Fire guts warehouse

Firefighters work to put out the blaze at a warehouse on Main Street in Kimberly Tuesday afternoon.

Nobody is hurt in Kimberly blaze

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — With sinister speed and seemingly defiant of the streams of water firefighters poured on it, a Tuesday afternoon blaze destroyed a dairy feed and supply warehouse on Main Street in Kimberly.

Nobody was hurt in the fire, which started at about 2:30 p.m. at the Idaho Dairy Supply warehouse in the 500 block of North Main, said Rock Creek Rural Fire Department incident commander Jerry Morton.

The cause of the fire hadn't been determined as of about 3:45 p.m., as crews were still trying to douse flames in the skeletal remains of the building, Morton said. Firefighters worked probably be there several hours longer, he said. The warehouse was mostly empty, but bean dust inside probably added to the fire's power, he said.

A Rock Creek Rural Fire Department firefighter is overcome by the heat and smoke. After getting some oxygen, rest and water, she returned to duty.

Bill Hodnett and Jerry DeWaal said they and other workers got out well ahead of the flames.

DeWaal said he was able to drive a forklift out. Nearly all the other equipment in the warehouse was probably destroyed, Hodnett said.

Late Tuesday afternoon, a Magic Valley hazardous materials team was called in to contain some chemicals that had leaked out of the warehouse, Morton said.

As the fire ate away at the central warehouse — reaching high above a tower in the main structure — firefighters and Idaho Power Co. employees rushed in with a line service truck in an effort to get water into the upper windows of a smaller building attached to the main structure. But their efforts were in vain, and they backed off as flames started coming out of the windows before the building began to collapse upon itself.

A crowd of Kimberly residents gathered to watch the action, despite the fire's heat — which was strong enough to sap a person's energy even from across the street. Children walking home from school slowed down or stopped to gawk at the scene. Bands of pigeons, some of them likely made homeless by the fire, circled overhead.

Occasionally, a worn-out firefighter would stumble over to rest and get bottled water from a knot of EMTs gathered near the shelter of some storage units.

Two or three firefighters had suffered heat exhaustion, Morton said.

At about 3:30 p.m., an immense ladder truck from the Twin Falls City Fire Department arrived with a crew to pitch in. Crews and engines also came from the Salmon Tract Rural Fire District, Morton said.

Rim plan draws mixed reviews

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

JEROME — People who attended an open house Tuesday evening offered mixed reactions about plans to preserve the natural look of the north rim of the Snake River Canyon in Jerome County.

A Canyon Rim Committee that has been meeting for nearly two years unveiled its proposed preservation zone plan at an open house held at Jerome High School.

People were invited to look over the proposed ordinance and zoning charts and ask questions of committee members.

Some property owners were concerned about losing the value of their canyon view if they will be restricted to development within 100 feet of the canyon.

Open house set
The next open house will be 5 to 7 p.m. Oct. 25 at Valley High School in Hazelton. For more information about the proposed north canyon rim overlay zone call the Jerome County Planning and Zoning office at 324-9116 or 324-9262.

Canyon Rim Committee Chairman Lowell Utty, who lives in the canyon, said the committee is interested in preserving the canyon rim while still allowing people to use their property. A big concern is protecting the rim from development like that experienced on the south side in Twin Falls, he said.

The proposal is guided by Jerome County's comprehensive plan that calls for preserving open space, recreational uses, migratory corridor for raptors, waterfowl and other wildlife, water quality and cultural and historical sites, unique geological features and scenic vistas.

The planned preservation zone runs along all 35 miles of Jerome County's southern boundary — the canyon — from the Gooding County line to the Minidoka County line. The zone varies in width, reaching its widest at U.S. Highway 93 where the zone extends north from the canyon rim to Interstate 84.

Most of the property within the proposed preservation zone is private with the exception of a stretch of ground from U.S. Highway 93 east. The BLM land ends across the canyon from Hansen.

Don McBride of Hazelton said balancing preservation interests with private property rights "is a tough call to make."

McBride, who does not own property within the preservation area, said his biggest concern is that the area be protected from dairy development. He is worried about the loss of the area.

Governor will help break ground at CSI

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne will participate Thursday in a long-awaited groundbreaking for a $6.3 million Fine Arts Building expansion at the College of Southern Idaho.

But the 17,000- to 20,000-square-foot addition isn't the only construction CSI officials are planning. They're gearing up for a new student union building near the Taylor Building.

Groundbreaking

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne is scheduled to attend a 12:45 p.m. groundbreaking ceremony at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Building Thursday.

Mike Mason, vice president of finance, said officials have held one meeting with STARR Corp. owner Glenn Arrington, who will head construction for the new design-build facility. They plan to fund the student union with money from the CSI Foundation and existing fees amounting to about $3.8 million. Earlier this year — President Jerry Meyerhoeffer said he favored constructing a new student union because students had told him that was what they wanted most.

Officials are hoping to break ground for the student union by early spring.

However, another new building Meyerhoeffer pitched to the state Board of Education probably won't materialize for a while, Mason said.

In August, Meyerhoeffer asked the state board to consider a $12 million request for a 60,000-square-foot building to house university classes locally as CSI's No. 1 capital request for the year. The board put the request on the list, but not at the top, Mason said.

"It's rated a three or a four,

Capitol workers get antibiotics in anthrax scare

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI probed similarities Tuesday between an anthrax case in New York and a spore-spiked letter mailed to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle. Officials dispensed precautionary doses of antibiotics by the hundreds in the shadow of the Capitol.

"Obviously, these are difficult times," said Daschle, as the Senate and the nation it represents grappled with the unsettling threat of bioterrorism.

weeks after a co-worker died of the same illness.

In New York, headquarters for many of the nation's high-profile news media corporations, officials said they expected full recoveries for two people infected with a less lethal form of the disease. They included an NBC news employee and the 7-month-old son of an ABC producer.

Yet five weeks after terrorist strikes killed 5,000, the nation reeled under a continuing series of disclosures involving letters tainted by anthrax bacteria; spores discovered in a postal facility in Florida; countless innocent scares; and not a few malicious hoaxes.

Attacks intensify; bombs strike Red Cross building

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Intensified U.S. airstrikes hit "eviscerated" the Taliban's combat power and placed it in imminent danger of losing a key northern stronghold, a senior Pentagon official said Tuesday.

The Pentagon also acknowledged that U.S. bombs accidentally hit warehouses in Kabul used by the International Committee of the Red Cross. A Navy F/A-18 Hornet dropped 1,000-pound bombs on the warehouses, the statement said.

A Pentagon statement released Tuesday night said the Red Cross buildings were among a series of warehouses targeted because U.S. forces believed the Taliban was using them to store equipment and military vehicles had been seen nearby. "U.S. forces did not know that ICRS was using one or more of the warehouses," the statement said.

Red Cross officials have protested the bombing and said that the warehouses, holding wheat, blankets and shelter materials, had the organization's

Where is he?

Bin Laden may be planning to run

WASHINGTON (AP) — Osama bin Laden uses misdirection, look-alike decoys and fake caravans to fool pursuers. He is thought to have moved around Afghanistan hidden in an ambulance.

U.S. intelligence officials believe bin Laden has remained in Taliban-controlled areas of Afghanistan since Sept. 11, the day jetliner hijackers allegedly sent by bin Laden attacked the United States. The officials are worried now, however, that bin Laden may be planning to leave for Chechnya, Somalia or Sudan — all war-torn, relatively lawless areas like Afghanistan where he can again hide.

His mobility is both a defense and a vulnerability, said Sen. Richard Shelby, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"If he's moving from post to post, place to place, cave to cave, town to town, sooner or later, we're going to find him," said Shelby, R-Ala.

Sen. Bob Graham, the committee's chairman, said this week that he has information that makes him confident bin Laden will be found and captured or killed before mid-November.

Like Shelby, the Florida Democrat receives classified briefings from U.S. intelligence agencies.

"I am confident we will be able to locate and take — as a prisoner or through death — bin Laden," Graham said.

In general, bin Laden is believed to move frequently among his al-Qaida terrorist camps and deep caves honeycombing the mountain ranges that crisscross Afghanistan. He's usually with one or more of his wives, sometimes with some senior lieutenants, always with a security force. He normally stays out of cities and away from the Taliban's front lines with the rebels of the northern alliance.

If he has held to those routines, bin Laden probably is in southern or eastern Afghanistan, where the Taliban's hold is strongest. Most of his camps — many the targets of U.S. airstrikes — are in that region, although they have largely emptied since the terror attacks in New York and Washington.

Bin Laden could try to sneak across a border, although the possibility exists he could try to fly out, despite danger from airstrikes.

As the hunt for the No. 1 terror suspects continues, U.S. officials won't say for the record whether they believe bin Laden is moving or has hunkered down in one location for the past five weeks.

A Pakistani intelligence official said bin Laden moved within hours of Oct. 7 onset of attacks, but President Pervez Musharraf said this week his country does not know precisely where bin Laden is.

A British newspaper quoted bin Laden's 18-year-old son as saying his father took 300 fighters and satellite communications equipment into the mountains, where he would hide in a cave and direct fighting against both Western commandos and Afghanistan's northern alliance.

U.S. intelligence agencies have had a bead on bin Laden at least twice in recent years. After two U.S. embassies were bombed in Africa, the Clinton administration retaliated with a missile attack in August 1998, sending Tomahawk cruise missiles into his eastern Afghanistan training camps.

The U.S. attacks killed about 20 followers but reportedly missed bin Laden by a few hours.

Powell says Taliban leaders should be included in post-Taliban government

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Secretary of State Colin Powell and Pakistani President Gen. Pervez Musharraf agreed Tuesday that moderate officials from Afghanistan's radical Taliban regime should be allowed to serve in a post-Taliban government.

Powell, who is on a three-nation Asia tour, said Taliban officials who signal a willingness to serve in a broad-based successor government should not be automatically excluded.

"You can't ethnically cleanse Afghanistan after this is over, but you can certainly get rid of this particular regime that has driven this country into such devastation," Powell said. Some of the more moderate elements in the Taliban may be willing "to participate in a different kind of government where the rights of all are respected," he said.

Musharraf, whose government supported the Taliban militia in the past and who is under great political pressure, said a representative post-Taliban government could include "moderate Taliban leaders."

Powell and Musharraf spoke at a news conference as the secretary of state was winding up a 22-hour visit to Pakistan.

Secretary of State
Colin Powell

Musharraf's support of the U.S.-led coalition has infuriated leaders of militant Islamic parties, who say he has betrayed the nation. They have directed large, sometimes violent protests in recent days, though only several thousand of Pakistan's 145 million people have participated. Muslim leaders staged a partially successful nationwide general strike Monday to coincide with Powell's arrival.

The Pakistani leader said his government will assist the U.S. anti-terrorism effort in Afghanistan for as long as it takes to be successful.

"We will carry on cooperating so long as the operation lasts," he said.

Musharraf ingratiated himself with the Bush administration early on by agreeing to cooperate with the U.S. effort to root out Osama bin Laden and his terrorist network from Afghanistan. The Pakistani leader acted with in days of the Sept. 11 attacks in New York and Washington.

In a risky stand for Musharraf, given the many Pakistanis who support the Taliban and bin Laden, Musharraf agreed to share intelligence with the United States, allow U.S. use of Pakistani air space and provide logistical support.

He said Tuesday that his commitment was contingent on Pakistan not being asked to go beyond these three areas.

At the same time, Musharraf expressed hope the operation in Afghanistan will be short — a point with which Powell concurred. Powell also noted that President Bush has said the anti-terrorism campaign in Afghanistan will continue as long as it takes to achieve its objectives.

Officials crack down on anthrax hoaxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assailing recent anthrax hoaxes as "no joking matter," Attorney General John Ashcroft said Tuesday those who perpetrate anthrax or other terrorist scares will be prosecuted.

With the FBI chasing down thousands of reports of possible anthrax exposures — most turn out to be false alarms or practical jokes — Ashcroft said such scares are unlawful and "gross transgressions of the public trust."

"They create illegitimate alarm in a time of legitimate concern," said Ashcroft.

The warning came as suspicious letters, unmarked packages and nonstop hoaxes have spread anthrax anxiety around the globe. No anthrax cases have been confirmed outside the United States.

With FBI Director Robert Mueller at his side, Ashcroft said a rash of hoaxes across the country have taxed the resources of an already burdened law enforcement system.

An FBI warning last week about possible terrorist attacks within the next few days is still in effect, so authorities cannot afford to be diverted by phony scares.

"The threat of bioterrorism is no joking matter," the attorney general said.

He detailed the prosecution of a Connecticut state employee who sat by quietly as a state agency building was evacuated for what the man allegedly knew to be a false threat involving white powder.

It is a federal crime to threaten to use biological agents or toxins to harm people.

Joseph A. Faryniarz, an employee of Connecticut's environmental agency, told agency security guards Oct. 11 that he found a powdery substance on a paper towel under some paper-work near his computer.

Security officials alerted the police and all 800 agency employees were evacuated. Twelve employees were forced to disrobe and be washed down with a decontamination solution, Ashcroft said.

Faryniarz told FBI agents he involved but later acknowledged that he lied and said he knew the incident was a hoax even before the FBI arrived because another individual not named in the complaint had claimed responsibility. The two-day evacuation of the building cost taxpayers $1.5 million, Ashcroft said.

Studies: Night shift in bright lights may increase risk of breast cancer

WASHINGTON — Women who work nights may increase their breast-cancer-risk by up to 60 percent, according to two studies that suggest bright light in the dark hours decreases melatonin secretion and increases estrogen levels.

Two independent studies, using different methods, found increased risk of breast cancer among women who worked night shifts for many years. The studies, both appearing in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, suggested a "dose effect," meaning that the more time spent working nights, the greater the risk of breast cancer.

"We are just beginning to see evidence emerge on the health effects of shift work," said Scott Davis, an epidemiologist at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle and first author of one of the studies. He said more research was needed, however, before a compelling case could be made to change night work schedules.

"The numbers in our study are small, but they are statistically significant," said Francine Laden, a researcher at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston and co-author of the second study.

Feds require child-resistant caps on oil-based chemicals

WASHINGTON — Many oil-based household products such as baby oils and makeup removers will have child-resistant caps under new government rules.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission voted 3-0 Tuesday to regulate these watery chemicals that young children can swallow and inhale. Once in the lungs, oily substances can't be removed and can cause a deadly form of pneumonia.

Since 1993, five children have died from inhaling such products, the agency said.

In May, 16-month-old Jaiden Bryson, of Hanford, Calif., died in a hospital a month after drinking baby oil.

Jaiden's mother, Teresa, said she was happy about the new rules, but was "sorry Jaiden had to die before this could happen."

Bryson, who has a degree in early childhood education, said she worked hard to make her son's playroom safe, but never considered baby oil a danger.

"I thought I had it pretty much covered — I didn't," she said.

EPA allows continued use of genetically engineered corn

WASHINGTON — Farmers will be allowed to continue growing genetically engineered corn after the government decided the corn isn't a threat to human health or the environment.

The Environmental Protection Agency is renewing for seven years registrations for varieties of biotech corn that produce their own toxin to kill an insect pest, a moth larva called the European corn borer. The crop is known as Bt corn for a bacterium gene that it contains.

EPA said Tuesday it is taking steps to ensure that farmers comply with planting restrictions that are supposed to prevent the development of insects resistant to the toxin.

"Bt corn has been evaluated thoroughly by EPA, and we are confident that it does not pose risks to human health or to the environment," said Steve Johnson, assistant administrator of EPA's Office of Prevention, Pesticides, and Toxic Substances.

A laboratory study reported in 1999 raised concerns that the corn could be harmful to monarch caterpillars, which feed on milkweed in and near cornfields. But studies published recently in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences downplayed the threat.

Fire allegedly set by teen-age girl kills her father, brother

FORT GAY, W. Va. (AP) — A teen-age girl and her boyfriend allegedly set a mobile home fire that killed her father and brother and injured her mother and another brother, police said.

John Trout, 37, died in Sunday morning's fire and his 12-year-old son, Johnathan, died Tuesday at a hospital burn unit. His twin brother, Jeffrey, was hospitalized in serious condition and Norma Trout was in fair condition.

Authorities were searching for the Trout's 15-year-old daughter, who is wanted on a juvenile petition charging her with arson and murder warrants.

Frazier and John Trout allegedly had a disagreement because Trout had tried to stop his daughter from seeing Frazier, Wayne County Sheriff David Pennington said.

Hastert hopes to make home of Reagan an historic site

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's boyhood home in Illinois would become a national historic site, if House Speaker Dennis Hastert has his way, even though no feasibility study has been done and no one knows what it will cost. The home is in Hastert's district.

The Bush administration and some fellow Republicans have urged that the issue be studied by the Interior Department, which has sought a moratorium on additions to its park system while dealing with a $4.9 billion maintenance backlog.

But Hastert sees no reason to delay the effort.

"We don't believe and neither do the people in the community (of Dixon, Ill.) believe the legacy of Ronald Reagan needs to be studied. We need to preserve it," Hastert spokesman Pete Jeffries said.

Rep. Joel Hefley, R-Colo., offered an amendment to Hastert's bill requiring a study, but the House Resources Committee narrowly rejected it, earlier this month, setting the stage for a House vote, perhaps next week.

Board allows pledge

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Madison School Board voted to allow schools to offer the Pledge of Allegiance, reversing an earlier decision that critics denounced as unpatriotic.

