Anthrax scare shakes U.S.

Case confirmed in N.Y., suspected in Nevada

Knight Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — Doctors confirmed Friday that an NBC employee has anthrax, the fourth media employee infected and the first case outside Florida. The discovery sent public health officials into a heightened state of alert throughout the United States.

Although there was no known link to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the United States, the FBI immediately opened a criminal investigation.

Another case involving a suspicious envelope sent from Malaysia to Microsoft in Reno, Nev., tested "presumptively positive" for anthrax, Nevada Gov. Kenny Guinn reported late Friday. Two Microsoft employees are being tested for the rare and often-fatal disease.

At mid-day Friday, another media anthrax scare broke out at the New York Times' 43rd Street headquarters. Staff writer and terrorism expert Judith Miller had received an envelope contain-

Please see ANTHRAX, Page A2

How do people get anthrax? About 95 percent of all cases worldwide result from skin contact — bacterial spores that land on a scratch or other broken skin. It can also cause infection if breathed into the lungs or eaten, but these are much less common.

Does the same germ cause all forms of anthrax? A. Yes.

Is it contagious? No. Infected people do not spread the bacteria to others. How is it treated?

A variety of antibiotics are extremely effective for skin anthrax. Among them are doxycycline, penicillin and Cipro. Should I take antibiotics now, just in case I might encounter the germ?

No. People should not take antibiotics unless they have reason to think they were exposed to the bacteria. The treatments can cause side effects and should not be used inappropriately.

Q&amp;A

Explaining anthrax

A disease with an ancient history, anthrax has been modernized as a potential weapon of bioterror. An NBC News employee was infected with the skin form of anthrax, authorities said Friday.

Should I keep a supply of antibiotics at home? Health experts recommend not, since plenty of medicine is available if needed. Who usually gets skin anthrax?

The disease is uncommon, but it is mainly among ranchers, veterinarians and others exposed to infected animal skins.

What are the symptoms? It starts with a painless blister that is red around the edges. A day or two later, this becomes a black open sore, which dries up to leave a black scab, which falls off after a week or two.

What happens if I don't get treated? Usually, the sore clears up on its own. About 5 percent of cases become highly lethal bloodstream infections.

How long has anthrax been around? Anthrax is thought to have been one of the Egyptian plagues at the time of Moses. The ancient Romans recorded cases.

How does it get its name? It comes from the Greek word for coal. It's called this because of the black scab it leaves on the skin.

Substance found in Jerome mail

The Times-News

JEROME — Amid ongoing concern over terrorist activity nationwide, a suspicious package set off a flurry of activity by law enforcement officials and others in Jerome County Friday.

A "white, powder-like" substance found by a woman in a Federal Express package prompted FBI agents to go to the Big Little Ranches southeast of Jerome and collect a sample of the substance to be tested in a Boise lab, said Jerome Rural Fire Chief Joe Robbette. The test results were not available Friday, he said.

At about 11:30 a.m., the woman — whose name was not

Migrant Council suits fly

Director's firing leads to legal actions

CALDWELL — Two lawsuits were filed nearly simultaneously Thursday in 3rd District Court that involve the Idaho Migrant Council and its former director.

In a complaint filed just after 4 p.m. on Thursday, the council alleges, among other things, that Humberto Fuentres, the director who was fired on Oct. 6, diverted more than $10,000 from the organization that has never been accounted for.

Fuentres' attorney, Robert Huntley, did not return a telephone call Friday afternoon seeking comment.

However, in an answer to the migrant council's lawsuit obtained by The Times-News on Friday, Huntley said that Fuentres says the migrant council finances are regularly audited and no discrepancies involving Fuentres have ever occurred.

The document goes on to assert that the allegations "are libelous and slanderous and may become the subject of a counterclaim and a third party complaint ... if not immediately retracted and followed up with a public apology."

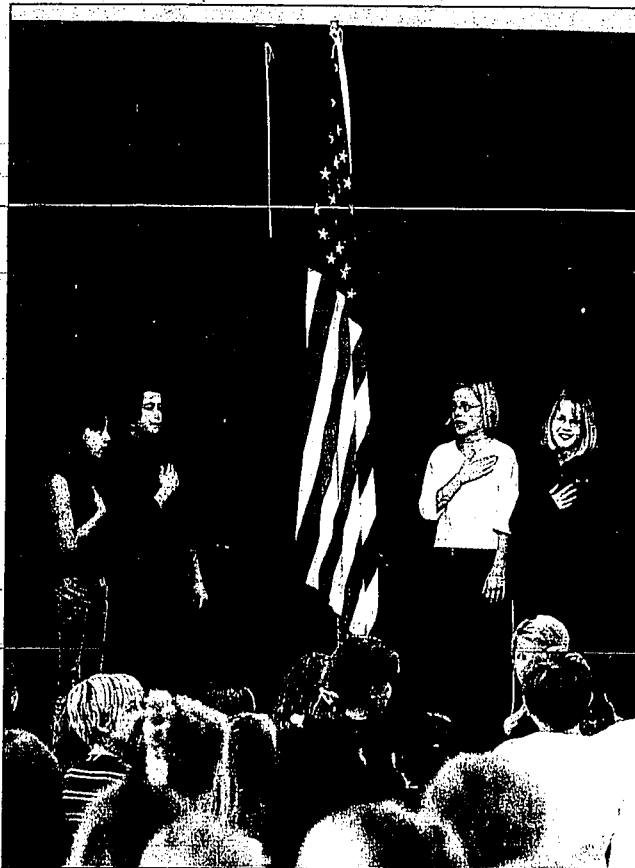

The lawsuit also alleges that Fuentres has property that belongs to the migrant council, and that he has refused to return it.

Board meets

The Idaho Migrant Council board of trustees has planned a board meeting at 9 a.m. today at the Shilo Inn, located at 1586 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls. Much of the meeting is expected to be closed to the public.

U.S. airstrikes ease up on Muslim Day of Prayer

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Bombing in Afghanistan slackened for the Muslim day of prayer Friday but resumed today, and a Pentagon official said Osama bin Laden has been fortifying Taliban front-line forces with members of an elite guard known as Brigade 55.

These troops, reported to number up to several thousand, are better trained and equipped, hence paid and considered more highly motivated than most Taliban fighters. The Taliban force includes conscripts and guerrillas whose first loyalty may be to regional warlords, the official said.

At a time when Taliban defections are reported to be on the rise, Brigade 55 fighters are being mixed among other units as a visible reminder that those who don't perform may be punished, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bombardment of Afghanistan which began Sunday eased on Friday out of respect for the Islamic day of prayer, defense officials said.

Although several strikes were reported in the pre-dawn hours on Friday, the skies then fell silent.

"Military operations continue," Gen. Richard B. Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a Pentagon briefing Friday. "But we are not doing any pre-planned operations today, as Friday is the Muslim holy day."

Around dawn in Afghanistan, wire services reported hearing new explosions in the capital, Kabul. Pentagon officials provided no details about the new bombing.

The use of Brigade 55 troops is a clear sign of the Taliban regime's dependence on bin Laden.

Though the al-Qaida network is far smaller in number than the Taliban's forces, bin Laden reportedly has provided the Afghan regime with tens of millions of dollars and has great influence on how it conducts its affairs.

In recent days, news reports from neighboring countries have contended that some al-Qaida fighters were on the move in Afghanistan to shore up the Taliban's defenses and protect some of the regime's most valuable assets.

Some Brigade 55 troops, according to these reports, have been sent to Kandahar, which is a center of the fundamentalist regime, and one of the cities hardest hit by the U.S.-led bombardment.

Western experts have differed on how important this crack brigade might be.

The defense official's comments on Friday indicated that the Pentagon clearly believes it has a central role in bin Laden's organization and in efforts to strengthen the Taliban's resistance to the U.S. attack.

As such, it may also be a prime target for U.S. warplanes and Special Operations teams, just as U.S. forces went after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard during the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The Dell deal

City would help computer firm obtain Albertson's building

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls civic, business and college leaders expect to sign a deal Monday to help bring a computer giant's technical-support operation to town.

The City Council, Twin Falls' Urban Renewal Agency, College of Southern Idaho leaders and Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce representatives will meet at 5 p.m. Monday in City Hall, 321 Second Ave. E., to consider a memorandum of understanding with Dell Computer Corp.

The Monday meeting is open to the public. But the document was still unfinished when City Hall closed Friday and wasn't released.

Several elements of Dell's incentive package already are evident: the city's application for a grant toward telecommunications infrastructure, and Urban Renewal's willingness to issue bonds and buy a former grocery store to lease to Dell.

CSI and the chamber also play roles in the deal that's up for consideration Monday, though their contributions are still undisclosed.

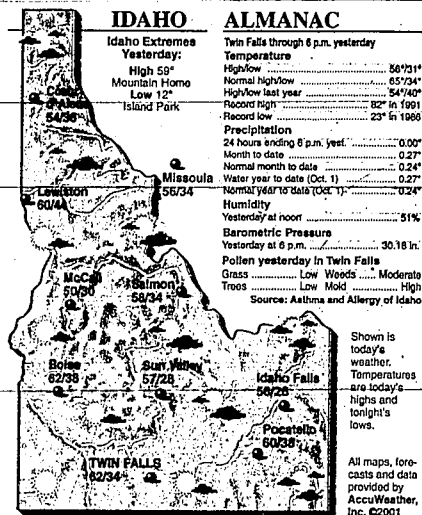

The state is negotiating with Dell separately.

A Dell spokeswoman Tuesday said Dell is considering Twin Falls for a facility that might employ 200 to 250 people to answer technical inquiries from Dell computer users. The skilled

Most of the jobs would be considered entry-level among Dell's tech-support ranks, probably paying an average full-time-equivalent wage of $19,000 to $20,000 a year, spokeswoman Cathie Hargett said.

Hargett on Friday declined to discuss job benefits, worker incentives or -in her words - "other hypothetical specifics."

She also declined to say how close Dell was to a decision on what development incentives it might receive.

- The city applied for a $500,000 Idaho Community Development Block Grant toward telecommunications

That document will have Dell officials' implicit agreement, though not their signatures.

"All the versions have come from their office (Dell), and we've made comments to them," McAlindin said.

Meanwhile, state officials

These parties have been named as contributors to the incentive package, but their roles are still undisclosed:

- The College of Southern Idaho, Idaho state government.
- The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and its development campaign, Business Plus II.
- The city and Urban Renewal might pay additional roles.

Friday remained quiet about their intentions.

In his answer, Fuentes says he had use of certain property as part of his job and that no one has yet demanded that he return it.

The migrant council obtained Thursday a temporary restraining order that restrains Fuentes from destroying or tampering with the organization's property, from entering the migrant council building or harassing employees, migrant council attorney Cynthia Woollee said Thursday afternoon.

Fuentes' answer denies that there has been any harassment and says that some of the council's employees who are suing him have been making threats of their own.

The organization is asking for a permanent injunction against Fuentes as well as a jury trial.

Woollee said she couldn't comment on whether the allegations in the lawsuit were the grounds for Fuentes' termination.

Less than 20 minutes after that lawsuit was filed, Fuentes and three former employees filed a lawsuit of their own attempting to get their jobs back.

Their complaint, also filed in 3rd District Court, charges that some council board members rigged a vote at last Saturday's meeting in Idaho Falls. It also accuses the organization of taking a series of

House approves anti-terrorism measure

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House Friday approved a far-reaching anti-terrorism bill that in most respects mimics legislation that cleared the Senate late Thursday, conferring broad new powers on law-enforcement and intelligence agencies to conduct domestic surveillance and share information with each other.

In contrast to the Senate version, several of the more controversial aspects of the House bill — relating to wiretapping and other forms of electronic surveillance — would expire after five years, at which time they would have to be renewed.

The Senate bill also includes a comprehensive set of money-laundering provisions that House leaders have elected to consider as separate legislation. Those and other, smaller differences will have to be reconciled in a conference committee before President Bush can sign the measure into law.

Meanwhile, a Senate plan passed unanimously Thursday to tighten aviation security came under severe Republican attack Friday as House leaders vowed to block the creation of a new federal al force for baggage screening.

As the rift over federalization widens, the White House is stepping up pressure on Congress to act, saying that if it fails to do so, President Bush could implement security changes by executive order.

But House Republicans showed no signs of compromise with the Senate, which passed a bipartisan bill 100 to 0. They plan to introduce a bill next week that calls for stronger federal standards but gives the administration the option of hiring federal employees or private contractors to do the screening.

The blistering pace of the legislation through Congress shows just how much the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon have altered the political landscape in Washington. Many of the provisions contained in the House and Senate anti-terrorism bills have been sought for years by prosecutors, but rejected by Congress as overly intrusive and possibly unconstitutional. Now lawmakers are eager to accommodate the wishes of the FBI and CIA — alarming civil liberties advocates who warn that Congress is being stampeded into decisions it will later regret.

U.N., chief official share peace acclaim

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In an era of spreading global terrorism and widening conflict, the Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to the United Nations and Secretary-General Kofi Annan on Friday for their roles at the "forefront of efforts to achieve peace and security in the world."

The Norwegian Nobel Committee, marking the centennial of the prize, said its choice was designed "to proclaim that the only negotiable route to global peace and cooperation goes by way of the United Nations."

Annan said he was awakened in the early hours Friday by a phone call, which typically would have meant "something disastrous."

"But, of course," he said, "it was a wonderful way to wake up." "I think the timing couldn't be better," he told reporters who thronged his house on Manhattan's tony east side. "I think it's a great shot in the arm for us."

For an organization that has struggled financially and often been the target of vicious criticism, especially among conservative U.S. politicians, the award was a dizzying achievement. Delight spread among the 52,100 U.N. employees in offices and headquarters from Geneva and Lebanon to East Timor and Sierra Leone.

In its citation, the Nobel committee said, with the Cold War done, the United Nations was finally playing its intended role "at the forefront of efforts to achieve peace and security in the world, and of the international mobilization aimed at meeting the world's economic, social and environmental challenges."

The secretary-general, it said, "has been pre-eminent in bringing new life to the organization."

When Annan, a 63-year-old Ghanaian, became secretary-general in 1997 — the first leader to be elected from the ranks of U.N. staff — it was a time of turmoil, both inside and outside the organization.

