($25,000 annual pension) paid to Truman has grown to a $2.5 million entitlement for our five living ex-presidents. This includes an annual six-figure pension, plus money for secretarial help and Secret Service protection (the General Services Administration has requested $3,376,000 for ex-presidents and staff in the Fiscal Year 2002 budget).

CAL THOMAS

According to Rep. Ernest Istook, RR-Okla., a member of the House Appropriations Committee, there are few restrictions on how the money is spent, including for political activity. Istook has asked the Government Accounting Office to contact each ex-president and find out exactly where the money for office and staff goes. That report is due in September. Istook's office says he will then consider legislation that would place restrictions on what ex-presidents receive and how it can be used.

Recent ex-presidents get huge speaking fees and fat book contracts. According to the Los Angeles Times, former President Bush has been making $4 million annually on the global lecture circuit, delivering about 50 speeches a year. While there's nothing wrong with that, why couldn't he and the other ex-presidents cover more expenses with the money they earn? Matters related to their time in office might be paid for with tax money but the rest ought to come from their deep pockets.

Bill Clinton's advertised speaking fee is $100,000 a pop, yet taxpayers are paying $354,000 annual rent for his Harlem office. That's down from the $811,000 he wanted to spend on a ritzy office in a midtown neighborhood until the politics of it made him "see the light" and "come home" to Harlem. Clinton also is likely to get a substantial advance on his memoirs, as did Mrs. Clinton, who was paid $8 million up front by Simon and Schuster (owned by CBS-Viacom), which has and will lobby for and against legislation on which Sen. Clinton will vote. The National Taxpayers Union (NTU) says the annual Clinton pension of $161,000 will cost taxpayers $7.29 million over Clinton's expected lifetime.

Why are the taxpayers subsidizing these multi-millionaires? Harry Truman they are not. Most modern ex-presidents had wealth before entering office and make plenty after leaving the presidency so they're unlikely to ever face hard times.

The NTU recommendations for changing this seem reasonable. They would end the "pension charade" by substantially reducing the current $161,000 presidential pension and capping cost of living adjustments to the actual dollar amount, not the percentage amount, provided to Social Security recipients. Also, former presidents should not be eligible for retirement benefits until they reach retirement age.

Former presidents should be "term-limited." Even an extremely generous four-year limit on an ex-president's transition to private life, allowing for franking privileges and "good-will traveling," could be handled through existing budgets. Ex-presidents should pay for their own libraries, which is a recent phenomenon. Let private donors and universities pick up the expense. Currently, $43 million in taxpayer funds goes to presidential libraries and collections, according to the NTU. It's a privilege and honor to serve as president, and ex-presidents are afforded great opportunities after leaving office. Burdening the taxpayers for the rest of their lives should not be among them.

We want our voice back

I was pleased to see the front-page article (July 30) addressing the proposed soccer complex west of Twin Falls—until I came to the paragraph concerning the "recent" Idaho Supreme Court decision, of which the reporter seemed to have no knowledge, even though there have been three articles in The Times-News concerning this "recent" Supreme Court decision. I did not keep a copy of the first article. The second article appeared July 10, written by Ruth Streeter, concerning a moratorium on the Cassia County commissioners and placed on certain developments within the county's various impact areas. The article stated, "State law gives cities and counties the ability to hash out the authority that each shares in an impact zone... But the city of Eagle encountered a legal battle when it approved a subdivision inside its impact area. The Idaho Supreme Court eventually ruled that the city did not have any authority outside its legal boundaries because thirty residents don't have representation in city government."

The most recent article (by Ruth Streeter, July 26) told of a similar moratorium put in place by the Heyburn City Council. Streeter wrote, "The court's ruling conflicts with state law, which lets cities and counties negotiate their authority in an impact zone." Twin Falls City Attorney Fritz Wunderlich also seems unformed about this Supreme Court ruling. In the July 30 article, Mr. Wunderlich says, "The only Supreme Court decision dealing with cities' areas of impact in recent history—Blaha vs. Board of Commissioners—doesn't apply in Twin Falls County."

I am not familiar with this case or the Eagle city case, but if they are one and the same, I would like to ask Mr. Wunderlich why he feels the Twin Falls City Council and county commissioners are immune to the decisions of the Idaho Supreme Court.

As a resident of the city's impact area, I am frustrated by the lack of concern the City Council has shown to us in this matter and another concern we brought before them several years ago. Why should they listen to us when we have no power or influence because we are not allowed to voice our displeasure with these elected officials at the voting booth? The Supreme Court has given validity to our long-held opinion that we have had government without representation. We want our voice back!

Call up when dairies stink

Why aren't the real farmers trying to help control the corporate industrial dairies? Some say it helps the economy. They can sell their hay and corn to the dairies. They should realize that being subservient to the dairies can be dangerous. The dairies can eventually decide the price they pay. If they decide to pay less than the cost to raise the hay, that's OK. You own the land and pay property taxes. It is your tax money that subsidizes the dairies. They can buy your land and you can be a sharecropper and your children can work in the factory dairies.

Most farmers and politicians are too young to remember the Dust Bowl in the Midwest. In the 1930s, as the drought ruined the farmers' crops, the large corporations bought the land for a pittance and the farmer had nothing. They bundled up their families and came west. I remember feeding these hard-working farmers sandwiches because they were hungry. Many of them settled here and have proved to be valuable citizens. It can happen here, but we don't have any place to go. We'd be stuck here as serfs to the moneyed industrial corporate dairies.

They are not farmers. Why are the elected officials letting them hide behind agricultural laws? Some take the water off the crops and let weeds take over. They have had years to clean up their stink, but we are still awakened by the obnoxious odors. This isn't just in Twin Falls County; it is all over the Magic Valley.

Now they've taken the Department of Environmental Quality out of the picture, we have to get the entire state involved. We need thousands to call the state Agriculture Department, phone 1-866-435-0450. We need the farmers as well as the people who smell the stink, also the people who find nitrates in their wells. You own people, every time you drive down a road and smell the odors, call the state Agriculture Department. This is the only way we can continue to breathe, fresh air and drink pure water.

The case should go to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Lobes Monday, Neal said.

The free tour, sponsored by Ketchum's Environmental Resource Center, will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday. Buses will load up in Ketchum and make additional stops in Hailey and Bellevue before visiting three local farms: John and Elizabeth Stevenson's Hillside Ranch where they will learn about hops and barley farming; Cummins Farm, where they will learn why Blaine County's climate and soils are ideal for growing potatoes; and the Purdy's Double R Ranch at Silver Creek where they will watch a cow-holding demonstration.

Ketchum council denies additional Rideshare funding

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - The City Council wasted no time in giving preliminary approval this week to the town's bus system's request for $476,000 for the coming fiscal year. It constitutes an increase over last year's amount of $424,500.

But it slammed the brakes on a request for additional money for the fledgling Wood River Rideshare program.

Rideshare coordinator Beth Callister had already asked the council to increase Ketchum's contribution from $10,635 to $23,343, a 119.5 percent increase. But this week she asked the city to add another $15,552 onto its tab to bring Ketchum's total contribution to $38,895.

Callister said the additional funds were needed to make up for shortfalls from other funding sources, such as the county and the state. The county, for instance, allocated just $18,000 of the $23,000 she had requested.

Without it, she said, she would have to cut back on efforts to market carpooling in the Wood River Valley.

Councilman Maurice Charlut had nothing but praise for the KART bus system, which provides free transportation in Ketchum and Sun Valley. Manager Terry Crawford had not only helped keep costs under control and go after grants but he had managed to come in this year under budget, he said.

But Callister's proposal to cut marketing ranked him.

"To cut marketing is upside down to me," he said. "Cutting back on marketing is going the wrong way."

Councilman David Hutchinson questioned whether the Rideshare program needs to be funded to the extent Callister has proposed when other components of the regional transportation plan are not yet in place.

The plan, by a Colorado consultant, proposes high-occupancy vehicle lanes, paid parking in Ketchum, and public transportation along the Wood River Valley corridor to cut down on traffic congestion along Highway 75.

Callister attributed part of the funding increase to her desire to turn her part-time position into a full-time one. But Hutchinson told her he would feel more comfortable if she could find a middle ground in which she could say, "I'm going to work for a little less."

Hutchinson said he didn't mean to question whether she deserved such a "significant increase." But he said it was an unreasonable request given the budget she had to cover.

"We need some kind of compromise in which we can meet you in the middle," he said.

Council members also wondered whether there wasn't eventually some way to attach the Rideshare program to another program to reduce personnel costs.

"I think we need to somehow put a period to the way we do it now and find a new way to do it," said Charlut, sending out a clarion call to think more creatively when it comes to the program.

Incumbents face challengers in Twin Falls Highway District election

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - On Tuesday, voters will select two men to help decide the future of multimillion-dollar road projects.

But while the Twin Falls Highway District deals with a budget of more than $6 million of taxpayer dollars, and its projects affect every county resident, the district is probably the least-talked-about or scrutinized local political agency.

This year's race features two longtime incumbents: Doug Howard, a 16-year highway district commissioner who represents Subdistrict 1 (western Twin Falls County), and Art Bailey, a 15-year commissioner who represents Subdistrict 2 (eastern Twin Falls County).

Voters will decide if Howard, who declined to give his age, and Bailey, 71, will remain in office, or if their challengers, newcomers Ron Pierce, 60, David Burney, 40, or Dave Sommer, 52, will take over.

Where to vote

The Twin Falls Highway District election is Tuesday. The highway district is in charge of repaving and constructing many of the county's roads. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the following places:

- * Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N.
- * Twin Falls Highway District, 1234 Highland Avenue E.

Hillsdale Highway District election

The Twin Falls Highway District election Tuesday coincides with other highway district elections, including the Hillsdale Highway District election east of Jerome. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the following locations:

- * Eden City Hall, Main Street in Eden
- * Hazelton City Hall, 246 Main Street, Hazelton

In the Hillsdale election, five-year incumbent Dan Schaeffer faces Jon Crane in Subdistrict 1, in Subdistrict 2, four-year incumbent Don McBride faces Randy Sellers.

Burney is running against Bailey.

Pierce echoed Burney's thoughts.

"Some of these people have been on this thing for 16 years, and sometimes I believe people get ingrained in it," said Pierce, 60, a retired cattle rancher who is running against Howard. "I'm not going to say these people have done a bad job. But there's definitely a time for a change, and maybe we can get more done for the buck."

"There's a lot of equipment that is being trucked off that is in good condition. Most all their equipment is Caterpillar for some reason, and all their trucks are Mack trucks, and I don't know the particulars of why all their equipment is Caterpillar and all their trucks are Mack. There's so much more equipment out there to purchase."

Cassia P&Z considers camp sites at City of Rocks

By Ruth Streever
Times-News writer

BURLEY - The Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission took under advisement Thursday the issue of whether a landowner can build a campground at the City of Rocks National Reserve.

At issue is whether the RV hookups, swimming pool and lodge that are part of the proposal are in keeping with the reserve's master plan and the county's historical preservation zoning law.

Heber Loughmiller owns 210 acres on the east end of the park. He has proposed 18 campsites, RV hookups, a swimming pool, two restrooms and a lodge. A campground manager would live on site.

Loughmiller told the commission Thursday that the proposal would actually help protect and preserve some of the historic features near the site.

The proposal includes an interpretive center at "Register Rock," a rock on which traveling pioneers recorded their names and the dates of their journeys westward.

And because the rock and neighboring California Trail are showing signs of deterioration from the curious travelers of today, there may be a barrier that would keep people from further damage, Loughmiller said.

The closest campsite to a segment of the California Trail is probably 75 to 100 yards away, and that distance is flexible, Loughmiller said.

"And any landscaping will be done with rock in order to be visually compatible with the park, he said.

But City of Rocks Superintendent Ned Jackson said that when the park became a national reserve in 1988, the park's master plan forbade any additional commercial development inside the reserve.

Only those uses which happened from 1850 to 1988 would be allowed, according to the plan.

Minidoka County Fair reaches full bloom with flower exhibit

By Dan Fields
Times-News writer

RUPERT - Imagine a tea kettle, watering can, an ice skate and a few Mason jars sharing a common purpose.

But all held various shapes and sizes of stems and petals during the annual flower show at the Minidoka County Fair. The event was held in one of the two air-conditioned buildings at the fairgrounds, much to the delight of Rupert's B.J. Tondl.

Tondl, who is a master gardener, sat at the exhibit's entrance Thursday, counting the number of visitors who perused all of the contest's entries. And his chair sat directly in front of the top winners of the event, including those who won best of show and best of class in their respective divisions.

There were numerous varieties of flowers, such as gladiolus and marigolds, presented at the show. And Tondl suggested that the sooner people come to gander at the exhibit, the better display they'll see.

"Air conditioning can only do so much, you know."

"Each day you're here, the more and more they wilt. Some do faster than others," he said.

Not that, being in any of the other fair's structures would help these delicate floral arrangements.

"If it was in any of the other buildings, the next day they would be wilted," Tondl said. "They couldn't stand the heat like this."

Different volunteers have worked mostly two-hour shifts to stand watch at the exhibit. There aren't too many other responsibilities, except for locking and unlocking the door at the start and conclusion of each day. Probably the most important task is watering the flowers, but that needn't be done during each shift.