The board approved the change on a 6-1 vote Tuesday after hearing about eight hours of testimony from emotional residents about its decision last week to bar the Pledge of Allegiance and only allow an instrumental version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" in classrooms. The new policy allows the singing of the national anthem, too.

"For a few minutes every morning, everyone joins in an exercise that I believe binds us together," board member Ray Allen said.

The 800-seat auditorium at Madison Memorial High School was overflowing last Monday into Tuesday with citizens wanting to express their opinion.

Last week, the board ruled out the pledge or the singing of the anthem as a way for schools to comply with a new state law that calls for a daily dose of patriotism — either the pledge or "The Star-Spangled Banner" — in schools. Instead, schools were to use an instrumental version of the anthem.

Supporters of that policy had suggested the lyrics to the national anthem were too militaristic, and complained about the "one nation, under God" line in the pledge, saying the religious words do not belong in public schools.

"I don't think the pledge is about religion. I think it is a commitment to our democracy," Allen said Tuesday.

The district received more than 20,000 phone calls and e-mails over the matter — almost all of them criticizing the decision.

Before the meeting started, many in the crowd spontaneously began reciting the pledge, with the majority standing as some scattered boos were heard. After finishing the oath, supporters broke into applause, waving American flags.

Under the new policy, schools that decide to have the pledge recited or the anthem sung will start with an announcement reminding pupils that participation is voluntary. But critics said some schoolchildren might feel pressure to take part.

Jaura Brown, a Madison resident, said it was unfair to divide students with different beliefs on the issue of the pledge.

"It's had enough Osama bin Laden has declared a holy war on us," she said. "It's a heck of a lot worse if we declare war on each other in the name of God."

Dell incentive package will be a wise investment

Now that Dell Computer Corp., is inching closer toward an official technical call center in Twin Falls, new details of the incentive deal assembled by area and state leaders reveal how the Dell negotiations should pay off generously in years to come.

When a city like Twin Falls makes its case for a player like Dell, the playing field isn't always level. Companies have the upper hand with multiple options to choose for a location. In this case, it was from 3,300 total communities.

To emerge as the best selection, area leaders have to put together an incentive package that can lucratively attract an industry, but doesn't leave the community hanging with bills it can't pay. The incentive deal offered by local entities appears to meet both those standards.

The Urban Renewal Agency took on the role of financing the purchase of the former Albertson's grocery store, which will be the location of Dell's call center. By buying the facility with low-interest bonds, the agency can serve as an affordable leasing agent for Dell.

The agency's bond term also coincides with the number of years in Dell's lease. The lease agreement will pay off that debt in full, thus protecting the agency's liability in the long run. Dell is to be commended for selecting the former grocery store. While the property is a prime pick for retail and exposure, it isn't exactly structured for major technology needs. Telecommunication improvements will come with an additional $500,000 grant from Urban Renewal. And a parking garage construction also would be paid for by the agency at a cost of $850,000. But if Dell leaves Twin Falls or opts to purchase the facility, it must pay the remaining debt on the parking garage—another example of local leaders making sure the community isn't left with the bill.

A number of local entities also stepped up to the plate to make their contributions:

- Twin Falls City made its contribution with a $500,000 Idaho Community Development Block Grant, which should come from applications to the state. The city will also help with traffic modifications and construction-fee waivers.

• The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Business Plus II campaign actually doubled its contribution from $250,000 to half a million dollars. Chamber leaders did so with faith in the Dell name and that the operation will grow over the years. (In the interest of full disclosure, our publisher is a vice chairman of Business Plus II.)

The College of Southern Idaho assumed its role well as a work force training facilitator. The school will offer staff for recruitment and assessment needs, provide four training rooms at the campus for Dell's use, create new courses that in essence train future workers; help obtain additional grants for Dell at all levels, and implement a shuttle service between the college and the Dell operation.

More assistance may be coming from the state, which plays a big role in capturing more technology growth for this area. Together, the multi-faceted approach to building an incentive package is what has made Twin Falls stand apart from thousands of other U.S. cities interested in Dell.

There may be doubters who will look at the $2.35 million in grants and assistance and say it's too much. But when the company's annual payroll of $5 million is increased by the usual multiplied effect, you end up with an annual economic impact of $12 million in Twin Falls.

That's an investment that pays off with immediate benefits. Twin Falls area leaders have made the most of an opportunity that presented itself, while still protecting the financial interests of community coffers.

And if Twin Falls' work force proves its worth in the long term, this investment may be just the first of many good things to come from Dell. We for one, believe that it is.

Political games go on at the local levels

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Out of sight but not out of mind is the apt description for politics in America at this moment. The focus on terrorism has made partisanship unfashionable.

Candidates for mayor in cities across the country and for governor in New Jersey and Virginia, the two states holding elections next month, are debating as usual about taxes and transportation, crime and corruption, whether the public is listening or not.

On Capitol Hill, the old squabbles over economic policy and the role of government are beginning to resurface after a month of unusual unity following the September 11 terrorist attacks.

But the most consequential political struggles — the ones with long-lasting effects — are taking place largely unnoticed by most citizens. These are the battles over redistricting that will literally set the lines of electoral advantage for the next decade.

I was reminded of this reality the other day when I saw Michigan state Sen. Dianne Byrum. Byrum was the Democratic nominee in a race for the House of Representatives which I had covered last year — a classic open-seat contest in which she ultimately lost to Republican Mike Rogers by a scant 160 votes.

The Rogers-Byrum race in the district formerly held by Democrat Deborah Stabenow, now a U.S. senator, was so competitive and so vital to both parties that it became the center of national attention and fund-raising. It is exactly the kind of race where one would expect a rematch. But when I asked Byrum if she was planning to run again next year, she said, "Absolutely not."

She will be term-limited out of her state Senate seat in 2002, she said, so she is considering three options. She may seek statewide office, step back and run for the Michigan house of representatives, or retire to private life until another political opportunity opens.

Why not run against Rogers again? Because, she said, a Republican redistricting plan has boosted the GOP voting strength by about 5 percent, making the once-competitive seat almost safe for the incumbent.

That same plan so radically redrew the home district of the No. 2 Democrat in the House, Minority Whip David Bonior, that Bonior has decided to end his House career and jump into a three-way primary for governor. And it also altered the territory of the senior House Democrat, John Dingell, sending him away from his familiar blue-collar, labor constituents in Down River Detroit and into the independent, academic high-tech atmosphere of Ann Arbor.

Thus, the political fortunes of many incumbents and potential challengers — and the future representation of millions of citizens — have been altered without a single vote being cast. Similar changes occur every 10 years, when the post-Census remapping of the House takes place. But this time around, few others than the politicians are paying attention. Worries about terrorism and anthrax put everything else in the shadow.

And yet, because the parties are so even in strength, the line-drawing taking place now may well determine whether the House of Representatives has a Republican or Democratic majority, not just for two years but for the next decade.

Whichever party can gain an edge in the current redistricting will have an immense advantage.

Ironically, the final word in this vital political struggle is often held by unelected officials — federal judges. This week, for example, a three-judge federal court is scheduled to hear a dispute on the new congressional map for Texas.

Partisan stalemate in the Legislature left it up to District Judge Paul Davis, a Democrat who had decided not to seek re-election to the state bench, to draw the first, provisional version of the 32 districts Texas will have for the next decade — two more than its current delegation.

In early October, Davis had sketched a map that would have forced five Democratic incumbents either to run in Republican-leaning districts or to face each other. It would have virtually guaranteed Republicans, who now hold 13 of the 30 seats, a majority in the delegation.

But after a week of complaints from Hispanic groups, who claimed they were being denied proper representation, and pressure from Democrats, who said his map would doom their efforts to recapture the House, Judge Davis redrew his plan. The new version protects almost all incumbents and makes it likely the Democrats will emerge with either their current 17 seats or one more. Now the Republicans are crying foul.

Similar schemes are playing out in a couple dozen other states, usually for smaller but still vital stakes. Virtually unnoticed, politics go right on.

Climate lowers sage grouse numbers

The Oct. 11 Times-News carried an article on sage grouse. The headline statement quoted a retired biologist who obviously hates the cattle industry. The fact that he, Clair Braun, is presented as a biologist and expert we should pay attention to seems a little iffy. What sort of biologist is he? What is his area of expertise? Is it cockroaches? Sen slugs? The fact that he is some sort of biologist does not make him an expert on sage grouse or on cattle. The article repeats an oft-made statement, "An estimated 2 million sage grouse flourished... about 200 years ago." Now that's interesting. Who counted them? Scientists today dismiss data from ranchers as "merely anecdotal." So what makes 200-year-old anecdotal data any better?

There are two glaring omissions in every sage grouse population study I have ever seen. Namely, the effects of climate and the effect of fire suppression.

Two hundred years ago when we supposedly had these vast numbers of sage grouse, the West was still in the grip of the Little Ice Age. For anyone who takes the time to read history, the world climate crashed in about 1215 A.D. and, except for a brief warming from 1350 A.D. to 1560 A.D., it stayed cold until 1850. Then it warmed until about 1935, when on an average it started getting cold again. So what am I saying? The decline in sage grouse numbers matches the changing climate at the end of the Little Ice Age.

You want more sage grouse? For starters, we now have the wrong climate. The second factor is fire: If you read the diaries of early technical survey parties, you find they were plagued by wild fire, set by Indians mostly. We don't do that any more. So we now see the declining sage grouse matching changing climate and the cessation of near annual burning with gross changes in the vegetation as a result. One would argue that grazing has helped keep the ecological niche for sage grouse intact longer than might otherwise have been the case.

We just don't know, and pontifical statements by anti-cattle people, tree huggers, grocers and assorted technical prostitutes will not give any of us scientifically valid data on which to base sage grouse-related decisions.

We need some genuine science prior to any public decisions adversely affecting the economy of the West and hard-working ranchers who sustain that economy. CARL E. AUSTIN Oakley

Americans, hold your chins up

I just want to say I am proud to be a part of this great and heroic country. When I drive around and see our flag proudly displayed on most homes, vehicles and businesses, my heart swells and I get a lump in my throat and tears to my eyes as I witness this sincere effort in all of us to honor, love and cherish our privilege of being a part of this patriotism.

I am thrilled that my children have the opportunity to participate in learning what America is all about at first-hand and how I have watched them literally learn to appreciate what we all have taken for granted, which is our freedom. When my children, including my 4-year-old daughter, ask questions about the events of Sept. 11, 2001, I answer their questions honestly and encourage them to think about what we can do to help.

There are a million large and small parts to play in helping, but each part is just as important as the last or the next. To my friends, neighbors and families of the Magic Valley, yahoos to you for all that you do and represent. I am proud to be standing right next to you all. Thank you for the example you set for my family.

Also, last but not least, let us all not let those cowards in terrorism bring us down or destroy our confidence. Because we know that this is wrong, so therefore, hold your chins up high and proudly claim we are proud to be Americans, and let us support our president's efforts in ending this heinous act against all of us, hopefully once and for all.

Kudos to animal shelter staff

Applause for all the staff at the animal shelter and for all their efforts.

As my daughter and I volunteer weekly at the Twin Falls Animal Shelter, we have found the staff to be very caring and compassionate toward all the animals. I have been pleased with our experience there.

Applause for the animal shelter as it is a great place to adopt an animal.

Interest rate cuts aren't the simple solution; the Fed isn't in control

WASHINGTON — These are times of shattered illusions. The attacks of Sept. 11 destroyed our sense of invulnerability, and now the mythology of the "New Economy" is receding before the reality of declining jobs and profit. To this list may soon be added the Federal Reserve's presumed power, which — during the reign of Alan Greenspan as Fed chairman — has grown to immense proportions in the popular imagination. People began thinking that by will-timed changes in interest rates, the Fed could steer the economy along a path of low inflation, high employment and rapid growth.

It is doubtful Greenspan ever bought into this line. He has seen too many business cycles to harbor a false sense of control. But the success of his stewardship has inspired unrealistic expectations, even among economists, about the power of monetary policy — changes in interest rates and money supply orchestrated by the Fed and other government central banks.

The Fed has cut interest rates nine times this year. The Fed Funds rate has dropped from 6.5 percent in January to 2.5 percent, the lowest level since 1962. Yet the economy was still deteriorating even before Sept. 11.

Japan is Exhibit A in the limits of monetary policy. In 1999, the Bank of Japan lowered its official interest rate to zero. It is still zero, though the BOJ temporarily raised it back to a whopping 0.25 percent (that's a quarter of 1 percent). All the while, Japan's economy sputtered. It is now in recession. Low interest rates are supposed to spur more lending and borrowing. But in Japan, total bank lending has declined for 45 consecutive months.

Government over-regulation

and bad banking practices have left devastating legacies. So much of the economy has been protected from competition by regulation, subsidies and cartels that it's hard for new companies and industries to get started. This shrinks the pool of potential borrowers. Meanwhile, Japan's banks still suffer from all the poor loans they made in the "bubble economy" of the late 1980s. They aren't eager to lend.

Even zero interest rates can't reinvigorate the economy if other conditions are sufficiently unhealthy. "The economy" is simply the baffling amalgam of businesses, financial markets, government regulations, cultural attitudes and foreign trade. Monetary policy is only one part and influence. This is true in Japan and, no less, the United States.

Just because the Fed is lowering interest rates does not mean that businesses and consumers will borrow more. Although the U.S. economy is more flexible than Japan's, the Fed is still hostage to the aftereffects of the longest boom in American history. Reflecting a slowdown in "expansion plans," banks' commercial and industrial loans have dropped $27 billion in 2001. The story is similar for consumer borrowing. In 2000, it rose 9.3 percent, but since June, it has stagnated. One reason is that monthly debt payments (including home mortgages) were near a record level. For now, lower interest rates may mostly help consumers and businesses pay down debts.

Moreover, the Fed's power over interest rates is loose. If you ask what the Fed does, the answer is underwhelming. It buys and sells U.S. Treasury securities on the open market. When it buys, it adds to the money supply. The funds it uses to pay for securities increase the reserves that banks can use to make loans. As a result, interest rates tend to drop. But through this process, the Fed directly sets only one market interest rate: the Fed Funds rate. It's the rate on overnight loans, mainly among banks.

All other rates respond — haphazardly and inconsistently. On mortgages and bonds, the effect is small. In September 2000, conventional mortgage rates were roughly 8 percent; now they're a bit below 7 percent. Because mortgages and corporate bonds are long-term loans, their interest rates reflect investors' views of future inflation and risk. By contrast, some bank lending rates follow the Fed closely. This year banks' "prime rates" (which sets rates on many business loans) has dropped from 9.5 percent to 5.5 percent. But credit-card rates have hardly moved. Banks say this lending involves higher administrative costs.

In the wake of the terrorism, we've been told to be patient. This will take time, it's said. The same advice applies to the economy: recovery may take time. Although the Fed's actions also influence the economy through other channels, these connections are even more inexact and unpredictable than the borrowing-lending channel. Over the past decade, all the gritty and inconvenient details have been lost in the adulation for Alan. The Fed is presumed to be able to avert almost any economic danger. This is, alas, an illusion.

OWYHEE CANYONLANDS: Keep Them Wild and Off the Beaten Path

The bighorn sheep can navigate trails two inches wide... and leap ten feet on special hooves that spread over sharp rocks and serve as nature's shock absorbers.

The bighorn is just one of the natural treasures that can be found in the Owyhee Canyonlands... a stunning mosaic of sagebrush, juniper forests, and wildflowers that's home to redband trout and sage grouse and provides world class recreation for river runners, hikers and hunters.

But irresponsible dirt bikers veering off designated trails are tearing up this pristine landscape.

Real protection means wilderness, wild and scenic rivers and healthy habitat for wildlife.

Idaho Senator Mike Crapo has helped pull together a working group to pursue permanent wilderness protection for the Owyhee Canyonlands. Call Senator Crapo at 334-1776. ## AROUND THE VALLEY

Idaho Power to hold public session

TWIN FALLS - Idaho Power Co. will hold a public meeting tonight in Twin Falls to find out what people think about how the company should plan for power needs.

The company updates its 10-year power supply plan every two years, company spokesman Dennis Lopez said. The 10-year plan evaluates how to match power supply with growth.

An issue to be addressed this year is whether the company should plan power supply needs based on average or low water years, Lopez said. Identifying resources to meet power supply demands without turning to the volatile wholesale market to buy power also will be reviewed.

The company's Integrated Resource Plan is required by the Idaho Public Utility Commission. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. at Best Western Cavanaugh Hotel in Twin Falls.

Committee approves Mountain Home projects

MOUNTAIN HOME - Funding for projects at Mountain Home Air Force Base has been approved by a House-Senate Conference Committee, U.S. Sen. Larry Craig said.

The Military Construction Appropriations Subcommittee met Tuesday and agreed to bolster funding for the military.

The agreement included the following projects:

- $10 million to the 366th Wing of Mountain Home AFB to fund military family housing. This funding will replace 56 housing units which were built in the 1950s and provide for parking, fencing and related needs.

- $14.8 million to the 366th Wing of Mountain Home AFB to repair of aircraft parking ramp that is currently unable to structurally support the wing's aircraft.

Craig hailed the subcommittee's support of the family housing. This funding was unusual, given the fact this item was not included in the Bush administration's original budget request to Congress and was not included in the Defense Authorization Bill, Craig said.

Now the bill will go to the House and Senate floors for final passage.

"There is no question our military needs to have the resources available to make certain our men and women in uniform don't live in housing that is run down and falling apart," said Craig, R-Idaho.

Kempthorne seeks Camas disaster status

BOISE - Gov. Dirk Kempthorne has asked U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman for agricultural disaster declarations for Camas County and three other counties.

