Man alleges kidnap attempt

He says he crashed his car to escape suspects

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man told detectives he deliberately crashed his own car early Tuesday to escape kidnappers, according to police reports and court records.

Jerrett Porter, 21, told detectives that his 1990 Honda Accord was being driven by Johnny Hernandez, 24, at about 1 a.m., when Porter grabbed the steering wheel and jerked the car off the road.

Hernandez and Alberto Flores Jr., 22, of Buhl were arraigned Tuesday on one count each of first-degree kidnapping, according to court records. Buhl resident Gabriel Lopez, 17, was also arrested and was being held late Tuesday in the Snake River Juvenile Detention Center on two counts of first-degree kidnapping and charges of aggravated assault and possession of a firearm by a juvenile, said Twin Falls police detective Scott Smith.

The charges stem from Porter's allegations that Hernandez, Flores and Lopez abducted him at gunpoint Monday night, according to an affidavit written by Twin Falls Police Sgt. Bill Hanchey and filed with court documents.

Porter told police the trio confronted him at about 11 p.m. Monday with a pistol and a sawed-off shotgun at his apartment on Wirsching Avenue West in Twin Falls. They accused him of stealing some stereo equipment and several hundred dollars from them, according to Hanchey's affidavit.

Schools take close look at Halloween

Some decide the festivities should be less frightening

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Instead of gearing up for Halloween parties today, many schools valley-wide are gearing down.

"For the last four or five years we have made a concerted effort to minimize activities," said Bickel Elementary School Principal Mary Lee Roberts.

For example, no one dons costumes until the last 20 minutes of school throughout the district's seven elementary schools, when the children participate in a Halloween parade.

One school district has banished Halloween parties altogether. Kimberly Elementary School has replaced celebrating ghosts and goblins with an event called a harvest party.

Last year was the first time Kimberly teachers and students instituted the new tradition to be held on the last Friday in October. Because the district didn't hold school this past Friday, however, children partied on Thursday with games and homemade cookies and cake the Full moon risin'

For the first time in 46 years, this year's Halloween ghosts and goblins can trick or treat by the light of a full moon. They won't get another chance until 2020, astronomers said. Tonight's full moon will look like an orange 'lick-o'-santam rising from the east at dusk, said Jack Horne, executive director of the Miami Space Transit Planetarium. "It will appear orange at the horizon because it is seen through denser layers of the earth's atmosphere. Adding to the effect, the moon's tilt at this time of the year makes the 'man in the moon' particularly visible. Southern Idaho's predicted clouds today could start to clear a bit by this evening.

last hour of school. Though the very purpose of Halloween — a celebration of things demonic — was certainly a consideration when teachers and administrators first talked about removing it from school, there were other more practical reasons that prompted banning the traditional fun making, said Kimberly Elementary Principal Wes Remaley.

"The costumes were becoming more violent prone, even though every year we said no bloody, or horrible, awful-looking costumes with guns and weapons," he said. "But there were always a few that showed up dressed in things

'Unrelated' anthrax cases jolt investigators

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Anthrax infections in two East Coast women with no known links to contaminated letters are forcing government officials to rethink basic assumptions about how easily the disease may infect people and how widely it may have spread through the mail.

Government investigators said Tuesday they could not explain how the deadly bacteria infected a New Jersey bookkeeper, who is recovering from skin anthrax, and a 61-year-old New York hospital supply clerk who is critically ill with the more dangerous inhaled form of the disease.

The women are the nation's 15th and 16th confirmed anthrax victims, but neither appear to have received suspicious mail or spent time at a contaminated postal facility.

"Did they get infected from a piece of mail that went to their home?" asked Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. "That is being intensively investigated right now."

Rep. Rush D. Holt, D-N.J., whose Capitol Hill office tested positive for anthrax traces, said the newest cases raise the level of concern for everyone. "Up until now, it was easy for most people to say, 'Well, I don't work in a post office, and I'm not

Students face CSI fee hikes

Budget cuts also force college to look at early retirements

By Michael Journe
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State funding cutbacks will force a fee increase for College of Southern Idaho students and belt tightening for the college, CSI President Jerry Meyerhoeffer told employees Tuesday.

In a meeting with CSI's faculty and staff, Meyerhoeffer outlined the college's plans for coping with a projected 10.6 percent reduction in state funds next year. The meeting was scheduled on short notice, and reporters were not invited.

No layoffs are planned this year, a press release on Meyerhoeffer's statements said. Program cuts or salary reductions are "the least desirable and last resort" for cutting expenses.

Chief among the changes will be a 7 percent to 10 percent increase in student fees — about $50 to $100 per semester on the average student's tuition bill.

"The cost of education just went up," Meyerhoeffer said. CSI administrators are still unsure about the exact tuition increase will be, because the school is trying to coordinate the increase with the North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene, the state's only other community college. The schools' economic fortunes are closely related since they split the Legislature's lump appropriation for community colleges.

CSI's cuts come amid a bleak state financial picture. State income tax receipts have fallen far behind expected revenue, forcing most state agencies to trim 2 percent of their budgets for the current year and leaving lawmakers with the prospect of making further cutbacks when they meet this winter.

Meyerhoeffer hopes half of CSI's anticipated $1.6 million budget cut can be made up with the tuition and fee increases.

Red Cross halts appeals for relief fund

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American Red Cross is halting its appeals for donations to a fund created to help victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, its interim chief executive officer said Tuesday.

The Liberty Fund held $547 million in pledges as of Monday. Contributions received after today will be deposited in the charity's Disaster Relief Fund, a general account serving all kinds of emergencies, unless donors specify the money is for the Liberty Fund, said Harold Decker, the organization's interim leader.

Liberty Fund money also will continue to be held separately from other funds, Decker said, and will be spent on aid to victims' families and other relief.

U.S. steps up support for alliance

A member of the Afghan northern alliance's elite 'Zarballi' holds a heavy machine gun Tuesday north of Kabul, Afghanistan.

CHARIKAR, Afghanistan (AP) — An American bomb blasted huge plumes of smoke 1,000 feet into the skies over Afghanistan's front lines Tuesday in an unusually mighty airstrike. The Pentagon said U.S. forces were with the northern opposition and directing fire against the Taliban.

The opposition alliance deployed hundreds of crack troops near Taliban lines north of Kabul, the first tangible sign of preparations for an assault on the capital. The opposition was deploying a corps of some 800 to 1,000 elite troops, well-armed, trained, and ready for the order to march on the capital.

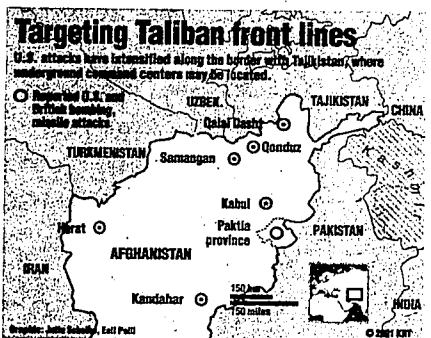

"We are ready for action," said 25-year-old Ahmad Zai, toting a Kalashnikov rifle and a rocket launcher. He said he expected to move on Kabul "in the near future."

"In their uniforms, they stood out among the bulk of the anti-Taliban troops — for the most part, ragtag bands in mixes of camouflage and traditional long tunics. The elite troops, or 'Zarballi', are better-paid, better-equipped and better-trained. "In my 23 years of fighting I've learned how to become a sniper," said one of the soldiers, Latif, carrying his long-scope sniper rifle. "I sit in high places and take aim at my enemy. There are plenty of them."

Despite the bravado and the reinforcements, opposition forces are believed to be out-gunned on the front that guards the approach to Kabul, which the Taliban seized in 1996.

Thousands of Taliban soldiers and Arab al-Qaida fighters are believed to be dug in across the hillsides and undulating valleys facing the opposition forces. The United States acknowledged in Washington, meanwhile, it had sent more U.S. personnel in Afghanistan, coordinating airstrikes with the opposition.

"A senior opposition official said such coordination will increase in coming days and that alliance forces were planning a major offensive to wrest the strategic northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif from the Taliban.

"There is coordination in all aspects," Abdullah, the foreign minister of the Afghan government-in-exile, said in an interview with Associated Press Television News.

U.S. jets pounded Taliban positions in the Balkh region around Mazar-e-Sharif on Tuesday, in strikes that an opposition spokesman called relentless. "They hit very important positions of the Taliban," spokesman Ashraf Nadeem said.

Witnesses also said they saw a U.S. plane drop a bomb Tuesday at the Bagram front lines, about 25 miles north of Kabul, creating a mushroom cloud that billowed at least 1,000 feet into the air.

Witnesses called it the biggest bomb to hit the area in 10 days of American bombardments on the front lines.

Despite the U.S. aerial attacks, the opposition alliance has made no advances against the ruling militia. The opposition has complained the U.S. strikes were not intense enough.

The United States launched the air campaign on Oct. 7, aiming to punish the Taliban regime for refusing to hand over Osama bin Laden, whose al-Qaida terror network is blamed for the Sept. 11 attacks in the United States.

It also rained bombs on a front line northeast of Taloqan, another northern city that the opposition hopes to wrest from Taliban control.

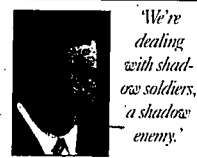

Administration defends terror alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration fended off congressional criticism Tuesday that its new terrorism alert was causing unnecessary anxiety among already jittery Americans.

Homeland security chief Tom Ridge met with congressional leaders, some of whom expressed concern the administration's general alerts that terrorists might strike may eventually numb the public like the boy who cried wolf.

Ridge said he, too, was concerned by that possibility but that the warning issued Monday was based on information from "multiple sources" and they were credible sources and they suggested an attack was imminent "in the next week or so."

"We're dealing with shadow soldiers, a shadow enemy," and the alert "reinforced the notion

— Tom Ridge, Homeland security chief borhood before congregating," it would be worth it to spread the alert, he said.

Some on Capitol Hill weren't convinced. "You wonder what these warnings achieve, other than to create more fear," Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., said.

Senate Armed Services Chairman Carl Levin, D-Mich., declined to criticize the administration saying, "It's a difficult position to be in. If they do have info that's credible, highly credible, that something's happening... do they not share that with the public?"

At the same time, Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., cautioned, "If you roll that out too many times, then you always run the risk of the American public not considering it serious enough to think too much about it. It's a tough, fine line."

Official: Many airports still lack quality security

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta said Tuesday that "an unacceptable number of deficiencies continue to occur" at the nation's airports and ordered a new crackdown on security, as the White House launched a major lobbying offensive in favor of a GOP air-travel security bill.

Mineta said in a speech before transportation workers that despite all the emphasis on airport security in recent weeks, the system remains fraught with holes. He said Federal Aviation Administration agents will take drastic actions — including clearing out concourses, re-screening passengers and holding flights — if they see security problems.

Transportation officials said this new policy was designed, in part, to provide an incentive for airlines to improve security. The airlines' "ability to move planes will be more strictly tied to their ability to maximize security," the DOT's Lennox Alcaraz said.

Alert focuses on nuke plants, Alaska pipeline

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — As the nation again stands on high alert, the FBI is searching for six men stopped by police in the Midwest last weekend but released — even though they possessed photographs and descriptions of a nuclear power plant in Florida and the Trans-Alaska pipeline, a senior law enforcement official said Tuesday.

The Federal Aviation Administration imposed new flight restrictions around nuclear plants nationwide Tuesday, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission advised the nation's 103 nuclear plants late Monday to fortify security.

An administration official said the urgent terrorism alert sounded Monday evening by Attorney General John Ashcroft was based largely on a message transmitted Sunday night by an Osama bin Laden supporter in Canada to Afghanistan.

The message referred to a major event that was going to take place "down south" this week, the official said.

Knight Ridder reported Monday that American officials feared that members of bin Laden's al-Qaida terrorist network had been unleashed to launch attacks without specific permission from their superiors.

On Tuesday, agency spokesmen said the FAA's flight restrictions and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's security recommendations were based on Ashcroft's general alert rather than a specific threat. Ashcroft warned that Americans at home or abroad could be struck by another terrorist attack this week.

The incident in the Midwest apparently contributed to the new terror warning. The six men stopped by police were traveling in groups of three in two white sedans, said the senior law enforcement official, who requested anonymity.

In addition to the photographs and other suspicious material, they carried "box cutters and other equipment," the official said. They appeared to be from the Middle East and held Israeli passports.

They were let go after the Immigration and Naturalization Service determined the passports were valid and that the men had entered the United States legally, the official said.

A spokesman for the INS called the report unfounded. "We have absolutely no information at this point in time to substantiate that story," said INS spokesman Russ Bergeron.

It could not be learned in what state the six men were stopped or how they aroused suspicion. It was not known if their true identities matched those on the passports, or why the FBI was not releasing their names or descriptions.

Kemphorne orders Capitol barriers, ponders additional security measures

BOISE - Gov. Dirk Kemphorne ordered concrete barriers at the west entrance of the state Capitol on Tuesday in what he said was a continuing escalation of security initiated weeks before last month's terrorist attacks on the East Coast.

Kemphorne also said there could be announcements later in the week of additional security measures even though he said there has been no direct or indirect threat of violence against the state, the Capitol or anyone in the state.

Earlier, however, the governor said Idaho has what terrorists might consider "trophy targets" in the Capitol and other government buildings.

The barriers installed on Tuesday block the sidewalk entrance to the Capitol's first floor at a point directly under the entrance to Kemphorne's second-floor office. There is no roadway to the first-floor entrance, which is in an archway under the west stairs to the building's second floor.

Gulf states pledge to do more to combat terrorism

MANAMA, Bahrain - Six Persian Gulf nations pledged Tuesday to do more to combat terrorism, but criticized Western reports questioning Saudi support for anti-terror measures.

Interior ministers from Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, Kuwait, Oman and the United Arab Emirates meeting in Bahrain agreed to swap information to eliminate the sources of funding for terrorism.

