Bush builds support

President Bush waves to well-wishers as he leaves El Paso International Airport Thursday in El Paso, Texas. Bush spoke to a crowd at the NASA hangar about modernizing border security and fighting terrorism.

Undaunted by bombing, President heads to Latin America

The Associated Press

MONTERREY, Mexico — A day after a deadly car bombing, President Bush said Thursday that "two-bit terrorists" would not stop him from visiting Peru or thwart his goal of building better ties throughout Latin America. "Sometimes it seems like the terror threat might be going away, but all you got to do is look on your TV today and be reminded about how evil these murderers are," Bush said. The president got a sendoff for a four-day trip to Mexico, Peru and El Salvador with a raucous airport rally in the Texas border town of El Paso. "We cannot let the terrorists take over freedom-loving societies and we will not," Bush said, decrying a suicide bombing in the Middle East, a grenade attack on a church service in Pakistan and a car bombing near the U.S. Embassy in Lima, Peru. Bush's first stop was in Monterrey for a U.N. summit on global poverty. The president met privately Thursday evening with Mexican President Vicente Fox and Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien. The three leaders, laughing, shared a three-way handshake before sitting down to business. The subject of terrorism loomed large over Bush's day. Before boarding Air Force One for El Paso, Bush met with Milton Green, whose wife and stepdaughter were killed in the Pakistan attack. And while en route he called Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi to discuss an attack by an offshoot of the Red Brigades terror group, in which an Italian economist was killed. The president told reporters in Washington that Wednesday's attack in Lima, which killed nine people, would not make him change his travel plans. He is to visit Peru on Saturday, the first U.S. president to do so. He said he trusts that President Alejandro Toledo will make his country safe for his American visitor. "Two-bit terrorists aren't going to prevent me from doing what we need to do, and this to promote our friendship in the hemisphere," Bush said. "Our neighborhood is important to us, Peru is an important country. President Toledo has been a reformist, obviously worked within the democratic system. And you bet I'm going." Bush said "we might have an idea" who set

Pope says errant priests bring 'grave scandal'

Los Angeles Times

Pope John Paul II, stung by the escalating sexual abuse crisis rocking the Roman Catholic Church, declared Thursday that guilty priests had succumbed to "the most grievous forms" of evil and brought "grave scandal" to the faith. The pope's remarks marked the first time he has spoken publicly on the issue since the furor erupted anew this year in the United States. Catholics, including bishops, had urged the pope to speak out.

But his fiercely righteous words, while welcomed, did not break any new ground and were unlikely to satisfy demands for new safeguards to protect minors. The pope confined his remarks on abuse to a single paragraph in a 22-page annual pre-Easter letter to clergy. He refrained from using the phrase "sexual abuse."

John Paul's remarks underscored the philosophical linchpin long proclaimed in Catholic theology: the power of evil. The errant priests, he wrote, had succumbed "to the most grievous forms of the mysterium iniquitatis (mystery of evil) at work in the world."

Pope John Paul II gestures during a ceremony for World Youth Day at the Vatican Thursday, Easter. The pontiff denounced "the grave scandal" of priests implicated in sex-abuse cases.

many going back decades." A spokesman for the archdiocese said Thursday he could not be more specific. "One of the nation's leading Catholic magazines said the church hierarchy was incapable of investigating itself and said bishops had lost credibility. "No professional group — lawyers, police, accountants, doctors — is good at policing itself," the editorial in the Jesuit magazine "America" said.

Boise bishop: Idaho priests haven't been involved in sex abuse

By Denise Turner Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amid the pedophilia-in-the-priesthood scandal rocking the Roman Catholic Church, the bishop overseeing area churches characterizes Idaho as a model of stability. "I've only been here three years, but I don't know of anything in the last 15 years," Bishop Michael P. Driscoll, of the church's Boise-Diocese, said when asked about sex-abuse allegations involving Idaho priests. He also checked with others in his office, who recalled a sex-abuse case involving a priest in Boise that was in the news in the mid-1980s, but no cases or accusations of sexual misconduct in southern Idaho. Earlier this month, The Associated Press reported that

White House proposal would change medical privacy rules

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration Thursday proposed changing some of the federal rules designed to protect the confidentiality of Americans' medical records, including the ability of patients to decide in advance who should be able to use their personal health information.

The proposal would alter a federal safeguard, adopted by the Clinton administration, that compels patients to give written permission before their records may be disclosed to doctors, hospitals, pharmacies and insurance companies. The new version would ease that requirement and, instead, say that patients must at some point be notified of their privacy rights by those who use their records. In other changes that would loosen privacy rules, the administration wants to enable more parents to find out what medical services their teen-age children seek and make it easier for researchers to gain access to patients' records. In addition, business associates of various health care providers would be given more time before they have to follow the confidentiality rules. But in at least one respect, the administration is suggesting a significant strengthening of privacy rights by allowing patients to decide up front whether to allow their records to be used for marketing purposes. The proposal, issued Thursday by U.S. health officials, represents President Bush's effort to tailor a policy that has daunted presidents and lawmakers for years: how much control to give consumers over the proliferating access to medical records in an electronic age.

Last April, Bush announced that he would move ahead with the medical confidentiality regulation adopted by President Clinton — but indicated he would modify portions of it to make them simpler and less onerous on health care companies and practitioners. Thursday, in disclosing what form those modifications will take, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said, "the changes we are proposing, today will allow us to deliver strong protections for personal medical information while improving access to care." The new version was largely criticized by privacy advocates, physicians, and Democratic lead-

Ethanol plant could aid economy

Needs of dairymen could be a setback

By Sandy Miller Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the Magic Valley gets an ethanol manufacturing plant, dairy and cattlemen would be able to buy cattle feed produced in their own back yard. Ethanol, an alcohol-based alternative fuel, is produced by fermenting and distilling starch crops that have been converted into simple sugars. The byproducts of ethanol are carbon dioxide, which could be sold to a carbon dioxide processing company, and distillers grain, which is used as feed for cattle.

So Idaho — the second-largest dairy state — is the perfect place for an ethanol plant, said Winston Inouye, chairman of the Magic Valley Energy Coalition, a group that has been studying the benefits of a plant for the last year. "It's a perfect fit for Idaho, where distillers grain is used already," Inouye said. Inouye and other members of the coalition met Thursday with county commissioners, growers, business people and economic developers to tout the benefits of an ethanol manufacturing plant.

The coalition has released the results of a feasibility study conducted by BBI International to determine the costs and benefits of a plant in the Magic Valley. The study also brought to light setbacks developers could face. Corn is considered to be the crop of choice as it's cheaper than wheat, potatoes or sugar beets. However, the study concluded there is not enough locally grown corn to support an ethanol plant so it would have to be shipped in from the Midwest. And that would leave local farmers out of the loop.

Since one-third of a dry mill ethanol plant's energy use goes to drying distillers grain, the plant could save on energy costs if dairy and cattlemen are willing to buy the grain wet. But the shelf life of wet grain is less than 10 days, so they would have to make a commitment to buy it wet.

Lewis Eilers, secure director of the Idaho Dairyman's Association, said it would have to have some economic benefit for dairymen. He said dairymen probably won't buy wet distillers grain from a local plant if they can get dry distillers grain out of state for the same price.

Still, Eilers said he'd take the plan to members of the Idaho Dairyman's Association. "If they can make it convenient at a price they can afford, maybe they'll buy it," Eilers said. The study determined that the best site for a plant would be south of Burley because of its excellent rail and road access. The total cost for a dry mill ethanol plant producing 30 million gallons of ethanol a year is $44 million and would have a 16 percent annual return on investment.

The next step for the coalition is to put together a financial plan and find some investors. The demand for ethanol is growing rapidly. The Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 mandated the sale of oxygenated fuels in areas with unhealthy levels of carbon monoxide. Since that time, there has been strong demand for ethanol as an oxygenate blended with gasoline. In the United States each year, more than 1.5 billion gallons are added to gasoline. The ethanol is produced and improves the emissions quality of gasoline, according to the Alternative Fuels Data Center.

The BBI study concluded that a Magic Valley plant could sell 10 to 20 percent of its ethanol locally and the remainder to other western states. Minnesota is one of the leaders in ethanol production. Its 14 ethanol plants can produce 300 million gallons of ethanol a year, and its industry contributes more than $350 million to the state each year, according to the Minnesota Department of Agriculture.

Pope

Continued from A1. A new poll said 75 percent of American Catholics believe that U.S. bishops are doing a "poor" to "fair" job in addressing the crisis. While the pope said that the church "shows her concern for the victims and strives to respond in truth and justice to each of these painful situations," the focus of his concern was the scandal's impact on the priesthood. "Grave scandal is caused, with the result that a dark shadow of suspicion is cast over all the other priests who perform their ministry with honesty and integrity and often with heroic self-sacrifice," the pope wrote.

The pope used virtually the same words in 1993 while in Denver for World Youth Day, declaring that the sexual abuse of minors had caused "suffering and scandal." Several experts regarded the statement as evidence that the Vatican has failed to recognize the incendiary nature of a financial and moral crisis confronting the church. But one prominent American Catholic praised the pope for a "historic" reform message. Disclosures of sex crimes by priests have rippled across the country, with the most prominent in Boston early this year that a priest who molested more than 130 boys had been transferred by superiors from parish to parish. New reports followed in Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, and Bridgeport, Conn. A Florida bishop resigned after admitting that he had sexually abused a teenager at a seminary more than 20 years ago. There were calls for the resignation of two of America's leading prelates, Cardinals Bernard Law of Boston and John Egan of New York. "There have been other resignations and scandals in Europe. In Ireland the church recently agreed to a record $110 million payment to children abused by clergy over decades. Sexual abuse cases involving cover-ups also have been reported in England, France and Australia, among other countries. Other accusations have been lodged against a Polish archbishop. While sexual abuse settlements have cost the church hundreds of millions of dollars in the United States, critics have warned that the church's moral currency is also being debased. The Rev. Richard P. McBrien, professor of theology at the University of Notre Dame, said Thursday that the pope's remarks were "a totally inadequate response. It's some acknowledgment of the crisis. At least it's a fresh start. But if it were to be the only step it would be totally inadequate. This crisis is far more serious than the pope's advisers in the Vatican think."

Priests

Continued from A1. The growing scandal began in the Archdiocese of Boston, where Cardinal Bernard Law "admitted he had evidence that former priest John Geophan molested children for years but allowed him to serve anyway." Since January, when the Boston case gained national attention, bishops have suspended or forced the resignation of at least 25 priests among the more than 47,000 nationwide. According to the March 4 issue of Editor and Publisher, Catholic spokespeople are becoming more open to releasing related information to the media. "Many editors credit the Boston case with pressuring other Catholic dioceses into providing information to avoid the coverage accusations that have plagued the church in Boston," the magazine reported. Since January, said a Los Angeles Times wire story, the Boston Archdiocese has given prosecutors the names of close to 90 priests suspected of child abuse over 40 years. At least 84 other priests in 11 states also have been accused this year of sexual misconduct with children. In early March, the Rev. Anthony J. O'Connell, bishop of the Diocese of Palm Beach, became the highest-ranking clergyman brought down in the scandal. O'Connell admitted to sexual allegations made by a 19-year-old student at a Missouri seminary more than 25 years ago and resigned March 1, The Associated Press reported. The Times story about sexual improprieties noted that the potential damage to the church "is enormous, from loss of faith to vast financial settlements." In 20 years, the church has paid out an estimated $600 million to $1.3 billion to sexual abuse victims. Ministering to his Idaho flocks, Driscoll wrote a letter which was published March 15 in the Idaho Catholic Register. Parish priests also have been reported in England at various Masses, including those in Twin Falls. "To anyone in Idaho who may have been sexually abused as a child by a minister of the Church, I am sorry and ask your forgiveness," he wrote. "I want to help you restore your right relationship with the Church, if you so choose. Please contact me if you need support to pursue the healing of wounds inflicted by any representative of the Diocese of Boise." He also wrote to the "Catechumens and Candidates preparing to enter the Church at Easter Vigil, whom I have met during the Rites of Election." To these people, he said, "Please do not judge the entire Church by the sins of a few." And to his priests: "These are very difficult times for us. We love our people. We love our children. We smile when a little one says, 'Hi God!' We know in our hearts why we wanted to be priests. We feel anger toward our brothers who have brought shame on themselves and on us, on the entire Catholic community." He continued, by assuring the priests that their presence in the greater community is a sign of God's love, and that their people need them. This month, the Vatican issued new guidelines for handling pedophilia cases.

Privacy

Continued from A1. ers on health care. But it was fueled by the insurance industry. "It's a major step toward creating a workable rule," said Karen Ignagni, president of the American Association of Health Plans. She and other insurance representatives, however, contended that the administration should go further to ease regulatory costs and give the industry adequate time to adapt to the rules. Administration officials said they will allow a relatively quick, one-month period for outside comment on its proposal, before HHS administrators begin to refine it and issue a final version. It does not require congressional approval. In the meantime, the parts of the Clinton-era rules with which Bush agrees have taken effect, although health care providers will not be required to comply with them until next year. The basic aspects that remain intact to guarantee Americans the right to inspect their own medical records that are kept in electronic form, determine who else has seen them, and complain when they are used without permission. The proposed changes are the latest phase in a controversy that has shuttled up and down Pennsylvania Avenue for years. In 1996, as part of a broader health care law, Congress set itself a deadline for adopting patient privacy protections, saying it must do so within three years - or cede that authority to HHS. When lawmakers missed that deadline, Clinton's aides began writing the rules, which they finished shortly before he left office. Once Bush took over, opponents lobbied, trying to capitalize on what they sensed was a more lenient attitude in the new administration. Thursday's proposals provide the first insight into how far Bush wants to go to address their complaints. HHS civil rights officials, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity, said that what they called "very targeted changes" were intended to protect patients' privacy while simultaneously eliminating facets of the original rules that they said would interfere with patients' access to care and weaken its quality. That reasoning essentially embraces the arguments the insurance industry has raised. Specifically, the new version strikes a different balance in patients' control over access to their records. While eliminating the requirement that consumers be able to give written consent, HHS officials said, the proposal would strengthen the requirements for health care providers to make sure patients are aware of their privacy rights. Doctors, pharmacies and other who use records would have to make a "good faith effort" to obtain written acknowledgment, although not necessarily ahead of time, that they had been told about privacy practices.

Bush

Continued from A1. ed the bomb. "They've been around here," he said. While Bush did not identify the suspect group, he nodded when a reporter asked whether the terrorist group Shining Path was making a resurgence. Other U.S. officials said Shining Path was suspected. Bush told the El Paso crowd that the recent attacks underscore a need for greater security within the United States. He said he was asking Congress for an extra $5 billion for bolstering security at U.S. airports and borders. The funds were part of his request for $27 billion in emergency spending submitted Thursday. "This is a dangerous world," Bush said. "Too many people are losing their lives to murderers." Bush visited a border crossing point at Cordova Bridge to see U.S. inspection operations along the 4,551-mile border. Wearing a U.S. Customs cap, he poked around a cargo truck and examined a motorcycle recently seized by agents after high-tech density meters and X-ray detected secret compartments containing drugs. The bus, seized two weeks ago,

Jury convicts couple in fatal dog attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman whose two huge dogs mauled a neighbor to death in a San Francisco apartment building was convicted of murder and manslaughter Thursday. Her husband was found guilty of manslaughter.

Marjorie Knoller, 46, could get 15 years to life in prison for the second-degree murder conviction in last year's death of 33-year-old Diane Whipple. She looked stricken upon hearing the verdict, taking several deep breaths and appearing to fight back tears.

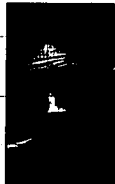

Her 60-year-old husband, Robert Noel, showed no reaction. In addition to involuntary manslaughter, both were also convicted of having a mischievous dog that killed someone.

A large group of Whipple's friends and her domestic partner, Sharon Smith, burst into tears in the courtroom.

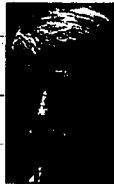

In all, the jury deliberated for about 11.5 hours over three days. Sentencing was set for May 10.

Murder charges are rare in dog mauling cases, but prosecutors said the husband-and-wife lawyers knew their two powerful Presa Canarios were "time bombs." The prosecution brought in more than 30 witnesses who said they had been terrorized by the dogs, Bane and Hera.

The defense contended that Knoller and Noel could not have known their animals would kill, and that Knoller tried to save Whipple by throwing herself between her neighbor and the enraged Bane. They also disputed the witnesses' accounts of being menaced by the dogs.

Marjorie Knoller

The gruesome case was a sensation in San Francisco: Whipple, a successful member of the city's gay community, was savagely killed outside her door in exclusive Pacific Heights, her throat ripped open by an exotic breed of dogs known for its ferocity.

Soon word spread that the owners were lawyers who specialized in lawsuits on behalf of inmates. They were also in the process of adopting an inmate, white-supremacist gang member Paul Schneider, who officials said was trying to run a business raising Presa Canarios for use as guard dogs.

The couple acquired the dogs from a farm in 2000 after Schneider complained the animals were being turned into "wusses" there. The dogs' former caretaker later testified she had warned Knoller that Hera was so dangerous it "should have been shot."

After the attack on Jan. 26, 2001, Knoller and Noel defiantly blamed the victim, Noel, who wasn't present during the attack, suggested Whipple may have attracted the dogs' attention with her perfume or even steroids.

"It's not my fault," Knoller said in a TV interview that was played for the jury. "Ms. Whipple had ample opportunity to move into her apartment. She could have just slammed the door shut. I would have."

In closing arguments, the prosecutor called her tone "cold as ice."

The trial was moved to Los Angeles because of concern that overwhelming publicity would prevent a fair trial in San Francisco.

The case made legal history even before the trial began when Whipple's partner claimed the same right as a spouse to sue for damages. The Legislature enacted a law to allow such lawsuits by gay partners.

Pretrial hearings were explosive, with the prosecutor alleging at one point that Knoller and Noel practiced bestiality with their dogs. Evidence relating to that claim was barred from the trial by the judge along with most evidence about the Aryan Brotherhood.

Bush moves ahead with marriage proposals

WASHINGTON — As Congress debates government's role in promoting marriage, the Bush administration is considering creating community-wide programs to teach teens the benefits of marriage, offer counseling to couples and inject pro-marriage messages into the culture.

