Special forces enter Afghanistan

Bush supports an economic package, benefits extension

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON - The United States is in "hot pursuit" of terrorists behind the Sept. 11 attacks, President Bush declared Friday as officials said Pentagon special forces had been operating inside Afghanistan. Democratic calls for expanded jobless benefits gained ground amid fresh signs of a sputtering economy.

White House officials said Bush had decided to support an economic stimulus package with possible tax cuts for people and businesses. These officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the president also had decided to back an extension of unemployment benefits for laid-off workers, though far less than the 52 additional weeks that congressional Democrats want.

The military and economic developments unfolded as New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said it could take as long as a year to clean up the site of the World Trade Center.

Seventeen days after the deadliest terrorist attack ever on American soil, Transportation Secretary Norman Y. Mineta said Reagan National Airport would "definitely reopen." The airport, just across the Potomac River in Arlington, Va., sits in the shadow of the Pentagon; the White House and Capitol are seconds away by air, and authorities have

Guardsmen take up post at airport

Their ultimate role is unclear, officials say

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - People going to the airport in Twin Falls - or anywhere in the United States - are probably going to have to get used to a sight that's become commonplace for travelers in many other countries.

Men in military uniforms, who might soon be armed, have been called upon to help guard airports.

Following an order from President Bush, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne this week called out members of the Idaho Army National Guard to help beef up security at airports around the state.

Two guardsmen - Sgt. Darrell Hollon of Hagerman and Pfc. Jacob Schwabedissen of Twin Falls - were on hand at the Magic Valley Regional Airport, Joslin Field terminal as a flight prepared to depart Friday afternoon.

Like Twin Falls police officers who have been keeping watch at the airport since terrorists launched attacks against the U.S. on Sept. 11, the guardsmen won't take an active role in checking passengers or their luggage, Hollon said. Instead, they are there to provide an added presence of security and will intervene only in an emergency, he said.

"We're just another set of eyes and ears," Hollon said.

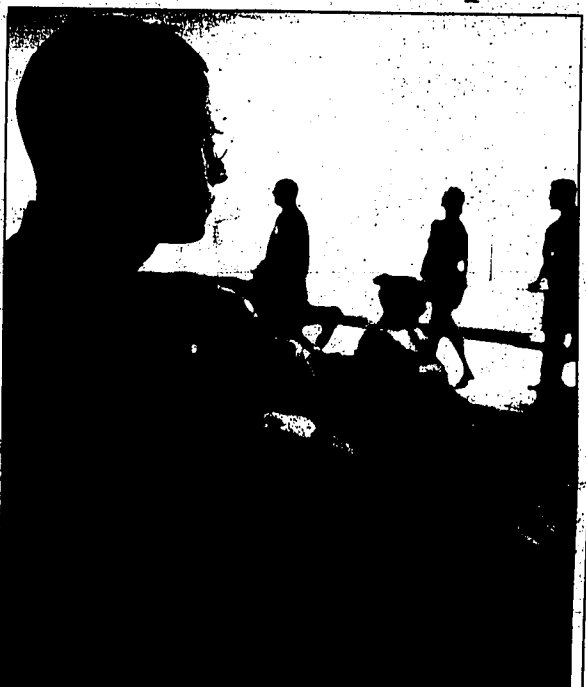

Two Twin Falls police detectives were also at the airport Friday. If and when they might step out and turn security over to the National Guard wasn't yet clear, said detective Scott Smith. For the time being, the department is sticking to its policy of keeping at least one officer at the airport during times when flights are arriving or departing, he said.

Guardsmen for the foreseeable future will be there from 6 a.m. until 9 p.m. every day, Hollon said.

Although patrol officers and detectives assigned to airport duty have been packing their service pistols, Hollon and Schwabedissen were unarmed Friday.

That's likely to change, said Lt. Col. Tim Marsano, the Idaho Guard's top spokesman. "The whole idea is to eventually put a trained, armed and highly visible military force in the airports," he said.

The Idaho Guard's top brass and the governor's office on Friday were still trying to hammer out a precise weapons policy for guard-

Dealing with the ultimate bad guys

Local police could play important part in war on terrorism

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Small-town cops who might have gotten used to dealing mostly with petty crimes and traffic violations need to get used to the fact they could someday help thwart people bent on slaughtering as many Americans as possible, some local officers said.

The Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C., have likely changed forever the nature of police work in the United States, said Twin Falls police Capt. Jim Munn.

"We're going to have to have officers trained in responding to disasters and other things we're not used to," he said.

If terrorists strike again, local police are probably going to be the first on the scene, Munn said.

Though the Magic Valley might not have any apparently juicy targets for terrorists, it would be naive to assume they will never try to hit here, said Twin Falls Police Chief Lee DeVore.

"As they harden the targets in large urban areas, the terrorists might look for new targets in rural areas," he said.

"We have to think of all those

Caves, tunnels, terrain helped Afghans defy Soviets

The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Maj. Gen. Alexander Popov was prepared for the high mountains, bitter winter cold and blistering summer heat. But when the Soviet army crossed into Afghanistan in 1979, he didn't know the caves would be so deep, the tunnels so long or the Afghans so clever at hiding in the daunting terrain that defied so many invaders in the past.

Popov and other former Soviet officers say top flight intelligence will be key to whatever operation the United States and its allies might undertake against Afghanistan, where Osama bin Laden, the chief suspect in the terror attacks in New York and Washington, is believed to be hiding.

"Strictly from my experience, I want to say that for the preparation of such an operation, above all, full-scale intelligence in all forms and methods is needed," Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, who led the Soviet retreat from Afghanistan, said in written answers to questions from The Associated Press.

Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said this week Russia already is providing the United States with intelligence about Afghanistan as part of the Kremlin's efforts to cooperate with the war against terrorism and the search for bin Laden.

Regulators approve another rate hike for Idaho Power customers

The Associated Press

BOISE - State regulators on Friday approved another huge increase in Idaho Power Co. rates that will boost the state's largest utility's annual rate of $4 to $6 a month on top of the $12 it rose last May.

The Public Utilities Commission accepted the contention of the state's largest electric utility that it had used the proper mechanism to calculate the cost of wholesale power brought in last fall from an unregulated foreign affiliate.

But the commission criticized the company for what it called "unjust" rate increases in such a power market that was experiencing a price collapse.

pany to do more analysis in an attempt to save consumers money. Commissioners found "this hands-off attitude to be troublesome and a weak justification to explain why the company did not take action to minimize ratepayers' costs."

And they threatened to revise the formula that splits the cost of purchased power between ratepayers and shareholders. Shareholders now absorb 10 percent of the cost. The Public Utilities Commission said that does not appear to be enough to cover the utility's investments to get the best deal possible.

In a statement, Idaho Power Vice President Eric Gale said the ruling, even though it cost the utility $12 million in the utility's second quarter, "clearly signal the stranding practices were completely above board."

Gale declined to address the commission's criticism of the way Idaho Power handled itself during the transaction, and spokesman Dennis Lopez said the company is reviewing its options on the portion of the rate request that was denied.

"At this point, we're concentrating on the positive," Lopez said. Idaho Power has more than 360,000 customers in southern Idaho.

The regulators are still reviewing proposals conservation programs and other options that would let Idaho Power rely less on the volatile wholesale market. The 7 percent residential rate hike takes effect Monday and kept it shut because of security concerns.

Bush, in remarks to reporters, said, "Make no mistake about it, we're in hot pursuit of terrorists." He did little to flesh out his remark, but added that he understood it was "very hard to fight a guerrilla war with conventional forces." At another point, he added, "There may or may not be a non-military component" to the war on terrorism.
The Pentagon has begun a redeployment of ships, planes and personnel around the globe to prepare for a military strike, but officials have said little to suggest any type of attack is imminent.
One official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the work of U.S. and British forces inside Afghanistan was a prelude to potential military action. The troops have been sent in the past few days, the official said, as the United States charts a course to find prime suspect Osama bin Laden and the network of terrorist camps he is believed to run.
White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said Bush wants to work with Democrats on the issue of help for laid-off workers. "He's going to discuss a variety of ideas that many people, including many leading Democrats, have offered about how to help workers who have lost their jobs," the spokesman said.

infrastructure things we tend to take for granted, like power grids and water supplies," Munn said.
And when it comes to protecting American soil, police must also be prepared to be on the front lines of "vigilance" and counter-terrorism intelligence, he said.
That will probably include more cooperation between police and the National Guard and other military units, said DeVore. "I think we've separated ourselves from the military and the military has separated from us — and rightfully so — but I think those lines might start to blur," DeVore said.
Lt. Col. Tim Marsano, the Idaho Army National Guard's top spokesman, agreed that the police and military are going to need each other's help to fight terrorism.
"We've always tried to foster a good relationship with the local police as well as the state police," he said.
Local police will be invaluable as front-line watchdogs to help stop terrorists early before they can start spreading chaos, Marsano said.
Police officials are also on a state domestic preparedness council that was recently formed by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, and includes the Idaho Guard's commander in chief, Marsano said.
Idaho State Police troopers are prepared to do what they can to keep the state's highways from becoming pipelines for terrorists or the materials they might use, said ISF Sgt. Chris Schenk.
The interstate highway is one of the easiest means of travel," he said. "Naturally, on that highway, we are looking a little more deeply for terrorist-type items."

declined publicly to be specific about just what intelligence their country will provide to the United States. But interviews this week with veterans of the Soviet Union's failed 10-year war in Afghanistan indicate they could have a lot to share.
"The U.S. secret services must use our experience and knowledge in preparations for the strikes against Afghanistan," Maj. Valery Migal, who was a deputy commander of a special KGB task unit in Afghanistan, said.
Migal served in the Pakista province south of the Afghan capital Kabul near the border with Pakistan.
"It can drive the anger of this province, and from that anger the terrain looks with all the chutes, passes and brooks. One of the Taliban bases is located there," Migal, who is now a reserve officer, said. "We are ready to share our experience with the U.S. and work with them as military experts."
Popov, a paratrooper who commanded a tactical unit and a reconnaissance group during his two tours in Afghanistan, says a careful study of Afghanistan's geography is essential.
"It worked in the mountains, but those high mountains and cliffs were really impressive. We had to get over our psychological unpreparedness," said Popov, now a senior officer in Russia's paratrooper force. "The mountains are difficult to reach. The level of physical preparation has to be very high."

But perhaps the most important aspect of the program will be the familiarity of the soldiers to many travelers, because the Guard wants to use guardsmen who live near the airports they will help protect, Marsano said.
"They're going to be known in their communities — they're just coming to wear the uniforms of citizen soldiers," he said.
Airport Manager Bill Carberry said he agrees with what the government has done so far to help protect airports.
"A people really like seeing the guards, and I'm glad to have them here," he said.

MV gets neonatal ambulance service

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Life Flight, the helicopter ambulance service with offices in Boise and Twin Falls, unveiled a new service at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center Friday afternoon.

Life Flight is offering faster flight times for critically ill and fragile newborns from St. Benedict's in Jerome to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center's neonatal care center in Boise.

Saint Alphonsus opened a level 3 neonatal care center in Boise recently. Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls has a level 2, 14-bed neonatal unit.

Babies are classified levels 1, 2 and 3 according to how sick they are - level 3 is the most severely ill.

The new Life Flight service will begin transporting level 3 babies to wherever they need to go from any Magic Valley hospital. The referring physician will make the call to the neonatal center at Saint Alphonsus in Boise, and the neonatologist there will coordinate the transport of the baby from the Magic Valley hospital to wherever the baby needs to go, no matter where - Salt Lake City, Seattle, Boise or other hospitals, officials said. Sirkka Spencer, a nurse practitioner with 24 years of experience in Life Flight transporting of patients in rural areas, told a group of medical personnel at St. Benedict's Friday afternoon that the new service will take about one hour from the time the call is made for the neonatal Life Flight helicopter to arrive at St. Benedict's.

Candidates run for mayor, council seats in Jerome

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Three City Council members have squared off for the mayor's position in the coming city election, City Clerk Kathy Miller said.

Councilman Charles Correll, Councilwoman Janice Schmidt and Councilman Jerry Crozier have all filed petitions to run for mayor.

Current Mayor Dennis Moore decided not to run for re-election after serving one term. Correll's current council seat is one of two open for re-election. If Correll's bid for mayor is unsuccessful, he will no longer be on the City Council.

Schmidt's and Crozier's council terms are not expiring this year, so they will retain their council seats if their bids for mayor are unsuccessful. If either Schmidt or Crozier is elected mayor, the vacated council seat will be filled by mayoral appointment.

The two City Council seats open for election are currently occupied by Councilman Joe Skaug, who did not file a petition to run, and Correll, who is running for mayor instead.

Five candidates have declared their intention to run for the two open council seats. There are four-year terms and are open, which means the two candidates who get the most votes win the seats.