Saudi official Prince Nayef said the ministers' condemned what he called Western media bias against Saudi Arabia over its response to the U.S. anti-terror campaign.

Saudi Arabia, a key U.S. regional ally, has condemned the Sept. 11 attacks, but has not taken steps to do more to combat terrorism, according to FBI assertions that at least 10 of the 19 suspected hijackers were Saudis.

Airport chief gets severance worth at least $175,000

BOSTON - The leader of the agency that oversees Logan Airport, who is resigning after criticism over security following the Sept. 11 terrorism, will get a severance package worth at least $175,000.

The deal for Massachusetts Port Authority Executive Director Virginia Buckingham includes a two-year consulting contract worth $62,500. Buckingham, 36, earned $150,000 a year as executive director.

Massport spokesman Jose Juves said the agency needs Buckingham's expertise as it recovers from last month's attacks. The airport was the departure point for the two hijacked planes that brought down the World Trade Center towers in New York.

The special commission headed by former State Street Corp. Chairman Marshall Carter was appointed by acting Gov. Jane M. Swift to recommend changes at Massport, long criticized as a patronage haven.

News in brief

Britain charges Egyptian in death of Afghan leader

LONDON - Britain charged an Egyptian man on Tuesday with conspiring to murder the charismatic military leader of Afghanistan's main opposition alliance, alleging the group he heads provided the letters that got the assassins access to their target.

Yasser el-Sirri, 39, was charged in the death of Ahmed Shah Massoud, the military leader of the coalition of forces battling Afghanistan's Taliban. Massoud was mortally wounded in a suicide bombing two days before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States.

The prosecutors said the London-based group el-Sirri heads, the Islamic Observation Center, gave letters of accreditation to the two assassins who posed as journalists to gain access to Massoud then detonated a bomb, reportedly hidden in a television camera.

At a hearing in Belmarsh Magistrates' Court, el-Sirri listened to an interpreter as the charges against him were read, speaking only to confirm his name. District Judge Timothy Workman rejected a request for bail from el-Sirri's lawyer and scheduled another hearing for Nov. 7.

German court frees suspect arrested with holy war gulde

BERLIN - A Turkish man arrested at Frankfurt airport two weeks ago with a protective suit against biological warfare and instructions for an Islamic holy war has been freed, prosecutors said Tuesday.

An investigation of Harun Aydin, who was taken off a plane to Iran on Oct. 17 after his baggage was searched, turned up no evidence that he was planning violent acts, federal prosecutors spokeswoman Frauke Scheuten said. But prosecutors are still investigating his possible membership in an Islamic fundamentalist terrorist group.

A Frankfurt court had ordered him detained on suspicion of membership in a criminal organization and "giving instructions for serious crimes such as murder and manslaughter." Scheuten said a federal court has now lifted the arrest warrant against Aydin unconditionally.

Clinton: Globalization can help win victory over terror

Ghent, Belgium - Global trade can help win the war against terrorism if the West spreads the wealth it generates more equitably, former President Clinton told a conference of globalization critics Tuesday.

"Not everyone who's angry is angry at the civilized world and wants to destroy it," Clinton said. A lot are angry because they can't be a part of it.

Arguing for more globalization, not a retrenchment in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States, Clinton said bringing terror suspect Osama bin Laden to justice is not enough.

"We need to reduce the pool of potential terrorists by increasing the number of potential partners in the 21st century world," he said.

He called on Western nations to foot the bill to raise living standards and improve education in the developing world to promote equal opportunity.

Authorities detain 12 church attack suspects in Pakistan

MULTAN, Pakistan - Twelve suspected Islamic militants were detained Tuesday for questioning in a weekend shooting at a Christian church that killed 16 people, authorities said.

Superintendent Arif Ikram of Behawalpur, the south-central Pakistani town where the shootings took place, said the 12 were detained during "several raids in different areas of Punjab province. He said none of them had been charged by Tuesday evening.

Ikram would not identify the men or the three militant Islamic groups to which authorities believe they belong. But authorities expressed confidence they were on the right track.

The gunmen burst into St. Dominic's Roman Catholic Church on Sunday during Protestant services of the Church of Pakistan, spraying the congregation with gunfire. Sixteen people were killed, including the minister and a Muslim police officer guarding the church outside.

There was no explicit indication that the attack was linked to recent Muslim outrage over U.S.-led airstrikes in neighboring Afghanistan and the Pakistani government's support of the attacks. But many in Behawalpur have said they believe there is a connection.

Pakistan is 97 percent Muslim. Christians constitute a small portion of the remaining 3 percent.

Some wish Bush would release evidence to public

WASHINGTON (AP) - While Britain's prime minister asserts there's a flood of evidence against Osama bin Laden, the Bush administration has released only a trickle for public consumption.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher, too, said Tuesday, "There is accumulating a very large, mounting body of evidence." He cited new information on al-Qaida gleaned from "arrests in over 40 countries."

Some analysts say it is time for President Bush to lay out more of this evidence, suggesting it might help ease growing public misgivings, especially in Muslim countries, about the war in Afghanistan.

"I think they're making a mistake not to do so," said Michael O'Hanlon, a foreign policy analyst at the Brookings Institution. "Even if we can't say which conversations were heard by whom, at what time, you can find some way to sanitize the information and still make your case pretty concrete."

Polls show that most Americans are satisfied that a link exists between the Sept. 11 attacks and bin Laden and his al-Qaida network. But the same is not true in the region, where the view is widespread that the United States has not made its case.

More than a month after Secretary of State Colin Powell promised a bill of particulars, the administration still holds back the evidence. Officials say much of the specific information could compromise intelligence methods and sources.

At the same time, they cite what they contend is the obvious demonstrated links between some of the hijackers and al-Qaida, prior testimony tying bin Laden to the 1998 bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa, a videotaped threat from him that may be seen as an admission of guilt.

"In terms of evidence, I think now ... you have Osama bin Laden and his partisans appearing in public and virtually claiming responsibility, admitting that they did this terrible attack on Sept. 11," Boucher said.

The debate comes at a time when polls suggest Americans are evenly split on another issue involving release of information: whether the government is telling people what they need to know about anthrax.

Administration officials have failed to establish a link between the Sept. 11 attacks and the anthrax outbreaks, although they have not ruled out the possibility.

In addition to briefing British Prime Minister Tony Blair, the administration has provided confidential information to other NATO allies and to Pakistan's president, Gen. Pervez Musharraf.

Blair, in a Tuesday speech in London, defended the U.S.-led campaign as morally just. "The intelligence evidence, a flow when I first drew attention to it on the third of October, is now a flood confirming guilt," Blair said.

On Oct. 3, Blair's office released documents that, while not naming names, said one of bin Laden's "closest and most senior associates" was responsible for detailed planning of the Sept. 11 attacks. The documents also suggested bin Laden told associates shortly before Sept. 11 that he had a major operation against America in preparation.

Terrorist's confessions provide insight

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - It was at his Cairo high school that first heard Islamic fundamentalists exhorting him to be a better Muslim. The 17-year-old student soon joined their cause and became increasingly militant, eventually joining the Islamic Jihad.

His decision ushered in two decades of life in jail and on the run, in places as far afield as Sudan and Albania. Finally, in 1999, Ahmed el-Sayed el-Nagar was hanged in Cairo as a convicted terrorist.

The trial of el-Nagar and scores of other Egyptian militants is receiving new scrutiny since the Sept. 11 attacks. Lengthy confessions by el-Nagar and courtroom comments by a fellow defendant serve as a rare window to the inner workings of terrorist cells - and include claims that they possessed chemical and biological weapons.

Jihad, in which el-Nagar rose to powerful positions, is widely believed to provide Osama bin Laden's al-Qaida network with its core of supporters inside Afghanistan. Jihad's leader, Ayman al-Zawahiri, is now bin Laden's right-hand man.

Trial documents are not public record in Egypt, but The Associated Press was able to review documents that included a confession and other details from the trial. Lawyer Montasser el-Zayat, who defended el-Nagar, verified the authenticity of the confession.

Ahmed Ibrahim el-Sayed el-Nagar is shown behind bars in this 1999 photograph during his trial on terrorism charges at the Security Court in Haekestop, Egypt. He was convicted and executed.

In the 133-page confession, made in 1998, el-Nagar spoke of cooperation between Sudan's Islamic government and wanted Jihad members who fled there, how members of the group used forged passports and visas and how Egypt devastated the group in the 1990s with arrests and infiltrations.

Afghanistan, returning to Egypt through Jordan, he said, adding that the organization also had operations in Yemen, Sudan, Azerbaijan, southeast Asia, Saudi Arabia, Britain, Austria and Germany.

El-Nagar told of a 1995 meeting in Yemen when al-Zawahiri advised senior group members to find jobs because funds were drying up, explaining the attraction of working under the umbrella of the well-financed bin Laden.

In 1996, el-Nagar said, bin Laden made Jihad members an offer to join his organization, which had just relocated to Afghanistan after being forced to leave Sudan.

"He is prepared to sponsor any member of the organization through his ties with the Taliban government and will offer a monthly stipend of $100 for each family," el-Nagar quoted a bin Laden intermediary as saying. El-Nagar's funds did not go to Jihad's opium trade in part from trading in sugar, raising sheep in Albania and restoring and selling old houses in London.

At one point in mid-1994, members of the group resorted to theft, breaking into the home of a German diplomat in Yemen and making away with electrical appliances, he said.

He said Jihad members knew one another only by aliases. They were prohibited from trying to find out real names, birthplaces or travel plans of fellow members.

Jail proposal needs a rebuke from local judge

On Friday, 5th District Judge Nathan Higer will make a decision with far-reaching implications. He will consider a request by the Twin Falls County commissioners to spend $1 million a year of the taxpayers' money to place prisoners in a privately financed jail in the old Norco Windows building on Washington Street South.

The judge should say no to this flawed proposal, for a number of reasons:

- It may be illegal. Under Title 7, Chapter 13 of the Idaho Code, a judge can allow a local government to borrow money without a voter-approved bond issue - if the money is for "ordinary and necessary" expenses. The statute has been used elsewhere in Idaho, but for bricks-and-mortar projects owned by the taxpayers, not for a lease arrangement with a building owned by the private sector.
- The math doesn't add up. The county commissioners plan to spend $1 million a year for 30 years. They hope to make some of the money back by taking prisoners from outside the county and by leasing unused portions of the building to private businesses for storage. These revenue estimates are optimistic at best, and they have not been subjected to a careful accounting analysis. The commissioners haven't done a thorough cost-benefit analysis here.
- What if the county can't make the payments? The commissioners claim they can bail out of the agreement in any year if there isn't enough revenue to pay the rent, but that's deceptive. If the county were to break the lease, what would it do with all those prisoners who would be then being bunking in the Norco housegoof? Build a new or expanded county jail?
- The building is too valuable. It's good commercial real estate, and there's substantial private-sector interest in the property. A 150,000-square-foot building on a 36-acre site in Twin Falls is attractive to investors who could bring more economic benefits than a jail would provide.

- There's neighborhood risk. Would you want to live next to a window plant that's been converted into a jail? A few strands of concertina wire provide scant comfort.

We're told that only minimum-security and work-release inmates would be housed in the new jail, but that wouldn't eliminate the concerns of nearby residents. Their homes could become the first-stop hostage shops for escapees.

Beyond this, there has been almost no discussion of whether Twin Falls should, by a mere decree of the county commissioners, become a regional prison town. No one who has lived in a prison town will think this is a good idea, given the clientele prisons attract. The social costs to our schools, welfare costs and human services will be extreme, to say the least.

If the commissioners were to take this building proposal to the taxpayers in the form of a bond issue, it would fail spectacularly, and they know it. So why are they trying to ignore public opinion by selling this plan to a judge?

Ultimately, the problem of Idaho's escalating jail costs will require a solution from the Legislature. County prisoners go to jail for violating state laws, so the state should shoulder some of the cost of incarcerating them.

State lawmakers also should close the judicial confirmation loophole, which tempts local governments to engage in creative public finance.

For the present, though, the law seems clear enough. Higer should reject this blatant attempt at an end run around the taxpayers.

If the commissioners were to take the Norco building proposal to the taxpayers in the form of a bond issue, it would fail spectacularly, and they know it.

Deport illegal immigrants to build national morale

The American psyche, if not American resolve, has been deeply shaken by the events of Sept. 11 and the subsequent anthrax scare. President Bush has warned that victory over the Taliban will not come quickly and the war against terrorism may never end. America could use some confidence-building measures right now.

It isn't that government is doing too little. We see officials parading in front of microphones and Pentagon briefers conduct show-and-tell sessions about bombs destroying targets in Afghanistan. We know a lot of money is being spent. Anthrax has infected the cable networks 24/7. We need the equivalent of the post-Pearl Harbor, Jimmy Doolittle raid on Tokyo. The raid, itself, had little military significance but had wonders for American morale, confidence and cohesiveness.

The United States has been the breadbasket to the world and has welcomed the world here. We have, and are, forgiving debt and handing out foreign aid aims like Scrooge when he faced his own morality, though we have never been Scrooge-like in our generosity. We've enriched Arab nations by buying their oil; it's not our fault that they have failed to use those resources to better the lives of their people. Now we learn that many countries hate us, mostly because their political and religious leaders need an enemy to deflect attention from the economic and social misery at home - for which they are largely responsible.

President Bush's signing of new laws to track down terrorists among us is an important counterstrike. But if public confidence is to soar like patriotism, we'll need to see something that produces immediate, visible results.

A bigger threat than anthrax is the huge number of illegal aliens in this country; the U.S. Census Bureau estimates that there are 8 million of them. While blame for this can be equally shared by Republicans and Democrats, the Bush administration should order a massive roundup, deporting illegals to their countries of origin.

Amnesty granted to illegal immigrants, mostly for political reasons, has encouraged more of them to come here in violation of our laws. Census Bureau figures reflect plainly the problem we face. Approximately 2.7 million of the estimated 5 million illegal aliens living in this country in 1986 were given amnesty and awarded permanent legal residence. Now, Census Bureau estimates indicate this group has been completely replaced by a new wave of illegal immigrants, and that by 2000, the illegal population was 3 million larger than before the last amnesty.