And for people like Tondl, now in his third year of helping out at the show, he enjoys talking with people about a subject he's familiar with.

"This seems, for me, a better way," he said. "I'm retired, so it doesn't make a big difference. Coming in here sitting for a few hours doesn't hurt anything. And it helps them out."

These flowers, adorned with best of class ribbons, are displayed on the top shelf at the entrance to the flower exhibit at the Minidoka County Fair.

Campground reconstruction unearths archaeological treasure

SILVER CITY (AP) — A project to rebuild a campground in historic Silver City turned into the surprise discovery of an archaeological treasure.

Work was temporarily stopped recently after coins, bottles, ceramics and several building foundations were unearthed at the site on the old China Town portion of the once-booming Owyhee County mining town.

M. J. Byrne, public affairs specialist for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, said finding the Chinese artifacts prompted workers to stop more carefully while working to reconstruct the campground site.

The items will be documented and recorded, then returned to the locations where they were found.

The campground originally was developed in the 1970s, but has been vandalized over the years, Byrne said. Unrestricted vehicle access into the site and Jordan Creek caused serious erosion problems.

After the Chinese artifacts began showing up, restoration plans were changed on the south side of Jordan Creek to accommodate recovery of the items.

Firefighters cite weather, terrain as problem in Yellowstone effort

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A fire that has "closed" an entrance to Yellowstone National Park grew to 2,300 acres Thursday and authorities feared dry winds could hamper firefighting efforts. "What makes this fire so difficult is the inaccessibility, the steep terrain, the winds and the wind patterns," fire information officer Bobby Kitchens said.

Firefighters were contending with erratic canyon winds as they tried to keep the fire from spotting across the road. Some employee housing and businesses such as the Pahaska Teepee resort remained at risk.

Smoke wafted across thick forests, causing the sun to cast a strange brown tint over the landscape. Ash fluttered about at times.

But the wildfire and entrance closure did not hamper the fun for some motorcycle enthusiasts who gathered at Pahaska Teepee, about a mile from the east entrance.

"It's not a big deal," said Mariann Amass, of Rolla, Mo. "There's nothing you can do about it and no one to blame. You can't control fire."

She said she was glad to be able to visit the Pahaska Teepee resort, which features a hunting lodge built in 1904 by Buffalo Bill Cody.

"It's a really cool place," she said.

Resort owner-manager Angela Coe estimated about 220 enthusiasts visited Pahaska Teepee and many even ate there. It was welcome relief for her after a flurry of cancellations during one of the busiest times of the year.

"It's going to hurt for long after the fires are out," she said, adding that fire also burned near the area last year.

She estimated the resort was losing about $10,000 a day in business, although that is offset by about $2,000 from serving fire crews.

The fire was considered 10 percent contained early Thursday. Cooler weather and less wind helped firefighters Wednesday.

Winds have hindered the use of tanker planes on the blaze, Kitchens said. But helicopters dropped buckets of water Thursday and firefighters carried on the ground battle. About 500 personnel were involved with efforts, he said.

A strategy team was headed to a dozen or so lodges east of the park to set up sprinklers and clear brush around the buildings in case the fire grew, Summerfield said.

"Years of fire exclusion have really built fuels up," Kitchens said. "But it's not like '88. The fuels are not as dry."

"But there's still the potential for this to be a large fire."

The park remains open, while the nearest detour for tourists was northwest of Cody into Montana and to the northeast entrance.

Teen birth rates fall across nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teen birth rates continue to vary widely across the country, even as they fall in every state.

Nationally, the birth rate fell 22 percent between 1991 and 2000, when 48.7 out of every 1,000 women ages 15 to 19 gave birth. Pregnancy rates, which account for abortion, have also fallen.

In many states, the drop has been particularly dramatic, according to state-by-state figures being released Friday for 1999 by Child Trends, a research firm that analyzed the government birth data.

The rate dropped by more than 30 percent in Michigan, California, Maine, Vermont and Alaska between 1991 and 1999. In Delaware and Texas, it fell the least, by just 11 percent. Idaho's rate dropped 19 percent, from 54 births per 1,000 teenage girls in 1991 to 44 in 1999.

There are also wide variations in the birth rates themselves. In New Hampshire, just 24 out of every 1,000 15-to-19-year-old women gave birth in 1999. In Mississippi, it was three times that — 73 out of 1,000.

Southern and Southeastern states have the highest teen birth rates, with upper Northeastern and some Northern states typically having much lower rates.

Judge temporarily suspends ban on liquor advertisements in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Bars and restaurants in Mormon Utah now are free to advertise their wine, beer and alcohol offerings, after U.S. District Judge David Sam issued a temporary restraining order Thursday suspending the state's strict ban on liquor advertising.

Next Thursday the judge is expected to sign an injunction continuing the order while a lawsuit attacking Utah's law is pending.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on July 24 ordered Judge Sam to stop Utah from enforcing the law until the case is resolved. He said the current commission hasn't done a bad job.

"I think the highway district has been running pretty smooth. I don't have any axes to grind," he said.

As far as critical projects or issues go, Sommer said he didn't have any on his mind.

Pierce and Burney agreed on highway project they are looking at closely is the expansion of Pole Line Road. The state transportation department is expanding Pole Line Road west to Highway 30 in hope of diverting truck traffic away from Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The multimillion-dollar project is set to start within the next year.

Howard, who works full time as director of the state Department of Environmental Quality's regional office in Twin Falls, said he has

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which tells its members to avoid alcohol.

Attorney Brian Barnard filed the lawsuit in 1996, claiming the law violated free-speech rights guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution. He argued that his clients should be allowed immediate relief from that law.

He also said a comment by state Alcoholic Beverage Commission Chairman Nicholas Hales was a threat against businesses that wanted to advertise liquor.

Hales had warned businesses against beginning liquor advertisements until a judge signs an injunction, saying it would be unwise, Barnard said the commission chills free speech.

Assistant Attorney General Thom Roberts, who is defending the state law and advises the alcohol board, had worried that the restraining order could keep the alcohol commission from making new rules.

He argued that, for example, the order could block the commission from stopping a liquor company from putting up a billboard with a drunken Easter bunny encouraging children to drink. Sam said the example was unrealistic and that the order would only keep the commission from restricting protected-commercial speech.

The lawsuit claims the law violates free-speech protections. Barnard had asked Sam for an injunction allowing the advertising in 1996. The judge ruled against him in March 2000. The appeals court then ordered him to reverse his decision.

Barnard is now asking for an immediate ruling striking down the advertising law. Roberts said the alcohol commission is studying the appeals court's ruling.

People run for highway district commissioner for a variety of reasons.

Money isn't one of them. Twin Falls Highway District commissioners are paid $60 a meeting — which adds up to $1,200 a year.

Highway district commissioner elections are held every four years.

But getting people to vote — or even interested in the highway district election — hasn't been easy. In 1999, only 393 of the district's 20,744 eligible voters made it to the polls — a voter turnout of less than 2 percent. That compares to a Twin Falls County voter turnout of close to 70 percent in the 2000 general election.

Voters must live in the Twin Falls Highway District boundaries to be able to vote in the highway district election. The highway district encompasses the Nevada/Idaho border to the Snake River, east of Hansen about three miles, west through Bear and then Balanced Rock through Bell Rapids.

Residents living in other county highway districts, such as the Buhl Highway District or the Filer Highway District, cannot vote in the local election, Twin Falls County Clerk Bob Fort said.

The low turnout in prior elections needs to change, said Pierce and Burney, who were campaigning in Twin Falls County Wednesday.

"I think it (highway district) needs more coverage and people need to know more about what's going on," Burney said.

Twin Falls Highway District Director Dave Burgess said this year's campaign is the most aggressive he's seen in years.

"The challengers really want to get elected," Burgess said.

Sommer, a former Twin Falls School District Board member, said he has done some "low-key" campaigning. He said the current commission hasn't done a bad job.

"I think the highway district has been running pretty smooth. I don't have any axes to grind," he said.

As far as critical projects or issues go, Sommer said he didn't have any on his mind.

Reserve

Commissioners questioned whether the proposed swimming pool, lodge and RV hookups would be in keeping with that master plan.

Camping did take place in the reserve prior to 1988, and Loughmiller argued that service is just a way camping has changed — similar to the way cattle grazing now involves pickup trucks, not horses.

A 100-site campground being built by the National Park Service is going up on land outside the reserve that's managed by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, Jackson said.

There are 78 campsites already within the reserve. There are currently no RV hookups at any of the sites, although RVs are allowed in the park, Jackson said.

Loughmiller told the commission that the property was purchased with the intent of grazing cattle. Only recently was the idea for the campground born, he said.

The National Park Service is not responsible for maintaining the private parcels of land that lie inside the reserve, Jackson said. An attempt was made to purchase the land from the Loughmillers about a year ago, but the offer was declined, he said.

In other county business, commissioners were scheduled to deliberate on an appeal that was filed by neighbors of Frenchman's Island. Commissioners had not made a decision on the appeal by The Times-News deadline.

Students clash over Idaho's university funding

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Students and officials from the University of Idaho and Boise State University disagree on the validity of a study claiming inequities in how Idaho's four-year colleges are financed.

Supporters of each school started off before the State Board of Education. The presidents had been trying to find a way to avoid a bitter fight over money in the face of tightening budgets.

At Wednesday's session, Boise State students complained that their school does not get its fair share of state money and urged the board to act quickly to resolve the imbalance.

University of Idaho students said the study fails to take into account the university's roles and missions and the fact that their institution supports agricultural, forestry and other state services.

At the heart of the debate are

"Currently we are talking holdbacks, not surpluses."

— Gary Schroeder, state senator recommendations in a $75,000 study by MGT of America, a private out-of-state consulting firm that examined distribution of state support.

It recommended that Boise State receive as much as $13 million more to correct the imbalance while the University of Idaho could see its share cut by as much as $161,000.

Boise State is providing a "Cadillac education on a moped budget," Boise State Student Body President Nate Peterson told the board.

Republican state Sen. Gary Schroeder of Moscow criticized the study for reaching a predetermined conclusion and pointed out that there may not be extra cash for any of the institutions.

"Currently we are talking holdbacks, not surpluses," Schroeder said.

The board may decide to act on the report or give the matter more study. Rod Lewis, a board member from Meridian, said any attempt to fix inequities would likely take several years.

University announces expansion

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The University of Idaho on Thursday announced plans for major expansion in Kootenai County.

In Coeur d'Alene, the university will move its programs from the North Idaho College campus to a nearby 29,000-square-foot building called Harbor Center. It also plans to increase the number of students served there, from 1,700 to 2,300, over the next five years.

In nearby Post Falls, the university will seek funding to build a $15 million science and technology laboratory at the existing UI Research Park. Built in conjunction with North Idaho College, the new building would allow Idaho to expand its science and engineering programs.

"The Idaho Panhandle is one of the fastest growing regions of the state," university President Bob Hoover said.

The new science lab in Post Falls is expected to attract more high-tech businesses to the area, Hoover said.

School Board admits salary reporting error

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A week after Snake River School Board members revealed a $10,000 unreported bonus paid to a former superintendent, it also admitted the superintendent made nearly $44,000 more than was reported to the state Department of Education.

"This was a collective mistake of the board providing the extra cash and former Superintendent Elzo White taking it, Board Chairman Dayle Mecham said during Wednesday's meeting. "We now consider this matter closed."

Board members and the district's Pocatello auditor found a discrepancy of $43,439 in reported salary payments from December 1996 through this July.

Anglers hit snag when in Heyburn

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Anglers who plan to fish in Heyburn State Park are coming away with confusion over the licenses and permits they need to legally cast a line.

State officials say an Idaho license is required to fish in the park on the southern part of Lake Coeur d'Alene.

The Coeur d'Alene Tribe's fishing regulations require nontribal anglers to buy a tribal permit for any waters within the exterior boundary of the reservation. The Coeur d'Alenes advise nontribal anglers to buy permits from both jurisdictions.

"That is the way we instruct people to purchase licenses for the park area," Carla Moore of the tribe's fish and wildlife program told the St. Maries Gazette Record.

Local license vendors differ on their understanding of the rules.

Assistant park manager Ron Hie said he is aware of the confusion, but he has not heard of anyone within the park receiving a citation for having only a state license. But he disagrees with the tribe's interpretation.

Hise points out U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge specifically excluded the park when he affirmed the tribe's ownership of the southern third of the lake in 1998. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld the ruling last month.

Lodge said the state bought the park from the federal government in 1909. It includes Chocoma Lake, most of Benewah Lake and the mouth of the St. Joe River, Hise said.

Tribal representatives contend Lodge did not decide the park jurisdiction in favor of the state, but simply left the issue unresolved.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game conservation officer Steve Agte said the agency needs to meet with the Coeur d'Alenes over the issue.

"We need to resolve it so the public isn't confused," he said.

Pocatello plans gay street dance

POCATELLO (AP) — A street dance, drag queen show and local pageants are set later this month for the city's first Gay Pride event.

The Pocatello City Council must still approve a street closure for organizers of the three-day event, which begins Aug. 17, but no problems were expected.

A gay parade and rally held in Boise in July drew about 1,000 supporters and a few protesters.

Pocatello has a history as a culturally liberal, blue-collar town but with an increasing bent toward conservatism. It is home to Idaho State University.

Organizers of the Gay Pride Days activities have hired security for the street dance and other events.