The five City Council candidates are:

- Darcy Bobrowski, a member of the city planning and zoning commission.
- Bill Allred, chairman of the city planning and zoning commission.
- Rob Lundgren, Jerome County Fair manager.
- Fay Emerson, co-owner of E.Z. Car Wash.
- Virginia Hall, widow of the late city councilman and county sheriff, Eba Hall.

Church restores stained glass

RUPERT - Members of the Trinity Memorial Episcopal Church in Rupert were looking for a project in the community. The stained glass windows in the Wilson Building and Theater, maybe a little like the stained glass windows in their own church, were just the thing.

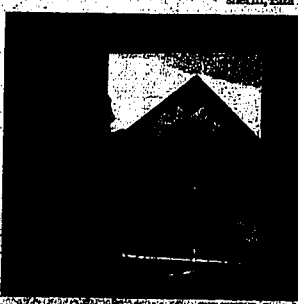

Twelve windows on the east side of the building are being restored to their original splendor, said church member Charlie Cresson. Members have been working hard to clean, sand, scrape and repair what they can on the panes of glass, Cresson said. Some windows will be sent out to professionals for repair.

The frames in the building and the frames around the glass had to be stripped of more than five layers of paint and that was after the layers of dirt were cleaned off.

Cresson said he was struck by how different the glass looks when it is clean and light can shine through it.

"They look pretty nice when you get them cleaned up," Cresson said. "They were just a

Director: Get the word out

District assesses area's bioterrorism preparedness

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The key to bioterrorism preparedness is communication.

That was the word from Cheryl Juntunen, director of South Central District Health.

A better method is needed for improving physician testing, and reporting of food-borne illnesses, she said.

The district disease control team conducted personal visits to physician offices including all new providers, emergency rooms, hospital infection control committees and laboratories to review new communicable disease reporting rules, Juntunen said.

Getting the word out if there are cases of food-borne illness is important to help stop the spread of the disease, she said.

The health district team learned that many doctors' offices are not connected by e-mail, Juntunen said.

County spends windfall

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - County commissioners reopened the fiscal 2000-2001 county budget Friday to accommodate an unexpected windfall of county income of $661,139.

The money, most of which came from grants on one side (another, was divided between seven departments and funds to add to the previous county budget of $21.5 million for the year.

Unanticipated incident health care expenses at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a county-owned hospital, soaked up the lion's share of the new appropriations, $400,000. So far this year, those payments to Magic Valley Regional have already outstripped last year's payments by $260,583, with more expenses expected, County Clerk Bob Fort said Friday.

The next-largest appropriation, $150,654, went to pay county grants to a number of organizations. The grants involved are "reimbursement incident health care" the county pays the grants and will be reimbursed by another authority like the state or federal government at a later date.

The county's general fund received an infusion of $61,189 to pay for unexpected expenses for animal control, a portion of the county fair security bill, drug testing training and adult probation. Next on the list was the county's solid waste operation, which had unexpected modification and engineering costs. That appropriation was $25,000.

The district court system in the county got $15,000 to help pay for a temporary employee, while the county's justice fund got $2,250 in state lottery money under its status offender fund to help pay $3,000 in donations.

Idaho government nets far less than expected in tax revenues

BOISE (AP) — Corporate demands for tax reform reduced August his a record, leaving that revenue category in the red even as the more critical indicators of Idaho's economic health continued to underperform only slightly.

The Kemphorne administration reported on Friday that corporations claimed over $11 million in refunds, nearly $9 million more than expected, while those businesses that do expect to owe some taxes despite the sliding economy made only a third of the tax payments the state expected.

Administration analysts anticipated the large refund claims, but not all of them in August.

Combined with income tax collections, which were slightly lower than expected for a second straight month, and sales tax receipts, which were fractionally below the August benchmark, total revenue after just two months of the budget year was $14.2 million short of projection.

Last month the administration discarded an already anemic 2.1 revenue growth estimate and predicted that the economy will be lucky to match last year's tax collection figure, after adjustments for anomalies.

And even without the excess-

Administration analysis anticipated the large refund claims, but not all of them in August.

sive corporate tax refunds, August collections were still below the benchmark for the second straight month.

The release of the monthly financial update came as the national economic forecaster, DRI, WELFARE concluded that the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the East Coast tipped an economy that appeared likely to stay positive into a recession.

While the DRI analysis involved the national economy, the information already available to state economists indicated Idaho would find itself in the same economic straits.

DRI had expected consumer spending to keep the national economy afloat, even though it was weakening.

But now, an analysis found, "real consumer spending is expected to stall in the third quarter of this year and retreat in the last quarter."

While concluding that the recession will be relatively mild, the analysis said consumers will set the pace of the recovery and predicted that it would be at least two years before consumer confidence regains its pre-attack level.

The Republican Legislature's $110 million income tax cut-making comparing current collections with year-earlier totals misleading, income tax receipts account for half of the state's general revenue.

But sales tax receipts, which the administration expected to run nearly 3 percent ahead of last year, were only 1 percent higher through August with the September attacks' erosion of consumer confidence still to be assessed. Sales taxes contribute a third of the general revenue.

Although the current budget year is just two months old, the prospects for improvement based on the national assessment appeared limited, fostering an even more difficult situation for lawmakers and Gov. Dirk Kemphorne when they try to put together a state budget for the 2002-2003 spending year.

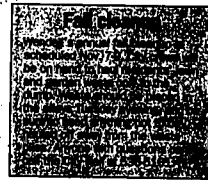

They could be faced with even less money than they will spend this year after a $36 million across-the-board reduction to keep the budget in the black.

Wording of Wendell ordinance causes problems for property owner

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Incorrect wording in a 51-year-old city ordinance could prevent the sale of some private property.

City Council members Wednesday agreed that the wording in Ordinance 158 vacating the southern portion of Wendell Street, was incorrect. The ordinance was drafted in 1950, vacating the end of the street to allow a business to expand. However, the legal description failed to include a strip of land that was part of the abandoned Milner and Northside railroad right-of-way located just south of Wendell Street, a portion of which is now located under the Black potato cellar.

Mayor Gwen Rost said that the owners of the potato cellar have indicated that they have considered selling the land, but because of the incorrect wording, they cannot clear the property's title. "What's in contention is the property from the edge of the road to the edge of where the railroad right-of-way was,"

Council member Paul Isaacson said, "So if the vesting included that then it would fix up that piece of property. The way it is written now is that the railroad right-of-way is no man's land and nobody really owns it."

An amended ordinance will be drafted for council approval for the next regular city council meeting.

Also Wednesday, Police Chief Dale Fisher reported that the street light at the intersection of Main and Idaho streets was functioning and that motorists were adapting to the new signal.

"There have been fewer violations than I had anticipated," Fisher added.

Arizona suspect claims patriotism in recent fatal minority shooting rampage

By Scott Thomson
Associated Press Writer

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — As he was led away by police, Frank S. Roque protested that he was a patriot, standing up for his brothers and sisters.

"I'm an American!" he shouted. "I'm a damn American all the way! I'm an American! Arrest me! Let those terrorists run wild!"

Officers were arresting Roque in a series of drive-by shootings on Sept. 15 that left an Indian immigrant dead. Two days later, prosecutors would charge Roque with murder and three counts of attempted murder for actions they suggest represent a dark side to the patriotism that gripped the nation following the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington.

They say Roque targeted Balbir Singh Sodhi, the bearded, turbaned Sikh owner of a gas station in this Phoenix suburb, and others because of their ethnicity.

Beyond his statements on the night of his arrest, Roque, who was jailed on $1 million bail, has not spoken publicly about the shootings. His lawyer, Daniel Patterson, would not comment.

"This is not the man we know," said Cindi Roque, Roque's sister-in-law. "This was not Frank. He was not a racist or a bigot and there was nothing in his background that pointed to this. He was always just a very hardworking, compassionate, good man."

One friend described Roque as a "Go-See" who liked to join coworkers for happy hour and barbecues and take his family boating. Roque, 42, was born in New York and worked as a machinist at a Boeing helicopter plant in Mesa for most of the past 17 years.

Police said Roque drove his

Deadline looms for shipment of nuclear waste

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A combination of circumstances has raised questions about whether a planned shipment of highly radioactive waste from New York to Idaho will be made this year as scheduled.

Earlier this week, the federal government authorized resumption of shipments of plutonium-contaminated waste to a dump in New Mexico after suspending them following the terrorist attacks on the East Coast.

But the moratorium on high-level nuclear waste remains in effect as the clock ticks on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's seasonal restriction on shipments, which kicks in at the end of October.

Transportation contracts had already been signed to move the 125 spent nuclear fuel assemblies from West Valley, N.Y., when the attacks occurred and the moratorium imposed. Significant local opposition has also arisen in 11 states that the spent fuel rods will be moved through to get to the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

And Idaho officials are still trying to determine whether seemingly unending problems at the New Mexico dump will prevent the Energy Department from meeting a court-enforceable deadline of Dec. 31, 2003, for removing 15,000 drums of plutonium-contaminated waste from the INEL.

Failure to meet that deadline could preclude the department from taking advantage of other provisions of the 1995 agreement allowing it to ship into INEL new waste for temporary storage. The shipments from the West Valley Demonstration Project are covered by that provision.

Resident fights for recall election of Middleton mayor

MIDDLETON (AP) — A resident who is leading the push to kick the mayor out of office wants a court to review the city's handling of his recall efforts.

Clifford Martin has worked since July to collect the 188 signatures needed to force a recall election of Mayor Frank McKeever.

But City Clerk Edith Smith sent Martin a letter saying the recall campaign was legally finished because Martin had not met the Sept. 17 deadline to file the needed signatures.

Martin, however, says he should have had until Oct. 5 to file the signatures. He said Smith herself extended the deadline, but recanted it after it was too late.

Smith refused comment on an issue and referred the matter to City Attorney Susan Buxton, who did not return phone calls.

"It's ridiculous, but all I can do now is take it to the judge," Martin said. "The thing of it is, I can't afford to get mad. I just keep going through the proper channels."

Martin filed a request for a judicial review Thursday, asking a judge to allow previously collected signatures and to permit the recall to go forward.

The recall stems from disagreement over McKeever's position on a new power plant proposed near Middleton.

Prosecutor assigns attorney to prison

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Prosecutor Bill Douglas has assigned a full-time attorney to give legal advice to Kootenai County jailers and other deputies coping with an escalating inmate population.

"The jail industry is living and changing," Sheriff Rocky Watson said. "The biggest lawsuits and the most lawsuits come from the jail."

Stationed in the jail, the new deputy prosecutor will provide legal guidance on issues ranging from inmate religious rights, mistreatment or dietary objections to investigating claims of inmate alterations.

Officials said more than two dozen significant incidents require legal review right now.

"I think it's really going to be able to provide the sheriff with top-notch legal services," Douglas said. "There's so many issues that come up on a day-to-day basis."

Deputy Prosecutor Julie Doty will also handle civil lawsuits filed against the sheriff's office when she returns from maternity leave. Another deputy is filling in until then.

Montana fire grows; residents evacuate

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) - Residents of five more homes were ordered to evacuate before dawn Friday as firefighters tried to halt an advancing blaze that has grown to 4,000 acres in the foothills south of here. Residents were awakened at 2 a.m. and ordered to leave as the flames of some of the homes, said fire information officer Linda Williams. Additional evacuations were expected. Twenty-five homes were evacuated Thursday. So far, none of the evacuated homes has been damaged, said Pat McKelvey, another fire information officer. However, an unoccupied private cabin on Forest Service land burned, while the fate of a second Forest Service cabin was unclear, Williams said. "We tried to get crews in there yesterday to protect them; but they were pushed back by the flames," McKelvey said. The Purdy fire blew up Thursday afternoon as winds kicked up to 35 mph, forcing evacuations in two creek drainages and disrupting travel through the Gallatin Canyon on U.S. 191, a main route to Yellowstone National Park. A section of the highway remained closed to all but emergency traffic. The fire on the Gallatin National Forest is about six miles south of Gallatin Gateway and east of U.S. 191 in south-central Montana.

Idaho scientists will serve on salmon panel

LEWISTON (AP) - Three fisheries biologists from Idaho have been named to a 10-member panel that will set delisting criteria for steelhead in the Interior Columbia River Basin. University of Idaho professor and researcher Ted Bjorn of Boise and Idaho Department of Fish and Game biologists Charlie Petrosky and Peter Hassemer, both of Boise, will serve on the Technical Recovery Team. The Interior Columbia Basin includes the Snake and middle Columbia River and Snake River basins. The team is the third of eight expected to be established by the National Marine Fisheries Service to set recovery standards for 26 West Coast salmon and steelhead populations listed as threatened or endangered under the Endangered Species Act. Members of the team will work on an assessment of factors that have caused listed species of salmon and steelhead to decline and those that continue to impede recovery efforts. Other members of the team announced Thursday are Richard Carmichael of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife; Tom Cooney and Michelle Masure of the National Marine Fisheries Service; Dr. McCullough of the Columbia River Intertribal Fish Commission;

It takes about 30 minutes to get the crew together in Boise and about 45 minutes of flying time. That beats the old transport times. Transporting the neonatal patients by ground to the Twin Falls airport, to a waiting airplane for the flight to Boise, then transporting the patient from the Boise airport to the hospital by ambulance could take one and a half to two hours. If transporting by ground ambulance, the trip can take up to two hours. With the new expansion and remodeling of the Jerome Airport, the flight times for the freewheeling transporters should be much less, but that route hasn't been timed yet. Satellite clinic comes to Burley

By Ruth Strueter Three-News writer

BURLEY - Starting next month, possible child abuse victims who currently have to travel to Twin Falls to be interviewed about the incidents, won't have to leave Mini-Cassia. Twin Falls-based Children at Risk Evaluation Services, or CARES, is starting a clinic in Burley to conduct forensic interviews of children who may be victims of child abuse.