The program, still being drafted, would channel money for the program through the child support collection program, a tactic that critics say may be illegal.

The plan would not need approval from Congress, which is considering President Bush's request to devote hundreds of millions of dollars for promoting marriage through welfare.

The proposed child support program would involve a maximum of about $22 million in federal and state money for about 15 counties, according to two draft documents that describe the plan.

Terrorism tribunals would look like courts-martial

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Thursday that the Pentagon's new rules for military tribunals were designed to protect the rights of accused terrorists while also protecting the security of Americans.

Outlining the new rules, Rumsfeld noted that any defendants brought before the military tribunals will enjoy the presumption of innocence, be provided attorneys and not be required to testify or implicate themselves.

Nation in brief

But the rules were also designed to respond to what Rumsfeld called "unique circumstances," allowing the presiding officer, for example, to close the proceedings if evidence was classified or sensitive. The presiding officer also could close the proceedings to guarantee the safety of the trial participants, Rumsfeld said, noting that some past judges handling terrorist trials have faced threats.

Rescuers find remains of as many as 10 firefighters

NEW YORK — Recovery workers have retrieved the remains of as many as 10 more firefighters, including one of the fire department's highest-ranking victims of the World Trade Center attack, officials said Thursday.

Assistant Chief Donald Burns, 61, was among seven firefighters found late Wednesday or early Thursday, said firefighter Mike Prendergast, a department spokesman. The remains of what appeared to be another three firefighters were discovered Thursday evening, he said.

Two civilians also were found, Prendergast said.

Burns was setting up a command post when the trade center's south tower collapsed. He had been cited for valor five times during his 30-year career.

The fire department lost 343 members in the Sept. 11 terrorist attack. The remains of about 160 have been recovered and identified.

Whitewater prosecutor will lead finance bill challenge

WASHINGTON — Kenneth Starr, the former Whitewater independent counsel, will lead the court challenge seeking to overturn large parts of the campaign finance bill passed by Congress.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, expected to be the lead plaintiff in the case, said Thursday that his legal team would be led by Starr, who gained national prominence in his pursuit of former President Clinton over the Whitewater land deal and the Monica Lewinsky case, and by First Amendment lawyer Floyd Abrams.

The Senate on Wednesday passed and sent to President Bush the most far-reaching campaign finance legislation in the past quarter-century. It bans the hundreds of millions of dollars in unregulated "soft money" that corporations, unions and individuals give the national political parties and restricts in the final days before an election the use of soft money for "issue ads" that name a candidate, often with the purpose of attacking him.

U.N. leaders call on nations of world to fight poverty, terrorism

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Speaking to presidents and prime ministers from six continents, world leaders called on rich nations Thursday to increase aid to the world's poorest, saying the developing world would become a breeding ground for terrorism without more help. "To speak of development is to speak also of a strong and determined fight against terrorism," said Peruvian President Alejandro Toledo, who excused himself from the U.N. summit on poverty to return to Lima after a car bomb in front of the U.S. Embassy killed at least nine people. One after another, international leaders appealed for more development aid to prevent terrorism from expanding around the globe.

Israel calls off talks after suicide bomber kills two, injures 60

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian suicide bomber blew himself up in a main downtown Jerusalem shopping area Thursday in an anti-Israeli attack that killed two bystanders. At least 60 were wounded, police said.

In response to the blast, Israel canceled a round of U.S.-brokered cease-fire talks with the Palestinians planned for later Thursday. The Al Aqsa Brigades, a militia linked to Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction, claimed responsibility.

The Bush administration said later Thursday it is taking steps to designate the militia as a foreign terrorist organization. The attacker, Mohammed Hashaika, had been jailed for attempting to carry out an earlier attack.

Federal court lets Vegas casino serve legal documents via email

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Lawyers can serve legal documents via e-mail, a federal appeals court decided in a groundbreaking ruling. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that a Las Vegas hotel-casino could e-mail legal documents to an offshore company with no physical address. "When faced with an international e-business scofflaw playing hide-and-seek with the federal court, e-mail may be the only means of effecting service of process," the court said. "We acknowledge that we tread upon untrodden ground." The ruling was a victory for the Rio hotel-casino in Las Vegas, which claimed a Costa Rican online sports book infringed on the hotel's trademark by operating gambling Web sites.

Families call for investigation of EgyptAir Flight 990 crash

WASHINGTON (AP) - American relatives of the victims of EgyptAir Flight 990 are urging further inquiry into the crash, which government safety investigators blamed Thursday on the plane's co-pilot. In its final report on the October 1999 crash, the National Transportation Safety Board said co-pilot Gamedel El-Batouty cut power to the engines, sent the Boeing 767 downward, and repeated the phrase, "I rely on God," for almost a minute and a half in a calm manner. This, the report said, "is not consistent with the reaction that would be expected from a pilot who is encountering an unexpected or uncommanded flight condition." The safety board did not offer any reasons for the copilot's action, though there has been speculation he committed suicide.

Demand for Boise flights isn't growing in M.V.

Increased service at the Twin Falls airport would be a welcome idea for local travelers who want a quick hop to Boise for a connecting flight. But airport and community leaders should think hard about asking local businesses to chip in resources to help recruit a carrier.

An air service subsidy probably wouldn't help Twin Falls to Boise service in place, especially when many local travelers would rather hit the highway.

Recent studies by the airport and an Oregon consultant were presented to local business groups this week. They showed that Twin Falls' air service is cruising well in some areas and losing altitude in others.

Josiah Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport has the smallest share (1.7 percent) of arrivals and departures of any Idaho airport. The airport has nonstop air service to only one destination, Salt Lake City. Passengers who drive to Salt Lake or Boise translate into an estimated $14 million loss of potential revenue.

While it may appear that Twin Falls has enough air passengers to attract more service, both history and current trends prove otherwise. When Horizon Air dropped its three daily flights to Boise back in 1997, the company said it was because the flights were unprofitable. The company said travelers preferred to drive to Boise for the lower fares on flights originating there.

The trend hasn't really changed in five years. Many Twin Falls fliers don't mind making the trip to Boise. With the 75 mph speed limit in place, driving from the Perrine Bridge to the Boise terminal takes only two hours. The Twin Falls airport is even less attractive to passengers who live north of the Snake River.

Our view: The continued trend of air passengers driving to Boise curbs the demand for more air service.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

That's why the idea of asking local businesses to prop up air service to Boise falls short. Why subsidize something that consumers don't especially want?

Twin Falls air passengers have enjoyed air service to Salt Lake City, with five flights to and from Salt Lake City International Airport daily, for years now.

The area should concentrate on keeping those flights intact, rather than pushing for another route — especially at a time when the airline industry is struggling.

If Twin Falls continues to grow, the demand for Boise flights may change. Growing demand someday may attract additional carriers to Twin Falls — without subsidies. Until then, many Magic Valley passengers will be content making the drive to Boise.

Find bin Laden before attacking Iraq

On Sept. 11, more than 3,000 people, including two close friends of mine, were killed in the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Nearly six months later, Osama bin Laden and the rest of al-Qaida's core leaders, who planned their deaths, remain on the loose.

Holdout bands of terrorists are not only battling U.S. troops in Afghanistan, but are also spread out in cells around the world, certainly conspiring to carry out new attacks.

One would think that these challenges would be enough to keep both policymakers and pundits busy. Yet somehow the debate in Washington has shifted. All the talk, and apparently much of the behind-the-scenes planning, now revolves around how finally to get rid of Saddam Hussein. Fair betting odds are that an invasion of Iraq will happen before the year is over.

It is generally agreed that an effective military campaign against Iraq would require the deployment of about 200,000 American soldiers to the Persian Gulf region. A postwar stabilization force would need at least 100,000 troops. National Guard and reserve forces would certainly be called up.

Not one of these soldiers, or the entire U.S. military apparatus needed to support them, would be used to seek out and kill the men who killed 3,000 Americans.

An effective military campaign would require about four to six months of preparation in order to move forces into place, build up supplies and ramp up production of needed precision guided weapons. Experts guess that the fighting would run up to two months. The postwar stabilization force would certainly stay in Iraq for years, maybe even decades, if the reordering of postwar Germany and Japan or the present operations in the Balkans are any parallels.

All of this valuable time and energy would be directed at one of the few places in the world where we know the men who killed 3,000 Americans were not based in the past, nor are now hiding.

The U.S. military could defeat Iraq is not doubted by anyone. However, while Mr. Hussein's army is certainly no juggernaut, it is also not the fractured, dysfunctional forces of the Taliban.

Depending on the scenario, experts predict that an invasion of Iraq would result in significant casualties among American soldiers. Likely in the range of hundreds of lives lost. If we had to fight our way through the streets of Baghdad, or if Mr. Hussein, with his own death looming, decided to use his chemical or biological weapons, the figure could rise to the thousands.

Not one of these soldiers' lives would be given in the cause of avenging their 3,000 fellow Americans killed on Sept. 11. An invasion of Iraq would certainly be unpopular in the Islamic world. Neither our regional allies, nor our European allies, nor the other members of the U.N. Security Council want to support us. In all likelihood, a wide range of political and economic deals would have to be struck on the side just to get the political cover and military basing access necessary to carry out the operation.

All of these bargaining chips would not be spent on gaining the intelligence, legal, political and economic cooperation needed to bring down the terrorist network that killed 3,000 Americans.

Until we finish the job given to us by Sept. 11, any talk of taking on Iraq is premature. Such discussion also misses the reason the Bush administration and the U.S. military enjoys such overwhelming support for the ongoing operations in Afghanistan. The American public is unified in its desire that the war on terrorism be won.

A demand that we also busy ourselves with relieving the Gulf war is not so apparent, certainly not when the killers of 3,000 Americans are on the loose and U.S. soldiers are fighting and dying to punish them.

Wrong place for tourism

The last time I saw the Twin Towers was Aug. 13, 2001. From the stern of the Staten Island ferry, I pointed out for my Massachusetts companions key buildings in my hometown's famous skyline, saving the dramatic Twin Towers for last.

"I've never been there," remarked one of my companions. Nor had the other.

Neither woman will have that opportunity now, although Ground Zero has become, to my astonishment, a tourist attraction.

In its three-night New York vacation package, one Pennsylvania travel company includes, free of charge, a walking tour of historic Lower Manhattan with an emphasis on Ground Zero. Customers who stay fewer than three nights have to pay $15 for the tour.

GINA GREENLEE

A Baltimore company launched its "Patriot Tour" in February. For $50, customers receive round-trip bus transportation, lunch in Chinatown, access to the Ground Zero viewing platform the city erected in December, a walking tour around Wall Street and Battery Park, and dinner at Grand Central Terminal.

These companies have responded to what New York City tourism officials say is the overwhelming demand to see the site. When it became clear by January that the viewing platform tour of the Ground Zero date the increasing numbers, the city started doling out timed tickets and since then has handed out more than 200,000.

I don't get it. Unless one is a journalist or a person with family or friends missing at Ground Zero, I do not understand the appeal of such a visit. Neither did I get it in 1974, when I stood inside the former concentration camp at Dachau. My first time overseas, I was spending the summer in Germany with friends of my family. Still a minor, I had little input into the summer's activities. Day trips to the Black Forest and castle-gawking along the Rhine River were my idea of a vacation. An extended tour of the horrors of World War II did not.

By the summer of my 14th year, I was in Dachau, I know of the ovens at Dachau. I know of the crematoria. The legacy of hatred had emblazoned images in my memory from schoolbooks, film footage and neighbors — grandmothers and grandfathers — in their predominantly Jewish Lower East Side neighborhood, rolling up their sleeves to reveal to me their ink-stained forearms.

The adults who took me to Dachau did so without consulting my parents or me beforehand. Given the choice, I would have declined.

One week ago, the remains of at least 11 firefighters and a number of civilians were uncovered at the World Trade Center site in what was the biggest find of victims in weeks. That search was not random. The discoveries came as crews dug into the former lobby of the south tower, one of the few sections at the site yet to be fully cleared. Work crews, with the assistance of a single grapple — heavy chandlery equipment — carefully dug a trench. The grapple picked up one small load at a time in spots where the recovery crews were searching. At times, as many as 40 firefighters and other rescue workers climbed onto the debris, looking for even a hint of human remains.

Upon discovery of a body, workers would approach with red bags, place the remains inside, transfer them to a waiting stretcher and then cover it, from one end to the other with an American flag.

It's been nearly three decades since my trip to Germany. Today more recent legacy of hatred has etched itself onto my spirit. But as an adult, I now have choices; and choose not to tour Ground Zero.

Take a stand against group

Magic Valley citizens, did you know that Planned Parenthood is coming to Twin Falls? Did you also know that Planned Parenthood makes millions of dollars a year from performing abortions on our daughters, friends, wives and mothers. These women, more than likely, will suffer from one or more of the following consequences: the rights of our committing suicide, extreme guilt, addiction to drugs and/or alcohol, sterility, death or maiming from the abortion, family and/or marriage problems.

These are just a few consequences, do we really want this type of business coming to our community? Many good people showed up for a prayer rally in Twin Falls on Saturday, March 16. I am ashamed to say that even many God-fearing people did not show up — you know who you are — and the blood from the thousands of little children may be on your hands for not taking a stand against this brutal business. ANGE PULLIN Hansen

Monroe serves community

The letter to the editor of March 10 reminding Magic Valley residents to "shop locally" brought up some interesting thoughts. The days are over when Idaho or any other state can isolate themselves from the commerce of another state or country.

From his letter, I can assume that Mr. Pebley rides his Idaho-bred horse to town. He wears socks darned by his loving wife, made with the wool she spins herself from the sheep he keeps in his back yard. He eats only meat that he grows himself or fills his freezer with the product of his hunting and fishing trips. His horse pulls the plow so he can grow his own vegetables. He keeps the orange tree heated so he can squeeze his own juice. His home is lit by candles instead of light bulbs. His wooden floors are bare of carpets or rugs. His windows are painted over. Sound ridiculous? Right. If the writer of the letter drives a gas- or diesel-driven vehicle, has carpets on the floor and curtains on the windows and uses electricity to light his home, he has to use products from out of state. If he wears socks and shoes purchased from a local store or eats anything out of a box, then that gentleman is supporting out-of-state, out-of-country business.

Monroe has gone through many changes through the years. Some of the Magic Valley employees were there when it was Summer Sand and Gravel. Others came on board when it was Ready to Pour. Three people on staff in the Twin Falls office have given almost 100 combined years of service to Magic Valley.

The employees live in Magic Valley, pay taxes in Magic Valley and generally circulate their wages through the area. Monroe has a motto of building a better tomorrow. Local employees serve the community with pride and integrity. Yes, I will disclose who I am. My husband has worked with Monroe since the Summer Sand and Gravel days. What is Mr. P's connection to the industry?

Let your tomorrows be a Monroe tomorrow, on a foundation that will last through the years.

Wolves are a part of nature

Regarding Don Jesser's letter in the March 15 paper — "Hunters subsidize wolves":

In his letter, he states the wolf only kills for the sport of it, and that the wolf kills not for the need but for the fun of it, and that the wolf only uses 20 percent of the animals it kills. The rest is left for the flies and bugs. Seems to me the wolf has been taking lessons from the new "unfazed" big game hunters we have these days. But at least the wolf is killing by its natural instinct and is not killing our big game animals out of a 4-by-4 pickup, all-terrain vehicle or snowmobile.

And as for the ranching business, if we're lucky, we make 40 to 50 cents a pound clear for a 5-weight steer. The restaurants will get you a steak for $10 to $20 a pound and the grocery store will sell you a steak for $8 to $15.

You can't blame this on a wolf (or the lions, tigers and bears), oh no! But you can blame it on the politicians and the rich thieves that are running this country and yourselves for voting the same politicians in for life.

I'm glad you got to see two wolves kill an elk; feel fortunate you got to see nature as it should be. All I see are a gang of hunters racing up the hill to see who can bag the biggest elk to brag about back at camp. For those of us who are "real" hunters, I would rather in the chance to see the wolf in nature than a gang of so-called "sport hunters" in nature.

Which do you think belongs there?

OPINION

Business climate isn't good

I read with great interest the other day about how grand the valley's business life is becoming. How we are inviting new industries and concerns here.

However, as a returning native son to the valley, I see that not a bunch of anything has changed nor really improved in Twin Falls or the area since I left back in 1983 shortly after my mother passed away.

As both a vehicle-recovery technician (tow truck owner-driver) as well as a media professional, I see areas that could be improved but so undone simply because there is no need to. Granted there are, what, four or five so-called television stations here but only really still one that has a full-time in-area staff; the others are just branches of out-of-town problem I ran into just trying to get a cheap but effective TV spot produced to advertise my towing service.

Know what? Still is not done. What is it, women scared to pose with a tow truck for a TV commercial, yet they dance darn naked at a bar? My, what a long tail cat we have. Try to get word in the local paper about a country-style hot rod club and TV show fan club rolled into one. Still have not seen that notice, but I know this. There is interest on all three levels of the media looking at Twin Falls; one is a new local daily newspaper, one is an independent television station with local newscasts, etc., and three of which I'm personally involved in the creation of a rather radical radio station and FM satellite radio station, that will run such shows as Howard Stern, that will be set up near Jerome.

I just hope now that these firms including mine can find an open-minded community that will accept them as well as eager employees.

U.S. loses its sovereignty

Did you know that more than 1 million people immigrate to America every year and most never become citizens? Their loyalty is not to our country. No one can be in two places once. And no one can be 100 percent loyal to two countries at the same time.

The largest immigrant-sending nation is Mexico, and because most of them refuse to integrate into our culture, they expect us to learn their language rather than learn ours. I am not prejudiced—I have friends that are Mexican people. But most immigrants lack the lifelong commitment to America that loyal Americans are raised with from childhood.

However, if that doesn't bother you much, maybe this will: The flag of Red China flies next to the U.S. flag near the Capitol of South Carolina over the Costco store in Camden. That's the same Capitol that burns the Confederate flag from being raised. Yet the communist flag that represents slave labor 8-year-old children in factories and the murder of its own people flies unmolested.

The problem is that we traded the God of Abraham for the god of sex, and sex is a pathetic god. Still, the media continues to molest the people the people like it. We are losing our sovereignty, our pride and our security in the name of political correctness while we watch.