Professors take on dispute with Nez Perce, counties

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Two professors from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government are trying to resolve a jurisdictional dispute between the Nez Perce Tribe and north-central Idaho's Clearwater, Lewis and Idaho counties.

If it works, the project could be used as a blueprint for resolving differences between tribes and local governments nationwide, especially as more and more tribes — flush with casino revenues — assert their sovereignty.

Keith Allred, an assistant professor of public policy and a Twin Falls native, is coordinating the project with Joe Kulk, a professor who specializes in economic development in Indian country.

The first phase is almost complete. Over the past few weeks, survey results have come in from 80 to 90 percent of the 350 people in the three-county area who received questionnaires. Those surveyed included Indians and non-Indians, elected officials and private citizens.

"We asked what issues are of greatest concern, and how they feel about various ways of resolving them," Allred said. "We asked not only for their own views, but for them to guess the average view of the other groups, to see how people are characterizing — or mischaracterizing — each other's views."

A team of graduate students has been dispatched to study what has worked and what has failed in similar situations across the country, from the Yankton

Sioux tribe in North Dakota to the Swinomish tribe in Washington.

The Nez Perce and officials from the three counties, calling themselves the North Central Idaho Jurisdictional Alliance, have been at odds for years over such issues as the authority of tribal police to arrest non-Indians, whether a business run by a tribal member must purchase city and county permits and whether the tribe can tax non-Indians.

Weather hurts casino profits, tribal payments

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Snowy weather and poor driving conditions hurt business at the Coeur d'Alene tribal casino in Worley, the tribe said.

As a result, tribal members received smaller per capita payments this summer, said Dave Matheson, the tribal gaming executive. The payments dropped from $1,068 to $900, the tribe said.

It was the first time since the casino opened in 1993 that the semi-annual payments have declined from the previous year, Matheson said.

The lower revenues in November and December appeared to be a "blip," Matheson said. Revenues were back up again in January, he said.

The per capita payments are paid twice yearly to the 1,770 enrolled members of the Coeur d'Alene Tribe. When tribal gaming was established, the tribe voted to return 25 percent of the profits to its members. The remaining money funds education, social programs and land acquisitions.

In the past eight years, the casino has grown to include 1,200 gambling machines, a hotel and conference center, concerts and boxing matches. Plans call for developing the casino into a destination-style resort.

Owls cannot roll their eyes in sockets

Far too few people realize that no owl can roll its eyes. They're fixed in their sockets, those owl's eyes. That's why owls always look like tax accountants. They're formal. Direct. Rigid. Incapable of cutting a flirtatious glance.

Trouble with James Watt's first steam engine in 1763 was it hissed. What he needed he couldn't find: Somebody who could drill a perfectly round hole. The industry of the world just sat there, waiting, for 11 years, trying to figure out how to stop the steam leak. Then in 1774, John Wilkinson invented a boring machine that did the trick. Watt's next model didn't hiss, hardly at all.

Young inexperienced seamen aboard ship in the old British navy were allowed 14 inches of space in which to sling their canvas hammocks. The older petty officers were authorized 24 inches of space. Some historians feel this admiralty rule to give more room to the seasoned sailors was a subtle recognition of that thing called middle-age spread.

Question cropped up as to how "fire" came to mean dismissed from a job. "That's obvious, dum dum," writes a swift client. "Fire is also a synonym for discharge meaning to get rid of in a hurry, zap!" Almost right. But it's also true that in many a small town the local folk rid-themselves-of-unfortunates by burning down the places where the unwanted slept.

Oscar winner, musician starts tour at home

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) - Oscar winner and part-time musician Russell Crowe isn't too big to support his hometown bar in Australia.

The "Gladiator" star's rock 'n' roll band, Thirty Odd Foot of Grunts, begins a sold-out North American tour next week.

But Crowe decided to launch the tour with an Australian performance at his local bar in Coffs Harbour, 360 miles north of Sydney. The coastal resort town is best known as the capital of the nation's banana-growing industry.

Crowe called the owners of the Coffs Harbour Hotel last weekend with an offer too good to refuse.

"He said: 'I want to do you a favor... I want to play the band there instead of in Sydney,'" hotel partner, Ray Alaban, said Thursday.

"It's a favor to the whole town. He's trying to put money back into the town which is great. You can't knock that can you?" Alaban said.

Crowe owns a ranch in the hills outside Coffs Harbour.

The hotel had 1,000 tickets for the Sunday night show priced at $5 each. They were sold in hours.

After the performance on Sunday the band will fly to Austin, Texas for the start of a 14-stop North American tour.

Commuters keep their seats as pregnant woman stands

DEAR ABBY: What is this world coming to? I live in an affluent suburb of Boston, and commute by subway to my job in the city. This morning I boarded a full train and took the last empty seat. Just as the doors were closing, a blind woman and her guide dog got on. I waited about 10 seconds (count it, Abby - it's a long time). No one offered the woman a seat, so I gave her mine. She graciously accepted.

What the woman couldn't see - but everyone else on the train could - is that I am eight months pregnant. For the next half-hour, I stood with aching back and swollen ankles, jangling and swaying with every movement of the train, while college kids and well-dressed executive types in their 30s watched, sipped their coffee, read the sports section and chatted zitch.

A pregnant woman gives up her seat on the train to a blind woman, while everyone else sits contentedly? If their mothers only knew Sign me.

A second oncologist was recommended. The difference was night and day. This doctor performed all the tests himself. He answered every question my wife and I had. When he was satisfied that all the questions were answered, he asked what I wanted from him. I said, "Save my life." He immediately put me on chemotherapy.

During the next five months, when I visited his office, his staff knew me by name, greeted me with a smile, and were emotionally supportive. The nurses administering the chemo were upbeat, encouraging and made me feel they cared about me.

Being surrounded by positive energy was extremely important to my recovery. Attitude is a vital element in the recovery process. Bless the doctors, nurses and staff who helped me. They realized I was a person, and more than a printout of lab results. ...

'N Sync has blockbuster first-week-sales with new disk

NEW YORK (AP) - "N Sync had blockbuster first-week sales of their new disc "Celebrity," but they still couldn't top a record by some formidable competitors - themselves.

"Celebrity" sold 1.88 million copies, second best to the first-week sales of "N Sync's "No Strings Attached," which sold 2.4 million in its debut week last year. "No Strings Attached" is still the record-holder for the best sales debut. Eminem had been No. 2 with last year's 1.7 million week-opener of "The Marshall Mathers LP," but "N Sync's latest disc ran to No. 3.

"Celebrity" is the third album from the five-member boy band.

Budget crunch looms

Dwindling surplus has Republicans searching for answers

By Janet Hook
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The storm clouds gathering over the economy are about to burst in Washington — and Republicans are reaching for a political umbrella.

In just a few weeks — while members of Congress are away from the Capitol for their summer break — government analysts are expected to release new projections showing the federal budget surplus will be far smaller than previously predicted as a result of the economic slowdown and President Bush's tax cut.

Republicans at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue are girding to defend themselves against an expected political onslaught from Democrats, especially if the surplus is so much smaller than the government will be required, in effect, to draw on the Medicare trust fund surplus to finance other programs.

Adding to the ominous sense of impending bad budget news was this week's report that in the short term, the government will have to borrow money to cover its expenses for the quarter that ends Sept. 30.

As lawmakers prepare to return home for the August recess, GOP leaders are moving more aggressively to prepare a response aimed at countering any impression that their fiscal policy is destined to send the government back into debt. At the same time, they are struggling to figure out how the dwindling surplus affects the shape of the budget that Congress needs to pass for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

If the surplus projections drop as much as many analysts expect — down to $160 billion, a 40 percent drop from earlier predictions — it will cast doubt on Congress' ability to finance several elements of Bush's agenda. These include his plans to beef up the Pentagon's budget, construct a national missile defense system and expand education aid — unless lawmakers are willing to return to the deficit spending of yesteryear. And if the projections show a drop in surpluses for years to come, it also will jeopardize such Bush priorities as reforming Social Security.

"People are scrambling around all over the place trying to figure out what to do," said Rick May, a former staff director of the House Budget Committee who remains close to congressional GOP budget experts.

Signs of Republican anxiety are subtle but pervasive. Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, the top Republican on the Budget Committee, cautioned during a Capitol Hill meeting Tuesday with Bush and other GOP senators that the new surplus numbers could spark public concern. Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., on Monday acknowledged that Bush's Pentagon buildup could be a victim of a dwindling surplus. Amid such warnings, briefing materials are being prepared for GOP lawmakers to help them explain the complex budget situation to their constituents while they are home in August.

Democrats themselves may not be able to escape blame for the changing budget picture: Many of them supported the Bush tax cut, which has taken a big chunk out of the surplus. Indeed, many Democrats wanted an even bigger short-term tax cut than was ultimately approved, in order to stimulate the economy. And now that they control the Senate, Democrats share some of the responsibility for adjusting the budget this fall to accommodate the new fiscal reality.

"There's going to be a lot of blame game going around," said Robert Reichner, president of the Urban Institute, a nonprofit research organization.

The trepidation surrounding the release of midyear budget revisions — which are expected in mid-to-late August from both the Congressional Budget Office and the administration's Office of Management and Budget — marks a big mood swing from the prelude to such reports in recent years.

Court lets stand monopoly ruling against Microsoft

WASHINGTON (AP) — An appeals court refused on Thursday to reconsider its decision that Microsoft illegally mingled its Windows operating system and Internet browser, handing the software giant a setback in its four-year antitrust battle with the government.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia denied Microsoft's request in a brief order, clearing the way for the case to be sent back to a lower court to decide Microsoft's penalty for being an illegal monopoly.

"Nothing in the court's opinion is intended to preclude the District Court's consideration of remedy issues," the appellate judges said.

In its June order, the appeals court decided that Microsoft illegally commingled software code for the two flagship products in an attempt to stunt competition and keep consumers from using one without the other. Microsoft asked the court to reconsider. The commingling issue was a central tenet of the Justice Department's antitrust case. However, the jurists Thursday also denied the Justice Department's request to speed up the case. Their decision keeps the lower court from tackling the penalty decision until mid-August.

Andy Cavit, a Howard University law professor following the case, said he wasn't surprised by Microsoft's loss but didn't understand why the appeals court didn't relinquish control of the case immediately. Connecticut Attorney General

Richard Blumenthal, representing one of the states suing Microsoft, said he was pleased by the court's decision. He said a rehearing "would have been both unnecessary and time-consuming, and we look forward to proceeding expeditiously before the District Court."

The Justice Department was also happy with the court's ruling, according to spokeswoman Gina Talamona.

Study: Depression hits during pregnancy too

LONDON - Depression is at least as common during pregnancy as it is after childbirth, and should be diagnosed because it may be harmful to the baby, new research indicates.

While doctors are careful to spot and treat postnatal depression, they are not so vigilant about looking out for depression during pregnancy because they don't expect to see it, said the study's lead investigator Jonathan Evans, a senior lecturer in psychiatry at Bristol University in England. The study was published this week in the British Medical Journal.

"This will be a surprise to many because most people think that women are protected from depression during pregnancy, that it is a time of emotional well-being," agreed Dr. Ruta Nonacs, a perinatal psychiatrist at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston who was not involved in the study. "But this shows that over 10 percent of women have depression during pregnancy - the same as at any point in their lives."

Previous studies have suggested that depression and anxiety during pregnancy may be linked to low birth weights, premature birth and reduced blood flow in the womb.

U.S. vows to oppose singling out Israel for racist criticism

WASHINGTON - Denouncing attempts to brand Israel as racist, the Bush administration vowed Thursday to fight any move to single out the Jewish state for criticism at a U.N. conference against racism.

Suggestions that Secretary of State Colin Powell would not attend the conference opening Aug. 31 in South Africa or that he would send a low-level delegation prompted most of the Arab governments to drop references to Zionism from the text of a draft document.

But there were other stabs at Israel laced through the 89-page text. The likely line of attack the Arabs will center on is to try to condemn Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza as a form of colonialism that victimizes Palestinians who live in territories, said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., the U.S. Congressional delegate.

In Mexico, Tabasco heats up as election date nears

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico - Wearing a T-shirt that reads, "I am the solution for Tabasco," Manuel Andrade appears confident he will be elected the state's next governor, with no problems that caused his victory last year to be overturned by a federal court.

Most polls, however, show the two main candidates in a tight race before Sunday's election that could give Andrade's party a new hope for a national comeback - or drive a final nail into its coffin.

Andrade and Raul Ojeda also were the main candidates in the gubernatorial race last October. Although the state electoral board declared Andrade the winner by a slim margin, a federal court annulled the decision, saying the elections in the gulf state had been fraught with errors. The annulled victory has been the closest Andrade's Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, has come to winning a governor's race since it lost the presidency last year. The party had held the post for more than 70 years, and its presidential loss sent it into deep crisis.

Colombian army kills more rebels in counterattack

BOGOTA, Colombia - Government troops pursued a battered guerrilla column through the mountains Thursday after reportedly killing about 60 rebels in one of the military's biggest battlefield victories in years.

World in brief

Colombian commanders were jubilant at how a combined air and ground assault had blunted a rebel attack in the village of Juan Jose and then decimated the insurgents.