The number of immigrants living in the United States - legal and illegal - more than tripled over the last three decades, from 9.6 million in 1970 to 31.1 million in 2000. As Steven Camarota, of the Center for Immigration Studies in Washington, D.C., notes in a press release: "No nation in history has ever attempted to incorporate and assimilate 31 million newcomers into its society. If policy remains unchanged, at least 13 million legal and illegal immigrants will likely settle in the United States over the next 10 years."

By absorbing so many legal and illegal aliens, America has lost something of the uniqueness that attracts immigrants. Political correctness has pressured our educators, media and other social forces not to shape these new residents into Americans. We've allowed them to form their own societies among us, rather than embrace American history, American traditions and American values. Our national motto - out of many, one - has become out of one, many. No nation can survive if it loses its identity and we're losing ours.

While reversing this downward process may take some time (and some will) deporting those who don't belong here will have the immediate benefit of ridding us of some terrorists and their cells. Then we should halt all but absolutely necessary immigration until the administration can develop a new immigration policy that puts America and Americans first.

The world has shown us that if we don't care for our own, no one else will. And if we aren't confident and strong, we won't have the capacity to be gracious and generous to those who truly need us. Let the deportations begin.

U.S. must bring justice to terrorists

I support President George W. Bush's responses to the Sept. 11 demonic attack on the USA. I do not believe nor accept the claim of bin Laden and associates that the creator is a terrorist who encourages, upholds and defends the murdering of human beings here on earth.

Until bin Laden and his fellow religious hoaxers, who massacre innocent children and who totally subjugate females for the sole purpose of propagating more males for them to religiously pervert, are brought to justice, the world's liberated, untrammeled, freedom-loving citizens cannot live in peace.

Also, despite the heinous words and deeds of the world's tyrannical bin Ladens and too numerous other hate-kill prophets, one must believe in and accept the world's love-based religions which preach about a hereafter that forgives even their evil, satanic behavior.

Clow would be wise election choice

In the coming election on Nov. 6 to place leaders in a position to determine the direction, destination and reputation of the city of Twin Falls and its citizens, I can and will recommend at least one incumbent who should again take his place of leadership at the town council meetings.

That person will be obvious to those who observe the proper methods, good judgment, clear integrity and record of attendance of Mr. Lance Clow. It Mr. Clow's impartial seeking of information on each and every subject which has come up for vote that is impressive. He has demonstrated his deserving of another term by his attitude of "stop and think" seriously and deeply, gathering all the available facts, trying to organize a consensus and voting for what is right.

He does his homework. It is his extensive knowledge of business practices and experience in making wise and timely decisions which allows Mr. Clow to perform so expertly in the positive advancement of the everyday operation of the great town that we live in. We, the citizens of Twin Falls, should feel lucky to have an individual of Mr. Clow's abilities wanting to devote his time and energies to seeing that we have a better place to live.

I will vote for Lance Clow, and I believe you should, too.

Teachers need competitive salary

I am writing in response to editorials and articles recently published in The Times-News referring to teachers, salaries and suggested freezes.

A year ago, the state of Idaho had a hefty $300 million surplus. As a result, the 2001 Idaho Legislature passed a nearly $100 million permanent tax cuts and numerous tax rebates. Without these huge tax cuts, the holdbacks would not be necessary.

The Legislature spent $2.029 billion last year with only a $1.984 billion tax base. As a result, there have been holdbacks in state education funding this fall. In Twin Falls, $360,000 in funding was lost this school year. This is disappointing when Twin Falls has 20 more students in the district than it had a year ago, with $360,000 less to educate them.

The 2002 Legislature has three options regarding these holdbacks. The first would be to reduce this year's appropriation and effectively stop the district from making up the lost revenue. They could also allow the loss in revenue to be made up by an increase in local property taxes, or they could take the money from the state's rainy day fund and protect local property tax payers from increases. Not too long ago, the amount of money spent on education was nearly 52 percent of the state budget. This year, public schools received less than 43 percent of the state budget. Teacher salaries are part of the money spent but so are salaries for administrators, custodians, aids, secretaries, bus drivers and cooks. Sadly, teachers continue to be the focus of freezing salaries.

The average salary for Idaho teachers is on the rise, but an important element of the salary is based on the experience level of teachers. Idaho has a huge percentage of veteran teachers who are making the maximum salary on their district's schedule, and this elevates the average.

A recent study by the State Board of Education points out that Idaho is facing a teacher shortage that will be exaggerated in the next three to five years when almost half of Idaho's teachers are eligible for retirement. Idaho needs to pay a competitive salary to retain and recruit quality teachers. Research has shown that, next to parental involvement, the quality of the teacher is the single largest contributor to student success. An investment in an educator is an investment in our children.

Republicans scurry to keep an advantage in upcoming election

Eight years ago, when the Republicans won governorships in New Jersey and Virginia and mayoral races in New York City and Los Angeles, the party's national chairman, Haley Barbour, said the sweep of the four top off-year contests was a sign that voters had turned decisively against the Democrats after less than a year of the Clinton presidency.

DAVID S. BRODER

nally nonpartisan office were Democrats Jim Hahn and Antonio Villaraigosa, and Hahn already has replaced Riordan at the helm of the nation's largest city.

Also facing term limits, New York City's Republican Mayor Rudolph Giuliani groomed one to take over, so the GOP nomination went to party-crasher Michael Bloomberg, a media mogul who has committed so many gaffes that Democrat Mark Green is almost a cinch to win in that Democratic city.

In New Jersey, where two-term Gov. Christine Todd Whitman was re-elected by Bush to head the Environmental Protection Agency, Bret Schundler, the former mayor of Jersey City, beat Whitman's and the party establishment's favorite in the GOP primary, but has struggled to bring Republicans together against Democrat Jim McGreevey.

And in Virginia, where Gov. Jim Gilmore, who doubles as chairman of the Republican National Committee, is limited to one term, Republican former state Attorney General Mark Earley has been trailing Democratic businessman Mark Warner since the start of the race.

New Jersey, Los Angeles and New York City all gave solid majorities to Al Gore a year ago, but Virginia has been Republican in every recent state and national race. In all four contests, the Democrats nominated candidates with widespread name recognition from previous campaigns. And in the two gubernatorial contests, the GOP chose challengers whose core supporters came from anti-abortion and religious right groups whose blessing can be the kiss of death to suburban independents.

A year later, when the 1994 midterm election gave the GOP control of Congress for the first time in 40 years, Barbour looked like a prophet. But Clinton was re-elected handily in 1996 and Republicans have lost strength in the House and Senate in every election since 1994.

This history would make anyone cautious about reading too much into next Tuesday's election results — even if the polls are correct and Democrats duplicate the 1993 Republican feat by sweeping all four of those races.

No one sensibly could regard such a result as a personal repudiation of President Bush, who is enjoying, at least for now, a surge of patriotic support as commander in chief of the war against terrorism.

But circumstances this year do suggest that the potential Democratic victories point up a vulnerability that the GOP would be foolish to ignore, as it gears for the more important contests a year from now.

The common thread in the four races is the inability of the Republican Party to come up with candidates who could match the personal appeal and broad coalition-building strength of the GOP incumbents they are seeking to succeed. And that is a weakness that could spell serious trouble for the president's party if it continues into next year's gubernatorial and congressional races.

In Los Angeles, the Republicans were unable even to qualify the handpicked successor of term-limited Mayor Richard Riordan for last spring's mayoral runoff. The top two vote-getters in the first primary for the nomi-

This ideological narrowing could be worrisome for Republicans next year — especially in the 22 governors' races where they now are in power. In almost half those contests, the Republicans who won last time are stepping down or are barred from running again.

Illinois is one state where a new face may give the Republicans a better chance of success than if scandal-dogged Gov. George Ryan tried for another term. But in most of the others, the prospective Republican candidates look more like Schundler and Earley — people with lesser reputations and probably narrower constituencies than the governors they are trying to replace. That is notably the case in Michigan and Pennsylvania, two key presidential battlegrounds where the Democrats have heavyweight contenders running. And it may well prove to be true in Texas and Wisconsin, where two former lieutenant governors, Rick Perry and Scott McCallum, are still trying to emerge from the large shadows cast by their predecessors — President Bush and Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson.

In a number of states, the leading candidates or strong contenders for the Republican nominations may also resemble Schundler and Earley in being so far right that they leave much of the independent electorate open to the Democrats.

All this makes next Tuesday's voting, especially the two governors' races, very much worth watching.

Idaho makes bad workplace

I agree with Carl Beardsworth about leaving Idaho to make a good living.

The worst thing that happened to Idaho as far as the working man is concerned is when Idaho became a right-to-work state. It guaranteed the low wages and no way out.

I, too, left Twin Falls 35 years ago, and it was the best decision I made for making a good living and later retirement. Idaho is the best place to retire and one of the worst places to work for a living. I moved back to northern Idaho when I retired. If I had to do it again I would.

The only thing I disagree with Carl about is moving to California. I would rather make $20,000 a year then move there. But to each his own.

Consider abortion rationally

Regarding "Abortion foes target clinic" article, Oct. 25:

In her tirade against the Planned Parenthood organization last Wednesday, I wish Helen Chenoweth-Hage had included the "arrogance of moral superiority" in her list of "national sins."

I encourage the people of Twin Falls to take a more open and respectful stance toward the issues of sexual health education and the well-intentioned groups that provide it. As Planned Parenthood comes to Twin Falls, listen to its mission and goals and choose to use and support their services or not.

Intentionally inflammatory accusations such as "criminal" and "terrorists" are completely self-serving and self-aggrandizing and sadly polarize an important issue.

It is this kind intolerance that I find most terrifying.

Controversial process arises again

Former ambassador to speak to TF Democrats

TWIN FALLS - Members of the Twin Falls County Democratic Committee will host a "Grand Autumn" chili feed and auction from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday at the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, 616 Eastland Drive.

Special guest will be Alan Blinken of Ketchum, who served as the U.S. ambassador to the Kingdom of Belgium throughout the Clinton administration.

Traditional Veterans Day program on for Nov. 11

TWIN FALLS - The traditional Veterans Day program sponsored by local veterans groups will be held on the real Armistice Day, Nov. 11, even though it falls on Sunday.

Jerry Wertz, commander of the American Legion Post 7, said there is confusion about the day because of The Times-News-sponsored Veterans Day parade and program scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 10.

In addition to the Legion post, veterans groups participating will include the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Floyd Cooper, commander; Disabled American Veterans, John Flynn; and Marine Corps League, Charles Adams.

The Legion will sponsor an open house with refreshments at the post home following the program.

TWIN FALLS - If Twin Falls County officials are to put what they want into the old Norco Windows building in Twin Falls, their plan must first go through a court proceeding that has in the past drawn criticism and still has its detractors.

Despite efforts to curb the powers provided to counties and cities by a process called judicial confirmation, some say the process still allows local governments a chance to pull a flanking maneuver around the will of taxpayers and voters.

"It still leaves a hole big enough to drive a truck through," said Twin Falls attorney and former Idaho legislator Mark Stubbs. "I didn't think they should have as much leeway to get stuff financed without a public vote."

Approved by the Legislature in 1988, judicial confirmation gives municipal and county governments the option of taking

TF County jail proposal heads for judicial confirmation some building projects before a district judge for review and possible approval - rather than asking voters for a bond issue to bankroll construction.

The process was probably intended to give counties and cities a break in emergency situations or with projects that would cost about as much or even less than the price of organizing a bond issue election, said Stubbs and Rep. Celia Gould, R-Buhl.

Court date

A proposal for Twin Falls County to lease to buy the old Norco Windows building on Washington Street South in Twin Falls and put a jail and county offices there will go before 5th District Judge Nathan Higet at 9 a.m. Friday in Courtroom No. 1 at the Theron W. Ward Justice Building in Twin Falls.

Gould - who heads up the House Judiciary Committee - said she has over the years led or been involved in some charges against judicial confirmation, but change has been slow.

"On a number of occasions it's been attempted to put limits on judicial confirmation," she said. "It's never been very well received by the Legislature. We get to a certain point and we can't agree on it."

The spats are usually over exactly where to draw the line between what warrants judicial confirmation and what's too big not to put in front of voters, she said. Gould said she sees no new runs at reform anytime soon.

"I just got tired of banging my head against that particular wall," she said.

Stubbs said he and another former legislator - the late T.W. Stivers of Twin Falls - had some success in drawing up legislation that tweaked judicial confirmation in voters' favor.

Volunteers, experts help winterize Ike Kistler Safe House

By Loretta Burkhardt Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - When community leaders, state and local officials and a crew of some 40 to 50 volunteers came together Tuesday to celebrate National Energy Awareness Month, it was work, work and more work.

The recipient of all that labor was the Ike Kistler Safe House - a nonprofit shelter for homeless children - and its adjacent administrative building at 142 Sixth Ave. N.

Under the direction of South Central Community Action Agency Inc. and in conjunction with Idaho Power and the U.S. Department of Energy, the "almost-100-year-old building" was given some needed assistance to help make the facility more energy-efficient.

"(Energy efficiency) is a science we can control," said SCCAA Executive Director Ken Robinette.

"And helping with energy costs is a much-needed service for (Safe House) so that dollars saved can be spent on the kids," said Robinette, whose work for the day was to blow additional insulation into the attic.

Witnesses: Conspiracy led to firing

By Brad Hem Idaho Press-Tribune

CALDWELL - Floyd Padilla of Twin Falls said nothing has surprised him that much since his platoon was ambushed in Vietnam.

That was how he described the Idaho Migrant Council Board of Trustees' Oct. 6 decision to fire Executive Director Humberto Fuentes, the man who helped found the nonprofit group in 1971 and has been its only director since then.

Since Fuentes was fired, a new batch of leaders has taken control of the council. Sam Byrd, president of another company, was brought in as interim director, and others have replaced three council administrators who were fired in the days after Fuentes' termination.