Find God; keep the freedom.

Government has limited use

When the chickens come home to roost. The government has been hiding for the past 50 years. Dick Cheney's been hiding most of all. In the end, Chicago Tribune writes losers left behind, hit the nail on the head. If all the president and his men were left behind in their bunker civilization would automatically cease to exist. When times would not be a one of them that could make a dime on their own. Enron is a modern lesson; when this company ran out of dollars to steal from those that made it, they went bankrupt.

Cheney has lost their Sugar Daddy. We can blame are these people for the shape we are in. But we created them. We elect these carpetbaggers. We got one for governor, Dirk Kempthorne. He was in New Orleans this week. He wanted a bunker in Boise, created his own with barricades. Those of us who live in fear have a reason. They know how weak they are when times would not be a one of them that could make a dime on their own. Enron is a modern lesson; when this company ran out of dollars to steal from those that made it, they went bankrupt.

All government is really good at is creating more government.

When bad times occur, they build more social services. It is easy to tell when times would not be a one of them that could make a dime on their own. Enron is a modern lesson; when this company ran out of dollars to steal from those that made it, they went bankrupt.

Pay attention.

Boys need love, understanding

I had not noticed their approach. And this bothered me, as if a moment before they did not exist. I was on edge now, for there, walking on the sidewalk across the street were two of the most feared. Guilty by association of their gender and age, they were 12-year-old boys.

An intense—no, murderous—tone emitted from one of the boys as he vehemently spoke. "What he would do—and what he would say?" Threading his fist forward and back while holding an imaginary foe with his other hand. Smashing his open palm with his fist, kneeing and kicking, again and again. It was frightening to witness, this, in the otherwise angelic form of a young boy.

Sometimes you understand the world's bitterness only with empathy. Boys need a family structure, for soon enough they may become fathers themselves, and with what training? Boys doing the best with what they had, that's the way it was. For neglect, there is no explanation.

The boys walked away and, within their own dimension, up the street and out of my view. I sat pondering and then comprehending one thing complete: love and understanding must find its way into the lives of those two boys. Just as abruptly as they walked into view, they disappeared.

Yet another character into this evening's adventure from the front porch was approaching on the sidewalk on my side of the street and from the opposite direction. A man of 60 or so years pushing a baby buggy complete with darling infant. The man had a strange gait; one of nervous anticipation. He looked ahead, searching for obstacles, then maneuvering around them. He nervously watched the baby for signs of comfort caused by all the rocking and bouncing of the carriage. He looked up and our eyes met, and as if I had a question about why he was there, the man said, "He's been so fussy today, and his mother asked me to take him strolling. Seems to have helped, he's not fussed yet." They went on with their most pleasant stroll.

As I sat thinking about the previous three minutes and what I had learned, I felt grateful to have been admitted into this other dimension. One of cause and effect, purpose and neglect.

Could the smallest purpose with the greatest effect possibly be love?

Twin Falls coroner announces candidacy

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls county coroner announced Thursday his intent to run for election.

Demis Chambers has served as coroner since December, when the Twin Falls Republic Central Committee and county commissioners appointed him following the resignation of Gene Turley.

In press release issued Thursday, Chambers declared his office, law enforcement and county residents. Chambers retired from the Twin Falls Police Department in June 2001 after serving 29 years, the release said.

An Idaho Falls native, Chambers has served in the U.S. Air Force and graduated from the FBI National Academy, the release said. He also holds an associate's degree in law enforcement from the College of Southern Idaho, where he teaches fingerprinting, evidence collections, crime scene and death investigation.

He is also a certified instructor for the Peace Officer Standards and Training academy.

Twin Falls, Burley airports get improvement money

TWIN FALLS - Congressman Mike Simpson, a member of the House Aviation Subcommittee, announced Thursday $2.8 million for airport improvement projects in Arco, Burley, Pocatello and Twin Falls.

According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, Magic Valley Regional Airport, Justin Field, near Twin Falls, is allocated $350,163 for security enhancements relating to passenger and airport safety.

Burley Municipal Airport will receive $300,000 to conduct an airport feasibility study of alternatives to airport constraints as well as to pave the runway and install a new rotating beacon.

The Arco-Butte County Airport will receive $1,152,400 for a taxiway lighting system and to rehabilitate the runway and apron. The Pocatello Regional Airport is set to receive $1 million to construct a snow removal equipment building and add security enhancements.

Ketchum nurse receives cash award from St. Luke's

KETCHUM - Laurie Mallee has received this year's Carl A. Gray Memorial Award for her exemplary nursing service at St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center.

The cash award was established in 1995. Eleven nurses were nominated by their colleagues for the award. Besides Mallee, they are Jenny Stricman, Charlene Malone, Karen Hoffman, Sandy Buckle, Barb Sargeant, Eleanor Ward, Grace Abel, Maryann Crowdsom, Jami Addison and Karen Soracco.

Two more candidates emerge

By Sandy Miller Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two more candidates have announced plans to run for a county commissioner seat.

Planning and Zoning Director Bill Crafton will be running against his boss, and Bob Powers is the first Democrat to throw his hat into this year's commissioner's race.

In press release issued Thursday, Chambers declared his office, law enforcement and county residents.

MVRMC participates in research project

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is partnering with area health care organizations to play a key role in a new research project to help control the emergence and spread of drug-resistant bacteria, according to a hospital news release.

Overuse of antibiotics has contributed to the development of these resistant bacteria which can cause infections that are difficult and expensive to treat, the news release said.

Antibiotic-resistant bacteria have become an increasingly serious worldwide health threat, according to Dr. Matthew Samore, the University of Utah School of Medicine faculty member leading the project.

"Forty percent of pneumococci, which are bacteria responsible for diseases such as meningitis and pneumonia, are now showing some resistance to antibiotics," Samore said in the news release.

"That's 10 times the figure from five to 10 years ago." Twin Falls is one of six communities in Idaho selected as part of the Inter-Mountain Project on Antimicrobial Resistance and Therapy. IMPART is a two-state, collaborative effort by the University of Utah, PRO-West, HealthWatch and the state health departments in Idaho and Utah.

The Idaho portion of the project is being led by PRO-West, which is a nonprofit organization working to improve health care in Idaho, Washington and Alaska. The project was recently funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta for three years at a total cost of $6.6 million.

IMPART has four components. The first involves tracking the occurrence of drug-resistant bacteria; the second, promotion of appropriate antibiotic prescribing; the third, evaluation of the impact of antibiotics in the food supply; and the fourth, identification of new treatments for drug-resistant bacteria.

As part of IMPART, Magic Valley Regional will review antibiotic use by patients at the hospital over several months, said Trish Heath, a registered nurse specializing in infection control.

"We'll take that data and compare it with data from other parts of our region to determine if the use of antibiotics is appropriate and effective."

Magical Valley Regional is also helping with public health education campaign using posters and brochures to inform consumers about the proper use of antibiotics and to get them to discuss this topic with their doctor.

"Studies have shown that a fairly high percentage of antibiotic use is inappropriate," said Dr. Kurt Stevenson, who is leading the Idaho portion of the project for PRO-West. "Most of this misuse is for viral infections, against which antibiotics are ineffective. Part of the problem is that some patients don't feel satisfied with a visit to the doctor unless they get a prescription for an antibiotic," he said.

Crafton is running for the District 1 seat currently held by Gary Grindstaff, who plans to run for re-election.

Crafton said he's always advised friends to get involved in public service. He said some of those friends persuaded him to take his own advice.

"It's either put up or shut up time for me," Crafton said.

Crafton, 46, has been the planning and zoning director since May 1998.

He's originally from Pryor, Okla. near Tulsa.

He grew up in the Southwest, mostly Arizona, and developed an interest in engineering. He has a background in municipal gas, water and wastewater systems.

His planning experience has been with engineering firms and working on building codes and plans for cities and subdivisions.

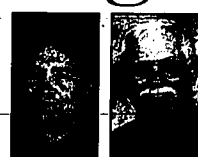

Before moving to Idaho, he worked for a rural water district in Broken Arrow, Okla.

Crafton and his wife, Laura, have two sons - Trey, 18, and Joseph, 15.

"I think I have some good ideas, that if nothing else, if brought to the table for discussion would educate the public on some of the issues the county is facing and some different ideas of addressing those issues," Crafton said.

Nevada fight over fish, road may head to court

The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. - Forest Service supervisor Bob Vaughn expects to end up in court regardless of what the agency decides in a lingering dispute over the threatened bull trout and the rebuilding of a road in a Nevada national forest.

The looming threat of legal challenges is one of the reasons he ordered the agency's most exhaustive form of environmental review of various plans to rebuild the South Canyon Road in Elko County along the Jarbidge River, Vaughn said.

"We are sure there is going to be a lot of political interest and scrutiny," said Vaughn, supervisor of the Humboldt-Toiyabe National Forest, the largest outside Alaska.

"And by political, I mean scrutiny by groups that have the ability and interest in taking us to court. That's not a secret," he said. "It will be a controversial decision no matter how it turns out. It needs to be legally defensible. So I think an environmental impact statement is necessary."

The Forest Service was conducting the fourth in a series of public meetings in Reno on Thursday to provide information and gather opinions for the pending, yearlong environmental impact statement.

Critics of the planned environmental study said at hearings in Elko and Twin Falls earlier this week that they fear it will be the death knell for Elko County's efforts to rebuild the road that washed out in 1995 and has been a source of contention ever since.

Opponents dispute the federal government's authority over the road they say was used by area loggers and miners long before the national forest was established in 1907. They say failure to fix the road denies local residents their traditional motorized access to the area and would hamper emergency efforts during a wild fire.

"The canyon has been studied to death," said state Assemblyman John Carpenter, R-Elko, who wants the agency to allow the county to interim work on the road without the full environmental study.

The $200,000 study is estimated to cost $500,000 on an EIS, which is not necessary ... is a

Educators debate whether state funding represents an increase

By Robert Mayer Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho's public schools received more money this year than last year.

No, wait, they received less. Well, it depends on who you ask. With a tight state budget, lawmakers were forced to do the unthinkable - cut money allocated to the public school system.

Yet the legislators are quick to point out that despite the trimming involved, the $985 million for Idaho's K-12 public schools is more than last year's budget.

Meanwhile, educators like the legislators' mathematics to "smoke and mirrors," insisting that the budget represents a decrease from last year's budget. The trend depends on which figures are used.

Last year's Legislature allocated $992 million to Idaho's school districts for the 2001-2002 school year. However, in October, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne declared nec-

Kempthorne signs three bills on building problems

The Associated Press

PAYETTE - Two bills encouraging and one warning school districts to address building problems behind a decade-long legal battle with the state were signed into law Thursday by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne.

The governor signed the measures at Payette Middle School, where he was joined by the lawmakers who sponsored them in an effort to satisfy a judge the state is doing all it can to ensure public schools are safe, healthy places to learn.

The key bill was the last major proposal to win final legislative approval a week ago as lawmakers prepared to adjourn for the year. It marks a significant change in the state's role in local school construction.

The plan provides a sliding scale of state interest subsidy payments for major construction work, whether or not it addresses safety problems. A larger share of interest would be picked up for economically depressed areas in a bid to correct dramatic inequities between Idaho's wealthier and more beleaguered school districts.

For instance, property value in the Dietrich School District is $1.6 million per classroom unit. Just 40 miles north in Blaine County, property value is $4 million per classroom unit.

The new program will ensure that any district where two-thirds of voters approve a construction bond after Nov. 15, 2002, would have at least 10 percent of the interest paid by the state. Poorer districts would get a larger subsidy, up to 100 percent of the interest portion of the bond payment.

Exactly how much would be determined by how far below the state average a district is in property value, as well as the unemployment rate and per capita income in Idaho's wealthiest counties. The cost is estimated at $1 million in the first

Engineer offers alternate plan to affordable housing proposal

By Karen Bostick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A standing room only crowd of nearly 80 people packed City Hall Wednesday night to hear the details of a second proposal for affordable housing in this mountain resort community.

By the time the four-hour meeting was over and about to become fodder for next meeting's minutes, the City Council had decided to retain council to negotiate a ground lease agreement for the original proposal at Fourth and Main streets.

Held said he had no conflict of interest — he can't build such a project because he doesn't have a public works license. But he said he and many other residents in the community find it unacceptable that the council is being asked to make decisions about financing and sites without a comprehensive affordable housing plan in place.

Without such a plan, he said, there are no answers to such questions as how many units Ketchum needs, where they should be located, how they should be financed and how they will impact parking in a town that's already strapped for parking space. Held also criticized the current proposal, which would give away control of property at Fourth and Main, valued at $1.3 million, to a developer for the next 50 to 70 years. Held urged the council to reject developer tax credit financing and look at lease financing or consider raising the local option tax on tourist-related goods and services in increments of 0.1 percent to build out a series of affordable housing projects with revenue bonds.

Second homeowners and tourists pay more than half of the local option tax, he noted. "You don't give away valuable land and the tourists pay over half," he said.

Held rejected the notion of the Town Center site, where the Visitor Information Center currently sits, as a location for affordable housing. The existing Chamber of Commerce office should be scrapped for a new chamber building and the picturesque visitor center can be expanded, if desired, he said.

Instead, he proposed building affordable housing at Sixth and Leadville streets on what is currently a parking lot.

He said a developer could build a project with 20 housing units for $2.5 million versus the $4.9 million he estimated the proposed Town Center project would cost.

The city would own the project free and clear in 10 years after bond payout, using rents for future projects. It wouldn't lose potential income on the Fourth and Main streets site nor would it have to pay rent for Chamber of Commerce office space. And there would be 52 spaces for parking — more than twice the number at Town Center.

Held's proposal drew heated responses from some who had packed the council chambers. Ketchum resident and businessman Tom Kennedy called it "inflammatory" and said a lot of the opposition to the Town Center proposal is based on misinformation.

Blaine County Housing Director Gates Kellett said that Held's proposal might be too big to conform to Ketchum's regulations on new building size and height. She also said that a quick analysis of his proposal suggested that the price tag would be more like $4.6 million — not $2.5 million.

She said there would be adequate parking at the Town Center project. A Benchmark Engineering study showed room for up to 26 parking stalls; the minimum required is 16.

Kellett also said that surveys indicate 581 affordable units are needed to house workers who currently commute from as far away as Shoshone.

She told the council she would recommend going to the next step with the Town Center project, that is, appoint council to negotiate a ground lease agreement at Fourth and Main streets, and then begin the public hearing process for the Sixth and Leadville site.

Ranchers near agreement on rare squirrel

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A livestock company will look after a ground squirrel which is dwindling from its small range under a conservation agreement being completed with the federal and state governments.

The southern Idaho ground squirrel lives in an 810-square-mile area in Gem, Washington and Payette counties.

In 1995, its population was estimated to be about 40,000 animals. A 2001 survey revealed its numbers may be as low as 2,000 to 4,500. Soulen Livestock Co., the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Idaho Department of Fish and Game and Governor's Office of Species Conservation are formalizing a conservation agreement for 43,000 acres of Soulen land.

Filer School Board sets election date

By John E. Swazy
Times-News correspondent

FILER - The School Board this week set this year's election day for May 21.

The election will be held from noon to 8 p.m. Voting for Zone 3 will take place at Filer High School, and voting for Zone 5 will be held at Hollister Elementary School.

Zone 3 incumbent Shirley Galley, and Zone 5 incumbent Bill Blitzenberg are both seeking reelection.

The board also heard Wednesday an overview of Test of Achievement and Proficiency scores for the 2001 school-year at Filer Middle School.

"I knew we were good, but I didn't know we were this good," Principal Greg Lanting said.

Students consistently scored higher - in combined scores on reading, math and language - than the state or national average. Of the 17 other school districts in the Magic Valley, only Twin Falls had better scores in the sixth and seventh grades.

Sixth-graders scored 59 percent; seventh-graders, 73 percent; eighth-graders, 75 percent; and ninth-graders, 63 percent. The national average for each grade is 50 percent.

The state average for sixth-graders is 52 percent; for seventh-graders, 60 percent; eighth-graders, 60 percent; and ninth-graders, 54 percent.

Other school board business included:

• Senior trip to Canada - The board approved a high school senior trip to the Edmonton Mall in Alberta, Canada, on May 30-31.

The Edmonton Mall is 5.3 million square feet of shopping and theme parks. Cost for the 59 students who plan to go is more than $8,000. The senior fund will provide $2,500 toward the trip.

Several fund-raisers, including a slave auction, are in the planning stages. "We're just going to put all the money in a pot and divide it up equally for those who participated," Senior Class President Annie Jensen said.

• Oregon trip - The board gave Karen Quinton's fourth-grade class at Hollister Elementary School approval for a field trip to visit Baker City, Ore. Between May 22-23, her 15 students will visit an Oregon Trail interpretive center. Bus cost for the trip will total $895. This expense will be shared by Kaylyn VanOstron's fourth-grade class at Perrine Elementary School in Twin Falls. Hotel expense will be $45 per room at the Bridge Street Hotel in Baker City. "Some of the expense will be donated," said Principal Jan Drenan. "We're not asking the board for any money."

The school board will hold its next meeting on April 17 at 7 p.m. in the Filer Elementary School library.

Judge sentences trucker who prostituted stepdaughter

BOISE (AP) - A Caldwell trucker was sentenced to 12.5 years in prison after admitting that he regularly took his young stepdaughter on the road, had sex with her, prostituted her to other drivers and gave her methamphetamine. Roland Boyd Maxfield III, 38, was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge on Thursday, U.S. Attorney Thomas Moss said. Maxfield was also ordered to undergo treatment for sexual deviance and substance abuse and pay a $10,000 fine. Prosecutors said Maxfield's stepdaughter was 12 in June 1999 when she started accompanying him on long-distance trips. He was arrested last June.

Besides having sex with her, Maxfield admitted encouraging her to engage in prostitution and share the money she received.

Funding

amount has the potential to change, said John Garner, superintendent of the Kimberly School District.

Teacher contracts are based on that original figure. Also, much of his district's maintenance is done during the summer, the amount of which is budgeted according to the pre-holdback figure.

