Lawmakers wrap up session

School building plan marks final days

The Associated Press
BOISE - A new approach to addressing the nagging question of school building construction costs won final legislative approval on Friday, marking a sea change in state policy as lawmakers adjourned for the year. A 49-21 House vote was followed by quick Senate agreement with a technical change, and the bill was forwarded to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. The governor heralded it as a significant breakthrough in the decade-long debate over the level of state responsibility for school buildings. Kempthorne said it was legislation "which I'll be very proud to sign."

Under court pressure to fix an unconstitutional system, legislators developed the plan for a sliding scale of state interest subsidy payments for major construction in every school district. A larger percentage of interest costs would go to economically depressed areas in an attempt to correct what supporters called a serious inequity between the state's wealthy and beleaguered school districts. "It's a change in policy," said its sponsor, Republican Lawrence Denney of Midvale. "This bill does not deal with health and safety. This bill deals with the long-term facilities issue." Lawmakers in both the House and Senate tied up other loose ends before their early evening

BREAKING AWAY

The east rim of the Salmon Falls Creek Canyon near Buhl has been sliding downward for several years, but at a rate much faster than experts predicted. As recently as two years ago the lower land mass, as seen in photo below taken in March 2000, was almost even with the rim on the right in the above photograph. Now the land block is about 45 feet lower. The area is extremely unpredictable and dangerous, and BLM officials encourage people to stay away from the area.

Sagging canyon presents danger

BLM considers limiting access to Salmon Falls Creek

—BUHL—Step gingerly and look sharp. There are enough hidden hazards here to make geologist Karen Shilling nervous. "More than once, I've found myself up to my hips in a crevice that had been hidden by a little drifting soil," Shilling said while she and other passengers bounced along in a Bureau of Land Management truck headed for the east-rim-of-Salmon Falls Creek Canyon.

The BLM for safety reasons might have to limit motor vehicle access to the area, which now contains a two-track road and a small parking area. Shilling would rather people not go into the area at all. That's because the ground is being pushed, pulled and ripped apart by a massive, creeping landslide that is peeling a 12-acre block away from the canyon wall. The phenomenon is officially called the Blue Gill Landslide. The block and the land around it is moving - mostly downward - at a rate of about six inches a year, Shilling said. That might sound like a crawl from a hiker's standpoint. But in terms of geology, it's a screaming sprint, she said. And that's what makes the area dangerous. Because of the forces at work, cracks anywhere from a few inches to dozens of feet deep are opening, closing and changing positions without any warning or pattern, she said. What's worse, the openings can easily be covered up by soil, snow or debris, making them potential and possibly deadly traps for unsuspecting passers-by. "If people want to see the landslide, they should go to the west rim and look across the canyon at it. The view and scope of it is much better from there anyway." She also said she has a vivid collection of photos and plenty of information posted on a Web site about the slide. Just down the canyon from the current slide area, a huge chunk of the rim gave way in 1937, in what is known as the Sinking Ranch Landslide. Shilling said there's no way of knowing if the Blue Gill area is winding up for a similar catastrophe, but it doesn't seem likely. Even so, the Army Corps of Engineers has recommended that the BLM and local officials be prepared for a "worst-case scenario" of the block and the area around it giving away suddenly. Although Salmon Falls Creek below is a fairly popular fishing and waterfowl hunting

Skydiving aircraft goes down

The Times-News and The Associated Press

MARANA, Ariz. - An airplane used by the Army's Golden Knights skydiving team - which, performed in Twin Falls in January - went down Friday after colliding with a civilian aircraft following a training jump at a rural airport, a military spokesman said. Chief Warrant Officer Lowell K. Timmons, the military pilot, was killed, the military said. No hometown or age was available for Timmons. Lt. Col. Marian Hansen said the four Golden Knights parachutists aboard had jumped from the UV20 Porter turboprop plane prior to the collision. The plane landed in a crumpled:

Idaho's seemingly innocuous vote ripples across nation, world

By Dan Gallagher

BOISE - The last thing anyone in Idaho expected was an international incident. When the Idaho House took up a nonbinding resolution last week urging peaceful self-determination for Spain's Basque minority, they missed an eyebrow. There are 15,000 Basques in Idaho, the biggest such community in the United States, and Basque issues occasionally come up. "State Rep. David Bieter - whose district is Basque - introduced the measure, and 84-year-old Secretary of State Pete Conrassa, a Basque, spoke glowingly of his heritage and praised the resolution. "Today in the Basque country there is great joy," he said before the measure passed on a unanimous vote.

What happened next rippled all the way to the White House and beyond that to Spain. Javier Ruperez, the Spanish ambassador to the United States, complained that the resolution was a "gratuitously unfriendly gesture" and said Spain gives a high level of autonomy to the Basque region. He also said that failing to specifically condemn the violent Basque separatist group ETA - blamed for hundreds of deaths over the past 30 years - was like spot, the real concern would be over debris blocking the creek and creating fuel for a flash flood," he said.

About 20 homes and the Miracle Hot Springs Resort are downstream.

Even without a sudden slide, a flood could still be a concern.

"Standing on the rim with BLM heavy equipment operators, Tom Fillmore and John Lewis, Shilling pointed to an already-swollen section of the creek.

"The 'toe' of the landslide has shoved a natural dam across a bend in the stream, she said. The creek - which normally runs about 5 feet deep - is as deep as 30 feet behind the dam. Although it's not likely the dam will produce a flood any time soon, the BLM wants to lean toward prudence and do something to relieve the pressure.

One option might be to install a pump powerful enough to haul a significant amount of water over the dam at a controlled rate, Fillmore said. But the BLM might have to baby a bulldozer and backhoe down a ribbon of road that dives off the west rim and try to remove part of the dam, he said.

"It's not known whether one of those jumpers was Staff Sgt. Will Milling, a 1983 Twin Falls High School graduate who was part of the Golden Knights team that came to the city for January's Olympic torch relay celebration. Milling had been training in Arizona with the elite parachuting squad.

Hijackers' dad says he couldn't forgive, Yates

NEW YORK (AP) - The father of two accused Sept. 11 hijackers denied his sons were terrorists - but said in a television interview aired Friday that he would never forgive them if they were.

"If that turns out to be the truth, then I will never, never accept it from them," Mohammad Alshehri told ABC News' 20/20 program broadcast from Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. "I'll never forgive them for that," he said.

its seats and Judge Belinda Hill rushed in the side door and raced to the bench so fast nobody had time to stand up. "Verdict, verdict, verdict, verdict," Yates' husband, Russell "Rusty" Yates, chanted to himself, twirling his legs and twining his fingers.

"It's hell," Yates' husband said, the convicted mother turned to her lawyers and asked what the legal language meant. Defense lawyer Wendell Odom spoke into her ear, and Yates nodded. A few minutes later, she shuffled from the courtroom with a sidelong glance at her mother, brothers and sister.

Yates, a 37-year-old former nurse who struggled with mental illness for years, had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. Earlier this week, the jury rejected her insanity claim after just a few hours of deliberation, and found her guilty on two counts of capital murder. The jury had to decide between life in prison and death on the state gunnery. The jury decided Yates doesn't pose a future threat to society. She will be 77 before she is eligible for parole.

Yates was tried in Harris County, in a court system that accounts for roughly one-third of the convicts awaiting execution on Texas death row. But in a radically uncharacteristic move from Houston's district attorney's office, prosecutors passed up the chance to present evidence in the punishment phase, and stopped short of asking for a death sentence.

"Nothing I can do will restore their lives; the death penalty can't restore them," prosecutor Joseph Ombwy told the jury in his closing statement. "If you want to sentence her to life rather than a death sentence, you will have done the right thing."

The other prosecutor, Kaylyn Williford, avoided asking for death outright - but insinuated in her closing argument that she considered execution an acceptable punishment. "Those children the crash along with the military. The military asked Pima County officials for permission to conduct the autopsy on the pilot, said Dr. Eric Peters, the deputy chief medical examiner.

"It's a terrible tragedy whenever we lose one of our soldiers," Hansen said.

The Golden Knights are based out of Fort Bragg, N.C., but the competition team involved in Friday's crash had been practicing at the Marana Airport, about 20 miles north of Tucson, said Douglas Smith, a spokesman for the Army Recruiting Command.

He said the team trains in Arizona during the winter. Friday's collision was the second accident around the Marana Airport involving a military aircraft in two years.

In April 2000, a Marine Osprey, a plane that can take off and land like a helicopter and fly like an airplane, crashed there, killing all 19 Marines aboard.

Oregon man kills his family, himself

Yamhill County prosecutor Bryan C. Motie was unknown, but evidence indicated Robert Bryant, 37, killed his family, Berry said.

The children - ages 8 to 15 - were last at school on Feb. 22, and investigators believe the shootings occurred the following day.

Russi Yates talks about the verdict Friday in Houston.

never had a chance," Williford said. "You need to think about the pain those children endured, the terror and fear... Mrs. Yates had the benefit of friends and family and the health system, and she turned her back on that."

She meant to push execution without asking for it directly, Williford explained later. "Everyone talks about 'mitigating' this woman's issue; a political issue" she said. "But the issue to me is five dead children."

It has been nine months since Yates poured dry cereal for the children, then summoned them to the bathroom and killed them one by one. Noah, 7, John, 5, Paul, 3, Luke, 2, and 6-month-old Mary were buried together out on the outskirts of town after a funeral in a church they'd never attended.

The dead children themselves have been eclipsed these past weeks by their mother's trial. Aside from murmurs of "yes," "no" and "not guilty," Yates' voice is seldom heard.

Her case spurred public debate over methods of prosecuting the mentally ill, and the dangers of post partum depression. This week, a human rights group filed a complaint with the state of Texas. Yates was overmedicated, prematurely discharged from the hospital and given inappropriate drugs, the Citizens' Commission on Human Rights-Texas charged.

Standing outside the courtroom, defense lawyer George Farham read aloud from a note penned by Yates from jail. Without apologizing, Yates says she regrets any pain she caused her family and that mental illness had "brought me to a place that opened the way to the killing of the children."

The note continues with a brief eulogy for each child: Inquisitive Noah, John's "cute grin," "Precious Paul," "beautiful Luke" and Mary - "such a loving baby with big blue eyes."

"Thank God I was blessed with such a precious family," the letter concludes.

Meanwhile, Rusty Yates took the podium at an impromptu side-walk news conference. Ever since the June morning he stepped dry-eyed from his brick house and told reporters Andrea Yates wasn't in her right mind when she had drowned the children the day before, Rusty Yates has made a "very public point of standing behind his wife."

On Friday, he decried the mental health system that "miserably failed us," the judge who denied his constitutional right to talk to reporters and the prosecutors who put his Texas law on trial. He criticized his wife, who he says never told him she was thinking of hurting the children. He bemoaned the news reports that "vilified" his family. He pointed out, wistfully, that he and Andrea won't be able to have any more children, "and that's something that's important to us."

She got the death penalty - but it wouldn't have been a lot worse," he said as a warm rain began to fall. Asked whether he bears any responsibility in his children's deaths, Yates hesitated, then said, "I don't think that's a fair question."

"As a man, it's my responsibility to protect my family from outside the house," he said. "A family can't protect itself from a psychotic person. What can you do? ... If it hadn't been drowning them, it would have been smothering them at night or poisoning them at breakfast."

Yates said he didn't know whether he'd divorce his incarcerated spouse. "I'll be difficult being separated, not having the companionship," he said.

During the month-long trial, Yates and his family sat on one side of the courtroom, and Andrea Yates' mother, siblings and friends sat on the other. The two groups didn't glance at one another, and didn't speak in the corridors.

Andrea Yates has been medication since her arrest and is recovering slowly back to herself, psychiatrists say. "She'll live the rest of her life knowing what she's done," defense lawyer Farham told the jury Friday. "If it's punishment you want, there can be no greater punishment."

White House relents, restores fire funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House has agreed to release $280 million in wildfire money that had been approved by Congress last year, following several weeks of intense lobbying by Democratic and Republican lawmakers.

The Forest Service is intended as an emergency contingent fund - but $200 million of that will be sent to repay accounts which the Forest Service tapped to cover the costs of earlier firefighting, forest rehabilitation and community aid.

The remaining $80 million has been promised for the Forest Service by the Office of Management and Budget, but with a restriction that it can't be spent until July 1, the start of the final quarter in the current fiscal year.

That money is to be used to thin national forests of the dense underbrush that is considered a source of fuel for wildfires.

Without the $280 million, which had been appropriated by Congress in a budget signed last year by President Bush; the Forest Service would have been forced to cut some critical programs, lawmakers said.

"It's about time that the administration and OMB recognized the will of Congress," said Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., ranking member on Interior Appropriations subcommittee.

"We are approaching our fourth year of drought, and we must do whatever possible to be proactive in preventing fires," Burns said.

Burns was among a handful of lawmakers who wrote to the White House, demanding the pool of wildfire money held back from this year's budget be released to the Forest Service immediately.

Catholic paper urges new look at celibacy

BOSTON (AP) - In an extraordinary editorial on the city's child-molestation scandal, the official newspaper of the Boston Archdiocese says the Roman Catholic Church must face the question of whether to drop its requirement that priests be celibate.

The editorial, published Thursday in a special issue of The Pilot, asks whether there would be fewer scandals if celibacy were optional for priests and whether the priesthood attracts an unusually high number of homosexual men.

It offers no answers, but says: "These scandals have raised serious questions in the minds of the laity that simply will not disappear."

The editorial was written by Monsignor Peter V. Conley, the paper's executive editor, who is said to be a close confidant of Cardinal Bernard Law, Boston's archbishop. Law is listed as the paper's publisher.

The Rev. Christopher Coyne, a spokesman for the archdiocese, said Friday that Law was unaware the editorial would be published. He said that he did not know if Law agreed with its contents but that the cardinal had not expressed any dissatisfaction.

Senators, Bush spar over Ridge

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two senators on Friday for a meeting to discuss Homeland Security Director Tom Ridge's refusal to testify before Congress.

One of the senators went further in the latest chapter in the dispute over the control of information that has pitted lawmakers from both parties against the White House. Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., linked answers from Ridge to the speed Congress could write next year's defense bill. In a speech in North Carolina on Friday, Bush said he expects lawmakers to make passage of his military request "the first order of business so we can plan for this war."

Early this month, Ridge rejected an initial request from Byrd and Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, top Republican on the Appropriations Committee, that he testify before the panel. White House officials say Ridge is only an adviser to Bush, not a head of an agency that implements policy.

Visa foul-ups lead to reassignments

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Immigration and Naturalization Service reassigned four misvel employees Friday in the wake of the agency issuing visa approval notices for two Sept. 11 hijackers six months after they flew airliners into the World Trade Center.

The immigration commissioner, James Ziglar, said the breakdown that led to the notices being issued "is unacceptable and will not be allowed." No one was fired.

Attorney General John D. Ashcroft also asked Congress on Friday to give him back authority to fire INS employees for violating Justice Department rules.

Army medic, Spc. Johnny Agui, 23, from El Paso, Texas, works on the leg of Sgt. Chadd Lindsay, 28, from Dracut, Mass., both of the 10th Mountain Division, after he fell Thursday in the Shah-Kot mountains. He received an intravenous drip for dehydration and continued with his mission.

U.S., allied troops pursue al-Qaida, Taliban holdouts

BAGRAM, Afghanistan (AP) - U.S. and Canadian troops found a cache of mortars, grenades and rockets Friday as they scoured the mountains of eastern Afghanistan for escaping al-Qaida and Taliban fighters who fled the U.S.-led offensive in the Shah-Kot valley.

Loud explosions could be heard echoing off the snow-covered peaks as the captured weapons were blown up, according to the Associated Press news agency, which has reported with the Canadian force.

The bodies of two al-Qaida fighters also were found Friday within the cave complex that al-Qaida and Taliban fighters held before they were routed during the 12-day attack, the news agency said.

Earlier in the day, U.S. and Canadian soldiers pursued four al-Qaida fighters who eluded capture after a gunbattle. They got away.

At the Pentagon, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said

Friday the fighting is "winding down," but skirmishes continue in the Shah-Kot mountains as U.S. and its allies pursue al-Qaida and Taliban forces.

He said a key objective of the U.S.-led campaign is to keep al-Qaida and Taliban fighters from regrouping, either in Afghanistan or in neighboring countries.

"We need to make sure that the well-trained terrorists who left Afghanistan do not set up sanctuaries in other nations," Rumsfeld said.

Rumsfeld also said he sees little chance of expanding the international security force now keeping order in Afghanistan's capital.

"The line of countries volunteering to step up and do that is a very short one, which suggests to me that that is not going to happen," he told a Pentagon news conference.

He said it was likely that the current force of 4,500 foreign troops, led by Britain, will remain in Kabul until year's end.

discussing Sept. 11 without mentioning al-Qaida. Ruzerep was kidnapped by the ETA in 1979 and held for a month.

At the White House's request, the resolution was held up before it got to the Idaho Senate. The Bush administration set up a meeting between Idaho Basque leaders and State Department officials about possible U.S. involvement in resolving the Basque-Spain conflict.

In exchange, Idaho lawmakers changed the resolution to have it condemn the ETA, and approved the measure unanimously.

Bizer later told his colleagues: "I like you, had no idea that we would get the world's attention."