The program, a service of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, serves all eight counties in south-central Idaho. In addition to interviews, CARES also provides medical examinations to determine incidents of abuse.

Mini-Cassia law enforcement officials and prosecutors pushed for the idea, which met with support from hospital administration, said CARES program director Kerry Koontz. It will be the first CARES satellite clinic in the Magic Valley, she said.

The satellite clinic will provide a place for abused children to have interviews with a CARES social worker. Because the equipment for conducting medical

The clinic will make it more convenient for police and victims who currently have to travel to Twin Falls to participate in interviews, said Minidoka County Deputy Prosecutor Alan Goodman. From a law enforcement perspective, the clinic will save time and money, Goodman said.

While Goodman said that within the last nine months Minidoka County has seen an increase in cases in which CARES interviews have been required, overall, Koontz can't say there's a higher volume of child abuse allegations from Mini-Cassia than elsewhere in the valley. No other satellite clinics are being considered at this time, Koontz said. Hailey would be a possible location because it is so far from Twin Falls, but there isn't the volume of incidents to currently warrant a facility, Koontz said.

According to Idaho Kids Count statistics for the 1999-2000 fiscal year, Cassia and Minidoka counties had the third and fourth highest number, respectively, of child abuse referrals in the District judge dismisses charge against mother of six

SANDPOINT (AP) - A 1st District Court judge has dismissed a misdemeanor child neglect charge against JoAnn McGuckin, the mother of six children who staged a days-long standoff with authorities earlier this year that gained world-wide attention.

However, the charge accusing McGuckin of harboring a vicious dog still stands.

Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson submitted a motion Friday to dismiss an injury to child charge against McGuckin based on the results of an underlying child-protection case, the Coeur d'Alene Press reported late Friday.

The move to dismiss also is based on the "observed and evident medical, emotional and personal deficits evidenced by the defendant," according to the motion. Robinson, who was in Moscow during the brief pretrial hearing, could not be reached Friday to elaborate.

"Further prosecution of this case is not necessary to accomplish justice, nor to provide protection, care and safety for the minor children," Robinson wrote in the motion.

Debra Heise dismissed the charge. McGuckin, 46, is pleading not guilty. A tentative trial date on the dog charge was set for Oct. 11. If convicted, McGuckin faces up to a month in jail and a $300 fine.

The pending charge stems from a pack of dogs the McGuckin family raised at their Canyon Bay Cutoff Road home. Days before McGuckin was arrested on the neglect charge and subsequent standoff involving her six children, as many as nine dogs allegedly attacked a neighbor, Stephanie Almy, who was walking by her own dog.

Bonner County Sheriff's Deputies Bill Tilson and Mike McDaniel were at the McGuckin home conducting a welfare check on the children at the time. The deputies said they waded into the pack of dogs to protect Almy.

"I put my arms around her and placed my body over her the best I could to keep the dogs from biting her any further," McDaniel recalled in his report on the incident.

As McDaniel shielded Almy during the minute-long attack, Tilson used his pepper spray to dispense the pack, police said. McDaniel was bitten on each hand and his face could not be seen. He required 17 stitches in the basement.

When deputies arrived a few days later to arrest McGuckin on the child endangerment charge, the dogs again attacked the deputies, police said.

After the standoff ended peacefully, the dogs were taken to shelters in Kootenai County. Some then had to be destroyed, but some were reunited with McGuckin's children, three boys and three girls between the ages of 6 and 13. The children remain in foster care.

Bryce Powell, McGuckin's court-appointed legal counsel, said the facts in the child-neglect case spoke for themselves. He said the family was doing the best it could, given financial hardships and the recent multiple school shootings and death of McGuckin's husband, Michael.

Windows

Continued from A4 mess. Professionals will replace glass panes that are broken. It can be a difficult process, especially if broken panes are in the middle, Creason said. The leading must be cut and other panes taken out to reach the broken piece. Glass that matches will need to be found and the leading will need to be soldered again.

The window with the most broken pieces has been estimated to cost around $20 an hour to fix, Creason said. The church estimates the entire project to cost a couple of thousand dollars.

As well as money, Creason estimated that 40 hours of labor have been poured into the project and "it will take that much or more to finish," he said.

"It's a great old building," Creason said. "It will remind people of how a community can come together."

The church also plans to work on two other windows in the building that need to be replaced, Creason said. Nothing is there at the moment, but eventually they would be constructed to look similar to the others stained glass windows.

Creason said he doesn't really have experience with stained glass. "Just enough to be dangerous," he said with a smile.

This stained glass is classic 1920s design, Creason said. The popularity of stained glass in regular commercial buildings was high then, before the Depression, when stained glass was no longer used, Creason said.

Creason said that doing the project shows other small groups in the community that they too can get involved in the Depression, when stained glass was no longer used, Creason said.

Biorterror

Continued from A4 "A broadcast fax works better," she said. Idaho is part of a six-state project for training health workers, she said. The state is a lot further ahead now than it was three or four years ago.

"Still, it is hard to know what to prepare for," Juntunen said. Maggi Machala, also of the health district, said it is important to educate doctors and emergency room staff on how to report food-borne diseases to the health district. District officials are in the process of distributing posters with a list of diseases that should be reported, Machala said.

Work done earlier can be used as training for bioterrorism, said Dan King, director of environmental health. "Planning for Y2K was a good opportunity for people to think about emergencies. It is in our plans," he said. "We can make it work for bioterrorism."

Hospitals are included in emergency preparedness plans that counties were required to make, King said.

A bioterrorism assessment has been done by Machala at the health district. Policies, procedures and equipment have been reviewed. Fire departments, police, cities and counties have a plan for jurisdictional coordination, which allows them to share in the event of an emergency, King said. "We're well on our way," she said. The Magic Valley is at low risk for bioterrorism, officials said, but it has a mutual-aid agreement with Boise, which is a high-risk area.

Although Magic Valley is at low risk, precautions should be taken including utility companies and crop dusters. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have been involved in the effort, King said.

"It can happen," Juntunen said. Times-News writer Shari Chaney can be reached at the Magic Valley Bureau at 677-4042, Ext. 110 or by e-mail at schaney@magicvalley.com.

Yemen tries to improve its image

The Washington Post

SANA, Yemen — Yemen has a thousand miles of untraced coast, another thousand miles of wide-open frontier and a government that struggles to assert its authority beyond major towns. But that government also likes the United States and tries to be officially listed by its nominal ally as a haven for terrorists. Of all the Arab nations walking a tightrope since President Bush demanded that every country choose sides in the war on terrorism, perhaps none has stepped livelier than Yemen, especially at Sana's International Airport.

Anyone whose journey to the mountain-ringed capital city originated from either Afghanistan or Pakistan was stopped at immigration and bundled off to the Interior Ministry for interrogation.

But then, as the site of the Oct. 12 suicide bombing of the USS Cole in the southern port of Aden, Yemen in effect was put on notice 11 months before the rest of the world.

Jesse Jackson declines Islamic leaders' offer

Knight Ridder News Service

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Rev. Jesse Jackson said Friday he most likely would not accept an invitation from Islamic leaders in Afghanistan to visit the country in an attempt to mediate its dispute with America.

Jackson, in Orlando to speak at conference, said the invitation did not guarantee the release of eight Christians, two of them American, captured in August while working for an aid group. It also did not say whether Taliban officials would hand over Osama bin Laden, prime suspect in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States.

"At this point, we are inclined not to go to Afghanistan," Jackson said. "But we will keep communication lines with the Taliban government open."

National leaders agree on next year's total spending bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration and congressional leaders have agreed to a $686 billion total for next year's spending bills, officials from both sides said Friday. The amount is $25 billion more than President Bush proposed at the beginning of the year.

Still to be resolved is a Democratic demand that Bush submit a written request for extra spending. Democratic lawmakers, particularly House members who all face re-election next year, want a formal budget request or a letter signed by Bush to ensure that the GOP would not use the additional spending against them as a campaign issue.

The spending agreement reflects a widespread desire for Congress to complete its routine work quickly in an environment dominated by the response to the terrorist attacks.

It follows two weeks of intermittent talks between White House officials and top lawmakers.

"On the funding level, an agreement has been reached," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer told reporters.

Tom Gavin, spokesman for Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who chairs the Senate Appropriations Committee, confirmed a general agreement on spending to total $686 billion.

Last spring, Bush had proposed limiting 2002 spending to $661 billion, a 4 percent increase over this year's total that he said reflected a need to limit the growth of government.

But he said that excluded any additional increases he might seek for defense. He later requested an extra $18.4 billion for the military, which gained virtually universal support after the Sept. 11 strikes against the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

Besides the defense increase, the extra spending will include an additional $4 billion for education plus $2.2 billion for responding to recent natural disasters, including last June's Tropical Storm Allison.

The year's spending total is expected to ultimately rise by tens of billions of dollars, because extra money is certain to be approved for the military, intelligence operations, security at airports, economic recovery and other items relating to the deadly terrorist attacks.

Officials say coalition zeroes in on small group of suspects overseas

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and European authorities are zeroing in on a small group of men in England, Germany and the United Arab Emirates believed to have plotted the Sept. 11 attack and provided assistance to the hijackers, government officials said Friday.

Some of the Middle Eastern men are in custody, including an Algerian pilot that British prosecutors identified Friday as the primary instructor for some of the hijackers. The FBI found his name on a document in a car left by the hijackers at Dulles Airport outside Washington, one U.S. official said.

Other suspected plotters remain at large and are the subject of an FBI-led manhunt, the officials told The Associated Press. Several belong to various groups loosely associated with Osama bin Laden's Al-Qaida network.

Among the groups are various cells of the Algerian-based Armed Islamic Group that joined forces with bin Laden, the officials said, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

One of those sought is a man in the United Arab Emirates who was mailed a package from Mohamed Atta, the suspected leader of the hijacking teams, one official said. The package contained money and documents and was mailed by Atta a few days before he hijacked a plane in Boston and flew it into the World Trade Center.

The information about the origins of the hijacking plot emerged as the Justice Department announced more than 480 people have been arrested or detained.

Investigators also released a four-page handwritten document left behind by the hijackers that included instructions on how to carry out their attack and Islamic religious references.

"Try not to have others watch you while you're uttering your prayers. Don't be confused, and don't be nervous," the document advised. "Look cheerful and satisfied, because you're doing a job which is loved by God."

Attorney General John Ashcroft said the message was a

"shocking and disturbing view into the mindsets" of the attackers and "a stark reminder of how these hijackers grossly perverted the Islamic faith to justify their terrorist acts."

Judge wants Microsoft case settled

By D. Ian Hopper
AP Technology Writer

WASHINGTON — Citing the recent terrorist attacks, the new judge in the Microsoft antitrust case on Friday ordered both sides to participate in intensive negotiations to settle the four-year legal battle. "There's no reason this case can't be settled," the judge said.

U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly gave the Justice Department and Microsoft until Nov. 7 to reach a deal. She asked both sides to negotiate "24 hours a day, seven days a week."

In a written order after the hearing, the judge said the government and Microsoft should save the money it spends in litigation and set an aggressive timetable.

"In light of the recent tragic events affecting our nation, this court regards the benefit which will be derived from a quick resolution of these cases as increasingly significant," Kollar-Kotelly wrote. "The court cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of making these efforts to settle the cases and resolve the parties' differences in this time of rapid national change."

During the hour-long hearing, the judge made clear several times she thought the case had gone on long enough.

"I believe this case should be settled," she said at the outset of a scheduling conference. Later she added, "If everyone is reasonable and acts in good faith, there is no reason this case can't be settled."

Even though both parties agreed that they wouldn't need a mediator — a tactic that had already failed once — Kollar-Kotelly gave them until Oct. 12 to settle on their own. Otherwise, she will appoint someone to oversee the talks.

If Microsoft and the government still can't agree, the judge set a schedule for new court proceedings starting in November to determine what penalty Microsoft should face for violating antitrust laws.

The government has made clear it no longer intends to seek a break up of Microsoft, opting for lesser penalties that include restrictions on Microsoft's business practices.