Another financial blow to districts involves this year's loss of $10 million in so-called "angel money," Garner said. In determining the public school budget, the state allocates money based on, among other things, on how many K-12 students are estimated to attend school in the upcoming school year. If the estimate turns out to be high, the extra funds are shared among the state's school districts, which, in turn, use that money for non-salary, one-time phases, such as computers or paint.

Since Idaho has been in a growth pattern, the state has been guessing higher than the actual enrollment for the last several years, he said.

"We don't budget it or count on it," he said, but after receiving the "angel money" several years in a row, many districts have come to expect it, he added.

Still, regardless if the state budget represents an increase or decrease, with overhead costs quickly climbing upward, the allocated money isn't enough, Garner said.

And that something is teachers and other staff. As Magic Valley school districts begin their negotiations, the question isn't "if" layoffs will occur, it's how many.

But Cameron maintains that an increase in discretionary money fully funds increases in such things as teachers' salaries and transportation costs.

year, starting in July 2003, and increasing to about $20 million a year within 20 years.

The program replaces one approved last year that paid some of the interest on smaller state district levies constituting a marked for health and safety deficiencies.

One of the other bills Kemphorne signed Thursday extends that program for one year and expands it to include larger, longer-term bond issues - the interest on which runs as much as 1.3 percentage points lower.

However, lawmakers appropriated no new money to a fund from which six of the neediest school districts drew all but about $400,000 of the initial $10 million allocation. That $9.6 million leveraged $50 million for new construction.

The new approach looks beyond the lawsuit that prompted 4th District Deborah Bail's February 2001 ruling that the state was shirking its constitutional duty to the public school system.

Bail has scheduled a five-day hearing starting July 29 to consider the Legislature's response to her order that it find a solution.

But critics of the bill Kemphorne signed Thursday argued the threat of a court order was no reason to usurp local responsibility for building and maintaining schools.

Besides the new incentives for schools to help themselves,

Kemphorne signed a bill into law Thursday increasing the leverage state officials can exert over districts with building safety problems.

It gives the state Division of Building Safety authority to order any problem constituting a "serious safety hazard" corrected within a year.

Failure of a school district to comply would free the state to seek a court order closing the school. State aid to the district also could be diverted to fixing the problems.

Some question viability of affordable housing plans

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Incentives and assistance programs are cutting the rental rates on hundreds of housing units in eastern Idaho, but some question whether that affordable housing is really affordable.

"The problem is there is not very much low-income housing being built," said Jim Hall, executive director of the Eastern Idaho Special Services Agency. The average rent in Bonneville County for a two-bedroom apartment is $509 a month, just $52 less than the equivalent apartment in Boise, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The community's vacancy rate under 6 percent, according to the U.S. Census. That is nearly two percentage points lower than the statewide vacancy rate, and the tight market keeps rents high and waiting lists long.

In Idaho Falls, at least 10 housing complexes participate in the Rental Assistance Voucher Program.

It has a waiting list of more than 1,100, and even with vouchers, a three-bedroom apartment in several complexes still rents for $445 a month.

At Teton Apartments, one of six local complexes benefiting from the Low-Income Housing Tax Credit program, a three-bedroom apartment rents for $593 a month. Developers received $7 million in tax-free bonds to build the 157 affordable housing units.

Using a guideline of 30 percent of monthly income for rent and utilities, a minimum wage worker can afford $268 for housing, advocates say. The average rent in Bonneville County for a one-bedroom apartment was $373 last year. It was higher in other Idaho cities.

Jack Gaskill is president of the board of FAITH, an organization that helps families in trouble and oversees nine apartments. In the past year it has had 100 inquiries about that limited housing.

"I believe that in the economic booms of the 1990s, we were edged very quickly a two-tiered society, with a very small upper class and a burgeoning lower class," Gaskill said. "Those that prospered did very well while those that didn't can barely scrape by."

A PEEK AT HISTORY

Jorell Tolson, 8, checks out a photo of black pioneer Sara Maunder as he and his Adams Elementary School classmates tour the Northwest Black Pioneers Exhibit on Wednesday in Yakima, Wash. The exhibit shows in photos and text the contributions of black and Hispanic pioneers who settled in Washington, Oregon and Idaho from 1889 to the present including families who moved to the Yakima Valley.

Petroglyphs get wrap by landowner

LEWISTON (AP)—Visitors who travel on one of the numerous tour boats on the Snake River no longer will be able to see the famous Petroglyphs on Valerie Earl's property.

Earl said she covered the rocks with a black tarp about a month ago because too many tour boats were coming up the river during the winter. She said the constant roar of tour boats was endangering wildlife.

Earl's family has owned the property, approximately 15 miles south of Asotin, for three generations. The Indian figures chipped into rocks are thought to be more than 4,000 years old.

Tour boat operators whose advertisements had promised a stop at the site said they were disappointed the popular petroglyphs have been hidden from public view.

The site is one of the most popular stops along the Snake River. About 37,000 visitors explore the river on commercial jet boats each year.

Aspen requires helmet use for young ski school students

ASPEN, Colo. — The Aspen Skiing Co. has become the first Colorado ski resort to mandate helmets for ski school students who are 6 years old and younger. The policy takes effect Saturday.

"It's been a possibility we've had for a long time but basically with the string of accidents we took another look at it," said Mike Kaplan, the company's vice president of mountain operations.

The policy will not apply to children who aren't under company supervision, he said.

Fourteen people have died in skiing-related accidents on Colorado slopes this season, surpassing the previous record of 12 in 1993-1994. Five of the deaths were on Aspen area mountains.

School district sues former official for stolen funds

MORELAND — The Snake River School District has sued former Superintendent Elso White to regain $85,000 in purportedly improper compensation taken during his 12-year tenure.

Attorney Brian Julian, representing the school district, filed the action Wednesday in Bingham County 7th District Court.

School district officials said they discovered the payments after White retired in July. The payments included money for unused vacation and unauthorized bonuses.

The suit said White requested $33,820.82 for 93.5 days of unused vacation time before he left in July. It said the district does not have a policy allowing the compensation, and the board did not approve the payment to White.

White supremacist group spreads racist info in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — A white supremacist group is looking for allies in Utah, saying the state's Mormons have historically been sympathetic to their cause.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints reacted strongly to the statement from Illinois-based World Church of the Creator, saying the Mormon church abhors racism.

The World Church campaign, launched Monday, involves door-to-door distribution of a 32-page newspaper to homes. The publication blames the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on U.S. support for Israel. About twice a year, the group picks an area for its literature drop. It previously targeted communities in Florida, Ohio, Illinois and California.

West in brief

The newest version of its publication condemns Jews, Latinos and blacks, saying, "the non-whites are destroying our country."

A meeting held by the racist group last year in Salt Lake City attracted only two people.

Most Utah residents support hate-crimes bill

SALT LAKE CITY — A hate-crimes bill killed by legislators is supported by two-thirds of Utah's residents.

The bill would have increased the penalty for crimes committed based on race, color, disability, religion, national origin, age, gender or sexual preference.

A copyright Deseret News/KSL-TV poll conducted by Dan Jones & Associates on March 11-13 revealed 65 percent of those surveyed strongly favored or somewhat favored a bill that would have increased penalties for hate crimes. Thirty percent of those polled said they somewhat opposed or strongly opposed the bill. The poll surveyed 404 Utah residents and had a margin of error of 5 percent.

Republicans said the poll shows people's disdain for crimes of hate and interest in discussing the issue, rather than a true indication of a need to change the law.

Men suffering domestic abuse can find help

DEAR ABBY: In the past, you have printed letters from men who have been physically abused by their wives. We want to thank you for helping to make the public aware of this aspect of domestic violence. Male victims of domestic violence face grave difficulties. Chief among them is having few places to turn for information and help.

One of the first things these men need to know is that they are not alone. A national survey funded by the Centers for Disease Control found that nearly 40 percent of all domestic violence victims — or 835,000 men a year — are physically abused by their intimate partners.

SAFE (Stop Abuse for Everyone) has a Web site where male victims (straight and gay) and lesbian women can share their stories with others. It is www.safe4all.org. The Web site lists services that are sympathetic to this underserved population, as well as a number of highly-qualified professionals ready

DEAR ABBY

to provide training to law enforcement, health-care providers, social service, crisis lines, etc. in how to identify, support and properly refer male victims of domestic violence.

SAFE also provides a brochure for male victims and their concerned family and friends. It identifies domestic violence, lists typical reactions and provides specific advice. Anyone wishing a copy of this brochure should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope along with a $1 suggested donation to SAFE-Male Victims Brochure, P.O. Box 951, Tualatin, OR 97062.

SAFE is a 501(c)3 charitable organization and donations are tax-deductible.

— PHILIP COOK, NATIONAL VICE-CHAIR, SAFE

DEAR PHILIP: Thank you for your important letter. The complex problem of domestic violence will not be resolved until government, private agencies and the public become aware that domestic violence is not a gender issue — but a human one.

My mail tells me that not all law enforcement agencies are sensitive to the issues concerning female-to-male abuse. I am pleased your organization is providing training to law enforcement for this ugly, often ignored problem.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in June and have no one to walk me down the aisle. My father is deceased, and I have no brothers or male family members who can escort me.

This isn't so much a problem for myself as it is for my mother. She insists it would be "horrific"

(her word) if I go it alone — which is exactly what I want to do.

What do you think, Abby? Would it be acceptable for me to walk down the aisle solo? I have been reading your column since I was little, and I'm eager for your opinion.

— READY TO GO IT ALONE IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR READY: Some women ask their mothers to escort them down the aisle when there is no male relative available. Others ask a respected male friend to do it, or walk down the aisle alone and "give themselves away" as a feminist statement.

Do as you wish, dear. It's your wedding and your decision.

DEQ Seeks Scientific Data on Idaho Rivers and Streams

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) invites the public to submit scientific data on water quality in Idaho rivers and streams. Data collection is the first step in development of DEQ's 2002 Integrated Report to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on state water quality. Data submitted by the public will supplement DEQ data used to determine whether water bodies meet state water quality standards and whether remedial actions are needed to support aquatic life.

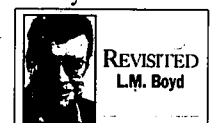

Data must be scientifically rigorous and relevant. Examples of acceptable data include Ph.D. or master's theses, published or printed studies or reports, environmental assessments, and models. Data may be submitted electronically (preferred) or by mail or fax. Before submitting data, review DEQ's Outside Data Policy on DEQ's Web site.

To submit data electronically, visit DEQ's Web site at: http://www2.state.id.us/deq/water/surface\_water

The 2002 Academy Awards Go figure

Actor Russell Crowe stars in 'A Beautiful Mind,' a film which received eight 2002 Oscar nominations including Best Picture, Best Director for Ron Howard, and Best Actor for Crowe.

T-N readers think biopic deserves Oscars

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Times-News readers have fallen in love with pure mathematics. Well, OK, perhaps Russell Crowe has more to do with it, but they think "A Beautiful Mind," the film biopic of schizophrenic mathematician John Forbes Nash, will dominate the Academy Awards when they're handed out Sunday night in Los Angeles.

Voting in the ninth annual TN Pick-the-Oscars Contest, readers chose "A Beautiful Mind" by a wide margin for Best Picture, thought Russell Crowe would repeat as Best Actor - he won last year for "Gladiator" - and tabbed Crowe's on-

Art exhibit depicts Hunt Camp

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Oil paintings and sketches of the Minidoka Relocation Center in Jerome County during World War II by artist Kenjiro Nomura will be on display in the classroom at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho today through April 27.

The Friends of Minidoka Internment Camp, in cooperation with both the Idaho Humanities Council and CSI, is sponsoring the event to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the internment of Japanese-Americans.

An opening reception is planned tonight at 7 at the Herrett Center, featuring Robert Sims, a professor emeritus of history at Boise State University and a specialist on the Hunt Camp.

Nomura, who lived in Seattle, was held in the Hunt Camp between 1942-45. His paintings depict everyday scenes of camp life.

Kenjiro Nomura's "Fire Station," painted in 1945 at the Hunt Camp.

Also on display at the Herrett Center will be a Park Service traveling exhibit of the Minidoka Internment National Monument and photographs of the pioneer Koto family, who were early settlers of Japanese ancestry in the Magic Valley. The exhibits are free and opening to the public.

Meredith Monk takes her voice where few have gone

The Times-News

KETCHUM - Her voice has been described as being closer to an instrument than a song. Meredith Monk, a pioneer of extended vocal technique and vocal performance, will sing at the next Stage Theater Saturday night, part of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts multi-disciplinary series on evanescent art, "The Ephemeral and the Organic."

Monk's vocal vocabulary includes ululations, multiphonics, whispers, slides, range skips and hockets. Her wordless music combines the technical virtuosity of classical music, the poignancy and directness of folk, the freedom of jazz and the rhythmic immediacy of rock 'n roll.

"Meredith Monk's exploration of the voice has been groundbreaking," said Amy Wigstrom, director of performing arts at the Sun Valley Center. "Given the vast body of her work and the

EASTERN DIVISION

IN RE: SULZER ORTHOPEDICS INC. HIP PROSTHESIS AND KNEE PROSTHESIS PRODUCTS LIABILITY LITIGATION Case No. 1:01-CV-9000 MDL Docket No. 1401 (Judge O'Malley)

FINAL SUMMARY NOTICE OF CLASS ACTION AND PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

TO: ALL CITIZENS OR RESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES WHO HAVE HAD AN AFFECTED SULZER INTER-OP® ACETABULAR SHELL HIP IMPLANT OR AFFECTED SULZER NATURAL KNEE® II TIBIAL BASEPLATE KNEE IMPLANT PLACED IN THEIR BODIES, THEIR SPOUSES, CHILDREN AND "SIGNIFICANT OTHERS."

If you had a Sulzer Inter-Op® Acetabular Shell hip implant or a Sulzer Natural Knee® II Tibial Baseplate knee implant placed in your body, or if you are the family member of someone who had one of these implants placed in their body, please read the entire Notice carefully. It may affect your rights.

NATURE OF THE ACTION

Several hundred individuals throughout the country have filed lawsuits against Sulzer Orthopedics Inc., Sulzer Medica Ltd., Sulzer Orthopedics Ltd, Sulzer Ltd (also known as Sulzer AG), and various affiliates (collectively, "Sulzer") claiming defects in the design, marketing and manufacturing of Sulzer's Inter-Op® Acetabular Shells and Natural Knee® II Tibial Baseplates. These individual plaintiffs also alleged claims related to Sulzer's breach of express and implied warranties associated with the Inter-Op® Acetabular Shells and the Natural Knee® II Tibial Baseplates.

In addition to these individual lawsuits, a Class Action lawsuit has been filed in federal court on behalf of the entire Class of persons who were implanted with an affected Inter-Op® Acetabular Shell hip implant or an affected Natural Knee® II Tibial Baseplate knee implant.

FAIRNESS HEARING

The attorneys for the Plaintiff Class and the attorneys for Sulzer have reached a proposed Settlement of the Class Action lawsuit. This proposed Settlement could also resolve the individual lawsuits.

The Summary Notice is to advise Plaintiff Class Members that the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio has scheduled a Fairness Hearing to begin on May 6, 2002, at 10:00 a.m. at the Howard M. Metzenbaum U.S. Courthouse, 201 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio 44114. At this Fairness Hearing, the Court will: (i) consider whether the proposed settlement is fair to the Class; and (ii) determine the amount of attorneys' fees and expenses to be paid to Class Counsel and counsel representing individual Class Members.

SUMMARY OF SETTLEMENT BENEFITS AND RIGHTS OF CLASS MEMBERS

The proposed Class Action Settlement gives qualified Class Members the right to receive money and/or other benefits depending upon the Class Member's circumstances. The proposed Settlement will distribute in excess of one Billion Dollars. The entities contributing to the Settlement Fund include Sulzer Orthopedics Inc., Sulzer Medica Ltd., Sulzer Ltd (also known as Sulzer AG), Winterthur Swiss Insurance Company, and Winterthur International Insurance Company.

Members of the Class have the following rights:

- The right to choose a "Guaranteed Payment Option," which allows them to begin receiving Settlement Benefits quickly, regardless of whether the Settlement receives Final Judicial Approval;
- The right to receive Settlement Benefits in the event the Settlement receives Final Judicial Approval, if they register for their benefits within the time provided;
- The right to appear at the Fairness Hearing on May 6, 2002 at the United States District Court and object to the Settlement, if they have filed a written objection with the Court on or before April 29, 2002; and
- The right to exclude themselves ("opt-out") from the Settlement, effective as of the final opt-out date of May 14, 2002, or five business days after Trial Court Approval of the proposed Settlement of the Class Action lawsuit, whichever is later.

FURTHER INFORMATION AVAILABLE

The description in this Summary Notice does not provide a complete statement of the class action or proposed Settlement. The Notice Package contains: (1) additional information about the Settlement and the Settlement Benefits available; (2) Claim Forms for Class Members to complete in order to register and receive Settlement Benefits; and (3) information on how to accept the Guaranteed Payment Option and how to opt-out of the Settlement. ASSETS FOR YOUTH
 ASSET #7

COMMUNITY VALUES YOUTH

HEALTHNET

Kids and community

Once a week through Nov. 4, The Times-News, in cooperation with the Twin Falls County HealthNet Coalition and the Youth Action Council will profile one of HealthNet's "Assets" for kids and community.

And we'll illustrate it with a poster about the Asset of the Week, designed and drawn by youngsters from throughout Twin Falls County.

With the help of HealthNet, we'll also detail the attributes of each Asset, in this case community-valuing youth.

This seventh poster in the series was done by Dayanira Doria, an eighth grader, at Robert Stuart Junior High School in Twin Falls.

Look for other Assets in the next 33 weeks in The Times-News Family Life section on Sundays. And to find out more about

Community values youth

Young people need to feel adults in their community value and appreciate them. Yet 73 percent of Twin Falls County's teenagers feel they do not have this asset. Take the Asset Challenge: Help a child build this week's asset.

Home

- Attend community meetings and events; bring your teenager.
- Talk about the adults in your community who help your kids feel valued and appreciated and those who make them feel worthless.

Congregation

- Suggest youth groups discuss adults who help them feel valued and those who don't, and brainstorm ways they can improve adults' perceptions of them.
- Show your appreciation when youth do things for your congregation.