The United States had just blocked his predecessor, Boutros Boutros-Ghali of Egypt from serving a second term, seeing him as anti-American. The United Nations had failed to prevent the 1994 genocide in Rwanda and the July 1995 Serb slaughter of Muslims in a U.N.-declared "safe zone" in eastern Bosnia.

Five years on and with Annan at the helm, the United Nations is playing major peacekeeping roles on many continents. At Annan's urging, the 189 U.N. member states pledged to cut in half the number of people living on less than a dollar a day, to ensure primary education for every child, and to start reversing the AIDS epidemic — all by 2015.

Saudis offer little help in terror fight

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Saudi Arabia, although long considered a crucial ally of the United States, has provided little if any assistance to investigators hunting the friends and finances of Osama bin Laden and his al-Qaida terror network, according to intelligence and law-enforcement specialists.

On Sept. 20, President Bush sought to put the world on notice that he saw no gray area in the fight against terrorism, warning that "from this day forward, any nation that continues to harbor or support terrorism will be regarded by the United States as a hostile regime."

Yet since the attacks of Sept. 11, while authorities have rounded up alleged terrorists and frozen suspicious bank accounts across Europe, the Saudis have made no such overt moves.

"It's a problem," said Robert Baer, a former CIA officer in the Middle East. "Saudi Arabia is completely unresponsive as of today. The rank-and-file Saudi policeman is sympathetic to bin Laden."

Officials estimate that 1.2 million to 4.7 Americans used the prescription drugs fenfluramine (half of the "fen-phen" combination) and dexfenfluramine ("Redux"), which have been linked to heart valve damage. Evidence reveals that up to 30 percent of those who used the drugs have developed heart valve abnormalities that can lead to various heart symptoms, endocarditis (a potentially fatal infection), and even heart failure.

We have represented more Idaho victims in this litigation than any other Idaho law firm. Although it has been four years since these drugs were removed from the market, it is not yet too late to bring a claim.

There is no charge for initial consultation. Attorneys fees are charged only if money is recovered for you.

Prosecutor shot at home in Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal prosecutor who headed a prominent gun control group in his spare time was shot in his home and died early Friday.

Thomas C. Wales, 49, died about 1:15 a.m. Friday at Harborview Medical Center. He had been shot in the neck and the side late Thursday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Authorities believe Wales was targeted, and not a victim of random violence, Police Capt. Brent Wingstrand said Friday.

"Any number of personal, business or professional issues" could have prompted the slaying, he said.

The FBI is offering $25,000 for information leading to a prosecution.

The Seattle Times quoted unidentified federal sources saying the shots were fired from outside, through a basement window into a home office.

A neighbor, Emily Holt, said she heard the shots Thursday night and saw a man walking away.

"He wasn't running, just walking real fast. He got into his car," parked about a block away under a tree and a streetlight, Holt said.

Wales was a member of the fraud unit in the U.S. attorney's office here, specializing in prosecution of banking and business crimes, spokesman Lawrence Lincoln said. He had been in the office since 1983.

He also was board president of Seattle-based Washington Ceasefire, a gun-control group that sponsored a failed initiative in 1997 that would have required handgun owners to undergo safety training and use trigger locks on their weapons.

Attorney General John Ashcroft mourned the "tragic death in the Justice Department family."

The final memorial service was held Friday afternoon for fallen World War II pilot Lt. Donald Scott Beals. His sister, Vivian Beals Lyman (front, center), came from Portland, Ore., to attend the services, which were officiated by the Rev. James Frisbie. Beals, a P-38 fighter pilot from Twin Falls, disappeared without a trace over Europe in 1943. A headstone recently was placed in the Twin Falls Cemetery in his memory.

Hunters open with a bang

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Opening weekend was a good one for deer hunters.

More than one in four south-central Idaho hunters found success, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game said.

The department set up eight check stations around the region Oct. 6-7, said Mike Todd, conservation educator for Idaho Fish and Game in Jerome. For the most part hunters were happy and reported seeing a lot of deer.

The number of hunters who stopped at checkpoints was 2,680, the highest since 1998 and up by about 20 percent from a year ago. They harvested about 701 deer this year, just two fewer than a year ago. About 26 percent of hunters took home a deer this year compared with about 32 percent of the 2,229 people who hunted in 2000.

There was a 20-percent increase in the number of antlered yearling bucks harvested, Todd said.

"What that means is you have a population that is growing well," he said.

Deer herds had been in a major slump after a harsh winter. Please see DEER, Page A6

Judge postpones sentencing

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The man who is being charged with perjury in the Charles Suits drug trial had been scheduled for sentencing Friday, but the sentencing proceeding was postponed after the man's attorney withdrew from the case.

Ed Wolfrum, a Michigan engineer who was a key witness in last year's Suits trial, was supposed to change his plea to guilty on Friday and then be sentenced by 5th District Judge John Melanson.

However, Keith Roark filed a motion this week to withdraw as Wolfrum's attorney. Roark declined to explain his reasons in court Friday, but in a sworn affidavit dated Wednesday, Please see SENTENCE, Page A6

Sun Valley candidates hash out issues

By Karen Bossick

Sun Valley Forum

Voters can get a feel for Ketchum council and mayoral candidates at a forum at 6 p.m. Wednesday at Ketchum City Hall.

A forum for Halley's City Council candidates and mayoral candidates will be held at 6 p.m. Oct. 23 at the Halley Public Library meeting room.

SUN VALLEY — Open space, cell phones, even the new vehicles that Sun Valley policemen drive were fair game Thursday night as Sun Valley residents questioned City Council candidates in an election forum.

One of the most critical issues, though, focused on a proposal of The Community School to build a separate campus for its elementary school students near the school barn nestled in the hills overlooking Elkhorn. The land was given to the school after Elkhorn residents turned down a proposal to turn the land into a park.

Incumbent Councilwoman

Linda O'Shea told the 40 people attending the forum at Sun Valley City Hall that she hesitated to comment on the issue since it will soon be heard by the council. That said, O'Shea said she supports the concept provided the school can fit in the neighborhood and find a way to mitigate the increased traffic the school would bring.

O'Shea added that she was dismayed by residents who said they didn't want to hear the sound of children laughing.

O'Shea's opponent, architect Ann Agnew, said the issue isn't about whether homeowners have to look down on a school. The real issue is showing how they can resolve the traffic problem, which might be done by shuttling schoolchildren by bus from the existing campus, she said. The school also needs to figure out how to mitigate the damage done to the five homeowners who live along the road.

"I love the school — it's an amazing facility, and they need to expand. But the site is not an ideal one for a school, being in the middle of a residential neighborhood with one access in and out," she said.

Agnew said she agreed that no one should be distracted by a cell phone while driving. "But, unfortunately, we're in cars so much because of the highway situation," she said.

O'Shea said she is not comfortable stepping on people's civil rights when it comes to the issue of banning cell phones while driving. But she said, driving dangerously is a mitigating factor. "Please don't hesitate to call the police," she said to one question.

Major Twin Falls drug bust leads to five arrests

The Times-News

Valley in brief

were involved in Thursday's arrests, according to the affidavit. Bunch was charged with possession of a controlled substance and held Friday in the Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of $2,500 bond, according to court records. The others were charged with drug trafficking and held in lieu of bonds ranging from $10,000 to $750,000, records say.

All five suspects face preliminary hearings set for Oct. 19.

Canals should be shut down with caution

TWIN FALLS — State water and fisheries managers have issued an urgent call to Idaho surface water users to shut down canals with caution to prevent stranding fish, especially endangered species. The departments of Water Resources and Fish and Game encourage irrigators to adopt a series of steps when shutting down canals and irrigation ditches to protect fish that might have found their way into the delivery systems.

Irrigators should "ramp down" water flows rather than abruptly shut off water. If stranded fish are spotted, water users are asked to notify Fish and Game and maintain a water flow sufficient to protect the fish until fish experts can determine what kind of fish they are and what should be done, the agencies say.

Once canals and ditches are found to be free of stranded fish, the agencies want irrigators to shut the water off so more fish can't get into the delivery systems.

Wendell Middle School holds yard sale

CBS morning show will film Trailing of the Sheep

KETCHUM — It's official. The CBS Sunday Morning show will be in Ketchum and Halley this weekend to film Trailing of the Sheep events.

Reporter Bill Geist and his crew will film several events including Saturday's Folklife Fair in Halley, the Sheep Tales Gathering and Sheepherder's Ball Saturday and the Trailing of the Sheep parade and Sheepherder's Walk in Neal Canyon on Sunday.

Festival organizer Diane Joseph-Feavey said the crew had been looking for an upbeat story to share to give Americans a lift after the gloom and doom of the past month. The Trailing of the Sheep fit the bill.

"The Trailing of the Sheep reaches into the heart of our history, our landscapes and our sense of community," she said.

Chamber Director Carol Waller, who has been pitching the idea to CBS for a couple years, said she doubted the segment would air this Sunday. The show airs at 9 a.m.

County drops final criminal charge against Sandpoint mom

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—The last criminal charge has been dropped against JoAnn McGuckin, whose children conducted a five-day standoff with Idaho law enforcement officers after their mother was arrested in May.

McGuckin was originally arrested on a felony child neglect charge that was later reduced to a misdemeanor, and dismissed last month.

On Thursday, McGuckin's scheduled trial in Sandpoint, on a misdemeanor vicious dog charge, was canceled when Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson agreed to drop that charge as well. "It's a relief to take this out of the criminal realm," McGuckin's attorney, Bryce Powell, said Friday.

Robinson did not return a telephone message Friday. Sandpoint is about 70 miles northeast of Spokane.

McGuckin remains separated from her six children, who are in state custody and living with a foster family in Bonner County.

McGuckin is trying to regain custody of her children, Powell said, but the effort is slowed by her efforts to become financially able to care for them. It will likely be several months before another custody hearing is held, Powell said.

Under a state plan, McGuckin cannot have custody of the children until she fulfills certain undisclosed conditions. McGuckin has said that she does not recognize the authority of the state over her parental rights and has refused to cooperate.

McGuckin talks frequently with her children by telephone, and also visits with them occasionally, Powell said.

Last week, daughter Kathryn visited her mother to show off her high school prom dress, Powell said.

The child injury charge against McGuckin was based largely on the living conditions at the rural home, which had no running water, was often without electricity and was strewn with garbage and dog feces.

In the past five years, the family became isolated from neighbors and friends, largely because of the declining health of their father, who died earlier this year. The conditions prompted concerned calls to the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Medicaid chief offers Idaho help

BOISE (AP)—The Bush administration's Medicaid chief on Friday offered to help Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and other state policymakers check the skyrocketing cost of health care for the poor.

But Tom Scully, head of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, offered no specifics after meeting with Kempthorne, Lt. Gov. Jack Riggs and Sen. Larry Craig.

"There is no question Medicaid is a big budget problem," Scully said. "It's a problem in all 50 states."

In Idaho, the state's 30 percent share of the bill has jumped from $55 million 10 years ago to as much as $240 million this year. The total cost will exceed $800 million.

Lawmakers have tried with little success to limit services or the amount health care professionals are paid to provide them, managing instead to create a firestorm of opposition over changes that would provide minimal savings.

At the same time, federal figures show that 19.1 percent of Idaho residents had no health insurance in 1999, up from a percentage point from 1998 and the eighth highest rate of uninsured residents in the nation.

The state also ranks last in the ratio of general practice doctors to the population.

"I told the governor I'd be happy to get some of my staff to sit down with the lieutenant governor, who's a doc," Scully said. "I just offered to help out."

We're going to work with the governor to see what we can do.

He said Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson has encouraged innovation among the states in trying to get Medicaid costs under control, Scully said, and "there are states doing a lot of things."

Scully was in Boise for meetings with health care providers and senior citizens on the Medicare program.

Judge nixes Washington Group deal

BOISE (AP)—A federal bankruptcy judge in Reno, Nev., on Friday rejected an agreement between Washington Group International Inc. and its secured lenders to financially revive the construction and engineering giant.

But billionaire Dennis Washington said the company's secured lenders and unsecured creditors want him to continue as chairman of the board.

Washington said he was disappointed by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Gregg Zive's decision rejecting an agreement that was "negotiated on an arms-length basis with our secured lenders."

"We expected this process to be dynamic, and our top priority is to get our plan of reorganization approved by the court," he said in a statement. "I am committed to continue to work with our employees to get this done as soon as possible."

Washington even offered to forgo a third of his stock option package in a reorganized Washington Group International if Zive would approve the agreement.

The company's creditors, however, argued that federal law allows no preferential stock option packages for former shareholders.

In being driven into bankruptcy court, Washington Group accused Raytheon Co. of defrauding it in the sale of the Massachusetts-based company's construction division.

Toast to life helps widow cope

DEAR ABBY: I know you occasionally print letters about "random acts of kindness." I'd like to share what happened to me in Albuquerque 10 years ago.

I didn't know a soul in New Mexico. I needed to be totally alone to finally acknowledge and accept the fact my husband had died.

One evening, I was in a lovely restaurant. My server placed my order, then proceeded to prepare the corner table next to me. First came a large arrangement of fresh flowers, a champagne bucket, etc. Shortly thereafter, a couple was escorted to the table. The gentleman was a famous personality. I tried to be discreet about glancing their way and wished I'd brought a book to read. I was feeling melancholy. My first vacation without my husband was not a happy one.

Evidently my demeanor was interpreted as "unhappy lady." The server appeared and said, "The couple at the corner table would like to send a glass of champagne to your table. Will that be all right with you?" I glanced at the couple; they smiled. How could I not accept their thoughtful gesture? The glass was placed on my table. I caught their eye and lifted my glass to toast them on their special occasion. The gentleman leaned over and said, "It's not a special occasion, just a celebration of life—to the good times ahead."

Now, whenever I feel the blues coming on, I think of the "celebration of life and to the good times," and a very special couple.

—MRS. ZON LONG ISLAND

DEAR MRS. Z: Indeed. Generous, too. People who are happy are usually inclined to spread the joy around.

DEAR ABBY: I am 36 years old. My boyfriend, "Phillip," is 44. We have been dating exclusively for almost four years. I am ready to get married and start a family.