The talk has not stopped in Idaho's Basque community, which includes a Basque Block in downtown Boise, a group of restaurants, bars and a museum built around what was once a boarding house for sheepherders.

The Basques, a people of unknown origin speaking a language that appears to be unlike any other, settled thousands of years ago on both sides of the Pyrenees, the mountains that divide present-day France and Spain.

Although the Basque country has never existed as a political entity, its people have always had a sharp sense of their uniqueness and fierce pride in their language and culture. Even the Romans were content to let the Basques alone while part of the empire.

Most Idaho Basques are descendants of immigrants from the Spanish province of Viscaya, a forested region on the Bay of Biscay. Many sailed with the Spanish conquistadors to South America or fished off Labrador long before the French or English arrived.

Dems assail Bush plan to cut child care

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - President Bush wants more welfare parents to work longer hours, but doesn't want to pay more for their baby-sitting bills.

That stance is drawing strong criticism from key congressional Democrats and child advocates who say the policy would further strain the already short supply of government-assisted child care for poor families.

"I am concerned that the administration's plan will result in a raid of child-care assistance from the working poor to pay for those families transitioning from welfare," Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., chairman of the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, said at a hearing Friday on child care.

The issue is becoming a major point of contention as Congress prepares to re-approve or rewrite the landmark 1996 welfare reform law later this year.

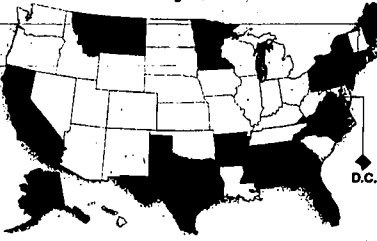

In his proposal to revise the nation's welfare policy, President Bush would require most welfare parents to work, or participate in work-related activities, for 40 hours a week. The current requirement is 30 hours a week.

Bush would also raise the percentage of welfare clients who must hold jobs from 50 percent to 70 percent by 2007.

Both measures would increase the need for subsidized child care, administration officials acknowledge. But they say the government can't afford to increase the $4.8 billion a year it now spends to help welfare parents with child care.

"The problem is that when you have a situation where your country is at war both internationally and in homeland security you (only) have so much money," Health and Human Services

Secretary Tommy Thompson told the Senate Finance Committee this week.

"Maybe at the end of two years we'll be able to find some additional money for child care," Thompson added.

Most states say they don't have the money to pay for more child care because the recent recession reduced their tax revenues. In addition, monitoring the work of more welfare clients will increase the numbers of social workers states need.

If welfare clients require more child-care help without additional federal aid, states will be forced to use more of their money to make up the difference, child advocates say. That will likely reduce the amount of day-care help that states provide for low-income families who need child care to work and stay off welfare.

"When you talk about increasing the work requirement when people are already struggling to access child care, it just doesn't make sense," said Jocelyn Frye, director of legal and public policy for the National Partnership for Women and Families.

A Democratic welfare proposal sponsored by Sens. Evan Bayh of Indiana and Tom Carper of Delaware would increase child-care funding for welfare recipients by $1 billion.

Lott threatens to block nomination of Daschle aide

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican leader Trent Lott on Friday threatened to retaliate against Democrats for defeating the promotion of one of President Bush's nominees to a federal appeals court.

"I'm not going to let go of it for a long time," said Lott, upset because the Senate Judiciary Committee killed the nomination of U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering of Mississippi to the U.S. Appeals Court in New Orleans.

Lott also announced he will block an aide of Senate Majority Leader Thomas Daschle from getting on the Federal Communication Commission.

Daschle, in response, said that could backfire on Bush's other nominees in the Democratic-controlled Senate. "I would think they would want our cooperation in moving other nominees," the South Dakota Democrat said.

Lott, Pickering's friend of 40 years, called the committee's racially charged proceedings and its 10-9 party-line vote a "slap at Mississippi." The NAACP and other liberal rights groups, a core constituency of the Democrats, strongly disapproved the nomination because they said Pickering supported segregation as a young man and had an ultraconservative voting record as a Mississippi lawmaker.

"This is people trying to use the ghost of the past to try to prevent us from rising up and going forward in a positive way," Lott said. He cited what he called Pickering's close ties to black leaders in Mississippi, some of whom supported his nomination.

Lott took Pickering's defeat personally, but said Democrats also are mistreating Bush's judicial nominees and if it continues "the Senate is going to be in very bad shape."

Bush backs greater aid for world's poor nations

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - After months of growing entreaties to increase foreign aid on the grounds that often goes to waste, the Bush administration reversed course this week and proposed to grant an additional $5 billion over the next years to poor countries that adopt sound economic policies and attack corruption.

The proposal, advanced Thursday in a speech by President Bush, would effectively boost U.S. assistance to developing nations by about 14 percent over projected levels. The increase, which would begin in fiscal 2004, is considerably less than the doubling that some aid advocates have urged rich countries to do. But the surprise move appeared likely to defuse criticism of Washington's parsimony, which had threatened to erupt at a United Nations conference next week in Monterrey, Mexico, that Bush is planning to attend.

Speaking at the Inter-

American Development Bank to an audience that included the rock star Bono, a passionate champion of the world's poor, Bush acknowledged that fighting global poverty is essential to a successful battle against terrorism - a point often stressed by aid supporters.

"We work for prosperity and opportunity because they're right; it's the right thing to do," he said. "We also work for prosperity and opportunity because they help defeat terror."

The proposed increase, which requires congressional approval, would still leave the United States well behind other nations in terms of the percentage of the economy devoted to aid. The disparity between American and European contributions was highlighted Thursday by an agreement among European Union nations to donate an average 0.39 percent of their gross domestic product to aid by 2006, compared with America's current 0.1 percent of GDP.

Government bars Enron, Andersen from deals

WASHINGTON - The government suspended Enron and its former accounting firm, Arthur Andersen, from new federal contracts on Friday, citing evidence of misconduct a day after an indictment that charged Andersen with obstruction of justice.

Current contracts - some $35 million for Enron and $60 million to $90 million for Andersen - are not affected by the action announced by the General Services Administration.

The move came a day after a federal court unsealed a grand jury indictment charging Andersen with obstructing justice by destroying thousands of documents and deleting computer files related to its audit of Houston-based Enron. It was the first indictment in a case that has roiled the White House, and Congress and dissolved the retirement savings of thousands of current and former Enron employees.

Spokesmen for Enron and Andersen didn't immediately return telephone calls seeking comment on the suspension.

U.S. intelligence: Iraq knows fate of lost Gulf War pilot

WASHINGTON - U.S. intelligence agencies say an American pilot shot down over Iraq during the Gulf War was either captured alive or his remains were recovered by the Iraqis.

Lt. Cmdr. Michael Scott Speicher of Jacksonville, Fla., was lost when his Navy F-18 Hornet was shot down Jan. 16, 1991, in a dogfight with an Iraqi fighter jet during the first few hours of the war. He was the first American lost in the war.

"We assess that Iraq can account for Lt. Cmdr. Speicher but that Baghdad is concealing information about his fate," said an unclassified CIA summary of a report by the intelligence community. "Lt. Cmdr. Speicher probably survived the loss of his aircraft, and if he survived, he almost certainly was captured by the Iraqis."

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld told reporters Friday, "We have a very real interest in his circumstance, if he's alive - indeed, in knowing about his circumstance even if he's not alive. And one would hope and pray that he is alive. We do not know."

Amateur astronomer discovers new comet

SIERRA - VISTA, Ariz. - Amateur stargazer Doug Snyder had spent days scanning the skies with his 20-inch reflector telescope hoping to find something new when he happened upon "a little gray smudge."

The little smudge proved to be a very big deal: It was a new comet.

The Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams - the Harvard University-affiliated clearinghouse for new discoveries - confirmed Tuesday that Snyder was the first person to sight the comet Monday as it streaked through the Aquila Constellation in the heart of the Summer Milky Way, which is a specific section of the Milky Way galaxy.

Throughout the Northern Hemisphere, Comet Ikeya-Zhang is visible low in the western sky just after sunset. In early April, it will appear in the predawn sky as it begins to loop past Earth on its return trip out of the solar system.

Judge dismisses over-200 charges against priest

SAN FRANCISCO - A man who accused and defrocked San Francisco priest of molesting him when he was an altar boy says he can't believe a legal technicality is preventing his alleged abuser from being tried. "I'm upset. He's an evil man," Wayne Presley, 43, said of Monsignor Patrick O'Shea. "I don't know whether I'll ever recover from it emotionally, financially and physically."

A California judge Thursday dismissed all 224 sex-molestation charges against O'Shea, 67, based on a technicality. The decision, unless overturned on appeal, means San Francisco County prosecutors cannot try O'Shea, 67, on charges of molesting nine boys in the 1960s and '70s.

The dismissal comes amid a wave of sexual abuse allegations against Roman Catholic priests nationally. Former Boston-area priest John Geoghan was sentenced to a maximum 10-year prison term last month for groping a 10-year-old boy, and has been accused of molesting more than 130 children in six parishes.

T.F. cheerleaders place first in Meridian

TWIN-FALLS — The Twin Falls High School Cheerleaders brought home the gold this past week by placing first in the large squad varsity division of the Idaho Cheer Championships held in Meridian.

And as part of the overall points system during the competition, the 21-member team was also crowned the grand champion for larger high schools.

It's not the first time this cheerleading squad has walked away with top honors.

In December, under the direction of Marica Jensen and Denise Gasser, the group also took a first-place win at the Regional Northwest Universal Cheerleading Association's competition held in Boise — a win that entitled it to compete in February — at the national level in Orlando, Fla.

And though they placed considerably lower while competing against the "Southern squads," nevertheless, they picked up a lot of new ideas, and the experience was "extremely" beneficial, Gasser said.

"They're just an extraordinary group of girls," Gasser said, "and their commitment is remarkable."

The team also won the leader-

Crews recover bodies from crash site

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The bodies of three victims in the crash of a state airplane were recovered Friday from deep snowdrifts at the 9,500-foot elevation crash site, the Idaho National Guard reported.

Meanwhile, father of a boy killed in the crash is upset that officials did not tell him the boy had been airlifted for a probation violation.

Pilot Jay Lee Morris, 66, of Emmett flew the plane on Tuesday from Boise to Lewiston and then Idaho Falls, where the plane was refueled and 16-year-old Jake Jorgensen was picked up. Idaho juvenile corrections officer William J. Mann, 59, of Canyon County also was in the craft.

A search was launched after the plane disappeared from radar. The plane was located 12 miles outside of Atlanta in the Sawtooth Mountains on Wednesday on a steep, snow-covered slope. Idaho Mountain Search and 'I want to know what a plane is doing flying over the wilderness area in the middle of the wintertime. I want to know who put my son on that plane, and why.'

Rescue volunteers extracted the victims from the wreckage on Friday after a winter storm diminished. The bodies were flown to Boise in an Idaho Army National Guard helicopter.

A recovery crew dug the bodies from as much as nine feet of snow. The crash is being investigated by the National Transportation Safety Board. Allen Jorgensen did not find out until about 7 p.m. on Tuesday that Jake was in the custody of the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections and aboard a plane bound for Boise.

Three state employees met Allen Jorgensen at his Idaho Falls home as he came home from work. They were waiting in his driveway.

"That was the first time I had heard that my son was going to Nampa," he said. "I was notified five hours after the plane crashed."

Juvenile Corrections Director Brent Reinke said authorities tried to contact the father before the air transfer of his son but could not reach him.

"I knew he was going to an assessment," Allen Jorgensen said, "but I was told he would be taken to St. Anthony, about 35 miles from here."

Reinke said Jake was being recommended for a probation violation.

Residents oppose permit for Oakley events center

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

OAKLEY — Some Oakley residents think they might like to have something like a pizza parlor in Oakley, but most who were at a recent public hearing for a special-use permit for an events center were sure they didn't want such a center in their backyard.

While the city of Oakley has not purchased property for an events center, city officials have been discussing the center, which could be located on an available 40-acre piece of property just east of town.

After two hours Thursday, discussion was tabled until more information can be gathered.

The city would develop the proposed center because the city can apply for grants to pay for it, according to Oakley Mayor Garth Greenwell. A few, such as A.J. Robinson, a

Burley man pleads 'not guilty' to sex charges

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Burley man charged with two counts of sexual exploitation of a child pleaded not guilty to the charges at his arraignment in 5th District Court in Cassia County Friday afternoon.

Leslie Peter Bowcut, 28, appeared before District Judge Monte Carlson at the arraignment. Bowcut was brought to the courthouse from the Minicassia Criminal Justice Center. He was wearing an orange and white striped jail-issued jumpsuit, white socks and blue slip-on sneakers.

An orange coat was buttoned around him, but his wrist and belly chains prevented him from wearing the coat in a normal fashion. Bowcut was also restrained by leg chains.

His attorney, Steven Richert of Pocatello, entered the not guilty pleas on behalf of Bowcut.

Before explaining the arraignment process to Bowcut, Carlson quizzed both Richert and Deputy Cassia County Prosecutor Blaine Cannon about whether the judge should conduct the arraignment and the bail hearing which had also been scheduled for Friday, but was not held.

Carlson pointed out he was the judge who had ordered the search warrant that led to Bowcut's arrest. "I've tinkered with this case already," he said.

Carlson asked Richert if there were plans to challenge that search warrant because, if that was the case, Carlson would most likely be dismissed from presiding over Bowcut's court case.

Another judge was likely to end up hearing the matter, Carlson suggested rescheduling the arraignment and bond hearing to allow the same judge to handle all the matters.

Both Richert and Cannon said they had no problem with Carlson conducting the arraignment.

Richert, however, said he might challenge the search warrant. And Cannon said if Carlson conducted the bond hearing, it could potentially pose a problem in the event of any appeals relating to the case.

"It would be wise to get another judge," Richert said.

Immediately after accepting Bowcut's pleas of not guilty, Carlson said he would send a letter to the administrative judge asking that another judge be appointed to hear the case. Carlson said that would take a few days.

Carlson also declined to close the arraignment to all but the necessary parties, as requested by Cannon.

Cannon said because parts of the case file had been sealed by Magistrate Judge Michael Crabtree, perhaps the court.

Police find two bodies in car trunk

RICHFIELD, Utah (AP) — An Ann Arbor, Mich., man has been charged with two counts of murder after two bodies were found in the trunk of a car that the highway patrol stopped on Interstate 70 in Sevier County. Investigators think Patrick L. Daniel, 31, was driving from Michigan to Las Vegas to dispose of the man and woman, said Utah Highway Patrol Sgt. Doug McCleave.

Don't know where or how the victims were killed. Troopers found the woman's body and head wrapped in trash bags and the man's body in a passenger side. The rest of her body and that of the man, were found in the trunk, according to an arrest report. McCleave said at least one of the victims, probably knew Daniel. Police haven't confirmed the identities of the two, though they are believed to be from Michigan, he said. Investigators in Ann Arbor were searching a home there on Friday. They said the home was connected to Daniel, but would not elaborate.

"It's very early in the investigation and what we know is extremely limited," Sgt. Michael Lagasse, the department's spokesman, told The Ann Arbor News. Utah Highway Patrol Capt. Keith D. Squires said Trooper Kelly Roberts stopped the west-bound car at 4:52 p.m. Thursday on I-70 near Joseph, which is 12 miles southwest of Richfield and 149 miles south of Salt Lake City, for not having a front registration plate. The driver had no identification, there was no registration certificate or proof of insurance and the vehicle registration was not on file. Roberts took Daniel into custody due to the lack of papers, called for backup and impounded the vehicle. Daniel reportedly became ill while officers were searching his car, according to the arrest report. "He's given us two very limited interviews, just basically identification type things, and that's all he's willing to talk about," Sevier County Sheriff Phil Barney said of the driver. "He's now invoked his rights for an attorney, so we can't do anything further with him."

Tribe gets grant for travel center, stores

OWYHEE, Nev. (AP) — The Duck Valley Reservation has been granted a $2 million federal grant to help build a new retail and travel center near the Idaho border. The U.S. Economic Development Administration approved the grant Friday for the Shoshone-Paiute Tribes to build the Duck Valley Travel Center. The project is planned about three miles from Owyhee along State Highway 225. It is expected to create more than 25 new jobs. "I am always pleased to see the federal government returning Nevada's tax dollars to community improvement and diversification," Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., said. The facility will include a community center and a retail center housing a grocery store, bank and gas station. It also will include a rest stop, visitor's center, recreational vehicle park and community park. The federal money will cover about two-thirds of the cost of the overall project expected to cost about $3 million, Gibbons said.

Judge denies Idaho trucker's request

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — An Idaho trucker has been denied a new lawyer in his fight against negligent homicide charges in a January accident that claimed two lives. District Judge Julie Macek rejected Bret Likes' petition to replace his public defender with one from outside Cascade County. The 42-year-old Firth man has pleaded innocent to two counts of negligent homicide in the traffic deaths of a KRTV reporter and cameraman. Reporter Jennifer Hawkins, 22, and cameraman David Gerdrum, 48, were killed. Likes has also pleaded innocent to misdemeanor charges of driving with a suspended license and keeping a false log. Court documents showed Likes has a record of drunken driving in California and was charged in April 2000 with manslaughter in Colorado.