Community

- Notice and show your appreciation for the efforts youth make. Institute opportunities for them to serve their neighbors.
- Retaliate when media bashes "all teens" for actions of a few. Write letters, make phone calls and send e-mails asking the media to feature positive stories about teens.

Youth

- Spend more time where you feel most valued and appreciated.
- Join Youth Action Council; it has dozens of community-enhancing projects you can participate in.

To learn more

- Call HealthNet and Youth Action Council at 423-5915 or 825-5887.

Denzel's new movie reaches video

New video in Twin Falls-area stores this week:

'Training Day'

Somebody give this man a Best Actor award! Denzel Washington preens like a peacock in Antoine Fuqua's over-the-top drama of cops gone bad. While it's pure joy to watch Washington (as rogue LAPD narc Alonzo Harris) badge, bully, intimidate and charm into submission his young protege, rookie detective Jake Hoyt (appropriately wimpy Ethan Hawke), Fuqua's film in the end goes too far.

'Training Day' packs a lifetime of corruption, murder and mayhem into one very long 2 1/2-hour period, a day loaded with more coincidence - Jake rescues a teen-age girl from rapist crackheads before lunch, only to see his own life saved by her grateful relatives after midnight - than even the most glib moviegoer can stomach. Contains drug use, beatings, shootings, nudity, foulmouthed obscenity and a hostile work environment. Rated R.

later won a Nobel Prize, with Jennifer Connelly in a career-best performance as his wife, Ed Harris co-stars. (2:09. PG-13 for intense thematic material, sexual content and a scene of violence.)

reluctantly team with enemy vampire to fight a new super-breed of bloodsuckers. R for strong pervasive violence, language, some drug use and sexual content. 117 minutes.

tale of revenge-with-a-capital-R. However, when screenwriter Jay Wolpert's thudding dialogue is combined with Kevin Reynolds' tendency to direct things in the most bald-faced way, the results are not good. Even more perplexing than an ending that has more in common with 'The Bold and the Beautiful' than anything the

'All About the Benjamins'

What it's also about is a Miami bounty hunter (Ice Cube), who reluctantly teams up with a con man (Mike Epps) to track down homicidal diamond thieves. The story is slick, fast-paced and by-the-numbers. Still, it satisfies, immersed in wily, scatological humor from its two leads. With Tommy Flanagan, Roger Guenewille Smith and Eva Mendes. Kevin Bray directs from a script by Cube and Ron Lang. (1:45. R for strong violence, pervasive language and brief sexuality.)

'Amelle'

If you're looking to fall in love, or just to feel good about the world and the people in it for a couple of hours, look no further than this delightful, intoxicating confection by Jean-Pierre Jeunet ('The City of Lost Children'), the sweetest, funniest, most generous and most inventive popular entertainment of the year. In a performance that will steal, break and warm your heart, gamine Audrey Tautou plays a waitress who discovers that her true destiny is to help destiny along by altering the lives of those around her so they can find their bliss. In the process, we find plenty, while Amelle discovers that destiny has its own agenda. The film is beautifully constructed, designed and photographed. Rated R; nudity, sexual situations. 2 hours. In French with English subtitles.

'Blade 2'

A better vampire movie than recent entries such as 'Queen of the Damned' or 'Dracula 2000.' Yet Wesley Snipes' return as slayer of the undead still is fairly anemic, relying on blood, glossy effects, high-kicking combat and a head-banging soundtrack rather than authentic chills and scares. But if you liked the original 'Blade,' based on the Marvel comic book, you'll probably like the sequel, which director Guillermo del Toro injects with a similar quotient of action and gore and an even higher body count. This time out, Blade and his mentor (Kris Kristofferson)

'A Beautiful Mind'

This is likely the most successfully serious film director Ron Howard has ever done, but at the end of the day it's still too much a too-tidy Ron Howard project. Russell Crowe stars as mathematician John Forbes Nash Jr., who battled schizophrenia and author intended is how unable it is to take advantage of the talents of its co-stars. With Richard Harris and Dagnara Dominczyk (2.11, PG-13 for adventure violence) swordplay and some sensuality.)

'Dragonfly'

Appallingly manipulative, badly contrived and finally foolish romantic tale of a Chicago emergency room chief (Kevin Costner) who becomes convinced that his dead wife is trying to reach him from beyond the grave. With Kathy Bates, Linda Hunt, Ron Rifkin. (1.45, PG-13; for thematic material and mild sexuality.)

'E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial, 20th Anniversary'

Twenty years and $700 million in worldwide box office revenue later, 'E.T.' is back, and it holds up beautifully. Steven Spielberg has touched up the details of his most personal film using computer graphics: E.T.'s wise eyes and quizzical facial expressions are more vivid now. The colors are more vibrant, the images crisper. He also included a couple of never-before-seen scenes, which don't add much. But this tale of the friendship between a lonely young boy and an alien who's far from the earth at the heart. A must-see on the big screen, for the first time or the 101st time. PG for language and mild thematic elements. 120 min.

'The Endurance'

Documentaries rarely come as straightforward and unadorned as this, and even unembellished, the story of Ernest Shackleton's unsuccessful 1914 attempt to traverse the Antarctic and the 22-month survival saga that resulted is something like unbelievable. Director George Butler uses the photographs and film shot on the expedition by Frank Hurley as evidence of the unimaginable challenge Shackleton and his men were determined to meet. Not rated; some references may be disturbing for children. 1 hour, 35 minutes.

'40 Days and 40 Nights'

'Heathers' director Michael Lehmann and new writer Robert Perez peer perceptively beneath the sex-charged world of great-looking young San Francisco professionals as one of their number (Josh Hartnett) is struck with the earth-shaking idea of giving up sex for Lent as a way of freeing himself of his obsession with a beauty (Vinessa Shaw) who dumped him. Shannyn Sossamon is the lovely new girl on his horizon, and Paulo Costanzo is Matt's crass roommate. (1.30, R, for strong sexual content, nudity and language.)

'I Am Sam'

A sincere but hopelessly sentimental drama about a retarded single father, played with precision but no passion by Sean Penn, trying to regain custody of his 7-year-old daughter (Dakota Fanning) from a foster home. In a cliched performance that could inspire a class-action defamation suit from female lawyers, Michelle Pfeiffer is a lawyer who is guilt-tripped into taking his case. Dianne Wiest is an agoraphobic neighbor who lends Penn support. The soundtrack of Beatles covers by the likes of Aimee Mann and Ben Harper is the film's saving grace; the rest is near-embarrassing. Rated PG-13; language. 2 hours, 12 minutes.

'Ice Age'

It's regrettable that the film's conception, plot and dialogue are so formulaic, because director Chris Wedge has done nifty, amusing things on the visual side, joining bright new technology to an old story. Though its forced gibbliness often makes you wish you could turn down the sound, the film's sense of physical adventure and its gift for creating wild rides is considerably more entertaining. With the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo and Denis Leary. (1.21, PG, for mild peril.)

'John Q'

Denzel Washington, in yet another formidable portrayal, plays an all-but-laid-off factory worker with $1,000 to his name and an HMO insurance policy that does not cover his small son

(Daniel E. Smith) who suddenly needs a $250,000 heart transplant. Director Nick Cassavetes takes it from there in a provocative, pull-out-all-the-stops, no-holds-barred fashion. With Kimberly Elise, Robert Duvall, James Woods, Anne Heche and Ray Liotta. (1.58, PG-13, for violence, language and intense thematic elements.)

'Kandahar'

When this documentary-like road movie by Iranian director

Mohsen Makhmalbaf was shown at last year's Cannes Film Festival, he had to explain to foreign journalists that the Afghan city was the stronghold of religious fundamentalists. The film now speaks for itself as a record of what life was like for Afghans, especially the women, before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Nelofer Pazira stars as a character based on herself, a journalist who returns to the land of her birth to keep a sister, prevented from living a full life, from committing suicide. As she attempts to enter Afghanistan through Iran, she encounters people whose lives have been shattered by tribal violence, famine and religious fanaticism. Somehow the film holds out a promise of hope, even though it was filmed, on the Afghan-Iranian border, more than two years ago. Not rated; nothing objectionable. 1 hour, 25 minutes. In English, French and Afghani, with English subtitles.

UP CLOSE

By Joe Sunnen
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With his ruff of blond hair and light blue eyes, College of Southern Idaho sophomore Josh Wolfram could be everybody's All-American.

Focus on

Josh Wolfram

And with his 4.0 grade point average and appointment to the United States Air Force Academy, he's the guy most parents would want to see their daughter bring home for dinner.

To the CSI baseball team, the speedy left fielder is just "Smurf."

"Look at him, he's 5-foot-3. That's why we call him Smurf," CSI coach Jim Walker said jokingly. "But Josh is just a great kid."

For the record, Wolfram is closer to .57. And while his batting average is a bit on the short side (he's batting .222), he's long on smarts.

"There's probably about five or six guys on the team that I help out during the semester that need help with their assignments or whatever," Wolfram said. "I wouldn't say I was the brain on this team because there are other people that are smart, but maybe in math."

Wolfram, of Walla Walla, Wash., started the application process to join the Air Force Academy last summer. In January he received his congressional nomination from Washington State congressman George Nethercutt and learned he had an appointment in March.

"I was overjoyed just knowing that I had a place to go next year," Wolfram said. "It took a lot of stress and pressure off."

And Wolfram won't be the only member of his family to go to the Air Force. His brother will graduate from the academy this spring.

"I'm pretty thrilled to be going," Wolfram said. "It's a great university to go to and then afterward I can serve my country in the Air Force for a couple of years."

When Wolfram finally starts basic training in June it will be a long time coming. He was also accepted to the academy out of high school, but chose CSI instead to follow his baseball dream.

"I wasn't fully committed to going there out of high school," Wolfram said. "And my brother told me not to go if I wasn't committed. But I always said if I got in again, I'd go. There aren't a lot of people that get the chance twice."

In the meantime, Wolfram is enjoying life as a student-athlete at CSI. He's started 18 games for the Golden Eagles this season, collecting 10 hits in 45 at-bats, and hasn't committed an error in the field.

"There's a great sense of unity for the nine sophomores on this team," he said. "We have a great time together. We hang out together on the field, off the field, we're just like brothers. That will be the hardest thing to leave."

CSI rodeo looks to stay strong at home

First-place Eagles host 12-team event this weekend

By Joe Sunnen
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — How do you follow up a national championship season? That's the question the College of Southern Idaho rodeo team faces as it heads into its home Rocky Mountain Regional Rodeo tonight and Saturday at the CSI Expo Center.

The short answer: win another title.

"The men's team has won four out of four rodeos so far, and most of them by a considerable margin," CSI coach Shawn Davis said. "But you never know. We're still a long way out. Our kids are all doing very well, we don't have any injuries or anything, so at this point we look pretty good."

The annual CSI Rocky Mountain Regional rodeo is the only home contest of the season for the Golden Eagles. Today's opening round begins at 8 p.m. with the doors opening at 6 p.m. Saturday's second round starts at 2 p.m. with the finals beginning at 8 p.m.

The CSI men's team holds a 1,040-point edge over runner-up Weber State in the Rocky Mountain region, and leads Utah Valley State College by 1,055 points. The men's team has won two national titles and 22 regional titles.

The Golden Eagles top the standings in saddle bronc, bareback, bull riding, and rank 1-2-3 in the men's All-Around with sophomore Cody Demers heading the list.

Demers, who grew up in Kimberly, won the All-Around title last year at the National College Finals Rodeo and currently ranks sixth in the nation in the event in the professional standings.

CSI Rocky Mountain Regional Rodeo

What: Twelve college rodeo teams from Idaho, Nevada and Utah competing in nine events.
 When: Preliminaries today at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m. Finals at 8 p.m. Saturday.
 Where: CSI Expo Center
 Cost: $6 advance, $7 at the door for adults. $4 for children. VIP and mezzanine seating sold out.

"This is my last one here at CSI," Demers said. "And it'll be fun. It's been hectic getting ready for it and everything, but it's just another rodeo for me."

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Hoosier Hysteria

Indiana dumps Duke; Kent State stuns Pitt

Chicago Tribune

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Jason Williams missed the last free throw of his college career Thursday night. And with that, top-ranked Duke's season ended.

Indiana pulled off the biggest upset of the NCAA tournament so far, stunning the blue Devils, 74-73, in the NCAA South Regional semifinals.

Williams drilled a three-point shot and was fouled by Dane Fife. But Williams missed the free throw and the Hoosiers moved into the Elite Eight of the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1993.

Indiana will play unheralded Kent State, 78-73 overtime victors over Pittsburgh in Thursday's other semifinal.

Indiana coach Mike Davis passed around the credit — even to an outsider, Maryland assistant coach Dave Dickerson, whose team was one of only three to beat Duke in the regular season. "It wasn't my game plan," Davis said. "It was Dave Dickerson's game plan."

The plan didn't work early, with Duke (31-4) surging to a 29-12 lead.

But the Hoosiers (23-11) rallied, and with 11.1 seconds remaining, Indiana sophomore A.J. Mays hit two from the foul line to put the Hoosiers up 74-70.

In a breathtaking blur, Williams pushed the ball down the floor, dished off to Daniel Ewing, grabbed the rebound of Ewing's miss and fired a 3-pointer from the top of the key, Swish.

Then Williams missed his free throw, and Duke center Carlos Boozer tried to put back the miss, to no avail.

Indiana's Jared Jeffries grabbed the rebound, leading on to the ball, the moment and, most importantly, the victory.

As red jerseys swarmed the court, as Davis clutched his players tightly and did a celebratory two-step across the floor, Duke players watched in stunned silence. Williams' face was streaked with tears, Boozer's demeanor one of disbelief.

In recent years, Indiana has become infamous for making early exits from postseason play. But five times the Hoosiers have knocked off a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament... make that six.

Early on Indiana didn't even look like it

IOC strips British skier of medal

Athlete says positive drug test is result of innocent mistake

By Stephen Wilson
 The Associated Press

LONDON — The first British skier to win an Olympic medal was stripped of the award Thursday for using a decongestant that contained a banned stimulant, despite his claim he made an innocent mistake.

The case was similar to that of the Romanian gymnast who lost her gold medal at the Sydney Games for taking a cold pill.

The International Olympic Committee's executive board said Alain Baxter will be stripped of his bronze medal for testing positive for methamphetamine contained in a Vicks Inhaler he used at last month's Winter Games.

CSI baseball finishes homestand with Ricks

By Joe Sunnen
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Christian Colonel hopes the frustrations of the past few weeks will just go away.

He also knows the only way to get rid of those feelings is for the College of Southern Idaho baseball team to sweep Ricks College this weekend.

"The last two weeks have been rough for me," Colonel said. "It's been frustrating. And as a team it's been frustrating as well, because it seems like we've beaten ourselves. In all of our losses we've made little errors and stupid mistakes."

The Golden Eagles (15-8, 11-5 Scenic West Athletic Conference) finish their month-long homestand today and Saturday at Frontier Field

Vikings invasion

Today:
 • Ricks at CSI (2), 2 p.m.
 Saturday:
 • Ricks at CSI (2), noon with a pair of doubleheaders against the Vikings (10-10, 7-5 SWAC).

The Eagles are two games behind conference-leading Community College of Southern Idaho heading into the series.

"This is where we have to put up or shut up," CSI coach Jim Walker said. "We've been saying we need to go win some ball games. We just need to take care of business. I don't want to be anyone."

CSI split back-to-back series Please see BASEBALL, Page D2

Question and Answer

- The political situation has changed so much in the last year, has that changed anything for you?
 "People always ask me why I would want to go in now. But I think there's a greater sense of patriotic duty now than before to do something for your country. I think it will be great."
- So is your favorite movie "Top Gun"?
 "No, I'd say it would be more like "The Natural."
- Do you want to become a pilot?
 "I'm not sure I'll be pilot-qualified. If I'm not, that won't be the end of the world. If I am, that would be a lot fun."
- What's your best subject in school?
 "I'd have to say math. It comes easy for me. Numbers work really well in my head and I can figure out problems and know the answer. It's clear for me."
- When do you want to do when you get out of the Air Force?
 "I'll probably go to graduate school after the academy. I've actually thought about becoming a lawyer, but I'm not that into probably something to do with business."

It happens a few times a night, winter and summer, in just about every rink or ball park with a grandstand high above the change admission. The struggle is always there, on the back of every ticket, in small print. A slip shot with some steam on it gets deflected or a better-than-average fastball is fouled off too high or too wide for the protective backdrop enclosing the game. Suddenly, a projectile every bit as hard as a rock and traveling upward of 60 mph is on a collision course with a paying customer.

And unless you happen to be that customer, or someone nearby, you'll never know of the tragedy that occurred. Some commotion at the spot the puck or the ball disappeared, some wincing, some wrestling over a "renewer," a pause—and then the familiar notes of the organ melody to re-energize a crowd ahead of the next pitch or facediff.

Jazz beat Wizards in Jordan's return to Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)— Karl Malone scored 23 points, and John Stockton had 19 as Utah beat Washington 94-78 in Michael Jordan's first game at the Delta Center since his winning shot in Game 6 of the 1998 NBA Finals. Bryon Russell scored 11 for the Jazz, who had lost five of seven but beat the Wizards for the seventh straight time. Richard Hamilton scored 14 to lead Washington. Jordan had 11 points on 4-of-12 shooting in his second game after missing 12 because of surgery on his right knee. Jordan, who scored 44 in a November loss to the Jazz in Washington, spent the early minutes sitting on the baseline. He got welcome when he entered with 5:11 remaining in the first quarter.

Washington's Michael Jordan, center, is guarded by Utah's John Stockton and Karl Malone Thursday in Salt Lake City. The Jazz won 94-78.

Spurs 105, Mavericks 102 DALLAS—Tony Parker hit a long jumper with 25.4 seconds left, then it took five free throws in the final 14.5 seconds for the San Antonio Spurs to hold off the Dallas Mavericks 105-102. It was the Spurs' 11th straight victory, allowing them to tie the Mavericks for the Midwest Division lead. Tim Duncan scored the final two of his 32 points from the foul line with 1.3 seconds left. On Dallas' last-gasp effort, Steve Nash caught a pass beyond midcourt but was only able to hurl the ball into the lane. Nash scored 28 points and was the catalyst of a third-quarter rally for the Mavericks.