Phillip asked me to marry him one evening a year ago. He'd had a lot to drink. There was no mention about our picking out an engagement ring. The following morning, he changed his mind and said, "That's not how I planned on doing it."

A year has passed. He hasn't asked me again. He says we should purchase a house first. We haven't looked for one because he says he's expecting a huge raise soon. We don't need his raise to qualify for a mortgage. We make plenty of money.

Abby, I want to get this show on the road. I know Phillip loves me, as I love him. But I'm getting more discouraged with each passing month. What should I do?

—RINGLESS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR RINGLESS: Phillip may love you, but he still isn't ready to make a commitment. Have a serious and sober discussion with him and tell him exactly how you feel. You have nothing to lose by doing so.

You may discover that you and Phillip want different things from this relationship. His answers may not be what you want to hear, but four years is a long enough investment with no guarantees.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in the sixth grade. Many girls in my grade are into makeup, clothes and boys. I may not be what you want to hear, but four years is a long enough investment with no guarantees.

Abby, what should I do? I have never been popular, and I fear that if I lose my friends, I'll be alone. I feel too mature for them, but without them, I would be totally lost.

—GROWING UP TOO FAST

DEAR GROWING UP TOO FAST: Be patient. Many of your friends will soon catch up with you. Those who never do will still be your friends. Make room for people who have different tastes and interests. It's called diversity. It's what makes this world an interesting and inclusive place.

Kempthorne appoints veteran lawmaker

BOISE (AP)—Gov. Dirk Kempthorne on Friday named State Rep. Bert Marley of McCammon to fill the Idaho Senate vacancy left by the resignation of Democratic Sen. Lin Whitworth of Inkom.

But the Republican governor said the appointment of Marley was not automatic even though the teacher and third-term House member was the top nominee of Democratic leaders in legislative District 33.

Kempthorne has selected the No. 1 choice of legislative district committees for each of his appointments to vacancies in the House and Senate. But he said that practice was only a courtesy he extended to the GOP as party leader, and it did not apply to other parties or to judicial nominations.

The second and third choices submitted to Kempthorne to replace Whitworth, who resigned effective Oct. 1, were Bessie Katsilometes of Pocatello and Leslie Bull of Inkom.

House Democratic Floor Leader Wendy Jaquet of Ketchum said Marley should get the job because "he is who the Bannock County Democrats want, and he is the best for the Senate Caucus."

Every day more than 59 million newspapers are delivered in America. That's nearly 41,000 newspapers delivered every minute of every day. This miracle of efficiency is possible thanks to the hard work and dedication of newspaper carriers. We applaud their efforts, and have designated October 13 International Newspaper Carrier Day. It's a day to show your appreciation to the men and women who deliver your news every day. So take a moment today to personally thank your carrier—but do it quickly—there's still lots of work to be done.

Bin Laden has overestimated our fear

JOHN BALZAR

Bin Laden figures he has us trembling in our boots. "Thank God for that," he gloated. Perhaps he's been briefed from American TV and newspapers. People aren't sleeping, there's a run on gas masks and antibiotics, the rich are hiring security teams and planning to flee to safer shores, homeowners are looking at their floor plans to see where to seal off a safe room.

The earliest thing I've heard was about a friend who decided not to supplement her earthquake emergency kit. If things get that bad, she decided, she didn't want to end up on the other side of events with the survivors.

Anxiety, yes, we feel it. But I think our enemies are vastly wrong about any gains they've made. A case of the jitters is a victory for terrorism. But not a defeat for the United States. No one's not out there and not us, should take our disquiet as a sign of watery character.

Crisis was not something we sought, but as philosopher William James said nearly a century ago, "Great emergencies and crises show us how much greater our vital resources are than we had supposed."

In this autumn of 2001, Americans find themselves looking abroad and trying to understand the passions of the people who aim, in Osama bin Laden's words, "to destroy America." We tell ourselves to put aside the simplicity of stereotypes as we ask, who are they? We can inquire of ourselves the same. It will quiet our nerves.

When bombs started to rain on Afghanistan, I got in my car and drove to a shopping mall. By stereotype, this would be evidence of American shallowness. But malls serve many communities as public squares. And on that day, the commons at South Coast Plaza in Orange County was packed. No one was complaining about the crowds. We had convened our lives, not retreated from them. And who are we?

We Americans are different. All of us, and that includes those we call Native Americans, have roots elsewhere. Something drove us here. This is no small matter because we spring from the heritage of those who dared, not those who were meek. The meek stayed behind, wherever behind was.

I looked around this public square at the marvel of America: Mexicans who risked their lives to traverse the awful Sonoran desert for a chance at a better life. Cambodians who survived one of the most shocking tyrannies in history. Vietnamese who fought, then fled, oppression. Filipinos and Armenians and Africans and Persians and Chinese and Koreans and Guatemalans and Japanese, and mongrels from everywhere, offspring of all the world's troubles.

America.

Some fought their way here as a last refuge. For others, it was their first hope. Only the ancestors of American slaves did not choose their homeland, but neither did most of them decide to leave. Their struggle is as old as the nation and far from over.

I looked around. Surely these people at the mall were nervous on the inside. Perhaps they held their children a little closer. But bin Laden was wrong when he gloated, "This is America, full of fear."

It just wasn't so. In the main courtyard of the mall, outside the Disney store where balloons rose to the ceiling, families pressed in close so their kids could meet and have their pictures taken with Cinderella. Children looked up with eyes in wonder.

It was an ideal moment for fairy tales. The careful and sometimes overwrought clichés that we often voice about cultural diversity had a different meaning just then. The kaleidoscope of faces standing in that line did not define our differences but a deep and reassuring strength. The whole idea of America is a fairy tale, after all. Gathered together, a pluralistic and self-governing fusion, we were proof of it.

To have a child is to vote for the future. To take a little girl to see Cinderella is to vote for her dreams.

I looked at these parents and the young lovers holding hands by the railing and the teen-agers jostling on the escalator. On a different day, you could have called these people the pampered products of the consumer culture. The United States lends itself to trivialization that way. But in that moment, you could also reflect on what America must mean, down deep and in so many different ways, to these people drawn up from all compass points in the world to converge on these commons at the start of a war.

Bin Laden is out of his mind to think he can scare us and take it away.

LETTERS

Twin Falls residents offer kindness

I am a New Yorker who has lived in Twin Falls for the last few years. My wife and I made the move to be closer to her mother and to raise our family, leaving behind all of my family, and my lifelong friends in New York.

My heart sank when the World Trade Center concourse was destroyed. That area was always a place of pride and memories for all New Yorkers and all Americans.

New Yorkers, by definition, are proud, cocky and self-reliant. This is one time they really needed a shoulder to lean on. When my wife and I arrived in town, we opened a small pizzeria. After the tragedy, there were many people that we had never met before stopping by and asking if my family and friends were safe.

I had always heard that people from Idaho take a little time to warm up to out-of-staters. This really does not seem to be the case. It seems the people of Twin Falls have a heart bigger than the Big Apple.

Cat mistreatment can be avoided

I am writing this letter to the person in the blue van on Sept. 26 who dumped the cat off at the corner of the research center in Kimberly. You know who you are!

Maybe you couldn't afford to feed it (cost of a 5-pound bag of cheap cat food is around $1.50 - that's cheaper than the price of a pack of cheap cigarettes or one can of beer). Or maybe it was going to have a litter of kittens. Who will ever know the reason?

Instead, it will probably die out there from lack of food and water. It would have been more humane to take it to the Humane Society. Did you even try to give the cat away? You know, it is free to put an ad in some papers. What do you people think, or do you even think?

I hope that when the next life comes that you will be reincarnated as a cat that will be loved and very well taken care of. I really don't believe you should have that chance, just as that cat didn't.

Many killings happen daily in U.S.

How many innocent people will die in America by an American hand if the same numbers of days the United States is in a war in Afghanistan? How many innocent Americans were killed because of gang-related activity yesterday? How many innocent people did drunk drivers kill last weekend? How many innocent children were killed in this country because they didn't have their seat belts on today? How many babies were aborted this morning? How many innocent people die in America every day by the hand of Americans?

I bet the number is much, much higher than the innocent number of people killed in Afghanistan by the American war effort. In fact, I bet there are more innocent Americans killed today by our own than the total number of people killed by the United States in Afghanistan - innocent or not.

Before anyone can stand in rallies with signs about killing the innocent, they had better take a damn good look in their own back yard!

Protect U.S.: Deport small minded

In response to the letter written by Angell Paterson in The Times-News on Oct. 5, I must say you made me chuckle. I hope that was your goal in writing it. I always find it interesting to hear or read the opinions of others, but this letter is ridiculous. You should be embarrassed by your ignorance.

In your first paragraph, you mentioned "American customs and culture." I can't think of a custom that wasn't brought here with the first immigrants that landed in New York. In reference to your statement, "people who think like you," what qualifies you to judge how people "think"?

From my experience, I have found the Mexican people to be a hard-working, family oriented, God-fearing people. Any corrupting of those beliefs usually happens after they have lived in the United States for a while and have had to listen to or deal with people as self-centered and obnoxious as you. You act as if everyone in the world wants to immigrate to the United States. I love this country as much as anyone born on this ground, but let me just say, I have friends that would not step foot over the border for fear of being mistreated. Americans love Americans, and other citizens love their countries equally.

Angeli, you should be thankful God let you be born in the USA, but let me assure you, it wasn't because you deserve a better spot than anyone else. He just knows you and what your capacity is.

The people born under real hardships (like war and starvation) are the real heroes to God. You act like a spoiled little rich kid who thinks that because she has it good, she is better than the poor kid that has to wear the same shoes for a year.

If we really want to protect America, let's figure out a way to deport small-minded people.

U.S. Constitution grants Bush the right to demand secrecy

ROBERT F. TURNER

President Bush deserves broad support for his decision to limit congressional access to sensitive national security secrets. Congress is institutionally incapable of reliably keeping secrets, a fact that the Founding Fathers well understood. If we want to win the war against terrorism we must correct some of the excesses that resulted from our tragic experience in Vietnam.

This is not a new issue. When France agreed to provide covert support for our struggle against George III in 1776, Benjamin Franklin and his four colleagues on the Committee of Secret Correspondence of the Continental Congress concluded that they had an "indispensable duty" to keep the program secret even from Congress, explaining: "We find by fatal experience that Congress consists of too many members to keep secrets."

After more than 180 years of practice in which presidents managed diplomatic and military secrets unconstrained by Congress, Sen. Frank Church and others during the backlash to Vietnam - alleged that this history of presidential control of intelligence was, in effect, caused by a "dereliction of duty" on the part of earlier generations of congressional leaders. Church and his allies were mistaken. The record establishing why Congress was not given routine access to national security secrets is clear. Along with the general management of the country's diplomacy and external relations, control over intelligence and diplomatic and military secrets was encompassed by the general grant of "executive power" vested in the president by Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution.

Several parts of the president's executive power were subjected by the Constitution to congressional vetoes or "checks," such as the power of the Senate to withhold consent to ratification of treaties and diplomatic appointments, and the power of either house to block a formal declaration of war. But there is no constitutional basis for Congress to demand diplomatic or military secrets, and the Constitution cannot be amended by simple statute. The various "laws" passed by Congress demanding secret information are no more valid than would be "laws" telling the president whom he must nominate to be secretary of defense.

It was a common argument during the Philadelphia Convention, among those who believed the president had to be entrusted with the making of treaties and the conduct of military operations, that Congress could not keep secrets-an argument not challenged in Philadelphia or in any of the state ratification conventions. In explaining the draft Constitution to the American people, John Jay wrote in Federalist No. 64 that there were important potential intelligence sources who would willingly confide in the secrecy of the president but not in that of the Senate or the House. Jay praised the new Constitution for having left the president "able to manage the business of intelligence in such manner as prudence may suggest."

When the first Congress appropriated money for diplomatic and foreign affairs in July 1790, it provided that the president "shall account specifically for all such expenditures of the said money as in his judgment may be made public, and also for the amount of such expenditures as he may think it advisable not to specify." That language was continued year after year, and in 1818 no less a champion of legislative power than Henry Clay argued that it would not be proper for Congress to investigate how the president spent money from this account.

In 1932 the House asked the secretary of war for information about a failed military expedition. Washington's Cabinet unanimously concluded that the president had no obligation to furnish diplomatic or military information to Congress, and when Secretary of State Jefferson reported the decision to the House it amended its resolution and requested the president to provide the information if, in his judgment, it could be made public.

In its landmark 1936 Curtiss-Wright case, the Supreme Court noted the distinction between these "requests" to the president in the national security realm and the practice of Congress's directing other Cabinet members to provide information, noting that a presidential decision that release of national security information is not compatible with the public interest "rarely, if ever, is questioned." The court noted further that George Washington had refused to give secrets to Congress during the 1796 dispute over funding the Jay treaty, "a refusal the wisdom of which was recognized by the House itself and has never since been doubted." Indeed, during those Jay treaty debates, even Rep. James Madison recognized that, as recorded in the Annals of Congress, "the Executive had a right...to withhold information when of a nature that did not permit a disclosure of it at the time."

The reality is that Congress seldom needs sensitive details in this area to do its job. Its proper function is not to micro-manage but to focus on broad policy issues. Very few members of Congress received sensitive details about military operations during World War II, and that enterprise produced an admirable result. The administration's policy of limiting the sharing of national security secrets with Congress is a return to the constitutional system that served us well for nearly two centuries.

Bruins pound Poky

Keep slim playoff hopes

Twin Falls erased the zero from the front of its record, defeating the Pocatello Indians 35-7 in 5A

Friday at Bruin Stadium.
Senior Chris Ward threw for three touchdowns and juniorJerad Bixler rushed for a pair of scores. Bixler competed in just his second game after breaking a foot.
He replaced Jake Salinas, who didn't suit for the game.The Bruin defense was solid, except for the opening drive in the second half, and frustrated the Indians all night, holding the Indians to 35 yards total in the first half and 150 in the game. The Bruins also won the turnover battle, taking the ball away four times."We have been hungry for a vic-for us," Twin Falls coach Mark physical force and Ward threw some nice passes. It was a total team effort."After a solid kickoff return by Kody Barnes for their first possession, the Bruins marched the ball down the field to the end zone.

