High court-ruling could reopen Thomas murder case

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It took only in few seconds for Steven Louder to be shot to death on Nov. 14, 1997. The case against the man convicted of his murder and sentenced to die for it might still drag on.

It's almost certain that Jimmie Vurel Thomas, 58, will never again live as a free man. But a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling could once again wrench open the case against him.

"There is little or no doubt that the sentence will be vacated," said Twin Falls attorney Lynn Dunlap, who defended who defended Thomas dur-ing his 1999 first-degree murder trial.

A jury after that trial ruled that Thomas had in fact dri-ven to the hau to en to en e of and killed him with four shots from a large-caliber revolver. And District Judge Monte Carlson on Aug. 19, 1999, sen-tenced Thomas to die.

Trail of violence

At the time of the murder, Thomas was on the lam from a kidnapping case—for which he was convicted and sentenced to 40 years in prison. Prosecutors argued successfully that Thomas on Oct. 14, 1996, had kidnapped another of his ex-wife's boyfriends – Michael W. Phillips of Kimberly – at'gunpoint and forced him to drive to a remote area. It was only by wrestling the gun away from Thomas and kick-ing him out of his truck that Phillips survived, prosecutors said.

Phillips survived, proceedings and.
But Thomas's history of violence might have gone back even further. At the time of his arrest in connection with Louder's murder, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said records show Thomas was tried in 1978 in Jan Joaquin, County, Calift, in connection with the 1977 shooting death of George

Flooding forces more evacuations

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas – From the air Sunday, Gov. Rick Perry saw first-hand the devastation days of torrential rain have brought to central and southern Texas houses surrounded by a sea of colling, muddy water, uprooted trees and the ball the same of the same of the ball the same of the same houses Sunday as it flowed toward the Gulf of Mexico.

"The devastation is extensive," the governor said after his helicopter tour. "Obviously when the water goes down we're going to see the impact on residential property is going to be substantial." About 160 miles to the north, residential property is going to be substantial around homes and businesses as water rushed through downtown. Lake Brownwood was 7.65 feet above its spillway Sunday and was expected to crest overnight a foot or more higher. The flooding has been blamed for eight deaths and tens of millions of dollars in property damage. In some places, the rivers have crested as high as 28 feet above flood stage.

Perry said he would seek federal aidfor 17 counties: President Bush hasalready declared 13 Texas counties federal disaster areas.

Also Sunday, forecasters said the first tropical depression of the season couldbe forming in the Gulf of Mexico with the potential for additional rain in Texas.

The American Red Cross said preliminary damage assessments show at least 48,000 residences have been affected by the flooding.

"That could be things with very minor damage or someone who lost an entire dwelling," said Margaret O'Brien-Molina, a Red Cross spokeswoman.
Severe flooding hit the Abilene area following an unexpected storm that dumped a foot of rain Saturday. Most evacuees began returning to waterlogged homes Sunday.

Meanwhile in Brownwood, about 75 miles southeast of Abilene, about 3 feet of water lapped up against dozens of motels, restaurants, drugstores and shopping centers.

Even so, the fact that Judge Carlson, not a jury, handed down the death penalty could make the sentence irrelevant, according to ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court this year.

In a decision centered around an Arizona death penalty case, the high court last month ruled that only a jury or panel of judges, not a lone judge, could into the court of the penalty sentence somebody to the most cases.

Officials at first worried that the decision could bust open the cases against all-22 death row inmates in Idaho, Legal wran-ating now agarwating and mitiinmates in Idaho. Legal wran-pling over aggravating and miti-gating factors – the true crux of the Arizona case – means that only Thomas's case and five oth-ers in Idaho are truly called into question, said Idaho Attorney General's Office spakesman Bob Cooper. Even so, with Thomas almost certain to die of old age in prison anyway, will the state and, defense attorneys bother to face off over his case?

Probably, said Rolf Kehne, head of the capital litigation unit of the Idaho State Appellate Public Defender's Office.

Tor one thing, Thomas to this day insists he's innocent in Louder's murder and claims he didn't get an adequate defense during his trial, Kehne said.