Washington's Michael Jordan, center, is guarded by Utah's John Stockton and Karl Malone Thursday in Salt Lake City. The Jazz won 94-78.

Jason Terry matched his season-high with 11 assists for the Hawks, who have won six of seven at home and five of six overall.

Hawks 118, Knicks 89 ATLANTA—Nazz Mohammed scored 24 points, and Shaqree Abdur-Rahim added 20 as the Atlanta routed New York.

Timberwolves 95, Grizzlies 93 MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Kevin Garnett scored four of his 25 points in the final 1:15 as Minnesota held off Memphis. Shane Battier, who was 12-of-15 from the field, led the Grizzlies with 28 points.

Pistons 95, Suns 82 PHOENIX—Clifford Robinson scored 28 points in his return to Phoenix, leading Detroit to its fourth straight victory. Jerry Stackhouse added 23 points and seven assists for the Pistons, who moved 3 games ahead of Milwaukee for the Central Division lead. Rodeo

Continued from D1 While the men are riding high, Davis hopes this weekend's rodeo will spur the women's team. "Right now, the women's team hasn't been performing to their level of talent," Davis said. "They've been playing but they haven't been winning. So hopefully they get off to big start here because they can't stay very much longer to get going."

A 13-year-old named Britanie Cecil died Monday night in an Ohio hospital, two days after being hit by a puck while sitting in the stands of the Columbus Blue Jackets' game against Calgary. The more you know about the story, the sadder it is. Britanie was attending the game as an early birthday present from her father. The injury that caused her death, more the result of complications from whiplash than trauma, was so rare that doctors with years of emergency room experience doubt anyone would have noticed it right away. By the time it was detected, it was too late for doctors to do anything about it.

The CSI women's team enters the rodeo today in third place behind Ricks College and Weber State. Sophomore Brandy Rodig leads the Eagles in individual events, ranking second in barrel racing. Jamie Lynn Clark is third in breakaway racing and kind Wright is fourth in goat tying.

Brittanie's family members said they were "trying to make some sense of this tragedy." They started by donating her organs for transplant. A kid who loved others will go on doing just that. The Blue Jackets and the National Hockey League, meanwhile, are skating on that very fine edge between showing respect for a fan without spooking all the others.

As usual, Davis has more than just the rodeo in store for fans. Davis is bringing in trick-roper and gun twirler Patrick Gruss Jr. — a Euro Disney performer — for the weekend as well as world champion bull rider and CSI alum Blue Stone to sign autographs. Last season's national championship team will also be honored. "The entertainment will be unlike anything that we've ever had here," Davis said. "It's going to be a very good show."

Meantime, players will wear Britanie's initials on their helmets for the rest of the season and promote a fund set up in her memory. They also observed a moment of silence before Thursday night's game against the Detroit Red Wings. In what will be the first game at home since the young girl's death, the team also plans to heighten fans' awareness about the very real dangers presented by pucks hurtling into stands. For the time being, expect more frequent announcements about the risk systems at rinks, more messages on the scoreboards, maybe even larger print on the tickets. But attending a sporting event has always been an inherently risky. At least that's what the courts generally rule. It would be nice to think somewhere down the road, this episode prompts some changes that make it a little safer to sit in the stands. That way, the tragedy of Britanie's death won't be compounded by our inability to learn a lesson from it.

Baseball

Continued from D1 With Utah Valley State College and Salt Lake Community College over the past two weeks. The Eagles are 8-4 during the home stand and just 4-4 after sweeping Colorado Northwestern Community College to start the stand. "Our goal is to sweep," Colonel said. "We want to come out of this weekend first in the conference, nothing less than four wins will get that done."

Cal Ripken weekend

This weekend is Cal Ripken Weekend at Frontier Field. Any member of the Cal Ripken baseball league and their families will get in free to both CSI baseball doubleheaders today and Saturday against Ricks College. Players can also meet and talk with CSI players, after the second contests both days. Also, anyone becoming a member of D's Double Board will receive a season pass to all CSI baseball games. For more information call the CSI clubhouse at 733-9554, Ext. 2650

With four wins, the Eagles can also muster some momentum heading into St. George, Utah next weekend where they will meet Dixie State College. "Sweeping Ricks would be like we proved something to ourselves," Walker said. "We need to prove that we're a top club and that's what we have to do."

Diamond Notes

Hurting Units: Sophomore Matt Gunting is doubtful with a sore back and pitcher Maurice Powell is also battling soreness in his arm. Depending on the weather, Powell could come out of the bullpen or start. Seventh heaven: The Vikings come into the series seventh in the SWAC in batting average and earned run average. Ricks is hitting .236 as a team and the pitching staff is at 5.36. Miller time: Sophomore Joe Miller will likely make his second start of the season on Saturday. He pitched 3.1 innings against SLCC in a no-decision. ... Rolling along: Sophomore Nate Bumstead hasn't lost a starter since the first game of the season. Continued from D1 The Scotsman's medal will go to fourth-place finisher Benjamin Raich of Austria. The IOC said the British Olympic Association must return it by March 31. Arrangements for awarding the medal to Raich were pending. The IOC also disqualified Vasily Pavlov, a hockey player from Belarus, who tested positive for the steroid nandrolone. The team doctor, Evgeny Lositski, was banned from the next two Olympics. The 28-year-old Baxter was the third athlete to lose a medal for a doping infraction in Salt Lake City. Five doping cases have been confirmed from those games, matching the total at all previous Winter Olympics. Baxter's case mirrors that of Andreas Rudacan, the teenage gymnast who lost her all-around gold medal in Sydney after taking a cold medicine that contained the stimulant pseudoephedrine. Baxter and the BOA said the skier was harshly punished for unwittingly taking a banned substance in an over-the-counter decongestant.

"We take the view that the circumstances of the case are unfortunate at worst and that Alain has suffered a dreadful penalty," said Craig Reed, the BOA chairman and an IOC member. "The BOA is convinced that in no way can Alain be described as a 'drug cheat.'" We believe the offense to be modest and the punishment very severe." Baxter and the BOA said the positive test resulted from the innocent use of the inhaler to clear up a blocked nose. The contract sold in the United States contains levamisole, a claimed the material was used for ultraviolet radiation treatment of the skier's blood to prevent cold and flu. The IOC says any manipulation of blood is considered blood doping, a banned practice. Three cross-country skiers—Spain's Johann Muehlegg and Russia's Larissa Larutina and Olga Danilova—tested positive at the games for the endurance-boosting drug darbepoetin. Muehlegg and Larutina were stripped of gold medals, but all three were allowed to keep medals won earlier.

But attending a sporting event has always been an inherently risky. At least that's what the courts generally rule. It would be nice to think somewhere down the road, this episode prompts some changes that make it a little safer to sit in the stands. That way, the tragedy of Britanie's death won't be compounded by our inability to learn a lesson from it. ... Heaving on will be toughest on her family, of course, but the players who were in the rink that night will be thinking about her now, too. Columbus' Espen Knutsen has had a hard time dealing with the knowledge that his shot, which deflected off a Flames defenseman, hit the girl in the head. He continued to play, but has avoided discussing the tragedy. His coach, Dave King, conceded he doesn't know what to tell Knutsen and said he can't bring himself to lean on his players to play hard. "We just said, 'Hey, whatever happens, we're not going to get on our guys,'" King said. "If they answer the bell and play well, great. If they don't work out that way, we're just going to hang in there with them because they've got a lot on their minds right now besides the hockey game." ... Thinking about the hockey game might be a relief. The Blue Jackets won their first game back, 3-1 Wednesday night over the Wild at Minnesota. They were probably just grateful to be on the ice, but they're also loose because they're hopelessly out of playoff contention. Either way, it was the first time since November that they're among two wins back to back.

Flyers end five-game winless skid on LeClair's rebound

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John LeClair scored on a rebound of a shot by newly acquired Adam Oates at 12:26 of the third period as the Philadelphia Flyers snapped a five-game winless streak with a 2-1 victory over the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim on Thursday night. Oates, acquired from Washington for goaltender Maxime Ouellet and three draft picks on Tuesday, picked up his NHL-leading 58th assist on the play. Philadelphia's Simon Gagne traded unassisted goals as the Flyers also snapped a five-game winless streak at home (0-4-1).

Rangers 5, Senators 2 OTTAWA — Newcomers Pavel Bure and Tom Poti each scored with New York ended a four-game losing streak with a win over Ottawa. Bure, acquired from Florida on Monday, assisted on Eric Lindros' goal 6:00 in before scoring his 24th of the season at 12:31 in his second game with New York. Bure now has three points as a Ranger after scoring in his New York debut on Tuesday.

Hurricanes 3, Panthers 2 RALEIGH, N.C. — Martin Gelinas and Ron Francis scored in the third period as Carolina rallied past Florida.

Goalkeeper Kevin Weekes made his first start for the Hurricanes since coming from Tampa Bay in a trade on March 5. He allowed two goals on the first two shots he faced, but then didn't allow another.

Brunls 2, Sabres 1 BUFFALO, N.Y. — Rookie Nick Boynton had a goal and assist, recording his first multi-point game, to lead Boston over Buffalo.

Capitals 4, Maple Leafs 3 TORONTO — Jaromir Jagr scored two goals and had two assists as Washington beat Toronto.

Gary Roberts scored twice for Toronto, which also got a goal from Robert Reichel. Danius Zubrus scored the game-winner — his second goal of the game — with 3:05 remaining.

NCAA TOURNAMENT Big-12 teams boot Pac 10

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Kareem Rush and Clarence Gilbert demonstrated what everyone in the West Regional already suspected: Missouri is no ordinary 12th seed.

Gilbert scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half, and Rush scored 20 points to help the Tigers roar to their third upset of the tournament, beating eighth-seeded UCLA 82-73 Thursday night.

Arthur Johnson had 14 points and 13 rebounds for the Tigers (24-11), who advanced to face Oklahoma on Saturday in an all-Big 12 regional final.

The Sooners got 26 points from Hollis Price, who added a season-high six 3-pointers as Oklahoma beat Arizona 88-67.

Missouri, ranked as high as No. 2 early in the season before slumping during conference play, hasn't been to the final eight since 1994.

Matt Barnes scored 16 of his 23 points in the second half for UCLA (21-12), which has reached the regional semifinals in five of six seasons under coach Steve Lavin, but won there just once.

The Bruins led much of the game, but wilted under the second-half pressure of Missouri's remarkable outside shooting.

UCLA was ahead 57-54 with 10 minutes to play, but Rush and Gilbert — who each hit four 3-pointers — propelled a 19-6 run that put it away before the final minutes.

Missouri's Clarence Gilbert reacts after hitting a 3-point shot against UCLA in the second half of an NCAA West Regional game in San Jose, Calif., Thursday.

12th-seeded Tigers beat UCLA 82-73 Thursday.

Third-seeded Arizona (24-10), which lost to Duke in last year's NCAA championship game, could not overcome the Sooners' tough defense or Price, whose accurate outside shooting kept Oklahoma in it early before a sustained second-half rally.

Jason Gardner, probably playing his last college game, led the Wildcats with 14 points. Luke Walton, the son of former UCLA and NBA great Bill Walton, had nine points and eight assists.

With Duke's loss to Indiana on Thursday, both participants in last season's final were knocked out within 30 minutes.

Aaron McGhee finished with 21 points and eight rebounds for Oklahoma, with 19 points in the final 7 minutes as the Sooners turned a close game into a blowout.

Fabulous freshman turns Texas program around

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — T.J. Ford winced after a tough practice Thursday.

It wasn't pain that wiped away the seemingly constant smile from one of college basketball's top freshmen.

That's always a concern, because Texas' star point guard has a nagging ankle sprain and a tender groin. He also has a spinal cord problem which has symptoms ranging from tingling and numbness in limbs to wrenching pain.

No health problem caused this look of dismay, though.

What made the 5-foot-10, 165-pound Ford guard grimace this time was the suggestion that the University of Texas will always be known as a football factory and not a hardwood haven.

"It's stereotyped as a football school because the football program's done better than basketball for so many years," Ford said. "Everybody just knows about it as a football school. But when I decided to go to Texas, I felt that Texas had a good basketball program."

And he wants to make it a great one.

"It's known as a football school. But it's going to equal out in a couple of years or so," Ford said.

He went right to work on his dream of transforming Texas from the land of 3 yards and a cloud of dust to a place for alley-oop dunks and daring drives to the basket.

in assists, at 8.5 per game, since the NCAA started tracking the statistic in 1983.

And Ford is the primary reason the sixth-seeded Longhorns (22-11) are sharing the stage at the Midwest Regional with perennial heavyweights Kansas and Illinois and the upstart Oregon Ducks, whom the Longhorns play tonight.

Ford has helped the 'Horns overcome the losses of Maurice Evans — last year's leading scorer, who left school early for the NBA — and Chris Owens — this year's leading scorer, who tore up his right knee in December.

Oregon coach Ernie Kent said it's hard to believe Ford is a freshman.

"He does play like a freshman. He plays beyond his years in terms of his understanding of the game," Kent said. "I've watched several tapes right now and every time you look at it, you come away thinking, 'My goodness, this is a really, really good basketball player.'"

Oklahoma 88, Arizona 67

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Superstition gave Price his new shards and Oklahoma is on target to advance.

Price, off target during the pregame warmups, had 26 points and a season-high six 3-pointers as Oklahoma beat Arizona 88-67 Thursday night in the West Regional semifinals.

"I've got a superstition. If I'm not hitting in warmups, I'll come in the locker room and wash my hands," Price said. "I came out with a new set of hands."

Second-seeded Oklahoma (30-4) heads to its first regional final since 1988, and will play Missouri in an all-Big 12 matchup. The

Southern Illinois enters unfamiliar territory

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The white banner in front of the scorer's table at every NCAA tournament site lists each team in bright red letters.

At the regional semifinals at Carrier Dome, one name jumps out — way out — Southern Illinois.

"People are saying, 'What the hell are they doing there?'" said Syracuse center Rolan Roberts said.

Coach Bruce Weber was asked about his team being among the final 16 with a shot at winning the national championship.

"I'm sure it's a surprise to a lot of people, except us," he said.

The 11th-seeded Salukis (28-7) play second-seeded Connecticut (26-6) in today's opening game, with top-seeded Maryland (28-4) fourth-seeded Kentucky (22-9) in the second game.

The winners meet Sunday and one of them will move on to the Final Four, a place Southern Illinois has never been. The other three have all been there within the last five seasons.

"It's been a hectic and exciting week with a lot of national attention," Weber said. "It's time to settle down, and if we're not we really could be in for a long night."

The Salukis, who tied for the regular-season title in the Missouri Valley Conference, beat Texas Tech in the opening round and rallied from a 19-point deficit to beat Georgia to advance to the round of 16 for the first time since the tournament expanded to 64 teams.

"We played as hard as we had all season last weekend," said Weber, a long-time assistant to Gene Keedy at Purdue. "But this isn't something that just happened."

The Salukis took Illinois down to the wire and beat Indiana 72-60 in going 1-1 with the Big Ten this season.

Junior guard Kent Williams averages 16 points to lead three double-figure scorers in the Salukis' three-guard offense.

As for Connecticut, it has won 11 straight games and is in the round of 16 for the eighth time under coach Jim Calhoun. The Huskies last won this far was 1999, when they won it all.

Is there a chance a team from the power league like the Big East could overlook a mid-major opponent this far into the tournament?

"There is always a concern with every coach about playing at a dark horse," Calhoun said.

"Does the name Georgia mean more to the kids? At first, yes. But when you go over the facts, as we always do, a 75-72 loss to Illinois and beating Indiana, Texas Tech and Georgia, hopefully that means a lot more."

The Huskies advanced with wins over Hampton and North Carolina State and behind the scoring and rebounding of sophomore forward Caron Butler, who had 55 points and 18 rebounds in the first two rounds.

Confidence has been the difference in Kentucky during this tournament. The Wildcats, who won the national championship in 1998 and reached the regional finals the next year, had an up-and-down season because of suspensions, injuries and players leaving the program.

A loss to South Carolina in the Southeastern Conference tournament quarterfinals left the impression the Wildcats wouldn't be a factor in the NCAAs.

"We had a meeting after that loss in the SEC tournament and everything since has been positive with everyone in the right direction," said senior forward Tayshaun Prince, who had 41 points in the second-round win over Tulsa.

Maryland is trying to get back to the Final Four for a second straight season. The Terrapins had to fight the distractions of playing in Washington, D.C., just 20 minutes from campus, in winning their first two games as a No. 1 seed.

All-American Juan Dixon led the Terrapins in wins over Siena and Wisconsin by averaging 29 points on 20-for-36 shooting.

Moberly (23-12) made 26-of-33 free throws, including two from Sharille Stewart, during the 65 seconds remaining in the game, to defeat Weatherford (28-6).

Jennifer Beamon led Moberly with 23 points.

Ricks (28-5) jumped out to a quick 12-2 lead early in the first half and held Southern Union (22-11) to 23.2 percent (16-69) shooting for the game.

Sheila Hutchison finished with 15 points for Ricks.

No. 5 seed Trinity Valley (30-3) led 40-37 at halftime then took over in the second half, leading by as many as 14 points in their victory over Copiah-Lincoln (26-4).

Louisburg (29-5) led 36-34 at halftime, but Vincennes (24-10) shot 64 percent (18-28) from the field in the second half to come back to the victory.

Chattanooga State (30-3), trailing 72-70 late in the second half, got a 3-pointer from Alicia Ransom as time expired to defeat Iowa Western (28-5). Chattanooga State hit 9-of-18 from beyond the three-point line for the game.

free. Moberly made 10-13 from the free throw line in the second overtime period to put the game out of reach.

St. Petersburg (27-6) trailed 45-34 at halftime and by as many as 22 points in the second half before battling back with a 17-0 run. Eric Dobson led the way, scoring nine of his team-high 22 points during the stretch to pull within three at 48-65. St. Petersburg eventually tied the game at 85 to send the game into overtime.

Allegheny (32-3) led Coastal Georgia (24-11) 38-31 at halftime before going on a 13-4 run. Allegheny built its lead to as many as 20 with under three minutes left.

Trello Galloway scored 17 points for Allegheny. Ben Butler scored a game-high 20 points for Coastal Georgia.