Witnesses said the rebels on Tuesday had been attacking an army outpost in Juan Jose, 250 miles northwest of Bogota, when U.S.-made Blackhawk helicopters came to the rescue, sweeping over the town and unleashing a barrage of rockets and machine-gun fire.

A spokeswoman at an office of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC, said the rebels were assessing the military situation and had no immediate comment on the fighting. The FARC office inside a safe haven in southern Colombia that President Andres Pastrana granted to the rebels in order to jumpstart peace talks. After more than two years, peace talks with Colombia's biggest rebel group have produced few results.

Court sentenced German protester for summit riot

STOCKHOLM, Sweden - A 20-year-old German was sentenced to 14 months in prison Thursday for rioting during the EU summit in Goteborg, Sweden's second largest city.

Hannes Heine of Berlin also will be expelled after serving his sentence and banned from re-entering the country for five years, according to court documents. A panel of judges ruled that Heine threw things at police and led a group of activists in street fighting that broke out during the EU meetings from June 14-16. Heine pleaded innocent.

Twenty people, including 13 foreigners, have been sentenced to prison in connection with the violence. More than 90 people were injured and about 560 were detained at least briefly.

Rescuers find hundreds alive after island flooding

GUNUNG SITOLI, Indonesia - Villagers struggled through rivers of mud on Thursday to dig out survivors of a deluge of floods and landslides that devastated a remote Indonesian island.

At least 35 people have died in the mountainous interior of Nias island, off the west coast of Sumatra. About 200 villagers are still missing, officials say.

Government official Herlan Tandjung said rescuers had reached more than 600 people who had been reported missing since floods triggered by days of heavy rain hit the island on Tuesday. Most of the survivors had moved to higher ground, he said.

Initially, officials had reported that 64 people had died, but scaled back the figure after they received more reliable information.

Palestinians sentence collaborator to death

JERUSALEM (AP) - In the courtroom, Palestinian judges sentenced four Palestinian men to death this week for helping Israel's army carry out lethal attacks, including a 50-year-old convicted Thursday in a case lasting just 90 minutes.

And on the streets, three Palestinians suspected of collaborating with Israel were shot down in recent days, and a militant Palestinian group promised more shootings were on the way.

The recent Israeli military raids, such as Tuesday's helicopter assault that killed eight Palestinians - including two top leaders of the militant Hamas group - have angered many Palestinians. But the Israeli army poses a difficult target, leading some Palestinians to focus their sights on fellow Palestinians suspected of helping Israel.

Ahmed Abu Issah, who was convicted and sentenced Thursday, admitted he gave the Israelis information on the movements of Palestinian militants. Salah Darwazah, killed July 25 when Israeli missiles destroyed his car as he drove through the West Bank town of Nablus. "I'm guilty and I'm asking for mercy," Issah, a laborer with nine children, told the security court in Nablus. He received about $45 every time he provided information on Darwazah's travel route, he said.

As a glum Issah sat inside a cage in the courtroom, the three-judge panel sentenced him to death. Spectators in the packed courtroom and some 2,000 people on the street chanted "execution, execution."

The Israeli security forces won't discuss their contacts with Palestinian collaborators, but have relied on them for years. Some Palestinians do it for the money. Others say they were forced to become collaborators after being arrested by the Israelis and tortured in jail.

The collaborators' role can take many different forms. They may provide detailed information on the movements of a suspect. In some cases, they are believed to have planted weapons that allow Israeli helicopters to fire sophisticated weapons with precision.

Northern Rockies Folk Festival stirs up jambalaya of sound

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Serve up a little Mumbo-Gumbo, toss in some Etouffee, add a few Jaybirds and Grasshoppers and you have a musical stew a-brewing here this weekend.

Oh, and don't forget Grammy award-winning country, songster Rodney Crowell, Pinto Bennett and the Famous Motel Cowboys, Too Slim & the Taildraggers and the Doc Tater Trio to boot.

It's the recipe for the 24th annual Northern Rockies Folk Festival taking place tonight and Saturday in Hailey's Hop Porter Park.

"There aren't many folk festivals in the West that are older than ours," said co-organizer Pete Kramer. "And when I look around at the others, like Bumbershoot or Telluride, it's still the lowest cost for a two-day festival."

It'll cost you just $13 to see name talent like Crowell, plus you get nearly two full days of entertainment besides. Though not as cheap as the free folk festival Seattle hosts every Memorial Day, it's less than you'd pay to see an hour's worth of Crowell at Boise's Western-Idaho-Fair. And certainly less than the $100-plus you'd have to shell out for the Telluride festival.

The first few folk festivals were a joint effort between Richard Hart and the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities and Hailey resident Kit Neras, who was interested in continuing the tradition of free jam sessions he'd experienced at the University of Idaho.

Made up of people such as Rosalie Sorrels, Utah Phillips and even Picabo's Mom, Dee Street, they attracted 500 people to camp set up at Trail Creek Cabin, Dollar Mountain and the Elkhorn driving range.

Over the next few years, the festival exposed people to "lost arts," such as old-time string and Celtic music, even throwing in a sea chantey workshop or two.

Since, it has evolved into the Wood River Valley's largest block party with about 2,000 people gathering together to sample tried and true talent like the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Riders in the Sky and Robert Earl Keen, as well as unknown groups like The Derailleurs,

They don't come much more eclectic than Nashville's Rodney Crowell, who has written songs for both Bob Seeger and the Oak Ridge Boys.

who went on to become big-time stuff. "Ketchum was pretty much into cowboy music at the time. We exposed the valley to something other than bar bands," Neras recalled. "At least, I don't recall Cajun and real strong blues in the valley before we brought it here."

This year's headliner, dubbed "The Houston Kid," has played in Emmylou Harris' band, been married to Rosanne Cash, written songs such as "Leaving Louisiana in the Broad Daylight" for groups like the Oak Ridge Boys, Bob Seeger, Waylon and Willie and the Dirt Band and even found time to record his own songs. Songs like "I Couldn't Leave You If I Tried" and "She's Crazy For Leavin.'" Crowell will perform at 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Mumbo-Gumbo, a seven-piece world-beat band from the Bay Area, mixes a little washboard with accordion to concoct a mix of New Orleans rumba, zydeco and Cajun.

The Jaybirds perform traditional folk, country and bluegrass standards; Too Slim and the Taildraggers, Northwest blues, and The Etouffee Band, Cajun, rhythm 'n blues and what they call "swamp rock."

Pinto Bennett, a good ol' Mountain Home boy who has been setting cowboy bars afire for two dozen years, will lead the local talent. The Grasshoppers, a Today's entertainment schedule: 4 p.m. Ken Worthington; 5 p.m. The Jaybirds; 6:30 p.m. Too Slim & the Taildraggers; 8:30 p.m. Mumbo-Gumbo. Saturday's schedule: 1 p.m. Dynamic Duo; 2 p.m. Doc Tater Trio; 3 p.m. The Grasshoppers; 4 p.m. Pinto Bennett and The Famous Motel Cowboys; 6 p.m., Etouffee; 8:30 p.m., Rodney Crowell.

father-son, husband-wife team from the Treasure Valley, playing bluegrass. Wood River Valley entertainers include the Doc Tater Trio, a bluegrass band; the Dynamic Duo, which plays a mix of rock, blues and country and Ken Worthington, a fixture with the Old-Time Fiddlers.

"It used to be we'd hire a band and people would say, 'That's not folk music. That's electric or that's the blues,'" Kramer said. "But I figure if folks are listening it must be folk music. You're never going to see Metallica or Marilyn Manson or Journey, but blues, for instance, are an American art form."

"I remember one year at the Newport Folk Festival in the '60s, Bob Dylan came on with an electric guitar backed by an electric band and everyone was agast. They thought that was the end of folk music. But, you know it was the Paul Butterfield band that backed Dylan that day and they had a guitarist named Elvin Bishop, who plays hot electric blues. And, you know what? He's played at our festival."

There will be several food booths serving up everything from spuds to pizza, according to Marilyn Simmons. Proceeds from the Viva Taqueria booth will go to purchase an angel statue to be placed in Hailey in memory of children who have died.

And, as always, a friendship quilt will be raffled off to help underwrite the festival.

Hop Porter Park is about two blocks west of Paul's Market on Bullion Street.

Independent filmmakers discover the town of 'Jackpot'

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — The Polish boys—actually, they're from California—have returned to their favorite corner of the world.

Michael and Mark Polish, whose 1999 independent film "Twin Falls, Idaho" made them art-house darlings the world over, have made a movie about Jackpot.

Well, it's not actually about Jackpot, any more than "Twin Falls, Idaho" was about Twin Falls, Idaho.

But "Jackpot" was filmed here—in part—last year, according to the brothers' publicist, and it's the town of the title.

Released by Sony Pictures Classics last week, it's actually a road movie about an aspiring country-western singer who struggles for fame in a collection of Western roadhouses and casinos.

John Gries stars as Sunny Holiday in Sony Pictures Classics' summer release, "Jackpot."

Calls to Michael and Mark Polish were not returned this week.

While "Twin Falls, Idaho," the saga of conjoined Siamese twins glitter to it.

Darryl Hannah, she of "Splash" and "Wall Street," plays the singer's jilted wife and Anthony Edwards (Dr. Mark Greene of "E.R.") is his brother.

Adam Baldwin plays a reporter, Peggy Lipton (remember "Mod Squad") is a seductive waitress, Garrett Morris (a member of the original "Saturday Night Live" cast) is his manager and country singer Mac Davis is, well, a country singer.

The lead character, Sunny, is played by Jon Gries, a veteran Hollywood actor who was the associate producer of "Twin Falls, Idaho."

Mark Polish — the co-screenwriter of "Jackpot" — has a cameo role in the movie, but Michael, the film's director and co-author, does not. The brothers played the twins in "Twin Falls, Idaho."

They're 29-year-old identical twins who grew up in Sacramento, Calif. "Twin Falls, Idaho," their first feature film, was accepted for showing at the 1999 Sundance Film Festival, where it found an audience and, more importantly, a distributor.

As of earlier this week, "Jackpot" had not yet been booked to play anywhere near Jackpot.

But then, Twin Falls, Idaho, is still awaiting the local premiere of "Twin Falls, Idaho." It's available there on video.

It could be a long wait for "Jackpot" as well. In its press kit, Money Classic Pictures explains that "Jackpot, Nevada" is a town 100 miles south of Twin Falls, Idaho.

It's actually 45 miles.

'The Dish' hits theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, Knight Ridder Newspapers and Associated Press reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance and attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'America's Sweethearts'

Clearly, there's a lot to like here. Reliably directed by Joe Roth, it's well cast, with an excellent premise, and a wicked sense of humor, especially about the movie business. But as enjoyable as this film is in parts, its not nearly as successful as a whole. Enormously engaging in its opening segments, it's unable to sustain that good feeling over the long haul. Julia Roberts, Billy Crystal, Catherine Zeta-Jones and John Cusack star. (140. PG-13 for language, some crude and sexual humor.)

'Atlantis: The Lost Empire'

Its gift for wide-screen spectacle notwithstanding, this gee-whiz story of a turn-of-the-century search for the fabled lost continent has the look and feel of the 1981 not 2001. (135. PG, for action violence.)

'The Dish'

Here's the dish on 'The Dish,' whose title refers not to dinnerware or even to gossip but to the potentially driest of topics, a satellite dish. The movie is a likable slice of small-town Australian life at a time when a little-known rural community came to the forefront of the globe. Sure, 'The Dish' may not always sustain its humor, and those on guard against sentimentality may feel the hackles rise. But as directed by Rob Sitch, who co-wrote the screenplay with three others, this dark and complex antidodeca contribution to the 1969 Apollo 11 moon mission is more 'Apollo 13.' Simply put, it's a lark. Rated PG-13.

'Dr. Dolittle 2'

The new item is an improvement over the original 'Dr. D' (not the most difficult feat, perhaps, but true nevertheless) and features an engaging performance by the continually remarkable Eddie Murphy. But precisely because it is an improvement, 'Dr. D 2' is also more depressing than its progenitor. With the application of more intelligence and a different sensibility, this could have been a good film instead of one that's content with not being a complete waste of time. With Kristen Wilson, Kyla Pratt, Raven-Symon and Jeffrey Jones. (122. PG, for language and crude humor.)

'Cats & Dogs'

A very resistible movie made from what sounds like an irresistible premise, it proves one more time that it's easier to make animals talk than give them anything interesting to say. With the human actors (Tiff Gettler, Elizabeth Perkins) marking time at best (and that best is rare) it

Movies

 characterized "Princess Mononoke." It's an uneasy fit at best, and one that's not helped by a clunky, over-complicated script. This latest example of the videogameification of Hollywood insists on making this stuff serious, by even though the sight of these characters getting romantic is about as involving as watching two expensive mannequins kissing in a Macy's window. Directed by Ming-Na, Alec Baldwin, Donald Sutherland and James Woods. (1.46, PG-13, for sci-fi action violence.)

'Jurassic Park III'
 The dinosaurs are getting smarter. The people are getting spacier. A lot spacier. Some of the film's new creatures, like the flying Pteranodons, are noticeably chilling, while the raptors are fierce as they can be, have a tendency to occasionally look like demented chickens on steroids. But it matters not. Humans may be stupid and fragile, but dinosaurs are forever. Written by newcomer Peter Buchman and the team of Alexander Payne and Jim Taylor. Directed by Joe Johnston. With Sam Neill, William H. Macy and Tea Leoni.