Former professor says explorer had son

LEWISTON (AP) — Most people may not know it, but explorer William Clark is believed to have had a son by a Nez Perce woman. "This is the son of William Clark. His name was Daytime Smoker," said Alan Pinkham as he gestured to a photograph of a dark-faced man with long hair and a rifle across his lap. Pinkham, a Nez Perce tribal member, and Steve Evans, a retired Lewis-Clark State College professor, gave a presentation on the coming bicentennial of the journey as part of Native American Awareness Week at Lewis-Clark State College. Little is said of the more intimate contacts of Meriwether Lewis, William Clark and their Corps of Discovery had with the Nez Perce in the journals they kept, Pinkham said. But on their return trip from the Pacific Ocean, the group camped across the Clearwater River from a Nez Perce village near Kamiah in 1806. The Journals say the men

Whether parts of the journals were edited out, or some things were just not written is unclear, Evans said, but Lewis and Clark were very aware of the native woman. "We're really interested in what happened in Kamiah during the long camp," Evans said. "There was a lot left between the lines." Daytime Smoker's story was news to most of the audience members.

"That was kind of a shocker," said Ann Egeland, a student. Daytime Smoker's mother followed the expedition as far as Missoula, Mont. But it is unknown if Clark knew she was pregnant, Pinkham said. The episode showed the Nez Perce were aware of that Euro-American culture was coming, Pinkham said. "That's something we've never given credit for." He explained that it was customary to conceive children between members of allied bands of people, and the Nez Perce were trying to form a connection with another culture. "He is the alliance that we thought existed with the people," Pinkham said, but the Americans did not understand. "To them it was just sex." Daytime Smoker joined Chief Joseph and his band of Nez Perce in refusing to remain on a reservation in the War of 1877, Pinkham said. He died a prisoner of war in Oklahoma.

'Triple Shot' of life, work and music

M-C professionals spend spare time rockin' and rollin'

By Nate Johnson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Rick Bollar leads a double life. By day he is a respected attorney, by night, a deity of rock and roll.

"Sometimes it's hard to tell if I'm a frustrated musician getting by as an attorney or a frustrated attorney getting by as a musician," Bollar said.

Bollar serves as the M i n i d o k a County prosecuting attorney and the attorney for the city of Rupert. The Rupert law firm of Goodman and Bollar, of which he is an owner, has the contracts to handle the criminal cases for the cities of Paul and M i n i d o k a. Somehow, he finds time to play in a band as well.

The other members of the band Triple Shot are also professionals. Mark Williams, the guitarist, is vice president of 20/20 Produce, a Paul company. Dina Diamond, the drummer, co-hosts the morning show on Kat Country radio. Bollar plays bass in the band.

The band members will give up their day jobs if they get a recording contract, Diamond said.

Time spent making music is well spent, Williams said. "It allows me to pay less for therapy," Bollar chimed in.

The group squeezes a few hours here and there to practice in a variety of ways, including through aerial photography, mapping, aerial studies and traffic counts, Rusanman said. Traffic counts will be done manually by machine and look at the traffic patterns, the number of cars, the number of trucks and where vehicles turn. Modeling will also provide information and look at potential changes such as population growth or changes in industry.

Recommendations from the studies will be forwarded to city councils for any further action.

Rusanman said Ruper's existing traffic plan is "fairly old."

Mark Mitton, Burley city administrator, said Burley has been gathering data in a similar transportation study. A meeting has been scheduled for next week to hear some of the results. Burley started about a year ago, but is only halfway through its study.

The survey in Rupert and Paul is projected to be finished within a year, Rusanman said.

Rau said the grant will provide computer hardware and software to be able to read the information when it is collected, which will be an asset.

Triple Shot members Mark Williams, Dina Diamond and Rick Bollar have each spent a few years playing on the road.

Rick actually grew up living with sheep on the plains of the Serengeti," said Williams, reflecting the misguided popular perception of the Basque culture.

The Basque people actually originate from a province in the Pyrenees Mountains, between France and Spain.

They were the only European people not conquered by the Romans, said Bollar, setting the record straight.

The group will not, lamentably, play any Basque music Saturday night. Triple Shot covers popular country songs and southern and '70s rock and roll, Williams said.

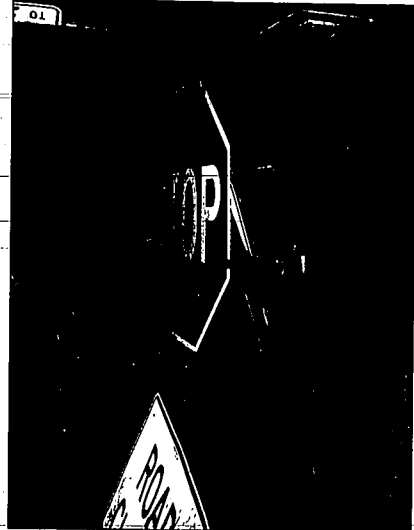

All three sing, incorporating three-part harmony into the music.

The three are accomplished musicians. Each has spent a few years on the road, living the life of an itinerant musician.

"In some ways it's a better gig than being an attorney. You don't have to get up until the sun has warmed up the air," Bollar said.

Paul, Rupert move ahead with study

Cities will hire consultant to look at traffic

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The cities of Paul and Rupert are moving ahead with a joint transportation study which will lead into a regional transportation plan.

Burley and Heyburn are completing traffic studies of their own, said Rupert city street superintendent Bob Rusanman, and all the information will eventually be compiled into a regional study.

Rupert and Paul were awarded a grant from the Local Highway Technical Assistance Council to fund the transportation studies, Rusanman said.

Rupert received $153,142. Paul received $105,710. Each city provides a 34 percent cash match.

Grants make it feasible for such surveys to be conducted in a small community, Rusanman said.

The cities, along with the Idaho Transportation Department, are putting together a request for proposals, Rusanman said. Engineers and consultants will submit proposals. Once a consultant is hired, the studies will begin.

The traffic plan will look at traffic flows, truck routing, bike paths, safety corridors and "everything having to do with transportation," Rusanman said.

Pavement and signage will also be studied as will the condition of roads and how to maintain roads.

Truck routes have been a concern in the city of Rupert, Rusanman said. At least one truck route travels through school zones and residential areas.

"Safety is a main concern," Rusanman said.

Rich Rau, public works director in Paul, said most of the items Paul is interested in are the same as the Rupert issues.

They didn't care that money, generated from hotel and entertainment taxes and paid out of the pockets of visitors, could maybe bring them a pizza parlor.

They didn't care that a grant for an events center could help pay for a waste treatment facility, which Weston Hawkes said would eventually be mandated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Instead they were concerned about what such a place would do to the quality of life. "Councillorwoman Georgia Dimick said comments she received from Oakley residents included concerns about strangers coming to town and there being only one Cassia County sheriff's deputy to patrol the area.

Groups ask Kempthorne to ban water permits

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Environmental groups asked Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne on Friday to ban further water withdrawals from the aquifer that supplies most of the drinking water for Spokane area residents.

"Three utilities have asked to withdraw a combined 20 million gallons of water per day from the Rathdrum Prairie Aquifer to cool three electricity plants.

The supporters of the water withdrawals asked Kempthorne to prevent the Idaho Department of Water Resources from granting any more permits until studies have been completed on the capacity of the aquifer. The aquifer runs from near Lake Pend Oreille in Idaho into Spokane County.

"The Rathdrum Prairie Aquifer is the sole source of drinking water for 450,000 people in Idaho and Washington," said the letter from four environmental groups, including the Sierra Club, The Lands Council, the Kootenai Environmental Alliance and the Idaho Conservation League.

"Hundreds of millions of tax dollars have been invested to protect the aquifer," the letter said. "This source of fresh water is critical for drinking water, jobs, and economic growth."

Mark Snider, a spokesman for Kempthorne, said the governor's office had not yet received the request.

There have been preliminary talks between government officials in Idaho and Washington relating to withdrawals from the aquifer, but no decisions have been reached, Snider said. More talks are expected soon.

Officials in Washington for some time have refused to issue new permits for water withdrawals from the Washington side of the state line.

Environmental groups fear the withdrawals will reduce the levels of the aquifer, which recharges both the Spokane and Little Spokane Rivers. Some labor and business groups also oppose the withdrawals, saying the handful of jobs attached to the three power plants are not enough to justify the lost water.

The water would be evaporated in the cooling process, and not returned to the system.

The capacity of the aquifer is unknown, and it is not clear whether water levels have changed in recent decades as the population has grown.

Former Iran-Contra figure will speak

NAMPA (AP) — Conservative talk show host and retired Lt. Col. Oliver North is scheduled to speak at the Treasure Valley God and Country Rally on July 3 at the Idaho Center.

"We feel that our forum is a great way to answer a lot of the questions about the Iran-Contra scandal," North said. "I don't know why he could let something like Sept. 11 happen," said Brian Kohagen, head of the organizing committee.

The annual rally started more than 30 years ago after then-Nampa Mayor Ernest Starr received a call from film and television star Chuck Connors, who originated the event and encouraged cities across the nation to join in.

North has made several appearances in Idaho, including an Idaho Christian Coalition event in Boise in 1998, and an Idaho Family Forum gathering in 1992.

North is a founder of Freedom Alliance, an organization to promote freedom and honor military service, and a radio talk show host, commentary writer and correspondent for the Fox News Network.

Idaho seeks tax dollars from tribal fuel sales

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Senate on Friday ignored threats of legal action and sent Gov. Dirk Kempthorne legislation overturning last June's Supreme Court ruling exempting fuel sold on Indian reservations from state tax.

Tribal representatives and their allies accused the bill's supporters and the administration of trying to change the rules after losing in court. They promised an immediate court challenge.

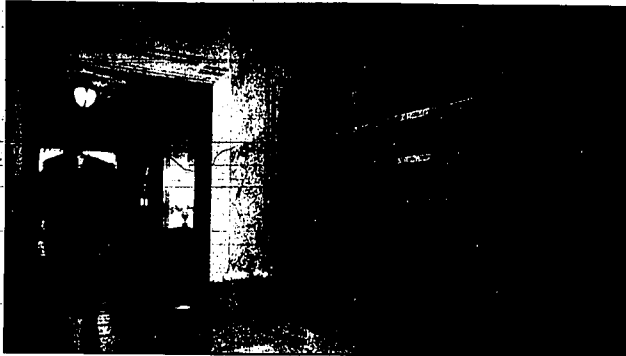

Republican Sen. Dean Cameron of the Finance Committee chairman, conceded that a court fight is assured because the bill is retroactive to mid-1996. But he argued that the measure just clearly expresses in law what the state's policy has been for years and what lawmakers intended it to be when they originally enacted it.

Sen. Moon Wheeler, the American Falls Republican who heads the Indian Affairs Council, called the bill an attempt to skirt federal prohibitions on state taxation of Indian tribes.

"This is clearly an attempt to try to circumvent, delay, stymie the efforts of the tribes of this state to have federal law adhered to," Wheeler said.

The legislation was prompted by last June's high court order upholding a 1999 ruling that said the state can't tax the tribal fuel sales.

The tribes concede the state can probably change the law to regain tax receipts from reservation sales in the future. But they maintain it is unconstitutional to deny them the refund of the millions of dollars in

How they voted

Here is the 24-10 rollcall vote by which the Senate gave final approval on Friday to legislation overturning a Supreme Court decision essentially exempting gasoline sold on Indian reservations from state fuel taxes.

Hill, Ingram, Ipsen, Little, Lodge, Noh, Richardson, Ritsch, Sandy, Schroeder, Sorensen, Stegner and Thone.

fuel tax high court held has been illegally collected in the past. The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes alone claim they are owed more than $22 million. Coeur d'Alene Tribal Chairman Ernie Stensgar told lawmakers in a letter this week that the state had ignored repeated offers from the tribes to negotiate a resolution to the fuel tax problem.

"There are many important issues that affect our governments," Stensgar wrote. "We need to work together."

The Senate, however, voted 24-10 for the bill. The Tax Commission estimated the state will lose $1.6 million a year if the Supreme Court decision is allowed to stand.

Some pointed out that the tribes could still move clear of the tax by becoming fuel distributors, although that would be a much costlier enterprise than merely retailing fuel.

Kempthorne: Federal tax cut will hurt Idaho.

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne said late Friday that he will recommend that Idaho refuse to adopt a part of the federal economic stimulus package. The decision will deny businessmen across the state an additional $25 million a year in reduced state taxes.

During his post-mortem on the election-year legislative session, Kempthorne said incorporating that federal tax break into the state tax code — as Idaho and most other states typically do — would have put an entirely different light on the $23 billion cut in state support for public schools he won this year.

"It would have changed the dynamics," the governor said.

The economic stimulus package President Bush signed last week-end included a huge tax break on business investments since last Sept. 10. In addition to the $96 billion in lower federal taxes paid by businesses over three years, the tax break, if adopted by the states, will cut another $14 billion in state business taxes.

Had the state incorporated the break, analysts said $25 million of that would have been in Idaho, where a record tax cut last year has already trimmed $100 million from the revenue stream and the eroding economy took over $100 million more — so far.

Kempthorne said the administration was working with the

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne

State Tax Commission on a number of ways to avoid the additional loss in state receipts and will recommend next winter that the Legislature formally reject the federal tax break.

Members of legislative leadership said the governor had second thoughts earlier in the week about imposing the first-ever cut in state support for public education after looking at the financial problems — and political impressions — adopting the federal business tax cut would create.

But they said they strongly urged the governor to stick to the adopted budget plan and wait to see whether the economy rebounds.

Put a trout on your license plate

BOISE (AP) — Cutthroat trout and Coarctates will be the next images on Idaho license plates.

Before wrapping up his work for the year on Friday, the Idaho House approved bills creating special license plates for Idaho's official state fish and the popular Chevrolet sports car.

The measures still must be signed by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. Along with special plates approved earlier in the session for Appaloosa horses and the state's Peace Officers Memorial, the plates that won final legislative approval Friday would be added to 14 already in use. Each of the plates costs an additional $35, and $25 extra for renewal.

Money generated by sales of the cutthroat plate will benefit nongame wildlife programs, as well as non-motorized boating sites maintained by state parks and wildlife agencies.

Proposed grizzly plan includes compensation for lost livestock

BOISE (AP) — A state plan for managing grizzly bears in the Yellowstone National Park area once they are removed from the federal endangered species list has a final legislative approval. The Senate unanimously adopted the House-passed plan as one of its final acts before adjourning the election-year session on Friday.

"The plan is flexible, it is expected to be changed over time," Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh of Kimberly said. "But the plan is necessary."

Without state plans in Idaho,

Montana and Wyoming, delisting the grizzly could not occur. The plans must be approved by federal wildlife managers.

The plan would compensate ranchers for lost livestock under existing programs and would also allow grizzly bears to occupy some limited areas outside the so-called recovery zone near the park.

Once removed from federal protection, the bear would be managed just like any other big game species in Idaho. Noh said, and people would have the right to protect their person and property from grizzly attack.

adjournment of an election-year session that focused on the worst budget crisis in 20 years and repealing term limits.

"I don't know that Idaho takes a great deal from the session which you can say is substantially positive. It was rather a sobering session," Senate Republican Caucus Chairman Bart Davis of Boise Hills said. "I've never seen a session so quieting, so sobering, so businesslike."

House Speaker Bruce Newcomb said it was the third-most difficult session of his 16-year tenure in the Legislature. Amity between forces advocating spending increases and tax cuts made last year's session, when lawmakers had a $330 million budget surplus, the second-most difficult, he said.

"Last year was tougher than this year. When you have too much money it's more difficult to make good decisions than it is when you have too little," the Burley Republican said. "The best kind of year is just when you have barely enough."

Newcomb said his most difficult session was in 1990, when the Legislature passed, and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus vetoed, what would have been the nation's most restrictive state abortion law. Newcomb cited the emotional pressure of nightly candlelight vigils around the Capitol.

Kempthorne said the 68-day session — tied for fifth-shortest since annual sessions began in 1967 — was difficult and frustrating.

"Do I wish we could have done more? Absolutely," he said. "But I commend the Legislature for following my blueprint to balance the budget and make some tough decisions without raising taxes."

The interest subsidy proposal that wrapped up the session replaces a program approved last year that provided state aid for interest on smaller school district tax levies earmarked specifically for health and safety deficiencies.

A one-year extension and expansion of that program to include larger, long-term bond issues also was approved by the Legislature.

But budget writers appropriated no new money to a fund from which six school districts drew all but about $40 million of the initial $10 million allocation.

The new program will ensure that any district floating a construction bond after Sept. 15, 2002, would have at least 10 percent of the interest paid by the state. Poorer districts would get a larger subsidy, up to 100 percent of the interest portion of the bond payment.

The precise amount would be determined by how far below the statewide average a district is in the amount of property value supporting each student, the unemployment rate and per capita income of the county.

6 Mistakes to Avoid When Moving to a Larger Home

SOUTHERN IDAHO - A new report has just been released which identifies the 6 most common and speciously mistakes that homebuyers make when moving to a larger home.

Unlike the experience of buying a first home, when you're looking to move-up, and already own a home, there are certain factors that complicate this situation. It's very important for you to understand these issues before you list your home for sale.

Not only is there the issue of financing to consider, but you also have to sell your present home at exactly the right time in order to avoid either the financial burden of owning two homes or, just as bad, the dilemma of having no place to live during the gap between closings.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free prospectus mistakes that homebuyers make when moving to a larger home. Strategies to Avoid Trade-Up Mistakes.