Arkansas-Fort Smith (26-7) led No. 7 South Plains (30-5) 48-23 at halftime, then went on a 22-4 run in the second half. The No. 20

Lions were up 79-39 with 7:22 left to play.

Women's tournament Ricks stays alive at women's national tourney

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — Top-seeded Northeastern Oklahoma A&M advanced to the semifinals with a 78-73 victory over Arizona Western Thursday in the national junior college women's basketball tournament.

In other games, Moberly, Mo. beat Weatherford, Texas 75-74, Ricks College of Idaho defeated Southern Union, Ala. 76-49, Trinity Valley, Texas defeated Copiah-Lincoln, Miss. 80-67, Vincennes, Ind. defeated Louisville, N.C. 83-77, and Chattanooga State defeated Iowa Western 75-72.

Northeastern Oklahoma (30-4) got a 3-point basket and four free throws from Pablana Lae in the final 10.8 seconds to defeat Arizona Western (32-2). Maria Villarroel led Northeastern Oklahoma with 23 points.

NCAA

By the end of the first half, the Hoosiers had more turnovers than field goals — 16-12. Despite shooting 52 percent, they trailed the Blue Devils 42-29.

Indiana outrebounded Duke 47-32, and outshot it 50 percent to 40.3.

Bottom line, we didn't get stops when we needed to," said Duke's Mike Dunleavy, who scored 17. Boozer led the Blue Devils with 19, and Williams had 15.

The loss, said Blue Devils coach Mike Krzyzewski, was disappointing, but not stunning.

"I coach a game where I know I can lose every time we go on the floor," Krzyzewski said.

Kent State 78, Pittsburg 73, OT

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kent State can't stop springing surprises. The 10th-seeded Golden Flashes played smothering defense and slowed the tempo at every opportunity Thursday night, defeating No. 3 Pittsburg 78-73 in overtime in the South Regional semifinals.

Kent State (30-5) had never advanced beyond the second round of the NCAA tournament before this year. Now it's one victory away from the Final Four after knocking off higher-seeded Oklahoma State, Alabama and Pittsburgh to stretch the country's longest winning streak to 21 games.

Antonio Gates scored 22 points, and Trevor Huffman added 17 for the Golden Flashes, who made six straight free throws in the extra period against the Panthers (29-6).

Kent State plays fifth-seeded Indiana in Saturday's regional final. The Hoosiers upended defending national champion and top-seeded Duke 74-73.

Brandin Knight, the Big East's co-player of the year, and Julius Page each scored 18 for the Panthers, who were trying to reach the final eight for the first time since 1974.

Women

Continued from D1 other game. The second game in the East has top-seeded Vanderbilt included fourth-seeded North Carolina.

The West Regional at Boise, Idaho, is a mini-Big 12 tournament. Conference champion Oklahoma, the No. 1 seed, plays league rival Texas Tech, seeded fourth. Third-seeded Colorado of the Big 12 takes on second-seeded Stanford in the other game.

BYU is just the third No. 11 seed to make it this far. The Cougars have done it under a first-year coach who played and coached at archrival Utah — he's still reviled in some quarters for jumping to BYU — and was the guy the Boston Celtics drafted after taking Bird.

The Cougars, 0-4 in the NCAA tournament before this year, already have won two games in Ames, beating sixth-seeded Florida and third-seeded Iowa State. Now his team faces what Jenkins considers the ultimate test: six-time national champion Tennessee. "There's no question that when you think women's basketball, you're thinking of Tennessee," Jenkins said. "They have the experience in these situations. That's a big edge for them."

Drake made the regional semifinals by upsetting second-seeded Baylor behind center Carla Bennett and clutch shooting by point guard Stephanie Schmitz, a skinny senior who's fond of Maggione's ice cream.

Old Dominion is in the regional semifinals for the 11th time, though getting there as a No. 7 seed isn't the norm for the Lady Monarchs, who won the national championship in 1985 and were second in 1997.

They felt they should have been seeded higher, so they're not surprised to still be playing. "I saw us hosting two games and getting to the Sweet 16," coach Wendy Little said. "I don't care how you get there, that's what I saw. I never did believe that this was a top 16 team."

MLB suspends Bowe; Durazo has surgery

Diamondbacks will be without first baseman for six weeks

The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies will miss manager Larry Bowe for one game once the season starts. The Arizona Diamondbacks will have to make due without Eurbiel Durazo for much longer.

Bowe was suspended for a game and fined Thursday because of his ejection during the first inning of a spring training game March 9.

Bob Watson, baseball's vice president of discipline, cited Bowe for "this inappropriate conduct toward the umpires before and after his ejection."

Bowe will be allowed to manage Philadelphia's opener at Atlanta on April 1, then will be suspended for the Phillies' next game, at Turner Field on April 3. He plans to appeal.

"I'll get my say," said Bowe, who wouldn't comment further. Durazo, Arizona's first baseman, will be sidelined for six weeks after surgery to remove a broken bone in his right wrist.

Durazo, the leading hitter in all of baseball this spring with a .535 average, was injured when he swung at and missed a pitch from Dave Lundquist in the sixth inning of Wednesday night's game against the San Diego Padres.

An MRI exam in Phoenix on Thursday showed the break.

This is the second injury to hit the World Series champions this spring. Third baseman Matt Williams is out at least until July with a broken ankle.

"We've talked all spring about our versatility," manager Bob Brenly said. "We thought it was going to be to cover just one position. Now it looks like we may have to cover a couple."

Durazo was leading all hitters this spring in average, slugging percentage (.1070), on-base percentage (.553) and total bases (46).

"He was doing so well," said Mark Grace, who was expecting to lose playing time to Durazo. "You hate to see anything like that."

Also Thursday, Cleveland and Atlanta made a trade, with the Indians acquiring backup catcher Eddie Perez from the Braves for a player to be named or cash.

The Indians had been looking for an experienced backup for Einar Diaz while Eddie Taubensee is sidelined for at least two months with a bad back.

"They need somebody and I need somebody," Perez said.

The 33-year-old Perez was one of about 15 catchers the Indians were keeping tabs on during spring training, Cleveland general manager Mark Shapiro said.

And Perez stood out because he was affordable, available and had an impeccable resume.

"He's caught some of the best pitchers in all baseball," Shapiro said of Perez, who was the personal catcher for four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux.

Arizona's Eurbiel Durazo gets congratulations from coach Eddie Rodriguez after a home run March 7 against Oakland. Durazo will be out six weeks after surgery on his wrist.

Giants GM: Evidence mounts against Kent

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. - San Francisco Giants second baseman Jeff Kent might have broken his wrist falling off a motorcycle, not while washing his truck as he claims, general manager Brian Sabean said.

There's mounting evidence from all sorts of eyewitnesses that says he fell off a motorcycle popping wheelies," Sabean said Wednesday.

The guarantee language in Kent's contract bans certain activities, including motorcycle riding, meaning the Giants could try to void the contract or fine him. The former NL MVP, who hopes to be playing by opening day, is in the option year of the deal, which would pay him $6 million.

A report in Wednesday's Arizona Republic, quoting police reports and eyewitness accounts, said Kent might have been injured on a road about a mile from the Giants' minor league training facility.

Kent originally reported the injury to the Giants on March 2, a day after he said he was hurt washing his truck. The Giants began investigating last Friday.

Salt Lake cauldron needs new home

SALT LAKE CITY - The angular glass-and-steel cauldron that held the Olympic flame needs a permanent home.

It currently stands at the south end of Rice-Eccles Stadium, where the Olympic opening and closing ceremonies were held. But long-term plans for the stadium mean it will have to be moved.

Exactly where remains to be decided, but the University of Utah and the Salt Lake Organizing Committee agree that decision will be made soon.

SLOC chief operating officer Fraser Bullock estimated it might take a month to work out details. But he is confident ongoing conversations will make sure the $2 million, 90-foot structure will be taken care of.

Threesome shares lead at TPC

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. - Phil Mickelson, Scott Hoch and Chris DiMarco were tied for the lead at 5-under par when play was suspended because of darkness in The Players Championship.

Play was delayed by rain for 2.5 hours on the Stadium Course on the TPC at Sawgrass, with 74 unable to finish the first round.

Defending champion Tiger Woods' bogey on No. 5 in near darkness left him at 1-under par through 14 holes, among 52 players under par. Two dozen of them were within three shots of the lead.

Six morning starters were tied for clubhouse lead at 3-under 69 - PGA champion David Toms, Mark Calcavecchia, Robert Allenby, Stuart Appleby, Steve Lowery and Jeff Sluman.

Mickelson, back from his jaunt up to Augusta National on Wednesday for a practice round, recovered from wild play early in the round with birdies on two of his final four holes to tie for the lead. He has seven holes left to play.

The group at 4 under included Nick Faldo, Steve Stricker and Jerry Kelly, the 54-hole leader last year.

ST. LOUIS - The 3-year-old son of former St. Louis Rams defensive tackle D'Marco Farr died in his sleep, St. Louis Children's Hospital said Thursday.

Grant Farr died Wednesday night, the hospital said in a statement requested by his parents. The brief statement said D'Marco and Cynthia Farr wanted the death to remain a "private matter."

Hospital spokeswoman Kay Franks said Thursday night that she could release no other details about the death. KSDK-TV in St. Louis reported that an autopsy was planned for Friday.

Farr, released by the Rams after the 2000-01 season, works for the Fox Sports network.

College grappler pursues history

ALBANY, N.Y. - Iowa State's Cael Sanderson pinned two opponents to remain on track for a perfect college record as the NCAA Wrestling Tournament opened Thursday.

Sanderson beat Clarion's Eric Mausser with a fall at 3:32, and planted Buffalo's Kyle Cerninara the same way in 6:33 in the second round for his 156th consecutive victory.

The 197-pound senior star took each man down and let him go repeatedly before rolling each on his back. By Saturday afternoon, he could become the first unbeaten collegiate wrestler to win four NCAA titles.

Lehigh sophomore Jon Trence, the second seed at 197 who lost 6-1 in Sanderson's closest match this year, pinned Marcio Botelho of Fresno State in 1:47 and Cornell's Matt Greenberg in 3:15.

Minnesota is the favorite and defending team champion. Oklahoma coach Jack Spates said the Golden Gophers would have to stumble to open the door for another team.

Oklahoma was the only other team to qualify wrestlers in all 10 weights, but also at 125 pounds, Cornell's Travis Lee pinned higher-seeded Sooner Matt Ridings in 6:52 in the second round.

Businessman will sell area spud plants

 By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

RUPERT - A Magic Valley businessman on Thursday announced plans to sell two potato-processing plants, in Rupert and Glenns Ferry, to an eastern Idaho manufacturer.

Roger L. Jones, a leader in Idaho's potato industry, reached an agreement of intent to sell Rupert's Magic Valley Foods Inc. and Glenns Ferry's Magic West Inc. - manufacturers of dehydrated potato products and individually quick-frozen potatoes - to Idahoan Foods of Lewisville.

The purchase price wasn't disclosed. The plants will continue to operate.

Jones said both the buyer and seller are listed among Idaho's Private 75, the state's largest privately held businesses.

The agreement incorporates all the assets - plants, trade names and Web site

- of the two Jones companies, said Ray Clement, president and chief executive of Idahoan Foods.

Idahoan Foods, maker of Idahoan-brand products, calls itself one of the largest producers of mashed potatoes in America.

"With this pending acquisition, we will be able to expand into other segments within the potato arena," Clement said.

Idahoan is a spuds-only business. "With the addition of the Magic Valley's plant, we can now expand our customer base," he said. "We're also excited about Magic West's frozen products. It, too, adds a new dimension to our portfolio of products."

The addition of Magic Valley and Magic West will fortify Idahoan Foods' institutional and industrial business and add Mr. Spud, Idaho Naturally and several private labels to its portfolio, the Lewisville company said.

Douglas Jones, Roger Jones' son and marketing director for Magic Valley Foods and related companies, said he expects the sale to go ahead within the next month. Idahoan Foods isn't sure how quickly it will proceed and hopes to close the sale in two to four months, said Rodney Roberts, chief financial officer.

Family business

The sale won't end the Jones family's decades-long involvement in Magic Valley agriculture.

Roger Jones, a 1961 University of Idaho graduate, began his career as sales manager of Rolland Jones Potatoes, founded by his father half a century ago. He became president upon his father's death in 1974.

The Jones businesses are vertically integrated across the potato business, a press release said.

Fiorina's challenge

Hewlett-Packard chief faces daunting task in pulling off merger

The Associated Press

PALO ALTO, Calif. - Hewlett-Packard Co. chief Carly Fiorina jettied all over the country, talked herself hoarse and looks to have just barely won the brutal proxy fight over her $20 billion acquisition of Compaq Computer Corp.

Her next steps appear to be even more difficult. Fiorina has to persuade thousands of uneasy employees to pull off the biggest merger in the history of computing - an industry notoriously unkind to complex combinations like this - without a clear mandate from investors.

She has almost no room for error. Even before Fiorina snuffed the high-tech war with the Compaq plans in September, some analysts were growing impatient with her for misting several final targets.

"She took all the failed promises and lumped them all into one big bet, and it worked," said analyst Martin Reynolds, a vice president at Garmer Inc. "All that will be forgotten if this works, and it will all weigh heavily against her if she struggles."

Fiorina was unavailable for comment after declaring a "slim but sufficient" victory in Tuesday's HP shareholder vote. Fiorina, 47, who is married with two stepdaughters, took most of the week off to unwind from the grueling merger campaign and be with her family.

The opposition camp put HP's margin at less than 1 percentage point, but the company - a major Idaho employer - refused to discuss the number. It will take up to three weeks for the results to be certified.

People who know Fiorina caution against underestimating her in this next round.

As she showed in the Compaq fight, challenging Wall Street to rethink its general opposition to the deal, battling dissenting board member Walter Hewlett and lobbying investors to support her even up to the last minute, Fiorina is tenacious and resilient.

"She's a warrior at heart," said Jeff Christian, the headhunter who brought Fiorina to HP in 1999 from Lucent Technologies Inc., where she ran a major division. "You tell her you can't do something or it's never been done before - she's going to figure out a way to do it."

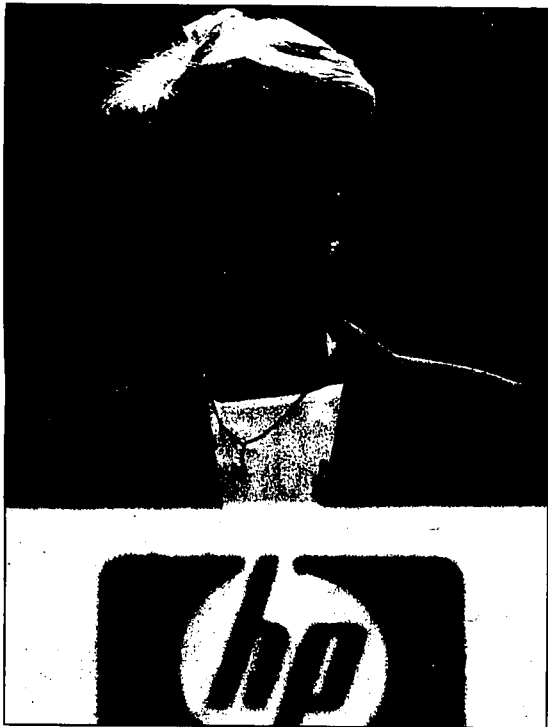

It was inevitable that Fiorina would make waves at the week off and be with her family.

Not only is she the first outsider to lead the $45 billion computer and printer giant. She also was given the difficult task of centralizing its sprawling organization, which had failed to capitalize on the Internet boom. Fiorina's marketing savvy and polish were relatively new forces in HP's shirt-sleeved, engineering culture.

Any feelings of discomfort that employees had were amplified by the attacks on Walter Hewlett during the proxy fight and the looming merger, which means even faster and deeper changes at the company - an 15,000 layoffs.

In fact, several employees who spoke to The Associated Press did so only on condition their names not be used, fearing Fiorina might use their comments against them when jobs are cut.

Trusting Fiorina is not easy for many of them. For example, some complain that when she Hewlett-Packard Company chief executive Carly Fiorina smiles during a news conference Tuesday in Cupertino, Calif. Fiorina claimed victory in Tuesday's bitter proxy battle to buy Compaq Computer Corp., and now has to pull off a major merger without a clear mandate from investors.

famously promised analysts that HP's sales would grow 15 percent in 2001 - they ended up falling 7 percent - she was already telling employees the slumping economy would make the year tough and raises would be delayed.

That credibility gap became apparent at HP's shareholder vote Tuesday, which was heavily attended by current and former employees.

When one man asked Fiorina how she planned to deal with low morale, since independent polls found that two-thirds of employees at three separate sites opposed the Compaq deal, she dismissed the findings and cited internal surveys that showed widespread support.

That prompted boos and jeers. Fiorina responded: "I didn't say retirees." More boos ensued, and Fiorina, looking like a teacher fed up with kids talking in the back of class, admonished: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is a fact, based on our surveys."

To be sure, leaving and unhappy employees are not representative of HP's entire work force of 88,000.

"I think Carly's shown a lot of leadership since she's been here," said Michelle Proper, an analyst in HP's handheld-computer division who supports the Compaq deal even though she believes it threatens her job.

"She's just not afraid to voice her opinions, she has a strategy, she's able to get people behind her, and she's a very intelligent person."

HP is counting on Houston-based Compaq's expertise in business computing to help it provide comprehensive technology packages.

For Fiorina to fend off her critics, the Compaq deal needs to deliver results as soon as possible. One key test will be whether HP can generate enough cost savings without cutting so aggressively that revenues suffer too much.

Consequently, Fiorina needs to convince her biggest detractors it's in their best interest to help the deal succeed, said Paul Hirsch, a professor at Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management.

"If the employees help her get it done, the market will reward them. If they continue to resist it, they're all going to get hurt," Hirsch said.

Shilo Inns files Chapter 11 for two more hotels

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - The Shilo Inn Suites in Twin Falls is unaffected by bankruptcy filings elsewhere in the Portland, Ore.-based hotel chain and probably will remain that way, a Shilo Inns executive said Thursday.

"I think very likely this will never be an issue in Twin Falls," said Jim McCulloch, the chain's chief operating officer.