The governor's action is in response to a request from commissioners in the four counties.

In a letter to Veneman, Kempthorne wrote that severe alfalfa hay, barley and wheat losses were reported by the Farm Service Agency.

"The early frost, drought, heat and wind conditions had an adverse effect on crops," Kempthorne wrote. "The Farm Service Agency reported that Camas County only produced 61 percent normal yield on alfalfa hay."

Other counties included in the governor's request were Oneida County, where it was reported that losses of greater than 70 percent for wheat, barley and alfalfa hay occurred; Franklin County, where alfalfa hay yielded a 72 percent loss and a 40 percent loss in production for wheat and barley; and Power County, where a 55 percent production loss was reported for wheat.

If approved, farmers in the counties will be eligible for USDA emergency loans and other assistance programs.

Expert discusses adolescent depression

HAILEY - Child behavior specialist Frank Andrews will discuss adolescent depression during a brown bag lunch Thursday.

The free lecture will be held from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. at St. Luke's Center for Community Health, 309 S. Main St. in Hailey.

Jerome minority relations group defines itself

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News reporter

JEROME - The Mayor's Council on Minority Relations wants "to create an opportunity for Jerome to become a community that values the unique differences of each of its citizens."

Does that sound like a tall order? That was the vision statement adopted at Monday night's meeting.

Mayor Dennis Moore created the council on minority relations in August. Members rolled up their sleeves, adopted bylaws and worked through vision and mission statements as they began to define their role in the community.

The council wants to provide a forum where citizens can bring interculturally related problems and concerns. The group would then serve as an advocate or liaison between the aggrieved or concerned citizen and the public agency or official and work toward solutions to the problem.

Council hopes to help community value diversity

By functioning as an advocate, the group hopes that agencies and officials will take complaints about their agencies and employees more seriously and work cooperatively toward solving the problems.

The council also sees its role as identifying the need for and recommending intercultural training for public officials and personnel in the community's public agencies.

Leon Kyle, co-chairman of the group, suggested members might want to encourage citizens in the community to get acquainted interculturally. He offered suggestions:

- Set up Spanish classes for the community at large.

- Offer English as a second language for Spanish-speaking residents.

- Create a directory of both Spanish-speaking and English-speaking businesses on the Northside, including Jerome, Eden and Hazelton.

- Host a cultural fair including a music fest, foreign film festival, dances of many cultures and invite American Indian dancers.

- Include a "Mexican rodeo" with the Jerome County Fair.

- Throw a "Taste of Jerome" feast with samples of the various ethnic foods represented in the community.

- Print and distribute pamphlets in both Spanish and English on how to get city and county services, how to register to vote, how to become a citizen.

- Encourage people to get to know other religions by attending a different church than they normally do.

- Encourage kids to stay in school; help both the Spanish-speaking and English-speaking students to locate college scholarships.

Discussion also centered on whether to tape record the meetings.

City Administrator Travis Rothweiler said he wanted to record the meetings in the interest of an accurate record of what happened.

Michael Shaw, human rights coordinator for the Association of Idaho Cities, said that the tape recorder "might scare people away" from bringing problems to the council.

Rothweiler said people could address the council without giving their names, as it would not be a public hearing. People would not be required to be sworn in, he said.

Lupe Cisneros, co-chairwoman of the council, said people need to be warned that when they bring problems to the council, "there may be repercussions. Then people can decide if they want to talk anonymously or not."

Rothweiler said he would check with an attorney to determine the legality of allowing anonymous statements to the council.

Fund helps families of Mountain Home service men

The Times-News

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE - Declaration of war on terrorism has resulted in the deployment of military members throughout the country, but it also has generated a tremendous increase in demonstrations of patriotism and support for the U.S. military.

Many community agencies and individuals have asked how they can assist deployed military members and their families who remain here.

Operation WarmHeart is one option. Operation WarmHeart is a nonprofit organization operated by unit first sergeants at Mountain Home Air Force Base, designed to support families in need. Primarily, this support is in the form of non-perishable foods, diapers or checks for food at local grocery stores.

"Since the incidents Sept. 11, our bank accounts have dwindled quite a bit," said Master Sgt. Kevin Curti, Operation WarmHeart treasurer, in a news release. "First sergeants are asked to provide health, welfare and moral support to our military members and their families. This program helps us to provide a little more, and we have an immediate requirement for monetary donations to continue the WarmHeart operations."

Although the group holds

WarmHeart fund

People can make cash donations to the Operation WarmHeart fund through any Wells Fargo Bank location by identifying the Mountain Home AFB "Operation WarmHeart Auxiliary Account." People can mail checks or correspondence to Operation WarmHeart, P.O. Box 4188, Mountain Home AFB, 83648. The tax ID number for Operation

WarmHeart is 82-0501307. People may coordinate donations of diapers, non-perishable food items or cash through squadron first sergeants or by calling Thomas at (208) 587-4619 or Taylor at (208) 362-1443. Off-base organizations also may call (208) 828-5800 and ask for an on-call Operation WarmHeart representative.

annual fund-raisers to raise money for the program, more than half of the program's annual operating budget comes from donations. According to program vice president, Master Sgt. Kristine Thomas, the need varies from year to year.

"The program was going strong when I arrived at Mountain Home in 1987, but there's going to be more of a need this year because of world events," Thomas said. "Deployments increase the necessity because of higher child-care costs when one spouse is deployed. Families may also be used to extra hours or second jobs that might not be possible with only one parent home."

Installation chaplains, commanders or unit first sergeants can identify and verify families' need for assistance, and the program works with referrals from several other agencies, including the McClellan Family Support Center, Air Force Aid and civilian counterparts.

"Operation WarmHeart can be a catch-all for other assistance organizations," said Master Sgt. Jan Taylor, Operation WarmHeart president. "For instance, Air Force Aid has specific guidelines of the support they can provide. If they can't meet all the need, we can help by providing food so grocery money can go to something else."

The characters are all from Bram Stoker's 1897 novel, but Dracula and Professor Van Helsing, the vampire-busting Dutch academic who's one of the heroes in Stoker's story, are very different in Nigro's version.

"It is no coincidence, I think, that this was the era of Jack the Ripper," Nigro has written. "The intense sexual repression of the Victorian age helped nurture in Stoker a violently erotic and complex nightmares of fantasies that emerged in the great vampire book. Even as Stoker conjured Dracula, he seems to secretly admire him, to envy his power and freedom, and his hypnotic effect on women."

Nigro is a prolific 51-year-old Ohio native - he's written 190 plays - who specializes in mystery tales with heavy comic touches embroidered on the surface.

Capitol commission plan cuts expected debt

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Financing plans for restoration of the Idaho Statehouse approved by the Idaho Capitol Commission Monday came in about $8 million less than expected thanks to creative use of state assets.

Through investing the appropriation from lawmakers for the restoration and using income from state Endowment Fund timber sales, estimated private donations, and income from a new Statehouse renovation license plate, the commission was able to reduce the bond amount needed for the project, Commission Chairman Roy Eiguren said. He met with members of The Times-News' Editorial Board Tuesday. Originally, the commission planned to finance the $64 million project by issuing $32 million in bonds and using the $32 million appropriation the Legislature granted last winter for the project.

The commission's plan, which must still be approved by lawmakers, allows the bonded indebtedness to be reduced to $24 million.

"We've got a plan, in my estimation, that is very thorough with a cost estimate that is very reasonable," Eiguren said.

Central to the mix is the $6.9 million in interest the commission hopes to gain over three and one half years through investing

Hal C. Quinn

Hal C. Quinn, 77, of Twin Falls, died Monday, October 15, 2001, at Birchwood Care Facility.

Hal was born January 13, 1924, in Montpelier, Ind. to Chester J. and Hallie Dewey Quinn. He was raised in Montpelier with a brother and a sister. The family moved to Nampa where Hal finished his last 2 years of school, graduating in 1942. Immediately after graduation he joined the Air Force and served our country during WW II as a gunner instructor. After being discharged he lived in California for a few years, returning to Idaho in 1949. In September, 1950 Hal hired out on Union Pacific R.R. (following his father's 52 years of service on the R.R.). Hal loved his work on the R.R. very much. On December 9, 1971 Hal slipped on an icy train track and fell under the moving train. He was able to pull himself away except for his right leg, which the train had run over. He ended up having the leg amputated thus ending his career on the R.R. Hal married Gail Douglas on July 20, 1960 in Elko, Nevada. On December 31, 1964 they were blessed with a baby girl, this baby whose given name was Lori, was instantly the light of his life and received the nickname from him as his "little tiger". They were always together and he loved her unconditionally and with all his heart. In 1972 Hal and Gail purchased the Rainbow Lodge at West Magic Reservoir, which they ran until 1987. In 1995, Hal lost his voice due to the aftermath of cancer. In 1996, he was diagnosed with Alzheimer's, a battle he couldn't win, but bravely tried.

Hal is survived by his wife of 41 years, Gail of Twin Falls; his beloved daughter, Lori of Boise; his grandchildren, Amanda, Dustin, Carrin and Chyenenne, who Hal never really knew; his son, Terry of Rupert; and his sister, Shirlee (Marvin) Frandsen of Fresno, California.

He was preceded in death by his parents, one brother and an infant child.

Memorial services for Hal will be held at 3 p.m. on Friday, October 19, 2001 at the Elk's Lodge located on the Highway 93 Golf Course. The family suggests memorials be given to the Alzheimer's Association, Boise, Treasure Valley Chapter, 1111 S. Orchard #200, Boise, ID 83705.

In tears we saw you sinking And watched you fade away. Our hearts were almost broken We wanted you to stay. But, when we saw you sleeping So peaceful, free from pain, 'How could we wish you back With us. To suffer that again, It broke our hearts to lose you, But you didn't go alone. For part of us went with you, The day God took you home."

Today marks deadline for canyon road proposal

By Karen Terrell
Times-News correspondent

ELKO, Nev. - An Elko County Commission meeting today in West Wendover includes the continuing discussion between the county and the U.S. Forest Service regarding repairs to South Canyon Road near Jarbidge.

The U.S. Forest Service gave the county until today to come up with a proposal for road work in the area where the road washed out during a 1995 flood.

The meeting, at 2 p.m. at the West Wendover Library, is one of two meetings that commission members are holding today. The other meeting is at 9 a.m. at the Montello Community Hall in Montello.

The county had proposed an initial plan for interim repair work to South Canyon Road, but in previous meetings the Forest Service called the proposal "too extensive." The Forest Service submitted a subsequent plan that was turned down by the county.

During a meeting earlier this month, Forest Service spokesman Jim Winfrey presented a letter to the commission from Bob Vaughn, supervisor of the Humboldt-Toiyabe National Forest.

In the letter, Vaughn said the county needs to submit another proposal for road work in order for an environmental study to begin. The county argued that its plan for "interim work to the first washout" would not require an environmental analysis.

During the West Wendover meeting, the commissioners will also discuss the Jackpot Fire Department, which includes a draft proposal from the Nevada Division of Forestry to provide coverage until a new fire chief is hired.

Debbie Armuth from the county administration office said Tuesday afternoon that the town has been without a full-time fire chief for several weeks and there will be discussion about the position today. An interim chief has been in place in Jackpot, she noted.

The agenda for the Montello meeting includes a host of Montello Town Board matters, including a report on the development of a park, solid waste issues and a discussion of repairs to the community hall. Also on the agenda are matters pertaining to the Jarbidge Town Board.

Burley Council favors power plant

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Positive comments flowed at the Tuesday meeting of the Burley City Council when discussion turned to the recent tour of Cogentrix gas-fired electric power plant at Rathdrum.

Several city council members, the mayor and area residents visited the plant in northwest Idaho recently, in light of discussions about a similar plant being built in Burley. This summer, Burley city officials entered into a site agreement with Cogen Power Inc. of Salt Lake City to explore the possibility of building such a plant in Burley.

The Rathdrum plant generates 270 megawatts of electricity, Burley Mayor Doug Manning said. The plant under consideration in Burley would generate between 300 and 320 megawatts, he said.

While the plant would not be a large employer — the expectation is that about 25 people would work at it — the jobs are high paying, Manning said. The estimated annual payroll of a plant in Burley would be $2 million, Councilman Gordon Hansen said.

Manning also pointed out that the construction phase of the plant would be economically beneficial to the community. In Rathdrum, some 300 construction workers were employed for 18 months while the plant was being built, city officials said.

"This could perhaps be the biggest project in the history of this area," Manning said.

Local businessman Mike Aitchley was one of the people who visited the power plant.

Aitchley told the council a power plant "would be very beneficial to our area."

Noting that it had been a long time since the area received any good economic news, Aitchley said construction of a power plant in Burley "would boost the morale of the citizens and have a positive effect on our community."

Hansen and Councilwoman Adria Masoner both said the plant would be a plus for the community.

And, Hansen pointed out, the costs to the city would be "minor." The city would be expected to provide the land, about five acres, if the plant is constructed. But, a councilman pointed out, the city would quickly recoup costs associated with giving away some land in the utility charges that the company would pay to the city.

City officials have identified land near the sewer plant to be used for the power plant, if it is built.

"This could perhaps be the biggest project in the history of this area."

— Doug Manning, Burley mayor

Council members also Tuesday agreed to some of the traffic flow requests made by officials with Wal-Mart concerning traffic on Overland Avenue, East Fifth Street North and the frontage road which runs parallel to Overland Avenue.

However, a fix to the traffic flow problems at the outlet near the D. L. Evans Bank must still be worked out.

"The D. L. Evans Bank site is still the most dangerous intersection," said City Administrator Mark Mitton. "We need to continue working on that."

Mitton recommended that the council approve traffic flow questions for three other exits, following a meeting he had with Wal-Mart personnel and representatives from Wal-Mart's engineering company, TLC Associates.

Those sites are at East Fourth Street North and Overland Avenue, at Jack in the Box and East Fifth North Street and at a proposed site further east on East Fifth North.

Wal-Mart is planning to construct a super center in Burley by expanding upon the existing store.

Councilman Dave Ringle pointed out that Wal-Mart officials were "very friendly" at the last meeting with city officials. A September council meeting with a Wal-Mart engineer became fairly heated when some traffic flow information was disputed.

Wal-Mart agreed to pay all the costs associated with another traffic light, if a light is deemed necessary, Ringle said.

In other business, the council:

- again tabled action on an employee compensation plan.

The holdup this time centers on the desire by some council members for specific information about the cost of living increase in the Burley area in the past year as well as a comparison of salary increases allocated by city councils in communities similar to Burley.

The council has budgeted for a 3 percent raise for all city employees but has not authorized that raise. The plan is for raises to be given based on employee evaluations conducted by supervisors.

- heard the next council meeting will be held on Monday, Nov. 5, because Tuesday, Nov. 6 is election day;
- heard that the municipal airport received a clean bill of health in its Federal Aviation Administration inspection conducted last week;
- learned the city will receive an airport improvement grant to pay for a new rotating beacon and will receive federal funding to pay some costs of a new airport master plan.

Albion water bills will go up soon

By Mary Lynn Bristol
Times-News correspondent

ALBION — Residents will see their water bills increase Nov. 1. The City Council earlier this month approved an amendment to an ordinance to raise water rates from $20.50 to $25 per month from November through April and from $25 to $30 from May to October.

The council also agreed with City Engineer Kerry McMurray's proposal to change the policy so future rate increases could be made by resolution rather than amending the ordinance.

Mayor Jim Kelley and the council have called for an audit of city practices, procedures, and records. City accountants Garth Beck and Ed Evans will conduct an examination of city records to ensure they're accurate and complete, and that all billings and payments have been correctly entered or posted.

Other City Council business:

- Acting City Clerk Heather Yeaman reported that Jim Kelley and Don Danner had filed to run for mayor and Rick Mahoney and Lon Marrs had filed for the one open council position. The election will be held from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Nov. 6 at Grange Hall.

Rescheduled

Due to the November election, the Albion City Council has rescheduled its November meeting. The council will meet at 7 p.m. Nov. 8 at the city offices.

- The council turned down a request for a referendum election Nov. 6 to allow liquor to be sold by the drink because the petition was not received 45 days prior to the election.
- Lorna Calinette thanked the city for repairing the street in front of her residence and fixing a nearby streetlight. She said she had the electric company check a city electric line running through one of her trees which could create a hazard. She said she was told it would be better and cheaper to remove the tree and plant a new one than to trim the tree. The council told her to put her request in writing.
- City Maintenance Supervisor Stewart Waldemar presented a report on work done in September. He said he was working on bids to put new American flags on some of the city's poles.
- The council approved city office hours as 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Beet hauling will go on during holidays

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Not wanting to seem "anti-business," the Rupert City Council will be working with the Amalgamated Sugar Co. to make sure sugar beets are hauled safely from a beet dump at 700 N. Meridian.

City Administrator Roger Bagley said at Tuesday's council meeting that the sugar company, whose route runs through a residential and school zone, had offered to run during school holidays in order to put children at less of a risk. The council accepted that offer.

No other restrictions will be made on the hauling, said City Attorney Rick Ball.

Members of the Minidoka County Highway District said that a permanent truck hauling route may be established in the future, but for this year they were trying to find the safest route possible.

The council also discussed replacing two police vehicles — one sport utility vehicle for the K-9 unit and one unmarked sedan for the department's second-in-command, Todd McGhie.

Chief Ken Fedders asked the council to allow him to work with the budget as he sees fit. The council approved the request to advertise bids for the two police vehicles.

The sedan would be black in color, Fedders said, allowing it to become a marked car if needed.

It would also have wiring in place to accommodate lights on the top at a later date, he said.