'Kiss of the Dragon'
 'Jet' is too archaic a forename for Hong Kong action star Jet Li, but speed, especially when accelerated by movie trickery, should upgrade him to 'Concorder.' He plays a Chinese cop in Paris, framed for murder by a corrupt gendarme (Tchéky Karyo). Bridget Fonda tags along as a good-hearted hooker, but the only reason to see this is Li's dazzling acrobatic skills: Look, Ma, no wires! Rated R, violence, language, drug use, sexual situations. 1 hour, 38 minutes.

'Legally Blonde'
 A high concept can be a wonderful thing. Up to a point. Starring an impeccably groomed Reese Witherspoon as a Bel-Air airhead wending her way through law school, this is basically 'Clueless Goes to Harvard.' Nothing wrong with that notion, but this is no 'Clueless.' With Luke Wilson and Selma Blair. (1.36, PG-13, for language and sexual references.)

'The Mummy Returns'
 The inescapable sequel to the 1999 hit brings back all the principals and heaps on more of everything: The squabbling adventurers Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weiss are now married, with a son as curious about dusty old forbidden chambers as they are, and the crumbling antiquity of a villain Imhotep (Arnold Vosloo) has a rival in the Scorpion King (wrestler The Rock). Director-writer Stephen Sommers and a legion of computer-generated-imagery artists conjure endless armies of monsters and swarms of creepy bugs and build pyramids and castles that never were, but it's finally all more exhausting than it is exhilarating. Where do movies like this go when the effects are no longer special? Rated PG-13; violence. 2 hours, 10 minutes.

'Original Sin'
 At least seven deadly sins of rotten filmmaking are at work in writer-director Michael Cristofer's thrill-less romantic thriller starring Antonio Banderas and Angelina Jolie: Grating melodramatics, bad dialogue, tiresome voice-overs, hack editing, overbearing music, cheery camera work, unpleasant characters with incomprehensible motivation. Banderas plays a Cuban coffee merchant whose beautiful American bride (Jolie) turns out to be a pretty scary piece of work. The action is beyond lethargic and the characters uninvolved. It's quite a dubious achievement by Cristofer to so fully douse the sparks that Banderas and Jolie could and should have made fly. R for strong sexual content and some violence. 116 minutes.

'Pearl Harbor'
 An intelligent, briskly-paced and action-filled summer blockbuster that views Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor as the beginning of America's loss of innocence, a point of view that encompasses passion, valor, epic disaster and spectacular aerial warfare. In the foreground are lifelong pals, U.S. Army pilots (Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) both in love with Navy nurse Kate Beckinsale. Directed by Michael Bay, written by Randall Wallace and co-starring Cuba Gooding Jr., Tom Sizemore, Jon Voight and Alec Baldwin. (3.00, PG-13 for sustained intense war sequences; images of wounded, brief sensuality and some language.)

'Planet of the Apes'
 The least surprising movie of the summer. It's not only that after the original 1968 film, four sequels plus two television series, everyone who cares knows the underlying material; it's also that the sensibility of director Tim Burton is equally well-known and twice as predictable. Outside of a hyper-energetic, irresistibly evil portrayal by Paul Giamatti as General Thade, the baddest ape in town, the sad truth about 'Planet of the Apes' is that, disappointingly, it's just not very much fun to watch. With Mark Wahlberg, Helena Bonham Carter and Michael Clarke Duncan. (1.59, PG-13 for some sequences of action/violence.)

'The Princess Diaries'
 A Pygmalion story told in Pollyanna terms, this one's as sappy as they come. But sometimes sappy-works, and this is one of those times. Powered by a stately turn from Julie Andrews and a sunny performance from relative-newcomer—Anne Hathaway, 'Princess Diaries' is one-to-savor-for-its-good-humor and big heart, not its hackneyed fairy-tale notions. Hathaway plays a shy, awkward teen thrust into the spotlight when her royal grandma (Andrews) shows up and tells her she's heir to a tiny kingdom's throne. Director Garry Marshall lets the movie run longer than it should and allows the action to veer into lame high school shenanigans that detract from the story. But he recovers the focus in time for the predictable yet convivial conclusion. G. 114 minutes.

'Rush Hour 2'
 Neither great comedy nor great action, 'Rush Hour 2' still has enough of both to make it a fun ride from start to finish. Once again directed by Brett Ratner, Jackie Chan and Chris Tucker return as the best squabbling cop duo since the early 'Lethal Weapon' movies. This time, they track a counterfeit ring from Hong Kong to Los Angeles to Las Vegas. The sequel has better balance, with Tucker throwing a few more punches and Chan hurling more insults. The repartee is fairly ordinary, but earnest delivery by Lee and especially Tucker makes the dialogue feel snappier than it is. John Lone and Zhang Ziyi provide solid support as villains. With slightly better comedy and action, 'Rush Hour 2' is that rare sequel that exceeds the original. PG-13 for action violence, language and some sexual material. 90 minutes.

'Scary Movie 2'
 Keenen Ivory Wayans' broad burlesque of haunted-house movies—plus a prologue skewering 'The Exorcist'—is extremely heavy on gross-out humor involving sex and violence and lots shorter in inspiration than last summer's original 'Scary Movie' was. With Marlon and Shawn Wayans, Anna Farris, James Woods. (1.22, R, for strong sexual and gross humor, graphic language and some drug content.)

'The Score'
 A top-drawer heist movie that ratchets up the tension, it will remind you of classic caper films of the past, and that is a good thing. This is as much a character study as a thriller, so having a trio of exceptional actors—Robert De Niro, Marlon Brando, and Edward Norton—is a powerful plus. To make this ensemble work at its best, director Frank Oz wasn't afraid to be traditional, restrained, even old-fashioned. Who would have guessed that lurking inside the man who lurked inside Yoda and Miss Piggy was a thriller director eager to get out? (2.02, R for language.)

'Shrek'
 A gleeful piece of wisenheimer computer-animation, this new version of William Steig's fractured fairy tale about an ogre who rescues a princess is all comic attitude, all the time. It especially benefits from its superb voice talent, including Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, John Lithgow and an unstoppable Eddie Murphy as a donkey sidekick named, well, Donkey. (1.29, PG for mild language and some crude humor.)

Actress dismisses rumors of affair with her co-star

Knigh Ridder News Service

How much duller would our lives be without Angelina Jolie around to spice things up?

While on Good Morning America to promote her steamy new film, Original Sin, the pop-lipped star dismissed the rumor that she had had an affair with her leading man, Antonio Banderas, doing so with her usual provocative style, reports Mr. Showbiz.

Said the Oscar-winner (GIR), interrupted: "He is married to a beautiful woman," referring to Melanie Griffith, "and I'd sooner sleep with her than have an affair with him."

Jolie has in the past said she's the actress "most likely to sleep with her female fans," and said she has nearly everything in common with the character of bisexual supermodel Gia Carides, whom she played in HBO's Gia.

Meanwhile, Jolie is giving conflicting reports about whether she's planning to get started on reproducing with husband Billy Bob Thornton. The actress told E! News Daily that she's leaving a 2-5 year gap between Tomb Raider films in case she gets pregnant, adding that she and Thornton are also considering adoption.

LET'S ALL DO OUR PART...
...to conserve water. This is the time of year when the most water is consumed in the community. Whether watering the lawn, washing the car, hosing the kids down, or cleaning off the driveway, we don't stop to think of how much extra water we are using, and often wasting.

How can we conserve water?
We can do it by:

- Sweep driveways, sidewalks, and steps rather than hosing off.
- Wash the car with water from a bucket, or consider using a commercial carwash that recycles water.
- When using a hose, control the flow with an automatic shut-off nozzle.
- If you have a swimming pool, consider a new water-saving pool filter.
- Lower pool water level to reduce amount of water splashed out.
- Use a pool cover to reduce evaporation when pool is not being used.

Area teams hope to bring home title

State crown appears up for grabs

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The team that is going to take home the AA American Legion state title is going to be the one that responds best starting Saturday. Or so say the coaches. "Whoever is on their A-game will go on and whoever is not will go taw and barbecue," said Minico coach Russ Wright, whose team hosts the eight-team tournament.

"There are eight good teams with eight good records there," said Randy Shipman, coach of the Area A Champion Alliance Title Allies of Coeur d'Alene. "Anybody can win it." But Twin Falls coach Matt Rasmussen said he has a hunch as to who will come out on top. Or at least he's narrowed it down to three teams.

"Not having seen the two north teams (Coeur d'Alene and Lewis-Clark), I think the three Area C teams — Minico, the (Idaho Falls) Russets and us — have a great shot. I'm picking a team from our area to get the job done."

Of course, he would like it to be his Cowboys. But they are facing a tough, first-round matchup with the Allies, who are mostly from Coeur d'Alene High School. Coeur d'Alene won the Class A-1 Division I state baseball title in May before vacating the crown

BACK TO WORK

Vikings players and staff take part in a team prayer on the practice field in Menkato, Minn., Thursday. The mourning Vikings resumed practice a day after training camp shut down over the heat-related death of offensive tackle Corey Stringer.

Vikings practice as state investigates lineman's death

The Associated Press

MANKATO, Minn. — Filing past bouquets and balloons left by grieving fans, the Minnesota Vikings returned to practice Thursday with hopes football would provide comfort for a team in mourning. The state, meanwhile, began investigating the heatstroke death of tackle Corey Stringer to determine whether the Vikings were negligent. With conditions considerably cooler than the day Stringer collapsed, the Vikings went through light workouts and insisted that rules and precautions had been followed. One assistant coach said films of Stringer's last practice showed that he played well, never missing a block. "It's very unfortunate that he worked himself to death," offensive line coach Mike Tice said. At a news conference after an 80-minute morning practice, coach Dennis Green brushed aside all medical questions and became angry when pushed for an answer on what happened. "I'm not going to sit here and act like I have answers as far as what happens when a tragedy occurs, but I'll answer questions about the game of football," Green said. The 27-year-old Stringer was overcome by heat after finishing Tuesday morning's practice in stifling humidity and temperatures in the low 90s. He died 15 hours later, early Wednesday morning. James Honerman, a spokesman for the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry, said the agency met with Vikings officials "and they were very cooperative with us in our investigation." State officials are talking to the team about "what type of training the staff and employees might have received with regards to heat-related illnesses," Honerman said. Stringer finished the morning session before asking a trainer for assistance. Tice, who helped shape Stringer from an overweight lineman into a Pro Bowl player, insisted the tackle showed no warning signs and the coaches never considered ordering the 6-foot-4, 335-pounder to take a break. "I didn't say that, because it didn't look like he needed one," said Tice, who led the linemen in a prayer as they huddled together before Thursday's practice. "He didn't look like he needed water. He looked good on film, too. He had a fantastic practice." Thursday's workout was cut short by 25 minutes, and the atmosphere was low-key, with less than the usual chatter from coaches and fans. The heat and humidity had subsided, with temperatures in the 70s. Stringer's family, including wife Kelci and 3-year-old son Kodie, issued a statement Thursday thanking the public for its support. The Vikings canceled an intra-squad scrimmage tonight and also canceled a scrimmage against Kansas City on Monday. A private funeral service was scheduled for today in Edina, Minn. Public viewing will follow.

Tribe meets Marsh Falls for district title

By John Derr and Joe Nunnen
Times-News writers

POCATELLO — Defending American Legion and Class A-2 high school state champion Buhl moved into the championship game, while three local teams were eliminated in the second day of action at the Area C American Legion A District Tournament Thursday in Pocatello.

Idaho Falls, the tenth seed, escaped a pair of one-run games to remain alive. The Rangers defeated Kimberly 1-0 before rallying to eliminate Twin Falls 9-8. They face Wood River today at 10 a.m. in a loser-out game. In other consolation action, Burley, who is already guaranteed a trip to the state tournament as host, topped Pocatello and Shelley to face Bear Lake at 1 p.m. today. The Bears fell to Marsh Falls in a late semifinal contest Thursday. Marsh Falls is Buhl's opponent for tonight's district championship game at 7 p.m. at Halliwell Park.

The tournament's second-place game is Saturday at 10 a.m.

Buhl 18, Wood River 8

Wood River coach Mike Chatterton knew defense would make the difference in the game against defending state champion Buhl. Unfortunately, the Wolverines were the ones who struggled as Buhl took advantage with a five-inning, run-rule victory to advance to tonight's district championship against Marsh Falls.

Wood River started well. Singles by John Upham and Ryan Nash combined with two walks and a pair of hit batters brought across three first-inning runs across for the Wolverines against — Indians — ace — Seth

LeMond surprises Armstrong

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lance Armstrong said Thursday he was upset by remarks from fellow American Tour de France champion Greg LeMond regarding Armstrong's association with an Italian doctor linked to drug use in sports. Armstrong said he had spoken to LeMond, the only other American to win cycling's most prestigious event three times and the first American to win it at all, about comments LeMond made earlier this week on Armstrong's relationship with physician Michele Ferrari.

Cyclist Lance Armstrong, winner of the 2001 Tour de France, speaks to members of the media Thursday during a group interview in New York.