The chain, owned by Mark Hemstreet, is having a disagreement with its lender that holds loans on a variety of Shilo Inns. McCulloch said. As a defensive posture, the chain is selectively filing Chapter 11 reorganization plans for some of those hotels, he said.

The corporate-owned Twin Falls property is not in that group; it has a different lender, he said.

"The Twin Falls Shilo Inn is doing very well, even though we are in a very difficult market, probably the most difficult market in the hospitality industry's history," McCulloch said.

A husband and wife, Jim and Florine Harris, manage the Twin Falls hotel.

"We have always valued our relationship in the smaller markets," McCulloch said, "and Twin Falls is one of the smaller markets that we feel we fit very well in, because we're a family-oriented company."

Hemstreet on Wednesday placed two more of his Shilo Inns into Chapter 11 bankruptcy, citing a slump in the hospitality industry following the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11.

"I didn't factor Osama bin Laden into my business plan," Hemstreet said.

Martha Stewart speaks; Kmart boss lists

Knight Ridder News Service

DETROIT - Martha Stewart has told millions of Americans how to decorate for the holidays, set the perfect table, prune a rose bush, organize a cluttered closet and whip up the ultimate merger. Now she's advising Kmart's top executive - and James Adamson is listening.

"I appreciate her guidance and counsel. I can only see her strengthening in this company and continuing to be more and more valuable," Adamson, Kmart's chief executive and chairman of the board, said recently.

Adamson said he's gotten to know Stewart "quite well" in the weeks since the Troy, Mich.-based company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization Jan. 22. Kmart has Twin Falls and Burley stores, the latter set for closure.

Through a spokeswoman, Adamson said he and James Adamson are listening.

Suprema Specialties gets approval for Chapter 7 bankruptcy

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - A judge approved a New Jersey cheese company's bid to enter Chapter 7 bankruptcy, three months after its stock started trading at several inquiries began into its financial records.

Suprema Specialties Inc., based in Paterson, N.J., has laid off almost all of its 270 employees - including all 26 at its Blackfoot plant - and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy last month. But a group of banks that had loaned the company $130 million refused to keep the operations running.

Suprema, whose cheeses sold under the Suprema di Avellino brand name, has been under a cloud of controversy after its chief financial officer, Steven Venechanos, resigned Dec. 21 and its stock was halted from trading by the Nasdaq Stock Market. Company shares last traded Dec. 21 at $13 each, and the stock was delisted March 1.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, the FBI and the company are all conducting inquiries. The Food and Drug Administration has also embargoed $45 million of cheese to test its content.

Suprema, a maker of mozzarella, ricotta, provolone, parmesan and romano cheeses, was named one of the 200 best small companies by Forbes magazine last year, when it had $420 million in sales. In November, it reported a 60 percent increase in first-quarter income to $143 million.

Late rally helps Wall Street avoid big loss

NEW YORK (AP) - Investors locked in profits from blue chips for a second straight session Thursday, selling on concerns about rising interest rates. But cautious bargain hunting, which increased gradually throughout the afternoon, allowed the tech sector a solid advance and saved the Dow industrials from a triple-digit loss incurred in earlier trading.

Investors have conflicted emotions about the economy. While investors believe the economy is strengthening, they are worried that interest rates will rise before business fully improves. The Dow closed down 21.73, or 0.2 percent, at 10,478.84, an improvement over an earlier, 146.83-point loss. The Dow dropped 133.68 Wednesday.

not going to choke off an expansion." The broader market finished higher. The Nasdaq composite index rose 35.96, or 2.9 percent, to 1,868.83 after falling 48 on Wednesday. The Standard & Poor's 500 index advanced 1.74, or 0.2 percent, to 1,153.59.

concerns stemmed from the Fed hinting of that possibility on Tuesday. The Fed, which left rates unchanged Tuesday, made 11 such cuts last year to stimulate the economy and end the first recession in more than a decade. Now, the central bank is concerned that the recovery might come too fast.

blow was a smaller-than-expected increase in the Philadelphia Federal Reserve's business index, considered a harbinger for the national economy. The index's reading for March was 11.4, indicating expansion but missing the 16 analysts expected. Meanwhile, the Labor Department Report said consumer inflation rose a mild 0.2 percent in February. And, the Conference Board said its index of leading economic indicators remained flat in February.

Strength of economy came as surprise to Fed officials

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Reserve at its first meeting this week decided to leave interest rates unchanged, halting an aggressive string of rate cuts. Members expressed surprise at how strong economic growth appeared to be, according to minutes of the meeting released Thursday. Fed policy-makers also discussed shifting their statement of possible future actions to a neutral stance, but made no change because of concerns it might disrupt financial markets.

Members shaken by the terrorist attacks. While the Fed in December was still concerned about a deepening downturn, policy-makers showed more optimism in January, the minutes show. "Members commented that the recent information was more positive than they had anticipated and seemed on the whole to indicate that economic activity was bottoming out and a recovery might already be under way," minutes of the closed-door discussions show. The committee supported the decision to leave the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, at a 40-year low of 1.75 percent.

companies whose operations are based in Minidoka County, RJ Trucking and Farming Inc., also based in Rupert, moves potatoes between growers and plants, and between fresh-pack plants and processing plants, and removes plants' byproducts, Douglas Jones said. Those companies and Magic Valley Foods are not included in the sale. After the purchase, Roger Jones will serve as a consultant to Idahoan and continue to farm around Glenns Ferry, his statement said. The two-plant sale will let him focus more on two other businesses he bought in recent years - Carmela Winery in Glenns Ferry, and Quilteer Produce, a Boise food-service distributor of fruits and vegetables throughout southern Idaho. Roger Jones will also continue as majority owner and chairman of Magic Miles Limited, a Meridian export trading company which has been the international sales representative for Magic Valley Foods. He said he'll serve in a similar capacity for Idahoan. Magic West is almost exclusively making flakes for Pringles chips, Douglas Jones said. Magic Valley Foods is designed to make a variety of potato flakes, meeting many specifications.

make dehydrated potato profitable, Douglas Jones said. So Magic Valley Foods in Rupert and Magic West in Glenns Ferry have been running on a limited basis since when they have had spud supplies, he said. That practice will continue until the sale is completed. He was unable to specify how many layoffs occurred; some workers have been on the job about a month at the two plants, he said. A plant slowdown isn't uncommon when spud prices are so high, Douglas Jones said. "We may have been slowing down a little more than most,"

he said. Meanwhile, the Rolland Jones Potatoes plant in Rupert is idled but could be up and running in five days if it procures potatoes at an acceptable price, Douglas Jones said. "Our business is responding to markets," he said. "We don't say we're shut down for the season. We don't want to be shut down for the season. We want to be able to respond to opportunities as they come up."

Kmart

Stewart declined an interview.
Gerald Meyers, a professor of organizational behavior at the University of Michigan Business School, says Stewart and Adamson, says Stewart can help Kmart a better job displaying its merchandise and sprucing up its stores.

The national chain is known as much for its tired-looking aisles and disorganized shelves as it is for the Martha Stewart sheets and towels it sells by the truckload.

"She's an outstanding presenter of products and herself, and I'm sure that she is telling Kmart they have to be outstanding presenters of themselves and their products to the public," Meyers says.

But does Stewart want to be a paid consultant to Kmart? Meyers thinks not.

"She has bigger things in mind," he says. "She has a bigger game than trying herself up as a fattening company any more than she has."

Meyers says Kmart should be heading Stewart and believes Adamson is taking her advice to heart. He calls Adamson someone who will "take a good idea wherever it comes from."

Kathleen Heaney, an analyst with Bream Murray & Company Inc., says Stewart is a hands-on and is probably talking with Kmart about store displays, advertising and product assortment.

"She really is an active partner in a business, I think she's working closely with the CEO's important to her," Heaney says.

Stewart first hooked up with Kmart in 1987, when she became the company's entertainment and lifestyle spokeswoman.

A decade later, Kmart began carrying an exclusive line of Martha Stewart bed and bath products.

Kitchen textiles and window treatments, garden tools and patio furniture, bath linens and nursery basics, cookware and cutlery, and a home organization line followed. Next up this fall: holiday merchandise.

Kmart sold $1.6 billion in Martha Stewart Everyday products in 2001. The retailer had total sales of $37 billion in 2000, the most recent figure available.

Heaney estimates that Stewart's relationship with Kmart generates annual revenue of about $28 million for her company, Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia Inc. That is 9 percent of total revenue for Omnimedia.

Kmart considers Stewart key to its reorganization. The company was forced into Chapter 11 when it ran out of cash to pay its bills - including $12.3 million in royalty payments and other expenses owed Stewart.

Kmart lawyers told U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Susan Peterson Stewart that she wanted to maintain its licensing agreements with Kmart and other sources of exclusive name-brand merchandise, including Disney and Joe Blow.

The Martha Stewart line has been named as the most recognized brand for home furnishings, Kmart told the court.

Kmart says its strategy for survival in a discount world dominated by Wal-Mart, Target and other big retailers is to become "the destination for what moms value by being her authority for her home and kids."

"Kmart intends to accomplish this goal by continuing its profitable relationships with certain popular national brands, like Martha Stewart Everyday," Kmart told the court.

Stewart has said she would be named by Kmart for the "foreseeable future."

bankruptcy protection for another 21 of his hotels next week, also filed for bankruptcy and "reckless" overbuilding by competing hotel chains.

In all, 27 of the 46 Shilo Inns will be covered by the filing for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 bankruptcy law.

Henstret is attorney William Summers said, four of which with individual legal status filed for protection March 13.

Henstret built Shilo into a major force among West Coast lodging chains, with 11 hotels in nine states. The advocate and key financier of conservative political causes vowed that his hotels will emerge from bankruptcy, and that his political and charitable work will go on as before.

Henstret said he will keep his promise to provide $125,000 for a potentially lifesaving lung-cystic fibrosis patient in McMinnville, Ore.

Shilo Inn, Portland/205 and Shilo Inn, Richland LLC, owner of the Shilo hotel in Richland, Wash., were the two hotel companies entering bankruptcy Wednesday.

The Richland Shilo estimated its assets at $1 million and total debts at $50 million and $100 million. The Richland Shilo estimated its assets at $1 million and total debts at $50 million and $100 million.

The hotels will remain open, though a handful eventually may be sold, Summers said. Lawyers for Shilo and creditors worked on a tentative interim operating plan to help the hotel's U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Elizabeth Parris.

Henstret, who has no plans to file for personal bankruptcy, said it remains "business as usual" at Shilo.

"This was a prudent business decision to protect the employees and preserve the assets," he said. "We look forward to successfully working through this process."

Stewart plans to gut it out at Bristol

Driver fights lingering effects of last week's crash

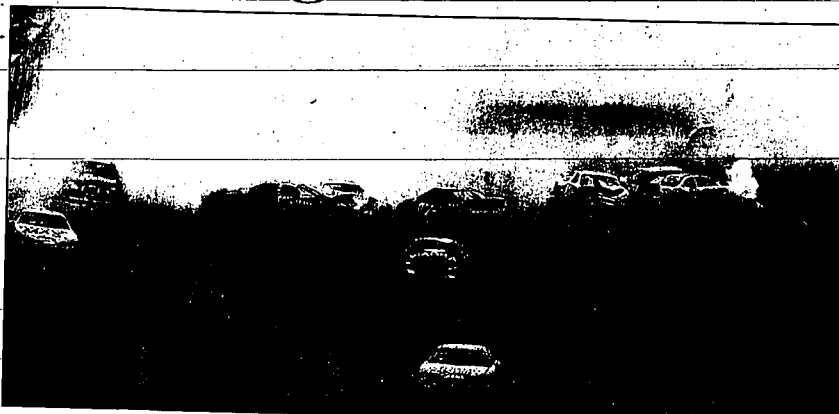

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Tony Stewart walked gingerly Thursday, careful not to strain his tender back. With a race at his favorite track looming, he could take no chances.

"I'm pretty sore," Stewart said. "The doctor ordered rest, but there's not a lot of time for that."

Stewart, injured in a wreck last week, plans to qualify his Pontiac today for the Food City 500 at Bristol Motor Speedway, a physically demanding race track that he's always been fond of. But after a few laps around the 533-mile bullring, he might change his mind.

After Sunday's crash at Darlington Raceway, Stewart spent one night in the hospital because of lower back pain. He's been on painkillers all week, but is weaning himself off of them to be sharp in his race car.

"I'm just hoping the pain will go away a little more than it has by the weekend," he said. "Each day has been a little better, but I'm, pretty stiff. This is a demanding track and you never get to relax here."

Cars collide coming out of turn two at the Carolina Dodge Dealers 400 at Darlington Speedway Sunday in Darlington, S.C.

Stewart has long considered Bristol his favorite race track because it reminds him of his early days when he was tearing up the short tracks in the Midwest. But it took him some time to find success here — he finally cracked the winner's circle last August in the night race — to raise his average finish in six Bristol races to 15th.

"Bristol is similar to Winchester (Ind.) and Salem (Ind.), places where I always ran well in the open-wheel cars," he said. "It's just a half-mile track and I like tracks that size — especially with the banking Bristol has. I seem to be better on the high-banked tracks, anyway."

Others love Bristol, too. Elliott Sadler won the only race of his Winston Cup career when he picked up a victory here last March for Wood Brothers Racing.

"Bristol is heaven on earth," he said. "I know people might think I'm saying that because I won there, but it has always been like that for me. I tell every fan that Bristol is the place he should go to watch a race. It's the best place in the world."

Sadler won last year's race despite starting on a provisional in a backup car and pitting on the backstretch. He did it by running 162 laps on his final set of tires in a track-position gamble that paid off.

He heads to Bristol after finishing second in Sunday's Dodge 400 at Darlington, his second runner-up finish of the season. As good as those runs felt, however, nothing compares to last year's win at Bristol.

"I don't think you can put into words what your first win means," Sadler said. "When I made that left-hand turn to go up the hill in left-hand turn to go up the Wood Brothers there with smiling faces ... it was pretty cool."

CREW OF THE WEEK

Going from last to first is tough at any track, but particularly at Darlington Raceway, NASCAR's toughest track.

Not only did Lee McCall oversee a pit crew that performed exceptionally well, but he made the decision to change the engine in Sterling Martin's Dodge on the day before the race.

The result? Martin was able to become the season's first two-time winner.

Fan Tips

Bill Fleishman and Al Pearce have written and compiled a great handbook for fans. The Unauthorized NASCAR Fan Guide 2002 (Vineyard Ink, $24.95). Kyle Petty wrote the foreword.

It's a great combination of excellent writing and the kind of facts and records that every fan needs access to in order to fully appreciate the sport. It's unfortunate that NASCAR's official publications do not provide the record-keeping expertise that is routinely provided from independent, but informed, sources.

- HOT: Sterling Martin, two wins and top 10 finishes in every race to date.
- NOT: Tony Stewart, from victory lane to the hospital in one eventful week.

Elliott Sadler

Winston Cup Series

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

Elliott Sadler is off to the best start in his career, posting two top fives in the first five races. He finished second Sunday at Darlington, S.C.

Fast start

is a contender

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

Elliott Sadler is a native Virginian driving for the commonwealth's most famous race team.

It now looks as if Sadler, who won his first Winston Cup race a year ago, is on the verge of bringing the Wood Brothers back to the success of previous years. The team has won 97 races over the years.

Sadler finished second at Darlington, his second top-five finish of the year.

Sadler is from a racing family. His brother, Hermie, was once rookie of the year in the Busch Series.

After an uneven start, Sadler's 2001 victory at Bristol Motor Speedway was the first for his team since a Morgan Shepherd victory at Atlanta Motor Speedway in 1993. The team had never won at Bristol until Sadler's victory there.

Age: 26 (will turn 27 on April 30)
Hometown: Emporia, Va.
Crew chief: Pat Tryson
Car No. 21 Motorcraft Ford Taurus, owned by Wood Brothers Racing
Career statistics: 110 starts, one win, four top-10 finishes, 9 poles, over $7.2 million in earnings
First: Start, (May 24, 1998, at Concord, N.C.), pole (none), win (March 25, 2001, at Bristol, Tenn.)

How does it feel to do so well at Darlington? "That's a real good feeling. I think the Wood Brothers have been to victory lane eight times here, but Sterling (Marlin) and those guys had their stuff together on long runs, and I knew that. ... We had great pit stops, great calls ... it was a fun day."

Are you starting to pull it together? "I hope so. This is a stretch of three good racetracks. We love it here, we love Bristol, and we love Texas. So this is a fortune of good things to come."

"This is great momentum going into Bristol, a place we think we can really win the race at. This is the momentum we need for that racetrack."

Isn't it true that you almost didn't bring this car to Darlington? "We have to carry this car to Texas, so they warned me before the race started. We actually had a car loaded up here Thursday and my car owner, Eddie Wood, decided to back it off and bring this car. This is definitely my favorite car and it always has been. So instead of saving it for Texas, we decided to bring it here and it paid off. I'm just proud of my guys for making that decision. This is the most fun I've had in a long time. To run in the top five like that all day long at Darlington was pretty fun. I had a great time."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Life is made up of constant calls to action, and we seldom have time for more than hastily contrived answers."

— Learned Hand

Sit in today's East chair, review the bidding, and test your reasoning powers. West leads low. Should you keep your ace to capture dummy's king, or should you win immediately and switch to diamonds?

When South plays a low heart from dummy at trick one, it is usually best for East to retain his ace to capture dummy's king. Is this a typical situation? What should East's thoughts be?

South certainly has the heart queen. Both his bidding and his play confirm that. East's high cards and South's bidding also confirm that South has club strength and either the spade king or the diamond ace.

If South has the spade king, he will win his heart queen and make game easily if East ducks the heart ace. South will win five spades, a heart and at least three minor-suit winners. If South has the diamond ace instead, he can take repeated finesses in spades to win at least nine tricks.

The most reasonable chance for East is to hope West has the diamond ace. After taking his heart ace at trick one, East must shift to his diamond four, not the king! West wins his ace and returns the suit, and the defenders collect five quick winners.

What happens if East shifts to the diamond king at trick two? The suit blocks, the defenders cannot cash their four diamond winners, and South runs off with his unmakeable game.

ANSWER: Three diamonds, non-forcing. The double suit fit, two 10s and 10 HCP make a two-diamond preference an inadequate choice.