Panthers crush Clark County 48-0 Bengals battle selves, NAlA Northern Lights

The Times-News

DUBOIS - Destry Simpson took the second play from scrimmage and ran into the end zone for the first of his five touchdowns. Carey crushed Clark County 48-0 Friday in Dubois.

Simpson finished with 154 yards on 14 carries as part of the Panthers' 445 total yards. Shawn Hennefer and Sean Cenarrusa each threw two touchdown passes for Carey (5-0, 3-0 Sawtooth North). Cenarrusa finished 13-of-20 passing for 200 yards. John Sall tallied 100 yards on five catches and two touchdowns.

The kids just went down and kicked. Carey coach Lane Kirkland said. "They were playing from scrimmage we scored and that just started things going." Carey held Clark County (4-1, 2-1) leading rusher Eric Snowder to 1 yard on 12 carries. Shawn Ellsworth and Simpson combined for 25 tackles.

Carey hosts Shoshone on Oct. 12.

DIETRICH 42, Camas County 38
DIETRICH - Chris Maughan threw five touchdowns on 7-0-25 passing and 252 yards as Dietrich avoided its third straight loss, beating Camas County 42-38 on Friday afternoon.

Maughan also came up big on the defensive side of the ball, forcing Camas County quarterback Brandon Blodgett to fumble deep in Blue Devils territory with 44 seconds left in the game.

Besides causing the fumble, Maughan finished with 15 tackles and had an interception. Joel Conner and Sheldon Horn scored two touchdowns apiece for Dietrich (4-2, 1-2 Sawtooth North). Conner had 82 yards rushing on 15 carries and made 10 receptions for 106 yards.

Scott Southwick and Mark Lewis also scored touchdowns for Dietrich. Blodgett had three scores and Eric McGuire made two touchdowns as the Musers (4-1, 2-1) lost their first game.

It was just a great all-around game, one of those battles," Dietrich coach Shon Hocker said. Dietrich hosts Richfield on Oct. 12, while Camas County visits Hansen on Wednesday.

Canyon Springs PGA professional Rob Jones said the balls look and feel the same as a regular golf ball.

"They look just like a white range ball," Jones said. "What makes the golf balls float is some kind of a rubber compound at the core."

Since everyone from first-timers to pros such as Jones are eligible, would he try his luck? "I think it'd be fun off a 450-foot canyon to hit it in," Jones said. "But I'm worried about the cars."

Jones said although the hole is officially 265 yards away, because of the drop, the distance will play out to be 280 to 300 yards.

Rockland 36, Murtaugh 20
ROCKLAND - Turnovers proved costly for Murtaugh as the Red Devils dropped a 36-20 decision at Rockland on Friday.

A holding penalty also nullified a 50-yard scoring run by John Silvers that would have tied the game at 22-22 midway through the third quarter, said Murtaugh coach Stacey Winn.

"That hurt, it really turned the game around," Winn said. The Red Devils managed just 3-for-11 passing for 75 yards but did gain 260 yards on the ground. Colby Dennis led the rushing attack with 151 yards on 22 carries. Bryce Dennis finished with 57 yards.

"We're still playing a lot of young guys and we're still learning a lot," Winn said. The Red Devils managed just 3-for-11 passing for 75 yards but did gain 260 yards on the ground. Colby Dennis led the rushing attack with 151 yards on 22 carries. Bryce Dennis finished with 57 yards.

Shoshone 48, Richfield 6
RICHFIELD - Shoshone used a 32-yard pass from Logan Brown to Josh Craig to help beat Richfield 48-6 Friday in Richfield.

It was the Tigers fifth straight loss. Tyler McCowen had two touchdowns, both off of rushes of 30 yards. Nick Perkins also added a 20-yard touchdown run for the Indians, who snapped a two-game slide.

"Their whole team did an excellent job and executed when they needed to," Richfield coach Gary Ward said. Richfield (1-5, 0-3 Sawtooth North) plays at Dietrich Oct. 12. Shoshone (2-3, 1-2) visits Carey Oct. 12.

Wendell 66, Payette 14
WENDELL - The Trojans crushed the Payette Pirates 66-14 Friday night to the cheers of a homecoming crowd.

Sean Goodbody led Wendell with three touchdowns, one on an interception return, and had 11 carries for 122 yards. Skylar Stevenson, who is a two-time state champion in the 100-meter sprint, ran the ball in from 60 before handing off to lineman Tyre Highland for the first touchdown of the night.

Stevenson carried in two more, both over 80 yards, and Dane Beorchia had three carries for 70 yards, and one touchdown. The Pirates' scores came from can at at the end of the game. Nick Kelly and Zack Forman.

"We take it one game at a time," said Wendell coach Jerry Diehl. "I think our kids do a really good job of getting themselves focused for each game and each opponent. It's going to pay off in the long run."

It seems to be paying off already for the Trojans, who remained unbeaten at 5-0. The Wendell junior varsity had no trouble in their matchup, winning 47-0. The Trojans host Sugar-Salem on Thursday.

Hagerman 20, Rimrock 0
RIMROCK - Lewis Carlos rambled for 161 yards on 18 carries as Hagerman won its first game of the season, blanking Rimrock 20-0.

Hagerman rushed for 305 yards total.

"Offensively we owned the line of scrimmage and we played hard to get the win," Hagerman coach Lonnie Funkhouser said. Hagerman (1-4) visits Raft River on Friday.

POCATELLO - After practice Thursday, two days prior to today's 6:35 p.m. game against Montana State-Northern at Holt Arena, Troy Bell repeated what has become a mantra for the Idaho State football team.

"We've just got to go out and play the way we can play, and not worry about what they do," said Bell, a junior running back. "It's what we do that's important, playing with our heads and our hearts."

What the Bengals did in their first game, committing five turnovers in a 33-27 loss to Sacramento State, will bear on what they do today.

Forget that the Northern Lights have the next to last game in the season, committing five miscast in a middlegame bout. The Havre, Mont., team has lost to NAlA-rival Montana Tech, 20-13, a team the Bengals downed by the next to last game in the season.

Any team asked to get back behind the wheel after fumbling six times in its previous game is a lot to prove - to itself. The 1-1 Bengals appear up to the task.

"They're mad at themselves," Idaho State head coach Larry Lewis said. "If we take control of the football last week, we win. I told our players, 'Believe in what we're doing.'"

Walt Currie is a believer in what Lewis is saying. Currie, a third-year head coach at MSU-Northern, and he's seen the tape of the Bengals' last outing.

"I'm surprised they lost that one," he said. "They looked like the better football team. But they're young and were playing their second game. Those kinds of things can happen."

Currie isn't counting on another flurry of Idaho State turnovers.

He's braced his charges for their biggest challenge to date.

"The overall quickness is pretty good, especially on defense," he said. "They seem to be athletic, quick and agile."

Currie's program is 5-25 since his revival in 1959 after being discontinued in 1971. Now more than half into a five-year plan, Currie said the just-revived Northern Lights are turning a corner.

"This is the first year we've been able to really compete with the next to us," he said. "We've had two games by a combined nine points."

The team from a campus of 1,640 students likes to blitz on defense, while running a free-wheeling option on offense.

"They're similar to Southwestern Utah, but a little more wide open," Lewis said. "They'll throw the ball. They're not strictly an option team."

The way it sounds, the Northern Lights can expect to have the kitchen sink thrown at them by Idaho State.

For his part, Currie is selling his players on the challenge before them.

"They've got the opportunity to play a good football team, to go out and get it," he said. For their part, the Bengals have a simple task: beat the Northern Lights and put some distance between themselves and a performance they'd like to forget, but would do well to remember.

"We've learned from it," Bell said.

CSI baseball slips with Utah State

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho baseball team split its doubleheader with the Utah State University club team Friday, winning the first game 14-0 before falling 11-6 in the nightcap at the end of the game.

CSU sophomore Christian Colwell finished the day 4-for-5 with four runs and two RBIs and freshman John Hurd went 4-for-6 with three RBIs to lead the Golden Eagles. Sean Bernhard picked up the win in Game 1, scattering three hits over six innings. Joe Miller also worked two innings in the win. Ryan Jones was saddled with the loss in the second game.

"We really have something here," CSI coach Jim Walker said. "This is a real competitive club and that's big."

The Eagles will continue off fall ball season today with a doubleheader at Treasure Valley Community College. CSI hosts Albertson College on Oct. 6.

and they all did a wonderful job." Mindful the Highland had trailed several times even while winning its first four games, Mariani said the focus in practice this week was on execution.

"We wanted to get out to a quick start, to get some points early," Mariani said. "We kept it pretty simple tonight, and maybe that was a key to our success."

Simple, in Hughes' 46-yard punt, the Bengals' first score, and Hill's timing pattern pass to Jon Winn moments later in the right corner of the end zone.

Then there was Hughes again, bringing over the right side for 21 yards and another touchdown. And Hill squirming into the end zone to cap a nine-play drive that made it 28-0.

The rest was mopping up, as Highland won for the 31st time in 37 meetings with the Bruins. The Ram ran for, anchored by 237-pound Eric Stone and 280-pound Sam Ellis, limited Twin Falls to just 28 yards on the ground. Linebacker Trent Skenandore had two sacks, and defensive back John Ellis picked off a Ward. Highland had 40 yards to the Bruin 3-yard line in the third quarter.

Twin Falls never got closer to scoring than the Highland 42-yard field goal in the quarter.

Should Highland get past Pocatello next Friday night, it could set up a meeting with the unbeaten Eagle the following week. But Mariani refused to let the Bruins lead.

"We're just going to enjoy tonight's win, and then look forward to Pocatello," he said. "That will be a rivalry game."

The Bruins travel to Centennial next week.

Kimberly (2-3, 1-1 SCIC) kept the ball on the ground most of the game, but with mixed results. The Bulldogs gained just 99 yards rushing, while Jake Williams led the leader with 51 yards on 13 carries.

Quarterback Matt Bulcher also struggled, both underthrowing and overthrowing his receivers or scrambling into Senator defense. The 6-foot-3 senior was just 5-for-17 with 77 yards and an interception. He was also just 1-of-8 in the "Hail" half while leading Kings to just 28 yards on the ground.

just as heated and the game is just as big.

"I don't think it feels weird to be playing them now," he said. "I know, I think it's cool. Everyone is excited about it."

And it might just be what both teams need at this point. Idaho has struggled as it has been outscored 102-10 in the first three quarters in losses to three Pac-10 schools — WSU, Arizona and Washington.

Boise State also was beat up by South Carolina and WSU, but then hammered Texas Tech, 49-14, last week to gain some momentum heading into tonight.

"I think the Boise game comes at the best time because of the way things have gone for us thus far this season," Cable said. "It's a rivalry. Our issue right now is staying together and not getting down. I know I keep saying this, but I believe it, so I'm going to say it again. I think we are going to be a good team, and I'm going to stand by that."

Interestingly, Cable said he won't cut back on UT's play-calling for the first game.

"He will make decisions exactly the way you want him to make them 99 percent of the time," Cable said. "I think the confidence of his teammates is probably the biggest strength. I didn't see anyone panic last week when John got hurt."

BSU is listed as an 11.5-point favorite, thanks in part to it losing to WSU by 21 points, while Idaho lost by 29. The key will likely be whoover plays better along the defensive front. Both teams know they need to put a good pass rush on, but would like to do it with the front four rather than with blitzes, which may leave them exposed for big plays.

If Idaho is forced to blitz, then look for BSU quarterback Ryan Dinwiddie to go deep, especially with the talented group of receivers he has. Idaho has struggled early in the season, defending long passes.

Both teams feature good running backs and passing games. The big difference this season is the Broncos have found the end zone, averaging 25 points per game, while Idaho hasn't. The Vandals are averaging only 13 points.

"This is a game that everyone looks forward to," Cable said. "It means a lot to the state, to the schools, to the communities, everything. It's a rivalry and I think it's a good thing the schedule has worked out the way it has."

GAME NOTES: Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne has decided to reinstate the presentation of the Governor's Trophy to the winner of the game. Kempthorne, however, won't be at the game as it is his father's 85th birthday and he is taking him to the Luciano Pavarotti concert in Boise tonight. While it's a battle for bragging rights in Idaho, Boise State starts only four players from the state, while Idaho has five.

HARTFORD, Conn. — A fire broke out Friday at the Hartford Civic Center, and smoke poured from the 26-year-old structure. Flames were visible from part of the building, which includes a sports arena, offices and retail space.

A malfunction in an underground electrical transformer probably caused the fire, Police Lt. Brian Heaven said. There were no signs of terrorist activity or other foul play, he stressed, and no reports of injuries.

Heavy black smoke rolled across the Hartford skyline as the afternoon rush hour began. Groups of office workers gathered on downtown streets.

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bruce Armstrong was Drew Bledsoe's security blanket for eight years, the left tackle who protected the New England quarterback.

There was nothing Armstrong could do last Sunday about the hard hit that caused bleeding in Bledsoe's chest cavity. For the first time in 15 years, Armstrong is not in a uniform in September.