Ward hit Bixler and Cole Easter for 14 yards each and Bixler had a nice 20-yard gain on the ground moving the ball to the 3.Ward connected with Easter

Wendell gears up for Glenns Ferry

The Times-News

WENDELL — Skylar Stevenson ran for 170 yards and two scores on 19 carries to lead Wendell to a 30-6 win over Canyon Conference rival Valley Friday in Wendell.

"We overcame a few mistakes but it was a tough fought game," Trojans coach Jerry Diehl said. Dane Beorchia added a 68-yard touchdown run and Ben Landrian recovered a fumble in the end zone as Wendell improved to a perfect 7-0.

Junior Juares scored the Vikings' (2-5) only touchdown. The Trojans face Glenns Ferry on Friday.

The proof is in the pitching

It's the pitching. That's what will make the difference in today's Tribe-Seattle Mariners game.

Not playing at Jacobs Field. Not the roar of the crowd. Not shadows or the alignment of planets.

Pitching.

Does C.C. Sabathia do a Bartolo Colon or a Chuck Finley?

Does he lose the game in the first inning, as Finley did Thursday in Game 2 of the AL Division Series in Seattle? Does he spot the Mariners four runs before he records an out?

Or does he silence the bats, as Colon did in Tuesday's 5-0 victory in Game 1?

That matters a lot more than playing at home.

Just ask the Mariners, who say the fans really lifted them in Game 1.

TERRY PLUTO

poor pitching decisions for a 38-year-old veteran.

And where was the crowd in Game 1, when Colon's fastball was nothing more than a vague rumor to the Seattle hitters?

"I don't think playing at home means much at all in a game like this," Tribe third baseman Travis Fryman said.

Why not?

"Because baseball is a team game played by individuals," he said. "Fans make a real impact in basketball or football, truly team games. But in the end, baseball is one-on-one."

Pitcher vs. hitter.

And pitching usually rules because playoff teams are using their best starters and relievers. Most teams only have a three-man rotation in the first round, four-man after that. It means the fifth starter — usually the worst starter — is relegated to long relief.

Let's walk through history, back to 1995 when the Tribe bashed its way to 100 victories in 144 games with the likes of Pedro Martinez, Eddie Murray, Manny Ramirez and a Kenny Lofton in his prime.

They scored early and often, scoffing at four-run deficits. Then came the playoffs. The 1995 Indians went to the World Series because... well, they won. When they beat Boston in the first round, the Tribe hit a lame 2-1. But had an earned-run average of 1.74.

In the second round, the Indians pitchers had a 1.64 ERA against Seattle, and the offense hit a mediocre .257. But they won in six games, the clincher coming when the Tribe's Dennis Martinez brought a hush to the raucous crowd at the old Seattle Kingdome, as he beat Randy Johnson. Martinez fired seven scoreless innings in the 4-1 victory. Over and over, the theme is the same: Pitching dominates in the postseason.

The Indians were down 2-1 in the best-of-five AL Division Series to the Yankees in 1997. But they came back to win the last two games at Jacobs Field.

The scores of those games? Try 3-2 and 4-3.

What happened when the Tribe collapsed in the 1999 playoffs? Its pitchers were crushed for 44 runs in the last three games by Boston.

Does playing at home matter at all?

"I think so," Robbie Alomar said. "You like having the fans behind you. If your energy level is down, they can pick you up."

That happened in the historic 15-4 game earlier this season when the Indians came from 12 runs behind to win. Of course, that was a regular-season game, and it was clear Seattle thought the game was over early.

In the playoffs, that kind of mental lapse rarely happens.

"Good teams are good teams no matter where they play," reliever Bob Wickman said.

The Indians were a humble 44-36 at home, 47-35 on the road.

So much for the home-field advantage.

Or how about this?

Seattle lost six series during its 16-victory season but only one of them was on the road.

"We're teams like us or Seattle with lots of veterans. I don't think the home field is a big deal," said Charles Nagy, who has pitched in 15 postseason games. "What matters is your approach. I tried to learn from Orel (Hershiser) and Dennis Martinez, who told me to enjoy the moment. You have to handle the playoff pressure the same way, home or on the road."

And you have to pitch well.

Atlanta sweeps Astros

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves are going to the NL championship series. Again.

The Houston Astros are going home. Again.

Light-hitting Paul Bako homered and drove in three runs, John Burkett pitched six shutout innings and Atlanta put the Astros out of their misery with a 6-2 victory Friday to sweep their first-round playoff series in three games.

The Braves advanced to the NLCS for the ninth time in 10 seasons, the only miss coming last year when St. Louis swept them in the opening round.

"We wanted to come out and make a statement that we deserved to be here as much as anyone," Chipper Jones said.

Atlanta, which won just 88 games during the regular season, will meet either the Cardinals or Arizona Diamondbacks starting Tuesday for a spot in the World Series.

Houston dropped to 0-for-7 in the postseason, losing to the Braves for the third time in the division series since 1997. Most distressing for the Astros — they have never managed to win a game when facing elimination.

"Honestly, I thought we had a better team than the Braves," manager Larry Dierker.

On paper, maybe. The Astros lost to a team that had Bako filling in at catcher for the injured Javy Lopez and 40-something Julio Franco, plucked from the Mexican League, starting at first base.

Bako and Franco played a major role in Atlanta's victory.

With two outs in the second inning, Roy Sanchez doubled over Lance Berkman in left on an 0-2 pitch. Houston starter Shane Reynolds got ahead of Bako 1-2 only to catch a little too much of the strike zone with a slider.

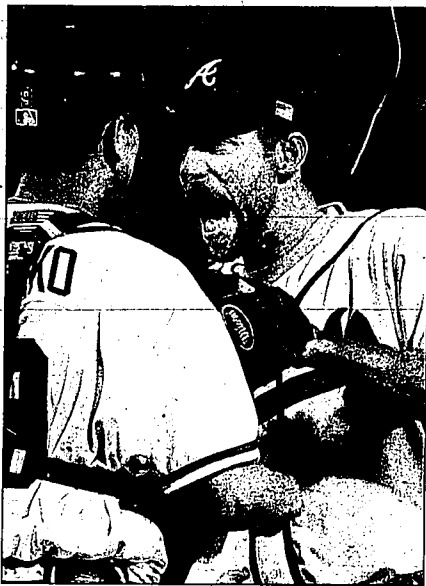

Bako lined a 403-foot drive over the wall in right — his first homer since June 1 and first postseason hit ever. Franco, signed by the Braves with a month to go after the team went through four other first basemen, hit his first playoff homer in the third, a 397-foot drive to the left-field seats to put the Braves up 3-0.

Bako followed his homer with a 15-foot RBI in the fourth. The catcher put down a perfect squeeze bunt with Andrew Jones breaking from third.

That was plenty of runs for Burkett, making his first playoff start since 1996. The 36-year-old right-hander extended Houston's scoreless streak to 15 innings before pinch-hitter Daryle Ward's two-run homer in the seventh.

Steve Reed, Mike Remlinger and John Smoltz came out of the bullpen to finish off the Astros.

Smoltz, who moved to the bullpen this season because of elbow problems, struck out the first two hitters in the ninth before Tony Eusebio filed to center, ending the series. "It was incredible," Smoltz said. "My job is to ride the emotion in the ninth. I wanted to make it quick. It felt great."

Indians' cool rookie pitcher to face Seattle

CLEVELAND (AP) — As a service to the Seattle Mariners, who didn't face C.C. Sabathia this season, here's a brief scouting report on the Cleveland Indians' rookie pitcher.

He's big. Real big.

He throws hard. Real hard.

Sabathia won 17 games this season and stabilized Cleveland's shaky staff, and Saturday he'll get a chance to show the Mariners what he's got as he starts Game 3 of the AL playoffs.

It will be the biggest test so far for the 6-foot-7, 260-pound Sabathia, who a year ago was facing teams like the Harrisburg Senators while pitching Double-A ball for Cleveland's Akron affiliate.

"We've seen some film and he's certainly got a good arm," said Mariners manager Lou Piniella, who was reminded that his team hasn't done well when facing a pitcher for the first time. "Well, let's hope that's not the case on Saturday."

After being shut out in the series opener, the Mariners bounced back to win Game 2 and tie the best-of-five series 1-1 as Jamie Moyer pitched six strong innings and Seattle scored four runs in the first off Chuck Finley enroute to a 5-1 win.

The teams were unable to work out on Friday at Jacobs Field because of rain, forcing players to take batting practice in the ballpark's indoor hitting facilities.

Some of the Mariners watched movies — of Sabathia, who will oppose Seattle's Aaron Sele.

"We looked at his tape for a half hour, 45 minutes," said Mariners manager Lou Piniella. "Just so our hitters could get as familiar with him as possible. But we know he has good stuff."

Piniella's film review?

"He's got a good changeup and a real nice breaking ball," he said. "You just have to lay off it. I saw where he throws a lot of balls out of the strike zone."

That wasn't the case most of the season as Sabathia, who will be the youngest pitcher to start an AL division series game, led all rookies in wins (17), starts (33) and strikeouts (177).

Sabathia has been everything the Indians could have hoped for this season.

He was a long shot to make the roster during spring training as many in the Indians' organization wanted to have the 21-year-old pitcher start the season at Triple-A Buffalo before coming to Cleveland. But Indians manager Charlie Manuel didn't want to wait. He knew Sabathia was special from the moment he saw the former first-round draft pick blow his 95 mph fastball past big-league hitters.

The easy-going Sabathia will find out just how cool he is on Saturday in the biggest game of his young life.

He expects to be a little nervous. "I haven't had any hitters yet," he said. "But I'm pretty sure I will. Hopefully, I can get them out of the way early and settle down into the game. I don't think I'll get out of whack."

A's one win away from sweeping champs

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The dynasty is in dire straits.

With the unsettling speed unique to the first round of baseball's playoffs, the New York Yankees are down to their last chance for postseason survival after just two losing nights in the Bronx.

The Oakland Athletics rolled back into the Coliseum on Friday with a 2-0 division series lead over the three-time World Series champions, who have been unable to counter a combination of enthusiasm, power and phenomenal pitching from the youthful A's.

New York hasn't been in such a pickle — down 0-2 in a series, one game from elimination — since 1980, when Kansas City swept the Yankees in the AL championship series. Only five teams in the Yankees' prestimement have ever recovered to win.

Game 3 is tonight, with left-hander Barry Zito pitching for Oakland against Mike Mussina. The Yankees lost all six of their regular-season games in Oakland; the A's haven't lost to anybody at the Coliseum since Aug. 24.

"We'd like to finish things off tomorrow," A's outfielder Johnny Damon said on Friday. "That would be good. I think we'd like to clinch here at home for the fans, and be on our own turf."

But those looking for signs of desperation didn't find them in the visiting clubhouse.

The Yankees chatted amiably with each other before a brief team meeting and a light practice session.

presented with a trophy by CSI athletic director Jeff Duggan before the match while the crowd gave her a standing ovation.

"That was very nice of the fans," Reeve said. "We worked hard to get back over here and we did some nice things. CSI did some nice things too."

Ricks (20-11, 4-4 SWAC) jumped to a 4-0 lead in Game 1, but lost the serve on an error and struggled to find that same early momentum throughout the rest of the match. The Eagles used a strong service game to build a 12-8 lead. Another four-point run

It seems the odds are stacked so high that perhaps only the Yankees, with their pregame champions' cool, would have a chance to beat them.

"They are certainly making us eat some dust right now because of the way they are playing us," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

Dust is a dish the Yankees are accustomed to serving, not sampling. In the seven seasons since baseball canceled the 1994 World Series, the Yankees have been spiked the Eagles to a 21-13 edge.

"It was just really good to see this team play hard and have fun doing it," Stroud said. "We're just trying to execute a little better. We're getting to the point where we need to start playing up to our potential. There's just so much potential there, but I don't feel like we're getting to where we need to be fast enough."

Ricks pushed again in the second game until a late 6-0 run made the score 27-17. Three Viking errors and kills by Santos and Piava put the game out of reach. A tip by Santos ended the match.

"CSI worked over the weakness in its serve-receive and that rally helped them," Reeve said. "I thought they played better than us. They were scrappy in our house, but it didn't seem like they so many of their kids were so powerful as they were tonight."

CSI freshman Keri Coats controlled the tempo in Game 3, grabbing four of her six kills and a block. Coats' presence at the net altered several shots and helped shut down outside hitter Ashelynn Sannar. The Ricks sophomore finished with eight kills but hit just .031. Evonne Goodman added seven kills.

"That was a break out game for Coats," Stroud said. "She was swinging aggressively, she hit high outside, she was hitting the back set and she was finding the floor. That is so big for us."

But that grip slipped this season with the emergence of two Western powers in the AL. Seattle's 116 regular-season wins left no doubt of the identity of baseball's best team, while Oakland's second-half surge has extended into the playoffs.

"We still have to go out and win our share of games and (not) make it easy for somebody to take it away from you," Torre said. "It belongs to you until somebody takes it from you."

When the Yankees arrived in Oakland, Torre wore a hat featuring a Port Authority Police logo next to one of Yankee legend Yogi Berra's famous sayings: "It ain't over 'til it's over!"

Even at Lambeau, the Ravens aren't underdogs

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

Yes, the Baltimore Ravens slipped up in Cincinnati. No, people don't expect them to slip up again, not even at Lambeau Field.

The Super Bowl champions go to Green Bay on Sunday to meet the Packers, who lost their first game of the season in Tampa last week. The guys who make the line originally installed the Packers as slight favorites; the guys who bet the line immediately bet on the Ravens so it's now a pick 'em game.

And an interesting one. If any quarterback can solve the Baltimore defense, it's the innovative Brett Favre — it's nearly impossible for anyone (including Favre himself) to decide what he'll do on any given play. And the Green Bay defense has been playing well.

Ravens RB Terry Allen might be worn down by his 22 carries last week against Tennessee.

The Packers lost to the Bucs, but they're playing well. And they're at Lambeau, where fans now commingle with cheeseheads.