These six strategies will help you make informed choices before you put your home on the market in anticipation of moving to a larger home.

Is Bush's proposal to expand national service a good idea?

Yes

Creating more opportunities is a worth-while bidding war

DAVID KUSNET

For once, the Bush administration and leading senators from both parties are engaged in the right kind of bidding war.

In his State of the Union Address, Bush called for more opportunities for national service, including an expansion of AmeriCorps, an effort that encourages young people to work in worthwhile projects.

Bush didn't mention that AmeriCorps was his predecessor's pet project — an outgrowth of Bill Clinton's 1992 campaign promise to offer every qualified young person the opportunity to attend college or trade school, in return for two years of national service.

This vision shrunk in 1993, as a result of the Clinton administration's emphasis on reducing the federal budget deficit and congressional Republicans' intense opposition to the initiative.

Nonetheless, AmeriCorps grew into an effort that offers 50,000 volunteers the opportunity to serve full-time in charities and other community projects, in return for a small stipend for living costs, and, once they've completed their stints, an additional $4,725-a-year toward college tuition.

Since the program began, more than 100,000 young people have participated, and the results of their work have been impressive. In one of AmeriCorps' signature programs, volunteers have taught, tutored or mentored about 500,000 children in low-income communities. In other efforts, they have built low-income housing, helped flood-ravaged communities, and assisted more than 200,000 older Americans who are living on their own.

These successes explain why President Bush wants to increase AmeriCorps' budget by 50 percent, so that it can add an additional 25,000 volunteers. But some to the right of the White House have broken ranks.

But contrary to its critics' contentions that AmeriCorps burdens communities with heavy-handed bureaucracies, touchily youth-cultists, or both, the program is an effective investment in the tradition of other national efforts that encouraged and rewarded public-spirited behavior.

AmeriCorps members devote much of their time and energy to recruiting, training and supervising community volunteers. As Sen. John McCain; R-Ariz.; has noted, studies show that each AmeriCorps member generates, on the average, nine additional volunteers. Thus, AmeriCorps strengthens, not supplants, existing community efforts and organizations.

As for philosophical objections to rewarding people for doing what they should be doing anyway, this is in the tradition of some of the most successful American initiatives.

From the Homestead Act that encouraged venturesome families to settle the West to the GI Bill that rewarded the generation that won World War II, some of the most effective and accepted public policies have offered incentives for people to serve the national interest and improve their own condition as well.

That's why McCain and Sen. Evan Bayh, D-Ind., are upping the ante on President Bush by proposing the Call to Service Act, which would increase AmeriCorps by 500 percent, not just 25 percent, and offer new incentives for military service as well. Usually shrewder than his adversaries expect, Bush may mean them part of the way.

A Washington bidding-war for a worthy cause? That would be a rare but welcome sign that the current crisis is changing politics and policy-making for the better.

David Kusnet was chief speechwriter for former President Bill Clinton from 1992 through 1994. He is the author of "Speaking American: How the Democrats Can Win in the Nineties" and a visiting fellow at the Economic Policy Institute.

No

It turns volunteers into political hacks and neighborhood spies

TOME MCCLUSKY

Some Americans may have been led to believe that expanding the federal AmeriCorps program is just what the country needs after Sept. 11. But, in spite of its patriotic name, AmeriCorps represents the worst, not the best, that Washington has to offer.

The Corporation for National Service — AmeriCorps' parent — was begun under President Clinton to serve as a "domestic Peace Corps" and helped to introduce the oxymoronic phrase "paid volunteer" into the American vocabulary.

CNS's bureaucracy oversees three separate programs, Learn and Serve America; the National Senior Service Corps; and its best-known, most-criticized program, AmeriCorps.

Since its inception AmeriCorps has not only been financially corrupt but it has also allowed government-sponsored participants to lobby illegally for numerous leftist causes, ranging from "defending" the environment to protesting California's proposed "Three Strikes and You're Out" law.

In April 2000, the House of Representatives subcommittee that oversaw Clinton's CNS tried to have independent auditors look at the bottom line. What they found would have made Enron auditors proud. For the sixth time since its creation in 1993 the agency's books couldn't be reconciled with reality.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has studied CNS programs seven times since 1995, yet cannot provide a definite cost per participant. The GAO studies have found CNS "volunteers" costing taxpayers anywhere from a total of $8,000 to a whopping $100,000 per participant.

With such a checkered history one would think that CNS and AmeriCorps would join other federal follies in the dustbin of history. Yet AmeriCorps is not just surviving under a Republican administration, it is thriving — and billions of tax dollars are at stake.

President Bush has asked for a large increase in Peace Corps and CNS funding, a vast new array of programs under a big-brother like Citizen Corps, and a new bureaucracy called "Freedom Corps" with its own White House office — a sure ticket to immortality — all under the misguided notion of "national service."

Despite being a government entity hoping to foster more volunteerism for non-profit organizations, Freedom Corps would be overseen by a director and a coordinating council consisting of 14 high-ranking government officials, including the president — not one private citizen in the bunch.

Worse, under the administration-backed legislation, AmeriCorps "volunteers" would not only be allowed to receive tax free education award — but also options to use the funds for a down payment on a home, job training or health-care costs" — all luxuries real-world volunteers would have to go out and get a job to afford.

In addition, included in the new Citizen Corps is Operation TIPS, which would allow postal, transportation and public utility employees to spy on their fellow Americans, and report back to the government.

In one of his first executive orders as president, George W. Bush stated "faith-based and other community organizations are indispensable in meeting the needs of poor Americans and distressed neighborhoods. Government cannot be replaced by such organizations, but it can and should welcome them as partners."

Agencies such as AmeriCorps take this "partnership" in the wrong direction, by trying to socialize the volunteering nature at the heart of all United States citizens.

We do need more tech ed

Concerning the proposed tech prep center, I share many of the feelings and concerns that have been expressed, both before and after the vote. I, too, am concerned about the proposed location, the question of staffing in light of the current budget holdbacks, and the fact that the supporters of this facility dismissed the idea of refurbishing the existing facilities at Twin Falls High School. However, I do feel that we are in desperate need of tech prep education in the Magic Valley. I think the basic idea of creating a place for students to learn valuable job skills and gain a quality academic education at the same time is a viable one.

I would like to share an observation I made through this whole process. When I voted on Tuesday evening, I was surprised by the fact that my husband and I were the only ones voting that had school-aged children. The 18 to 50 age bracket were conspicuously absent.

This was an issue that affects all our children from elementary age through high school. We as parents must realize that unless we vote on educational matters such as this, our children will pay the price. We will never see these things as if we are not willing to get out and vote. The retired community doesn't want the added expense, if there is any, and they will never approve these types of issues. All you have to do is look at the Jerome High School situation to understand that if the parents of the children these issues impact don't vote, then we best be content with what we have because we'll never have anything more. It is not only our right to vote, it is our responsibility and our duty to our children's future. SHERRY DRUMMOND Twin Falls

Home schooling helps kids Will illiterate attacks on home-schoolers never quit? Considering the positive statistics on home-schooling, compared to public schools, I have to wonder what motivates the Maxine Riggers of the world (she recently wrote a letter to the editor crying about the poorly home-schooled kids). Here are a few relevant and factual statistics.

A study by Brain D. Ray, Ph.D., reveals repeatedly that the home-educated score as well or better, on average, than those in conventional schools. The data on the academic success of the home-educated reveals: 16,311 students from across the country were tested with the nationally normed Iowa Test of Basic Skills. The nationwide average for traditionally schooled on the Basic Battery (i.e., reading, language and math) was the 77th percentile. They were in the 79th percentile in reading, the 73rd in language and the 73rd in math. (The national average in conventional schools is the 50th percentile.)

(www.neri.org) I choose to home-school and have no one to grind with those who don't (I wish everyone joy and success in their choices), but I wonder what REALLY motivates those who oppose home-schooling? I know that I am the most qualified to teach my children for the sole reason that I know them better than anyone, know how they learn and what they need to do it. My children are not lost in the shuffle of a large classroom. My children live learning through all five senses. They are not pushed into learning but taught to love it. I know that it would be tragic if I lost the freedom to teach my own.

If you are interested in protecting freedom, there is something you can do. There are currently two legislative bills for the House supporting home schooling. There is also one in the works opposing it. If you are a home-schooling family, please contact your district legislative members to encourage them to support home-schooling and that you are against any bill that would take away your freedom to home-school.

Writer was accurate on U.N.

Recently, Donna Erickson challenged Todd Williamson regarding a letter he wrote. She asserted that the Web site that Mr. Williamson referenced, www.gencen-us.org, contains scary "semi-truths" but the only "semi-truths" she can point to are the issues Williamson raises pertaining to Alger Hiss' role in the foundation of the United Nations and his espionage on behalf of the Soviet Union.

Using the same search engine (http://www.time.com/time/magazine/archive/1996/jan/96j125n) and that many materials are missing or had been destroyed." In 1993, historian Maria Schmidt claimed she had found documents in secret files of the Hungarian Interior Ministry that mentioned Hiss as a spy. Three years later, in 1996, the U.S. National Security Agency released the "Venona intercepts," captured Soviet documents. One of them talked about an American spying for the Soviets who had been in the State Department and gone to Yalta, as Hiss had. The spy's code name was "Ales."

It concludes: "While questions about this complicated and convoluted of cases remain and probably always will, the bulk of evidence points to Hiss' guilt beyond a reasonable doubt." Affirmed in a Time article (http://www.time.com/time/magazine/archive/1996/jan/96j125n) and a 543.html file. He (Volkogonov) subsequently recanted his assertion, however. And four years after, researchers digging through U.S. intelligence documents found intercepts of Soviet transmissions that suggested an American known as "Ales," perhaps Hiss, had been spying on the United States during that era.

Hiss was appointed the interim (first) secretary general of the United Nations in 1945. He represented the U.S. interests by selecting and leading the U.S. diplomatic contingent. He was responsible for the drafts of the U.N. Charter and the approval of the final draft by the General Assembly. Besides that, the Hiss-authored document fails to emulate our noble U.S. Constitution, but its likeness to the Soviet constitution is striking.

Clearly, Williamson is substantially correct in his letter on all points. The U.N. does represent a grave threat to the independence of our nation. Should anyone do the additional research, the evidence will be clear. CHRISTOPHER S. HARRIMAN Twin Falls

Tax breaks to finance risky investments head to governor

BOISE (AP) — A multimillion-dollar tax break intended to lure investors to putting their money behind innovative business ideas cleared the Legislature Friday in the waning hours of the election-year session.

Despite questions about its constitutionality, there were only four no votes as the Senate sent the House-passed bill to Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. The bill cleared the House on a 53-13 vote.

The overwhelming Senate support for a tax break that puts the state on the hook for up to $30 million sometime after 2009 came less than 24 hours after the Senate narrowly rejected extension of a $500-a-job tax credit to encourage employment expansion.

The job creation credit carried an estimated price tag of $1.5 million a year, although advocates claimed that if it helps creates jobs the taxes the new workers pay will more than cover the cost.

Skeptics argued that there has been no evidence the credit does anything but reward businesses for job expansion they would have undertaken anyway.

There was a similar question about the venture capital tax break — whether it would encourage financing of exceedingly risky ventures with limited chances of success just because the state was insuring the investor against loss. The Senate bottled the bill up last year because of the cost and other questions.

But Republican Sen. Hal Bunderson of Meridian argued that the tax incentive "will allow the best and brightest of our entrepreneurs in Idaho who have developed a business to access something there is a dearth of in Idaho — venture capital."

The Idaho Venture Investment Fund would be created with up to $30 million to insure private investments in businesses that do not qualify for conventional financing. The fund would be overseen by an advisory committee made up of the state Commerce director and four members he appoints.

As the businesses helped by the fund turn a profit, returns to the fund would be funneled back to the original investors. The state would provide income tax credits — up to a total of $30 million — to fund investors if they have not fully recouped their investments and a predetermined profit by 2010.

Those tax credits could be sold or redeemed any time before 2026.

Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly questioned the legality of using taxpayer money to essentially assure that investors not only get their original investment back if the business goes under but even a profit on that investment.

"This constitutes an unconstitutional lending of the state's full faith and credit to an individual," Noh said, "for what is known to be very risky ventures."

Noh also expressed concern about the amount of authority over selecting the investments and determining the profit that would be guaranteed on each that the bill gives the commerce director, a political appointee who changes from administration to administration.

"It seems to me an invitation to abuse of taxpayer funds," he warned.

Seven-footer Kasun visits CSI over weekend

TWIN FALLS — Seven-foot center Mario Kasun, of Croatia, is visiting the College of Southern Idaho through Monday. Kasun, a Gonzaga University signee, has been hailed as “the best player in Croatia,” said CSI head coach Guy Beach.

CSI coaches are also bringing in several other recruits for visits over the next month, including Bountiful, Utah player Kelly Orchard, who has already verbally agreed to attend CSI this fall, and Ryan Davis, a 6-foot-1 point guard transfer from San Jose State University.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

No more Knight

Gators upset; other top teams make cut

The Associated Press

No fourth straight Final Four for Michigan State. The team it beat for the 2000 national title, Florida, is gone, too.

And Bob Knight’s recent NCAA tournament trouble followed him to Texas Tech.

Still, in a respite from bracket-busting, most first-round games went according to form Friday.

The only true stunner was

More Madness — B4-5

12th-seeded Creighton’s elimination of Florida 83-82 in double overtime on Terrell Taylor’s 3-pointer with 0.2 seconds left in a Midwest Regional opener.

Add in Missouri’s victory over Miami, and Tulsa’s upset of Marquette — both Thursday — and it’s the first time three No. 12s won first-round games in the same NCAA tourney.

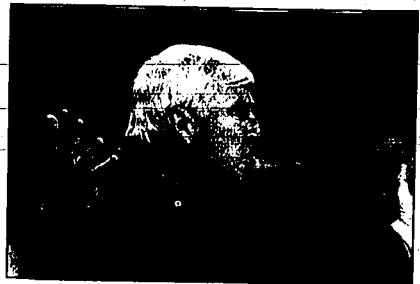

“People make names for themselves when they win games like this,” Creighton center Brody Deren said. “We have more to prove because we are a mid-major and we chalk this up for all the mid-majors.”

Creighton will face fourth-seeded Illinois, which rolled past San Diego State 93-64. In another Midwest game, third-seeded Mississippi State beat McNeese State 70-58.

Even Michigan State’s loss wasn’t an upset, since the Spartans had a mediocre-for-them season and were seeded 10th in the East Regional. They lost to North Carolina State 69-58.

Southern Illinois, seeded 11th

Eagles blank Bruins

CSI splits with SLCC

TWIN FALLS — Nate Bumstead insisted he didn’t have his best stuff working Friday against Salt Lake Community College.

The College of Southern Idaho sophomore said something was missing from his fastball and he didn’t throw a change-up until the third inning.

Eagle eye
Today: SLCC at CSI (2), noon

Don’t even ask about location. He walked three in seven innings and hit a batter in the top of the fourth.

“And, oh yeah, he also threw a complete-game no-hitter — striking out six and inducing 10 ground outs.”

“I didn’t really feel like my stuff was there today,” he said. “For some reason things just worked out. I had great defense behind me and that helped my confidence.”

CSI split its doubleheader with the Bruins on Friday, taking the first game 3-0 behind Bumstead’s no-no before falling in the nightcap 4-2.

The Eagles (14-7, 10-4 Scenic West Athletic Conference) remain two games behind the conference-leading Bruins (19-5, 12-2) heading into today’s doubleheader.

“Bumstead really was struggling with location,” said head coach Jim Walker. “I called all the pitches and he didn’t throw a change-up until the third time through. What I like about Nate is that, when it gets tough, he makes better pitches.”

It also helped that the Eagles handed Bumstead a 2-0 lead to work with after one complete inning.

Freshman Kody Kirkland drove in CSI’s first run with a full-count single in the bottom of —the first and Matt Gunning followed with a double to right-center field to plate Kirkland.

Gunning doubled in Kirkland again in the third to make it 3-0. The sophomore from Victoria, Golden Eagle pitcher Nate Bumstead is congratulated by CSI coaches and teammates Friday after pitching a no-hitter in the first game of the team’s doubleheader against Salt Lake Community College. The Bruins took the nightcap 4-2 for the split.

Defending champ Irish advance to Round 2

The Associated Press

Notre Dame, with a vastly different cast of characters, started this year’s NCAA tournament as it did last year — with a win.

Only two starters are back with the defending national champions, who advanced to the second round of Friday night with a 58-44 victory over New Mexico in the Midwest Regional.

“This was a huge win for us. We’ve got some young players, and it was important for them to get experience,” coach Muffett McGraw said of the Irish (20-9).

We struggled early in the year, and our confidence was shaken.”

Alicia Ratay, a returning starter, scored 14 points, and freshman reserve Jacqueline Buzestz added 13.

The Irish cruised at the beginning of the second half, but used a 15-0 run to take the lead and pull away from the Lobos (22-9).

Notre Dame advanced to a second-round game Sunday against Tennessee, which beat Georgia State 99-68.

Notre Dame’s Erica Haney (3) is defended by New Mexico’s Chelsea Greer during their NCAA women’s Midwest Regional game Friday in Knoxville, Tenn.