With lawsuits flying both ways, Fuentes and the new leadership are battling for control of the $10 million organization that is Idaho's oldest and largest Hispanic advocacy group.

In 3rd District Court on Monday, witnesses painted a picture of conspiracy and secret meetings that led to Fuentes' firing. Board member Padilla told the court he was not part of the conspiracy and felt it was necessary to sue the council "so justice can be done."

Monday's hearing came after a day-long attempt at mediation failed in Twin Falls on Sunday.

Padilla and Dorisella Negrette of Pocatello are among four board members who joined Fuentes and the three fired administrators in suing what was, until a few weeks ago, their organization.

From the witness stand, Negrette said fellow board mem-

Committee encourages seniors to get flu vaccines

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - While much of the nation's attention remains focused on anthrax, the ranking member of the U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging is encouraging senior citizens to get immunized with the flu vaccine.

"The recent exposures and deaths have saddened us all and focused our attention on anthrax," said U.S. Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, in a news release. "But the reality is that there is a much greater risk of death from the flu, and this is particularly true for senior citizens. That is why I am encouraging all senior citizens to get immunized with the latest flu vaccine as soon as possible."

Flu vaccinations are free for seniors on Medicare. According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the peak flu season runs from December through March. It takes one to two weeks after receiving the vaccination

Question and answer with the candidates

Incumbent Halley City Councilwoman Martha Burke faces a challenge from Pete Kramer in the Nov. 6 election. Two other people – Al Lindley and Don Kelm – face no opposition in their bids for the Halley mayor's office and another City Council seat, respectively.

Martha Burke

Age: 54
Occupation: Children's program coordinator with the Advocates for Survivors for Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault
Political experience: 8 years on Halley City Council
Residency: Lived in Halley for 27 years and Wood River Valley for 30

What are the biggest challenges facing Halley that you would tackle if you served the next four years on the City Council?

"I see two things that are becoming more critical. One is the effort to deal with growth. Growth is going to happen, but growth for growth's sake reflects a lack of wisdom. What we need is growth that's planned. We need to attract companies like Power Engineers and Markelton that will let our kids stay here and allow us to have one good job, rather than having to hold down three jobs at a time.
"The other thing is keeping downtown healthy. It's hard to compete with Costco and other stores in Twin Falls. But everyone who comes into the valley to go to Ketchum and Sun Valley, has to go through Halley. We need to ensure that it looks like an inviting small town, not a strip mall like Jackson, Wyo. We need to try for redevelopment grants to let us continue to have the antique stores and small furniture stores that lure people here to shop."

Pete Kramer

Age: 47
Occupation: Friedman Memorial Airport operations manager
Political experience: None
Residency: Lived in Halley for 21 years

"Halley needs to improve the process by which it approves annexation. We need to look at annexation as an opportunity for the city that we can capitalize on, rather than an obstacle. The city has got to grow, so we might as well look ways to gain revenue from an increased tax base. Airport West has been six years in the process – that's not acceptable. And I fear that Outlying Canyon – where a recreational golf complex has been proposed – will be the same way.
"Halley also needs to step up and develop a greater commitment to multi-use recreational opportunities for our kids."

What kind of financial commitment would you be willing to have Halley make for mass transit to alleviate congestion along Highway 75? And what should the city's response be to Ketchum's efforts to limit traffic into its city?

"There is no money for mass transit in the budget now, but that doesn't mean we can't plan to budget for it in the future. We need to support the city's attempts to get grant money for a bus. We're going to need to find ways to build neighborhood shelters or bus stops so we can wait for buses. And we're probably going to need an in-town shuttle so to alleviate giant parking lots. I'm also in favor of diamond lanes for carpools during peak hours.
"I don't want to see us become Ketchum's parking lot. We need to start looking at ways to prohibit people from Shoshone and other outlying areas from parking in residential streets like they do in Ketchum. I also think we need to encourage Ketchum to buy centrally located lots like the one Louie's sat in to build underground, maybe even above ground, parking for carpools."

"I don't know how far I would go in committing financial resources for mass transit. I'm more interested in something that wouldn't require Halley's resources. "We have to see whether Ketchum will be successful in restricting traffic. I don't know that it will be. If we do get a shuttle service in place, we may need to look at ways to derive revenue from people from Shoshone who want to park in Halley. If you want to park in Halley, you're going to have to pay to park in Halley."

Buhl develops emergency plan

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL – In addition to working with the county and state on planning for emergency operations, the city of Buhl has developed its own emergency operations plan that is unique to Buhl.

City officials and employees have been reviewing the city's emergency plan to keep the staff on an awareness status and provide updated training.

Mayor Barbara Gietzen said, "In light of the Sept. 11 attacks on our country, we thought it would be prudent to review plans and clarify our roles and responsibilities in a disaster or emergency."

The emergency management program had a weather-related disaster drill planned for the spring of 2002, but because of the recent events, officials decided to move the program up and add some other criteria.

The orientation program focused on terrorist events that could or would affect Buhl.

Fire Chief Mark Grimes headed up the program using three tabletop exercises.

"Objectives are developed for each of the exercises that test the plans and train people based upon community needs," Grimes said.

Buhl's emergency operations plan will be modified based upon current information which changes with responsibility and federal mandates.

The programs added to the training sessions were damage assessment, resource management, public information, health and medical, mass care and public works. Supplementary guidelines that provide assistance based upon hazards were power failure, flood, hazardous materials, earthquake, winter storm, tornado and microbursts, terrorism and civil disobedience.

The city's plan provides a process to request assistance from county, state or federal government during a crisis. Under Idaho law, counties must plan for disasters, and cities may do the same.

Buhl officials said they felt they had a responsibility to the community to develop their own program.

MVRMC Foundation awards almost $327,000 in grants

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – One of the focus projects of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation is to help the Magic Valley Heart Fund.
And with help from the community, the nonprofit foundation achieved one of its first goals when it purchased the $187,000 digitized cardiac ultrasound system at Magic Valley Regional that has enhanced cardiac diagnostic capabilities at the hospital. "The system has been up and operating since the summer."

"It was an ongoing effort from a lot of people to raise this $187,000," said Foundation Executive Director Larry Baxter. "It was from the generosity of the community that we were able to return the money back in improved health care."

The cardiac ultrasound system was purchased with one of the $326,999 in grants the foundation's executive committee has awarded so far this year. Those grants included:

- $14,000 for scholarships for nursing students.
- $1,400 for a scholarship to a medical technology student.
- $1,000 for general support of the Richfield Quick Response Unit.
- $873 for materials for comfort kits for newly diagnosed breast cancer patients.
- $800 for a Magic Valley Regional lab employee to attend a microbiology workshop.
- $773 for a Magic Valley Regional nurse to attend a health care leadership conference.
- $660 for breast cancer education tools.
- $600 for personal hardship grants to two Magic Valley Regional employees.
- $400 for support of a cancer survivors' celebration.
- $300 for scholarships to the annual HIV/AIDS retreat.

In addition, the Magic Valley Regional Foundation awarded grants to the following ongoing

- programs:
- $5,710 for support of Children at Risk Evaluation Services.
- $2,090 for support of counseling expenses incurred by the Child Trauma Recovery Resource.
- $2,000 for support of Magic Valley Safe Kids.
- $1,380 for supplies and medical exams for diabetic patients in the Magic Valley.
- $1,000 for scholarships for Magic Valley Regional employees studying physical therapy, medical coding, business and general studies.
- $531 for emergency supplies, medications and other items for cancer patients in the Magic Valley.
- $293 for operations of the Magic Valley Drug Free Workplace program.

- $169 for supplies, medication and other items for psychiatric patient emergencies.
- $57 for meals delivered to bereaved families of hospice patients.

The foundation holds a number of fund-raising events throughout the year, including the Festival of Trees, the Hearts and Beaus Dinner Dance, the Heart of the West Run, the Sinclair-Hoss Golf Tournament and the Epicurean Evening food tasting and auction. The biggest community fund-raiser is the annual Festival of Trees. Last December's event raised about $70,000, Baxter said.

The foundation also operates an internal fund-raising campaign in which hospital employees, board members and their families make donations. Baxter said the campaign has raised $66,000 so far this year and the foundation hopes to reach its $75,000 goal by the end of December.

Four candidates seek pair of seats on Buhl City Council

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Four people are running for two seats on the Buhl City Council in the Nov. 6 election.

Incumbent Jim Wilson is joined by newcomers Mitch Garrard, Charles Sheridan and Regie in seeking the four-year terms on the City Council.

Mayor Barbara Gjetzen is running for re-election uncontested. Here is a rundown on the candidates:

• Jim Wilson, 62, said he decided to run for the council four years ago because he was concerned about the community and its future.

"The last four years have been a learning process for me, and if I am returned to office I will do what I can for the people and try to make an impact on the projects under way," he said. "There's a lot to this job."

Wilson said the council has started and completed a number of improvements in the community such as urban renewal, new well projects and sewer improvements.

Wilson has owned several businesses in Buhl as he has lived here most of his life. He operates Wilson Lube and Detail.

Wilson said he wants what's best for the community and hopes to help promote the businesses and create opportunities for new businesses to operate in Buhl.

• The Rev. Charles Sheridan, 58, grew up in Filer but said he spent a lot of time in Buhl. He owned an electrical contracting business in Coeur d'Alene, then went back to school in Colorado. He has been pastor of the Buhl Nazarene Church for 15 years after pastoring churches in Minnesota, California and elsewhere in Idaho.

Sheridan said he has had an interest in city businesses and worked with Experience Buhl and Citizens On Patrol programs. He serves as volunteer chaplain with the local police department.

"I listen to the voices of the people and deal with people in church," said Sheridan, "and the City Council job is a lot like that. I've tried to encourage people to get involved in the community and support the many improvement programs taking place."

Sheridan said he is concerned about the youth in the community and wants to make sure the community helps steer them in the right direction.

• Mitch Garrard, 62, traveled around a lot before settling in Buhl in 1997. He is a retired chief warrant officer with the Army.

Coming to Buhl from Anchorage, Alaska, where he worked in a welding supply shop, Garrard stays busy as a school bus driver and volunteering at Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers. Garrard said he wanted to serve the community and make it a place where people are proud to live.

Garrard supports programs against drugs and is in favor of the drug testing programs involving city officials and employees. Garrard said, "The council job requires a lot of time, and I am willing to spend as much time as needed to do the job."

Garrard has family in Buhl and supports the community projects to make it a better place to live.

• Regie Finney, 39, has lived in Buhl 38 years and owns a construction business and a snow removal service. Finney served in the Navy aboard the USS Nimitz, an aircraft carrier, before returning to Buhl. He volunteered for the city's fire department and was a firefighter for eight years.

Finney said he supports all the community projects under way and the downtown revitalization. He is in favor of cleaning up the town.

Finney said he is interested in the youth of the town and would promote safety for the children.

"Senior citizens are an asset to our city," said Finney. "They are active and get involved."

"I want what's best for the city and community, I would be an asset to some of the projects under way or planned."

Finney said a younger voice may help bring a new perspective to the council and could be an asset.

• Barbara Gietzen, 65, was elected mayor in November 1997 after serving two years as an elected council member. She also served as president of Buhl Economic Council and Chamber of Commerce as well as serving with the College of Southern Idaho Foundation.

Gietzen said she wants to see some projects finished such as downtown revitalization, antexation and city water line improvement.

Under her direction, grant money has been awarded for community improvement, and she plans to continue to work hard for additional grant money.

"We have just started a plan to improve wastewater facilities that will stretch out over 20 years, and we have a wellhead protection about to be completed to secure drinking water," she said.

Gietzen has lived in Buhl all her life and is involved in a family business, Gietzen Electric.

Census releases count of homeless

WASHINGTON - More than 170,000 people were in homeless and emergency shelters on one spring night last year, according to a census survey. Critics scorned the analysis as an incomplete picture of life on the streets in America.

The Census Bureau report released Tuesday counted people in shelters on March 27, 2000, the first day of a three-day survey that also covered people visiting soup kitchens and living on city streets.

The bureau earlier this year reported finding 280,527 homeless people nationwide over all three days of the survey. Tuesday's report said that 170,706 of them were in shelters.

Advocates for the homeless called for more detailed results. Those figures would help officials determine where to target services and how to plan budgets for services, said George Smith, director of San Francisco's Office of Homelessness.

Feds accuse Northrop Grumman Corp. of fraud

CHICAGO - Northrop Grumman Corp. has been accused by the federal government of tens of millions of dollars of fraud in defense contracts, including one to produce top secret parts for the B-2 "Stealth" bomber.

The government said in civil court papers filed last week that the defense contractor produced bogus inventory records and other documents to hide the fact that it had inflated costs on contracts for producing radar jammers and other sophisticated electronic equipment.

The Chicago Tribune on Tuesday reported that federal prosecutors have begun a criminal investigation into the allegations.

The U.S. attorney's office in Chicago filed its civil lawsuit on behalf of two whistleblowers who say they were fired by the Los Angeles-based aircraft company in the late 1980s after contacting Defense Department criminal investigators and the FBI concerning fraud.

dogs deemed dangerous would have to be spayed or neutered and fitted with a surgically implanted microchip for identification.

Under the measure approved by a council committee Monday, the owners also would be required to obtain $100,000 in liability insurance.

The measure was prompted by the dog-attack deaths of two young children and the mauling of a third - all in the past three months, said Alderman Shirley Coleman, the sponsor.

Ukraine fulfills its nuclear disarmament promise

KIEV, Ukraine - Ukraine destroyed its last nuclear missile silo on Tuesday, fulfilling a pledge to give up the vast nuclear arsenal it inherited after the breakup of the former Soviet Union.

The silo was blown up at a military range in the southern Mykolaiv region near Pervomaisk, according to the Interfax news agency. The U.S.-Ukrainian Cooperative Threat Reduction Program oversaw the destruction.

The land beneath the silo will be cleaned and converted for agricultural use, officials said.