"I expect this case will just go the normal course of capital cases as he fights the issue of his innocent or guilt." Kehne said.

But whatever lappens with his guilt or innocence, the Ring vs. Arizona (Supreme Court) decision clearly calls for a resentencing in his case."

Census: Grandparents raise kids WTC aid remains

THURMONT, Md. (AP) —
Hunched on the living room floor in front of a Lego set, 5-year-old Michael Simmons turned and waved at his grandmother. "Look, Grandma," he said, holding a newly built toy in hand. Pat Owens smiled and nodded approvingly." With Michael's parents out of his life, the 59-year-old Owens has joined the more than 2.4 million grandparents found by the 2000 census to be primary caregivers to a grandchild.

It was the first time the once-a-child.

It was the first time the once-adecade count tracked such living arrangements.

The closest the census had come in the past to addressing this issue was to estimate the percentage of children under 18 living to a constant of the country o centage of children under 18 living in a grandparent-headed home. That was 6.3 percent in 2000, companed with 5.5 percent in 1990, 3.6 percent in 1990, 3.6 percent in 1980 and 3.2 percent in 1970.

That data, however, did not cover how many of those grandparents were the main caregivers for their grandchildren.

"It was one thing after another," said George Burgess, director of the University of Florida's International Shark Attack File.

"You couldn't make a made-for-TV movie with all that happening without people saying, This isn't real, it's not believable."

The attack, which nearly-drained Jessie of blood and also took a large chunk of his right thigh, left him brain-damaged. He recognizes people, seems alert and smiles, doctors say. Street, investors are suffering through another round of corporate accounting scanduls and stock market blues. On Main Street, things may be looking up. Private economists are predicting solid growth for the second half of this year after a roller coaster opening six months.

The optimism is based on a belief that consumers, bolstered by low mortage rates and interest-free auto financing, will keep spending, especially if forecasts of a declining jobless rate come true. It is a view at odds with all the recent gloom in financial markets. The power of the consumer of t

The investor worries have not been helped by the numerous government warnings of terrorist

Inkster upends Sorenstam in U.S. Open

The Associated Press

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — On a Prairie Dunes course where her she first made a name for herself 22 years ago, Juli Inkster turned in a career-defining performance Sunday to beat Annika Sorenstam and win the U.S. Women's Open.

Inkster closed with a 4-under 66, matching the lowest final round score by an Open champion, for a two-stroke victory. It was her seventh major, most among active players.

This one might have been the sweetest of all.

TWIN FALLS — The Community Education Center at the College of Southern Idaho will offer tennis classes for children through the month of July.

In the College for Kids tennis clinics, students of all ages will receive the opportunity to learn about tennis and improve their game with tennis professional Doug Kaut, who is a PTR Certified Instructor.

The youth clinics will include positive approach instruction on basic stroke development, hand-eye coordination skills, structured drills, and fun and challenging games.

Clinics are limited to eight participants to allow for more one-on-one instruction, so early registration is a must.

Clinics will take place on Tuesdays and Thursdays starting July 11. Cost is $35.

For more information or to register, call 733-9554, Ext. 2290.

amino to Democrats The Republican Party may have just shot itself in the foot and gave a lot of ammunition to the Democrats because of term limits. Term limits are not unconstitutional. We've had term limits since shortly after the death of President Roosevelt right after World War II. The Congress of the United States passed a law which said the president could serve no more than two fobryear errms. That was the start of term limits, which is still in existence today.

The platform committee should have tried to address this issue by saying term limits should be the opinion of local dires, counties and state. The Democrats will now say this proves the Republicans only want term limits for the Democrats. However, there are quite a few Democrats that think there should be some consideration for term limits.

The Sacramento plaintiff who petitioned the 9th Circuit is a case in point He had recently filed a lawsuit against President Bush for permitting prayers to be spoken at his inauguration. For years, the Supreme Court has wrestled with the question of religion in public life, and has issued a series of contradictory rulings.

But a series of community rulings.