The new vehicles would replace an existing K-9 vehicle and a car that has not been used. It would also rotate one car down to the reserves, Fedders said.

Councilman Mike Brown said that initially he had reservations about the unmarked car. However, he said, he checked with another police department and it is not an uncommon practice for the second-in-command to have an unmarked car.

Brown said he supported the purchase as long as the car was capable of rotating into the regular fleet at a later date.

In other council business:

- Discussion of a police commis-nity advisory council was tabled until all council members could be in attendance. Councilman Layne Rutschke was not present.

Santos Garza, a Rupert resident involved in forming a council, agreed that all council members should be present.

"A resolution was made by title one regarding the alternation, construction and demolition within Rupert's historic district."

City elections will be held Nov. 6 at the city building, 624 F. Two city council seats are up for election.

Candidate offers cash and a job to political rival

BOISE (AP) — Mayoral candidate Harley Brown offered to give his political rival $5,000 and a job in his administration if he would quit the race.

The offer outraged candidate Rod Beck, a former state senator, and has prompted police to investigate whether Brown broke any law.

"It is inappropriate for a candidate to do something like that," Beck said Monday. "If it's not a crime, it should be a crime."

Brown said his proposition to Candidate Rod Beck was not a bribe.

"It's a business deal," he said. Brown also said he was upset that Beck called the news media about the offer.

"He said he even called me back to tell me what he's going to do," Brown said.

Beck reported Brown's Saturday-night phone call to police. The case is still under investigation, department spokesman Rich Wright said.

the Legislature's appropriation. Another key component is the $581,000 average annual return from the Endowment Fund timber sales expected to help pay the annual $1.8 million debt payment between 2005 and 2025. The rest of those payments will have to come through legislative appropriation.

In addition, a consulting firm hired by the commission said about $2 million in private donations could be expected to help with the renovation.

Commission members also expect another $300,000 to come from sales of commemorative license plates the state will offer in recognition of the Statehouse's centennial in 2005.

Eiguren briefed members of the Burley Rotary Club on the restoration project, which has already begun with the cleaning of the Statehouse's granite exterior.

Different parts of the capitol will undergo different levels of work, Eiguren said. Some parts will be restored to "their original splendor," others will be restored to near-historic state, but updated with some modern considerations taken into account, and some areas will be completely remodeled.

For example, Eiguren said, a part of the third floor of the building which has a now-covered barrel-arched ceiling will be restored to its original use as public space.

As well, the governor's office and governor's reception area will be restored to their original condition, he said.

"We are returning public spaces to public use," Eiguren said.

While the capitol was "the technological marvel of its time," when completed in 1912 and other parts in 1920, the building has not been properly maintained, the commission believes, necessitating the major renovation.

Eiguren said the master plan involved a "comprehensive look at the building." Some 78 experts were involved in the analysis of the building's exterior, he said.

When finished, the building will not be fully compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act, Eiguren said. Because the capitol is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, it does not have to be fully compliant, he said. However, plans call for 80 or 85 percent of the building to comply with the ADA.

Interior work is to begin in 2003, Eiguren said. That will prevent the Legislature from meeting in the building for its 2004 session. Alternative meeting sites are already being evaluated by another committee, he said.

Sept. 11 attacks lead to new militia group interest

SEATTLE (AP) — Not since Y2K came and went with little more than costly computer crashes have militia groups, everyday survivalists and conspiracy-minded "patriot" organizations been more at the ready.

And never in recent memory have those who prepare for the apocalypse felt more justified in their resolve.

Butch Razez, a member of the Ydima County Militia, says people sometimes used to avoid him on the street. But since the Sept. 11 attacks, he says he's being bothered constantly for advice on such things as emergency food, medical supplies, gas masks and chemical suits.

"Militias have been trying for years to get everybody prepared," Razez told The Seattle Times. "Now it's not just the old militia people saying it. It's the Red Cross."

At least 40 people have signed up for Constitution Party's "family defense" classes, which plan to teach everything from medicinal powers of cayenne pepper to finding a safe zone in a nuclear blast or terrorist attack.

"We see this as a new type of war, a direct attack on the American people," said Sandra Swanson, a leader of the party, which, among other things, seeks a return to a U.S. dollar backed by gold or silver.

"If you're in Washington (D.C.), and you're the president or the Cabinet, you have a safe place to go. The average American does not. We're teaching simple preparedness."

Militia of Montana founder John Trochmann said he has received calls from New York to California seeking biological-warfare suits.

"We normally sell 500 bottles a year, but we've sold that in a month," Trochmann said. "We're having stockbrokers, lawyers, even doctors calling us from New York City asking if we have any gas masks."

Sales have jumped at prepper businesses, including Emergency Essentials in Oregon, Utah, which sells emergency provisions.

"We've seen a 500 to 600 percent increase in sales," said owner Dave Sheets. "I don't see a general panic or anything. But this is reality."

Buhl, Filer match federal agriculture grant funds

TWIN FALLS — Two Magic Valley towns are putting up matching funds for U.S. Department of Agriculture grants. Filer plans to match $49,350 of federal money with $40,000 in order to upgrade sidewalks near the Filer Elementary School, UBA spokesman Dan Fraser said Tuesday.

City of Buhl also received $40,000 to put toward a new ambulance. Buhl will foot $50,000 of the bill toward the emergency vehicle.

Public entities, nonprofit corporations and tribal governments were eligible to apply for the grants, which for the entire state of Idaho added up to $1.35 million. The grants were to fund essential community facilities.

"We really got a lot more communities funded than we thought we would," Fraser said.

One reason was that most were located in counties designated as disaster areas. Filer and Twin Falls County had been named a disaster area because of the ongoing drought.

Adventurer to speak Thursday in Ketchum

KETCHUM — Twin Falls native Alan Perry will take armchair adventurers on a trip through the snow-capped rainforest area contained in Bolivia's Madidi National Park on Thursday.

Perry will present the slide show at 7:30 p.m. in the Clarion

Inn Conference Room.

Perry, a biologist who worked for five years to inventory and protect the area, explored the area by foot, Jeep, horse and canoe.

The area, thought to be one of the most biologically rich spots on the planet, encompasses cold forests, dry tropical forests, humid lowland rainforest, savanna, wild rivers and lakes. It is home to more than 1,000 species of birds, 44 percent of the New World species of mammals and 38 percent of neotropical amphibians.

Cost is $5 for Environmental Resource Center members and $10 for non-members. Those who become members the night of the show are admitted free.

Court suspends Jerome attorney

High court says lawyer misrepresented facts

The Times-News

BOISE - A Jerome attorney has been barred for six months from practicing law in Idaho by the state Supreme Court for misrepresenting facts to the high court and a client as well as neglecting to reply to court orders.

Darren J. Guthrie was suspended from practicing law for 180 days in an Aug. 9 order. After the suspension, his work must be overseen by a "supervising attorney" for two years before he can be fully reinstated, said a press release from the bar counsel for the Idaho Bar Association.

But Guthrie, contacted via telephone Monday, said he doesn't intend to practice law again.

"I've decided to change professions," he said, declining to specify his new line of work.

The suspension stems from Guthrie's representation of Dale J. Langford, who was appealing a vehicular manslaughter conviction in the death of 21-year-old Christina Joy Carter.

In June 1998, Guthrie, according to the press release, told Langford in a letter that a motion for a reduction of his sentence had been filed and that a hearing had been set, when no motion had been filed at all.

Guthrie also failed to respond to several letters from the Supreme Court on behalf of Langford advising Langford was responsible to Gooding County for the cost of preparing his appeal after he retained a private attorney, Guthrie.

When ordered by the Supreme Court to show why he had failed to respond to the letters, Guthrie told the court it was not his responsibility to file for a reduction of Langford's sentence and that the time frame for doing so had expired before they met. The court rejected this explanation and banned Guthrie from practicing law in the state appellate courts for one year.

The Supreme Court suspended Guthrie after he admitted his statements to the court about his representation of Langford were false, said the bar association release.

"This has been going on for three years, and I decided it was a good time to come to terms with the bar and come to an agreement," Guthrie said Monday.

Langford's conviction and the resulting 4- to 6-year sentence were upheld by the Idaho Court of Appeals earlier this year.

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Three finalists who are vying to become the next director of University of Idaho Extension will interview in Twin Falls and Moscow, and by video links with other locations, starting Thursday.

Gooding considers Internet site

By Almee New
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - The city of Gooding is considering putting itself on-line as part of a web site that provides information about several states throughout the country.

Claudia Bitner, a representative from mystateusa.com, displayed at a recent city council meeting information that is available on the state of Idaho's site at mystateusa.com.

Bitner spent 18 months working with the Idaho Department of Commerce to create the site. Many states are represented on the site, including Idaho.

For a $750 set-up fee and $100 per month, Bitner offered Gooding the opportunity to have its own site, at which people could find out about city services and other local information.

"It would have school templates for the teachers so they could do cut-and-paste right off of the computer," Bitner said.

Also, the Gooding Police Department, as well as the Gooding Fire Department, would receive their own password for accessing needed information.

Another option would be to have a virtual tour of Gooding for people who would like to see the town.

City Councilwoman Sharon Siefert thought it was a great idea and would like to get together with the Gooding Chamber of Commerce, as well as the schools and possibly the recreation district, to see if they would like to share the cost.

Councilman Phillip Becker tabled the decision pending talks about the cost share.

In other city business:

- The first full week in November has been designated as the week for cleaning up the city.

"With all the trouble lately trying to get people to clean up their property, many will be glad to hear that the week of November 5 will be Fall Clean up Week," said City Superintendent Todd Bunn.

Gooding High School's government class is hosting a "Meet the Candidate Night," when Gooding residents can meet city council candidates and discuss local issues, said Rick Strickland with the Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m., Oct. 25, in the multi-purpose room at the high school.

Paul Kocosek, commander of the American Legion chapter in Gooding, told council members that the American Legion would like to take the broken flag pole originally located at the fairgrounds and have it repaired.

The repaired pole would then be set up at the American Legion hall on Idaho Street. The 60-foot flag pole will display an 8-by-12 flag.

- Alan Hansten with JUB Engineers said that the irrigation pipe needed for the Walker Center expansion will be delayed another three weeks and that he needs an "extension on the permits."

Hansten also reported that Idaho Sand and Gravel will be doing the 11th Avenue road extension for a cost of $18,544.

Parolee presses to overturn conviction on DNA evidence

POCATELLO (AP) - A man paroled after spending half his life in prison for the 1977 Blackfoot murder pressed the state Court of Appeals on Tuesday for a new trial to show DNA evidence proves he was not the killer.

Attorneys for Robin LePage told the three-judge panel that 7th District Judge James Herndon was wrong when he summarily dismissed petitions for another trial. Herndon maintained LePage had failed to show that the new DNA evidence would convince a jury to acquit him.

LePage, 46, served 22 years in prison for the sodomy and first-degree murder of 19-year-old Kurt Cornelison before being paroled in 1999. He escalated his demands for a new trial once the results of DNA tests conducted on him in 1997 did not match the DNA of semen samples taken from the Cornelison's body.

It is the second high-profile murder case in which DNA has been a key factor. Charles Irwin Fain was released from prison after spending nearly two years on death row for the rape and murder of a 9-year-old girl. DNA results showed he was not the rapist.

A New York native who was paroled to a cousin in New York, LePage had maintained that another death row killer, Richard Albert Leavitt, murdered Cornelison. But results of DNA tests on Leavitt's blood did not match the semen sample either.

Leavitt was condemned for the 1984 mutilation and stabbing death of Danette Jean Elg of Blackfoot. But that conviction was overturned last years because of improper jury instructions.

"The state has taken that decision to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Court upholds Aryan sentence based in part on racist beliefs

BOISE (AP) – The Idaho Court of Appeals on Tuesday upheld the prison term imposed on the former Aryan Nations security chief whose 1998 confrontation with a motorist and her son set the stage for bankrupting the white supremacists.

The three-member court unanimously rejected the contention of Edward Jessie Warfield that consideration of his racist beliefs in imposing the sentence violated his First Amendment rights.

Judge Karen Lansing, writing for the court, acknowledged the constitutional right of individuals to speak and associate with those of similar beliefs, racist or otherwise.

But she cited several previous U.S. Supreme Court rulings that did not prohibit consideration of racial hatred in criminal sentencing.

Warfield, 45, originally from Missouri, was on the Hayden Lake compound's perimeter with two other Aryan Nations members the July night Victoria Keenan and her son, Jason, drove by.

Their car backfiring prompted Warfield and the others to think the compound was being shot at. They chased the Keenans in a pickup, and when the car would not stop, they fired fire shots into it, driving it into the ditch.

Warfield allegedly went to the driver's window, grabbed Victoria Keenan by the hair, struck her in the arm with the butt of his gun, and called her a vulgar name and declared, "Because you're white, we're gonna let you live today."

In a plea bargain, Warfield was sentenced to five years in prison with no parole for the first two, and the incident laid the groundwork for the civil suit that resulted in the Keenans' being awarded $6.3 million in damages. Aryan Nations founder Richard Butler was forced to give up the compound and rights to the name in only partial settlement of the judgment.

WAR

Terrorism experts mull what lies next

The Orange County Register

SANTA ANA, Calif. — The United States has no estimate of the most likely type of terrorist threat that faces the country, despite repeated calls for one.

The FBI was asked to do the evaluation in 1999, but didn't. Now it is "an urgent imperative," General Accounting Office Comptroller General David M. Walker told a Senate committee after the Sept. 11 attacks.

Without it, government officials are unable to say what type of chemical or biological threat is apt to be used by terrorists against the United States.

Leaders of the defense and intelligence communities have said the new terrorist tactics are forcing changes in intelligence gathering, training and armaments.

"The FBI must think differently," President George Bush said recently. "Director (Robert) Mueller is causing them to do so."

For the past month, FBI officials say they have concentrated on preventing a second attack. They issue nationwide alerts when threats seem imminent but "we haven't set the likelihood of one (type) or the other" most likely to be used, said Paul Bresson, FBI spokesman in Washington.

Local, state and federal officials have planned for several years to deal in general with a variety of terrorist attacks. "In an earthquake," said Bob Berg, Emergency Services Coordinator for Anaheim, Calif., "we have simple answers" for the public. "We know what to do because we've done it before."

Potential terrorist attacks are "a vague situation that we've never experienced before," he said.

For example, Food safety is an emerging area of unease. A range of diseases can be transmitted to humans from food animals like cows or chickens to contaminants deliberately spread on restaurant salad bars.

But there is a vast shortage of inspectors, and two separate agencies are responsible for oversight. Local, state and federal agencies hold drills and plan for a variety of disasters, but there is no definition of "mass casualties" so no one knows if the preparations are being done as effectively as they could be. As few as 500 emergency patients could bring most hospital systems to full capacity.

Diagnostic laboratories aren't designed to handle the huge numbers of specimens that doctors are likely to demand be analyzed if a biological agent, like anthrax or smallpox, is accidentally or deliberately released into the general population. In Florida, several hundred co-workers of three people stricken with anthrax was enough to cause long lines at the local health facility while they waited for tests and antibiotics.

The federal government has stockpiled antibiotics, but what is the best way to distribute them in an emergency? How much money should be spent to expand the capabilities of laboratories and public health facilities?

Antibiotics for two million Americans are held in stockpiles, ready to rush to the scene of any attack.

But the General Accounting Office, which analyzes the operations and spending of federal agencies, said that without an overall picture of the threats most apt to happen — such as an outbreak of smallpox, the release of a toxic gas in an urban neighborhood — emergency workers, health planners and law enforcement lack a clear idea how to spend money, allocate equipment and train personnel.

After that, an anonymous letter would become "something that has to be screened and sorted," Swartz said. "You have to reduce and eliminate things like that."

But privacy advocates say the anonymity of government-provided services like the mail are a constitutional right.

"The ability to communicate anonymously has been repeatedly upheld by the Supreme Court," said David Sobel, general counsel of the Electronic Privacy Information Center, a Washington-based privacy watchdog group. "Any proposal to limit that right will have an uphill battle in the courts."

Even proposals that would penalize letters that have no barcode or return address are questionable, Sobel said. "You would raise constitutional questions if people were subjected to disadvantaged delivery because of it," he said.

Senate staff members line up in a Hart Senate Office Building corridor on Capitol Hill Tuesday to be tested for anthrax exposure. Anthrax was discovered in an envelope mailed to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

Jurisdictions overlap and there is a lack of coordination in some areas, according to GAO reports. When federal terrorist drills started in 1996, the question was "Who's in charge?" By last year, participants in a Denver drill on biological terrorism were a lot better prepared to handle a crisis, but the new question was "Who's in charge of what?"

The nation has several contingency plans for catastrophic emergencies. Officials say their effectiveness was demonstrated after the World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks. They drill for biological, chemical and nuclear attacks.

Antibiotics for two million Americans are held in stockpiles, ready to rush to the scene of any attack.

But the General Accounting Office, which analyzes the operations and spending of federal agencies, said that without an overall picture of the threats most apt to happen — such as an outbreak of smallpox, the release of a toxic gas in an urban neighborhood — emergency workers, health planners and law enforcement lack a clear idea how to spend money, allocate equipment and train personnel.

A big picture view of the overall terrorist situation would tell them "what you know at the time and what you don't know," said Raymond J. Decker, GAO director responsible for terrorism and other threats. "It's never going to be 100 percent. It's better than conjecture. You add to it. Over time you start to be wise about certain issues or aspects."

Currently, the GAO says, many agencies rely on "worst case chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear scenarios" to plan action and spend money.