Ukraine inherited the world's third-largest nuclear stockpile with the 1991 Soviet collapse, including 130 SS-19 missiles, 46 SS-24 missiles and dozens of strategic bombers. The country later renounced nuclear weapons and transferred all missiles and its 1,300 nuclear warheads to Russia. After processing, the nuclear materials from the warheads were brought back to Ukraine as nuclear fuel for power plants.

Education chief touts reforms in department

WASHINGTON - Using a government database of people who have just found jobs, the Education Department has collected $153 million against defaulted loans since last spring, Education Secretary Rod Paige said.

The collections are part of a wider reform detailed by Paige. Congress has criticized the department as wasteful, saying it does a poor job managing its multi-billion-dollar budget.

The plan also includes filling two top management jobs that went vacant for years and working with the nonprofit Council for Excellence in Government.

In the final three years of the Clinton administration, the Education Department lost track of $450 million, the department's chief inspector said last spring, prompting one Republican lawmaker to liken the agency's financial practices to those of "a Third World republic."

High court considers sexual predator laws

WASHINGTON (AP) - States should not have to prove that violent sexual offenders cannot control their behavior in order to keep them locked up after they complete their sentences, Kansas' attorney general told the Supreme Court on Tuesday.

Nineteen states have laws allowing authorities to confine people indefinitely as sexual predators. The attorney for a Kansas man in the current case appealed to the justices to set a precedent for future cases.

The court heard the case of Michael Crane, who went to prison in 1994 for sexually assaulting a video store clerk and exposing himself to a tanning salon attendant in a suburb of Kansas City. When Crane was about to be paroled in 1998, prosecutors went to court to have him committed to a state hospital.

A jury found Crane suffered from a personality disorder that made him likely to commit another sex crime and ordered him hospitalized.

Soup seeker gets her garlic

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Jennifer Tverdy, of Twin Falls, wrote, "I am desperately in search of a recipe for 'garlic soup.' I have searched everywhere... I first had the soup at the Snake River Grill this summer."

Here is a recipe sent in by the Almond Board of California.

ROASTED SWEET GARLIC AND ALMOND SOUP

- 10 to 12 cloves garlic
 - 2 heaped cups blanched almonds
 - 5 ounces (4 to 5 slices) sourdough bread, crusts removed
 - 1 cup low-fat milk
 - 1 to 2 cups chicken stock or water
 - A drizzle of sherry vinegar
 - A drizzle of Tuscan extra virgin olive oil
 - Sea salt
 - Freshly ground black pepper
 - A small bunch of green grapes, quartered
 - A few sprigs of fresh marjoram, chopped
- Preheat oven to 400 F. Bake garlic cloves about 20 minutes, or until soft. Break bread into smaller pieces, then drizzle and soak in the milk. Using a food processor, blend the almonds until good and fine and have almost stuck to the side of the bowl. Throw in the soaked bread and the soft inside of the roasted garlic. Add a little chicken stock or water and blend. When you have a fine puree, gradually add in enough stock or water to make a thickish soup consistency. Finish by seasoning with salt and pepper and a good drizzle of sherry vinegar and olive oil. You can garnish with some quartered green grapes mixed with chopped marjoram on top. Serves 4.

Learning by doing...

At left, a plum torte with ice cream is a favorite in the Trainor household. Above, Linda Trainor gathers the plums for her tortes from the plum tree in her yard.

Woman developed healthy cooking style little-by-little

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Linda Trainor cooks healthy. But it wasn't always that way.

She learned how to cook the hard way, by trial and error. Her mother died when she was 14, and she and her father had to cook for themselves.

"We didn't really know what we were doing and fried everything," she recalled. "We cooked everything to death. Our pork chops were like cardboard."

Through the years, Trainor has learned to cook healthy. A Registered Nurse and nursing supervisor at Sawtooth Surgery Center, she knows the value of healthy eating. She tries to serve salmon at least once a week, and also serves a lot of chicken and turkey.

Trainor said she loves mashed potatoes, but doesn't like all the butter that usually goes with them. So she uses spices, like garlic, to compensate for some of the butter. She grows her own garden and makes a meatless spaghetti sauce.

"I just chop up stuff till it looks right, then I cook it," she said. "I like a lot of mushrooms in my spaghetti sauce."

Trainor said her husband likes pies, and it took her a while to figure out how to make a decent crust. She has been in Idaho for 31 years. She met her husband, Kevin, in Sun Valley one year when they were both in different colleges and working - she bumming - in the resorts. He's from Virginia. She's from Wisconsin. He was in law school at the University of Idaho, and she was in nursing school in San Francisco.

The Trainors have two grown daughters. One will receive a bachelor's degree in December. The other is working on a master's degree.

A few years ago, one of the Trainor daughters was studying in Spain, so Trainor and her husband went to visit. They also visited friends in Geneva while they were in Europe, and the friends served this dish.

ROAST PORK WITH BALSAMIC VINEGAR

- Serves 8 to 10
- 4- to 5-pound boneless pork loin roast (remove the fat)
- 4 red onions (cut each onion into 8 pieces)

1/2 cup butter or olive oil, or may use 1/2 butter and 1/2 oil

1 tablespoon fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary

1 1/2 cups balsamic vinegar

4 tablespoons red wine

Salt and pepper, to taste

Rub the pork roast generously with salt and pepper. Brown the roast on all sides in a skillet on top of the stove in enough oil to keep it from sticking. Place butter and/or oil and onions in an ovenproof pan and saute on top of the stove till soft. Add the rosemary and the pork loin and 1/2 of the balsamic vinegar. Turn the roast over to coat evenly and place in the oven. Cook for 45 minutes at 425 degrees. Turn the roast several times while it is roasting. About 5 minutes before the roast is done, add the rest of the balsamic vinegar. Let it finish out the roasting time. Then remove the roast from the pan and add the wine to the juice in the pan and cook it down a bit. Slice the pork roast and return it to the pan to soak up flavors from the juices in the pan. Place the roast on a dish and pour whatever juice is left in the pan over the roast and serve.

TORTA DI UVA (TART OF BERRY)

- 1/2 cup soft butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 to 2 cups fruit (can use raspberries, peaches or oranges)
- Sugar for sprinkling

Butter and flour a 10- to 12-inch tart pan (fluted edge pan) or cake pan. Beat the butter till fluffy. Add the sugar and eggs and continue beating for 5 minutes. Stir in the vanilla, flour and baking powder. Roll out and spread in pan and cover with fruit. Sprinkle sugar over the top. (The amount depends on how sweet you like it.) Bake for 40 minutes at 350 degrees.

SHERRED SWEET POTATOES

- 8 sweet potatoes
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon orange zest (peel)
- 2 cups orange juice
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 6 tablespoons margarine or butter

Remove to a warm plate. Pour off oil except for a thin coating. Add the shallots and cook till wilted, about 5 minutes. Add wine, broth and mustard and heat till boiling. Scrape up bits that cling to the bottom of the pan. Boil till reduced in volume by 1/2, about 3 minutes. Add pepper if desired. Serve over rice, couscous, egg noodles or potatoes.

- 1/3 cup sherry
- 1/4 cup walnuts

Cook the sweet potatoes. Peel the sweet potatoes and slice lengthwise into 1/2-inch slices. Place into a 13-by-9-inch baking dish and sprinkle with salt. In a saucepan, heat the brown sugar, cornstarch, the 1/2 teaspoon salt, orange zest, orange juice and raisins. Cook over medium heat till thick and bubbly. Then cook one minute more. Add the butter, sherry and nuts till the butter is melted. Pour over potatoes and bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes, basting occasionally.

GROUND LAMB PATTIES

- 1 1/4 pounds ground lamb
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons peanut or canola oil
- 2 tablespoons shallots, minced
- 1/2 cup dry red wine
- 1/3 cup beef broth
- 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard

Fresh ground pepper, if desired
Crumble meat and sprinkle with salt. Make 4 patties 1 1/2 inches thick. Heat oil in pan over medium heat. Fry patties in oil till red juice appears on top, about 10 minutes. Turn and cook another 8 minutes. The patties will be pink inside. Remove to a warm plate. Pour off oil except for a thin coating. Add the shallots and cook till wilted, about 5 minutes. Add wine, broth and mustard and heat till boiling. Scrape up bits that cling to the bottom of the pan. Boil till reduced in volume by 1/2, about 3 minutes. Add pepper if desired. Serve over rice, couscous, egg noodles or potatoes.

"Thanks for putting in my request for the corn chowder," wrote Betty Martin, of Paul. "I have received quite a few recipes... with Thanksgiving and Christmas coming and all the holiday meals, I thought this recipe might work for some people. It can be a salad or a dessert. It's very pretty and tastes good."

FROZEN CRANBERRY SALAD

- 1 package fresh cranberries, chopped in food processor
- 1 small package small marshmallows

1/2 cups sugar
Mix together well, and freeze overnight. Freeze in a 9-by-13 pan.

Next day:
2 20-ounce cans crushed pineapple, drained well

1 pint whipping cream, whipped until soft

Add 1/2 cup sugar and 1 to 1 1/2 cups chopped pecans. Mix well. Fold into first mixture. Put back into 9-by-13 pan. Freeze until firm. Take out a few minutes before serving.

Leftover Halloween candy? Here's an idea, from "Baking for Gift Giving," printed in the Seattle Times.

TOFFEE CRUNCH COOKIES

In a dry skillet set over medium heat, toast 1 cup chopped almonds until golden, about 5 minutes. Stir occasionally. Transfer to a bowl; cool. Sift together 2 3/4 cups all-purpose flour, 1/4 cup cake flour and 1 1/2 cups chopped pecans. With an electric mixer, cream together 3/4 pound unsalted butter (softened) and 1 1/3 cups granulated sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in 2 teaspoons vanilla and 1 egg until well blended. Add the dry ingredients, mixing well. Work in the almonds and toffee chunks (9 1/4 ounce Heath bars, cut up, or 1 1/2 cups Heath bits toffee chips) with your hands. Line several baking sheets with parchment paper. Drop tablespoons of dough in mounds 2 inches apart. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 15 minutes, until golden around the edges. Remove after 1 minute transfer to racks and cool. Store in an airtight container or wrap well and freeze for longer storage. Makes 5 dozen.

Mid-fall signals indicate it may be time to trim your rose bushes

This time of year rose growers all want to know: "Should I prune my roses now?"
The answer is: "Maybe."
You can tell it's time to prune when you see these signs:

- Three nights in a row under 28 degrees.
- Dried leaves.
- If neither of these things happen by Thanksgiving, prune anyway. We only prune the roses back to knee-high and strip off their leaves now to help them go dormant and keep them from being tugged by winds.

When the rose leaves have dried thoroughly, they may or may not still be green. If they have stopped work, they will be dull, crinkly and will snap off easily. Try to snap the leaves off with your fingers. If they do not snap off without tearing the bark, snip them with some small pruners. Throw the trimmings in a trash bag. Cut the canes back, straight across, about knee-high. No shorter. No thinning. No shaping. No fuss.

Mulch. Pile up leaves, straw, bark chips, soil, whatever you've got. That's not mulch or soil that is already in the rose beds. Scrape that up and you'll steal the blankets off the roots. Bring in extra mulching material for this job.

Cover the rose crown to protect the graft. If the graft on a modern

GREEN THUMBPRINTS
Cathy Walworth

rose freezes, you will find yourself the proud owner of a wild rose next spring. Or no rose at all. Pile the mulch up six or eight inches, and make it stay where you put it.

The mulch will stay in place if you water it. Wet it well and it freezes into a big, solid cone. You can also use a circle of chicken wire around each rose to keep mulch from slipping away.

The big, expensive foam rose cones are hard to work with and don't do a good job in our climate.

Whatever the weather, soak rose roots, as well as trees and other shrubs, monthly to make sure the roots don't dry out. Water until the ground is frozen and won't accept any more water.

That's all there is to it. Cut the roses back unceremoniously, mulch them and go in the house. Oh, you did put all the rose debris in the trash, didn't you? Those old leaves and canes have insect eggs and disease spores all over them, and you really don't want all that stuff in the compost

addressed envelope with $1 in care of this newspaper, and I'll send you my leaflet, "Rose

Pruning Made Easy." As always, you can e-mail me at: cwtwo@pnt.org

Hash-brown casserole recipe chips away fat, keeps aroma

By Elaine Magee
Knight Ridder News Service

This light, hash-brown casserole fills the house with a wonderful, savory smell as it bakes. I also saw a similar recipe listed in the top 10 Thanksgiving recipes at www.all-recipes.com.

- HASH BROWN CASSEROLE
- Canola cooking spray
 - 2 pounds packaged frozen country-style hash brown potatoes, thawed
 - 2 tablespoons melted butter
 - 6 tablespoons chicken broth
 - 1 10.75-ounce can condensed cream of chicken soup
 - 8 ounces fat-free or light sour cream
 - 1 cup chopped onions
 - 2 cups shredded reduced-fat sharp cheddar cheese
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

2 cups crushed corn flakes (just use your hands to crush the flakes into a 2-cup measure)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Coat a 9-by-13-by-2-inch baking dish with canola cooking spray. Add hash browns, butter, broth, condensed cream of chicken soup, sour cream, chopped onion, cheese, salt and pepper to a large bowl and stir to blend well. Place mixture in prepared baking dish. Sprinkle corn flakes over the top, press gently over the top of the corn flakes. Generously coat the corn flakes with canola cooking spray. Bake covered in oven for 30 minutes. Remove cover and bake an additional 10-15 minutes or until casserole is lightly brown on top and bubbling. Serves 12.

After tragedy, woman finds solace in cooking

By Linda Cicero
The Miami Herald

Geena McClenning e-mailed: "I was stunned watching the unfolding events on TV Sept. 11. As the week went by, I, like many others, was glued to the television. We lived on sandlot waffles; I could not bring myself to cook. After about one week, I began cooking again and it was healing. The chopping, cutting, dicing, washing utensils, measuring, were therapeutic. I looked for solace in comfort food. I found it in a beef stew. My Mom used to make Beef Stew to have some bread or mashed potatoes for the rich gravy."