LeMond had told the Guardian, a London newspaper, "In the light of Lance's relationship with Ferrari, I just don't want to comment on this year's Tour. This is not sour grapes. I'm just disappointed in Lance." Armstrong has defended his ties to Ferrari, whose name has been linked to the drug EPO. However, Armstrong said he would "re-evaluate" his relationship if the physician is found guilty of wrongdoing in a drug inquiry under way in Italy. "I was upset, I was surprised

Strip club owner pleads guilty to racketeering

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Strip club owner Steve Kaplan pleaded guilty Thursday to racketeering and agreed to a $5 million fine and a three-year prison term, in part to ensure that some of his former employees remained free, his lawyer said. Kaplan also agreed to turn over the Gold Club, one of the nation's best-known and most profitable strip clubs, to the federal government and pay restitution to customers. The club will be shuttered within a week, prosecutors said. Prosecutors painted Kaplan, 42, as a star-struck profiteer who prostituted dancers to athletes, cheated customers and funneled club profits to the Gambino crime family. He and the others were charged with obstruction, credit card fraud, loan sharking, prostitution and other crimes. Four of Kaplan's co-defendants followed him to the podium before U.S. District Judge Willis Hunt. Each signed plea agreements that will result in about a year of probation and a fine. Kaplan, whose net worth has been estimated around $50 million, agreed to the deal because it helped keep the others out of prison, particularly former dancer Jacklyn Bush, a single mother with three daughters, attorney Steve Sade said. "It would not call Steve Kaplan a fall guy," Sadow said. "I would call Steve Kaplan a guy who understands the need to repay the loyalty and friendship of those people who were on trial with him."

LETTER

-N's golf coverage fell short
Normally, I do not write letters to the editor because I regard a few of these individuals as just being bored. Well, if you were bored last week and enjoyed a good sporting event, you should have been at the Jerome Country Club.

I feel these ladies and the golfing readers of your newspaper were slighted by the minimal coverage of this premier event. A sports brief covered each round and the final results were overshadowed by a pictorial essay involving weightlifters. I respect their dedication to their sport, but I feel the exposure for the lady competitors was embarrassingly inadequate. The women's reporters from Boise and Idaho Falls than from the Magic Valley where the majority of the players have their handpicks.

Thankfully, the KMYT sports desk gave these players the accolades they deserved.
I would like to close with a great big thanks to Tracy Frank and Herb Car Sales for their kind support of the tournament. Evidently, they care a lot more about supporting golf in Twin Falls than The Times-News does.

Rockets plan future without Ojajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) - He's been perhaps the most enduring success story in the city's sports history. Now Hakeem Ojajuwon is gone.
All that remains are memories of an unmarked 20-year college and pro career, and for the Rockets to complete a sign-and-trade deal that would send the future Hall of Famer to the Toronto Raptors.

Ojajuwon made it clear Thursday, "Dream did what he thought was best for himself and his family."

As Mobley said good-bye, Raptors forward-Brian Skinner, prepared to say hello.
"His going to be good. I've worked out with him last couple of years," said Skinner, anticipating his first season with Toronto. "He doesn't try to teach you, but you watch the stuff he goes through and you learn what to do out of it." Skinner said.
Ojajuwon turned down the Rockets' offer of a guaranteed three-year contract worth $13 million to accept a $17 million deal from the Raptors for $5 million.

Twins halt five-game skid; M's win again

TORONTO (AP) — Rick Reed won his first start for Minnesota despite giving up a career-high swing 12 hits, and the Twins stopped a five-game losing streak by beating the Toronto Blue Jays 9-4 Thursday.

MLB Reed (1-0), acquired Monday from the New York Mets for outfielder Matt Lawton, allowed two runs on 11 singles and one homer in six innings. He walked none and struck out two.

Rangers 12, Yankees 2 NEW-YORK — Alex Rodriguez hit a three-run homer in Texas' six-run third inning against Mike Mussina, and the Rangers beat New-York to win their first series at Yankee Stadium in eight years.

Devil Rays 3, Orioles 2 BALTIMORE — Tanyon Sturtze pitched seven strong innings and Steve Cox drove in two runs as Tampa Bay beat Baltimore 3-2 to win its first road series of the season against an AL club.

By taking two of three from the slumping Orioles, the Devil Rays improved to 2-14-2 in road series. Their only other series win on the road came in Atlanta last month.

Angels 13, Red Sox 4 BOSTON — Garret Anderson's second homer of the game began a six-run sixth inning as Anaheim swept a series in Boston for the first time in 27 years. The Red Sox tied the game 4-4 in the fifth against Pat Rapp (4-9). But Anderson, who hit a two-run homer in the third, led off the sixth against Bret Saberhagen (1-1) with his 20th homer of the year.

Athletics 17, Indians 4 CLEVELAND — Jermaine Dye and Terrence Lough each drove in four runs and Oakland routed Cleveland.

Minnesota's Corey Koskie, left, congratulates Bobby Kline on his two-run homer against the Toronto during fourth-inning AL action in Toronto Thursday. The Twins beat the Blue Jays 9-4.

Dye, Miguel Tejada and Olmedo Saenz homered to highlight the Athletics' season-high 20-hit attack. Long had four hits.

Mariners 2, Tigers 1 DETROIT — Rookie Joel Poineiro allowed one run in seven innings as the Seattle Mariners beat the Detroit Tigers. The Mariners took two of three games from Detroit and have not lost a series on the road this season.

Poineiro (2-0) became the second Mariners pitcher to start his career with wins in his first three decisions, joining Freddy Garcia, who was a rookie in 1999. Poineiro, who won his first major league start last Aug. 8 against the White Sox, allowed four hits without walking a batter. He struck out five.

Royals 6, White Sox 3 CHICAGO — Jeff Suppan won for the first time in over a month and Raul Ibanez's bases-loaded double sparked a six-run third inning as Kansas City Royals defeated the Chicago.

National League Giants 3, Pirates 0 SAN FRANCISCO — Kirk Rueter allowed one hit over seven innings and the San Francisco Giants defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates for their season-high eighth straight victory.

Marvin Benard homered and Jeff Kent drove in two runs as the Giants completed their first three-game sweep of the Pirates in five years.

Padres 4, Cubs 3 SAN DIEGO — Ryan Klesko hit a grand slam in the eighth inning and the San Diego Padres rallied past the Chicago Cubs for the second straight game, winning 4-3 Thursday.

Expos 1, Diamondbacks 0 PHOENIX — Javier Vazquez teamed with Scott Stewart for a three-hitter, Orlando Cabrera homered and the Montreal Expos beat the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Phillies 4, Rockies 2 DENVER — Par Burrell homered in his third straight game, leading David Coggin and the Philadelphia Phillies over the Colorado Rockies. Burrell, who had struggled since the All-Star break before coming to Coors Field, went 2-for-2 with a double and his 14th home run of the year.

Brewers 4, Marlins 3 MILWAUKEE — Mark Sweeney homered and Henry Blanco hit a two-run double as the Milwaukee Brewers ended a four-game losing streak, defeating the Florida Marlins. Sweeney, playing in his second game since being called up from Triple-A Indianapolis, put the Brewers ahead with a homer in the fourth inning.

Astros 4, Mets 3, 10 innings HOUSTON — Moises Alou's infield single brought home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as the Houston Astros rallied to defeat the New York Mets 4-3 Thursday night. Going into extra innings against each other for the third straight game, the Astros handed the Mets their first loss in 41 games in which they led after eight innings.

Davies, Head share first-round lead of Women's British Open

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — England's Laura Davies shot a 4-under-par 68 on Thursday for a share of the lead in the suspended first round of the Women's British Open.

Johanna Head also opened with a 68. Fifty-four players were unable to complete the round. Scotland's Janice Moodie was 4 under with two holes to play.

Golf American-Kelly Robbins and Australia's Elisabeth Esterl shot 69s, and Swedish star Annika Sorenstam and American Rosie Jones were two strokes back after 70s. Australia's Karrie Webb, seeking her third straight victory in a major, opened with a 74.

England's Laura Davies plays her second shot to the 2nd hole during the first day of the Women's British Open on Sunday, Aug. 4, in England Thursday.

Janzen leads rain-delayed international CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Lee Janzen scored 17 points Thursday to claim the early first-round lead in the weather-delayed International at Castle Pines Golf Club.

Janzen had six birdies and an eagle in a bogey-free round that left him one point ahead of Chris Riley.

Under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this 16-year-old event, players earn five points for an eagle, two for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse.

Rory Sabbatini, whose round was delayed by lightning, had 14 points, and Scott McCarron had 13. Mark O'Meara, who had five straight birdies, was in a group at 12 that included Jose Maria Olazabal.

British Open champion David Duval had 11 points, as did two-time international winner Phil Mickelson. Defending champion Ernie Els had 9.

Lightning caused a suspension of play for 2 hours, 54 minutes early in the afternoon with about half of the field still on the course.

Briton leads three-stroke lead in Sweden

LODDEKOPINGE, Sweden — England's Anthony Wall shot a 9-under 63 to take a three-stroke lead after the first round of the Scandinavian Masters.

Wall had 10 birdies and a bogey in near-perfect conditions on the picturesque Barseback course.

Scotland's Colin Montgomerie was tied for second with Northern Ireland's Darren Clarke, Denmark's Soren Hansen and Sweden's Peter Hedblom.

Duncan advances at U.S. Women's Amateur

ANDOVER, Kan. — Meredith Duncan won two matches in triple-digit heat to advance to the semifinals of the 101st U.S. Women's Amateur Championship.

Duncan of Shreveport, La., beat Lisa Ferrero of Lodi, Calif., 2-up, and Kelli Kamimura of Burlington, Wash., 3 and 2 in the quarterfinals at Hill Hills National. Duncan will face Emily Bastel of Upper Sandusky, Ohio. In the other semifinal, Kim Joo-mi of South Korea will meet Nicole Perrot of Chile.

Hawks' Hasselbeck finds his way at training camp

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — Seattle quarterback Matt Hasselbeck is finding there's not a big difference between being the backup and the starter in training camp.

"I'm definitely more sore than I've ever been. My arm is definitely taking more throws than I've ever taken," said Seattle's new quarterback, who was No. 2 behind Brett Favre in Green Bay.

"But that's just part of it, and I welcome that. It's just nice to get the repetitions and learn that way instead of having to learn by just watching."

Hasselbeck threw interceptions Wednesday and Thursday, but says he's learning from his mistakes and that the offense is close to making some big plays.

The quarterback isn't making many connections with first-round receiver Koren Robinson, however. The Seahawks continue to limit their top pick in drills. He didn't practice for a fourth straight day Thursday.

Robinson, drafted ninth overall out of North Carolina State, had a pulled right hamstring and missed minicamps.

The injury has healed, but Coach Mike Holmgren has said he is taking precautions so Robinson doesn't hurt himself again while getting into shape.

Lions

UNIVERSITY CENTER, Mich. — Detroit Lions receiver Herman Moore separated his right shoulder in practice at Saginaw Valley State on Thursday, after tripping over another player. It wasn't clear how long

Around the NFL

Moore will be out. Moore also suffered a separate shoulder last season.

Jaguars

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Jacksonville Jaguars receiver Jimmy Smith is up to his game weight of 205 pounds, another sign his recovery from offseason abdominal surgery is going well. He works a little more in each practice, and even took a little bit of a hit Thursday from cornerback Aaron Beasley.

Coach Tom Coughlin said he'll get Smith's weekly doctor's report Saturday, and that will determine how much the Pro Bowl wide receiver will work next week. The most optimistic projections have Smith playing a limited amount in Jacksonville's third preseason game, Aug. 23 against Kansas City.

Buccaneers

TAMPA, Fla. — Tampa Bay quarterback Brad Johnson is scheduled to participate in individual drills Friday after missing the first four days of practice with a right knee laceration. Buccaneers coach Tony Dungy said Johnson will not take part in team drills. Backup quarterback Shaun King has worked with the first team in Johnson's absence.

Johnson required 15 stitches above the left knee after he cut his knee while moving furniture at his Tallahassee home. There was no damage to any muscles or tendons.

Roddick tops Kuerten in Tennis Masters Series-Canada

MONTREAL (AP) — Andy Roddick beat top-ranked Gustavo Kuerten 6-7 (4), 6-4, 6-2 on Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the Tennis Masters Series-Canada.

The 18-year-old American used a powerful serve and strong baseline play to wear down the three-time French Open champion, who ended the 2000 season as the world's top-ranked player.

Fourth-seeded Juan Carlos Ferrero of Spain also advanced, beating 16th-ranked Jan-Michael Gambill 2-6, 7-6 (5), 6-3. Arnaud Clement of France, the 10th seed, reached the quarterfinals with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-0 victory over Spain's Alberto Martin, and will face Tommy Haas of Germany, a 6-7 (4), 6-4, 7-6 (5) winner over Jerome Goland of France.

Hings cruses; Capriati advances at Acura Classic

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Top-seeded Martina Hings and third-seeded Jennifer Capriati advanced to the quarterfinals of the Acura Classic on Thursday. Hings beat Alexandra Stevenson 6-1, 6-3, and Capriati overcame a 1-3 deficit in the first set to beat 15th-seeded Jelena Dokic of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-2. Fourth-seeded Lindsay Davenport also advanced, topping Austria's Barbara Monica Spies, seeded seventh, beat Meghann Shaughnessy 6-4, 6-1, and 12th-seeded Sandrine Testud of France upset eighth-seeded Elena Demetieva of Russia 6-2, 6-4.