After playing in a team-record 212 games, six Pro Bowls and one Super Bowl, Armstrong announced his retirement Friday.

Shaq uncertain he'll be ready to begin season

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — A tiny problem, relatively speaking, is causing mammoth Los Angeles Lakers center Shaquille O'Neal a lot of pain these days.

O'Neal, who has surgery Aug. 29 to alleviate the ache in his small left toe, said Friday he's not sure he'll be ready to play when the two-time defending NBA champion Lakers begin the season Oct. 30 against Portland.

"I just got cleared to do bikes last week, I haven't been doing anything since the surgery," O'Neal said Friday before the Lakers flew to Hawaii for the beginning of training camp. "I got another checkup in 30 days."

"It's kind of hurting pretty bad, the plinky-winky toe."

Horse board accepts requests for grants

JEROME - Each year the Idaho Horse Board awards grants to projects which benefit the Idaho horse industry in education, research and promotion. Grant requests are now being accepted.

In 1987, the Idaho Legislature passed legislation creating the Idaho Horse Board - the first such horse board in the United States set up to manage check-off funds collected by the state brand inspector, the board said.

Grants given to date total more than $1.00 million to horse projects throughout Idaho. Each time a horse is brand inspected, $3 is collected and turned over to the Idaho Horse Board and used for grants. Grants are given each January.

Some of the grants have gone to improve public horse facilities, to educational programs, to promote the Horse Expo held in Boise, to college research and teaching projects and to help fund public television horse productions.

Grant requests must be received by Dec. 1, Call 324-2336 for a grant application or mail a request to the Idaho Horse Board, P.O. Box 89, Jerome, ID 83338.

T.F. waits for word on flights

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls travelers and business people must wait a few more days to learn whether SkyWest Airlines will discontinue its service to Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

"I'm just as anxious about it as anyone," Airport Manager Bill Carberry said Friday. The Delta Connection carrier - with five departures daily to Salt Lake City and five arrivals - is the only commercial airline flying out of Joslin Field. David Clark, Clarking out of Joslin Field, said SkyWest's manager of corporate communications, said Friday the company plans to release its revised Delta Connection flight schedule Thursday morning.

In general, Clark said, "there will be some adjustment, but there won't be major cuts in our routes or in the number of flights that we have." Some cities will see a reduction in flight frequency, and SkyWest will cancel some new cities it previously planned to add to its schedule, he predicted. But the St. George, Utah-based regional carrier won't completely eliminate any of its existing "city pairs" - such as Twin Falls-Salt Lake City - and doesn't anticipate drastic reductions in any airport's flights, he added.

SkyWest Airlines might diminish service

"Anything that happens won't happen until November," Clark said. Delta Air Lines said Wednesday it will trim 15 percent of its work force and 15 percent of capacity because of declining air travel following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Salt Lake City is one of Delta's hubs, and Delta Connection routes such as the Twin Falls-Salt Lake one must fit into Delta's big picture.

Sure, five daily flights don't constitute a bustling air-travel trade. But SkyWest's Joslin Field service is key in Twin Falls, nonetheless.

"I think it is important for the economy in general, and of course the convenience for our clients," said Diana Rolig, owner of 4 Ways Travel in Twin Falls.

When prospective employers consider Magic Valley sites, she said, they look at "access to the outside world."

"This has always been a really important asset for Twin Falls," Rolig said. Travelers headed from Twin Falls to places in the Northwest find it cheaper to drive to Boise to catch a plane, Rolig said.

But for most other destinations, she said, the cost of flying from Twin Falls is competitive.

"We really try to promote that to our clients - that it's really a convenience and a savings to go from Twin Falls," she said. Carberry said his best guess is that Twin Falls will avoid cuts in its SkyWest service, because the Twin Falls-Salt Lake route has enjoyed healthy passenger loads.

He said he'll proceed with market research to build a case for more flights to and from Twin Falls and more direct destinations - through SkyWest or another carrier. A commuter connection to Boise is high on Carberry's wish list.

THINKING GLOBALLY

Patrick Byrne, president and CEO of Overstock.com, uses a scooter to speed his way through a huge company warehouse earlier this month in Salt Lake City.

Dot-com hopes to cash in on Third World wares

The Associated Press

HOLLADAY, Utah - Plainly put, the week when markets reopened following terrorist attacks on the East Coast was the worst for U.S. business since the economy began unraveling last year. The nation's economy is heading into a recession - but Patrick Byrne isn't singing the blues.

These may be the best of times for Byrne and his company, Overstock.com. The online liquidator buys up inventories of stressed-out start-ups and offline retailers for anywhere from 30 percent to 50 percent of wholesale and sells them at less than the original retailer's cost.

Overstock has garnered a lot of notoriety for its culture-like business model, which feeds on the misfortune. But the Utah dot-com is healthy while others are shutting down shop. NetScore, an Internet traffic measurement service, says 6.3 million visitors clicked on Overstock's Web site last month.

Byrne says Overstock sales, mostly to college-educated women with household incomes of about $80,000, are running more than $8 million a month, and the closely held company should be profitable in September when sales will be enough to offset the cost of doing business. But that isn't the end of the story. Byrne is launching a new department that, at first glance, seems in diametric contradiction to Overstock's bone-picking mission. The department will sell "socially responsible" goods that Overstock buys from Third World artisans, craftsmen and cooperatives.

"I've never been as excited about an idea, from a business or human perspective, as this," Byrne said. "If it doesn't work, I'll be disappointed. But if it works, I think we may have hit on something to change the lives of hundreds of thousands or even millions of people."

Byrne is a multidimensional creature. Thirty-eight years old, he is a former professional boxer who also holds a black belt in the kwon do, a Korean martial art. A three-time cancer survivor, Byrne has bicycled three times across the country, including one trip to raise awareness for cancer research.

He speaks Mandarin Chinese, French and a bit of Thai. He earned a master's degree from Cambridge University as a Marshall Scholar and a doctorate in political philosophy from Stanford University. One of his mentors is Warren Buffett, the billionaire investment guru who tutored teen-age Byrne in his principles of value investing. One of Buffett's tips is apropos to the liquidation business: Buy dollar bills for 30 cents.

"I've never met anybody who cared so little about what other

Developer: Only lengthy world war will stop project

The Associated Press

CASCADE - The terrorist attacks on the East Coast may have rocked the stock market and put the nation's economy on edge, but developers of the $1 billion four-season WestRock resort on Lake Cascade are pressing ahead.

Although the project was four years behind schedule before the attacks and still faced an uncertain future, Managing Director Jean-Pierre Boespflug said only a lengthy world war would stop efforts to get it moving.

And even then, Boespflug said the developers would only halt the project and revive it once the war ends and conditions improve.

The resort, the successor to the failed Valbols project, was scheduled to open this year, but no ground has been turned yet. The developers are still waiting for the state to decide whether it will lease them the 2,124 acres needed to make the resort a reality. The state Land Board has repeatedly rescheduled that issue. It was again unclear whether the lease would be taken up by the board in October.

But Boespflug and WestRock Associates President Don Wellmunter both remain confident the board will favor their plans. Boespflug said that, even since the attacks, Banc of America Securities has continued looking for suitable investors.

He suggested the uneasiness in the stock market could actually benefit WestRock because people will be looking for investments, and real estate has always been considered safe.

Seemingly putting the best face on the circumstances, Boespflug also maintained that the four-year delay in the resort's schedule becomes an advantage because with an operational date of 2005 now "my hope is the economy will be big guns again."

While tourism is expected to be one of the economic sectors hardest hit by the fallout from the attacks, he argued that Idaho tourism is different because it has the reputation of being a high-quality bargain. "It offers all that the best places offer without commanding the high prices those places demand," he said.

But in light of the collapse of the Valbols project, the state has been leery of getting involved because of the uncertainty of success, even in better times.

Advocates contend the project, which has already been scaled back to meet some objections, would be a major economic boost to the Cascade area that has been hard hit by the demise of the timber industry.

Critics claim it will damage the reservoir and surrounding environment, congest Idaho Highway 55 from Boise and drain local government budgets to provide the resort needed services.

Director choice waits on approval

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The hiring committee of the Historic Old Towne Business Improvement District has chosen one of four finalists for executive director, but the name will not be released until the BID board meeting Oct. 9.

Board Chairman Ron Thompson said the name of the hiring committee's choice cannot be released until the decision is ratified by the board of directors. "It is the board's intention to have an executive director in place at the next board meeting," Thompson said.

The four finalists were Derek Byrne, a legislative auditor and controller from Lemhi, Utah; Teresa Charbonneau of Twin Falls, a former BID employee; Richard Crowley, vice chairman of the BID board and owner of Crowley's Soda Fountain and General Store; and Midge Fisher, regional director of Silver Sage Co. Security.

The members of the hiring committee were Thompson, Dave Woodhead, Steve Soran, Dan Brizeo, Elina Annas, Kathi Honan and Brenda Thompson.

Meanwhile, Thompson said, the marked ballots for election of four board members should be in by Monday or Tuesday. He said the ballots will be counted Wednesday, Thursday or Friday and the winners' names released at that time.

Stock plunge takes toll on Simplot wealth

The Associated Press

BOISE - The nosedive of Micron Technology Inc. stock in the past year took its toll on Idaho's richest resident, according to Forbes Magazine.

J.R. Simplot, a potato magnate who grew up in Mini-Cassia and one of the original founders of Simplot's stock backers, saw his wealth decline from $1 billion last year to $3.5 billion this year, according to the magazine's latest ranking of America's wealthiest people.

From August 2000 to last August, the value of Micron stock has plunged from over $90 a share to $35, and since August it has dropped under $18 a share.

The decline in Simplot's net worth dropped him three notches on the list from a three-way tie for 48th last year to a four-way tie for 51st now. Also listed with net worth under $1 billion were Michael Group Inc. Chairman Bill P. Bechtel of San Francisco, former Bechtel chief Stephen Davidson Bechtel Jr. of San Francisco, and Ernie Lauder, Co. chief Leonard Alan Lauder of New York.

Stocks rebound solidly

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street followed one of its worst weeks with one of its best on a strong rally Friday that helped the Dow Jones Industrial Average recover nearly half their losses from the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The Standard & Poor's 500 and Nasdaq composite stock indexes also made significant recoveries from their lows as investors, wary about the fragile economy and upcoming third-quarter earnings reports, bet on bargain stocks.

"You had this huge loss last week on a lot of fear and concern, and prices became depressed," said Ralph Acampora, director of technical research at Prudential Securities. "We call that an over-sold market and at some point you get a relief rally and that's what this is — a nice, technical bounce."

The Dow closed up 166.14 at 8,847.56, extending a 114-point advance from Thursday. The Dow, which rose four of the last five sessions, gained 7.4 percent or 611.75 for the week, its second-biggest weekly point advance, after the 666.41-point gain during the week that ended March 17, 2000.

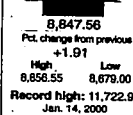

Broader measures also rose. The Nasdaq composite index rose by 39.05 to 1,499.80, a gain of 5.3 percent or 75.61 for the week. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 22.33 to the 1,040.94, finishing the week up 75.14 or 7.8 percent.

The Dow has now made back 44 percent of its loss from the week ending Sept. 21, when trading resumed after the Sept. 11 attacks; the Nasdaq has recovered 27 percent while the S&P 500 has gained 54 percent.

Still, analysts cautioned that the market might test its recent lows again.

Stocks are trying to right themselves after the shock of the attacks, but the extent of the economic fallout from the tragedies and any U.S. military response remains unknown — and a possible wildcard for an already skittish market.

"It's very much of a psychological battle in investing right now," said John Forelli, portfolio manager for John Hancock Core Value Fund. "We don't know if there's going to be more terrorist attacks and, if companies do fall short of expectations when they start reporting earnings, stocks will go down."

"Whether we've seen a bottom is the big question, and I don't think we have," said Acampora, the Prudential analyst.

The gains came on the last trading day of the third quarter. Such days can be volatile as fund managers adjust their portfolios, but Friday, the market moved consistently higher in brisk trading.

Financial stocks surged, lifted by gains in American Express, up $1.60 at $29.06, and Citigroup, up 63 cents at $40.50.

Even Bank of New York was higher, rising $1.68, or 5 percent, to $35, despite its warning it will miss third-quarter earnings targets because of the attacks.

Economists say terrorist attacks have probably brought recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy came to a virtual standstill in the second quarter, the government said Friday, another ominous sign that the Sept. 11 terror attacks probably pushed the country into recession.

With those attacks causing billions of dollars in lost business, forcing thousands of layoffs and dragging down consumer confidence, many economists believe a full-blown downturn is unavoidable.

"We're having a crisis of confidence," said Mark Zandi, chief economist for Economy.com. "A bunker mentality has descended. ... Consumers are pulling back. Businesses are retrenching."

The economy was teetering even before the attacks, suffering through a slowdown that abruptly started in the second half of last year.