Santa Barbara 57, Louisiana Tech 56; Texas 60, Wisconsin-Green Bay 55; Drake 87, Syracuse 69; and Baylor 80, Bucknell 56.

In the Midwest, it was Arkansas 78, Clemson 68; Kansas St. 93, Kent St. 65; Florida International 73, Creighton 58; and Penn St. 82, Chattanooga 67.

In the West, it was Mississippi State upsetting fifth-seeded Boston College 65-59; and Colorado 88, Southern 61.

Tenth-seeded New Mexico (22-8), in the NCAA tournament for the second time in school history, was ahead 39-36 with 15:10 remaining. The Lobos have never advanced past the first round.

New Mexico was held scoreless for the next 12 minutes, and tallied a record-low 11 points in the second half — an NCAA mark for the first and second rounds.

“It was just a game where we ran out of offense,” New Mexico coach Don Flanagan said.

Female ref sets milestone calling first touney game

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Melanie Davis became the first woman to referee a Division I men’s NCAA tournament game.

Davis was part of the officiating crew Friday for the first-round game between San Diego State and Illinois in the East Regional.

“It is history-making,” said Hank Nichols, the NCAA’s national coordinator of men’s basketball officiating. “But I wasn’t thinking about that in terms when we did it.”

Davis, who regularly works men’s games in the Southwestern Athletic Conference, was chosen just as the other 95 tournament referees were, Nichols said.

Each conference ranks its referees based on their work during the season, and then submits the top ones to the NCAA to be considered for the tournament.

Davis was the SWAC’s top-ranked referee, Nichols said. She also officiated the SWAC tournament championship game the past two seasons.

In keeping with policy, the NCAA did not announce the referees before the tournament.

So there was no fanfare as she walked onto the floor, with few people — if any — one aware of the milestone.

While Davis is the first woman to work an NCAA tournament game, she’s not the first high-profile female referee. Violet Palmer and Dee Kanner were the first women to officiate regular-season games in a major U.S. professional sports league when they worked NBA games in the 1997-98 season.

Palmer broke the gender barrier on Oct. 30, 1997, and Kanner joined her five days later. Both are still NBA referees.

Burley boys take second at track season opener

By Scott Thompson Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley standout Jed Thomas picked up a pair of victories Friday to help the Bobcat boys track and field team to a runner-up finish behind Idaho Falls' Skyline Friday at a meet at Budge Field. The Bobcat girls team picked up six victories to finish third behind Bonneville and Skyline. The meet was held in extremely chilly conditions with a light snow falling intermittently. "You have to give these kids a lot of credit for getting it out in the weather," Burley boys coach Thomas finished first in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a time of 40.9 seconds and also took first in the long jump with a distance of 20 feet, 9 inches. The junior finished second in the 100 high hurdles. "I really think that Jed Thomas showed a lot of leadership today," Kramer said. Kramer was also pleased with his shot putters, who went 1-2-3. Jeff Carrick led the way for the Bobcats with a throw of 41-3, while Brooks Quintance and Stephen Tingey finished second and third, respectively. "I've been here six years and I never do more than in the shot put," Kramer said. The Bobcat boys also picked up a victory in the medley relay, clocking a time of 4:10.6. The girls did their damage by committee for Burley, with sophomore Daisey Heimer (100 high hurdles), junior Liz Brice (400), sophomore Lindsey Abo (long jump) and senior Aryelle Peterson (discus) all winning individual events. The Bobcats also won the 4X100 relay and the 4X200 relay. "I was really excited about what I saw today," said girls coach Hal Strain. "I like that we had a lot of girls score points for us and that we had a lot of people contribute." Defending 100 state champion Tiffany Anderson did not have her first day, finishing fourth in the 100 and third in the 200. Heiner clocked a time of 17:64 in the 100 hurdles, while Brice came in at 67:54 in the 400.

Peterson threw the discus 93-11 and Abo's winning long jump was 15-9. This is Brice's first year competing in track. "This is a lot of fun," she said. "I was really nervous because I had never ran track before." In addition to their winning efforts, Strain was most pleased with sophomore Amy Thomas, Jed's younger sister, who placed second in the 300 hurdles. "You've really got to hand it to the kids for even running in this weather," Strain said. Jerome boys, Twin Falls girls win first meet of the season

TWIN FALLS — Battling through a freezing wind and an occasional snow shower, the Jerome boys and Twin Falls girls track teams picked up their first wins of the season at the Twin Falls track meet. The Lady Bruins finished with 115 points to best Minico (82.3) and Jerome (74.3). The girls finished with three individual first-place medals, including two by Arla Walsh and also won the 4X200 relay and the 4X100 relay. The Jerome boys team was powered by four first-place finishes, including victories in the high jump, long jump and triple jump. The Tigers finished with 105 total points. Century was second with 77 and Minico was third with 72.

Jazz defeat Pistons without help of ailing Mailman

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Andrei Kirilenko knew he was getting a chance because of some rare circumstances Friday night, and he made the most of it. Kirilenko started in place of the ill Karl Malone and scored a career-high 27 points to lead the Utah Jazz to a 100-97 victory over the Detroit Pistons. "We knew that with Karl out, everyone on the team had to play over the top," the rookie said. "He's out on an offense and our leader on defense, but this was a big game, and we really needed to win it. I want to play in the NBA playoffs." Utah broke a four-game losing streak despite the absence of Malone, who had flu-like symptoms and missed a game for health reasons for the first time in nearly 13 years. "You aren't going to win many games without Karl Malone," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "He is such an important part of what we do. But we ran the floor and seemed to get better baskets. Andrei was awfully quick." Donyell Marshall and Jarron Collins added 16 each for Utah, while John Stockton had 14 points and 10 assists. Hawks 104, Suns 89 ATLANTA — Shaarret Abdur-Rahim scored 33 points and Toni Kukoc added 23 as the Atlanta Hawks defeated Phoenix 104-89 Friday night, sending the Suns to their sixth straight road loss. Winning their third straight win and fourth in seven games, the Hawks (25-39) matched their victory total for last season — the worst in franchise history. Abdur-Rahim, who had a game-high 12 rebounds, put the game out of reach with 3:56 remaining on a 20-foot jumper from the top of the key that made it 93-75 and gave Atlanta its biggest lead of the night. Nets 97, Heat 78 EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Keith Van Horn scored 28 points and Jason Kidd had his seventh triple-double of the season, leading the New Jersey Nets to a 97-78 victory over the Miami Heat on Friday night. Kidd finished with 11 points, 14 assists and 12 rebounds and Kenyon Martin added 14 points but picked up another flagrant foul as the Nets won their seventh straight at home. Martin's flagrant foul for shoving Jim Jackson in the second quarter could be costly if the call by referee Dan Crawford is upheld. Martin already has been suspended for four games because of his rough play, and faces a one-game suspension for each subsequent flagrant foul. Magic 124, Nuggets 102 ORLANDO, Fla. — Tracy McGrady had 30 points, nine assists, seven rebounds and a career-high six steals Friday night as Orlando defeated Denver 124-102 in a game that featured Tim Hardaway throwing a television monitor onto the court. Hardaway was ejected with 7:20 left in the third quarter after picking up his second technical foul. As he left the court, the Nuggets guard picked up a court-side monitor used by the media's television announcers and threw it. Celtics 103, Grizzlies 97 MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Antoine Walker scored 38 points Friday night as the Boston Celtics overcame an eight-point deficit in the first half to defeat the Memphis Grizzlies 103-97. Memphis led 97-89 after Grant Long hit a pair of free throws with 1:54 to play, but the Grizzlies would not score again. Rogers' three-point play with 15:2 seconds left put the Celtics in front for good, 98-97. Walker hit a pair of free throws with just over 11 seconds to play, then nailed a shot from past midcourt as time expired. Pacers 98, Timberwolves 85 MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Miller scored 23 points and Jamaal Tinsley had a triple-double Friday night as the Indiana Pacers handed the Minnesota Timberwolves their season-high sixth straight defeat, 98-85. Tinsley had 11 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for his second triple-double. Jermaine O'Neal added 15 points and Reggie Miller 14 for Indiana, which won its third consecutive game.

High school football star dies during robbery DUNDALK, Md. — High school football player Derrick Breedlove had enough charisma and talent to earn a full college scholarship and the respect of many in his working-class community. Then came Wednesday, when he was shot dead trying to hold up a liquor store with a pellet gun. The 17-year-old with the "college-bound grades" was the ring-leader of a robbery gang, police said. They had held up the same store three times since Feb. 5 and may have been responsible for a fourth robbery nearby, according to investigators.

Richardson says he didn't want to be bought out LITTLE ROCK — In his first public comments since his dismissal, former Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said he would fight a buyout of his contract, beginning with a meeting Monday with the university president. "I did not resign or retire, nor did I request to be bought, and I have not been bought out of my contract," Richardson said in a statement to The Associated Press, his first public comment since March 1 to buy out the final six years of Richardson's contract. Richardson said he had authorized his lawyer, John Walker, to provide documents to the final system President B. Alan Suggs "which I believe support my position" in advance of the meeting Monday. The embattled coach made no other statement and answered no questions.

"I didn't care if I had to jump over people, I was getting to the front," Musgrave said. "A lot of great race car drivers, they have to make it happen when it's not there for them." Pressley, like Musgrave a veteran of the Winston Cup series, finished second and Mike Bliss was third. Winston Cup star Kevin Harvick was fourth in a Chevrolet he owns himself. He was followed by Rick Crawford, David Strat and Travis Kvapil. Brian Rose, Jon Wood and Winston Cup regular Ken Schrader rounded out the Top 10.

All favorites advance in West Regional Over-Jayed

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — During the first half, it seemed as if Steve Logan was playing Boston University by himself. What's remarkable is that he was winning.

Logan put on a dazzling display of shooting and playmaking while outscoring Boston U. by himself until well into the second half, leading top-seeded Cincinnati to an oh-so-easy 90-52 romp Friday night in a first-round West Regional game.

It was a typical No. 1 vs. No. 16 mismatch, with the only question being whether Logan would score more points than the Terriers (22-10). He didn't, settling for 27 before leaving with 227 remaining after scoring only four points in the second half.

It was Bearcats coach Bob Huggins' 500th career victory — he is 500-171 at Walsh, Akron and Cincinnati — and very few were as easy as this one.

"I didn't know if I would last this long," said Huggins, the 95th Division I coach to reach 500 victories. "You didn't see how bad some of those teams at Walsh were."

Xavier 70, Hawaii 58

DALLAS — Xavier wasn't daunted by a double-digit deficit.

With Romain Sato and Lionel Chalmers turning up the defensive pressure in the second half, the No. 7-seeded Musketeers rallied to beat Hawaii 70-58 in the first round of the West Regional.

Sato had 18 points and 10 rebounds, and Chalmers forced Hawaii's guards into a spate of turnovers as the Musketeers overcame a 12-point first-half hole.

Sato's 3-pointer at the halftime buzzer pulled Xavier (26-5) to 40-33 at the break, and he kept making big plays in the second half. It was Xavier's first win in the tournament since beating Vanderbilt in 1997 in the first round.

Hawaii (27-6) missed its first 11 shots of the second half, when Xavier went on a 11-1 run to take its first lead since the opening minutes of the game.

Hawaii took its biggest lead of the game at 40-28 on Carl English's 3-pointer with about three minutes left in the half.

Hawaii has been on the road since leaving Honolulu on Feb. 26 for road games and then the Western Athletic Conference tournament. After winning the conference title last Saturday, the Warriors flew to Dallas on Monday to prepare for the game against Xavier.

Oklahoma 71, Illinois-Chicago 63

DALLAS — When Oklahoma gathered for its pregame huddle at midcourt, the Illinois-Chicago players were already there — and the Flames weren't about to come.

Some bumping and shoving led to snickers from UIC players and coaches, who were proud of their take-that approach. The Sooners

Cincinnati's Immanuel McElroy (23) goes to the basket over Boston University's Jason Grachowski (24) in their first-round game of the NCAA West Regional on Friday in Pittsburgh.

UCLA 80, Mississippi 58

PITTSBURGH — Over the years, March has always brought out the very best in UCLA. And it just might with these streaky Bruins.

Billy Knight made three straight 3-pointers to open the second half as UCLA advanced to the second round of the NCAA West Regional with an 80-58 victory over Mississippi on Friday night.

Knight finished with 21 points and freshman Dion Thompson had 16 for the eighth-seeded Bruins (20-11).

Led by their heralded freshmen class of Thompson, Andre Patterson and Ryan Walcott, UCLA's reserves outscored the Bruins' first unit 42-38.

Jason Kapona, the Bruins' leading scorer this season, had just 2 points — 14 under his average.

Aaron Harper had 19 points and Justin Reed 14 to lead Ole Miss (20-11), which was hoping a CHICAGO (AP) — Visiting Michael Jordan's old arena, seeing his statue and sitting at his locker was a "spiritual" pilgrimage for Terrell Taylor.

Now he's got an idea of what it's like to be Mike.

Wearing No. 23, just like Jordan, Taylor hit a 3-pointer with 0.2 seconds left Friday to give Creighton a stunning 83-82 double-overtime victory over fifth-seeded Florida in the Midwest Regional.

"Before the game, I watched a DVD of Michael Jordan. That inspired me a lot," Taylor said. "I made a big deal of coming to the United Center and seeing the statue."

"It was a spiritual thing, a spiritual feeling to see the statue and Jordan's locker."

As the ball swished through the net for the last of his eight 3-pointers, Taylor turned to the frenzied crowd with a look of steady confidence. He then pulled on one side of his jersey and pounded his chest as the Creighton fans roared.

Time ran out before Florida's Udonis Haslem could get a desperation shot off. The Creighton players ran to midcourt as the buzzer sounded, bouncing up and down as they lifted Taylor up.

"That the game came down to it we had no answer for Taylor," Florida coach Billy Donovan said. "He was in a zone today. Everything he threw up went in."

Well, not everything. Taylor was 0-for-0 in the first half, but he turned it on in the second. He was 8-for-10 from 3-point range, and finished with 28 points to match his career high.

"The rim looked like the size of a doughnut," Taylor said of his first half struggles.

The 13th-seeded Atlanta Bluejays (23-8) their first NCAA victory since 1999. Add in Missouri's victory over Miami, and Tulsa's upset of Marquette — both Thursday — and this is the first time three No. 12-seeded teams have won first-round games in the same NCAA tournament.

Creighton next plays fourth-seeded Illinois, which beat San Diego State 83-78.

"People make names for themselves when they win games like this," said Creighton center Brody Deren, who fouled out with 2:42 left in regulation. "We have more to prove because we are a mid-major team, and we chalk this up for all the mid-majors."

Haslem finished with 20 points, but 16 came in the last 10 minutes of regulation and the overtimes.

Matt Bonner, who normally averages 16 points, had just 10.

And Brett Nelson, whose right eye was still puffy and discolored from the broken cheekbone he got in a fight with teammate LaDarius Halton on Tuesday, was 4-of-19 from the floor.

"I think we showed heart down the stretch," Haslem said. "That was a tough shot and it could just as easily have gone the other way. Tonight, it went down."

But the Gators were sloppy, too. They turned the ball over 17 times, with 10 turnovers costing them miscue coming with 29 seconds left in the second overtime.

Orien Greene was dribbling around, looking for someone to pass to, but he was called for a 5-second violation.

Creighton guard Imael Caro got tangled up with Justin Hamilton with about 5 seconds left, and the ball squirted free. But it rolled out of bounds and the Bluejays got it back, setting up Taylor's dramatic shot.

Illinois 93, San Diego St. 64

CHICAGO — Frank Williams came to play. Did he ever.

Williams, whose talent sometimes is overshadowed by a style that has been described as unorthodox, scored 25 points and had eight assists Friday as the fourth-seeded Illini beat San Diego State 93-64 in the Midwest Regional.

Illinois, 15-6 at the United Center since it opened in 1994, en route to a 22-1 record in the NCAA's new format that allows

Mississippi St. 70, McNeese State 58

DALLAS — Mario Austin without McNeese State's best shot forward started to give out a few of his own.

Austin bulldozed through defenders for 14 straight points during a 7-minute first-half stretch to rally No. 3-seeded Mississippi State from an eight-point deficit to a 70-58 victory over No. 14 McNeese State in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

He finished with 25 points and nine rebounds.

The Bulldogs closed the first half with a 12-0 run to take a 31-25 halftime lead.

McNeese State didn't provide much of challenge to the Bulldogs in the second half, falling behind by as many as 19 points.

Mississippi State also got 20 points from Marckell Patterson.

McNeese State (21-8) entered the game on a 14-game winning streak — the second-longest in the country — and picked up the Southland Conference regular-season and tournament championships along the way.

The freshman point guard got the Longhorns offense cranked up early, using fastbreaks and 3-pointers to build a big early lead that they maintained for a 70-57 victory over Boston College on Thursday night in a Midwest Regional opener.

Ford, showing the poise of a senior, had 20 points, two shy of his best, and seven assists to guide Texas (21-11) to a second-round game Sunday against Mississippi State, which beat McNeese State 70-58.

The Longhorns took control with a 20-4 run midway through the first half, then upped the lead to 22 several minutes before halftime.

Home cookin': Pitt ends Devils' 19-game winning streak

Cal advances past pesky Penn

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt star Brandon Knight loved watching the "home" boys play in the NCAA tournament for Stanford.