That spread is a measure of how much respect the Giants are getting, even though the Giants have allowed only one touchdown and 25 points in their last three games.

American heavyweight boxer Mike Tyson is shown during his training session Tuesday in a Copenhagen gym. The former heavyweight champion of the world will meet Danish heavyweight Brian Nielsen in a ten-round non-title fight in Copenhagen's Parkvej Stadium tonight.

Tyson's in best shape in six years

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Mike Tyson says he's as sharp and as strong as he's been in six years. The big unknown is how he will fare after so little time in the ring.

The former undisputed heavyweight champion has fought only 26.5 minutes (fewer than nine full rounds) since 1999.

Tonight, he faces journeyman Brian Nielsen — a 36-year-old Dane who won a bronze medal at the 1992 Olympics — in a 10-round bout. The fight will be seen on Showtime on tape delay, with the telecast to start at 8 p.m. MDT.

Although dubbed the "Danish Pastry" for his soft-looking body, the 6-foot-2, 259.75-pound Nielsen (62-1, 43 KO's) has been on the canvas only once in his professional and amateur career.

"I don't look for the fight to go the distance," said Tyson's trainer, Tommy Brooks. "We're prepared to go 10 rounds, but Brian has never been in with a guy who can punch as hard and as fast as Mike Tyson."

Saturday is supposed to offer up the new Tyson.

He weighed in at 239 pounds Thursday, 15.25 heavier than he's ever been for a bout — and about 20 pounds above his average weight when he dominated heavyweights in the late 1980s.

Tyson (48-3, 2 no-decisions, 42 KO's) has more muscle and less fat than usual, and his upper body is even bigger since he began endurance and strength training four months ago.

Tyson says he's recaptured his mental edge while working with fitness coach Gunnar Peterson. "Last year I thought it would be my last time doing it," said Tyson, who said before fighting Andrew Golota on Oct. 20, 2000, that it would be his final bout.

"But I'm here again. I have a new trainer in Gunnar Peterson, and my condition and shape is why I'm still around."

Golota quit after the second round, but the result later was changed to a no-contest after Tyson was fined $200,000 and suspended for 90 days for refusing to take a prefight drug test.

An odds-on favorite to dispatch Nielsen at 47,000-seat Parken Stadium in the biggest bout in Danish history, Tyson is in line for a huge payday against the winner of the Nov. 17 title rematch between Lennox Lewis and Hasim Rahman, the WBC-IBF champion.

"He's kind of got that style for me," Tyson said. "He don't move much, he's right in front of you."

Tyson said he'd like to retire as a champion.

"That's my goal and that's my main objective, and I'm just interested in doing that," he said. "I'm just hoping that it happens."

Nielsen would like add a win over Tyson to victories over other former heavyweight champions such as Larry Holmes and Tim Witherpoon. Holmes was 47 when he lost a 12-round decision to Nielsen, while Witherpoon was 41 when he was knocked out in the fourth round.

Parry surpasses Lehman in Invensys

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Tom Lehman's three-shot lead evaporated in the wind Friday, allowing Craig Parry to pass him by and take a one-shot advantage in the Invensys Classic at Las Vegas.

Parry holed a 6-iron shot for a rare double eagle, then made a 30-footer for birdie on the final hole to shoot a 6-under 66 and move to 19 under, a shot ahead of Lehman and two clear of Bob Estes and Scott McCarron after three rounds in the 90-hole event.

Lehman, who made 19 birdies and no bogeys his first two rounds, had trouble in the gusty wind at the TPC at The Canyons course, shooting a 1-over 72 after opening with rounds of 63 and 62.

John Daly was within a shot of the lead, but bogeyed four holes in a row beginning at his 14th hole and was five back.

Semifinals set at World Match Play tourney

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Defending champion Lee Westwood beat Denmark's Thomas Bjorn 1-up to advance to the semifinals of the World Match Play Championships.

Westwood will face Wales' Ian Woosnam, a 4-and-3 winner over Scotland's Colin Montgomerie on Wentworth's West Course.

In the other quarterfinals, Scotland's Sam Torrance edged Fiji's Vijay Singh 1-up and Ireland's Padraig Harrington beat Northern Ireland's Darren Clarke 5-and-4.

Doyle takes one-shot lead at The Transamerica

NAPA, Calif. — Allen Doyle shot a 5-under 67 in windy conditions to take a one-shot lead over Hale Irwin and Tom Jenkins after the first round of The Transamerica.

Rocky Thompson, Don Pooley and Terry Mauney opened with 69s at Silverado Country Club, and defending champion Jim Craig Parry to Australia watches his putt on the 15th hole during the Invensys Classic at Las Vegas Friday. Parry finished at 6-under-par 66 for the day to lead the tournament at 19 under.

Thorp topped a seven-player group at 70.

Briton leads at LPGA Final Qualifying Tournament

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — England's Suzanne Strudwick shot a 3-under 69 to take a five-shot lead after the third round of the LPGA Final Qualifying Tournament.

Strudwick, a nine-year LPGA Tour veteran who is trying to improve her nonexempt status for 2002, had a 7-under 209 total on LPGA International's Legends Course.

The top 18 players will earn exempt spots on the 2002 LPGA Tour, with the next 35 and ties receiving nonexempt status.

Knight opens first season at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Call it Mid-Knight Madness.

After a year away from college basketball, Bob Knight was headed back on court as Texas Tech officially opened its season by practicing at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

It surely was the most anticipated Midnight Madness event in the country, surpassing Rick Pitino's debut at Louisville and Maryland's celebration of a Final Four appearance.

"It's a new beginning," said Brian Bell, a Texas Tech senior. "The national spotlight is finally on the basketball team."

Bob Knight. You can't get better than that."

Eric Thompson waited on the steps outside United Spirit Arena.

"Got Knight?" read the front of Thompson's red T-shirt, a takeoff on the dairy industry's advertising campaign. On the back, "We do," is scripted across an outline of Texas with a star marking Lubbock's location in West Texas.

"He's very successful, charismatic and has a unique personality," said the 18-year-old freshman from Albuquerque, N.M. "I've always thought he was kind of an interesting guy."

Hundreds of others waited in the cool weather, some arriving as early as three hours before the 9:45 p.m. event. One man paid homage to Knight by donning a white wig.

"I'm trying to be him," said Keith Klein, a student from Flower Mound. "I'm here for the Knight's staff, which includes sons Tim and Pat, and his secretary from his days at Indiana.

The Red Raider Club, the fund-raising arm of the university, reports that its active accounts have increased by about 35 percent from a year ago.

Knight has pushed donations to the school's library at dozens of speaking engagements, and more than $70,000 has flowed into the Coach Bob Knight Basketball Library Fund, established in May.

Knight was fired by Indiana in September 2000, after violating a zero-tolerance behavior policy. But he has been welcomed warmly in this West Texas town of about 200,000, where fans were unhappy about four straight losing seasons under former coach James Dickey. The team's last trip to the NCAA tournament was in 1996.

"I'm tired of seeing Tech have a weak basketball team," Bell said. "He'll get us back into the Big Dance at the end of the year."

Knight has had one losing season in 35 years of coaching, 29 at Indiana. At least 12,000 season tickets have been sold for Texas Tech's home games. The school averaged 9,557 fans last season at its 15,050-seat arena.

Knight's first season at Texas Tech was a success. Knight and his first Red Raiders team will share the court with Marsha Sharp and the Lady Raiders.

Louisville is holding its first Midnight Madness to help inaugurate Rick Pitino's Cardinals career. The former Kentucky coach and his team will debut before about 5,000 fans in the Kentucky International Convention Center (Freedom Hall is unavailable). Plans call for Pitino to take a microphone and work the crowd, "teaching them cheers for the season."

"I don't think it's as popular with either the students or the coaches as it was five or six years ago," Baylor coach Dave Bliss said.

"Everybody has a great time, but the next day, you can't get anything done because all your players are up so late," Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton said. "You lose a whole day of practice."

For those schools where the positives outweigh the negatives, college basketball practice for the 2001-02 season will start at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. Of the Big 12 South and area (TCU, SMU, North Texas and UT-Arlington) schools, only Texas Tech has plans to get an early (or late) start.

Since Knight was hired in March, fans have been snapping up every available ticket and scholarship donations have soared. Office space has been carved out in the men's basketball department to accommodate

Knight Riddler News Service

FORT WORTH — The clock has yet to strike 12, but time appears to be running out on Midnight Madness.

College basketball's late night with practice is a popular craze during much of the 1990s. Thanks to ESPN, the sport's popularity increased during that decade and anything hoops was hot. In an effort to gain exposure, more teams started staging Midnight Madness.

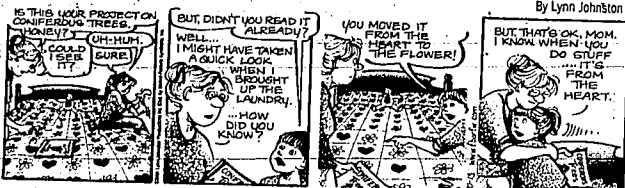

What was cool is now ... well, cold. The trend is passing. Only schools with special occasions (the arrival of a new coach) or with a fervid tradition (Kentucky and Kansas come to mind) are burning the midnight oil.

Home Buyers: Discover How To Avoid These 6 Costly Mistakes Before You Buy

SOUTHERN IDAHO - A new report has just been released which identifies the 6 most common and costly mistakes that homebuyers make before buying a home.

Mortgage regulations have changed significantly over the last few years, making your options wider than ever. Subtle changes in the way you approach mortgage shopping, and even small differences in the way you structure your mortgage, can cost or save you literally thousands of dollars and years of expense.

Whether you are about to buy your first home, or are planning to make a move to your next home, it is critical that you inform yourself about the factors involved before you buy.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "6 Things You Must Know Before You Buy."

Having the right information before hand can undoubtedly make a major difference in this critical negotiation.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-888-521-9738 and enter ID #1004. You can call anytime, 24 hours, 7 days a week.

Call NOW to find out what you need to know before you buy a home.

Women abound in Kansas City, Mo.

No man in search of an unattached woman in her early 30s should overlook Kansas City, Mo., where the ladies outnumber the gentlemen considerably in that age bracket. In fact, they do so there in all age brackets to some degree. Why this is the case especially in Kansas City I do not know.

REVISITED
L.M. Boyd

Experienced waiters say: Among men, the bigger the enter, the smaller the tip.

Cattle breed for seven years, buffalo for about 30. Buffalo rancher Ted Turner knows this, certainly, and also knows buffalo need about 40 percent less food than cattle.

Have you ever heard a lizard bark? Some do, some do.

That Elizabeth is the given name with the most nicknames is generally agreed. But what nickname is subbed for the greatest number of real names? I nominate Al. For Albert, Alfred, Allen, Alexander, Alvin, Aloysius, Alphonso. And others? Pavlov proved a dog can distinguish far subtler differences in shades of gray than can a human.

In each of the greater men, it's said, you'll note some characteristic that's downright unlovable, if it's your inclination to look for same. Take Confucius. He was unreasonably persnickety about his food. Each piece of meat had to be cut perfectly square. And he was pretty precise about its color, too. As for the sauce, perfect was good enough, almost. The historical footnotes say he divorced his wife because she couldn't meet such specs.

Diabetes coalition sets free foot clinic in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Diabetes Coalition will be sponsoring a free foot exam for people who have diabetes.

Podiatrists Dr. Craig Holman and Dr. Randy Winkler will be conducting the exam from 1-5 p.m. Tuesday at the South Central District Health in Twin Falls. Bristol-Myers Squibb will also be sponsoring free Hemoglobin A1C tests.

The test measures average blood sugar levels over two to three

Ill pastor puts faith in God

Ray Boyens is showing me around his neat little brick bungalow, pointing out the repairs he has made in between bouts with cancer and the huge renovations he has accomplished over the years.

He's smiling through it all until he gets to the little room he's rebuilding into a hospice center. He points to the family pictures on the wall of his wife, Janet, and his children. That's where he gets choked up. It's hard for Ray to imagine not seeing their faces. He has been told he has about six months to live, and he's trying to adjust his life to that reality.

He is a pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. He graduated from seminary in 1968 and went hustling off to his first parish in Iowa. Six months later, he was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease, and his world began to fall apart.

For the next 33 years, Ray kept wading into his troubles. They came like bombs: recurrences of his cancer, five hip replacements, a shoulder replacement, a devastating divorce and, finally, a diagnosis this year that he has terminal colon cancer.

As sure as the sun sets in the west, Ray is going to die soon. Now the question is, how does a dignified guy find the strength to die with integrity? Ray is determined to find out.

We went a few blocks from his home and sat down in a coffee shop. Ray ordered a muffin and drank a cup of the house special. Looking back, it's all beauty for Ray. He remembers that first parish in Iowa, how the people rallied around him and every morning someone would be waiting to drive him to a hospital for treatment.

"How can you be anything but thankful for people like that?" Ray said. There are two things spiritually sustaining Ray these days: people and faith.

"I've reconciled myself to being gone," Ray said. "I'm getting my ducks in a row. I've been ready to die for a long time, but the Lord must not be ready for me. But I go to coffee with a lot of nice people. People are so nice."

In the coffee shop, Ray's eyes are scanning the crowd for his friends. He gets a handshake from one 80-year-old man and a hug from a woman.

"I'm wiped out by 10 p.m.," he said. "I tell Janet we have to get home because you can't carry me up those stairs. I'm lucky to be surrounded by a loving family. You're not just a physical being. We're also spiritual creations. God has been good to me. I've had a good life."

But Ray has to wonder how that good life came about. Ray talked about the divorce that caused him deep anguish. In the midst of his cancer and all the fears he carried, he was thrown into "limbo" for three years after the split. But his faith carried him through. He met Janet, and because of her strength and Ray's determination, they have arrived at this point in life, on a very real deathwatch.

"I've made my peace with God," Ray said. "I don't need God on my sleeve. But I'm in the front row of my church (St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church in St. Paul, Minn.) every Sunday. I don't know, sometimes you can just feel it, feel God's presence."

Ray, 64, wonders what life will bring in the next months. He's been told he'll have mouth sores, hand and foot sores, diarrhea, a serious drop in blood count and declining energy. His doctor told him to do the traveling he wants to do and complete his projects. For Ray, the biggest project is simply loving his family and leaving himself open to God's care.