Gross domestic product, the output of goods and services produced in the United States, grew at an annual rate of just 0.3 percent in the April-June quarter, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

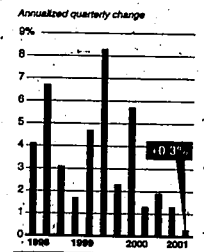

It was the weakest performance in more than eight years. The latest reading on GDP followed a 1.3 percent growth rate in the first quarter and illustrating the continued dramatic weakening of the economy this year.

The second quarter figure was slightly higher than a 0.2 percent estimate of second-quarter growth made a month ago, an improvement the government said came from a slightly better-than-anticipated trade performance.

Many analysts are predicting it will be the last quarter of economic growth this year.

GDP

Here is a look at the gross domestic product, which measures all goods and services produced by workers and capital located in the United States, regardless of ownership.

SOURCE: Department of Commerce

The Blue Chip Economic Indicators consensus expects the GDP to shrink by 0.5 percent in the July-September quarter and decline by 0.7 percent in the final three months of the year before returning to growth early next year. A recession is commonly defined as two consecutive quarters of declining GDP.

"The president remains concerned about the status of the economy," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

President Bush, he said, is focused on reaching an agreement with Congress on a plan to stimulate economic growth, something many expect to be revealed next week. Billions of extra dollars for reconstruction and to help the airlines, which were hammered by the suicide hijackings, have already been authorized.

Federal Reserve policymakers, who cut short-term interest rates last week, are expected to cut them again — which would be the ninth reduction this year — when they meet next Tuesday. Analysts are divided on whether they will cut by a half-point or a quarter-point.

Unlike many of his counterparts, Ken Maynard, president of ClearView Economics, believes the Fed's aggressive credit easing and economic stimulus provided by Congress will prevent the economy from tipping into a recession.

"But it's going to be very close," Maynard conceded.

Many economists are looking toward a rebound in the first half of next year, but that will depend on the severity of the economic fallout from the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, how the war against terrorism unfolds and how investors and consumers respond.

Consumers account for two-thirds of economic activity and have kept the economy afloat over the past year. The small amount of growth in the second quarter of the year, a 0.2 percent rise in consumer spending.

Zandi predicted consumer spending in the third quarter will rise by just 0.9 percent, then fall by 1 percent in the final quarter of the year as rising job cuts and another over-the-shoulder market dim their mood.

Continued from B5 people think as Mr. Byrne, not in an adolescent sort of childish way.

Byrne says the key to selling more socially responsible goods is charging less. In turn, more sales will require the participation of more artisans.

The basic issue is quantity. Goods, whether they come from distressed companies or the war-torn Middle East, can't be sold easily because the modern retail industry is geared around large production runs and mass sales of identical products.

W... The project is more than a financial gamble for Byrne. What has come to believe about fighting poverty is also on the line. The way to eradicate poverty is by changing the process that has led to it, he contends.

VOICES INVERSE

Tears for those too near

Tears for those too near, tears for those in fear, tears for those in pain. My throat began to choke as if it was filled with smoke. I could not believe my ears. I could not believe my eyes. I could not believe the scene unfolding on my TV screen. This home of mine so safe and warm. This place I thought far from harm.

Now full of pain. Buildings fall like rain. Death at our door. Thousands buried deep beneath Earth's floor.

Torn from their family's arms. Watching was I. As angels tried to fly. As men so strong walked in to carry the weight of Towers in times two.

Three hundred find themselves unable this task to do. The heroes one and all. The passengers who knew their plight.

Yet still stood to fight. For on 9-11 my America was, Red with blood, white with prayer, blue with mourning.

Our colors we will fly, for a nation we will cry. We shall not fall. Candles we will light as Americans we unite.

Our heads we bow For our loss of innocence Now. CINDY HENRY Rupert

A Million Tears

A million lives shattered A million tears we've cried. We couldn't wash the pain away, Though millions of us tried.

A nation stepped forward to lend a hand No matter how small the token. We sent a message loud and clear.

"We're bent, but we're not broken!" BARBARA MOON Jerome

Tuesday's when this big mess started

Tuesday's when this big mess started. Three or four hits have been charted. When again will they strike?

This is what I do not like. Why did they have to hit the states? We aren't they ones that everyone hates.

We help others out, when in a jam. But then someone hits us and we go bam.

America will cry. And low we will lie. Just to sit around and wait. Being scared is what I hate.

I wish it all would stop. President Bush just might pop. With these crazies all around. It is hard to sleep sound.

This seems to affect me a lot. For some it's just another bone in the pot. It must be one big deal. To me it doesn't seem real. NICOLE RUDDLESTON Twin Falls

The most vivid picture

The most vivid picture of this tragedy in my heart will always be that of the smoke billowing to heaven.

I will always remember the lives lost. Their spirits beckoning us to never ever forget.

This is not the first time we have had to pay the price of souls for our freedom. Let's pray that it will be our last. I kneel in the shadows of mourning.

My heart and soul, desperate in prayer. My eyes raise to a shadowed morning. Heavy with sadness, deeply in prayer.

I feel the soft breeze of angel wings. In following smoke, I see His hands. Angels guide those lost on silver wings.

Laying the sad spirits in God's hands. PAMELA CRAWFORD Wendell

We'll Stand Together (Excerpted)

How can I comprehend? I can't see to understand. All this terrorism in our land.

So much hate in their hearts, they're not so smart. What were they thinking? They can't tear us apart.

What was on their minds? What was to gain? Causing so many deaths, and pain.

You made time stop, almost you took from us. But we still have hope, and good always prevails. It's no longer them or us, one man can't triumph one is not enough.

It's not about black or white, Chinese or Hispanic. It's about life, and being able to live free. That's what makes America so great.

Our freedom. We'll defend it with our blood, fighting 'til the end. We can't let so many people die in vain.

Dying wasn't in their plans that day. People from many nationalities. You choose that for them.

But see, America is great, many allies we have. We'll make them pay, for that bloody Tuesday. Husbands lost wives, children lost mothers.

We all lost someone's strangers or not. Like it or not, in God's eyes we're all brothers, and like a family, we'll stand together forever. TERESA MUNOZ Burley

This Country of Ours

Why did God make, This country of ours? Was it to show, No matter what, Together we'll go far.

In God we trust, Will sing out until the end, Standing together. For our honor to defend.

Our solemn oath, was made to be our guide, Our forefathers wrote, as a way we might survive.

Why did God make, America so strong? Was it to show, every nation can belong? Our independence, rings out throughout the land, we'll march and salute, for the United States we stand.

In God we trust, we fought not to be owned, reach out a hand, for all weak and those alone.

Honor and love, can be seen through all our lives, we have our ways, but conflict must not die.

If all men knew, to let faith be their guide, then once installed, they'd respect all of mankind. That's why God made, this country of ours, to light our lives, and share it near and far.

The greatest gift, that only he can give, is the gift to us, our country's stripes and stars, is the gift of love For American is our. LINDA SCHROEPF Twin Falls

Osama bin Laden

'Apologies to Abu Ben Adhem' by Leigh Hunt

Osama bin Laden (may his tribe decrease) Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace.

As he saw, within the moonlight in his room, Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom.

An Angel writing in a book of gold: Exceeding grace had made Osama bold.

And to the Presence in the room he said, "What writest thou?" The Vision raised its head,

And with a look made of all sweet accord Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Osama. "Nay, not so,"

Replied the Angel: Osama spoke more low, "But surely now; and said, "I pray thee, then, Write me as one that hates his fellow men."

The Angel wrote, and vanished. The next night It came again with a great wakening light.

And showed the names whom Allah cursed. And lo! Osama bin Laden's name was first! JOE ANDREASEN Shoshone

People are people (Excerpted)

People are people yet some are punks Terrorists and stuff think they got funk

Ain't no reason for the killings. Ain't no reason for the hate If you can't eat the chicken, don't order the plate

If you don't want to see what there is to be seen. Then put it off with some drugs and a little Jim Bean

Or be on the other side and kill or kill

I try to imagine, but I can't figure out how New Yorkers must feel And I wish to figure out why these things are done

Why people do acts of hate and think it's fun. It sickens me to think of what's going on in his head.

Yah, that Osama bin Laden who hates instead... Of recovery from the past event 'Cause the suicide bombers been sent

And they all died for a stupid cause Why go against what so many have lost

Because of the stupid acts of mankind I search for a reason that I can't find

So my prayers to the people who died And when the time comes to choose my side

I've known the answer from that stupid day I know my side, it's the U.S.A. ANTHONY MUNOZ Burley

United We Will Stand, United We Will Win!

On Tuesday, Sept. 11, 2001, a war against the United States of America was started, but did it really begin a long time ago. Freedom is all we have ever known, and we will now ban together to save our country because this is the only way we know. The wars have been going on in lands far away, but now they have brought the war to our door, something they have been planning for years, waiting for the right time to tear us apart and put the fear of death in us.

as they have done to so many in the World before. There terrorists get their strength from the fears of the people they attack, and they will not just go away, they will just hide in their holes in the earth. Until we let down our guard and then sneak out to throw another blow against freedom and the land of the free and the brave... God bless America and the lands we are to defend, give us the knowledge and strength to destroy the terrorists and hatred in the world to the very end. ROY R. DIXON Twin Falls

How Could We Have Known

We live in a country where we are free to live, love and pray in so many different ways.

I believe that we as Americans, knew before this tragic event took place, that we were united, but now, we have become more united than ever before.

Those, who afflicted this nation with such great pain, may have thought that they damaged our hearts and destroyed our souls, but let me tell them a thing or two...

As Americans, we have now come together with more courage, much more strength and we will continue to have the strength to give this great nation was and is built upon...

We think of those families who cry out in pain, their pain had arrived from those acts so insane. That was put on this nation from those without souls, or compassion for life, how could we have known.

And yet, as a great nation, we'll stand up and fight, for what we believe, it's our God-given right. We all are a family whose cause is the same, let's remember those heroes who died not in vain.

Let's all wave that flag as proud as can be and give thanks to God for our unity. In memory to those who lost their lives on September 11, 2001. KIMBERLY COE Burley

War

Goodness will have to wait now! Tragedy has tripped the powder. Like a mind hidden in the shadows. No shelter here. Danger dances round, Calling our darkest parts To rise from hell, Crying, Revenge!

Compassion will have to wait now! The specter of the innocent dead Occupies the mind. Regret falls unnoticed Under the soles of marching boots

As youngsters, immortal and will be following their generals Through the gates of horror Smelling of canvas, leather and oil.

Joy will have to wait now. Remembrance and grief Spin in a ditch deep. The war hides her bicycle round and round "I'll get you ... I'll get you"

The details of history And the patterings of pulpits Like dust to the eyes. Love will have to wait now!

Hated holds dominion here. Hearts beat loud while the brides are readied. Soon the horsemen will mount And turn their terrible steeds to the east.

People will wave their nation flags. Politicians will utter their empty words And death will procreate death. Again. MICHAEL JOHNSON Jerome

United Arab Emirates freezes accounts of suspects

MANAMA, Bahrain - The United Arab Emirates on Friday ordered its financial institutions to freeze the accounts of people and institutions the United States says were involved in terrorism, including Osama bin Laden and his al-Qaida network.

The Persian Gulf region could follow suit soon and their cooperation would provide valuable links in tracing the money trail of terrorist groups.

Banks in the Persian Gulf are believed to be a crucial link in bin Laden's intricate financial pipeline.

The Manhattan trial of suspects charged in the 1998 bombing of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania revealed a global financial web spun by bin Laden and his associates that included a bank in Dubai, the financial center of the United Arab Emirates.

Since the United States began forging a global coalition against terrorism, Persian Gulf nations have pledged to cooperate.

Security Council lifts sanctions against Sudan

UNITED NATIONS - A green light from the United States Friday ended a five-year-old U.N. sanctions regime against Sudan, although Washington is still keeping the country on its terrorist watch list.

Signaling its continued concern, the United States abstained on the Security Council vote to end diplomatic and aviation sanctions imposed after a 1995 assassination attempt against Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. The 14 other members voted to immediately lift the sanctions, which were never actively enforced.

Earlier this week, the United States disclosed that Sudan has quietly rounded up as many as 30 foreign extremists since Sept. 11.

Authorities say murderer's past littered with crimes

ZUG, Switzerland - Switzerland's worst mass murderer was described Friday by authorities as a "querulous troublemaker" whose past included a conviction for child molestation and other crimes.

Friedrich Leibacher, a 57-year-old Zurich resident, opened fire with an assault rifle Thursday on a meeting of the state legislature, killing 14 lawmakers and officials, before killing himself with a handgun.

It was unclear whether the attack would have any impact on Swiss gun controls, the most relaxed in Western Europe. Officials said they were a sure where Leibacher had acquired his weapons. The assault rifle was a civilian version of the model issued to soldiers of the militia army to keep in their homes.