No wonder he was so eager to make some tournament memories of his own.

Showing no effects of a painful tendon injury that left him limping a few days before, Knight scored 17 points and had 11 rebounds in each half with exceptional playmaking in a 71-54 South Regional victory Friday over Central Connecticut State.

Knight, a third-team All-American, put on a baseline-to-baseline show in front of his home fans, with steals at one end and a succession of beautiful passes or pullup jumpers at the other.

"I call him the Einstein of point guard," Pitt coach Ben Howland said. "I coached a couple of good ones — John Stockton and Brian Shaw — and he's right in their league. Great players make great plays, and when we needed him to, he made great plays."

Pittsburgh will play California in the second round Sunday. California beat Pennsylvania 82-75.

Knight, at times the entire Pitt offense, also had nine assists, five steals and one unattractive tongue lashing.

With the game still in doubt in the second half, Knight angrily called timeout and slammed the ball down in disgust, unhappy his teammates were struggling to execute a routine play.

"It was like we had never run the play before," Knight said. "The game was on the line, and we needed to be focused."

Knight came out of the timeout and immediately found Ontario Lett down low to restore Pitt's 10-point lead — the kind of play that answered any questions about whether Knight could play effectively on his sore leg.

"The leg is fine, and that's it," Knight said.

Playing an NCAA game in Pittsburgh for the first time in school history, the third-seeded Panthers (28-5) scored their first NCAA victory in 11 years and ended the 14th-seeded Devils' 19-game winning streak.

California 82, Pennsylvania 75

PITTSBURGH — The NCAA tournament committee didn't do California any favors, forcing the Pac-10 school to travel across the country for its first-round game.

And now that they're here, the Golden Bears figure they might as well spend the weekend.

"Why not?" guard Brian Wethers said.

Joe Shipp scored 20 points as Cal played a solid all-around game and advanced to the second round with an 82-75 victory over Pennsylvania in the South Regional on Friday.

Wethers hit several key jumpers and added 19 points for Cal, which avoided being beaten in the first round for the second straight year by holding off the 11th-seeded Quakers (25-7).

Last March, Cal was eliminated in the opening round by Fresno State, resulting in a plane ride back from Memphis that still hurts 12 months later.

"The Bears were determined not to let it happen again."

"We're a lot more focused, a lot more prepared and a lot more hungry," Wethers said. "Last year, we were excited to be in, but this year, we really wanted to get a win in this tournament and make a run."

They're off.

In the East, dealt Knight his fifth first-round loss in his last seven trips to the NCAAs, beating sixth-seeded Texas Tech 76-68.

There were some boxes when Knight took the floor for the game, and one Southern Illinois fan held up a sign reading, "Hey Knight, What's Up?"

Salukis' Indiana fired Knight in September 2000 after Knight grabbed the arm of a student who said, "What's up, Knight?"

Though he has three national titles, Knight hasn't been in the round of 16 since 1994.

The higher-seeded team won 10 of Friday's first 12 games.

There were no surprises in the West or South.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Knight, Red Raiders make early exit

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Knight's first NCAA tournament appearance with Texas Tech went pretty much like his recent ones at Indiana.

The only difference after this first-round loss is that he's headed back to Lubbock, Texas, not Bloomington, Ind.

Jermaine Dearman had 17 points and 11 rebounds Friday night as 11th-seeded Southern Illinois beat Knight's Texas Tech 76-68 in an Eastern Regional opener.

"I'd have been disappointed eventually if we'd gotten beat in the championship game," said Knight, who won three national titles at Indiana before being fired in September 2000 for a "pattern of unacceptable behavior."

"Yeah, I'm disappointed, but also I can look at how we played and how they played, and they're just better at some things than we were."

Though he's 42-22 in 25 tournament appearances, Knight's teams have lost in the first round in five of his last seven trips. He hasn't been to the round of 16 since 1994.

And until now, the first-round losses have been particularly ugly. Indiana lost to Colorado by 17 in 1997, matching the Hoosiers' worst postseason defeat. That was followed by a 25-point blowout to St. John's in 1999, and a 20-point loss to Pepperdine in 2000.

Kent Williams scored 17 for the Salukis, who won their school-record 27th game. Southern Illinois held Tech to just 39 percent shooting — and that was with Dearman and Rolan Roberts, their top defenders, starting the game on the bench.

The two missed their first start of the season after being late to practice Tuesday.

Georgia 85, Murray State 68
CHICAGO — Jarvis Hayes scored 20 of his career-high 31 points in the second half Friday night as Georgia overcame an early 14-point deficit to beat Murray State 85-68 in the East Regional.

Third-seeded Georgia (22-9) scored the final 12 points and moves on to face No. 11 seed Southern Illinois (27-7) on Sunday. The Salukis dominated Texas Tech 76-68 and sent coach Bob Knight home with another first-round loss.

Hayes had a pair of 3-pointers and another jumper to spark a 16-

Cuthbert Victor's 3-pointer with 3:38 left got the Racers within five, but Hayes hit another jumper, Chris Daniels converted a three-point play and also dunked in the closing 12-0 spurt.

Rashard Wright added 16 points and 10 assists for the Bulldogs and Jonas Hayes, Jarvis' brother, scored 14 and grabbed 14 rebounds.

Victor scored 23 and Justine Burdine, who made four quick 3-pointers to start the game and give Murray State an early 14-point lead, had 21 for the Racers (19-13).

Maryland 85, Siena 70
WASHINGTON — Playing the role of a No. 1 seed for the first time, Maryland put on a scintillating performance on a familiar stage.

Juan Dixon scored 29 points as the fourth-ranked Terrapins cruised past Siena 85-70 on Friday night in a first-round East Regional game.

Dixon, who scored 20 in the first half, fell two points short of matching the school record shared for points in an NCAA tournament game, held jointly by Len Bias and Joe Smith.

The loss ended an improbable run by the Saints (17-19), who were 12-18 before winning the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament and beating Alcorn State 81-77 in an opening-round game Tuesday.

That victory enabled Siena to become only the second team with a losing record to win an NCAA tournament game. But the Saints' bid to become the first 16th seed to beat a No. 1 seed was abruptly rejected by a Maryland team on a mission to win its first national championship.

James Clinton scored 16 points and Dwayne Archibold added 14 for Siena. Prosper Karangwa, who scored a career-high 31 against Alcorn State, was held to seven on 3-for-8 shooting.

Former big league catcher calls NCAA tournament game

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — For a dozen years, Bruce Benedict called pitches in the big leagues. This week, the former All-Star catcher and current New York Mets scout called something else — his first game as an NCAA tournament official.

Benedict blew the whistle Thursday as Ohio State beat Davidson 69-64 in the first round of the West Regional.

"I've been fortunate to be at a lot of big sporting venues in my life, and this was one of the best," he said in the stands while watching Gonzaga play Wyoming at The Pit.

"This was a wonderful, intriguing, passionate experience," he said. "The energy of the kids, their skill, what's at stake, it's unbelievable."

And, Benedict's three-man crew had it pretty easy. No technical fouls, no altercations and not too much shouting by the coaches.

"I think our game went very well," he said.

Too bad that his time's up at the tournament. Benedict now heads back to his baseball job as an advance scout for the Mets.

"I'm going home to Atlanta tomorrow, and I'll be in spring training by Tuesday," he said. "I'll be watching Pittsburgh and we play in the first two series of the season."

The 46-year-old Benedict spent his entire major league career as a catcher with the Atlanta Braves, playing from 1978-89.

"An All-Star in 1981 and 1983, he hit .242 with 18 home runs and 260 RBI in 182 games. He reached the postseason in 1982 when the Braves lost to St. Louis in the NL championship series.

Through a friend, Benedict began working as a basketball referee in the winter of 1985. He handled grade-school and high school games near his home in Georgia.

"I always enjoyed basketball, and I thought it would be a great way to get conditioning for spring training," he said.

Benedict said he never thought this second career would progress as far as it did.

But in 1990, he started calling Division I college games. A few years later, he began working in the Southeastern Conference and soon added the Atlantic Coast Conference to his resume.

This week, Benedict went big time. He did the NIT game between Arizona State and UNLV, before traveling to Albuquerque for the opening round of the NCAA's.

"When I found that I'd gotten this assignment, the first thing I did was call my mom and dad," he said.

Fresno State's Tarkanian throws in the towel

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian retired from coaching college basketball Friday, tossing in his cherished-up towel after a career that spanned four decades and mixed success with success.

The 71-year-old coach will become a consultant for Fresno State, his alma mater.

"This was a great way for me to end my career," Tarkanian said at a news conference.

He will be paid $120,000 a year as "senior development consultant" at Save Mart Center, the basketball arena the school is building, Fresno State president John Wely said.

Tarkanian won an NCAA title with UNLV in 1990 and led the fourth winningest coach in major college basketball.

He was an unmistakable presence on the sidelines through the years, with his bald pate and hunched eyes. There was also his trademark habit: chewing on folded white towels to ease the tension.

"He's had an amazing career," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said from the NCAA Regional in Greenville, S.C. "He was consistently excellent for a long period of time. ... Jerry had consistent high levels of success because his teams played hard defensively. He's one of the truly remarkable defensive coaches."

The Bulldogs ended their season Wednesday with an 81-75 loss to Temple in the NIT. They finished 19-15, only the second time in Tarkanian's 31 years in Division I his team failed to win

After the game, Temple coach John Chaney grabbed a microphone and praised Tarkanian.

"I'm saddened to see him leave," Chaney said. "I love you!"

Tarkanian, whose career has been marred by long battles with the NCAA, complained about problems of the court that hurt the team.

This year, star point guard Tito Maddox was dismissed in August for accepting gifts from an agent. Maddox's replacement, Chris Sandy, was suspended for receiving a loan to pay for a community college course.

Leading scorer-Melvin Ely missed six games for receiving improper benefits.

Tarkanian, a previous finalist for induction in the Basketball Hall of Fame, finished with a 778-202 record. He had 29 20-win seasons, and only Dean Smith had more with 30.

Before coming to Fresno State in 1995, he coached at UNLV, where "Tark the Shark" ruled at an arena known as the "Shark Tank."

He led the Runnin'-Rebels to 12 NCAA tournaments, winning a national title and reaching the semifinals four times.

He also coached at Long Beach State.

Tarkanian returned to Fresno State, where he graduated in 1955, after a brief stint coaching the San Antonio Spurs that ended when he was fired after 20 games.

The rest of his 38-year career has been spent on college courts, where he coached junior colleges in California before jumping to Division I, where he took four Long Beach teams to the NCAA tournament.

Chamber, company renew partnership

SUN VALLEY - The Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce and American Express renewed their cooperative, ski-marketing partnership.

The partnership allows the chamber to market directly to American Express card members, who tend to be avid skiers who travel and spend more than the average consumer does.

American Express renewed the partnership despite extensive damage to its headquarters during the 9-11 disaster and a downturn in spending and travel.

Longview Fibre votes to suspend payment

LONGVIEW, Wash. - Longview Fibre, which has a Twin Falls container plant, said its board voted to suspend payment of dividends until the company's financial results improve.

The Longview-based forest-products company recently reported a first-quarter loss of $6 million.

It had paid a dividend of 3 cents a share during the first quarter that ended Jan. 31, down from 12 cents paid in the previous eight quarters.

Boise Cascade changes its tree-cutting policy

BOISE - Boise Cascade is changing its tree-cutting policy. But one environmental group says it still is not enough.

The company, which has a corrugated container plant in Burley, will phase out its old-growth timber harvest over the next two years.

For nearly two years, the Rainforest Action Network, an environmental advocacy group, has waged a campaign against Boise Cascade.

"We're not buying it," said Jennifer Krill, the organization's old-growth campaign director said of the company's new policy.

Krill said the company buys and distributes old-growth forest products from endangered forests throughout Canada, Central and South America and Southeast Asia.

The company denies those allegations and said its old-growth policy decision was not based on pressure from environmentalists. "We will fulfill what contracts we have, but in 18 to 24 months, we will be completely out," said George J. Harad, chairman and chief executive.

Parent of Pizza Hut, KFC plans on multibranding

LEXINGTON, Ky. - Customers love being able to get a taco and a basket of fish at the same restaurant. Same goes for getting a fried chicken platter and a mug of root beer.

Tricon Global Restaurants, the parent of KFC, Pizza Hut and Taco Bell, wants to give them plenty more opportunities to do just that.

"Multibranding is going to transform the industry," said David Novak, Tricon chairman and CEO.

The company, which announced this week it plans to purchase Lexington-based Long John Silver's and A&W All American Food Restaurants, expounded on its plans for building its business through multibranding.

Multibranding means offering two or more restaurant brands in one location. By doing that, Tricon will double its potential for growth in the United States, Novak said. Sales at multibrands often increase by a third, he said. "What drives volume is being able to broaden your appeal."

Tricon and Yorkshire Global Restaurants, the parent of Long John Silver's and A&W, have already located about 90 restaurants together, and found that Tricon's brands match up well with the fish and root beer brands.

Taco Bell appeals to a younger audience and does most of its business at lunch, Long John Silver's has an older clientele and does as well at dinner as lunch, he said.

Novak said Tricon decided that if it was going to grow with the Yorkshire brands, it needed to be able to oversee them. "We want to be able to control our destiny," he said.

The $2.2-billion deal is expected to close in 60 to 90 days.

Tricon, which will be renamed Yum! Brands Inc. pending shareholder approval, expects to convert 3,000 of its U.S. restaurants to multibrands over the next five years.

Novak also said multibranding allows Tricon to locate in rural areas with low populations and in areas with high real estate costs, where a stand-alone restaurant might not be feasible.

Speaker: Deal with changes

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - Advice from Barbara Knudson about riding a dead horse: Get off the horse.

Some people buy a bigger whip, appoint a committee, create a training session or promote the dead horse to a supervisory position, she told a lunch gathering at the third annual Small Business Expo, which continues today at the Snake River Plaza.

Knudson, who works in the human resource department for College of Southern Idaho, spoke on how to make changes in your business.

Change can be good, bad or ugly, she said.

Ugly change has to do with death, divorce, job loss or other experiences that can affect people's work. Bad can be a bad hair day, stupid drivers or other irritating things, she said.

"The good change can still create a scenario," she said. Getting married; having babies or getting a puppy are examples of good changes that can affect people's work.

Sometimes people get stuck because they have an emotional attachment which causes them to act or react a certain way, Knudson said.

"It is difficult to get people to move," she said. "We get stuck in our emotions."

People can think about things in their life that have helped them get through difficult times in the past in order to change.

"Changes feel like a loss of control," she said. "Most people like to be in control."

Most experience a series of emotions when they suffer a loss, such as loss of a job, Knudson said. The series goes from shock, denial, anger, sadness, guilt, bargaining and relief before they can move on.

But to interview for a new job, it is important to move on.

"They get stuck in the mad and they can't interview well when they are mad," she said.

She asked people at the expo luncheon to talk about things they did that helped them through difficult times.

Answers ranged from family and friends to changing jobs, prayer, shopping, chocolate or margaritas.

And Knudson added that sometimes it just takes time.

To help another person through change, colleagues need to honor that person's emotions.

"In the business world we say, 'Let's not get emotional. Let's be logical,'" she said. "When people are emotional they don't do logic."

DESIGNED TO ATTRACT CUSTOMERS

Target employee Jesse Shelvin fills the racks with Mossimo designer clothing Tuesday at a Target store in Minneapolis. Target Corp. is offering more designer merchandise made exclusively for Target such as Mossimo, Michael Graves and Sonia Kashuk cosmetics.

Target aims to solidify cheap chic niche

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Stephanie Gruber Fried used to drop by her local Target store every couple of weeks, to shop for low-price basics and an occasional fashion item. Now she goes every week, looking for more.

Target, which has a store in Twin Falls, has been aggressively pursuing partnerships with designer names for exclusive merchandise, from capri pants and lipsticks to chic coffee tables and teapots. Customers are responding.

"I really like the Mossimo clothes because they are so trendy. And I buy all the Sonia Kashuk lipsticks and brushes... The Michael Graves (housewares) line is terrific. It has awesome design."

Target's strategy is helping the nation's second-largest discount store, behind Wal-Mart Stores Inc., solidify its niche in cheap chic. It also puts more pressure on department stores, whose merchandise has failed to excite its customers and whose prices are higher.

Fried said that she is shopping less often at department stores, going there "for fillers, like a coat, a nice business suit and nice shoes," she said.

"Target is great for casual clothes."

Since the mid-1990s, Target has attracted more style-conscious consumers by offering trendy lines, under various store labels, while still pulling in its budget shoppers with conservative tastes with basic merchandise.

The first venture into the designer arena was in 1999 with an exclusive line from architect Graves, including $29.99 sleek tea kettles, $89.99 coffee tables and other housewares and furniture.

That was followed last year by a rollout of apparel and accessories from designer, Mossimo Giannulli and cosmetics from celebrity makeup artist Kashuk.

Kashuk's lipsticks sell for $5.99, while Mossimo's line includes $24.99 faded jeans and $21 wrap dresses.

This year, Target will add home accessories from sportswear designer Todd Oldham and interior designer Philippe Starck, as well as a young men's collection from urban designer Marc Ecko. Target has also teamed up with Stephen Sprouse, known for his downtown rock 'n' roll-inspired clothing, to create a patriotic apparel collection this summer.