PATRIOTIC BEEF STEW
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 1/2 pounds beef stew meat
1 small onion, chopped
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
1/2 cup onion
1/2 cup beef base (or 1 bouillon cube)
As many chopped carrots as you want
As much quartered potato as you want
Heat the oil and brown meat in a skillet along with the onion. Add garlic when meat is browned and cook 2 more minutes. Add contents of skillet to slow cooker. In a bowl, mix the tomato paste, seasonings and 2 cups water with bouillon. Add to pot. Cook on high for about 6 hours. Add carrots and potatoes 1 hour before the end of cooking. Makes 6 servings.

NOTE: Instead of a slow cooker, you can use a Dutch oven or other pot with a tight-fitting lid. Bring to a boil over high heat, then reduce heat to bare simmer.

USDA gives freezing guidelines for foods

Light Rider News Service
Frozen foods remain safe indefinitely, according to the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. While freezing fruits and vegetables results in some loss of quality, they will be fine in pies, casseroles, soups and smoothies. Here are the USDA's suggested maximum freezing times for some common foods held at 0 degrees:
One to two months - Bacon and sausage; casseroles; ham, hot dogs and lunchmeats
Two to three months - Fruit, uncooked or cooked; cooked vegetables; cooked meat; soups and stews
Three to four months - Uncooked ground meat; cooked poultry
Four to six months - Uncooked steaks and chops
Nine months - Uncooked poultry parts; uncooked roast
Eight to 12 months - Uncooked game
12 months - Uncooked whole poultry

Cook's corner

mer and cook at least 1 hour, and up to 6 hours, until meat is very tender. Add vegetables 30 minutes to 1 hour before end of cooking time.

"Like you, I've found cooking old-fashioned foods for my family a way to cope with fear and worry," wrote Cathy Hansen of Davis, Fla. "I want my house to smell like my mother's home did when the children came home from school, with the safe aroma of baking bread and simmering soup... This is her recipe for what she simply called sweet biscuits, which we love as a snack served with honey and butter or served with soups."

SWEET BISCUITS
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup butter or margarine
2/3 cup plus about 2 tablespoons milk
Stir flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together in a large bowl. With 2 knives or a pastry blender cut in the butter until the mixture looks like coarse meal. Stir in milk just until the dry ingredients are moistened. Flour your hands and shape pieces of dough into balls about the size of a golf ball. Place about 1 1/2 inches apart on a greased baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes or until as brown as you like. Makes 18.

Denise B. of Miami asked if anyone had a crab soufflé recipe that was a favorite of former Florida governor Reubin Askew. This recipe was clipped from a circa 1975 newspaper.

GOVERNOR ASKEW'S CRABMEAT AU GRATIN

4 tablespoons butter (divided use)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 pint crabmeat, rinsed and picked over to remove any shell pieces
1/2 cup cream
2 egg yolks
Grated Parmesan or Romano cheese to taste
Paprika

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan over medium heat. Add the salt and pepper and crabmeat and saute 5 minutes, stirring gently. Add the cream and blend well. While briskly stirring, add the egg yolks and cook 4 minutes more. Put the mixture in a casserole dish and sprinkle cheese gently over the top. Sprinkle with paprika and dot with remaining butter. Bake until golden brown, about 8 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

This is the only freezer pickle recipe I've ever found. The pickles are not bright green, but they are sweet and fairly crispy, made without the fuss of canning. The recipe is from Sunset Magazine's 1988 "Canning & Preserving."

SWEET FREEZER PICKLE CHIPS

1 medium-size mild white onion
2 1/2 pounds (about 5 medium) cucumbers, unpeeled
2 tablespoons salt
2 quarts ice cubes
4 cups sugar
2 cups cider vinegar
Thinly slice onion. Slice cucumber about 1/8-inch thick. Mix cucumber and onion slices with salt in large bowl; cover with ice cubes and refrigerate for 2 to 3 hours. Drain off water and discard unmelting ice cubes; do not rinse. Pack cucumber and onion slices in freezer containers or freezer jars, filling to within 1 1/2 inches of top. In a 2-quart pan, combine sugar and vinegar; bring to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Pour just enough hot syrup over cucumbers to cover. Place lids on containers. Cool, then freeze for at least 1 week. To thaw, place container in refrigerator for at least 8 hours. Makes about 3 pints (about 24 servings).

Bill Marine of Key Largo asked for help in recreating the "best Roquefort cheese dressing to be found anywhere," which he enjoyed many years ago at Mac's Bar-B-Que in Key Largo.

ROQUEFORT CHEESE DRESSING

2 quarts mayonnaise
8 to 12 ounces Roquefort cheese
2 (8-ounce) cartons sour cream
Juice of 3 lemons
1 large onion, chopped very fine
1 handful chopped parsley
3 dashes Worcestershire sauce
Dash of garlic salt
Salt and pepper to taste
Mix mayonnaise and Roquefort; refrigerate overnight. Transfer to a blender or food processor and add the sour cream, lemon juice, onion, parsley, Worcestershire, garlic salt, and salt and pepper; mix well. Makes about 3 1/2 quarts; may be halved or doubled. Keeps well in refrigerator.

FOOD & HOME

Grayson home reflects contemporary times

The four-bedroom Grayson is a contemporary home with a Craftsman flavor. At the same time, it's a prime example of changes in homeowner preferences since the inception of Associated Designs' weekly columns, 10 years ago.

The overall size of an average home, for instance, has increased from 2,089 square feet to 2,250 square feet. This one, at a little over 2,400 square feet, measures pretty close to the new norm. Its three-car garage is also a sign of the times. One in six homes now has space for three cars, or two plus additional storage capacity.

In the Grayson, Craftsman styling is seen in the tapered columns fronting the deep covered porch, as well as in the river rock wainscoting and column supports. Other Craftsman-inspired touches include decorative roof supports and the trademark double-hung windows, each with multiple upper panes and a large single pane below.

Entering, you step into a vaulted entry where light spills in through sidelights and a broad transom window. Double doors on the right open into a dining room that can be fully enclosed if desired. Dining rooms have come back into popularity in the past 10 years. In the late '80s and early '90s, many people viewed them as an expensive waste of space.

The bright and spacious great room, directly ahead of the entry, is open to the kitchen. The majority of homebuyers now prefer this configuration, rather than the separate parlor and family room of the past. The room's vaulted ceiling slopes down to a richly glassed rear wall, where a gas fireplace nestles into the left corner. More light washes in through two large rectangular skylights.

The kitchen and informal dining area are off to the right, separated only by an angled work island with a raised eating counter. Standing at the kitchen sink you can keep an eye on everybody and everything in the great room, nook, patio and rear yard. Visual openness in the main gathering space has also become the standard in recent years.

Laundry appliances are nearby, in a pass-through utility room that connects to the garage. The half-bath with utility sink is convenient for wash-up after gardening or working in the garage. A stairway next to the bathroom leads to a large bonus room over the garage.

wall of the vaulted master suite, which is well away from the three secondary bedrooms - now the preferred location. And 36 percent of new homes now have four bedrooms, up from 28 percent in 1991. This despite an average family size of 2.6 per household. Many of these rooms are now being used as home offices, computer rooms, or put to other uses.

The Grayson's adult-retreat boasts a huge walk-in closet and an elegant bathroom with a soaking tub, twin vanities, and an oversized shower. A strong desire for these amenities has held firm for more than the past decade.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Department W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Grayson 30-305 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 350 home plans is available for $15. For more information, call (800) 634-0123.

Hot water/space heating combo proves efficient

DEAR JIM: My furnace is inefficient and the water heater is old too. I might install a new combination hot water/space heating unit to replace both. Are they efficient and will there be enough hot water?

-JON S.

DEAR JON: The answers are yes and yes. A combination system that produces hot air and hot water can be very energy efficient. Since the unit must have enough heat output capacity to heat your entire house, it can provide more hot water for morning showers than even the largest family could ever use.

Another advantage of a combination system is it can be used for warm floor radiant heating in one or more rooms. This is one of the most comfortable heating methods, especially in the morning when you wake up.

Instead of having the two completely separate heating units, one for air and one for water, it runs on a single unit. This requires an intuitive sense to do both tasks. A combination system requires only one contractor, fewer regular maintenance calls, produces less noise and often lower utility bills.

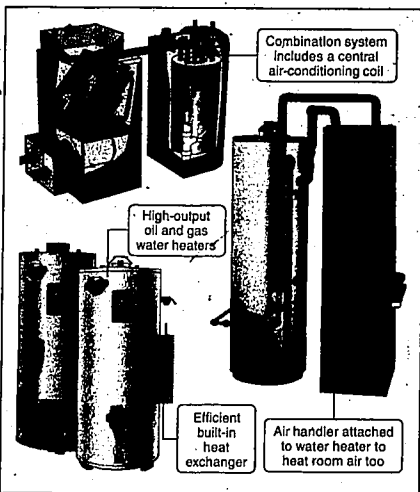

The space heating portion is probably no more efficient than any other super-efficient gas or oil furnace. The big savings is for the hot water because the same efficient burners are used to heat the water too. This requires a smaller built-in hot water tank for less standby losses.

There are two basic types of combination systems: integral and modular. An integral unit heats both the hot water and room air in one cabinet which is slightly larger than the typical gas furnace. A modular unit has a water heating unit that is connected by pipes to a separate air handler (blower).

In both systems, very hot water flows through a heat exchanger in the air handler. The blower circulates the room air through the heat exchanger where it picks up heat from the hot water.

A central air-conditioning coil and air cleaner can be installed just like in any furnace or heat pump.

There are many types of air handler units made to fit almost any location and heating needs. Smaller ones can be mounted inside a wall to heat only one room. Other whole-house models use efficient smart variable-speed motors for comfort. They use 75 percent less electricity than standard motors.

Hot house and water with one efficient unit.

A high-output (gas, oil or propane) water heater is needed for a large house or an inefficient smaller house.

a mild climate, an efficient, standard-output water heater often provides adequate heating capacity. Your contractor can size it properly for you.

If you are considering switching from expensive electric heat, consider a condensing system. It vents outdoors horizontally through a small plastic pipe without requiring a chimney.

Stew can brighten any spook's day after Halloween candy

Tonight is Halloween. Little ghosts and goblins will be swarming the streets and racing from house to house filling bags with candy and other goodies from friends and neighbors. If your resident spooks are anything like mine were, they will be cold and hungry when they get back home from a long night of looting the neighborhood.

I know the kids won't think they want soup or stew, but when they are eating too much candy, a bowl of soup or stew works wonders.

Try one of the following in your cauldron (a.k.a. stew pot) on Halloween. Start it in the morning or early afternoon and let it simmer all day long. The ingredients in stew need time for the flavors to blend together and "stew" in the pot. Your home will smell so delicious to the kids after a long, cold trip around town.

A nice loaf of French or Italian bread will help sop up all the yummy juice from the bottom of the bowl. Remember, the longer a stew simmers, the better it tastes. It is even better warmed up the next day.

MEXICAN CHICKEN
Serves 6 to 8

- 1 roasting chicken (5 pounds), disjointed
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 cups water
- 5 tablespoons olive oil

1 large onion, sliced
1 small can pimientos
1 medium can tomatoes
2 cloves garlic, crushed
Olive oil
2 tablespoons chili powder
Chicken broth (if needed)
1/3 cup ground peanuts
1/2 cup ground almonds
1/2 teaspoon anise seed
3 ounces raisins
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 pinch powdered cloves
2 pinches cinnamon
2 dashes Tabasco sauce
1 square bitter chocolate, grated

Put chicken in stew pot with salt and water and cover well. Bring to a boil; turn down to simmer and cook for 60 minutes or longer. Cook until the meat is falling off the bones. Remove bones from the chicken. Discard the bones and set the chicken meat aside. Reserve the liquid. Heat the 5 tablespoons olive oil in the stew pot and add onion, pimientos, tomatoes and garlic; saute for 15 minutes. Mix enough additional olive oil with the chili powder to make a paste, and stir it in with the vegetables. Measure the broth and add canned chicken broth, if needed, to make 2 1/2 cups. Add this and the chicken meat to the pot and bring to a boil. Add the peanuts, almonds, anise seed, raisins, nutmeg, orange rind, cloves, cinnamon and Tabasco. Cover pot and simmer for 30 minutes or longer, stirring occasionally. Just before you are ready to serve the stew, stir in the grated chocolate, and heat for 10 minutes.

BIGOS (Polish Hunter's Stew)
Serves 6 to 8

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 can beef broth
- 2 pounds Polish sausage, diced
- 1 small head cabbage, shredded
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 3 cups sauerkraut
- 1 can tomato sauce
- 2 apples, peeled and diced
- 1/2 cup pitted prunes, quartered

1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper, to taste
1/2 cup red wine
1/4 cup water
1 clove garlic
Melt butter in stew pot and saute the onion till lightly browned. Add broth, sausage, cabbage, mushrooms, sauerkraut, tomato sauce, apples, prunes, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer slowly for at least 1 1/2 hours.

Add wine, water and garlic and simmer another 40 minutes. If any is left over, it should be refrigerated in a glass bowl.

LAMB RAGOUT
Serves 6 to 8

- 3 pounds boned shoulder of lamb, cut into 1 1/2-inch cubes
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 2 teaspoons seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 teaspoon saffron
- 1 1/2 teaspoons coriander
- 1/2 teaspoon cumin
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 5 tablespoons bacon drippings
- 1 can black-eyed peas
- 1 can black-eyed peas
- 2 medium carrots, sliced
- 6 medium onions, sliced
- 1 green pepper, seeded and diced
- 1 cup tomato puree
- 3 tablespoons seeded raisins

Water, if needed
1 can black-eyed peas
Mix flour, cayenne pepper, black pepper, seasoned salt, paprika, saffron, coriander, cumin and sugar. Roll cubes of meat in this mixture. Melt bacon drippings in stew pot and brown the meat cubes on all sides. Remove the browned meat and set aside. Add garlic, turnips, carrots, onions and green peppers to the pot and saute slowly for 10 minutes, stirring as you go. Add tomato puree and raisins and return meat to pot. Simmer for 2 hours, adding water if needed. Just before serving add the black-eyed peas and cook for 10 minutes.