Seeded players advance in PreCon Open Ladies tourney

BASEL, Switzerland — Cristina Torrens Valero of Spain beat fellow Spaniard Marra Marrero in 6-1, 6-3, at the Acura Classic Thursday in Carlsbad, Calif. Three sets Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the PreCon Open Ladies tournament. Torrens Valero, one of the two remaining seeds won 6-4, 5-7, 6-3.

Martina Hings in her third-round match overpowered Alexandra Stevenson, 6-1, 6-3, at the Acura Classic Thursday in Carlsbad, Calif.

In other action, Wimbledon mixed doubles champion Daniela Hantuchova of Slovakia handily swept past Tatiana Poutchek of Belarus 6-2, 6-4.

Israel's Anna Smashnova had an even easier time, dispatching Swede Asa Carlsson 6-1, 6-1, for her place in the round of eight where she will meet Germany's Bittina Lamade.

Becker to play doubles at Cincinnati Masters

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Boris Becker will come out of retirement next week to play doubles alongside Wimbledon champion Goran Ivanisovic.

The 33-year-old German, winner of 49 singles titles, has received a wild card to play at his first ATP event since July 1999. In 1985, Becker defeated Mats Wilander to become Cincinnati's youngest singles champion at 17 years and nine months.

Buoniconti makes name for himself in Canton

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Nick Buoniconti's name was never called in the NFL draft. Later he played for the "No-Name Defense" in Miami.

"Now he's being honored for selection for years, Buoniconti will finally have his name engraved on a bust at the Pro Football Hall of Fame. He will be inducted Saturday along with coach Mary Levy, offensive linemen Mike Munchak, Jackie Slater and Pro Bowl wide receiver Lynn Swann and defensive end Jack Youngblood.

The road from overlooked collegian to the top player on the only unbeaten team in NFL history has left Buoniconti groping for a way to thank everyone one when he stands on the front steps of the hall.

"There's so much I'm grateful for," said Buoniconti, who was selected by a seniors committee after he failed for 15 years to garner enough votes for induction. "They give you seven minutes, supposedly. I can't say my name in seven minutes."

He will receive help from his son, Marc, who will present his father in what promises to be a memorable moment. Marc was paralyzed from the neck down in a football accident in 1985. The Buoniconti family has worked tirelessly ever since — raising around $10 million annually over the last 15 years — in an effort to find a cure for paralysis.

"It's just a matter of time," Marc said of the quest for reaching that goal. It was just a matter of time until Buoniconti received the acclaim he missed early in his professional career. An All-American at Notre Dame, Buoniconti was dismissed as too small and was passed over in the draft by every NFL team. He waited until the 13th round to finally be selected by the AFL's Boston Patriots.

Buoniconti flourished in seven seasons with the Patriots and was later named to the AFL's all-time team. He is best known, however, as the cornerstone of the Dolphins' perfect season in 1972.

"I take great pride in the fact that I'm wearing the only ring in the history of the NFL that signifies that we won an undefeated season," said Buoniconti, who has been an analyst on HBO's "Inside the NFL" for the past 23 seasons.

"That's a special club, that Hall of Fame club, and he certainly belongs," said his coach in Miami, fellow club member Don Shula.

Levy is remembered as the coach of the only team to make it to four straight Super Bowls — and to lose every time.

"Levy averaged 10 wins a year in his 11 seasons with the Bills, believes those four losses — one on a mauling, close missed field goal on the final play — simply showed the mental toughness of his team."

Munchak, Slater and Yary labored as dominant blockers on great teams. They also received their share of individual honors, too. Munchak was named first- or second-team All-Pro 10 times for the Houston Oilers. Slater played 20 superlative seasons with the Rams — still an NFL record for longevity with one team. Yary was All-Pro six times and All-NFC eight straight seasons from 1970-77 with the Minnesota Vikings.

"I could have been better at basketball, but it wasn't physical enough, Yary said. "I loved being knocked down as much as knocking someone down."

Swann saved his best for the big games with the Pittsburgh Steelers dynasty of the 1970s. In the Steelers' 21-17 Super Bowl victory in 1975, he had four receptions for 161 yards, including a 64-yard catch and run that provided the winning score.

In 14 years with the Rams, Youngblood was All-NFC eight times and was the league's defensive MVP in 1979.

Youngblood, Swann and Munchak will each be presented by former teammates: fellow Hall of Famer Merlin Olsen, John Stallworth and Bruce Matthews, respectively.

Yary's line coach at Minnesota, John Metchie, will introduce his "white" Slater will be presented by his coach with the Rams, John Robinson. Levy selected longtime friend and Indianapolis Colts president Bill Polian to make his presentation speech.

Yary's induction will also be introduced during Monday night's annual Hall of Fame exhibition game between the Dolphins and St. Louis Rams.

Swimmers compete at the 2001 Sagebrush Swimming Championships at the Jackpot Recreation Center July 28. Over 450 swimmers from Idaho and Nevada competed.

Swimmers make splash at Sagebrush Championships

By Sam Feltnan
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. — The high desert of Jackpot, Nev., became a desert oasis for over 450 swimmers on Saturday.

The Jackpot Recreation Center was the site for the 2001 Sagebrush Championship Swim Meet with junior swimmers from across Idaho and Nevada competing for medals.

Judging from the ripples in the pool to the parking lot, which spilled over to the nearby community church and school parking lots, the event was a huge success. Jackpot swim team coach Ann Standley said the junior swim league teams attending the meet prove that the sport is growing.

"This developmental league (for children ages 5-18) is growing leaps and bounds," Standley said. "We are going to have to expand the season."

Despite the large number of swimmers, there was praise for the day's events. Chris Jafay, Wood River coach, said it was a fantastic meet.

"We all had a great time thanks to the Jackpot hospitality," Jafay said. "The meet was well run with the new emphasis being technique and upper-level competitive swimming. These kids can move up to the next level in U.S. swimming."

And every swimmer got the chance to show their stuff.

"No one rides the bench, everyone swims," said parent Becky Messner.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Hispanic business program offers loans

TWIN FALLS - The Hispanic Business Association's micro-loan program is taking applications for the first Hispanic loan fund available in Idaho, according to HELP- Chairman Justo Fuentes.

HELP stands for Hispanic Enterprise Loan Program.

The fund was established with assistance from U.S. Bank and IDA-ORE - Planning and Development Association. The loans will provide seed money for Hispanic entrepreneurs seeking to develop a business, expand an existing business or meet local requirements for opening a business.

The HELP program will provide up to $1,500 and will require training in business skills, marketing, customer service and other topics.

"Specialized mentoring and counseling will be available. HELP will provide much more than money, it will provide the tools for building a strong business foundation," the Hispanic Business Association, of Boise, said in a statement.

For applications, call Alice Whitney at IDA-ORE Planning, 322-7033, Ext. 242.

U.S. Treasury returns $15.2M to Idahoans

TWIN FALLS - The Treasury Department has sent out 35,135 advance payment checks to Idaho taxpayers totaling $15.2 million, marking the second week of a mass mailing that is expected to continue until the end of September, the Internal Revenue Service said.

The average Idaho check is $433. The IRS emphasized that taxpayers need not call, fill out special forms or do anything else to receive the checks. The IRS will automatically initiate any check due once it has processed the person's 2000 tax return.

The IRS said it has handled large volumes of calls on its toll-free hot lines since mailing notices about the advance payments to taxpayers who filed returns earlier this year. Much of the information taxpayers are looking for may be found in the notices or on the www.irs.gov Web site.

Export seminar focuses on international sales

IDAHO FALLS - A general exporting seminar Aug. 15 can help Idaho businesses expand their sales into international markets.

The seminar, presented by the Idaho Export Council, the U.S. Department of Commerce, Commercial Service, the Idaho Small Business Development Center, and U.S. Bank, will be from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Westin Idaho Falls Hotel, 475 River Parkway.

The cost is $40 per person, which includes lunch, one-on-one consultations with industry experts, and the "Dictionary of International Trade Terms" by the World Trade Press, a $2 value.

Organizers recommend the seminar for company officers, traffic managers, controllers and sales, marketing, and shipping personnel of businesses planning to expand their markets internationally.

Seminar speakers include experts on both international and Idaho commerce:

• James Helliwig has served the U.S. Department of Commerce for 24 years, most recently as Idaho director of the U.S. Commerce Service and a member of its rural export team.

• Gary DeGrange is vice president and regional sales manager for U.S. Bank's International Banking Department, specializing in trade finance, international payments and foreign exchange.

• Dean Olsen chairs the Idaho Export Council, is past chairman of its 1999 and 2000 World Trade Days, and serves on the board for the Utah World Trade Association.

To register, contact the International Trade Alliance, (509) 459-4123, or register on the Internet at www.intrade.org. For information, call Rhonda Woodruff at the ISBDC, (208) 523-1087.

Idaho pump rates ease but remain among highest

The Associated Press

BOISE - Idaho gasoline prices have dropped less than those elsewhere in the country in the past month, leaving the state's average cost of a gallon of self-serve unleaded the fourth highest in the continental United States.

The AAA of Oregon/Idaho said Idaho's average gas price on Aug. 1 was $1.57, down 8 cents from a month earlier but still 18 cents higher than the national average of $1.39 - the lowest since February 2000. The past month has seen the average price nationwide decline by 13 cents.

"Idaho's prices are down sharply in some markets like Coeur d'Alene where motorists are paying $1.44," AAA Idaho spokesman Dave Carlson said. "But most stations surveyed in a spot observational check in Boise are at $1.63, just a few pennies below where they were a month ago."

Idaho's statewide average price is higher than those of every state in the continental United States except California's $1.72, Connecticut's $1.61 and New York's $1.58.

The lowest prices in the country are in Georgia, at $1.21 per gallon, and South Carolina, at $1.22.

Among Idaho's neighboring states, the average price in Montana is $1.50, Nevada $1.51, Wyoming $1.47, Washington $1.54, and Oregon - which does not allow people to pump their own gas - $1.54 per gallon.

Carlson said declines like the ones experienced during the past month probably are coming to an end. OPEC's decision last week to reduce oil production by 4 percent to bolster sagging oil prices already has increased crude oil prices from $23 per barrel to $27.

"It's difficult to say where Idaho prices will go," Carlson said. "Obviously, not all retail markets in Idaho will enjoy the low prices enjoyed by motorists in other parts of the country."

A hard sell

An entire generation is uninterested in blue-collar jobs

The Associated Press

BEND, Ore. - At 5 feet, 10 inches tall and on the skinny side, Sawyer Singleton is one of the manufacturing industry's worst nightmares.

He isn't a state inspector or union organizer. He's not an economist bearing bad news. He's not even a radical environmentalist. Singleton is just a 17-year-old soon-to-be Bend High School senior who wants to go to college and study biology - and that has blue-collar employers worried.

That's because the last thing Singleton and most of his friends want to do is go to work in one of their factories.

"No. Never. It just doesn't sound ... cool," he said. "You have to go to college. That's the next step. There are no other steps. That's it."

Because of a generation of attitudes like Singleton's, companies ranging from cabinet makers to airplane manufacturers say they're having a tough time attracting younger employees to replace older workers who quit, retire or advance up the company ladder.

When recruiters go in search of new workers to fill entry-level jobs, they say they increasingly run into the same "thanks, but no thanks" attitude from teens or 20-somethings holding out for better prospects.

Though state and local officials don't track the number of unfilled job openings, anecdotal evidence suggests some of Central Oregon's best-paying jobs are going unfilled for months at a time.

Crook County High School class of 2001 graduate Jason Dennis assembles a recreational vehicle recently at the Beaver Coaches plant in Bend, Ore. Beaver Coaches has hired only two laborers out of high school this year despite attending job fairs in an attempt to recruit employees.

"We don't see a lot of people walking in the door wanting to fill out a job application," said J.J. Yacovella, human resources director at Bend's Beaver Coaches. He said it's not unusual for the larger manufacturing companies to have as many as a dozen open positions at any given time because it's so hard to attract, and keep, younger workers.

"We pay on average a better starting salary than Mount Bachelor, but kids just don't seem interested," Yacovella said. Personnel managers - from Bright Wood Corp. in Madras to Prineville's Clear Pine Mouldings - report similar trends. Steady jobs with decent pay and good benefits go unfilled, while teens look elsewhere for work.

"It has a drastic effect," said Clear Pine Human Resources Director Gene Schmidt. "There are hundreds of jobs available here but no one to fill them. We could offer more jobs if we had an adequate work-force pool. We don't, and that's one reason we can't expand."

Why the waning interest in blue-collar jobs in a region with such thick and enduring blue-collar roots? It isn't the pay.

Designer grains like white wheat aid farmers, buyers

Knight Ridder News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. - Somewhere out in Montana and Idaho, a few farmers are harvesting a special crop of white wheat. Their situation is unusual. They had a buyer for the entire crop from the start, and they knew exactly how the grain would be used.

The buyer is General Mills, and the wheat is being grown especially to make Wheaties cereal. Why?

"Some wheat varieties make flakes that lay flat as a pancake," said Ron Olson, vice president of grain operations for Golden Valley, Minn.-based General Mills. "But there is one variety of wheat that curls up, that makes great curly flakes. That's the one we want."