It's an approach that tries to cover everything. But the possibilities are unlimited and there simply isn't enough money to pay for every eventuality. Instead, the GAO said, government planners should have the information to concentrate on "credible threats."

Since Sept. 11 the GAO has become the key agency that government leaders and news organizations have turned to for an assessment of the nation's preparedness. In 1999 it recommended that the FBI conduct an overall assessment of the most likely terrorist threats against the United States.

Bin Laden followers to be sentenced in NY

NEW YORK (AP) — The first convicted of carrying out Osama bin Laden's 1998 edict to kill Americans wherever they are found will be sentenced under extraordinarily tight security Thursday in the deadly 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa.

The four men were found guilty last May in a trial that laid out in detail what the government knew about bin Laden and his network of terror. Their sentencing will take place at the federal courthouse in lower Manhattan, just blocks from the smoking ruins of the World Trade Center.

U.S. marshals with shotguns guard the courthouse. Barricades block the adjacent street, and steel pots protect the building.

The four were arrested in the near-simultaneous Aug. 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. The attacks killed 224 people, including 12 Americans, and led to an international manhunt for top leaders of bin Laden's al-Qaida terrorist network.

The six-month trial attracted few spectators beyond government employees and the families of the victims. But the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks that have been blamed on bin Laden have spurred new interest in the trial and the evidence the government collected.

The defendants were the first convicted by a U.S. jury after bin Laden issued a February 1998 edict to kill all Americans wherever they are found.

They were convicted of conspiracy charges that alleged their actions were carried out in furtherance of bin Laden's order, or fatwa. Bin Laden was indicted in the embassy case but is believed to be hiding out in Afghanistan.

Trick-or-treat for used glasses this Halloween

DEAR ABBY: Please ask your readers to trick-or-treat for a worthy cause this Halloween.

We need thousands of volunteer "ghouls and boys" to collect used eyeglasses during the third annual "Sight Night," a program sponsored by Lions Clubs International and LensCrafters. The donated glasses will be recycled and delivered to needy individuals in countries such as Tunisia, Bolivia and Mexico.

In many developing countries, people have little or no access to eye care, and glasses may cost up to one month's wages. The outdated glasses lying around in your drawer may be a precious gift to someone in need.

Last year, Sight Night was a howling success. Volunteers scored up 86,000 pairs of glasses on Halloween. This year, we hope more groups such as Scout troops and school districts will help collect.

Lions Clubs have been collecting and recycling used eyeglasses for those in need for more than 70 years, and have partnered with LensCrafters since 1989.

Abby, if your readers want to scare up some fun this Halloween, urge them to give the gift of sight to kids and adults around the world!

PRESIDENT, 2001-2002 LIONS CLUBS INTERNATIONAL DEAR MR. MOORE: Gladly, I know my readers will take your worthwhile cause to their hearts, because it's an effortless way to do good deeds while having fun.

Readers, learn how youth groups can trick-or-treat for used eyeglasses by contacting your local Lions Club or LensCrafters; visit www.sight-night.org, or call the toll-free number 877-605-4242. If trick-or-treaters don't make it to pick up the glasses on Halloween, have no fear, Lions Club and LensCrafters accept used eyeglasses year-round.

P.S. For their safety, young trick-or-treaters should always be accompanied by an adult.

Drill bit bites through wall, gets French voyeur arrested

Did you read about that Frenchman Pierre Pompidou? He was arrested some time back. Hotel keepers all over Paris complained to police that somebody was drilling holes in their walls. In 1975 alone, 87 such holes, specifically. As is obvious, the culprit was undertaking this carpentry to experience the exhilaration of watching loving couples. Poor Pierre! In his last hotel, he got through the lobby all right with his brace and bit. But on his knees in his room of registry, with palpating heart, he pressed too hard, and the steel broke through with a snap. The woman in the next room was leaning against the wall. It got her right in the backside.

Secret admirer causes anthrax stir

FALLO, Nev. (AP) — A 59-year-old man who received a suspicious letter with amorous writings and women's lace panties turned it over to sheriff's deputies, who stored it in a biohazard barrel before determining it didn't come from a terrorist.

"It was from a secret admirer," Churchill County Sheriff Bill Lawry said. "We returned the letter and the underwear."

The Fallon man said he became concerned about the threat of anthrax contamination because the unsigned letter was mailed from Reno in a yellow envelope with no return address. Neatly printed on two pages, the sexually suggestive message and black thigh panties arrived Thursday.

"It just about blew my socks off," said the man, speaking on the condition he not be named. He said he had lived in the rural community only since September and few people had his address.

The woman who made the overture notified the sheriff on Monday when she learned that the letter had been turned over for investigation. She told authorities she was romantically interested.

Former Soviet Union: Anthrax breeding ground

U.S. officials say former Soviet scientists may be producing new anthrax

MOSCOW (AP) - From St. Petersburg in the north to the steppes of Kazakhstan, from small towns near Moscow to the Ural Mountains and a barren island in the Aral Sea - the old Soviet Union produced hundreds of tons of anthrax at its sprawling biological weapons facilities.

U.S. officials suspect that some scientists of the former Soviet Union who worked on lethal germs have or may be helping rogue regimes develop biological weapons.

Back in 1972 Moscow joined the Biological Weapons Convention banning germ warfare. Officials later admitted the country violated the treaty for 20

Members of the Merseyside Ambulance decontamination team await the arrival of postal workers who came in contact with a suspicious substance at a sorting office in Liverpool, England, Tuesday.

years, until then-President Boris Yeltsin signed an April 1992 decree promising to comply with the convention. Some research has clandestinely continued in later years under the guise of defensive programs, says Ken Alibek, who defected to the United States in 1992 after serving as deputy head of the huge Biopreparat venture linked to germ warfare.

The Soviet and then Russian biological warfare program was so vast that it employed up to 70,000 people by the time of its official termination. Among their achievements was developing anthrax said to be resistant to antibiotics.

Former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, in an interview Monday on CNN's "Larry King Live," said Russia was out of the biological weapons business.

"I would like to refer to today's statement by Russian officials, the minister of public health and another official in charge of chemical weapons, it's very important what they both said, that there are no programs for the development of biological weapons in Russia, there is only research for medical purposes,"

Gorbachev said. The country Gorbachev was running when it collapsed had many facilities, officials say.

Parents and students rethink college picks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Sixteen-year-old Bennett "Beano" Zylber is starting to think about college. He is not sure about a major - psychology, maybe - but he is certain of this: He is sticking close to home.

"I was thinking about Maryland or maybe upstate New York, but I really don't feel like I want to go outside of the state now," said the high school junior from Brookline, Mass. "I'm thinking of schools in my own ballpark, near my family."

In the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, some education experts expect that many students and parents may make the same decision in the months ahead.

"What we're seeing is more interest in being closer to home, and specifically not wanting to get on a plane. They'd rather do a nine-hour drive than a one-hour flight," said Michael London of College Coach, a Massachusetts company that works with high school students in helping them select and get into college. Bennett's mother, Emily Zylber, said she would support whatever decision her son makes but would be happy to see him attend college nearby.

"Given what's going on in the world, it does give you pause thinking about your child going far away," she said. "There is a feeling among many parents that they want to get to their families quickly if they need to."

Elsewhere around the country, Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, said the school has received some calls from parents interested in having their child close to - but not in - a big city.

"Some parents are evaluating how far they want their children to go to college. Talking to parents in Texas and Minnesota, we're hearing that," said Don Emmons, dean of admissions and financial aid at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, N.Y.

Cook is in a pickle no longer

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

A request from Shirli Bennett, of Twin Falls, who lost her recipe for Cinnamon Pickles, has generated loads of yummy response. Several recipes were printed last week. This recipe is from Verla Laughlin, of Twin Falls.

"I saw the plea for the pickles recipe in the paper," she wrote. "My granddaughter insisted I send this. I have made these pickles for years. I make my chunks real small. People love these. They have a different kind of crisp."

RED PICKLES

Use 2 gallons of oversized cucumbers, peeled and cut in small chunks with seeds removed. Cover with 2 cups of lime dissolved in 8 1/2 quarts of water. Let stand 24 hours, stirring occasionally. Drain and wash in cool water. Drain and soak in cold water for three hours. (I put them in the refrigerator when soaking in cold water.) Combine 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons alum and 2 small bottles red food coloring. Put pickles in and add enough water to cover. Simmer for two hours (do not boil). Drain. Combine 4 cups cider vinegar, 10 cups sugar, 10-ounce package Red Hot candies and 8 cinnamon sticks (tablespoon whole cloves). Bring to a boil. Pour over pickles. Put lid on container and let stand overnight. Drain. Reheat solution and pour over pickles for two more days. On the fourth day, reheat all pickles and liquid. Pack pickles in jars. Pour heated liquid over and seal. Water bath for 10-15 minutes.

Verla also sent another good recipe for the canning season. "It's wonderful," she wrote. "I only give this to people who truly enjoy it. It makes a nice and different present. In fact, some people hint for it. As Martha says, it's a good thing."

TOMATO SOUP

1/2 bushel tomatoes (21 pounds)
Make tomato juice. You should have approximately 40 cups of juice. In a pot, bring juice to a rolling point. Combine 1 1/2 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons plain salt, 1 tablespoon black pepper, 4 teaspoons onion salt and 4 teaspoons celery salt. Add to hot juice. Make paste of 2 cups flour and 1 pound butter (only), melted. Stir to remove lumps. Add paste to juice. Stir to combine. Again, bring to boiling point, stirring. Fill jars. Seal and process in water bath for 25-30 minutes. Makes approximately 10-11 quarts.

-From Farm Wife magazine, 1980

This global potato salad recipe, printed in the Los Angeles Times, is from the Chicken Iza restaurant in downtown Los Angeles.

ENSALADA DE PAPA

2 pounds baking potatoes
2 large carrots
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped pickled jalapenos
1/2 cup cooked or fresh peas
Cut the potatoes in quarters. Steam them along with the carrots until tender, about 30 minutes. Mash these together with a potato masher, adding a little salt and a lot of pepper, until smooth. The mixture will be finely mashed, but the carrots will show like flecks. Add the jalapenos and peas. The salad will be soft - no cubes of potato - and can be scooped into little mounds. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Betty Martin, of Paul, has lost her recipe for Corn Chowder, where you boil the cob with the soup.
Linda Burgess, of Twin Falls, would like a recipe similar to the broccoli soup at the Wok'n Grill.

PRIZED PUMPKINS

Sharon Dingman has grown a number of large pumpkins in her garden that she plans to sell, with the proceeds going to the camp. Anyone interested can call 734-2425.

Twin Falls woman's efforts help kids with cancer

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Want to meet the Great Pumpkin? He lives in Sharon Dingman's garden, where the pumpkins average between 75 and 100 pounds apiece.

Dingman moved into a new house last New Year's Eve. In the spring, she had to landscape from scratch. She did her research, visited local nurseries and mapped out her entire yard. She included what was already there and what she wanted to plant and where she wanted to plant it. Then, she installed sprinklers.

The soil was typical dusty white desert soil, common in Magic Valley. Dingman filled it deep and added grass clippings, and compost from local dairies. Then she planted a lawn, shrubs, trees - and set aside a sunny spot for her garden.

Her father, Archie Malone, of Jerome, likes to grow "big vegetables." In fact, Malone has been growing increasingly larger pumpkins every year for a long time.

"At the end of the season, he always selects out the largest pumpkin and saves the seeds from it," Dingman said. "As a result, over the years, his large pumpkins have gotten larger and larger."

Malone sprouted eight plants for Dingman in April. The baby pumpkin plants went into the ground in May. Dingman gave them plenty of water and, before long, the pumpkins had taken over her garden.

"They were happy where they were planted and grew like crazy," Dingman said. "In August when the weather was so hot, you could actually watch the pumpkins grow. There was a visible difference in size from one day to the next."

Now that the weather has turned cooler, the huge pumpkins are no longer growing, Dingman explained: "I have to use a wheelbarrow to move them."

Dingman is the typical small gardener. She likes flowers, shrubs and trees. In addition to her giant pumpkins, she grows gourds, flowers and cactus beans - a vine with leaves as large as a dinner plate. The vine grows 8 to 10 feet tall and looks like a small tree.

Right now, Dingman is planting bulbs for spring flowers. A nurse at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Dingman is also the director of Camp Rainbow Gold, a summer camp for children diagnosed with cancer that is held at Cathedral Pines in August. The children attend camp free of charge.

Camp Rainbow Gold offers cabin life, hiking, swimming, recreation, crafts, singing around a campfire and telling ghost stories. It serves 70 children and has about 60 volunteers. The cost of financing a typical camp session is about $40,000, Dingman said.

Dingman wants to sell her giant pumpkins for $50 each. If she could sell 10 of them, she said, that would pay transportation for the camp children. Anyone who purchases a pumpkin from Dingman "will have the biggest pumpkin on the block," she said, along with a tax-deductible contribution to Camp Rainbow Gold.

Dingman has gleaned suggestions from friends for growing pumpkins, and the skin on the pumpkins is thick and tough. You can use a Magic Marker to draw the face on the jack-o-lantern or a thin knife, like a fish-boning knife, to carve the pumpkins. Once the pumpkin is carved, use small white Christmas lights inside the jack-o-lantern. It will be safer than candles and, after Halloween is over, the pumpkin meat may still be good for pumpkin pie or bread.

To purchase or just look at the pumpkins on Dingman's property, call 734-2425 and arrange an appointment.

"And be sure to bring a camera," Dingman said.

Sharon Dingman wants to sell her giant pumpkins for $50 each. If she could sell 10 of them, she said, that would pay transportation for the camp children.

FOOD &amp; HOME

Change gardening as seasons change

When seasons change around here, they change overnight. One day it's hot enough for lemonade, the next day calls for hot chocolate. The garden's menu changes with the seasons, too.

Cooler days and nights means that plants aren't using water like they did a month ago. Cut water back to a good soaking every 10 days or so. If you're still got blooming perennials and annuals, they'd like their usual sprinkling, but only every few days, when they're actually dry.

Trees are beginning to drop leaves, so it's time to pick up after them. Rake all the leaves into a line. Run the mower with the bag attached over the leaf lineup. Dump the chopped leaves onto flower beds or the compost pile. Next spring, you'll have the nicest garden soil around.

It's important to keep leaves off the lawn because the lawn still needs light and air. Leaves will clog everything up and promote fungal diseases in the lawn. Raking, infrequent deep watering, a little fall fertilizer—one with less nitrogen—are all your lawn needs to get it through winter.

DEAR CATHY: I really appreciated the information about washing plants off before coming inside. What about the soil the plant is planted in? What do we do to rid the soil of unwanted pests?

GREEN THUMPRINTS
Cathy Walworth

—ROOTED

DEAR ROOTED: You know, I've rarely had a problem with insects riding in on the soil. I guess they hate the soapy bath so much that they abandon ship. In fact, I often water my inside plants with a teaspoon of LOC or Palmolive green to a gallon of water to keep bugs away. It works all winter for me.

There is the occasional uninvited soil insect that won't leave with just soapy water. That's when I make sure that the soil is completely dry on top before I water again. And then I add a tablespoon of vinegar to the water. Fungus gnats hate that. They need moist, rich soil to thrive.

If all else fails, you can use a granulated insecticide formulated just for houseplants. I've found it in the grocery store. It works, but it's awful to use because of the odor. It is definitely a last-ditch effort at my house. Thanks for writing.

TIP OF THE WEEK: You may have the most beautifully landscaped yard in the county—until fall, when your tree branches are suddenly festooned with gauzy, worm-filled webs. Similar to spring's tent caterpillar, the fall webworm builds its cottony refuges late in the season.

The good news is that, even though the webworms will voraciously consume the leaves in their webs, the damage typically comes late in the season, so the tree really doesn't suffer. The bad news is, unless you're a webworm yourself (or a completely objective, equal-opportunity nature lover), the webs are a larval eyesore. So what can you do? One approach is to spray the webs early in the season with Bacillus thuringiensis (BT). However, while this will kill webworms when they attempt to feast on your trees, it will also kill other caterpillars indiscriminately. As an alternative, you can remove any webs you can reach and kill their residents by dropping them into alcohol or kerosene.

What's bugging your garden? Write to Cathy in care of the newspaper or e-mail her at: cattwo@mtl.org

Follow these tips to get the best from fall pears

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder News Service

Bartlett pears generally are in season from about July through November.

Always ripen them in a bowl at room temperature. Then put them in the refrigerator to slow further ripening. Green and firm pears will take four to six days to ripen at room temperature (don't refrigerate at this stage). Pears turning from green to yellow and losing their firmness are ready to eat in two to three days (unless you prefer firm, crunchy pears). Golden yellow pears are the juiciest and most flavorful.

Handle ripe pears gently to avoid bruising. They will keep in the refrigerator for up to a week. To help cut or sliced pears keep their color, dip them into a mixture of 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 cup water. Poach or bake ripe but firm pears.

Use overripe pears as a base for a blended drink.

Pat Benz of Grosse Pointe, Mich., has been making this sausage and pepper medley for nearly five years. Originally from Dayton, Ohio, Benz found the recipe in "The Best of It's Simple" cookbook, by Dayton Daily News restaurant critic Ann Heller.

You can avoid peeling the potatoes if using red-skinned. Just scrub before chopping. To round out dinner, serve with a crusty bread and salad or cole slaw.