"I'm moving on to something beautiful that God has planned for me," Ray says. "God will take care of me."

Does it startle you, as it does me, that life is so unfair that beautiful people such as Ray face death and so many of us are left alive? And yet, once in a while in life there comes a human being who makes us think about the beauty of life and death in the same moment. That's what Ray Boyens has done for me.

Clark Morpheu is an ordained clergyman and is religion writer for the Saint Paul Pioneer Press.

Going international

Mennonite sale features crafts from Third World

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

FILER - Hand-crafted gifts and home decor from Third World countries will be offered for sale next weekend at the Filer Mennonite Church.

For its 19th annual International Crafts Sale, the church has received a generous selection of unique and beautiful items. The sale of the items will benefit 60,000 craftspeople in more than 30 countries.

These include baskets, woven placemats, tablecloths, musical instruments, copper tea and flower pots, jewelry, little wooden boxes, games, toys and children's books. One of the books is about what children all over the world do when their teeth fall out.

There are kites this year, too, some that look like sailing ships and dragonflies. These are attractive enough to be used as room decorations. Food items such as a chocolate mix, coffee and Brazil nuts will also be available.

This sale is not a fund-raiser for the church, but a way for people in developing and Third World nations to earn money. The church receives the craft items through Ten Thousand Villages, a mission arm of the Mennonite Church.

The group works with artisans throughout the world, helping provide them with a decent living by marketing their goods through fair trade.

Lois Hooley, publicity chairman for the Filer sale, explained that fair trade means that ordinary people who produce the merchandise receive a fair price.

"So rather than having a price locked in, they can have a say in how the price is set," she said.

Approximately 70 percent of the producers are women, who, in some countries, are not allowed to hold jobs. The handicrafts enable them to earn a living while caring for their families at home.

Hooley said this income makes it possible for these women to feed their children and take the children to doctors when they are sick.

A sales brochure gives the example of a woman named Kalpana Rani, who lives in the remote village of Haziganj in north Bangladesh. Her income from weaving baskets makes it possible to pay for her children's education and improve her makeshift house.

The craftspeople are given half the price for their wares up front. This can be used to buy raw materials or whatever they need. They receive the remainder due to them when the orders are filled.

Trena Miller, the Filer sale's chairman, said, this year, there will be a good selection of useful items.

"We will have more practical things that you would buy as gifts anyway," she said. "Plus the fun things - but more practical first."

There would be slippers, hats, mittens and gloves. And Miller said there are wool purses that are "just gorgeous."

There is expense involved to put this sale on. To help defray these expenses, the women of the Filer church hold their own bake sale during the event.

There will be breads, pies and other homemade goodies, as well as some craft items.

Crafts galore

The International Crafts Sale is set for Oct. 18-20 at the Filer Mennonite Church, 109 Fifth St. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 18-19 and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 20.

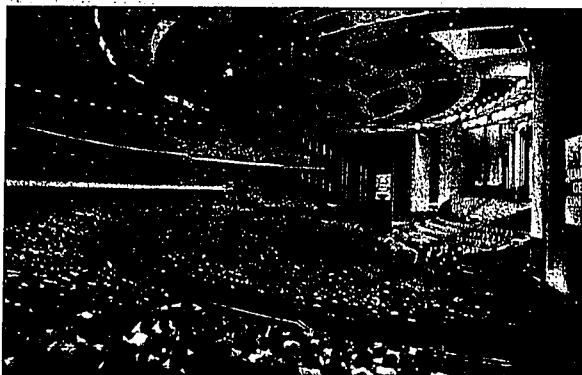

For more information, call 326-5150.

MORMONS HEAR COUNSEL

Terrorist attacks spark debate on prayer in schools

By John Mason
The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho - Nearly 40 years after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that no public school could sponsor or support prayer, Jim Korver was impressed to hear it endorsed by school officials on an early Sept. 11 morning.

The Falls Christian Academy principal was attending an accreditation workshop at Lake City High School with other local school administrators when news of the terrorist attacks halted their planned activities. While transfixed eyes watched as tragedy unfolded on television, Korver heard several declarations for a need to pray in the very place where corporate prayer is deemed unconstitutional.

"It was a sadness in my heart and mind that it has taken a national tragedy for us to say we need to pray wherever we are," Korver said. "I think it should be a lesson that we should always pray, and that prayer belongs everywhere."

The topic of prayer quickly spread throughout the media as America's leaders, most notably President Bush (who read Psalm 23 while standing near the World Trade Center ruins), beseeched the nation to pray for healing.

Local businesses, including public schools, encouraged national solidarity with messages of "God Bless America" on their readerboards. Moments of silence were held before school football games. Students grasped hands around the flag pole in fervent prayer.

Suddenly, God is in the spotlight. "It's become more politically correct, that's for sure," said Ken Wilde, senior pastor of Capital Christian Center in Boise and director of the National Prayer Center in Washington, D.C.

Wilde was in the nation's capital on Sept. 11, coordinating prayer teams to pray with and for senators, congressmen and other national leaders. Not one congressman or senator

PRESERVING AMERICAN MUSIC

Project educates public about songs' historical significance

By Colleen Long
The Associated Press

DENVER — Charmaine Anderson stepped to the microphone, beads of sweat gathering on her face as her powerful voice filled the hotel ballroom. "I wanna be ready," she crooned as the Spirituals Project choir hummed softly in the background. "I wanna be ready to put on my long white robe."

At a recent convention, the soprano's rendition of "I Wanna Be Ready" silenced the rustling papers and few whispers from the audience of about 300. The song, a newer arrangement of a traditional spiritual, is a sad, slow hymn about preparing for judgment day. People swayed, clapped and occasionally wept while the choir performed spirituals and recited poetry.

"I feel so free singing," she said. "It's funny because these songs came from the slaves."

The Spirituals Project was formed in Denver about three years ago by author and psychology professor Arthur Jones to educate the public about spirituals, what he calls the original American music. He and his piano accompanist, Ingrid Thompson, have traveled the country conducting lectures and workshops on spirituals since 1991. Their program combines performance of spirituals with presentations on the songs' historical significance and how they relate to modern music.

For Jones, a professor at University of Denver, music has always been a passion. He's been performing most of his life, but until he wrote "Wide in the Water," a book about the history of spirituals, he didn't think to create a group devoted to performing them. A small ensemble from the choir is currently performing in a play about youth gang violence called "Not Here." The full choir plans to sing before a special performance of the play to show support for the victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"We were working on the play before the attacks," Jones said. "But now, it seems so much more relevant. How can we expect our kids to reject violence when they see adults acting so horribly violent?"

The spiritual style of music has roots in Africa, as folk songs sung during work, worship and entertainment. During slavery, spirituals evolved into songs expressing deep-held religious convictions, especially for converted Christians. The songs also reflected longings for freedom, often hidden within song lyrics. In "Blow Your Trumpet, Gabriel," for example, the singer asks the angel "...to blow me home / To my new Jerusalem."

James Kinchen, music professor at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside, said groups that work to preserve the spirituals are a necessity. "The spiritual was this country's unique gift to the musical world. They should be cherished, remembered and taught. If we teach them with understanding, that these are more than just words and notes, it helps everyone see their social and historical importance."

Jones' 70-member choir is a multiracial mix of professional musicians, students and amateurs. Members are unpaid, and perform mostly in Denver, but will travel to Greeley and Colorado Springs in the next few months. Jones also hopes to travel throughout the United States. "Many people think that singing in the choir isn't Christian, but the message of the music is larger than a religious denomination," Jones said. "It really brings people together."

The nonprofit project is also producing a documentary about the songs for PBS, and is working with the University of Denver to create a website.

When Jones founded the Spirituals Project, he was happy to discover others shared his interest. He said about 20 choirs nationwide perform the music on a regular basis. Groups like the Brazeal Dendard Chorale in Detroit and the Harlem Spiritual Ensemble in New York City are professional choirs, and many community groups throughout the country are starting to perform the music.

Leader's 'Shout' heard round the world

By Berta Delgado
The Dallas Morning News

CARROLLTON, Texas — For hours, hundreds waited outside Covenant Church on a late summer afternoon. This was a night of worship with the premiere worship leader in the world, Darlene Zschech — who wrote one of the most beloved contemporary worship songs, "Shout to the Lord."

Zschech (a mother of three whose husband, Mark, is also a leader in her church) and the Hillsong Worship Team with Pastor Brian Houston came to Carrollton as part of a tour in the United States that took them from their booming Australia church. Zschech (whose name sounds like czech) says the members of her team absolutely do not want to be seen as stars.

"I feel it's a great responsibility to put a heartfelt prayer into somebody else's mouth, and so we take it very seriously," says the 36-year-old. "But we also understand that it's not because we're brilliant. I think it's really because of the sovereignty of God."

The worship music was born in what started as a group of 43 people in Sydney, Houston and his wife, Bobbie, started Hills Christian Life Centre in 1983. Now, the collective church called Hillsong Church — numbers more than 10,000 and has its own music label, Hillsong Music Australia, Distributed in America by Integrity Inc., more than 4 million Hillsong albums have sold worldwide. "You Are My World" sold 500,000 units in Australia in less than three weeks. It will be released in America Tuesday.

Zschech, Russell Fragar and Reuben Morgan wrote much of the music. Zschech used to sing jingles for McDonald's and Diet Coke in Australia and says of "Shout to the Lord": "This song's been sung before the pope, before the president. It goes across all denominations. That's just God. I can't take credit for that."

Prayer

opposed any kind of prayer at that time, he said.

"Everybody was very supportive," said Wilde, who also is a former teacher in school. "It's brought a new level of importance of prayer and faith back in our government and back into our leaders."

How this new attention to prayer fits within the school system is up for much discussion. Wilde is largely misunderstood, however, is the latitude prayer is already allowed in schools by the First Amendment of the Constitution.

"There can be no state-sponsored prayer in schools, period," said Coeur d'Alene attorney Charles Dodson, who represents eight school districts in northern Idaho. "However, I don't care how many zealots scream and holler saying we need to put prayer back in school, prayer has always been in schools. There is nothing in the Constitution that says a student cannot pray in school."

Most school districts enjoy limited open forum status, meaning non-curriculum groups like chess clubs and Christian clubs can meet on school grounds. Opportunities for school-wide prayer arise in moments of silence, which school officials reserve for tragic events. But while opportunities to pray are available, there are more opportunities to misinterpret the law, Dodson said.

"Tons of it. It's called factual circumstances," he said. "If a teacher says, 'Give me a moment,' and it's obvious the teacher is praying, is that state sponsored? Did the district authorize it? It's a factual question, and that's why there are so many different cases on the issue of separation of church and state. People don't like to talk about this, especially attorneys, because it's a real nebulous area."

The most recent case concerning prayer in schools was last year's Santa Fe vs. Doe, in which the Supreme Court ruled that public schools could not allow student-led prayer before football games. Coeur d'Alene School District Superintendent David Rawls received a call shortly after Sept. 11 from a parent upset that her son was required to sing the national anthem in his classroom, and wanted him pulled from that class. Even the moment of silence during a football game on the Friday after the attacks was potentially offensive, Rawls said. "We have a nation that says personal freedom is the supreme value. We say 'One nation under God,' but we also say we're established with personal freedom as our fundamental value."

"If there was a way to do prayer in school, I'm all for that. I just don't know how you would with so many diverse religions," said Post Falls High School Principal John Billez. "Being a Catholic, I think Catholicism is correct. I'm sure Mormons think LDS is correct. So the only way you could possibly do it is every day say a different prayer from a different religion, and I don't think that's possible."

"Prayer is prayer," Korver said. "It's to whom we speak that's the important issue. It's a bogus argument to be worried about denominationalism."

Wilde referred to Congress, which consists primarily of Protestants, Catholics and Jews, as a governmental model of what public schools could be. "Both the Senate and the House have chaplains, and they pray every day to begin the session. They do not pray in the name of Allah or the name of Buddha. They pray in the name of Christ."

He continued, "I think the move spiritually is happening, and that's probably a better move than legislating it. You leave it and it's not from the heart, it's from the law. If we allow God to move, it will be done in people's hearts rather than just people's minds."

Music

"Clear to Venus," by Andrew Peterson (Watershed, 42 minutes). Andrew Peterson has proven the most faithful heir to Rich Mullins' ragamuffin poet legacy. Mullins' family seems to think so, too. They've allowed him to finish the unreleased gem "Mary Picked the Roses," which sweetly depicts Jesus as the author of life. "No More Faith" seems a sequel to "Nothing More to Say," as Peterson faces down hard truths in his pinched, almost whiny voice: "This is not another song about the mountains/Except about how hard they are to move. Have you wondered how He loves you? He really knows how hard you are inside?" On that song and the fine "Steady As She Goes," Peterson's evocative observations of nature are particularly effective. The pedal steel-infused title cut stories like on the road with his wife, children and sidekick Gabe. Deceptively simple, earthy music accompanies these songs' eminently quotable lyrics.

Book

"Daily Guidance: Prayers and Meditations for Every Day of the Year," compiled by Martin H. Manser (Cumberland House, 371 pages, $12.95).

Christians may sometimes find it difficult to set aside time each day to study the Bible. This daily devotional is intended to make the task easier. Starting with Jan. 1, one page is devoted to each day of the year. One or two Bible verses are listed that coincide with a theme, followed by a quotation from a prominent Christian, sometimes dating back several centuries. The first few topics in the book include "the perfect guidance of God," "knowing Jesus" and "bearing fruit." This format exposes a believer to a wide range of biblical doctrines, presented in easy-to-digest doses.

United Methodists slash staff

NEW YORK (AP) — Hit hard by falling stock market values, the United Methodist Church's Board of Global Ministries announced Tuesday that it expects to slash the staff by about 20 percent.

The board, with more than 300 employees, operates a variety of U.S. and overseas ministries and the women's division in the nation's second-ranking Protestant denomination.

A church press release said the Rev. Randolph Nugent, general secretary, told the staff that when stocks were riding high the church urged the agency to expand mission programs, but the past two years it has suffered "a $23 million write-off." He said denominational funding is also shrinking.