Hurricane Juliette slams into Baja resort areas

CABO SAN LUCAS, Mexico - Hurricane Juliette barreled into the tourist resorts at the tip of the Baja California peninsula and hung around like an unwelcome guest on Friday, smashing docks, ripping off roofs and tossing uprooted trees into flooded streets.

About 800 people had been evacuated from flimsy housing in the city of 25,000, but there were no new reports of major injuries. Juliette had killed two people earlier in the week, farther south in Mexico.

Truce talks continue despite more bloodshed

JERUSALEM - Pledging to sustain their uprising against Israel, thousands of Palestinians marched Friday in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to mark the anniversary of the current round of fighting. Three Palestinians were killed by Israeli fire, but the bloodshed did not derail efforts to implement a truce.

A fourth Palestinian died when a bomb he was preparing exploded prematurely.

Forty-five Palestinians and six Israelis were hurt in widespread violence reminiscent of the early days of the fighting.

American writer released after 'confessing' in China

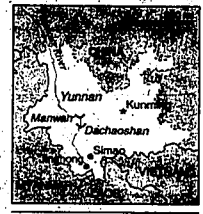

BEIJING - A Chinese-born American writer accused of spying for Taiwan "confessed to his crimes" and was expelled from the country Friday, state media said. The 40-year-old writer, an scholar released from custody this year in the days before a top American official's visit.

Wu Jianmin was released from jail in southern China and "has left the country," the U.S. Embassy said in a statement. He "appeared in generally good health," the statement said.

China's official news agency said he was expelled Friday by the State Security Department of Guangdong Province in southern China after he "conducted espionage activities on the Chinese mainland many times, seriously jeopardizing the national security of China."

southwestern Yunnan province isn't large. When it's finished in December, the 30-story-high wall of concrete will hold a narrow, 55-mile-long reservoir that will take just five days to fill.

Critics worry about the Dachaoshan dam's location on the Mekong River, a source of livelihood for 60 million people downstream.

China says the construction is necessary to lift backward southwestern provinces such as Yunnan, home to 43 million people, out of poverty.

The $600 million Dachaoshan is the second of at least eight hydroelectric dams that Beijing wants to build on the region's most important waterway over the next two decades.

U.S. official pledges support for Russia's bid to join WTO

MOSCOW - A key U.S. official on Friday pledged support for Russia's bid to join the World Trade Organization and thanked the Kremlin for backing the campaign against terrorism.

Trade Representative Robert Zoellick said support for Russian WTO membership should not be seen, however, as a reward for its backing of the United States after the Sept. 11 terror attacks.

U.S.-Russian relations, long strained over Washington's plans for a national missile defense and over Russia's war in Chechnya, have improved with the Kremlin's vocal support for the United States campaign against terror.

There's no room for intolerance

I have always wondered why we tolerate fanatics, even bleed them as they divide and destroy our communities of faith.

When I talk about fanatics, I mean those people who want to exclude others - gay men and lesbians, for instance - from our faith communities. They judge people who have had an abortion, but they may consider a community gossip to be their best friend. They twist the words of the holy books to fit their agendas. They tell lies to achieve their goals. They bad-mouth people who have fallen under hard times.

Some years ago, a friend told me about one man in his church who was criticizing the pastor. Finally one day, my friend asked the man to step into the empty kitchen of the church. The conversation was short and effective: "I've been overhearing you talk about our pastor for the past few weeks. I was just wondering, are you trying to get our pastor fired?"

FAITH TODAY

"Oh, no, no."
"Well that's good, because you would have one terrible fight on your hands and I would be your chief opponent."

The two men stood staring at each other. Then the man walked away, took his wife's arm and left the church. And all talk about dumping the pastor stopped.

It doesn't take a big effort to silence these people. We know they are cowards, the kind of people who will stand in a group and then drop out of sight. They're the little boy in your sixth-grade class who was always rattling on the other kids. The kind of children who were always trying to get someone else in trouble to make themselves look better. I guarantee these are people who will back down as soon as they are confronted.

These are tiny incidents in comparison to what happened in New York City and Washington, D.C. But I think peace comes most often in such doses rather than in huge victories.

I think it's time we told fanatics we don't matter any more. We need to tell them their idea of religion has twisted that it doesn't have a place in history. I think we have to tell fanatics they are full of crooked ideas and it's time to get things straight.

In the 1950s, fanatics were everywhere, and nobody seemed to have a clear sense of where the nation was heading. One night, I attended a forum on sex education in North Dakota. Some very mild fans were shown, and invited teachers talked about their goals. The gymnasium was packed. When the presentation ended, the questions started. Most of us could not believe the hostility, accusations against innocent teachers, claims that communists would infiltrate the program and that children would be sexually perverted if the program were implemented.

When the questions ran out, I saw a man approaching a male teacher, an admired professional. He was wearing a big, ugly, and he hit the teacher hard on the bony finger, knocking him back against the wall. He screamed, "I know who you are. I know what you think. You want our kids to be perverts. You want my kids corrupted." That was pretty sad. But the most horrible thing was that I was the only person who came to the teacher's defense. The fanatic was given freedom to violate another human being, a citizen, without restraint.

That's what we are dealing with today. We have allowed the fanatic to violate us for so long that now they believe they can take over the world.

It's no longer just a little sex-ed program or a small congregation in the suburbs. Now it's the whole world, and we sit in the middle of the fray. Pilgrims, we must be diligent for evil is all about. Guard our faith and liberty.

Churches that oppose all military action struggle with attacks

By Richard N. Osting
The Associated Press

America's "peace churches," with some 1 million members, are restating their pacifist beliefs but also struggling with how they and the nation should react to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Pacifists say they are confronting questions of citizenship for decades. The current conflict is "much more complicated" than previous ones, says a pacifist scholar, Albert N. Keim, retired from Eastern Mennonite University in Harrisonburg, Va.: "These people are killing people in a particularly dreadful way. We pacifists know how to behave in war, but we're still learning how to react to terrorism." Retha McCutchen, national general secretary of the "Friends" United Meeting (Quakers), describes what her fellow believers have been experiencing during the extraordinary days since the attacks: "Grief. Some fear. Anger, of course, and concerns for future loss of life."

Like millions, they look for ways to assist relief efforts and console the suffering, and they worry about discrimination against Arab-Americans. Unlike millions, they hear a renewed call to "oppose war." This week, the Quakers urged members to recall the words of their 17th century founder, George Fox: "The Spirit of Christ ... will never move us to fight and war against any man with outward weapons." Besides Quakers, the pacifist or "peace church" tradition is upheld by Mennonites, Amish and various Brethren groups. There are more than a hundred such denominations in the United States with a following of 1 million people. Though not considered strict pacifists, the 862,000 Seventh-day Adventists are asked never to bear arms, and are allowed to take non-combatant jobs if they join the military.

The religious reasoning of the peace churches is straightforward. "We believe Jesus meant what he said about loving our enemies," explains Bruce Birchard, of the Philadelphia-based Friends General Conference.

True, there's lots of warmaking in the Bible, but "we tend to interpret the Old Testament through the eyes of the New Testament," and, the New Testament through the words of Jesus, says Ron Byler, of the Mennonite Church USA.

There are individual pacifists in mainstream Christian bodies, and the peace churches are pleased at the dovish pronouncements coming from those quarters. For instance, top officials from some denominations in the National Council of Churches have joined several prominent Catholics, Jews and Muslims in this plea to the U.S. government: "We must not, out of anger and vengeance, indiscriminately retaliate in ways that bring on even more loss of innocent life." Christian pacifists have been a distinct minority element in America's religious mix since colonial times. They've sometimes suffered for their faith. During World War I, men who refused compulsory military service were usually imprisoned and several died from mistreatment while in custody.

In 1935 the Brethren, Friends and Mennonites formed an alliance that eventually convinced the government to adopt a more sympathetic policy. Thus, during World War II, Christian conscientious objectors were allowed to forsake military service and do conservation work with the Civilian Public Service. Some were

Mini-Cassia couple brings ministry to extended-care facilities

By Coraen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - The Lord's people are told to rest on the Sabbath, but believers Jerry and Rachel Hughes spend that day ministering to the elderly and incapacitated in Mini-Cassia extended-care facilities. They say they get their rest another way.

"The first time we went, we thought the people were really sour, not interested," Jerry Hughes said. "But a voice kept repeating in my head. They can't go. I didn't know what it meant, but it was persistent. We sang again for a group, and the voice kept saying, 'They can't go.' And then it hit me. They can't go to church, they've gone out of their life, and they want to go."

That was July 1997. The Hugheses now entertain at three area facilities. And the people are no longer "sour."

Jerry Hughes plays guitar, and both he and his wife sing old-fashioned hymns that were popular on the radio in the 1950s and '60s. A friend, Jose Ortega, who is director of Rupert's Head Start program, frequently joins in on bass.

Rachel Hughes took a break two years ago to give birth to George, who is now part of the family show. He was honored at a shower at Minidoka Memorial a month before he entered the world. The many grandparents at the extended-care facilities adore him, the Hugheses say.

"George has more grandmas and grandpas than any other living child," Rachel Hughes said.

When the Hugheses enter a room, there are people lined up to see them. Wheelchairs and easy chairs are filled. Sleepy eyes open, and smiling lips sing along. Toys top to the likes of "I'll Fly Away" or "Just a Closer Walk With Thee."

Please see MINISTERING, Page C2.

Local teen-agers compete at national arts competition

By Steve Turner
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Thanks to two car washes, a French fry sale, a slave auction and a sloppy Joe dinner, seven teen-agers from the First Assembly of God Church packed up and headed to a national competition in Kansas City.

A district fine arts competition for Assembly of God churches had ended with the Twin Falls First Assembly team receiving an invitation to the "semi-finalists" National Fine Arts Festival and Youth Congress. Seven youth and nine adults made the trip in August.

"There were 6,500 kids ages 15 to 18 at this national competition," said Randy Gardner, associate pastor at First Assembly. The group attended workshops on drama, writing and speaking skills and also a youth congress led by Christian speakers. Scott Gibbons, Reggie Dabbs and Tom Greene. They were in Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 6-10.

Gardner helped his youth plan the fund-raising events that got them to Kansas City, and he said the group is still planning more fund-raisers to pad the coffers.

Competitions at the national conference were impressive.

"We had three entries into the competition," Gardner said. "Our drama team missed the final round by two points and received a support or Stacie Wallin received a superior for vocal solo, and Becky Mills received a support or for her short story."

During the week, the group got together with people from other churches. Please see PACIFISTS, Page C2.

Tragedy pushes many to grieve together

By Susan Hogan/Albach
The Dallas Morning News

Knife-wielding hijackers. Debris and people falling from the sky like rain. Choking towers. Twisted steel. Choking dust. Cell-phone goodbyes. Americans are mourning. They're turning out in greater numbers in churches, mosques, temples and synagogues. They're setting up makeshift memorials on sidewalks and around flagpoles. They're lighting candles. They're writing letters of grief. They're dropping off flowers, teddy bears, balloons. They're posting photographs of the missing on make-do walls of remembrances.

On television and in newspapers, survivors tell wrenching stories about the final moments of their loved ones. Diaries of grief fill the Internet. Oceans of tears are shed.
What's happening reflects an evolution in how the country mourns. It collects the tragedies, said Marjorie Woodruff, of Southern Methodist University. It happened after the bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City and after the killings at Columbian High School in Littleton, Colo. But in a bigger way, it's happening in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

grieving is being done in a more intimate way and on a larger scale because of mass media.
The impact has been greater, too, because many more lives were lost last week, said Bert Haylip, of the University of North Texas in Denton: "We talked about a loss of innocence with the assassinations of Martin Luther King and John F. Kennedy. Now people are grieving in the illusion that they are safe. They feel vulnerable in a way they didn't feel before."

Lonnie Kliever's religion classes at SMU were packed on the day of the attacks. An angry student on the front row vented about Muslims. A Muslim woman behind him sat quietly. Some students asked perennial religious questions: Why would a loving God allow such devastation? Others simply wept despondently.
It was a scene played out across America.
"Whatever good about the public grieving is that it gives people something to do with what they're feeling," said Donna Schuurman, of the Association for Death Education and Counseling in Hartford, Conn. But there can be a downside, too, if people don't channel their grief appropriately, particularly their anger, said Haylip: "We're seeing anger directed toward specific individuals by virtue of how they look. Grief is about seeking an understanding why. There are people whose tolerance for that is very low, so they create their own answers. They're more likely to bomb mosques and attack people because of their Islamic heritage."

Ministering

Rachel Huguen walks among her elderly friends, greeting most by name.

Jerry Huguen often calls out to tease them: "Hiding, are you Emma? Not from us, you ain't!" The Huguens never charge for their services.
"Let's just ask God for enough money to make it — gas and things," Jerry Huguen said. "It's always there, one way or another."