In trying times, some folks take comfort in cooking

By Sylvia Rector
Detroit Free Press

Leaving work the evening of Sept. 11, all I wanted was to get home, hug my family and make them feel safe. And I needed reassurance, too.

I tried to think of how to soothe us all. "I'll make mashed potatoes for dinner," I thought. But somewhere between the office and my driveway, the idea began to seem ridiculous. The world was flying apart, and I was thinking about potatoes? I was embarrassed. I went to a prayer service and came home to make scrambled eggs and toast, which we ate in the family room while we watched television.

I thought it would all soon pass—the comfort-food cravings, the uneasy feeling in my stomach, the deep need to do something for other people. But it hasn't for me, nor for most of the people I talk to.

SANDY'S HOMEMADE POTATO SOUP

6 medium-large potatoes, peeled, cut in 1/2-inch cubes (about 7-8 cups)

1 stick butter or margarine
2 stalks celery, thinly sliced
2 large onions, diced (about 3 cups)

2 cloves garlic, minced
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 cup boiling water
1 cup half-and-half
1 cup whole milk
1 teaspoon thyme
1/8 teaspoon dried rosemary
1/2 teaspoon paprika
Black pepper to taste
Salt to taste

Crisply cooked crumbled bacon, snipped fresh chives and shredded cheddar cheese, all optional, for garnishes. In a large saucpan over medium-high heat, cook cubed potatoes in enough water to cover until fork tender, about 15 minutes. Drain and set aside. In a medium skillet over medium heat, melt butter or margarine, add celery and onion and cook until translucent, about 5 minutes. Add minced garlic and saute about 1 minute. Dissolve bouillon cubes in the boiling water. In large soup pot or kettle, combine cooked potatoes and celery-onion mixture. Add, in order, dissolved bouillon, half-and-half, milk, thyme, rosemary and paprika and mix gently. Slowly bring to a simmer and cook for 20-25 minutes. Do not boil. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Ladle into large soup bowls and garnish with crumbled bacon, fresh chives and grated cheddar cheese if desired. Makes 6 servings.

SIMPLE MAC AND CHEESE FOR TWO
Butter for the ramekins

1 cup penne pasta
1 cup half-and-half
1 cup (1/4 pound) grated cheddar cheese
Dash of hot pepper sauce, such as Tabasco
Kosher or sea salt
Freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Butter two 1-cup ramekins or small baking dishes. Bring a medium pot of salted water to a boil over high heat and cook the pasta until al dente, or slightly firm to the bite, about 10-12 minutes. Do not overcook. Drain. In a medium bowl, combine the half-and-half, cheddar and cooked penne and season to taste with salt, pepper and hot pepper sauce. Pour into the prepared ramekins and sprinkle with the Parmigiano-Reggiano. Bake on the middle shelf of the oven until set, 15-20 minutes. Let rest for 5 minutes before serving. Makes 2 servings.

Sinatra's wife offers eggplant parmesan recipe

The Baltimore Sun

This is Frank Sinatra's recipe, given on daytime TV by his wife, Barbara.

EGGPLANT PARMESAN

- Sauce:
 - 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
 - 1 clove garlic
 - 1/4 teaspoon oregano
 - 1/3 cup tomato paste
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
 - 1/4 1/2-ounce can peeled tomatoes

- 1/4 cup parsley flakes
- 1 bay leaf
- Eggplant:
 - 1 large globe eggplant, sliced
 - 1 large egg
 - 1/4 cup flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 6 to 8 tablespoons olive oil

To make the sauce, mix sauce ingredients and simmer 30 to 45 minutes. Dip eggplant slices in egg, then in flour mixed with salt. Saute slices in olive oil, 3 minutes on a side. Add more oil between batches. Drain finished slices on paper towels. Spray 13-inch-by-9-inch-by-2-inch baking dish with nonstick spray. Spoon a layer of sauce on bottom, just to cover.

Top with a layer of eggplant and another layer of sauce. Top with half of mozzarella. Repeat, finishing with layer of cheese on top. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 20-25 minutes, until the top is browned and bubbly. Serves 6.

This is a delicious brunch food, and no one suspects that its base is biscuits from a can. The chunks of biscuit separate slightly, so it's an easy pastry to separate into smaller chunks. The overall effect is like a big, sticky cinnamon roll that fills the kitchen with a sublime aroma.

MONKEY BREAD

- 3 cans of biscuits (any kind)
 - 1/2 cup granulated sugar
 - 2 tablespoons cinnamon
 - 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
 - 1 cup brown sugar
 - 1/2 cup chopped nuts, optional
 - 1/2 cup raisins, optional
- Cut biscuits into quarters. Roll biscuits in a mixture of the granulated sugar and cinnamon. Grease a 10-inch bundt pan. Melt butter and brown sugar together. Layer biscuits in pan. Drizzle sugar and butter mixture over biscuits. Sprinkle nuts and raisins, if desired, before layering with more biscuits on top. Repeat nuts and raisins, if desired. Drizzle with remaining butter mixture. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 25 to 30 minutes. Turn pan onto plate and serve warm.

Cheryl Nevitt of Spring Grove, Ill., wrote that she made a bread in home economics class in many years ago. It was more like a poundcake, not kneaded, and when it was finished and still warm, we poured a sort of lemon-juice mixture over the top. It was delicious. Jody McKean of Hot Springs, S.D., responded with a recipe she says came from a cookbook her daughter was selling when she was in high school in Moreno Valley, Calif. It appeared in "Desserts for the '90s," and was submitted by Phyllis Kaylor, Ray Kroc Middle School, San Diego.

FABULOUS LEMON BREAD

- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 1 1/2 cups flour, sifted
- 1 teaspoon baking powder

RECIPE FINDER
Ellen Hawks

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 cup milk
 - 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
 - 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
 - 1/4 cup lemon juice or to taste
 - 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- Cream butter and sugar well;

beat in eggs one at a time. Add extract. Sift together the dry ingredients and add to first mixture, alternating with milk. Blend just enough to mix. Fold in lemon peel and nuts. Pour into well-buttered loaf pan (or several mini loaf pans) and bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 35-40 minutes. Mix together the lemon juice and sugar. While the bread is still in the pan and warm from the oven, poke in holes with a toothpick and pour lemon-juice mixture over top. Cool 10 minutes; turn out of pan. Makes 1 standard loaf or 3 mini loaves. You can top with sliced strawberries and a dollop of whipped cream. Wrap the loaf in plastic wrap and then in a layer of aluminum foil to keep the bread fresh for several days.

Human highlight reels

It's hard to believe that it has already been four months since my family and I moved to south-central Idaho. And what a time it has been. From the first moments I was here, when I came rambling up in the old haul and the next-door neighbor bolted from her house, introducing herself and welcoming me to the neighborhood, it was obvious that this was the right place for us.

From seemingly nowhere, Burley football coach Art Roper and Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints missionaries, Elder Haddock and Elder Nawakian, showed up the next morning and helped us move in, saving my wife's back.

THOMPSON'S TIMEOUT
Scott Thompson

If it ever perplexed you why all Burley football stories include phrases that go something like, "The Burley bobcat football team" coached by ruggedly handsome and equally brilliant Art Roper (who is a saint) hosts finico on Friday, you now know why.

And that has been our experience nearly everywhere we have gone and with everyone we have met.

Thank you.

Here, in no particular order, are some of the highlights of my first four months covering athletics in the area:

Patriots

The pregame ceremony of the Wood River homecoming game against Glenns Ferry provided a stirring and inspiring tribute to America's heroes on the Friday following the attacks on our country. The teams stood facing each other at the 45-yard lines with candles lit. The captains of the teams came together in a huddle and jointly lit another candle that stayed lit throughout the game. I suspect there were many similar ceremonies in the Magic Valley that night. This was just the one I saw. It was inspiring.

Little time

The first high-school state championship I covered in Idaho was just over the weekend when I went to Pocatello for the 4A and 5A soccer tournaments. Congratulations to the very classy Twin Falls boys' soccer team and coach Trent Felton after the Bruins' second-place finish. The kid back Felton never debated with officials, took a cell-phone call during the vertice of the semifinal game and guided a very relaxed and very talented team to the brink of the title. Congratulations also to the Burley boys' soccer team, which also made way to state for the second year in row.

Elvis sighting

A trip to Castleford revealed Elvis Medina, who easily gets the award for best performance on the field, as he torched the Murtaugh Red Devils for 313 yards rushing on just 13 carries in the Wolves' 38-40 victory. Since the game ran long, I had just 14 minutes to write about a game that featured 18 touchdowns. If I die young, deadlines will be to blame.

Wingo's blingo

Minico center fielder Jordan Wingo's 11th-inning grand-slam homer to cap a seven-run rally in the same dirt kept the Spartans alive in the district tournament. The state AA and A American Legion tournaments provided a very high level of baseball but seemed almost anti-climatic after that blast.

Good sports

Bar none the funnest athlete I've met thus far is Kimberly cross country runner Matt Taylor. However, despite a pleading, I didn't include him in the top 10 list of finishers from the leading cross country meet for the risky reason that he didn't finish in the top 10. Still, he provided me and numerous other runners a good laugh as he persistently made his case. And the most engaging personality I have come across is Burleigh sophomore volleyball star Jillian Cutler. You will not run across a more well-spoken, bubbly young woman.

LAUNCHING SEQUENCE

Jordan shows rust in regular season debut

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Michael Jordan wasn't exactly the No. 23 of old. Jordan missed his biggest shot of the night and committed two crucial late turnovers in the Washington Wizards' 93-91 loss to the New York Knicks, Jordan's first regular-season game after a 3.5-year retirement.

Jordan spent the majority of his minutes at point guard, scoring 19 points and putting up decent numbers in other categories.

But the defining moment of the game Tuesday night came when he missed a 3-pointer in front of the Knicks' bench with 18 seconds left that would have tied the game.

"I had a good look and it came up short. My shot today was pretty short and pretty flat," Jordan said. "It could have been a great situation, but it's the beginning of a long season - that's the way I look at it."

Jordan's final miss was his 14th in 21 attempts. He also had the two late turnovers, along with an airball and a missed breakaway layup in the first quarter.

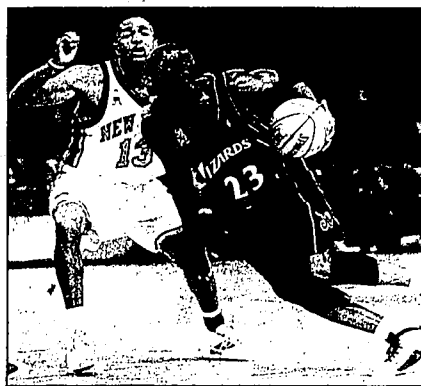

"The game is a little bit different, my teammates are a little bit different, and obviously the outcome tonight is a little different from what I wanted," Jordan said. "But I feel good about myself and about what the team did tonight, and we have to continue to work in the right direction." Wearing his familiar uniform No. 23 but the unfamiliar colors of blue, black and gold, Jordan made his much-anticipated comeback before a sellout crowd at Madison Square Garden - the site of some of his greatest moments.

He was cheered during player introductions, jeered when he tossed up an airball less than three minutes into the game and scrutinized on every move the rest of the night.

The Knicks took an 87-86 lead into the final two minutes, and after Latrell Sprewell hit a turnaround, Jordan answered with a 21-footer - his first field goal of the quarter - to cut New York's

A time to shine

Area volleyball stars enjoy a final fling

By Scott Thompson

TWIN FALLS - Lots of fun, no stress and a little nostalgia were all in the mix at the District Four All-Star Volleyball competition Tuesday at Twin Falls High School as 32 seniors played the final games of their careers in their high school uniforms.

The players, who were split up between four teams, were selected by a committee of 16 after nominations were accepted from all Magic Valley coaches.

For some, the games were a chance to go out and experience the joy of playing volleyball with nothing on the line after weeks of pressure-packed tournament matches. Others enjoyed bonding with teammates who had formerly been their chief rivals.

For Murtaugh's Anne Adolphsen, it was yet another unique experience in a long list of them as the German exchange student was honored to be chosen.

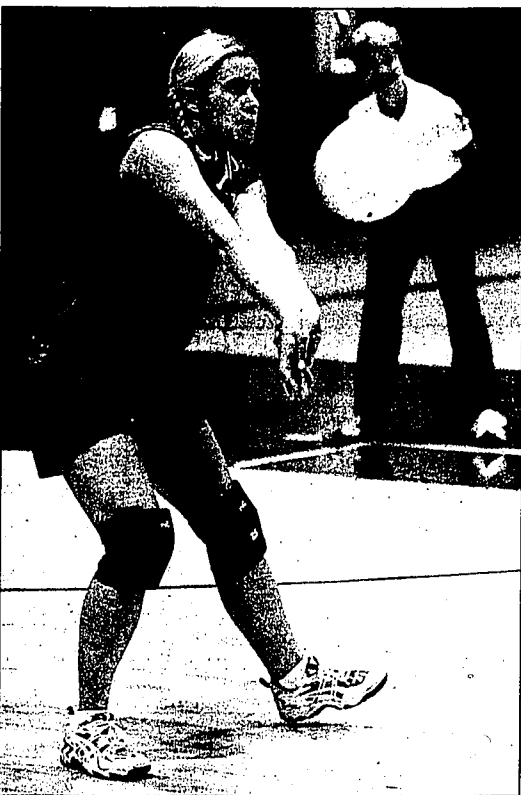

"I don't think there are too many exchange students who get to play in it," she said with virtually no hint of an accent.

The volleyball court might be one of the few places where Adolphsen feels at home since Murtaugh is not exactly Hamburg, a city of 3 million people, and she has been playing volleyball since she was very young.