Churches split on U.S. flag

By Susan Hogan-Albach
The Dallas Morning News

A billboard marked the entry to the church's parking lot. Splashed all over was a United States flag with a caption: God Bless America. Dozens of flags were draped from lampposts. More flags marked the entry to the church.

The American flag has replaced the cross as the most visible symbol in many churches across the country since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. This hasn't set well with some Christians, who say faith transcends nationality so the flag has no place in sanctuaries — but others say the show of patriotism is a much-needed comfort.

"The whole country is grieving — we need that symbol right now," said Barbara Adams, as she made her way into Prestonwood Baptist Church in Plano, Texas. Inside the Prestonwood church, leaders unfurled a giant 50-foot flag during worship Sunday as the room swelled with patriotic music.

The Rev. Michael Tuck of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Cross in Dallas applauded the country's patriotism, but not the display of flags inside sanctuaries. He has a flag-hanging in the back of his church.

"It isn't that we shouldn't be patriotic," he said, "but the government's position and God's position aren't identical."

The sale of flags has skyrocketed since the terrorist attacks. While no one debates whether flags belong on homes, Christians are embroiled in a dilemma over whether they belong in church. The debate has been around as long as there have been flags and churches.

"It's always been a very complicated and very sensitive issue," said Dr. Ronald Flowers, a religion professor at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. "A lot of people believe we are one nation under God. A way to demonstrate that is to have flags at worship, but some pastors have taken the position that it's not appropriate to worship a nation when God is the God of the whole world."

Religious conservatives are not of one mind on the issue; neither are liberals. Many Protestant churches display a U.S. flag and a Christian flag in the corners of sanctuaries. Catholic churches may have American and papal flags.

There is some confusion among Catholics over the use of flags after the tragedies. Bishop Charles V. Graham of Dallas said it was appropriate to display American flags in times of national distress or patriotic holidays, but they shouldn't become a permanent fixture. The U.S. bishops' liturgy office issued a statement suggesting flags be placed outside the sanctuary, possibly in the vestibule or lobby, along with a book of prayer requests. But at St. James Catholic Church in Dallas, the Rev. Elton Christy took a casket-size flag and draped over the front of the altar.

Zoran Mandibbaum, head of the 45-member local Jewish community, is at the spot where a new synagogue will be built in the Bosnian town of Mostar, south of Sarajevo.

Bosnian Jews see hope in nation's new temple

By Alexander S. Dragicevic
The Associated Press

MOSTAR, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Amid the rubble of Mostar's war-wrecked main square, Zoran Mandibbaum caresses the cornerstone for a new synagogue — a temple of hope he prays will help reunite this ethnically divided city.

Bosnia's Jews didn't take part in the 1993-94 war that raged here between Muslims and Roman Catholic Croats, but they know how devastating ethnic violence can be. Before World War II and the Holocaust, there were 16,000 Jews in Bosnia. Today, there are 975.

Mindful of its own tragic history, the country's smallest ethnic group is determined to do what it can to restore the proud multi-ethnic tradition that Mostar enjoyed before the war by building just the nation's second synagogue.

"This scene of tragedy will become a scene of peace," whispered Mandibbaum, the head of Mostar's 45-member Jewish community, his fingers tenderly tracing the Hebrew letters carved into the synagogue's recently laid cornerstone.

The inscription reads: "For mine house shall be called a house of prayer for all people."

Before the war, mosque minarets and church towers mingled across the skyline of Mostar, about 50 miles south of Sarajevo, the capital. Just 15 miles away lies Medjugorje, where six youths claimed to have apparitions of the Virgin Mary beginning in 1981 and millions of pilgrims have visited since.

Except for Jerusalem, Bosnians used to boast, no other place in the world had mosques, synagogues, Catholic and Orthodox churches standing next to each other for centuries in harmony. Now, in postwar Bosnia, Muslims and Croats live segregated lives.

There are no barricades or border crossings along the street in Mostar which divides the Croat and Muslim parts of town. Instead, every building that's gone up on the Croat side since the war ended is concealed behind a high wall facing the Muslim sector.

In these difficult times, lessons of faith take on new meanings

By Tom Schaefer
The Wichita Eagle

How's your faith holding up? It's been said again and again since Sept. 11 that nothing will ever be the same. Like travelers on a winding, unfamiliar road, no one knows what awaits around tomorrow's corner. We've always known that is true. We've just never behaved as if we believed it.

Most of us go to work, fuss about our jobs, rush to our various appointments and sit in front of our television sets until we start the countdown for tomorrow's expected routine. Not that we don't worry — about our health, the well-being of our children, the security of our financial investments, the future of our jobs and ourselves — but we expect our routines to insulate us from danger, or at least assure us that all is well. So we really believe what our faith teaches us — Jew, Christian, Muslim — about the unexpected?

"For no one can anticipate the time of disaster. Like fish taken in a cruel net, and like birds caught in a snare, so mortals are snared at a time of calamity, when it suddenly falls upon them" (Ecclesiastes 9:12).

"When they say, 'There is peace and security,' then sudden destruction will come upon them as labor pains come upon a pregnant woman, and there will be no escape" (1 Thessalonians 5:3).

"Say: Surely I fear, if I disobey my Lord, the chastisement of a grievous day" (Koran 6:16).

Commentary

The truth is, most of us live as if we are in control of our lives, as if human forces determine our destinies — as if God doesn't exist. Such an attitude shouldn't be surprising. We no longer worry about food, clothing and shelter; we have more than enough of all three. We're no longer dazzled by technological and medical advancements; we expect them to continue. As for the future? We segment it and try to contain it by careful planning.

At least that's how we lived until Sept. 11 turned our world upside down.

A Gallup report now notes that two-thirds or more of Americans say they have cried, prayed, felt depressed by the attacks or shown more affection to loved ones since Sept. 11. Why? I believe we learned in a profound way how vulnerable we are and how little control we have of forces unknown and threats unseen.

But haven't those lessons always been true? Of course they have. Some learn them sooner (a death in the family, an illness, a disaster). Others learn them later (as death draws near). The rest of us live as if they don't really matter: What is there to truly fear?

C.S. Lewis once said that pain is God's megaphone to a deaf world. We've clearly had a wake-up call. But let's be sure we hear the right message at this crucial time in history.

Religious leaders who want to proclaim that God's wrath is kindled against this nation because of its sinful ways, or who have started their own apocalyptic countdown to an end-time, need to recall the judgment against false prophets.

No one — Jew, Christian, Muslim — knows the mind of God. Instead, the first lesson of faith is looking for the log in one's own eye rather than the speck in another's. The other lessons of faith will follow:

- Do I trust in a God greater than myself and in God's gracious hand in my life, regardless of whether good or ill befalls me?
- Does faith lead me to treat others, friend and stranger alike, with kindness and compassion rather than with suspicion and intolerance?
- Do I recognize my responsibility to the poor and to victims of injustice in the world and act in accordance with what my faith teaches?

In many respects, nothing has changed. The lessons of faith are the same today as they have been for centuries. The difference is that, after Sept. 11, more of us are ready to learn them and put them into practice. And what a difference they can make — to ourselves and to others — as we approach whatever waits around tomorrow's corner.

Tom Schaefer writes about religion and ethics for the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle.

Malaysia says banned sect returning

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Malaysia has warned it will crack down on followers who are trying to revive Al-Arqam, a Muslim sect the government banned on grounds of heresy.

The deputy home minister said believers have resumed secret meetings the past five months in rural areas where the sect flourished before the ban. In 1993, Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad's government detained founder Ashaari Muhammad and 15 other top members for two months. They were released after they appeared on national television and claimed to have repented. Authorities also disbanded communes run by Al-Arqam, which owned supermarkets, factories and other businesses and claimed 100,000 members at its height.

Meanwhile, the government this month ordered detention without trial for 10 men accused of membership in an obscure Islamic militant group it says plotted to overthrow the prime minister. Those arrested, mostly members of a fun-

Foundation seeks to protect Pittsburgh's religious sites

PITTSBURGH — Trying to make sure that its houses of worship age gracefully, the Pittsburgh History & Landmarks Foundation has distributed $53,000 for repairs and improvements to historic churches.

Nineteen city churches split the money for architectural restoration projects, from replacing window wells to repairing ceilings. Conservationists say Pittsburgh is one of only a dozen regions with a formal program dedicated to preserving old churches.

"A lot of important national architects, as well as some really talented regional architects, designed churches in Pittsburgh," said A. Robert Jaeger, co-founder of Partners for Sacred Places, a Philadelphia-based nonprofit organization.

Jaeger stressed a need for more funding and support for these projects and said a recent study by his group found that 80 percent of the people who use urban churches are nonmembers. "Too few cities are undertaking these types of efforts," he said.

Memphis church to donate money for airline workers

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The gifts may be small, but members of Mississippi Boulevard Christian Church say they want to do something to help laid-off airline and airport workers.

They plan to give $100 each to those who lost their jobs following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. "While we know $100 is not going to solve all their problems, it's a way for us to show people that this church is with them," said the Rev. Frank Thomas.

Costco reports increase in sales

ISSAQUAH, Wash. - Costco Wholesale matched analyst forecasts for its yearly profit and said sales rose 10 percent over the past five weeks, further evidence that discounters are faring better than department stores as consumers spend more frugally.

While it posted slight declines in profit for its fourth quarter and fiscal year, the Issaquah warehouse retailer with a Twin Falls store said sales rose 10 percent to $3.26 billion in September and the first week of October, climbing by 4 percent at stores open longer than a year.

Richard Galanti, Costco's chief financial officer, told analysts that higher demand for food and other basic items are more than offsetting declines in nonessential products such as jewelry, apparel and electronics.

"One of the things we have going for us is... a strong mix," Galanti said.

Fourth-quarter profit at Costco declined 5 percent to $190.7 million, or 41 cents a share, compared with $200.2 million, or 43 cents a share, a year earlier.

The company said that excluding a $9.6 million charge to reorganize its Canadian operations, profit would have been virtually identical to last year's fourth quarter.

Profit for Costco's fiscal year that ended Sept. 2 came in at $602.1 million, or $1.29 a share, falling 5 percent from $631.4 million, or $1.35 a share, last year. Last year's annual figures included an extra week of sales results.

Rite-Aid sees sales increase in September

CAMP HILL, Pa. - Rite Aid Corp. increased sales for September, after reporting dismal second-quarter figures, including a multimillion-dollar net loss.

For the four weeks ended Sept. 29, sales rose 6.1 percent from the same time last year. Pharmacy-based locations did better, with a 9.6 percent upswing in sales.

For the year, Rite Aid - which has stores in Burlington and Twin Falls - increased total sales by 8.7 percent to $8.5 billion. Pharmacy stores had an 11.5 percent increase in sales.

Qwest gives customers more time to switch

DENVER - Qwest is giving some 310,000 dial-up and 200,000 DSL customers until mid-January to decide if they'll switch to MSN for Internet service or go with another provider.

It had been asking them to decide by Nov. 4.

Idaho is among the 14 states served by the Denver-based company.

"The migration has taken longer than originally expected," said Qwest spokesman Bryce Hallowsell.

"Technically, from our end."

Qwest won't say how many subscribers have elected to go with MSN but says it's pleased with the number.

If they do nothing by mid-January, customers will be automatically signed up with MSN, the nation's second-largest ISP.

In August, when it announced a partnership to jointly market Internet access with Microsoft's MSN Internet service, Qwest said consumers using its Internet services would have the "opportunity to seamlessly transition" to one of two new packages from MSN and Qwest.

It turned out that meant they must either move to MSN or find another ISP. As part of its alliance with MSN, Qwest is essentially handing its consumer Internet service customers to MSN.

Coalition meets new development leader

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - It's time for a fledgling regional group to get to work.

Thirteen members of the newly formed Rural Magic Valley Economic Development Association gathered in Hagerman Thursday to meet James Scott, the economic development specialist selected to lead the coalition in developing economic growth for the cities and counties who are members.

President Steve Kaatz introduced Scott, who said he plans to visit each community and discuss what each would like to see happen in its area.

"We want to set a common ground, to develop regional strategy that makes us fit into what's going on around us," Scott said.

Scott also asked each member to define in writing, "what does success mean to my community" - to be presented at the coalition's November meeting.

An Idaho Department of Commerce economic development specialist, Keith Kopischke, told the group the state will assist the coalition along the way. Kopischke said each community should look for empty buildings and good locations. Keeping the state aware of opportunities could result in the state sending a business prospect its way.

Kopischke said 12 new rural development associations are being set up around the state as part of Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's Rural Economic Development Professional Outreach Program.

A target date of Jan. 1 was set for the Magic Valley coalition's board members to meet with their communities and form a plan tailored to each community and an outline of resources available in each.

Meanwhile, Scott will continue to visit the communities to offer planning help.

"Developing and facilitating is like a three-legged stool," Scott said.

"Marketing, financing and production."

In other business this week:

• Carolyn Elexpuri, the association's treasurer, agreed to work with Scott on developing a budget.

Each community will advance money to the association to pay for expenses incurred by Scott for food, supplies, lodging, cell phone, calling card and mileage.

The amount to be paid depends on the size of the community. The money will be forwarded to the College of Southern Idaho, which will disburse the money from an account set up for these expenses.

Scott said he would use his own computer for now.

• Kaatz gave the members some guidelines for setting association bylaws, and each member may offer changes or additions in the next two weeks, before the bylaws are printed.

• The executive board will meet one time before the association's monthly meeting Nov. 8 in Jerome. Budget and bylaws will be on the agenda for approval.

Members present for the initial meeting were Elexpuri, Gooding County; Kelly Kast, Bliss; Sharon Seifert, Gooding; Gary Tussey, Hagerman; Jon Irace, Wendell; Mary Kay Bennett and Julie Oxarango, Ingham, Shoshone; Randy Suter, Jerome County; Rusty Parker, Lincoln County; Wanless Southwick, Dietrich; Kaatz, Buhl; Herb Runyan, Castleford; and Robert Simpson, Carey.