This Wheaties-destined crop is a sign of how the grain industry is changing. An ever-improving ability to isolate and preserve types of grains is enabling farmers to grow very specific crops for particular buyers. Farmers benefit from the arrangement because they can receive premium prices for the crops. Buyers benefit because the process is cost-effective.

In the case of General Mills, the nation's largest grain-based food company, using a precise variety of a grain can add from 10 percent to 20 percent in manufacturing efficiency, the company said. That makes a big difference. That makes a big difference account for more than 80 percent of the food products, and where cereals alone brought in 40 percent of the firm's $7.08 billion in revenue last year.

There are other factors to consider when selecting a grain: With cereal, the sogginess factor in milk is a key consideration. For many products, a grain's color can also be important because pigment is an indication of baking characteristics. In addition, the three main parts of a wheat kernel -

Washington Group drags Raytheon to bankruptcy court

The Associated Press

BOSTON - Washington Group International dragged defense contractor Raytheon into bankruptcy court Thursday, asking for as much as $1.5 billion in the latest episode of a bitter dispute between the companies.

In February, bankrupt Washington Group sued Raytheon in federal court for $469 million in purchase price adjustments stemming from Washington Group's acquisition last July of Raytheon Construction and Engineering. That suit is before an arbitrator.

On Thursday, Washington Group took action in Reno, Nev., bankruptcy court, accusing Raytheon of "fraudulent conveyance." The suit alleges bankruptcy law requires Raytheon to make $822 million available to Washington Group creditors because it reduced Washington Group's worth by that much in the 12 months before the company declared bankruptcy.

"Therefore the creditors don't have access to that $822 million."

Raytheon spokesman David Polk said he had not seen the complaint but said it was "nothing more than a ploy to keep Raytheon from exercising its rights as a creditor."

"We just find it incredible that they try to make this position," he said. "Brandon" said - Boise-based Washington Group sued in part because a bankruptcy court would likely act more quickly than a federal district court.

In addition to the $822 million, Brandon said the complaint calls for Lexington, Mass.-based Raytheon to pay Washington Group $700 million. Polk took particular issue with that component of the suit.

"We believe it's without merit," he said. "Keep in mind that Raytheon has taken on a heavy financial burden in taking on the projects that they've abandoned since their bankruptcy." Washington Group filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in Nevada May 14. The company claims Raytheon drove it out of business by misleading it about the value of the construction business.

Jack in the Box reports boost in net earnings

SAN DIEGO - Jack in the Box Inc., operating in the fast-food industry as the ones in Twin Falls and Burley, said net earnings increased 5.5 percent to $22 million, or 55 cents per diluted share, in the third quarter ended July 8.

Year-to-date net earnings have grown 12.1 percent to $64.2 million.

In spite of pressures from utilities and other occupancy costs, Jack in the Box continues to grow because of our commitment to providing customers with an ever-improving restaurant experience," Chief Executive Officer Robert J. Nussbaum said.

Company restaurant sales reached $407 million in the third quarter, improving 11.7 percent from a year earlier. Systemwide sales were nearly $502 million, up more than 10 percent from a year earlier.

Jack in the Box anticipates fourth-quarter earnings to reach between 53 and 57 cents per diluted share.

JP Realty Inc. releases diminished Q2 results

SALT LAKE CITY - JP Realty Inc. - which has come Twin Falls commercial real estate - Thursday released less-than-stellar results for the second quarter, which ended June 30.

Revenues decreased $250,000, or 0.7 percent, to $34 million from $34.3 million in second quarter 2000.

Net income decreased $1.46 million, or 2.2 percent, to $4.38 million, or 23 cents per diluted and fully converted share, from $6.04 million, or 37 cents per share.

Revenues increased 2.8 percent to $69 million for the first six months of 2001, compared with $67 million for the same period for the six months decreased 12.5 percent to $9 million, or 57 cents per diluted and fully converted share.

Hecla Mining Co. announces 6 cents-per-share loss

COEUR D'ALENE - Hecla Mining Co. on Thursday announced a net second-quarter loss applicable to common shareholders of $3.7 million, or 6 cents a share, on revenue of $24.9 million.

The results are an improvement over the same period a year ago, despite lower precious metals prices, mainly attributable to lower costs of production and increased gold production.

Hecla said. This compares with a loss of $18.7 million, or 28 cents a share, on revenue of $22.8 million during second quarter 2000. Last year's second-quarter results included $10.3 million in asset write-downs and nonrecurring provisions for closed operations.

For the first six months of the year, Hecla reported earnings applicable to common shareholders of $4 million, or 6 cents a share, on revenue of $42.1 million. This compares with a loss of $28.1 million, or 42 cents a share, on revenue of $41.1 million during the first six months of 2000.

The sale of the company's principal industrial minerals subsidiaries and record low-cost gold production at La Camorra led to positive financial results during the first six months of 2001, Hecla said.

Stocks advance despite profit-taking

Factory orders fall in June; jobless rates rise

NEW YORK (AP)—Taking few chances in a still uncertain economy, investors cashed in their profits Thursday but also didn't go all out in buying, giving stocks a moderate advance.

Wall Street's lack of confidence curbed an early morning advance that had sent the Dow Jones industrials up nearly 100 points.

The Dow closed up 41.17 at 10,551.16.

Broader stock indicators also closed higher although they fell from their highs for the day. The Nasdaq composite index gained 19.00 to 2,087.38, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index advanced 4.82 to 1,220.75.

"Investors are probably being a little more aggressive than they have been, but they're not willing to chase the market too much," said Robert Harrington, co-head of listed block trading at J.P.S. Warburg. "People also are not truly convinced that things are getting better," so you probably had some taking advantage of the rally to sell stocks."

Chip stocks were among the best performing sectors of the day on an advance that began Wednesday on a series of upgrades by Merrill Lynch-Intel, a Dow component, rose $1.36 to $32.11 after its chief executive told the Reuters news service the worst appears over for the computer industry, but that a rebound depends on global conditions.

The enthusiasm also spread to the broader tech sector. Gateway gained 61 cents to $11.21, a 5.7 percent gain. Microsoft rose 98 cents to $67.45, despite a court ruling that makes speedy resolution of the government's antitrust case unlikely. A federal appeals court reiterated its decision to send the government's antitrust case against the software maker back to a lower court.

Among blue chips, DuPont rose 64 cents to $42.67, while Alcoa dropped 56 cents to $37.85.

The stock market had rallied the first part of the week, largely out of relief that a dismal second-quarter earnings season was behind them. Street got a further lift Wednesday from the comments by semiconductor makers and upgrades in the sector by Merrill Lynch. The sector was one of the first to fall last year, when the market was in a bearish mood. A revival could signal better times ahead.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Manufacturers, hardest hit by the economic slowdown, saw orders fall in June. But a sign that a rash of layoffs may be moderating a bit, new claims for unemployment insurance fell to the lowest level since mid-February.

The government reports, released Thursday, continue to depict a struggling economy, which has been stuck in low gear for a year.

Orders to U.S. factories declined by a bigger-than-expected 2.4 percent in June, erasing the 2.2 percent gain registered in May, the Commerce Department said.

Demand fell for military airplanes, cars, computers and industrial machinery. It marked the second decrease in the last three months.

"Manufacturing is in big trouble," said economist Clifford Waldman of Waldman Associates.

To cope with sagging demand, manufacturers have sharply cut production and capital investment and laid off thousands of workers.

But on a more upbeat note, the number of U.S. workers filing new claims for state unemployment insurance for the workweek ending July 28 fell by a seasonally adjusted 23,000 to 346,000, the third sharp decline in a row, the Labor Department said. The drop pulled claims down to their lowest level since Feb. 17.

among others, the construction, financial, services and local government sectors, according to Economic Development for Central Oregon's (EDCO) 2001 area profile.

The trend might have more to do with the changing nature of business.

An area dominated by lumber mills and the wood-products industry, Central Oregon is now attracting more high-tech companies than ever before.

"My dad worked at the old mill. He made pretty good wages and had a good job," he said. "But I think I'd rather be in management."

That's why Lerwill also is seriously considering going to college. If that is, he can land a wrestling scholarship.

Spurned manufacturing outfits place much of the blame on schools and parents who, they say, too often point a college degree as the only route to success.

We're sold on the idea that everybody needs to go to college," said Dale Parnell, a nationally recognized expert on technical education.

"But we've got to do something different with the people who don't get bachelor's degrees. They're not the vast majority. But in this country, and I don't know why, we look down our noses at vocational education. We need to change our cultural bias."

Parnell, a former head of the Oregon Department of Education, argued in his 1984 book, "The Neglected Majority," that the nation's education system is failing the roughly 50 percent of kids who graduate from high school each year but don't go on to college. Each year, roughly one-third of the region's graduating seniors go on to a four-year college or university. Another third go to community colleges.

But Parnell said, nearly half of the students who start college drop out, many finding their way to a blue-collar trade. Parnell suggests creating a system of technical programs beginning in the 11th grade and leading to an associate's degree in various applied fields. But to do that, he says, requires rethinking most high schools' curricula.

"It's a tough sell because some teachers and administrators don't accept it," he said. "But I'm not talking about dumbing down. I'm talking about teaching these kids good science and good math, but taught differently. Kids have to see what the utility is of doing all this."

First: Start (June 7, 1992, at Sonoma, Calif.), pole (none), win (none)

How do you rate the team's performance? "I give the team a 10. They've been working hard. We've been running well; we just haven't had the finishes. We've been going through the struggles: new tire, different bodies and different fabricators in there trying different things. We're just trying to change everything around. A.J. isn't the easiest owner to drive for. He wants performance. We can't stop and think what would have happened with the crashes we've had and the alternator belt falling off, oil leaks, stuff like that. But we're running well, and we're having fun, and we're making races and that's what counts."

Has Foyt been positive, or has he been disappointed? "He's positive that we've got to get it better. He's disappointed where we're qualifying. He's happy the way we are running, but the finishes aren't there. He's coming to the shop more often. He's showing what we need to be doing; he's definitely up on the team. We've definitely got some great people on the Conesco Pontiac team. We're not where we want to be, but we know where we have to be. We're learning more in every race."

What do you think you've done well, and what have you not done well? "In Winston Cup racing, you have a lot of fans, and I think you have to adapt to the fans first. When you adapt to that, I think the whole day goes easier. I haven't done anything well so far (laughs). We want to qualify better. You really can't say what you've done well because you don't know. You know what you've done bad because they are all going to tell you that they're done badly."

Petty, team aim to end long slump

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kyle Petty, a member of one of stock car racing's most famous families, is back to being himself. Little more than a year after losing 19-year-old son Adam in a racing accident and mired in one of the worst seasons in the 50-year history of Petty Enterprises, Petty comes to Indianapolis for this weekend's Brickyard 400 insisting his team is just a week away from winning races again.

Petty took over the day-to-day running of Petty Enterprises a few years ago as his father, Richard, eased into more of an advisory role.

Kyle often joked that Adam was the son Richard never had, a young man totally consumed with racing—just like his famous grandfather. For Kyle, whose interests as a younger man went to music and other pursuits beyond the race track, the job was to get Petty Enterprises ready for the day when the price would succeed the king.

That task was cut short by the death of his son, and he has found a new reason to keep going in the challenge of rebuilding an operation from the ground up.

"We did not have a foundation at Petty Enterprises," he said. "The philosophy on how we approach everything has totally changed. We got behind and compounded the problems by what we did when we were behind."

"We looked at it and said, 'Here's a company that's been in business for 50 years and lately we've been racing the way we did 50 years ago,'" he told the Indianapolis Star. "There's not many teams that have been to the top, to the bottom and back to the top again. That's what we're doing, trying to climb the mountain again."

It's going to be a steep climb. The three Petty Enterprises drivers — Petty, John Andretti and Buckshot Jones — have missed a combined 11 races, including seven by Petty, and have just three top-10 finishes in a combined 49 starts.

Andretti, in his fourth season with the Petty team, has been the subject of rumors that he might be looking elsewhere. He doesn't deny being frustrated but said he's not going anywhere.

"I believe in the people I'm working with," Andretti said. "It's not like every body is sitting around hoping things get better. If nothing was being done, then maybe there would be more to those rumors."

Among the things being done, Petty hired Larry McReynolds as a consultant. On leave from Fox after NBC took over the TV broadcasts for the second half of the season, McReynolds brings the experience of more than 20 years as a crew chief for the likes of Davey Allison, Ernie Irvan and Dale Earnhardt.

McReynolds is working primarily with Jones, a rookie, but also is providing an overview.

"It would have been easy to go with a team that is winning races," he said, "but it'll be a more rewarding deal to work with a team that is not returning at the front and see if I can help."

Petty, 41, winner of eight races but none since 1995, said he hasn't considered giving up driving even though the responsibility of 180 employees weighs heavily. He's convinced he can accept the team's turnaround from the cockpit.

"If I get in the car and it's junk, I don't have to wait for John Andretti to call me on Monday morning and tell me," he said. "It gives me more confidence in John Andretti and Buckshot Jones knowing what they're up against."

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
This is to Jeff Hammond: "You have to call me darling, darling."
Someone asked Hammond what he would suggest to Shanna Robinson on her first Winston Cup race. Ha, first name is "Well, darling."
Mr. Hammond, keep your male chauvinistic views to yourself. Please treat her as you would the other drivers, and her name is Shanna.