But the Cleveland voucher case suggests that clarity is on the way. One of the principal arguments against the program was that taxpayer funds would go to parochial schools - in effect, a government subsidy, or endors ment, of religion. The country decided otherwise. You've heard it before: Eat a varied, low-fat diet; exercise; lose weight if you're overweight. These are key lifestyle steps heart-health gurus say we need to take, short of using medications, to lower cholesterol.—But familiar or not, each can be achallenge, as countless Americans know.

It may help to realize that each It may help to realize that each of these steps can have an independent impact. For instance, scientists say exercise appears to help lower cholesterol independently of diet changes or weight loss (though a united front works best). Walking just 30 minutes a day is better than nothing, experts say, though it may take more than that to have major effect.

Weight loss also can have a cho-lesterol-lowering impact that's independent of diet and exercise. Diet changes, however, get top billing for beating down cholesterol. Following are a few diet tips-from experts to get you started.

Convention

- Consult a diet professional, such as a registered dietitian, if possible, to work out a personalized eating plan. Many hospitals have nutritional clinics. A doctor's referral may help you obtain insur-

 Read food labels.
- · Load up on vegetables, fruit, whole grain foods (wheat bread, brown rice, oatmeal, etc.) and legumes (beans, lentils, peas).

- Discover low-fat toppings and dressings such as salsa, marinara sauce, low-fat or nonfat yogurt and low-fat commercial dressings.
- · Switch from full-fat dairy prod _ucts_such_as_whole_milk_to_nonfat or low-fat ones, such as skim milk and low-fat cheese.

When it comes to walking, the magic number is 10,000 – steps, that is. Walk that many each day, experts say, and you're well on your way to fitness.

The idea has been around since the 1950s, says Prevention walking editor Maggie Spilner. It was a Japanese public-health concept that has recently developed a second wind.

OK, steps. Let's see ... 20 from bedroom to kitchen. Uh, only 2,980 to go, Here's 1,000 around the block, plus an extra 100 cross to date hello to the neighbor. Plus 2,000 stopping at Super Target.

That brings our step count up to 3,120. Humun.

Actually, that's about 1.5 times the 2,000 steps taken by the average sedentary person, Spiller says.

Lest you lose count of your age security person, or says.

Lest you lose count of your steps and perhaps overestimate their number, Spilner suggests investing in a pedometer.

You can find them at sporting good and discount stores or through catalogs and Web sites. They range from the simple step-counters to more claborate fare replete with heart monitors and ealorie counters. replete with ne calorie counters.

replete with heart monitors and caloric counters.

"The benefit of counting steps rather than miles is that the increment is so small," she says. "People can stay motivated all day long by checking their pedometer. Walking in the parting lot, taking the stairs – all these lifestyle steps count."

After you wear the pedometer for a week or so, bump up your steps by 20 percent each week, she says. If you want to lose weight as well as stay fit, you'll probably need to walk up to 20,000 steps.

"There are genetic factors that predispose some people to heart disease." Kemp said. "And it can happen at an early age." Kyle's father died of a stroke at 43, and although the pitcher was subjected to standard diagnostic procedures during regular medical exams, they might not have been enough to reveal the problem.

ical exams, they might not mass been enough to reveal the prob-lem.

The problem was that Kyle's heart was enlarged and his corn-nary arteries were 80 to 90 per-cent blocked, a predisposition he likely inherited. A piece of plaque, or the fatty substance that lines coronary arteries, prob-ably broke off and blocked the blood flow to the heart, causing a miocardial infarction – a heart attack – that killed Kile in his sleep.

"A standard EKG, if he had "A standard EKG, if he had one, probably wouldn't show any probably wouldn't show any probably wouldn't show any said. "It would take at least a stress test."

A treadmill stress test is the most common way to assess arterial blood flow, but it's not considered a good predictor of heart disease for people who are in generally good health because the test produces a high rate of false positives. And the gold standard of heart testing, the angiogram - in whigh a catheter is snaked through an artery to the heart - carries a small risk of injury and even death, making-doctors loath to use it for a patient who looks, acts and feels line.

Doctors can also use special kinds of computed tomography scans (CT) or magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) to peer into the arteries, but these techniques, which don't yet yield information as reliably as angiograms, are still being tested and perfected.