POTATOES, PEPPERS AND SAUSAGE

1 pound favorite sausage links such as hot or mild Italian or Polish

1 1/2 pounds mix of red and green bell peppers, washed
1 large onion, peeled
1 pound new potatoes, scrubbed

2-4 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Bring a large saucepan of water to a boil. Prick the sausages all over and blanch them 5-7 minutes to remove excess fat. Remove from the water. If the sausage is large links, cut into smaller portions. Remove the stems, cores and seeds from the bell peppers and cut them into 1-inch pieces. Cut the onion into 1-inch cubes. Fill the vegetables into a shallow casserole dish large enough to hold all the ingredients. Drizzle the oil over the vegetables and toss to coat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and place the sausage pieces on top. Bake 30 minutes, stirring several times. The tender and large sausage is cooked through. Remove from oven and serve. Makes 4 servings.

The Savory Pot Roast and Harvest Vegetables Includes in-season produce such as carrots, potatoes and celery.

Capture the flavor of autumn's harvest in this everyday meal

As leaves and temperatures fall, thoughts of mulled cider, warm sweaters and pumpkin picking are top of mind. Now is the perfect time to look for the season's fresh produce to add variety to everyday meals and special occasion menus.

The produce of fall is a delicious, colorful addition to any table. The key to cooking with fresh fall produce - whether it's squash, pumpkin or potato - is ensuring that it stays moist," advised Curtis Aikens, host of "Pick of the Day" on the Food Network. "Baking produce in sealed aluminum foil helps. Just sprinkle them with salt and pepper, cinnamon or nutmeg and then add a touch of sweetness - a bit of brown-sugar, honey or maple syrup."

Or try this great pot roast. SAVORY POT ROAST AND HARVEST VEGETABLES
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
3 pounds boneless beef bottom round or rump roast
1 can (14 1/2 ounces) Swanson seasoned beef broth with onion
3/4 cup V8 vegetable juice
2 cups fresh or frozen baby carrots
3 medium potatoes, quartered
3 stalks celery, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

1/4 cup water
Heat oil in saucepot. Add roast and cook until browned on all sides. Pour off fat. Add broth and vegetable juice.
Heat to a boil. Cover and cook over low heat 1 hour and 45 minutes.
Add carrots, potatoes and celery. Cover and cook 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Remove roast and vegetables and keep warm. Mix flour and water. Add to saucepot. Cook until mixture boils and thickens, stirring.
Serve with roast and vegetables. Serves 6.

Ham biscuits, plain and simple

By Walter Nicholls
The Washington Post

In Culpeper, Va., the typical ham "tea biscuit" consists of a thin slice of country ham folded within a soft, yeast roll.

At a church social in Wye Mills, Md., country ham is far more likely to be served on a firm, "beaten" biscuit. And bakery customers in Aldie, near Middleburg, Va., expect buttery, flaky biscuits.

When we asked chef Susan McCreight Lindeborg, co-owner of the Majestic Cafe in Alexandria, Va., what biscuit is best with country ham, she said, "my cream biscuit."

For a variation, add 2 tablespoons finely minced chives along with the cold butter.

CREAM BISCUITS
(Makes about 30)
3 cups all-purpose flour, plus additional for work surfaces

Sample a taste of traditional country cooking in this recipe

3/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 tablespoons baking powder
1/2 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons unsalted butter, cold and cut into 1-inch pieces, plus additional for the baking sheet
2 tablespoons finely minced chives (optional)
2 cups heavy (whipping) cream
About 3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted (optional) Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Lightly butter a baking sheet. In a large bowl, combine the flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Add the cold butter and, using your fingertips, work the pieces into the flour mixture until the butter is the size of oatmeal flakes. (If using chives, add them at this point.)

Add the cream and, working quickly, using your fingertips, mix until a soft dough forms.

On a lightly floured surface, using a lightly floured rolling pin, roll the dough 1/2 inch thick. Using a lightly floured 2-inch round cutter, cut out as many biscuits as possible.

Transfer the biscuits to the prepared baking sheet. Gather the scraps together, being careful not to overwork the dough, and re-roll the dough to cut out additional biscuits. If desired, lightly brush the tops of the biscuits with the melted butter.

Bake in the preheated oven for 13 to 17 minutes, until lightly browned on the bottom. Transfer to a wire rack to cool slightly before serving.

Britanny
PLAN 30-317
Living Area 150 sq. ft.
Garage 354 sq. ft.
Dormers 87 sq. ft.
2000 SERIES
www.associatedesigns.com

This design plan offers homeowner flexibility

The Britanny is a mid-size home with the possibility of up to five bedrooms. In this, it typifies one of several trends that have developed since the inception of Associated Designs' weekly column, 10 years ago.

In 1991, only 28 percent of new homes had four or more bedrooms. Now 36 percent do, despite a reduction in the average family size to 2.6 per household. Few buyers actually use all these rooms for sleeping.

In the Britanny, the two rooms to the right of the entry are conveniently located for alternate uses, such as home office or hobby room.

Light streams into the entry through a sidelight and transom. This naturally bright space is a junction for a multiplicity of rooms and hallways. On the left is the dining room (or parlor). Dining rooms have come back into favor in the past 10 years, while formal living rooms have dropped in popularity.

Windows fill most of two walls in the vaulted family room, and more light washes in through sliding glass doors in the nook. A gas fireplace tucked in the rear corner serves as a warm focal point when darkness falls or skies turn gray. This room typifies the great room concept that most families now prefer.

Working in the kitchen, you can keep tabs on goings-on throughout the family room, nook and patio. Cupboard and counter space are amply supplied, and the long eating bar keeps family members and guests out of the way while allowing them to chat with kitchen workers.

Laundry appliances are nearby, in a pass-through utility room that connects to the three-car garage. One in six new homes now has a three-car garage. Ten years ago, garages this large were rare.

Amenities in the Britanny's master suite include a large walk-in closet, dual vanity, private water closet, and an oversize walk-in shower. The master suite also offers direct access to the patio, and is well-isolated from the secondary bedrooms, reflecting yet another trend.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Department W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Britanny 30-317 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 350 home plans is available for $15. For more information, call (800) 634-0123.

Fireplaces often sap the home of heat

DEAR JIM: I know most fireplaces waste energy, but we love to sit in front of a raging fire. Are there any simple, low-cost things we can do to make it produce heat and to reduce the smoky smell in the room?

—THOMAS M.

DEAR THOMAS: People seldom realize the typical wood-burning fireplace sucks more heat out of a house than it produces. This makes the furnace run longer and drives up utility bills. Even though you feel toasty warm directly in front of the flames, the rest of the house gets very chilly.

There are several simple things you can do to make your fireplace much more efficient and change it into an overall energy producer and money saver for your home. Many of the same improvements also help reduce smoky conditions.

The two key improvements are: 1) reducing the amount of already-heated room air lost up the chimney and 2) directing more heat from the fire out into the room. By running your furnace blower on continuous air circulation, the heated air in the fireplace room will be distributed throughout your house.

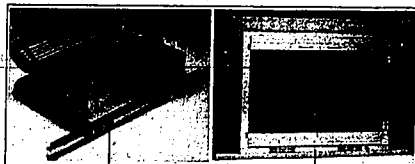

The most heated room air is lost up chimneys when there is no fire burning because of a nonexistent or poor sealing chimney damper. To seal the chimney and provide insulation, use an inflatable chimney pillow in my fireplace. It is clear plastic and you blow it up like a mini-air mattress.

Another option to block room air lost is a tight-sealing damper assembly that is mounted on top of the chimney with silicon caulking.

Long narrow cables hang down in the chimney to easily open and close the damper. Chimney exhaust fans also seal well and can eliminate a smoky fireplace condition.

Tight-fitting glass fireplace doors with adjustable air openings help when the fire is burning.

Some doors use magnets and Inflatable chimney pillow seals and insulates flue

Attractive cast iron fireback holds heat

There are many ways to improve the efficiency of fireplaces.

others use cams to keep them tightly closed. High-temperature silicon gaskets provide an excellent seal. Polished nickel, copper and pewter finishes are very attractive.

Install a heat circulating grate in the fireplace. The grate is made of steel pipes with a built-in fan that draws cool room air in one side and blows heated air out the other. The base is only 1 1/2 inches high so it fits under the glass doors. The heat output is as high as 40,000 Btu per hour. Models with a built-in thermostat and a variable-speed blower provide the most control over the heat output and the sound level. The thermostat turns the blower on automatically at 110 degrees and off at 90 degrees.

A heavy cast iron plate (fireback), placed in the back of the fireplace, gets very hot. This helps radiate more of the fire's heat out into the room before it is lost up the chimney. Many have decorative patterns cast into the face.

Write for Update Bulletin No. 553 - buyer's guide of 14 manufacturers of heat-circulating grates, glass doors, firebacks, chimney pillows and chimney damper/draft fans and efficient fireplace usage tips. Please include $3 and a business-size SASE. Write to James Duley, 6906 Royalgreen Drive, Cincinnati, OH 45244.

Missouri farmers pitch in to help New York City

By Sylvia Carter
Newbury

NEW YORK - Some Missouri farmers drove more than 1,100 miles to Manhattan in a truck hauling 6,000 pounds of pork. They had to change all the tires on the vehicle somewhere in Pennsylvania because of the heavy load.

And in Manhattan, they got a $55 parking ticket.

But the farmers, who had known hard times of their own, wanted to help New Yorkers suffering from the Sept. 11 World Trade Center catastrophe.

Along the way, the farmers had stopped in Indiana at Willie Nelson's 16th annual Farm Aid concert, which raises money to help save farms. At Farm Aid, the group sold pork chop sandwiches until they ran out.

PULLED PORK
4 gallons cold water
4 cups kosher salt
1 (8 to 10 pounds) skin-on, bone-in pork shoulder (see note)
For sauce:
1/2 cup white vinegar
2 tablespoons Tabasco
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon kosher salt
1 tablespoon freshly ground black pepper
Four water into a large stock-pot or heavy-plastic bucket. Add salt and sugar and stir until dissolved. Place pork in brine and set aside in a cool place to soak for 8 to 12 hours, or overnight.

Drain pork, rinse, then pat dry with paper towels. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Place pork, fattiest side up, on a rack set in a roasting pan. Pierce the skin (avoid piercing meat) all over with the tip of a sharp knife. Roast for 5 hours, then reduce temperature to 300 degrees and roast another 3 hours. Allow pork to rest for 20 minutes.

Carve, pull apart or chop meat and serve with sauce. For sauce, mix vinegar, Tabasco, sugar, salt and pepper in a small bowl. Serve sauce with pork on soft white buns with coleslaw. Makes 10 servings.

NOTE: Make the pork, even if you cannot find pork shoulder with the skin on.

However, don't let the butcher cut off the layer of fat all around the shoulder; it will caramelize into a crisp, golden-brown crust as the fat drains off. If you have a relatively small container to use for brining, you may use 3 gallons water, 3 cups salt and 3 cups sugar. That will be enough to cover the meat.

Pecans break out of their dessert shell

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder News Service

Pecans can be used in a wide variety of recipes.

Toast pecans before sprinkling them over your favorite green salad. Add pecans to cole slaw, fruit mixtures and chicken salad. For a colorful combination, toss spinach leaves with toasted sesame seeds and sliced fresh strawberries. Drizzle with a favorite vinaigrette, and sprinkle with chopped, toasted pecans.

For side dishes, substitute pecans for the usual almonds in green bean recipes or sprinkling them on top of a squash casserole instead of bread crumbs.

To give carrots an out-of-the-ordinary flavor, saute them with toasted pecans: Shred carrots and steam them lightly in the microwave. Then saute in a combination of sesame oil and olive oil — a little goes a long way. Add minced garlic and toasted pecans.

APPLESAUCE-PECAN BREAD

12 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1/2 cup dried cranberries
1 egg, beaten
1 cup applesauce, sweetened or unsweetened
1/4 cup vegetable oil
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour an 8 1/2-by-4 1/4-by-3-inch loaf pan.

Combine first seven ingredients in a large bowl. Stir in pecans and cranberries. Make a well in the center of mixture.

Combine egg, applesauce and oil; add to dry ingredients, stirring just until moistened. Spoon mixture into the prepared pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-40 minutes or until bread tests done. Cool in pan 10 minutes; remove bread from pan and let cool on a wire rack.

NOTE: Ocean Spray's new orange-flavored dried cranberries are excellent in this.

CRANBERRY CHUTNEY

12 servings
1 (16-ounce) can whole-berry cranberry sauce
1 cup pecans, chopped
1 cup celery, chopped
1 cup dark raisins
1 large apple, peeled, cored and chopped
3/4 teaspoon ground ginger

1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1/2 to 3/4 cup orange juice
Place cranberry sauce in a medium sauce pan. Warm over low heat until sauce melts. Stir in pecans, celery, raisins, apple, ginger and orange rind. Add orange juice to desired consistency. Remove from heat, cool and pour into four half-pint jars. (Chutney will keep in the refrigerator up to two weeks.)

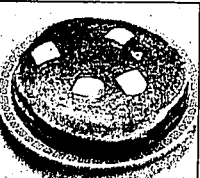

—Adapted from "Dining by Fireflies," The Junior League of Charlotte

PECAN CHOCOLATE PIE

3 cups sugar
7 tablespoons baking cocoa
1 (13-ounce) can evaporated milk
4 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flaked coconut
1 cup chopped pecans
2 unbaked 9-inch pie shells
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine sugar and baking cocoa in a mixing bowl. Stir in evaporated milk, eggs, butter and vanilla; blend well. Stir in coconut and pecans.

Pour filling evenly into the two pie shells. Bake for 40 minutes or until set around the edges. Cool on racks.

FOOD & HOME

Church project links fund-raising, fellowship

By Jan Uebelher
Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

In these worrisome times, it's a comfort to know that the women of North Shore Presbyterian Church in Shoshone, Wis., do what they do. They make soup, once a month. And you might say, pint by pint, they better the world.

The ladies run an important part of the church's In and Out Program. On the first Sunday of the month, church members are asked to bring in non-perishable food items to be donated to the Hunger Task Force and Second Harvest Food Bank. Church members buy soup on their way out.

It goes by the pint, frozen, selling for $3. The hard-working ladies don't like to say how much money they've made in the years they've been doing this, as this is a charitable endeavor. They will say that they sell 80 to 100 pints of soup a month, six to eight months of the year.

Here are some of the recipes, cut down to family size. All of them freeze well.

BORN TO BE WILD RICE SOUP

2/3 cup wild rice, well rinsed (5 or 6 times)
1/2 cup diced onion
1/2 cup diced celery
1/2 cup finely diced carrot
1 or 2 slices bacon, cut finely
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, room temperature (divided)
4 to 4 1/2 cups chicken stock or broth
1 cup whipping cream or evaporated milk

1 tablespoon flour
Salt and pepper to taste.
Parsley for garnish
In 3-quart kettle, saute rice, onion, celery, carrot and bacon in 2 tablespoons butter, until all ingredients are cooked, about 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in stock or broth. Heat to boiling and simmer, covered, stirring occasionally, for 40 minutes. Stir in cream. In small bowl, mix remaining butter and the flour, and whisk into soup-to-thicken. Cook-and-stir constantly, until soup bubbles and thickens, 3 to 5 minutes. Garnish with parsley. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The recipe comes from "Betty Crocker's Southwest Cooking," a 1989 book put out by Betty Crocker and edited by Hoffmann's daughter, Julie Turnbull.

REGGIE WHITE BEAN CHICKEN CHILI

1 large onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter or margarine
4 cups cubed chicken
3 cups chicken broth
2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, snipped
1 tablespoon dried basil
2 teaspoons ground red chiles
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
2 cans (16-ounces each) Great Northern beans

1 medium tomato, chopped (for garnish)
Tortilla chips (for garnish)
In 3-quart kettle, cook onion and garlic in butter until soft. Stir in remaining ingredients except chopped tomato and tortilla chips. Simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Serve with tomato and chips. Makes 6 servings.

If you like a thicker pea soup, use a full pound of dried peas instead of the 12 ounces listed here. The soup thickens after a day; it can be thinned if desired with some broth.

SPLIT PEA SOUP

1 meaty ham bone, trimmed of fat (about 2 pounds)
12 ounces dried green split peas

2 carrots, peeled
2 ribs celery
1 onion
1 parsnip
1 leek (3 inches of green left on, with root trimmed)
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 bay leaf
4 sprigs fresh thyme, or 1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
4 cups defatted chicken broth
4 cups water

Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons chopped flat-leaf parsley
Trim any fat from ham bone, and set aside. Pick over peas; rinse, drain and set aside. Cut carrots, celery, onion, parsnip and leek into small dice.
Heat oil in large, heavy pot over low heat. Add diced vegetables; cook until wilted, 10 to 12 minutes. Add peas; cook for 1 minute. Add bay leaf, thyme, tarragon, ham bone, broth and water. Bring to boil, reduce heat to simmer, cover partially and cook, stirring occasionally, until peas are cooked, about 45 minutes.

Remove ham bone, bay leaf and thyme sprigs. When bone is cool enough to handle, shred meat from it and return meat to pot. Reheat soup, season to taste with salt and pepper, and stir in parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Hearing impaired? Think again

Gooding High football players Cesar Ledezma and Tanner Carr don't trash talk or get drawn out by hard counts. They don't get caught up in the roar of the crowd or give up on plays anticipating whistles.

"They tune all that out. But they also don't know what it's like to hear their names called over the public address system after planting an opposing running back. Or hear a defensive switch called at the last minute. Or get fired up by the rah-rah halftime speech. Or even hear a coach or fellow Moretto yell at them after a mistake. They miss all that, too. They are deaf."