ANTHRAX ANXIETY

Specialist Thomas Verdiglione, right, and clerk Michael Cavanaugh watch their screens on the New York Stock Exchange trading floor Friday morning. News of a fourth anthrax case, this time in New York City, sent stocks lower Friday on fears of more terrorism attacks. The Dow Jones Industrial average closed down 66 points after recovering from an early drop of 206 points. For story, see page C-5.

Sonic steps up on national ad scene

Knight Ridder News Service

OKLAHOMA CITY - Drive-in restaurant giant Sonic Corp. has grown to the point where a national network advertising schedule with college football games on CBS will allow it to reach more potential customers in untapped markets, Marketing Vice President Dwayne Chambers said.

"We've gotten to a size where we're able to see some efficiencies of advertising on a national basis," Chambers said.

The Oklahoma City-based company - whose franchisees recently opened the chain's first Magic Valley restaurant in Twin Falls - announced its sponsorship of the Southeastern Conference this fall, its first such national broadcast ad deal. Sonic previously bought advertising for specific show time slots or particular regions instead of season-long programming across the country, he said.

College football on CBS this season will be highlighted by exclusive coverage of the Southeastern Conference. The schedule includes the annual conference battle between Tennessee and Florida, the classic intrastate rivalry of Florida State vs. Florida and the 102nd playing of the Army-Navy game. College football viewership is very attractive to Sonic, Chambers said. "It's a key demographic group, 18 to 49 year olds, skewing a little bit male. It's getting harder to find those people. ... You really have to go to specific programming."

Taco Time takes on flashy new look

Knight Ridder News Service

EUGENE, Ore. - If you haven't seen Taco Time's bright new look, wait a few months.

The Eugene-based fast-food chain with a Jerome restaurant is planning ahead with plans to repaint and remodel its nearly 400 restaurants in 13 states and three other countries.

The company-owned outlet at Willakenzie and Coburg roads in Eugene is the prototype.

Outside, terra cotta red, lemon yellow eggplant and other bright tones have replaced an off-white color scheme. One wall has a mural with a sun. Inside, the dining room has been jazzed up with a new salsa and soda bar, burnished countertops, cream and beeswax-yellow walls, plus hanging banners with drawings of orange, yellow and green vegetables.

Taco Time prides itself on using fresh ingredients, a message it will get across to customers with such phrases as "Hand cut, homemade taco chips, soft hand stretched whole wheat tortillas," and "100 percent vegetable oil," painted on the walls.

In surveys since the renovation was complete in August, about eight in 10 customers like the changes, said Debbie Porter, vice president of marketing. However, some thought the exterior colors were too bright.

Only four Taco Times are company owned, leaving about 120 franchisees in charge of the rest. In August, 50 franchisees met in Eugene, and their response to the new design was "overwhelmingly positive," Porter said.

Still, some franchisees thought the outside colors were too bold, so they will have the option of

Pharmacy hopes to better serve area with new laboratory

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Dick's Pharmacy, locally owned for 26 years, says its new addition will change local health care.

Owners pharmacists Dan, Ken, Doug and Ed Fuchs and Ken and Ken Alexander recently opened a new prescription compounding lab as an addition to their retail pharmacy at 526 K Shop Ave. W.

The new 700-square-foot lab has allowed the pharmacy to dramatically expand already existing compounded medication choices, owners said.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce will hold a ribbon cutting at 10 a.m. Friday for the new lab.

Compounding is the method of preparing medications to meet unique needs. Working with the patient and physician, pharmacists can prepare customized medications in the compounding laboratory, using the latest techniques and devices, Dick's Pharmacy said.

Why the need? Many patients are allergic to preservatives or dyes or are sensitive to standard drug strengths, the pharmacy said in a statement. With a physician's consent, a compounding pharmacist can change the strength of a medication and alter its dosage form or delivery system.

For example, the pharmacist can prepare the medication using delivery systems such as sublingual troche or lozenge, a lollipop, or a transdermal gel, cream or ointment. Or for patients who have difficulty swallowing a capsule, a compounding pharmacist can make a flavored suspension instead.

Compounding pharmacists also have helped patients who are experiencing chronic pain, the pharmacy said. An example is arthritic patients who cannot take certain medications due to gastrointestinal side effects. Working with their physicians, a compounding pharmacist can provide topical preparations with the anti-inflammatory or analgesic their doctors prescribed.

A compounding pharmacist can provide natural alternatives to hormone replacement therapy or help physicians treat hospice patients.

"We're bringing a new era in pharmacy services to the community, with the ultimate goal in preparing any of these customized medications is to assist the physician in helping the patient achieve a more positive therapeutic outcome," said Dan Fuchs, a registered pharmacist with Dick's Pharmacy.

Grocery union opts to accept contract, forego major strike

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Unable to rally support for a strike, the union representing 27,000 workers at Northern California's two largest grocery chains on Friday reluctantly accepted a three-year contract that labor leaders said makes it difficult for employees to afford the region's high housing costs.

The change of heart by the United Food and Commercial Workers union means there will be no strike at 294 Northern California supermarkets run by market leaders Safeway and Albertson's, which also does business in the Magic Valley. The union, which had been negotiating as a team, characterized the contract proposal as their "last, best" offer.

The new contract will raise store workers' wages by an average of 10 percent, or $1.50 per hour, over three years. The union wanted raises of $2.40 per hour over three years. The contract is expected to set the standard for thousands of other clerks at rival supermarkets in Northern California.

Less than three weeks ago, the union recommended the workers reject the contract and prepare to strike.

More than 61 percent of the workers voted against the contract in a referendum announced earlier this week. But union rules prohibit a strike unless at least 66.7 percent of workers reject a contract.

Labor leaders maintain the contract is inadequate, but felt they had no negotiating leverage without the threat of a strike, union spokesman Ron Lind said.

"The reality is that a strike is our only weapon," Lind said. "If you don't have that, there isn't much you can do."

Representatives for the San Francisco Bay area, where the union is based, and Boise-based Albertson's, could not be reached for comment Friday morning. Earlier in the week, both chains reiterated they would not budge from their last offer.

The current pay for the Northern California retail clerks ranges from $7.75 per hour to $17.58 per hour, making them among the best paid in their profession, according to management. The workers at Safeway and Albertson's stores in the Sacramento area accepted a nearly identical contract earlier this year.

Labor leaders said employees mean more money to live in the San Francisco Bay area, where the cost of a mid-priced home increased 66 percent to $476,000 since the workers signed their previous contract in 1997. Accepting the new contract will mean that the store workers will have to live in less expensive outlying areas and drive even farther to their jobs, Lind said.

Most of the store workers aren't happy about the contract, Lind said, but felt a strike would be inappropriate soon after recent terrorist attacks.

"If not for Sept. 11," Lind said, "I'm pretty confident that we would be on strike right now."

Anthrax news sends stocks downward

Stocks recover slightly after initial drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street demonstrated its ability to absorb bad news again Friday as stocks finished mixed despite reports of another anthrax case, this time in New York City.

While many of the case initially sent stocks down sharply, it failed to derail the market's ongoing rebound from the massive selloff that followed the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Although analysts cautioned that the market's problems remain concentrated, particularly with a slew of quarterly earnings reports due out in the next two weeks, the relatively mild response was a good sign.

The market's shown an amazing amount of resiliency," said Todd Clark, co-head of trading at WR Hambrecht. "While we were due for a little bit of a pullback given the advance we've had, the news backdrop today suggested the market could have done a lot worse. I am surprised, but I'm glad."

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 66.29 at 9,344.16, recovering from a drop of as much as 216 points when the anthrax report first came out. The decline cut short a two-day winning streak that saw the investor benchmark rise more than 350 points.

Broader stock indicators were mixed. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 5.78 to 1,091.65, while the Nasdaq composite index gained 1.93 at 1,703.40.

For the week, the Dow gained 2.5 percent and the Nasdaq climbed 2.1 percent and the S&P 500 recouped 1.9 percent.

The Dow has now recovered 80 percent of its loss from the selloff following the terrorist attacks. The S&P is less than a point shy of its Sept. 10 close, while the Nasdaq has topped the month-long slide.

The New York anthrax case Friday came days after a Florida man died of anthrax and two co-workers were exposed. While the cases have intensified concerns about bioterrorism, the FBI has said it has no evidence linking them to a terrorist group.

BOSTON (AP) — Polaroid Corp., known to generations of consumers for its instant cameras and film but buried beneath a mountain-of-debt, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection Friday.

The widely expected move comes three months after Polaroid said it would miss payments to bondholders and explore strategic options — including a sale of the company — as it negotiated with creditors.

No buyer stepped forward and business slowed further after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, forcing the company into reorganization.

Polaroid, founded by Edwin Land in 1937, has struggled to land in new digital technology as its core instant film business has slumped.

The Cambridge-based company could be sold off in its entirety or essentially stripped for parts under the supervision of a bankruptcy court.

Chapter 11 reorganization would make Polaroid an even more attractive to potential buyers, analysts said. Buyers could acquire equity for free and possibly get a discount on Polaroid debt if the purchase came out of bankruptcy proceedings.

Polaroid has been trying to restructure $950 million in debt, and lost $100.9 million in the quarter ended July 2.

It has laid off at least 2,950 employees — 35 percent of its work force — and been in negotiations with bondholders since missing interest payments in July.

But it still has valuable assets, including a well-known name and new printing technology, called Opal and Onyx, which is expected to debut next year. Analysts have said they were impressed with the technology, though they doubted Polaroid could develop it quickly enough to save the company from bankruptcy.

Boeing plans to cut 2,000 jobs by Dec. 14

sell big for Salt Lake city

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. will cut about 2,000 employees from its commercial airplanes and shared services divisions by Dec. 14 in the third round of layoffs prompted by the terrorist attacks, the company said Friday.

About 9,000 of those employees were scheduled to receive 60-day layoff notices Friday, Boeing spokesman Tom Ryan said, including about 7,000 in the Puget Sound region where the majority of Boeing's commercial jets are built.

The 3,000 remaining jobs will be cut through attrition, retirement and laying off contract employees, Ryan confirmed.

The jetliner factory in Wichita, Kan., will lose 1,645 jobs, spokesman Dick Ziegler said. "It's painful to do," he said. The factory had already lost about 450 jobs to attrition and announced layoffs this year.

The layoffs notices were no surprise. Barely a week after the Sept. 11 hijacking attacks pushed many airlines into a crisis, the jet maker had said it would be forced to lay off 20,000 to 30,000 employees by its commercial division by the end of 2002. Two more rounds of layoff notices are expected.

Boeing workers have gone, through layoffs before, and many have come to expect them for the aerospace giant ebbs and flows. Before Sept. 11, however, Boeing had seen only a slight slowdown in aircraft orders, so the new layoffs come on relatively short notice.

David Goodsell, a structure mechanic at Boeing's Renton plant south of Seattle, said he expected to receive a layoff notice when he reported for the swing shift Friday. He was recalled to work only recently after a 26-month layoff.

"Pretty much I'm going into deep thinking about a (new) career," said Goodsell, 38.

Ryan could offer little hope for employees hoping to be brought back soon.

"We're hoping with each passing day, the flying public can regain confidence in the system, get back on airplanes and we can turn this thing around."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Business is booming for a Salt Lake City company marketing a machine it says can identify bacteria and viruses — including anthrax, smallpox and the plague — within 30 minutes.

"The fact that we have international customers showing up on our doorstep with $200,000 checks says a lot about business," said Todd Ritter, director of Idaho Technology Inc.

That much money would buy three of the devices — if they were available.

Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the devices are selling faster than Idaho Technology's 78 employees can build them.

Buyers of Idaho Technology's device, called Rapid, include the Department of Defense, law enforcement agencies, hazardous materials response groups and the Centers for Disease Control.

"We have a lot of orders and they say as fast as you can build them we will take them," said Mark Kessler, a spokesman for privately held Idaho Technology.

YOU ARE HEREBY

NOTICED THAT:

A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named children come within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act, and

You, the person who has the custody or control of said children, are hereby directed to appear personally and bring the children before this Court for a Sholter Care Hearing at the Twin Falls County Court-house, 425 Shoahone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho, on August 20, 2001 at 1:30 p.m.

sonal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court.

You are notified that the parents, guardian, or custodian may be financially liable for the support and treatment of the children.

You are further notified that the children and appointed guardian or custodian have the right to be represented by an attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the Court to represent the children or the parent(s), guardian, or custodian at county expense. If you request to have an attorney appointed at county expense, you must appear before the date of the hearing given above, at which time the court shall consider appointment of an attorney for the children and inquire whether the parent(s), guardian, or custodian require the separate appointment of an attorney.

You are further notified that there shall be a rebuttal presumption that if the children are placed in the custody of the IDHW and were also placed in care out of the home for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months for the date of Adjudication, the IDHW shall initiate a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding by the Court that the filing of a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights would not be in the best interest of the children and their family or the children are placed permanently with a relative.

WITNESS MY HAND AND SEAL of said Magistrate Court this 19th day of September, 2001.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The shoe that fits one person pinches another."

—Carl Gustav Jung

"Please review the events leading to this defensive disaster," asks a reader. "My partner and I have ceased communications while we anxiously await his reply."

West led his fourth-best spade to East's king, and East returned the nine, covered by the 10 and jack. West shifted to a club, hoping that East might win to lead another spade through South.

A thankful South tested clubs and then picked up the diamond suit to claim nine tricks.

West argued that East should have returned his original fourth-best spade. Conventionally, the lead of East's highest card promised only three spades. With four, one normally returns his original fourth-best. Therefore, West maintained, cashing the spade ace would only serve to establish South's spade queen. East countered that a return of his four might block the suit, and it would have. After West captures South's 10 and queen, East's nine will block the suit, stranding West's fifth spade.

The verdict? If East held K-9-4 or K-9-8 of spades, another spade lead from East wouldn't help. With the former holding, South would hold Q-10-8-3 (a sure stopper). With the latter holding, South would hold Q-10-4-3 and would merely duck East's eight, again blocking the suit.

Because South's opening bid made it extremely unlikely that East could win a second trick and because it would not help if East did hold three spades, West gets 100 percent of the blame. He should have cashed his ace, East would have jettisoned his eight, and the defense would have taken the first five tricks.

 ♦ Q 8 5 4

ANSWER: Four spades. The double fit in spades and diamonds justifies the jump to game.