So having a parent or a sibling with heart disease—and especially a father who suffered a heart attack before age 55 or a mother who had one before 65 is Red Flag No. 1 that you can't wait until you're 50 to start worrying about a heart attack, Kemp and other cardiologists say.

"How does one know if they're in that special subgroup?" Dr. Richard Stein, chief of cardiology at the Brooklyn Hospital Center in New York City, told the Washington Post. "The only way to really know is for you to have some symptoms of burning or unusual fatigue or chest pain, which you can easily ascribe to muscle pain." Even those symptoms may be dismissed by the patient or doctors.

Although it's been assumed that vascular injury accumulates steadily over the years, Owens said researchers now believe that blood vessels are damaged by "fits and stars." A deposit of cholesterol can burst inside a blood vessel, tearing the vessel lining and exposing it to the bloodstream. Compounds in the blood can trigger a "cascade of clotting and spasms," he told the Star. "If the clotting and spasm is vigorous enough, it can totally (block) the vessel. Presumably that's what happened to Kile while he slept." In such cases, people may feel some chest discomfort for 20 or 30 minutes.

"It's a classic thing where you don't want it to be your heart, so you tell yourself it's indigestion," Owens said. "So you forget about it."

Cardiology researchers are try-ing to understand what causes fatty plaques to burst. One of the most popular theories points the finger at inflummation. It's also been speculated that shear stress, resulting perhaps from elevated blood pressure caused by intense physical exertion, could trigger the have.

Kile complained to his brother the night before his death that he felt weak and that his right arm – the one he used to throw with – your blood pressure.

Lipid profiles now can gauge different types of low-density and high-density lipoproteins for a more accurate measure of risk. And several other blood components have been identified, that seem to correlate to an increased risk of heart attack.

One of those is homocysteine, an amino acid in the blood that's been associated with premature heart disease. Another protein RNOWN as LP(a) FelleCS the blood's tendency to clot, another factor that can contribute to heart attacks. The third compound is Creactive protein, which is an indication of inflammation, the way the body responds to injury of rivasion by a foreign substance.

One other new diagnostic technique can measure the build-up of cholesterol in the blood vessels by using a CT scanner to gauge the amount of calcium in the blood-vessel walls.

"If you're a $5-year-old who has a couple risk factors for vascular disease, these scans; can establish an earlier diagnosis of atherosclerosis than the other modalities we have, like stress-testing." Owens told the Star.

"I stopped drinking for 3 1/2 months after the incident," said the investment manager. But I didn't want to stop for life. I still like the thought of travelling to lady and having a bottle of wine with a great meal."

The federal government estimates there are three to four times more problem drinkers than individuals who are "severely dependent on alcohol." Nine of 10 problem drinkers avoid traditional intervention; many experts say it is because these people do not want to be labeled alcoholics or even risk any association with the stigma.

Moderation Management is national support organization aimed at Americans who decide to reduce their drinking. It was created in part to fill the gap between abstinence programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous and not seeking help.

"The goal of Moderation Management and our group is to say drinking is a small but enjoyable part of life," said Holen Redmond, a University of Illinois at Chicago social worker who facilitates the week life points of the seeking help o

Court ruling on islands satisfies agency

BOISE (AP) - The largest Snake River islands remain under control of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Scale U.S. Fish and Wildlife Scale U.S. Fish and Wildlife Refuge.

The relatively small islands the state now owns will not be developed and will remain open to public use, state officials said.

U.S. District Judge B. Lydlife U.S. District Judge B. Lydlife Wildlife Refuge of 159 islands downstream from the Swan Falls Dam.

Deer Flat has 94 islands, compared with 86 claimed before the lawsuit, refuge manager Elaine Johnson said.

We are quite happy with the wildlife U.S. Shands identified by state officials, only 40 were ever claimed by the federal government, she said.

"What they call islands are not necessarily what we would call islands," Johnson said. "They are sand bars and gravel bars that are a part of the bed of the river which the federal government has never claimed."

The state islands will now be managed as trust property, not endowment acreage, state Lands Department spokesman Jim Ball said. That means the Idaho Land Board is not required to get the said. That means the Idaho Land Board is not required to get the maximum long-term financial return from the lands for the state's schools.