Having maximized its store brands, Target "is recreating what used to make department stores great," said David Wolfe, creative director at The Doniger Group, a company that acts as a middleman between retailers and apparel manufacturers. "We used to love department stores because they had a specific identity - and they had brands that people did not find elsewhere."

Arnold Bronson, managing director of retail strategies at Kurt Salmon Associates, says: "These new names add even more status appeal" to Target and could pull more customers away from department stores.

The 1,053-store division of Minneapolis-based Target Corp. generated sales of $32.5 billion for the year ended Feb. 2, a 13.1 percent increase from the year before.

Target's move is occurring at a time of intense competition from its discount and moderate-price rivals, where differentiation, particularly in apparel, has become essential for survival.

Fast-growing Kohl's Corp. has an exclusive deal to sell Jones Apparel's Nine & Co. clothing line, and is working on similar pacts with other companies.

Coalition starts to make headway

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BLISS - Things are starting to happen for members of the Rural Magic Valley Economic Development Association.

The coalition's development specialist, Jim Scott, has been working with the cities and counties to ease some of the red tape that goes with business deals. Scott has met with city councils and county commissioners to find details of ordinances and licensing requirements and has taken the information back to business clients for use in their planning.

Scott has visited many of the cities and talked with committees assigned to develop some projects that will benefit the community.

Scott also has met with officials of the Idaho Department of Commerce and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Development, communication between the parties can bring an interested client's attention to the correct area for a new business deal or expansion.

Coalition President Steve Kautz presided at a meeting this week in Bliss, attended by a dozen representatives from the valley. A roundup of news:

- A sample brochure was shown to give members ideas about making ones for their communities. The Commerce Department will help on the project and print a few hundred, but larger numbers would cost.

- The possibility of a joint session with Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization was discussed, and Scott will contact SIEDO director Jan Rogers for confirmation in May or June.

- Scott said he will work with Buhl officials as the city requested an evaluation team from the Association of Idaho Cities, the Idaho Rural Partnership and the Commerce Department.

- A committee review provides the city with objective information to help create an action plan for development strategies.

- The next Rural Magic Valley Economic Development Association meeting will be at 6 p.m. April 11 at El Tapatio Restaurant, 88 S. Idaho St. in Wendell.

Times-News correspondent Mary Lou Potts can be reached at Buhl at 543-8854.

Emmett asks Jerome for job tips

The Times-News

JEROME - A western Idaho city asked Jerome for a few job creation tips.

A 14-person delegation from Emmett met Friday in Jerome to learn how Jerome leaders have succeeded in developing and maintaining a strong economic development program, Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization said in a statement.

Emmett is struggling to maintain economic strength after last year's closure of a Boise Cascade mill that provided 200 of the top-paying jobs in Emmett. Leaders there turned to Jerome for guidance on survival after loss of a major employer, SIEDO said.

Jerome representatives meeting with the Emmett group included leaders from city and county government, economic development, education and the Region IV Development office.

Jerome faced a similar situation in 1987 when a major employer, a Tupperware plastics plant, closed and eliminated over 700 jobs, SIEDO said. After the plant closure, the city made a concerted effort to develop an ongoing economic development program. As a result, Jerome has brought new businesses to the area while helping established employers stay and expand.

"Jerome truly serves a model for other small communities in Idaho to look toward in economic development success," said Bob Richards, director of Jerome economic development. "We will share with Emmett leaders our experiences in economic struggles, how we worked toward developing a long-term economic growth plan and resulting success."

"Hopefully, this practical information from Jerome leadership will assist Emmett community leaders as they contemplate next steps in building a strong economic base after Boise Cascade's departure," he said.

SIEDO is a joint venture of public and private sectors in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding to help retain and attract business to southern Idaho.

Kraft plans more job cuts

Knight Ridder News Service

CHICAGO - Kraft Foods Inc., a Rupert employer, is planning more job cuts across the company in the wake of its acquisition of Nabisco Holdings Corp. in addition to the 8,250 positions it has already said it will eliminate.

The cuts are expected to hit hardest on Kraft employees rather than former Nabisco employees, who have taken the brunt of the previously disclosed reductions. A company spokesman declined to say how many more jobs are coming, but said additional Kraft plants will be shuttered or restructured. "There are still announcements pending on Kraft plant closures or reconfigurations," said company spokeswoman Kathy Knuth.

Since Kraft completed its $1.2 billion acquisition of the cookie-and-cake maker in December 2000, the Northfield, Ill.-based food company has announced plans to cut 7 percent of the 117,000 workers it had at the time.

In the last year, Kraft has closed factories, consolidated corporate functions and combined sales forces to deliver promised cost savings. The cost-cutting moves have so far saved the company more than $100 million. Kraft expects annual savings to rise to $300 million in

The Nasdaq composite index rose 0.4 percent to 1,663.30, or 0.3 percent for the week. Stocks turned positive early Friday on a Federal Reserve review showing a bigger-than-expected 0.4 percent increase in output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities during February.

Delta says employees won't get pay raises. The airline defended the decision by noting that the workers' salaries were reviewed first and found to be either first or second in the industry.

Atlanta (AP) - About 40,000 employees at Delta Air Lines won't receive pay raises this year as the company attempts to bolster its finances, officials said in an internal memo.

The decision affects flight attendants, airport customer service agents and reservation workers. The memo also cited weak revenue after the Sept. 11 attacks and low demand for air travel as reasons for the decision.

10 reasons to write about Baptists

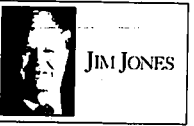

"Why do you write so much about Baptists?" I'm often asked.

A Baptist news conference in Dallas recently, one of the reporters asked a similar question of several Texas Baptist leaders: "Most of my readers are not Baptists. So tell me why it is important to write about this (Baptist issue)?"

It was a good question, focused on a decision by Baptist conservatives to require foreign missionaries to affirm a controversial faith statement. But it prompted me to create my own top 10 reasons for writing about Baptists.

No. 10: Baptists are the largest non-Catholic group in America, with almost 16 million members. Famous Baptists include former Presidents Harry Truman, Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton.

No. 9: Baptists attack one another in colorful language. Last week, the Rev. Phil Lineberger of Sugar Land, Texas, a moderate, compared conservative Baptists to Islamic fundamentalists. The late Rev. W.A. Criswell called some moderates "infidels" and "skunks."

JIM JONES

No. 8: The Southern Baptist Convention has the largest missionary force in the world, with almost 10,000 missionaries serving in the United States and abroad.

No. 7: Baptists do weird things. Conservative Baptists boycotted Disney, one of the largest purveyors of family entertainment.

No. 6: Baptists do good things. The Baptist General Convention of Texas, for example, operates Buckner's Children's Home, nursing homes, hospitals, universities, seminaries.

No. 5: Baptists helped shape America's history of religious freedom. Roger Williams, who helped create the first Baptist church in America in Providence, R.I., braved jail and deportation when he advocated religious liberty. John Leland and other Baptists in the South were imprisoned as they sought free religious practices. They helped get religious freedom written into the Constitution.

No. 4: The denomination is coming apart at the seams. In Texas, there are two state conventions, one conservative and one moderate. Moderates have also created a national body, the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, which is an alternative to the conservative-controlled national Southern Baptist Convention.

No. 3: Baptists are politically incorrect. Conservative Baptists adopted a faith statement saying wives should submit to the servant leadership of their husbands and declaring that the Bible reserves the office of pastor for one only. Last month, Baptists declared they would no longer appoint ordained women as chaplains. Although Lottie Moon, a pioneer woman missionary to China, is one of their greatest heroes, conservatives are requiring all 5,150 missionaries to sign a faith statement many see as anti-woman.

No. 2: The conservative-controlled Southern Baptist Convention is a political and social force. The denomination has joined Roman Catholics in taking positions against abortion and have urged abstinence in fighting AIDS and teen pregnancies. They've apologized for past racism and appointed more African-Americans to leadership positions.

And reason No. 1: Thousands of Baptist churches - large and small and moderate and conservative - follow the Golden Rule and reach out to others. Controversies come secondary to such work as distributing food and clothing to low-income families. Baptists help rich and poor alike in times of trial - death, divorce and unemployment. They carry out the commands of Jesus to "love thy neighbor."

Jim Jones writes for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Mothers find island of sanity

BURLEY - Rebecca Moore set out to organize something lovely for harried young mothers.

The result is MOPS - Mothers of Preschoolers. Some 20 members, who live in Burley, agree that it's a real godsend.

"When I lived in Chehalis, Wash., there was a terrific group nearby in Centralia," Moore said. "About 200 moms. I loved it. But then we moved to Idaho and I couldn't find MOPS anywhere."

She's mom to a 4-year-old and a tiny baby, and the wife of Pastor C.K. Moore of the Burley First Presbyterian Church. She was experiencing isolation and a passionate hunger for adult conversation, she recalled, and, after a lengthy career in international marketing, she felt the limits placed on her intellect.

The church was a natural place for mothers to come together and build relationships, but participants are not required to attend the church. The idea is to help women become the best mothers they can be.

"The support of other women is critical. They used to quilt. The children played while the women talked," she said. "They swapped teething cures and potty-training methods, but quilting isn't as common anymore."

So Moore decided to start her own MOPS group. It was the first such group in the state of Idaho, she said, although there is now one in Boise, too. Moore's friend, Christina Schorzman, lent a hand. "You take a lot of flack if you choose to be a stay-at-home mother," Schorzman said. "Women who are working resent the heck out of you. I've had them say that they wished they had married a man who made lots of money so they could stay home, too. I'm being penalized because I choose to make it work on one income. So we need to support each other."

MOPS provides child care during meetings. Little ones attend a pre-school program of stories, arts and crafts and music while their mothers take a break. There are sessions of scrapbooking, mothering skills and crafts.

At a recent session, licensed massage therapist Geri Liljenquist demonstrated massage techniques for infants and toddlers.

"It has been proven that children who receive massage therapy from infancy score an average of 30 points higher on IQ tests," said Liljenquist, quoting from a book she brought with her. "They are more relaxed and rejuvenated. At the same time, they are stimulated in their development. I

Plagiarism from the pulpit

Clergy struggle with citing sources

By David Rank
Associated Press writer

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. - Plagiarism charges have caused trouble lately for historians and college students, and even clergy are being questioned about whether they should cite more sources from the pulpit.

Thousands of sermons have been collected online, making it easy for religious leaders to peruse the words of others for inspiration. And the point where research becomes plagiarism is murky for ministers and rabbis.

But by borrowing too much, some say preachers risk bruising their credibility.

"Preparation doesn't mean clicking 'print' or ripping it out of the magazine and carrying it to the pulpit with you," said Steve May, who edits a sermon-sharing Web site, www.sermonnotes.com. "The real problem with that (is it) indicates the guy isn't spending time in the Word himself."

sermons that it encourages pastors to use.

"We're very clear in the Episcopal Church that if you're going to copy a piece of copyrighted music into a sermon you must do what you must to cite a source," said Clay Morris, a church liturgical officer.

The problem for preachers lies in failing to give credit - or not putting in the time to make a sermon original.

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Doris Kearns Goodwin admitted this year she borrowed from other works without attribution in her 1987 book "The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys." At least six books by popular historian Stephen Ambrose have been questioned for failing to properly credit source material. And 38 students have left the University of Virginia since a professor developed a computer program to find duplicated phrases in students' work.

We know to use attribution when we're using material from another source, but we do so in very subtle ways... Who wants to listen to a presentation that is full of footnotes?

- Clayton Schmit, associate professor at Fuller Theological Seminary

The plagiarism question has gained attention in this Detroit suburb at Christ Church Cranbrook, where parishioners are writing to see whether the Rev. Edward Mullins will return to his post as rector. The Detroit Free Press reported this month that Mullins was given a 90-day suspension Feb. 1 while the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan investigated complaints by parishioners of plagiarism in his sermons and church bulletins. Some parishioners have indicated the dispute has more to do with conflicts within the congregation.

Generally, reading and listening to other preachers is recognized as part of crafting a sermon. Episcopal Church USA even publishes weekly standards as an academic paper or book. Others question whether preaching should be copyrighted at all.

"I don't believe that plagiarism in a sermon exists in the same sense that other people might," May said. "The only thing I think is unethical - plagiarism in preaching - is if you tell a story that happened to someone else as if it happened to you."

"We know to use attribution when we're using material from another source, but we do so in very subtle ways," said Clayton Schmit, an associate professor at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif. "Who wants to listen to a presentation that is full of footnotes?"

The Rev. Edward Mullins, rector at Christ Church Cranbrook, hands out a plastic egg to one of the children listening to his storytelling during a children's Easter Celebration at the church in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. Mullins has been suspended pending the results of an investigation into complaints of sermon plagiarism.

By Lou Carbozo
Chicago Tribune writer

In the multimillion-selling "Left Behind" books, the planet is constantly in peril. Jets crash, folks evaporate, from their clothes and locusts swarm with a sickening hum that heralds the end of the world as we know it.

The newest "Left Behind" installment, "Desecration," topped national best-seller lists out of the box - and finished last year No. 1, according to Publishers Weekly.

So pitched is "Left Behind" mania that with the October release of "Desecration," readers snaked through the Mall of America, waiting hours for authors Tim LaHaye and Jerry B. Jenkins, who also pens the "Gill Thorpe" sports comic strip, to autograph books.

The popularity of such a series has been unprecedented. Still, many recent converts might not be aware of one stranger-than-fiction asterisk. The authors believe their works are true from a biblical standpoint, 100 percent true.

"The overarching plot, based largely on

Gary DeMar, author of "End Times Fiction: A Biblical Consideration of the 'Left Behind' Theology," has another explanation for Christ's second coming: "Jesus said he would come within a generation with His judgment and quite literally this is what happened in A.D. 70. The temple was destroyed, a million Jews were slaughtered by the Romans under Titus and 50,000 Jews were taken into slavery. There were very few Jews in Jerusalem until the 20th Century."

The pop fiction writing style bothers Garner: "The parts I've read are really lame; they leave the taste of cardboard in your mouth. The characters all have names like 'Buck' (and belong to) 'the Tribulation force.'"

Apocalypse soon

the book of Revelation, goes like this: All saved Christians, dead and alive, get snatched into heaven. Those with weak faith get "left behind" to fight the Antichrist. LaHaye and Jenkins are steadfast. "I believe the kind of stuff I'm writing about is going to happen someday," said Jenkins, who depicts a fixed view of the subject, shared by many evangelical Protestants.

The nine novels in the "Left Behind" series, launched in 1995, have sold 50 million copies. Book 10, "The Remnant," is slated for a July release; the dozen-book collection should run its course around Summer 2004. There's an

Tough questions make essential part of faithful's life

The news isn't good for churches. A recent USA Today survey revealed that more than 29 million Americans said they had no religion. That's twice the number who said the same thing in a similar survey in 1990, according to the American Religious Identification Survey 2001. In January, a USA Today/Gallup Poll found that 50 percent of Americans describe themselves as religious. Two years earlier, the percentage was 54 percent. "We haven't gone to church since we were children," Laura Terry of Whidbey Island, Wash., said in the USA Today story. Instead, she sends her children to a private school "where they learn the philosophy of all religions, and I think that's enough." Reasons for the decline in church attendance are legion: scandals within the clergy, exposure to individualistic expressions of spirituality, dominance of a scientific worldview, cynicism about institutions in general, personal beliefs that conflict with religious teachings, a variety of other weak activities to experience. Then religion are up-close-and-personal irritations that drive people away — drawn-out sermons, poor sound systems and organs that are as loud as a rock concert. "It's as cliché now to call institutional religion oppressive, patriarchal, out of date and out of touch," said Mark Galli, managing editor of Christianity Today. As for people who seek "Lone Ranger spirituality," Galli said, they miss the depth of understanding about their relationship to God and to others. Here are some crucial questions:

• What is about identifying with a community of believers that gives meaning and purpose to my life? And if that connection is important to me, how do I show it in my words and actions? • Am I arrogant about what I believe and unwilling to listen to those whose beliefs are different from mine? Or can I learn from them and respect those who have a different point of view? • Are there personal attitudes or church practices that need to be altered so my church is less a country club for saints and more a hospital for sinners? • Has my church made "we've never done it that way before" (the so-called seven last words of the church) its unofficial motto, thereby shutting out others who may have new ideas and creative suggestions? • Do I care enough about my church to invest my time, talents and treasure in its mission so that I'm doing all I can to entice those who are truly searching? • Churches are not Fortune 500 businesses. They do not exist to create profit, to compete for institutional glory or to serve the interests of their shareholders. Their only reason to exist is to proclaim in word and deed the One who established them so that others may follow his example. Nothing more, nothing less. • As they always have, churches will attract loners and losers, and the selfish and narrow-minded and seek to comfort, sorrowing and forsaken. And if they're true to their purpose, they will admit their faults, offer words of forgiveness to the penitent and the spiritual seeker toward a life of meaning and hope and of service to others. Group asks man to teach I once lived less than 20 miles from the birthplace of Mormonism in upstate New York. Occasionally, I attended the Metropolitan Community Church in Rochester with a friend. Some of you may know that the congregation of a Metropolitan Community Church consists of gay men, lesbians, transsexuals, transvestites and bisexuals. My friend is a lesbian hermaphrodite. "I wasn't the only 'straight' attending, but I was the only Mormon." I was often asked to speak on Mormonism. At one meeting of the "Off Our Backs" lesbian group from Canandaigua, Palmyra, I spoke on Mormon polygamy. I spoke on Mormonism. I explained the difference between polygamy (where a man has more than one current wife) and polyandry (where a woman has more than one current husband), and the group was amazed that those types of goings-on had taken place nearby. In fairness, I explained that the Mormon Church was not the first religious group in America to practice polygamy. Nor was it the only group to practice baptism for the dead, eternal marriage and secret, Masonic-like temple ceremonies. Those things also amazed my listeners. And they were amazed quite a few Mormons too, because each of them thought Joseph Smith had received those practices by revelation from God. JOHN WALSH Burley

New evangelical seminary has an urban, international thrust

By Jodi Malander Farrell The Miami Herald MIAMI — Dr. Juan Ruiz-Unger, 45, is a pediatrician with a thriving practice in Miami. JJ Ogletree, 62, has been a shoeshine man for 35 years. David Augustin, 26, is a missionary who found God after watching a friend die in a drive-by shooting in Little Haiti. Their far-flung lives have led them to Miami International Seminary, a new evangelical school of theology that aims to use its multilingual, multicultural home as a training ground for Christian foot soldiers. Entering its second year, MINTS is riding a new wave of theological schools that are increasingly diverse and catering to second-career ministers, teachers and people pursuing other religious vocations. Movers and shakers at Old Cutler Presbyterian Church helped create the seminary after deciding there was a void here for evangelical religious training with an urban emphasis and an international mind-set. MINTS is heavy on field experience and mentoring. The seminary's "classrooms" are in churches throughout the Miami area. About half the students are Hispanic. About 55 Miami students attend MINTS. But the majority — 176 students — study in 11 Spanish-language outreach centers in places like Honduras, the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Mexico and even Cuba. MINTS bills itself as an interdenominational seminary. As an evangelical school, Jesus is central to its theology. The Bible — its stories and history — is the primary doctrinal source. Many of the seminary's founders are from the Presbyterian Church in America, a splinter group considered more conservative than the larger denomination.