THOMPSON'S
TIMEOUT
Scott Thompson

That does not make them more heroic, brave or even the best of the Senator football players.

However, just by being on the football field, they do make the most of any excuse you can come up with to sit on the sidelines looking weak.

It isn't easy. Even with an interpreter, they are still in the dark much of the time.

Their interpreter can't trot onto the field between plays or go into the locker room. She can't be in two places at once. And there are two of them and only one of her.

"They have to pay more attention than the others, I guess," Moretto said.

Often times, they admit they don't always know what's going on.

Like last week, when they were supposed to be meeting the pesky press - me - instead they followed another group of players across the street to talk to the junior high team.

After a 20-minute search, I found them.

"While not a big deal to me, what must that be like every day?"

For Carr and Ledezma? For the coaches? For the rest of the team?

Fantastic it seems.

Moretto said there are no chemistry problems on the team and though it can be frustrating when he has to substitute for Carr or Ledezma instead of just yelling an adjustment to them, it's really no big deal.

Neither Ledezma, who starts at defensive tackle, nor Carr, who is a reserve defensive back, plays on offense; though Ledezma is also listed as a backup offensive lineman.

Offense is just too difficult with its snap counts, audibles and play calls, the pair said.

On defense, their teammates simply hold up four fingers if the defense is going to be in a 4-4 defense and five if they are going to line up in the 5-3. And sometimes a teammate will huddle them over if the coaches yell in the need to shift a little bit.

Ledezma, who is more of a team than Carr, said he decided to play football this year for the first time "because I can show women my muscles."

"Are they impressed?"

"Yeah, they are impressed with me."

"So, he has lots of dates."

"No, but they tell me I did a good job."

On the field, the highlight for the two was the Wendell game when Ledezma blocked a pair of field goals.

"I saw an opening and I went through it and raised my arms," he said. "I'm proud of myself."

Moretto said being deaf may serve as an advantage in this situation.

"He's quicker off the ball than others because he's not listening to the ball and not listening to the snap count," the coach said.

Their biggest contribution, however, should be as inspirations.

"Come out," said Carr. "Come out and play. You'll get more muscles. Instead of sitting on the couch and not doing anything, come out and play."

Is your excuse better than theirs?

Diamondbacks mow down Braves

Johnson helps lead Arizona to 1-0 lead

By Gerry Fraley
The Dallas Morning News

PHOENIX - Left-hander Randy "Big Unit" Johnson had the answers before anyone asked the questions.

Yes, his postseason losing streak had become bothersome.

Yes, he lifted the proverbial monkey off his back with a dominating performance against Atlanta in the opener of the National League Championship Series. Johnson held the Braves to three singles and had 11 strikeouts in a 2-0 complete-game victory on Tuesday at Bank One Ballpark.

"This is more like a gorilla, King Kong," Johnson said of the burden that disappeared. "It wasn't weighing on me, but I was going to continue to hear about it until I won a game."

It was Johnson's first playoff win since a 1995 American League division series while with Seattle. He had lost a record seven consecutive post-season decisions, creating questions about his postseason mettle.

"He came out to prove something," Arizona catcher Damian Miller said. "He faced a good lineup and took it to them."

Johnson had little room for error during a grinding mental battle against Greg Maddux, the four-time Cy Young winner. There were moments when Johnson almost lost his edge. Leadoff hitter Marcus Giles twice put right fielder Reggie Sanders against the wall on fly-ball outs. Center fielder Steve Finley also went near the 413-foot sign to catch two fly balls.

Atlanta centerfielder Andruw Jones can't catch a double hit over his head by Arizona's Craig Counsell Tuesday in the fifth inning of Game 2 of the National League Championship Series at Bank One Ballpark in Phoenix.

Cutthroats upset No. 1 Shoshone at Northside tourney

Just as Cutthroat coach Michael McCann predicted on Monday, the third-seeded Community School bounced top-seeded Shoshone into the loser's bracket of the double-elimination Northside Conference Volleyball Tournament, 15-12, 15-13.

"It was one of the first times this season when everything and everybody was all together," Cutthroat senior co-captain Katie Matteson said. "It was the perfect time to do it."

CSI meets UVSC to decide SWAC title

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Sitting in the driver's seat has been easy for the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team.

It's the ride that has been a killer.

The Golden Eagles begin their final Scenic West Athletic Conference road trip of the year today. And when it's over, they will have spent close to 20 hours sitting on a bus while covering more than 800 miles.

If all goes well, they will also have wrapped up their eighth conference title and hosting rights for the Region 18 tournament.

"I'm excited," CSI coach Ben Stroud said. "I just wish we didn't have 14 hours of bus travel before we play (Utah-Valley State College). I think one thing we have in our favor is that we're playing for the conference championship. I can use that as the motivation."

No. 2 CSI (34-2, 10-0) starts its journey with a trip to Rangely, Colo., for a match with lowly Colorado Northwestern Community College. The Spartans (1-28, 0-10) have just one win this season and haven't won a game in SWAC play. CNCC has managed just 187 kills this season and committed 192 hitting errors. Their tallest player is 5-foot-9.

The match is hardly an appetizer for the main course against UVSC on Thursday. The Eagles finish the trip with the College of Eastern Utah (9-19, 2-8) on Friday.

"I didn't want to travel the day of Utah Valley," Stroud said. "If all goes well, we'll get into Orem, Utah around 1 or 2 in the morning and get some rest. The other option was to stay overnight in Rangely and leave from there in the morning. I hate leaving the game on the bus. I've seen that happen so many times."

The Wolverines (34-3, 9-1) come in as the No. 4 team in the nation. UVSC has dropped just three matches this season, losing twice to CSI and a third against No. 1 Miami-Dade Community College at the Valley of the Sun Tournament in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Bruins beat Pocatello, earn state soccer berth

By Ethan Stone
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Bruins did it once. Then they did it again.

Facing rival Pocatello, with a state soccer berth on the line, Twin Falls goalkeeper Derrick Tenney successfully blocked three shots. In the game's deciding shootout, Twin Falls thwarted the Indians 3-0 in the penalty shootout to win the Region III boys' soccer title.

After regulation and two overtimes, the game remained tied at 3-3.

The District Four champion Bruins now head to the boys' state soccer tournament at Highland High School in Pocatello on Oct. 25-27.

Bruins coach Trent Felton was enthusiastic about the victory. "We needed this win," Felton said. "A loss would have meant HANSEN - The Murtaugh Red Devils played with a big lead and then a big deficit but in the end swept the Raft River Trojans 16-14, 15-11 to claim the championship of the Magic Valley Conference Tournament Tuesday.

Nothing rattled the third-seeded Devils. Giving away a 6-1 lead to eventually trail 14-12 in the first game didn't. Nor did falling behind 8-2 to open the second game.

And they certainly weren't awed by the No. 1 Trojans, who swept the Devils in the regular season.

"My philosophy has always been, even when I was the JV coach, that it doesn't matter where you start but where you finish," Murtaugh coach Marilyn Cornell said.

It just wasn't the Trojans' night, as they also fell to Hagerman 15-8, 16-14 in the second-place match later in the evening. Hagerman advanced to the second-place contest by virtue of its 15-6, 15-6 victory over host Hansen.

Murtaugh, Hagerman and Raft River all advance to the District Four Tournament Thursday in Hansen.

The Devils will take on the first-place team from the Northside, with both teams advancing to the state tournament. The winner of the match will go in as the top seed.

Hagerman will play the third-seeded Devils.

Both teams stepped on the field with determination. They'd just met on Thursday when Twin Falls stole away with the 2-1 win in Pocatello, and the Indians were bent on returning the favor.

Twin Falls jumped to the early lead in the first half when Thomas Mikessell drove in a penalty kick to put the Bruins up 1-0. The Indians answered in the 30th minute, however, when David Bunzow chipped a pass to Javier Huerta, who rocketed a shot by Tenney.

Highland thwarts Twin Falls girls

The Times-News

POCATELLO — If one didn't know better, the 4-0 score Highland's girls' soccer team posted against a game Twin Falls team sounds like a dominating performance from the Rams' defense.

It was, though much of the credit for the shutout posted by Janel Hall can go directly to the offense — or more appropriately, perhaps, to the midfielders.

With Highland's offense applying constant pressure, the Rams defense had an easy afternoon as the team wrapped up a Region III championship.

"It was a total team effort," said Highland coach Carlos Flores.

The Rams stretched a 1-0 half-time lead into a lopsided 4-0 victory in the final half as Twin Falls' defense grew tired against the constant pressure.

Twin Falls, however, wasn't exactly a willing participant in Highland's plans.

Behind strong goal keeping from Kelsey Skrudland and with a solid defensive effort from sweeper Darci Ward, the Bruins hung tough in the first half and surrendered only one goal — an easy chip shot from Shanda Nelson.

who found herself with the ball only a few feet from the goal in the middle of a mess of legs.

The second half, though, saw the Rams open things up and extend their lead.

Despite losing, Twin Falls is still alive, but the Bruins must win a play-in game against the

The Bees opened with a 15-1, 15-8 victory over No. 5 Blackfoot. Laura Asper led the Bees with nine kills, while Jessica Wilson chipped in four aces against the Broncos.

Bonneville followed with a 15-10, 15-6 victory over No. 2 Century, earning an automatic berth to the state tournament. Asper, Jen Maestas and Lindsay Nelson all delivered seven kills during the match. In other tournament action, the Burley Broncos posted a pair of victories over Jerome.

The Bobcats defeated the Tigers in three games during the first match, and followed with an 18-16 victory in a loser-out contest. The Bobcats trailed 14-8 in first game and 13-7 in Game 2 before coming back to win 15-12.

"The girls I'm pleased with how we played," Burley coach Hal Strain said. "I know we can play a little harder against Century. The second game against Century we played harder. Overall we had a good day at the tournament. We're excited about our chances. We're guaranteed that third seed.

No. 3 seed Filer meets Buhl in a loser-out match at 6 p.m. today. The winner meets Wood River at 7 p.m.

Filer moved past Gooding, 15-11, 15-9 to set up its match with Wood River. The Wildcats and Wolverines split in the regular season, but Wood River had little trouble with Filer on Tuesday, winning 15-9, 15-13. "It was a very good high school volleyball match," Wood River coach Reamy Goodwin said. "It could have gone either way. We're just happy to come away with a win."

Buhl eliminated both Declo and Gooding. The Indians lost to Gooding in the opening round but came back to win in the third round to set up their meeting with Filer.

POCATELLO — Highland volleyball coach Cliff Rhoades called it a "slap in the face."

He wasn't referring to being treated rudely. Rather, his team felt asleep and needed a hard shot to the cheek before it would wake up.

That slap came in the form of a 15-6 opening-game loss to Twin Falls in the second round of the Class 5A Region III Volleyball Tournament at Highland.

"They were just coming off an emotional win," Rhoades said, referring to the Bruins' 16-14, 13-15, 15-13 come-from-behind victory over Minico.

"And we had been sitting for about 30 minutes."

The Rams easily disposed of cross-town rival Pocatello 15-4, 15-1 in the first round.

The rust Highland picked up while waiting to play the Bruins was finally shaken off and the Rams eventually slipped past its opponent with a pair of strong offensive showings.

The final score of 6-15, 15-5, 15-12 was hardly indicative of the hard-fought battle on the floor.

Minico survived a determined effort from Pocatello. The Indians claimed a win in the first game 15-11, but the Spartans managed to hold off Pocatello with identical scores.

Minico will again meet Twin Falls Thursday at 5 p.m. with the winner advancing to play Highland.

loser's bracket. The winner of that match will play The Community School for the championship. A second match will be played if necessary.

No. 4 seed Camas County eliminated Richfield earlier in the day, 15-7, 15-11. Dietrich kept its hopes alive with a three-game win over Carey, 16-18, 15-8, 15-4. Richfield eliminated Bliss 15-3, 15-11 to set up its match with the Musers.

For The Community School, it was the biggest upset so far in a tournament full of surprises.

"We kept telling them all year long how good they were," McCann said. "After Dietrich blew us out twice, we just told them they were a better team than Dietrich. And they finally believed it last night. And we told them the same thing about Shoshone, and they believed it finally tonight."

The Cutthroats rallied from a 9-0 deficit in the second game to go on a 15-4 run over the remainder of the game. The Community School took its first lead of the game at 12-11 on a service ace by Lauren Dene.

Matrone dumped a ball into the right side corner, tying the game at 13-13 and did it a second time for a sidout at 14-13. A Shoshone hitting error ended the match.

"I thought they were going out," Matrone said of the kills. "I was going cross-curt but ... It was a little bit of luck."

The Cutthroats kept the ball away from Shoshone senior Monica Uhrig and took advantage of a short Indian front row when Uhrig was in the back row.

"We were pretty psyched from last night," Cutthroat senior co-captain Tami Parton said. "We knew we that we could beat anyone including Shoshone. We were just up and on."

Uhrig had seven of the Indians' first nine points in second game but just three after the Cutthroats started its comeback. She finished with 13 kills.

"We went in as individuals instead of as a team trying to make it happen," Shoshone coach Larry Messick said. "We were letting balls drop. We weren't going after it. But it's a double-elimination tournament. Now we don't look to Ketchum. We look to Dietrich or Camas and then we'll come back and hopefully get a chance to play them."

Wood River advances to face No. 1 seed The Community School for Thursday's championship. The Cutthroats (18-2) won their 18th straight with a 4-1 decision over Magic Valley Christian, getting two goals from Sean Higgins and one each by Josh Starek and Josh Sonland. The Cutthroats have tallied 140 goals on the season.

In loser-out games, Bliss blanked Filer 6-0 behind two goals apiece from Enrique Garcia, Barnabus Bowler and Jeff Norsteborn. Buhl ended Wendell's season 4-1 with goals from Cody Owen, Josh Strucek and two by Erik Van Patten.

In girls' play, Buhl upset No. 2 Community School 2-0, to advance against No. 1 seed and defending state champion Wood River today for the district title. Annie McCauley and Marla Higginson scored for the Indians. Declo defeated Wendell 6-1 to play The Community School today in a loser-out game.

Trailing the Hornets 3-1 at halftime, the relentless run-and-gun Wolverines struck to one formula: press their attack until the tall and powerful Bolognesi broke free of the Hornets.

And when that didn't work they went to plan two: shoot the ball as often as you can.

Fortunately, Bolognesi found the "net" on four occasions, because the Wolverines missed their other 25 attempts during the game.

The first 45 minutes of the second half the two teams played kickball with Wood River steadily asserting itself in the Hornets' zone. Then, at the 57th minute, Bolognesi slipped behind the Hornets' backfield on a breakaway to put in his second goal. The Wolverines needed just five more minutes before Bolognesi again found a lane, punting in a shot off the side of his foot for the third goal.

Bolognesi was the recipient of a fancy pass attack from teammates Marcus Acker, Ted Dankanyin and K.C. Rivera virtually throughout.

"I just have to credit my teammates, I can't take all the credit," Bolognesi said.

Declo, was the model of efficiency early on, as speedy forward Spencer Glenn found the net on Declo's first two shots of the game. They came at the 14th and 18th minutes as the Hornets rebounded from a 1-0 deficit for the 2-1 lead. The Hornets added their final goal on a penalty kick from Erik Schleiff in minute 40.

But it was all Wood River in the overtime; wearing down Declo until the ninth minute when Dankanyin stole a throw-in then passed across to Bolognesi, who dribbled left before shooting right for the win.

"We played well to start out with," Glenn said. "We just let it slip away. Yeah, it hurts, but as long as we play as well as we have the last two days, we should be right back up there."

Declo played without forward Marc Christensen, who suffered a torn ACL in his right knee last Wednesday. Christensen said he's scheduled for surgery on Friday and won't return to basketball until after Christmas.

place team from the Northside Thursday and Raft River will take on the second-place team. The winners of those contests also advance to the state tourney.

Even with the huge swings in emotion Tuesday, Murtaugh continued to execute its game plan of keeping the much taller Trojans off-balance by forcing them to move more than they would like.

And then when they had the chance, the Devils put the ball away.

Senior Anne Adolphsen led the team with 10 kills, followed by junior Tanyan Perkins with six and sophomore Jillian Cutler with five.

Cutler also led the team with seven points on her serve, including an ace followed by four more points in a row to open up the 6-1 lead early in the first game to give the Devils confidence that they could beat the favored Trojans.

"I think it gave us the courage that we could go out and beat them," Cutler said.

But Raft River didn't roll over. The Trojans battled back to tie the match at 7-7 and then 11-11 before taking a 14-12 lead on a stuff block by 6-foot senior Laci Thomas.

But those moments were too few and too far between from Raft River coach Dara Gardiner's perspective.

"We just played not aggressively enough," she said. "We were too tentative. We didn't have any hard hits. I think we just had too much to lose."

whistle blew for halftime, the clouds overhead seemed to be shadowing Twin Falls' hopes for victory. Although the Bruins controlled the ball for a majority of the half and had more shots on goal, the speed of Huerta and the solidarity of the Pocatello defense were daunting obstacles.

The Bruins stormed the field with renewed intensity in the second half.

Midfielder Steve Irwin held the center line for Twin Falls, narrowly missing two shots above the bar. In the 54th minute, Sanjin Hadzic was fouled outside the Indians' penalty box. On the free kick, he spirited the ball past the hands of Pocatello goalkeeper Casey Kemmerer, knotting it at 2-2.

But Huerta would have none of it. Minutes later, he surprised Tenney with a shot from nearly 25 yards out, finding the corner for the 3-2 lead. With only two minutes left in regulation, Twin Falls got the break it needed on a disputed handball call, which gave the Bruins another penalty kick.