"You have 3 million and you have Murtaugh - maybe 200," she laughed. "It's light and dark. But the people are really nice and it's easier to make friends."

Tuesday's experience allowed her to make some new friends, even with girls from Raft River, who played Adolphsen's Red Devils in a hotly contested Southside Conference championship match two weeks ago. Raft River Trojans Stacie Lock and Tami Lee combined with Adolphsen and other schools in that part of the Magic Valley to force the South East team.

"I was nervous at first to play with them," Adolphsen said.

Anne Adolphsen from Murtaugh passes the ball during the South East vs. South West game during the District Four All-Star game Tuesday night in Twin Falls.

Regine Cavagnoud

"But they're real nice."

The experience of former rivals coming together to play on the same team was also repeated on the other three squads - North West, North East and South West.

Twin Falls' Kim Strunk, Briana Allen and Christie Deagle played on a team with Buhl's Katelan Tigwe and Karissa Howell.

"It's fun because we don't hate each other since we're on the same team," Strunk said. Minico's Natalie Thompson and Jerome's Lora Hadlock were also enjoying the experience with nonstop laughter and leg slaps.

"It's been so much fun," Thompson said. "I love these girls and they just keep me laughing. We're just here to have fun and compete. This is really cool that they can get all of these All-Stars together to play. It really is an honor."

Rocket fuels Yankee Game 3 win

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Roger Clemens and Mariano Rivera showed the Arizona Diamondbacks they know a little bit about pitching in the World Series, too.

The Rockies won when the New York Yankees couldn't afford to lose, shutting down the Diamondbacks over seven innings for a 2-1 win Tuesday night that cut Arizona's lead to two games-to-one.

Fumped and psyched, Clemens allowed only three hits and struck out nine. Rivera threw two perfect innings in relief, and that was it for Game 3.

"I knew it was a game that we had to have," Clemens said.

Crash injures top skier

Investigation looks at coach's role

The Associated Press

INNSBRUCK, Austria - A German ski coach was under investigation Tuesday for possibly causing the accident that left French World Cup champion Regine Cavagnoud on a respirator with serious brain damage.

Coach Marko Anwander also was on a respirator but was not injured quite as badly as the 31-year-old super-G World Cup champion in the crash on an Austrian glacier on Monday during practice.

Cavagnoud remained in critical condition a day after the accident and doctors said her injuries were worse than they originally thought.

Dr. Wolfgang Koller, head of the trauma intensive care unit at Innsbruck University Clinic, said Cavagnoud has been under heavy sedation since Monday.

"We have received the confirmation that she likely suffered serious brain damage," he said. Asked if the damage was irreparable, the doctor said, "We cannot yet judge the full impact. This will be possible sometime tomorrow."

Dr. Robert Mutz, another physician in the trauma intensive-care ward, later told Austrian state television Cavagnoud's injuries were "most serious" and "one has to count with the worst, but there is always hope."

German and French ski officials said Tuesday the accident was caused by communication problems between their teams, which were both practicing on the Fitztal glacier.

The Austrian prosecutor has begun investigating. Spokesman Rudolf Koll said Tuesday the coach may be responsible for the accident.

President throws a strike

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - President Bush delivered a strike with the ceremonial first pitch of World Series Game 3 at Yankee Stadium on Tuesday night, aiming to project an air of normalcy even as the government warned of possible new terror attacks.

Bush delivered a thunderous cheer as he strode to the mound from the Yankees' dugout, wearing a sweat shirt emblazoned with FDNY, a tribute to the New York City Fire Department.

He stood on the mound and scanned the upper reaches of a sellout crowd of 77,000 and gave a

Ford ousts Nasser as company CEO

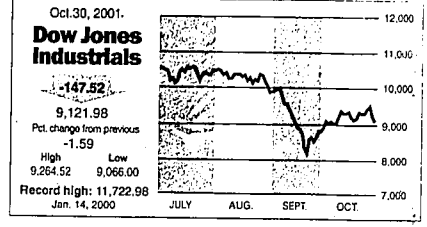

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Jacques Nasser was ousted as CEO of the slumping Ford Motor Co., replaced by the great-grandson of founder Henry Ford, the company told employees Tuesday.

man William Clay Ford Jr., who replaces Nasser as chief executive officer. While announcing that Nasser's resignation had been accepted, Ford Jr. complimented his predecessor's service, saying Nasser "made many significant contributions to our business operations around the world, and we all appreciate his dedication." The management shake-up included the elevation of North American group vice president Nick Scheele, known as "Mr. Fixit," to chief operating officer. Scheele will be succeeded by Jim Padilla, group vice president for manufacturing and quality. Also, vice president and community relations director James Vines will be dismissed. "We've been given an amazing legacy, and we're going to build an even better one," said Ford Jr., who was speaking at an auditorium at company headquarters. "The sole reason for these changes is to ensure the ongoing success of the Ford Motor Co." "I'm willing to do whatever it takes to take this company forward," Ford Jr. told reporters at an early afternoon news conference. He said the job "is not something I sought, but something the board thought was necessary."

Attacks

Continued from D4 percent to $91 million, or 41 cents per share, and International Paper, the No. 1 paper producer, had a net loss of $275 million in the third quarter.

for ABN AMRO Inc. in New York. It's not all bad news. Campbell Soup Co. acknowledged financial troubles in its canned soup division before Sept. 11 as consumers-on-the-go ran toward seemingly easier-to-prep items.

Economy

Continued from D4 a rebound in confidence anytime soon," said Lynn Franco, director of the Conference Board's Consumer Research Center. "With the holiday season quickly approaching, there is little positive stimuli on the horizon."

which accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity. The index compares results with its base year, 1985, when it stood at 100. The October figure is the lowest since February 1994. Analysts were surprised by the drop in October, particularly since another gauge of consumer sentiment showed an upward tick in consumer spending for the month.

Weak consumer confidence numbers send stocks down

NEW YORK (AP) — The weakest consumer confidence report in 7.5 years sent stocks sharply lower Tuesday as Wall Street got another reminder that the economy faces a gloomy recovery.

for two-thirds of the economy, and many analysts believe strong spending — not the nine interest rate cuts this year or the tax and other government stimulus packages created to stimulate growth — has kept the economy from a recession. A drop, such as the one in the October numbers, threatens that.

Checks

Continued from D4 first check their records or contact their tax preparers, the IRS said. Then call the IRS toll-free assistance line at 1-800-829-1040. "All we need is a good address," Rossotti said. "As soon as we get the correct address, we'll start the check on its way. But for the advance payments, we need that information before Dec. 5 so we have time to reprocess the checks."

refunds will be the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 authorized the payments — says the checks cannot be issued after Dec. 31. That means there won't be time to process claims made after Dec. 5, the IRS said. However, people eligible can instead claim a credit on their 2001 tax returns, starting in January.

longer if it can't get their check to them before the end of this year," Rossotti said. The advance payment checks of up to $300 for individuals, $500 for heads of households and $600 for married couples represented this year's payment for creation of a new 10 percent income tax bracket as part of the 10-year, $1.35 trillion tax cut signed into law by President Bush in June. Nationwide, the checks returned to the IRS represent only a fraction of 1 percent of the $5 million mailed out. To ensure the IRS has their correct addresses, taxpayers who have moved since filing their last tax returns can file Form 8822, "Change of Address," with the IRS. The form can be downloaded from the IRS Web site at www.irs.gov or can be requested by calling 1-800-829-3676.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 9,219.98, or 1.6 percent down, for a two-day loss of 423 points. It was the index's worst finish in three weeks, when the Dow closed at 9,052.44 on Oct. 9.

Broader stock indicators also dropped. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was off 18.51, or 1.7 percent, to 1,059.79, and the Nasdaq composite index lost $2.11, or 1.9 percent, to 1,667.41.

"The recovery is going to occur, but what this tells us is that it's going to be a much more muted even though we have very low interest rates and an awful lot of fiscal stimulus out there." Other economic reports due later this week will also be closely watched. Preliminary third-quarter gross domestic product, due out today, is expected to show active growth — if fourth quarter GDP growth is also negative, it would meet the traditional definition of a recession.

Comfortable themes dominate this year's T-N Halloween Costume Contest

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - There are no new Halloween costume ideas: Only grandmas with sewing machines.

"Grandma made it," said Donette Piccinetti of Twin Falls, whose cow-clad three-year-old son Mark won the Cutest division in the 2001 Times-News Halloween Costume Contest. "It's a pretty simple idea, but she sure made it look original."

Mark's grandmother - Louise Bergener of Oakley - accomplished that with small, imaginative details. Mark will proudly wear it trick-or-treating tonight.

"He's been out before, but this will be his first real year of trick-or-treating," Donette said. "He'll look great, but I'm not sure if Grandma will have to make another one next year."

Basic - and comfortable - themes were the rule for this Halloween, as befits the aftermath of the events of Sept. 11: No monsters, no villains, no spooks entered this year's contest.

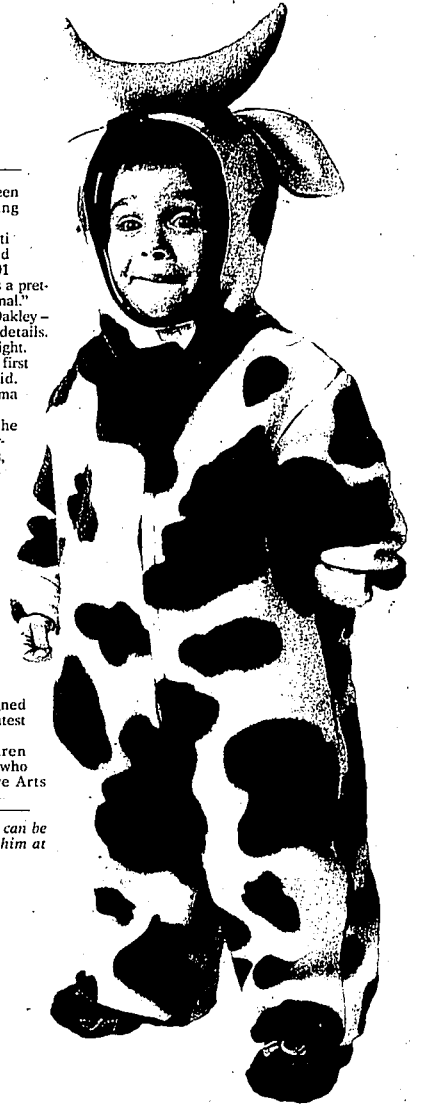

Nikolas Shaw of Twin Falls, who's 1 1/2 years old, won the Funniest Costume division as a skunk, and siblings Samantha Guinn, 10, and brother Garrett, 7, both of Buhl, were the winners of the Most Creative and Most Original categories, respectively.

Samantha earned the honors for her rendition of the character Jessie from the movie "Toy Story," and Garrett was the Most Original for an Indian named Chief Whiteskin.

Winners received specially designed Times-News Halloween Costume Contest T-shirts.

The event was judged by Karen Fothergill, an artist and teacher who operates the Twin Falls Creative Arts Center.

Times-News writer Steve Crump can be reached at 735-3223, or write to him at crump@magicvalley.com

Right, Samantha Guinn, 10, was the Most Creative for her version of 'Toy Story's' Jessie, while younger brother Garrett, 7, took the Most Original honors for an Indian called Chief Whiteskin.

Last-minute sweatsuit costumes

Here is a list of accessories you will need for these costumes:

Costume	Color sweats	Materials
Rabbit	Pink or white	Cotton ball tail, construction paper ears that can be glued, taped, or safety-pinned to hood (if hooded sweat shirt) or cap. Eyeliner pencil to draw on whiskers. Lipstick for pink nose.
Lion	Yellow or brown	Rag mop or yarn for mane (yarn can be glued to hood or cap). Rope tail (can be tucked into back of pants). Eyeliner for drawing whiskers on face.
Dinosaur	Dark green	Decorated with a yellow "bib" (can be yellow material) and yellow "spines" down the back. (can be sewn and stuffed, or cut out of stiff paper), red eyes and big white teeth attached to the hood. For a dragon, can add "wings" (cut a large square of see-through green cloth, cut into 2 large triangles. Attach points to wrists, under arm and hip)
Cat	Black	To dress up this cat attach fake fur to an oversized white T-shirt that will have sleeves and back cut out (to make a white front for a black-and-white cat). Maybe fur on black gloves, too? Add whiskers and construction paper pointed black ears to complete the costume.
Mouse	Gray	Need big ears attached to the hood (gray and pink felt or construction paper) and a (rope) tail on the back, eyeliner for whiskers.
Dalmatian puppy	White	Attach black felt ears to the white hood of sweat jacket or white baseball cap. Sew felt spots on the sweats (or attach with safety pins or glue gun).

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"With effervescing opinions, as with the not yet forgotten champagne, the quickest way to let them go flat is to let them get exposed to the air."

—Oliver Wendell Holmes

"I chose the best way to avoid losing a trump trick," claimed an unrepentant South.

"Avoiding the loss of a trump trick should have been your last priority," was North's flattening reply. "Since West was just as likely to have four trumps as East, you should have guarded against either possibility."

South ruffed the third spade and executed his "safety play." If either opponent held four trumps, South could pick up the suit only if East held four to the jack. Accordingly, South cashed his ace and led another heart to dummy's king, ready to finesse against East's imaginary guarded jack.

Unfortunately, it was West who held the stack, creating huge problems. Hoping to discard his two low clubs on dummy's diamonds, South cashed his high trump and tried to run dummy's diamonds. Unfortunately, West ruffed the second diamond and led a spade, leaving South with two club losers for the two down.

Had East held the trump stack, South would have picked two trumps and claimed an overtrick. However, South overlooked a bona fide safety play that succeeds against either opponent.

To cinch game against any 4-1 trump break, South should cash dummy's trump king after ruffing the third spade and lead another trump. When East discards, South gives West his trump trick and retains control. If East follows to the second trump, South wins, picks up trumps, and scores an easy overtrick if it is West who holds the singleton trump.