Orthodox lesbians cope with religion's rejection

By Elinor J. Brecher The Miami Herald MIAMI — Orthodox Jewish lesbian. It seems as oxymoronic as "kasher pork chop." If the Orthodox strictly follow Jewish law, and Jewish law explicitly prohibits homosexuality, how can it be otherwise? Because in matters of Jewish law, there are few simple questions, even fewer simple answers. If homosexuality has been discussed at all among religious Jews, it has been behind closed doors, or lately, through the anonymous safety of the Web. Exposure usually equals rejection from an entire way of life. Now, thanks to a prizewinning documentary featuring a South Florida lesbian couple, the status of homosexuals in a community that barely acknowledges the possibility of their existence is being openly debated. That debate enters South Florida this week with several screenings of "Trembling Before G-d," which premiered at the 2001 Sundance Film Festival to great acclaim. The film, by Brooklyn, N.Y., documentary filmmaker Simcha Dubowski, examines the wrenching choices that Orthodox gays like South Florida's Malka and Leah face between sexual orientation and religious obligation, family harmony and inner peace, belonging and isolation. Raised in Brooklyn, Malka and Leah met at a high school for Orthodox girls and fell in love at a religious summer camp. Both 30, they've been together for half of their lives. In a pivotal scene shot in their North Miami Beach apartment, Leah and Malka are preparing for the Sabbath. "The fact is that Jewish law barely mentions homosexuality in general; lesbianism in particular." "The Bible presumed (lesbianism) wasn't happening," according to Rabbi Steve Greenberg of New York, the country's only "out" gay Orthodox rabbi. Where the Bible does address homosexuality is Leviticus 18:22: "Thou shalt not lie with mankind as with womankind; it is abomination." Leviticus 20:17 offers the punishment: "If a man also lie with mankind as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination; they should surely be put to death." To many Orthodox Jews, that's the beginning and the end of it. "The Torah says it's an abomination and prohibited," said Rabbi Edward Davis of Young Israel Congregation in Hollywood, Fla. "Although Torah only (refers to) the male, the Talmud (refers to) the female as well." In one passage, Samuel forbids his daughters to share a bed. In another, it's stated that women who have "rubbed together" cannot marry priests. Some argue that Leviticus leaves plenty of room for interpretation. Several of the more liberal branches of Judaism have gay friendly services or outreach missions.

She said children respond readily to massage — and it helps to turn down the lights and use an appropriate oil to reduce skin friction. Soft music is appropriate for toddlers, she said, but may be too much for the brand-new nervous system of an infant. She stressed that this routine should be adapted to the child. "Massage therapy can be a wonderful time of bonding," said Liljenquist. "Mother and child; father and child. It's a special time of closeness." Moore said she has gained from the companionship of other women and also learned more about the craft of mothering through MOPS. The group has room for more mothers, and could also use help in the childcare room, she said. Child-care volunteers are called Moppettes, and do not need special training. Older mothers whose children are grown are especially welcome.

'Intelligent design' gains attention in Ohio debate

Many science educators remain skeptical

By Richard N. Ostling
Associated Press writer

Stakes were high Monday at a meeting of an Ohio Board of Education panel. Up for discussion: whether high school biology students should be told about potential problems with Darwinism and evidence that life on Earth was planned.

About 1,500 parents, teachers and students listened to the pros and cons of a concept known as intelligent design, which says there's evidence that some form of intelligence purposely designed nature.

The board must revamp the state science curriculum by December, and some Ohioans want it to include intelligent design, or ID, alongside Darwin's theory of evolution in curriculum guidelines for statewide testing. Stephen Meyer of Seattle's Discovery Institute, the leading ID think tank, told the board that rather than making ID part of the curriculum it should merely encourage teachers to cover disagreements about Darwinism.

Whatever the board decides, the Ohio discussion has brought new attention to the fledgling ID movement. The academic faction but one that forces consider-able brainpower. Proponents say evolution is typically taught to mean life emerged on Earth spontaneously, and that only un-derected natural selection produced the varied life forms. But, they contend, the best evidence indicates that scenario is fantasti-cally unlikely.

Intelligent design arguments touch on everything from the fine-tuned structure of the universe described by modern physics to the information encoded in DNA to make their point.

The Ohio State Board of Education Standards Committee holds a panel discussion in Columbus to consider whether the concept of intelligent design should be added to the state's science curriculum.

But "intelligent design isn't science," the board was told by Lawrence Krauss, of Case Western Reserve University. Another opponent, Eugenie Scott of the National Center for Science Education, warns ID would bring religion into biology classes, even though advocates scrupulously avoid naming the intelligence they see behind the universe.

"Look, it's God, not a little green man," Scott says. "We know that."

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology Press signaled ID's growing importance in January, issuing "Intelligent Design Creationism and Its Critics." The title depicts ID as a variant of creationism, which reads Genesis literally and says the Earth was formed thousands of years ago—rather than billions—all species appeared immediately and a flood engulfed the globe.

Yet ID actually insists on none of that. And while creationists are mostly conservative Protestants, ID theorists come from a wider range of faiths and some are nonreligious.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled creationism is too biblical for public schools, and ID proponents sought to distinguish themselves from that label in a long Utah Law Journal article arguing that ID is fit for public schools.

As early as 1983, British physicist Sir Fred Hoyle wrote that a blindfolded person working the Rubik's Cube puzzle at one move per second would need 1,350 billion years to align the 54 squares. He calculated similar odds that even one protein formed on Earth through blind chance. And since that's hundreds of times the age of the planet, the odds against this happening with all the proteins in nature are "almost unimaginably vast."

ID differs not only from creationism but a third option, theistic evolution, which says God employed the Darwinian process. Michael J. Behe ("Darwin's Black Box: The Biochemical Challenge to Evolution") says that concept is "no threat to Christian beliefs" and he once agreed with it, but it isn't supported by the biological evidence.

Legend of St. Patrick includes truth, myth

By Kat Bergeron
Knight Ridder News Service

St. Patrick is the stuff of truth and myth and legend.

Anyone who knows anything about this patron saint of Ireland, who much of the world honors this Sunday, knows that he chased the snakes out of the Emerald Isle. It doesn't matter that ancient records prove Ireland had no snakes before that.

Anyone who knows anything about this fascinating fifth-century missionary knows that to teach the profound mystery of the Trinity, he reached down and plucked a three-leaved shamrock.

It doesn't matter that Patrick himself never acknowledged this intellectual feat.

Anyone who knows anything about Magonus Succatatus Patricius knows that, as a teenager, he was snatched from Roman Britain and turned into an Irish slave who escaped but returned after a dream told him the pagans wanted to be Christians. It doesn't matter that modern scholars wonder if St. Patrick is several people rolled into one.

"When you are growing up in Ireland, it is crystal clear who St. Patrick is," said the Rev. George Murphy, of the Catholic Diocese of Biloxi, Miss., and a native of Dundalk in County Louth. "When we were growing up, St. Patrick was so important to our sense of identity," said Murphy. "Who we were was very much a religious as well as a national expression."

Whatever St. Patrick may or may not be, he is Ireland's spiritual champion, both for Catholics and those who are members of the Church of Ireland.

St. Patrick's Day is a holiday for all in Ireland. For Catholics, it is a holy day of obligation, which means they must go to church that day.

About 40 million Americans claim Irish roots.

Most histories claim Patrick returned to Ireland in A.D. 432 to convert the natives.

He was British by birth, the son of a town councillor-deacon and grandson of a priest.

He had escaped his enslavement as a herder after six years and returned to his family; a changed young man who began training for the priesthood.

Schisms often center on who makes the rules

By Jeffrey Weiss
The Dallas Morning News

Inside battles are contrary to everything most religions are supposed to be about. But they happen. Members disagree and debate, even politely at first. Then the tone gets more hostile. Soon, they find themselves in an unending war—at odds with the very people with whom they worship every week.

What is the fight about? One side says it changed a line in a statement of central beliefs—but to clarify widely accepted doctrine. The other side says the change is a weapon to be used against them, one made over their heads, against their hearts and counter to the will of God.

Conservative versus moderates in today's Southern Baptist Convention? Yes. But that's also a description of the emotional battle that divided the Orthodox and Catholic churches almost a thousand years ago.

Schisms, heresies, strained relationships and lesser theological sprains and bruises are unavoidable elements of religious history. The bottom line often would be as familiar to a therapist working with a dysfunctional family as it is to a religious historian: Who gets to decide who makes the rules?

But faith puts a special edge on the argument. Whose rules are closer to Eternal Truth?

In modern Southern Baptist life, both sides summarize what is at stake in similar ways. And it's not about questions of salvation or other issues more obviously central to their theology. "It's more a disagreement about what is a Southern Baptist," said the Rev. Richard Land, president of the Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission of the conservative Southern Baptist Convention. "If we lose this distinctive of Baptists, then there will be no Baptist witness worthy of our heritage," said the Rev. Charles Wade, executive director of the moderate Baptist General Convention of Texas. For Land, the attribute that most significantly defines a Southern Baptist is a specific understanding of the Bible. For Wade, the Baptist distinctive is a measure of autonomy that is nonetheless rooted in scripture. Substitute Lutheran, Methodist, Episcopalian, Buddhist, Jewish or Muslim, and the same kinds of disagreements scatter through the history of those traditions and tangle through their current events. And not every disagreement produces two survivors. History books are filled with accounts of long-dead heresies and short-lived sects. But positions that are popular enough find a following.

Perceived snub may cause family feud

DEAR ABBY: Our son's wife married last year. There were many out-of-town relatives from the bride's family, plus a large wedding party. Once the parents and grandparents of the bride and groom were added to the list, close to 80 people attended the rehearsal dinner. We did not invite family members who didn't have a part in the ceremony, although spouses of the wedding party were included.

A few weeks before the big day, my husband's Uncle Charlie (who is close to 80), let us know he was very hurt not to be invited to the rehearsal dinner. He made it clear he expected us to make an exception for him because he and my husband have always been close. My husband explained to Charlie that if we made an exception for him, we would risk offending other relatives who were not included. He seemed to accept the decision.

It has been many months since the wedding, and it's obvious that Uncle Charlie is nursing a grudge. At family gatherings, he takes every opportunity to challenge anything my husband says to belittle him. He even collected articles on wedding etiquette, invited my husband to lunch and tried to get him to read them.

DEAR ABBY:
Abby Cadabby

If my son gets wind of this, he won't tiptoe around Uncle Charlie's feelings as his dad has always done. There will be a permanent rift in the family.

Abby, is there anything I can do or say to resolve this?

—THE PEACEMAKER

DEAR PEACEMAKER: I doubt it. It is precisely for people who feel they deserve to be the "exception" that the rules of etiquette were written in the first place. There is no way to reason with narcissistic, self-centered individuals because they must always be right.

It is not your job or your husband's to make up to Uncle Charlie for his imagined slight. He owes your husband an apology, not the other way around. But please don't hold your breath waiting for it.

DEAR ABBY: As ardent readers of your column, my wife, Pamela, and I feel we must attest to the absolute truth about the "drunken geese" story you have printed.

It is, indeed, a true story and hundreds of years old. The geese were, in fact, ducks—owned by an innkeeper in Hawkshead in the Lake District of England. The inn is still there and is named "The Drunken Duck." It's complete with a beautiful pub sign showing the ducks clothed in fitted woolen hand-knit garments. My wife and I have dined frequently in this charming pub, which, by the way, offers superb food. —BRIAN KERR, PORT CHARLOTTE, FLA.

DEAR BRIAN: Some stories take on a life of their own. Thank you for setting the record straight.

Explorers left behind that gong those Buddhists beat Nepal's Buddhists in the monastery of Thyangboche at the Shangri-La altitude of 13,000 feet sometimes in their mysterious ceremonies ring a gong. Its exotic tone lingers in the chill thin air for a long moment to charm the wonderment of strangers. In fact, that gong is an old oxygen cylinder abandoned by an Everest expedition.

No cat paws when alone.
Q. What word becomes shorter when you add two letters to it?
A. Short.

On file, too, among our Love War man's chauvinistic quotations is this by Lord Byron: "It is easier to die for a woman one loves than to live with her."
Swans fight to the death.

Rome — those cradles of civilization — had anything like a university.

In the grocery stores of France, little is wrapped that doesn't have to be wrapped to be carried. Neither paper nor plastic sacks are furnished. The shoppers bring their own net bags to tote. The great packaging industry there doesn't have much of a foothold in food.

Pisces: You'll find what you lost; rewrite and rebuild, Capricorn

IF MARCH 16TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... you are introverted and possess a strong perception. You are romantic, have been hurt but are always willing to take chance on romance. You are regarded by friends as a "fascinating character."

Pisces: Virgo natives play roles in your activities, could have these letters in names: G, P, Y.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Innovations take place at home, including design and architecture. Domestic adjustment could include change of residence, marital status.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Cycles are high; do not cycle—delay with defeat—You learn more about love relationship in order to avoid self-deception.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Wishes come true; key is to fulfill practical as well as fantasy needs. Older individual fascinates, but all is not what it appears to be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your gain added recognition; see picture in its entirety. Leave bits and pieces to others. Idealistic romance fulfills emotional needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent showmanship, publicity. You will make news and be in the news. Answer: "Yes, start your own enterprise." A "different" kind of romance is an agenda.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on where you live, marital status and search for ideal home. Someone waits something for nothing; you could be prime target. Protect valuables.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play backstage role. Time is on your side; refuse to be cajoled into such decision. Laugh at your own foibles; humor gets you in and out of tight spots.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow; attend to details. Repair work required in connection with roofing, plumbing. Wear clothes, hair in different styles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be ready for change of scene, variety of "sensations." Teach and learn, get thoughts on paper. Romantic involvement lends spice, but it could be expensive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Attention revolves around home, desire for "comfortable living." You will be protected by family members. Rewrite and rebuild.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Forces tend to be scattered, do not attempt to be everywhere at once. Define terms, avoid self-deception. Spiritual values surface.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Step out of character! Be forceful, direct and "mean business." Money comes from unusual source. Lost article will be located.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE
Bobby Wolff

"When tremendous dangers are involved, no one can be blamed for looking to his own interest."
—Thucydides

Examine today's North-South hands closely. Given the porous trump suit and the finessing opportunities in two suits, the danger of taking a spade or diamond finesse, you must develop your plan and then compare it with the actual play of Charles Weed of Shreveport, La.

Dummy's club ace won, and Weed recognized the dangers of playing trumps immediately. Better to delay playing trumps in favor of taking a spade-or-diamond finesse. Why? If the spade finesse is lost, he might not need the diamond finesse. If he took the diamond finesse first, whether it won or lost, he would still need the spade finesse.

After West won his spade king, he led another club, a dummy's king, and it was time for declarer to lead trumps. Cashing the ace and leading another trump would allow East to draw an extra round of trumps, so Weed merely covered East's five, allowing West to win his nine. West led another club, forcing West to ruff, but West could not cash his trump ace. Leaving the high trump at large, Weed cashed his high spades, discarding two diamonds from dummy. After cashing his diamond ace and ruffing a diamond, Weed had won nine tricks and had a trump left in each hand. This guaranteed one more winner, and Weed could claim his touch-and-go game.

The more sensitive the layout, the more careful the plan.