Rachel Huguen is the softer presence.
"Rachel has the most healing hands I've ever felt," her husband said. "She'll touch somebody, and the response is just huge — the transfer of love from one human to another."
"Rachel often always ask to pray for people, and they've never been refused.
"Sometimes people aren't having a good day, and it brightens them up," Rachel Huguen said. "To one ever turns down the offer anyway."
Still, the Huguens insist that they receive much more than they give.
"Rachel can tell you, there have been days we didn't want to go, but you go because these people want you," Jerry Huguen said. "These hymns heal you."
Occasionally, there are intensely personal moments, like those when the Huguens are asked to sing at a deathbed.
"There was one family where both parents were in the care center," Jerry Huguen recalled. "First, the husband passed away, and then the wife was dying. She asked for us to come and sing. I said, 'She had this wonderful family of children who were all trained choir singers. They'd sing all the harmony parts, and it was so beautiful.'
The Huguens, who teach Christian Education at Denko High School, are also invited to sing at funerals.
They attend church at Calvary Chapel of Burley each Sunday morning. Then, after lunch, they start their rounds. They perform at Aspen Grove first, then at Burley Care Center. The day finishes at Minidoka Memorial Hospital.
Well, not quite finishes ...
George always wants to hear "O My Donald" at bedtime, and his teen-age sister, Sydney, can't do the job to suit him. It has to be Mom and Dad.
That's not a bad ministry, either.

Sunday school is still about making connections

By Allison Askins
Knight Ridder News Service

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Used to be Sunday school was a routine that started around Labor Day and continued through the school year. That's not true anymore. Today, a wide variety of people of different ages and backgrounds are looking for a wider variety of needs to be met by the church than ever before.

Cox, who has been working in the field for more than a dozen years, can remember when her job entailed organizing classes that gave people a chance to talk about the biblical implications of society's influences on their lives. That's still true, but today Christian education is about more than that.

"Whether we like it or not, we have to take hands with society and the realities of what it's like," said Cox, who has discovered that four-week classes are effective for some. "Maybe we'll need a night class for Catholics on Thursdays."

The Sunday school movement has always been about responding to society's needs, noted Robert Grant, who directs the Sunday school department for the South Carolina Baptist Convention. The first classes developed as schools for working children in England in the late 1700s. That continued in the New World, with worship at 11 a.m. so the men in the family had time to get to morning chores. Women went earlier with the children.

Sunday school is there to connect people with people as well as God's word, according to Riverland Hills Baptist minister of education Tim Hawkins. Resurgence to it is in places where everybody knows your name and everybody is welcome," Hawkins chuckled, in reference to the theme song of the 1980s sitcom "Cheers" (set in a bar).

Internet users focus on Nostradamus after attacks

By Barbara Rose
Chicago Tribune

During the week of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the Internet's vaunted "viral" ability to spread obscure information rapidly helped to fuel interest in a 16th century figure whose writings some consider prophetic.

"Nostradamus" ranked high on a list of the keywords typed into search engines when people looked online for news after the attacks, according to ComScore Networks.
"Everyone, please, use a bit of common sense before you forward false e-mails," Estabrooks chided. "People are looking for some kind of comfort and general validation in anything suggesting that the attack was part of some plan" over which they have no control.

ist leader whose followers are suspected of orchestrating the attack. And various versions of a cryptic and apocalyptic verse were circulating widely and were purporting to be from Nostradamus' writings, which were originally in French.

When the e-mails started popping up in the inbox of Eric Estabrooks, a Chicago database programmer, he used Google.com to search on "Nostradamus" and confirmed that the e-mailed verse he received was identical to a verse composed and posted on the Web in a discussion about reason versus superstition. The writer's intent was to debunk Nostradamus' prophetic powers.
"Everyone, please, use a bit of common sense before you forward false e-mails," Estabrooks chided. "People are looking for some kind of comfort and general validation in anything suggesting that the attack was part of some plan" over which they have no control.

Competition

throughout the country to praise God.

"I enjoyed seeing many other people that believe in God as I do," said Haley Charlton, a 15-year-old student at Twin Falls High School. "There were more than 6,000 teens worshipping there."

Charlton went on to say that she liked meeting in a big city.
"I think I met Christians from all 50 states," she said.
Jamie Cunningham, a 14-year-old student at Kimberly High School, said she particularly enjoyed the speaker Reggie Debbis.
"Reggie was really funny as a speaker and played the saxophone well," said Jamie, who is also a saxophone player. "All the speakers really ministered to me in Kansas City."
Jamie added, with a laugh, "No one really knows where Idaho is. People asked us if we had electricity."
Both of the girls said they feel challenged to minister on their respective campuses. They feel the need to reach out to those who are looking for God to their fellow classes.

Jacob Gardner, an 18-year-old student at Filer High School and son of Randy Gardner, was similarly challenged by the trip.
"God is really close to God on this trip," he said. "I liked the time I spent with God in Kansas City."
He had less kind words for some of God's creatures there.
"O had never seen bugs as big as these," he said of midwestern insects. "They had horns and teeth."
On the Friday night of the Kansas City trip, Randy Gardner attended a prayer meeting for pastors.
"Friday night was fantastic," he recalled. "Eighteen thousand people met to pray, and it was a really special occasion."
When they had the chance, the group hung around the convention center, waiting for their scores from competitions. Some free time was spent at a Kansas City Royals baseball game. The teens also went to the World's Fun amusement park.
Back home, they all agreed that the whole trip had been "worlds of fun."

When the military draft was reinstated between 1951 and 1973, the Selective Service was even more accommodating, allowing pacifists to fulfill their duty by serving with private humanitarian agencies.

Resumption to the draft would be a pressing matter for all peace churches.
But even without it, many Mennonites, Brethren and Amish will confront debates about citizenship they haven't seen since World War II, says sociologist Donald B. Kraybill, author of "Anabaptist World USA."

For instance, is it appropriate to fly the flag? To sing the flag, to sing the national anthem or "God Bless America"? Pacifist leaders in the country, church leaders, but singing songs and flying flags can lead toward idolatry.

"Personally, I had a problem with the president kneeling with the National Anthem," Kraybill said.
"Let's be holy when we're on this side, too."

Religious leaders respond to attacks

By Helen T. Gray
The Kansas City Star

As the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks replay on television and in peo- ple's minds, many are struggling to make sense of it all. Here are voices from people of faith:

"I have been asked hundreds of times in my life why God allows tragedy and suffering. I have to confess that I really do not know the answer totally even to my own satisfaction. I have to accept, by faith, that God is sovereign, and he is a God of love and mercy and compassion in the midst of suffering. The Bible says God is not the author of evil."

The Rev. Billy Graham

"Don't ask why did it happen. It happened because people are evil. It also happened because God is lifting his protection from this nation, and we must pray and ask him for revival so that once again we will be his people, the planting of his righteousness, so that he will come to our defense and protect us as a nation."

Pat Robertson, the Christian

Broadcasting Network

"It is difficult to explain. As people of faith, we believe God is the God of love. But we still see evil. Why God did not stop that? Why God did not stop the Gulf War, the killing of people in Bosnia, what is going on in the Middle East? Whose side should God be on? God has left people to manage their own affairs. Islamic theology says everything happens by the will of God, but this does not mean that God is pleased with everything."

Muzammil Siddiqi, past president of the Islamic Society of North America

"I think the attack, from a spiritual perspective, God would use as a warning to his people. And I believe if we don't repent that we're going to see something worse. I believe you can't shake your fist in God's face, as we seem to have done over the last few years. We have told God nationally, politically, corporately, 'God, get out of our schools, get out of our businesses, get out of our government and get out of the mar-kerplace.' And then God, who is a generalizer and doesn't favor himself on anybody, he just withdraws very gently by degrees, according to Romans, Chapter 1."

Anne Graham Lotz, evangelist and daughter of Billy Graham

"God could have eliminated all evil from our world by simply removing our ability to choose it. But God doesn't want us to be puppets. He wants to be loved and obeyed by creatures who voluntarily choose to do so. Yes, God could have kept the terrorists from completing their suicidal missions by removing their ability to choose their own will instead of his. But to be fair, God also would have to do that to all of us. You and I are not terrorists, but we do harm and hurt others with our own selfish decisions and actions. Don't blame God for this tragedy. Blame people who ignored what God has said us to do: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.'"

The Rev. Rick Warren, Saddleback Valley Community Church, Lake Forest, Calif.

"For me, the reason God created human beings is not to pile up material possessions, but to choose between good and evil. God weeps when human beings choose incorrectly, as they did in these events. If God would have intervened and stopped it, that would change the nature of reality. Then we're no longer human beings."

Rabbi Mark Levin, Congregation Beth Torah, Overland Park, Kan.

"Although I do not believe that God causes all tragedies - the Bible says he is incapable of sin - I do believe he has a purpose in allowing painful events to occur. Nothing that happens is a mad, meaningless accident. We may not understand what his purposes are, but we can take comfort in the fact that they exist. God specializes in taking evil and bringing good out of it. God is not a murderer. ... When we get close to heaven, we will finally see his purpose even in the tragedies of life."

Evangelist Luis Palau

Evangelist Rick Gage, at a crusade in Pikeville, Ky., in August, sparked a religious revival in four nights of preaching and filled the town's 2,500-seat football stadium.

Some Christian faithful fast to fortify prayers

By Jim Remson
The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA - This month's terrorist attacks and war preparations have brought not only a resurgence of prayer, but a renewal of the tradition of fasting by some Christians.

The practice, emerging particularly in evangelical and Pentecostal Christianity, calls on members to hold private but synchronized fasts as a way to deepen the sincerity of their prayers for the bereaved families and the nation's leaders.

Some groups have been holding strict 24-hour fasts, much as Jews will do for Yom Kippur, which began this week. Most, though, are conducting light fasts, from midnight through mid-afternoon, as a way to "focus in on spiritual things," said Bishop Ernest C. Morse, dean of Mount Airy Church of God in Christ.

Immediately after the Sept. 11 attacks, Morris' Pentecostal denomination called on its 5.5 million members to fast every Tuesday to intensify their intercessory prayers about the tragedy. One of his members, Christine Johnson, sat in her office at lunchtime Tuesday quietly reading her well-thumbed Bible. One verse jumped out at her, 2 Chronicles 20, in which Jehoshaphat, warned of an invasion from the East, "proclaimed us a fast throughout all Judah."

"Fasting along with prayer gives you more power and endurance, and it has a way of humbling the soul," said Martha Addison, of Deliverance

Evangelistic Church in Philadelphia. "You're more sensitive to the things of God and your surroundings."

Members are being asked to pray "that the Lord take away the hurt and grief and give our leaders wisdom and help them see what God would have us do."

Gary Bergel, president of a national Christian prayer network called Intercessors for America, said he "started to see fasting emphases this week."

Bibles sell fast after terror attacks

The Orlando Sentinel

"Pocket-sized, giant-print and wide-margined for note-taking. All versions of Bibles are selling fast - from $1.99 paperback New Testaments to $100 leather-bound King James editions.

So are books by Christian authors and Christian books on tape, as well as books about Islam and war.

Bill Webb, owner of The Bread Basket in DeLand, Fla., will tell you that in most years, September is the slow month for Bible sales. But the terrorists' attack on Sept. 11 has awakened a yearning for spiritual solace, he said.

Our customers are very much focused on what has happened. People want answers for some pretty big questions," he said, adding that he hopes it's a sincere interest, because there are answers there.

"Typically, Bible sales peak at Easter and Christmas time, as well as in June, when fancy volumes are given to college graduates and newlyweds.

New kids club shapes up in Twin Falls

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - A new kids club for boys and girls 6 to 14 is in the works.

Sharon Abbott, organizer of Magic Valley Keepers of the Faith, said the club will be similar to Boy or Girl Scouts of America or Campfire, but with a Christian twist.

The multi-denominational clubs will be divided into boys and girls groups and will meet weekly for cooking, arts and crafts, ceramics, weaving, dance, candlemaking, nature, geography, citizenship or government, ecology, nature and camping activities.

The weekly studies will be enhanced with Bible lessons, to instill Christian virtues of love, charity, compassion, fairness, faith and honesty.

This is a local club with no dues. There is a national Keepers of the Faith organization that publishes materials for independent, local clubs to use. The children pay for the cost of materials for activities, a share of field trips and outings and the merit badges they earn.

Abbott hopes to have several groups up and running by mid-October, and she is now seeking leaders. Anyone who would like to join or lead should call 736-6552.

Web site offers help, hope to the troubled

Newspay

The Web site is www.newlivingtranslation.com

This site, from the New Living

Translation, contains Bible verses chosen to offer comfort and guidance in the wake of terror.

The publisher of the New Living Translation, Tyndale

House, calls it the "easiest-to-understand Bible translation." One example, from Matthew 5:4: "God blesses those who mourn, for they will be comforted."

LETTER

Religions can cause wars

"We will never have a peaceful world as long as there are people who believe their religion is better than other religions, and practicing proselytizing and converting one's religion into other religions only divides people and causes division and hatred. It is written the devil is also the great divider. People like Moses, Joshua and many others claimed God was on their side whenever they were able to kill a lot of people. Terrorists most likely believe the same."