Once more, Mikesell came through for the blue-and-white, blowing his shot past Kemmerer's outstretched fingers. Twin Falls' defense stopped the Indians' final scoring drive, and regulation ended at 3-all.

Two sudden-death overtimes passed uneventfully; after 20 minutes, a ball had yet to pass the hands of either goalkeeper.

The district championship then came down to a winner-take-all shootout. In a best-of-five penalty kick format.

The Bruins shot first, and Mikesell found the goal for the third time in the match. Bunzow looked to beat Tenney on the right, but the keeper knocked it out with a lunge to hold Twin Falls' lead. Next, Hadzic found the left corner, and Tenney stopped Huerta's shot, putting the Bruins up 2-0.

In the third round, Brad Kester's attempt ricocheted off the right post, but Tenney came through once more, pouncing on Pocatello's attempt.

Twin Falls' fourth shooter, Dylan Sinclair, ended the drama, finding the right corner and securing the victory 3-0. Afterward, the team-carried Tenney off the field on their shoulders.

"There's no way to know how they're going to shoot," a grinning Tenney said after the game. "You just have to guess."

Pocatello remains in contention for a state seed. The Indians will meet District Three's third-seed team in a play-in in Buhl at 1 p.m.

Coffee social will honor business woman

TWIN FALLS—In celebration of National Business Women's Week this week, The Times-News and the Zonta International Club of Magic Valley will honor the 2001 Magic Valley Business Woman of the Year.

Award winner Ruth Stevens Pierce is an accountant and founded the Twin Falls accounting firm Stevens Pierce & Associates in 2000.

The award recognizes a woman who has exhibited extraordinary efforts in promoting, expanding and improving the business climate of Magic Valley, organizers said. Other criteria included years in the business field, length of service in Magic Valley, community service and individual challenges a nominee has overcome.

The Times-News and Zonta will honor Pierce at a pre-work coffee social at 8 a.m. Thursday at Metropolis Bakery and Cafe, 125 Main Ave. E. Donations will be accepted to benefit the United Way's Sept. 11 fund.

Job seekers stand in line at retail giant's new store

POST FALLS—Hundreds of people are hoping to get jobs at a new Wal-Mart Supercenter in Post Falls. Applicants who showed up to apply early Monday morning waited three hours or more before seeing an interviewer. A number of people were still turned away for lack of space.

Those who made it through the initial screening will be back early next week for a follow-up interview.

Jobs are especially hard to come by in the Idaho Panhandle, where unemployment is 7.7 percent. Wal-Mart interviewers estimated they saw up to 400 prospective employees before noon Monday. The store plans to hire about that many people.

Interviewers opened the doors early to accommodate people who had formed a line by 7:30 a.m. Cheryl Lang was among those who found themselves at the back of the line, waiting patiently for a seat at the interviewer's table.

She wants a job in the vision department but admits she has no experience. Lang said she and her husband recently sold their Osburn home to locate in Post Falls, in part because of job opportunities like Wal-Mart.

"The economy is going down in Osburn," she said. "The whole valley is struggling." But if Monday was any indication of the rest of the week's traffic in the hiring office, the competition will be stiff for positions in the new store, scheduled to open in February.

Valley building jumps in July

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Million-dollar Ketchum houses, a spate of Twin Falls apartment building and a dairy processor's new Jerome dehydration plant in July boosted Magic Valley's construction sector toward a stunning 68.1 percent gain over year-earlier building values.

Selected areas of Magic Valley finished July with an estimated $28.3 million in overall building activity.

The value of projects receiving building permits in July beat July 2000's total by $11.5 million for combined building types in surveyed areas of the valley, according to data compiled in Wells Fargo Bank's recently released statewide report.

That performance reversed the negative trend that predominated in the first half of the year.

Construction values valleywide were up a small but encouraging 5 percent in January compared with year-earlier levels, then

Times are tough in tool town

Bruce Hills, president of Syst-A-Matic Tool and Design Inc., stands in the milling area of the company on Friday. Hills has laid off about a quarter of his work force of 60 from his fully automated shop that sells high-tech components for other automated assembly lines, but said he hasn't fared as badly as other companies in the region.

Weak economy, global competition hurt U.S. tool, die industry

The Associated Press

MEADVILLE, Pa.—The weak economy and new global competition are squeezing the tool and die industry, dominated by U.S. companies for more than a century.

Evidence of the shift in fortunes is easy to find in and around Meadville, proud of its nickname as "Tool City." There are hundreds of tool and die shops in and around Meadville and throughout northwest Pennsylvania.

Many shops have laid off as much as a third of their workers, with 14 straight months of declining manufacturing and companies reporting their worst years in decades.

In Crawford County alone, where Meadville is, 36 companies have asked for special federal assistance for employees laid off because of foreign competition.

Tool and die shops are the manufacturers for manufacturing, shaping the metal molds and other finely calibrated pieces of equipment used to make everything from toys to tiny electronic components. Traditionally they are small, family-owned businesses with anywhere from a handful to perhaps 200 employees.

"America has enjoyed more than a hundred years as the dominant force in this industry - we damn near invented it," said Paul Koch, an associate professor of engineering at Penn State University.

Computerization and other advances in technology are allowing new players to pierce the insular industry.

"This is a whole new playing field and it remains to be seen if the one- or two-man shop is going to understand the new market forces," Koch said.

Koch is a fourth-generation tool and die man. His son is the fifth to follow his great-grandfather, an emigre from Germany who settled in Pennsylvania and set up shop.

Experience and trust are vital assets for the shops. Manufacturers rely on a die, or mold, to produce thousands of an identical product. If the die is faulty, a company can lose millions of dollars.

However, the hand-operated heavy machinery once used to produce dies has been replaced by computers, complex software and robotic equipment to meet new, even more demanding manufacturing requirements.

"The tolerances and specs we are using now are just incredible," said Don Douglass, representative of the National Tooling and Machining Association for northwestern Pennsylvania. "We are able to do incredibly sophisticated design work with computer models and work with customers better than ever before."

And while the experience of generations of toolmakers cannot be exported, the new technology can be - and has been.

The result: Countries like China, where low labor costs have attracted big manufacturers, are becoming a presence in the tool and die business.

"We started seeing Chinese competition about five years ago," Koch said. "They are now buying the same state-of-the-art machinery we have here, built in the U.S., Japan, Sweden, Germany."

Kurt Dusko, president of Engineered Plastics in Lake City, toured tool and die shops that make molds in China.

"I expected to see dirt floors, people in peasant garb, poorly trained," he said. "The workers were wearing hair nets, gloves and operating sophisticated robotics systems. It scared me."

Dusko was allowed to record operations at Chinese shops on video and has been showing the tape to other shop owners at monthly meetings in Pennsylvania.

"It shocked a lot of people, I'll tell you that," he said.

China still only commands 1.7 percent of the mold market, according to the industry association. But other countries, including Canada, have a large part of the mold market. There are other competitors, too, in Italy, Portugal and Japan.

NTMA, said manufacturers who have been competing internationally for years have learned it is easy to export the software developed domestically to plants where labor is cheaper.

"Many people have been living in this unreal world, not realizing that the relationship with buyers has changed," he said. "The free markets phenomenon is only a few years old, but I think the walls of the box have been knocked out. People see our borders gone and ask, 'Wait ... we're competing with the world!'"

This is a whole new playing field and it remains to be seen if the one- or two-man shop is going to understand the new market forces.

— Paul Koch, associate professor at Penn State University

Bank income plummets

Knight Ridder News Service

MILWAUKEE—U.S. Bancorp said Tuesday that third-quarter net income plunged 93 percent, as the bank boosted reserves by more than $1 billion to cover loans that beleaguered airlines and manufacturers might not be able to repay.

At the same time, another bank doing business in the Magic Valley market—Wells Fargo & Co.—posted earnings gains, as lower costs and falling interest rates bolstered revenue from lending.

Wells Fargo, the nation's fourth-biggest bank, said profits jumped 42 percent as profit margins on lending widened.

U.S. Bancorp, the nation's eighth-largest bank, generated net income of only 2 cents a share, down from 37 cents a year earlier and far short of Wall Street analysts' expectations.

"We are clearly disappointed with the performance of the company on a number of fronts," said David Moffett, U.S. Bancorp's chief financial officer, in a conference call with stock analysts Tuesday. "But we believe the actions that we took in the third quarter as well as in prior quarters will serve us well now and in the future."

After the weak earnings report, which the company had warned investors about on Oct. 5, U.S. Bancorp stock closed up 56 cents at $17.40. The company's stock is down about 21 percent from the day before the warning, and off 22 percent since the announcement last year of the merger of U.S. Bancorp and Firststar Corp.

In the merger, Firststar took the U.S. Bancorp name and moved its corporate headquarters from Milwaukee to Minneapolis.

U.S. Bancorp said it used about $313 million to cover a higher level of loan charge-offs in manufacturing, transportation, communications and other

PHOENIX—Arizona Attorney General Janet Napolitano has sued Denver-based Qwest Communications International, alleging the company defrauded customers by placing unauthorized charges on their phone accounts.

Napolitano also said that when customers complained about or contested the charges, Qwest refused to credit their accounts or continued to charge them for unauthorized services.

Qwest—which also sells phone service in the Magic Valley—said it does not tolerate misleading sales tactics and that it credits accounts of customers who believe they were misled.

Microsoft promises retraction letter after ad

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY—Microsoft said it would not repeat an advertising campaign that questions competitor Novell's commitment to support a key piece of software.

It also promised to send a letter to 3,100 Novell customers retracting claims made in the ad. The software makers reached the deal Monday.

Novell, which makes networking software, is suing Microsoft in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City over the ad. Microsoft mailed fake cereal boxes to Novell customers that asked when Novell's premiere product, Netware, would expire. The ad implied that the software would be costly and time-consuming to maintain, Novell spokesman Kevan Barney said.

Novell dropped a request for a restraining order after Microsoft agreed to the retraction letter Monday. The letter will include a passage drafted by Novell.

Barney said the company still seeks damages for false and misleading statements. The advertisement parodied a Captain Crunch cereal box and contained Microsoft software used to integrate the company's products with Novell products. The box bears the title, "Server Crunch."

Spokesmen for both companies said they did not know of any customers who had switched companies or products because of the marketing campaign.

Microsoft spokesman Jim Desler said the ad's statement that Novell is "shifting its focus from software development to consultancy services" is based on Novell's merger with consulting firm Cambridge Technology Partners.

The ad suggests that Novell's operating system will not be around for very long and that the company will not provide technical support because of a stronger focus on consulting, Barney said.

"Competition is fine, but when they start making things up and making false statements, that is not fair advertising," he said.

The original ad appeared in August. Desler said, Microsoft offered an olive branch in September, sending a retraction letter to customers.

Microsoft will send another letter reiterating the retraction.

Stocks make small gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street got some better-than-expected earnings news Tuesday, but managed only a tentative advance amid lingering doubts about the overall health of companies and the economy.

Analysts said the relatively low prices of some stocks were attracting buyers, but those discounts weren't enough to discourage selling in the absence of concrete indications that business is likely to strengthen in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

After the market closed, Intel met third-quarter expectations and IBM exceeded forecasts by a penny per share. The market fluctuated throughout the session in anticipation of the reports, but analysts said the companies' earnings were unlikely to trigger a rally because both forecast a difficult fourth quarter.

"I think investors realize... you can't react to today's environment alone. You have to put on your binoculars and look out ahead," said Steven Goldman, market strategist at Weeden & Co.

industries. Another $712 million, which the company said is linked to potential trouble in the airline industry after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, was set aside to cover possible future losses.

"Our assessment was we should be prepared for an environment that was not going to recover any time soon," Moffett said.

U.S. Bancorp has about $700 million in loan exposure to the airline industry.

The addition to reserves to cover potentially bad debt cut into U.S. Bancorp's earnings by $655 million after taxes.

U.S. Bancorp's net interest margin — the difference between what the bank pays in interest to depositors and what it makes on loans and investments — rose to 4.42 percent in the third quarter vs. 4.32 percent a year earlier.

Moffett said he expects per-share earnings to return to about 40 cents in the fourth quarter.

San Francisco-based Wells Fargo had net income of $1.16 billion, or 67 cents a share. Lower interest rates accounted for tomers to take out new mortgages and made it cheaper for the bank to raise funds it used to lend money, the bank reported. Wells Fargo said it received a record $67 billion in mortgage applications during the quarter.

Wells Fargo increased its losses provision for potential bad loans by $30 million, to $455 million, but said it continues to assess its exposure to industries hurt most by the terrorist attacks.

Wells Fargo stock fell 58 cents Tuesday to close at $40.19.

Wells Fargo's reporting is delayed by several months, so July's numbers are the most recent available.

For perspective: In July 2000, builders and owners bowed to price tags on planned new houses in Cassia County. And in the city of Twin Falls, commercial projects and new-home values made strides. But the rest of Magic Valley dragged down July 2000's score, and the valley finished the month with construction values 32 percent lower than in July 1999 for combined types.

In July this time around, Gooding, Hailey, Ketchum, Sun Valley, rural Blaine County, Jerome, Shoshone and Twin Falls all improved on their year-earlier values for combined construction types. Only Cassia County, Rupert types and rural Minidoka and Teton Falls counties lost ground in July.

A few parts of the valley are not included in the bank's survey. In the valley's major city, a respectable collection of commercial projects, a hot home-building scene and a spate of new apartments helped Twin Falls' construction sector in July to a 5.6 percent advance over year-earlier building values. Here's a sampling of July activity in Twin Falls' commercial sector:

• A Johnny Carino's Country Italian restaurant — 7,290-square-foot and worth $381,608 — at 1921 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. part of a canyon-rim development.

• Independent Meat's $150,000 repair of a fire-damaged truck shop-and-wash-bays at 2072 Orchard Drive E.

• A good deal of activity in the telecommunications sector, including tower, equipment shelter or office projects by NTC Idaho Inc., Verizon Wireless, Sprint PCS and U.S. Cellular.

• Montana Express' construction of truck-parts storage at its 1874 Highland Ave. E. trucking operation. The new 5,000-square-foot structure is valued at $97,200.

On the regional home-building scene meanwhile, the areas of the valley surveyed issued permits for 67 new single-family homes in the month, up barely from the 66 of July 2000 and down from the 79 of July 1999.

At the same time, the average estimated value of those Magic Valley homes shot up to $260,688 in July — an impressive 59 percent rise from the $163,853 of a year earlier and also beating the $213,724 of July 1999.

But the valleywide numbers don't exactly tell the whole story. In the pricey Wood River Valley, many new homes for sale shined there in the rest of southern Idaho. The four new single-family homes permitted in Ketchum in July averaged more than $1 million each. A year earlier, Ketchum had permitted no new homes.

Exclude Ketchum, and the valley's July average for new single-family homes falls to $203,827 — still a higher average than in July 2000.

July, meanwhile, saw an un-al-burst-of-apartment-building with six structures — totaling 38 units — receiving permits in Twin Falls, and two units receiving permits in Ketchum.

The lion's share of Twin Falls' new apartments were on the 600 block of Windemere Drive, where Saratoga I.P. of Boise is erecting four two-story eightplexes. That's 32 units total. On a smaller scale, other multifamily housing permitted in Twin Falls included Twin Springs LLC's fourplex apartment house at 319 Lenore St.

By contrast, July 2000 saw no apartment permits at all in the reporting areas of the Magic Valley.

Rural Twin Falls County permitted four mobile homes in July, and the city of Twin Falls permitted one. Gooding and Jerome had no new residential building of any kind for the month.

On the statewide scene, total construction value for authorized building-permit construction in 57 major Idaho locations for July was $237.7 million — a robust increase of 56 percent from July 2000, Wells Fargo economist Kelly K. Matthews said.

Idaho's construction industry remains very strong in July, he said, giving much of the credit to a nearly $47 million permit issued for Boise's new airport terminal.

Jerome High band members march to regional competition

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME—You gotta get up early to beat the Jerome High School Marching Band.

The band, who are students of music teacher Keith Lien, have been meeting on the high school football field at 7 a.m. each morning for pre-dawn marching practice before school and again at noon.

The marching band is trying to perfect their music and polish up their marching routines for the Rocky Mountain High School Marching Band Competition Saturday in the Holt Arena in Pocatello. Lien said the band will compete against other high marching bands from Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Utah and Canada.

Lien said he wanted to organize a marching band at Jerome for many years but the students fought the idea "tooth and toenail." About four or five years ago, a group of 10 seniors, all band members, wanted a marching band. The students did the organizational footwork and the band was created.

"Since that time, Lien has involved the older students in the teaching process. Technically, but Lien uses them as mentors for younger students. They help figure the logistics and timing of the routines and precision formations, that is where each person should be on what note. If a student is having a problem with a particular musical passage or fancy footwork, a mentor will help the student work through it.

"I couldn't do it without them. With a group this size it would be chaos without their help," Lien said.

Flutist Michelle McKay, a senior and mentor, is band president. She has been involved in band for six years, and has attended competitions band for four years.

"So far we have only gotten participation awards, but we are working on some sharp routines and hope to win this year. There is a lot of competition—between 20 and 30 bands," she said.

Sophomore Katie May has been playing flute since the sixth grade. She attended the competition last year at Pocatello and said the acoustics inside the arena were "like playing inside a drum." The sound quality wasn't the best. It echoed a lot but at least you could hear all the sections play. "Still, music is a big part of her life.

"I really love music and would like to pursue a career in music," she added.