"There is no plan to develop them now or at any time in the future," Ball said. "If the public had access to them up-to-this point, they will continue to have access to them."

"We will still have hunting seasons and continue to provide nesting, platforms for Canada geese and boxes for wood ducks," Johnson said. "Our management is not going to change."

Six years ago, the state challenged the federal claims of reserved water rights in both state and federal courts after the government contended it was guaranteed the water necessary to preserve the islands and the 250 species of migratory birds that breed there.

They argued that providing the federal government the water right it sought threatened to dry up 1 million acres of irrigated farmland upstream. Interior Secretary Gale Norton signaled a possible settlement when she endorsed-the February-2001 Idaho Supreme Court decision that rejected the federal water right claim and put the water rights of upstream farmers ahead of it.

FBI tries to enhance video in kidnapping

SALT LAKE CITY. (AP) - The FBI is trying to enhalice a video-tage shot by a security camera a two two cars in a hospital parking lot a half-mile from the house where 14-year-lod Elizabeth Smart was taken from her bedroom at gün-point.

Authorities are reconstructing a one-minute portion of a videotape recorded outside Shriners Hospital the night the girl vanished, FBI special agent Kevin Eaton said.

ished, FBI special agent Kevin Eaton said.

The video shows some of the suspicious activity reported by a security guard who told police water the diverse of two cars met in the parking lot hours before the girl's distppearance.

Fred Trujillo's description of one of the drivers is vaguely similar to the man Elizabeth's sister saw in their shared bedfrom after I a.m. June 5.

That driver, a white male in his 30s, had short, thick dark hair and wide sideburns and was wearing a light shirt or jacker, said Trujillo, who was patrolling the hospital that night.

An FBI crime lab was expected to extract still pictures from the video by Tuesday, but it wasn't certain the work could reveal the make or model of the cars or a glimpse of the drivers because the original video images were washed out by the glare of the cars' headlights, Salt Lake Police Sgt. Fred Louis said.

We re not going to get a literase plate or anything like those model of the cars had allowed the said of these two cars have anything to do with the kidnapping.

Police reviewed the video tape last month but didn't find it useful.

Environmental changes take their toll on birds of prey

BOISE (AP) - The Snoke, River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area near Kuna was set aside to showcase rapors such as golden eagles, but the numbers are falling off due to a host of factors.

Norman Nelson remembers in father, raptor expert Morley. Nelson, impressing visitors there by predicting aerial battles between eagles and prairie falcons.

"He'd tell them a falcon was coming to attack an eagle, and sure enough, it would happen,"

Norman Nelson said. "It happened on nearly every one of his tours, and that was just 10 years ago. Now, you're lucky to see it once a season."

The area no longer is the raptor-rich canyon. Prairie falcon and golden eagle populations have declined significantly.

Even Swainson's hawks, oncerbiquitous in the area, are in short supply this year.

"None of our young eagles are eming back because there isn't enough food for them," Saake River Raptor Volunteers president Steve Guinn said.

The number of golden eagles appears to be off by about 15 percent since the 1970s, U.S. Geological Survey biologist Karen Steenhof said.

Guinn estimates that prairie falcon numbers in the Swan Falls section of the area have shrunk by about two-thirds since 1992.

In the mid-1990s, thousands of

In the mid-1990s, thousands of birds, including Swainson's hawks, died in Argentina after eating grasshoppers that had been sprayed with pesticide.

Guinn figured 20 percent of the world's supply were killed in one valley there.

Drought, wildfires and loss of native plants to cheatgrass incursions have significantly damaged the natural habitat. Drought reduces the supply of vegetation consumed by ground squirrels and other jackrabbits on which raptors prey, causing their populations to decline. "Three-hundred thousand of the 486,000 acres in the national conservation area have burned in the last 10 years," Guinn said.

Even after global media coverage of Fossett's nearly two weeks aloft before he crossed the finish line Tuesday in Australia, others made it clear Fossett's becoming the first balloonist to circle the world alone never was on their radar screen.
"I don't really know anything about it," Alan Durbin said while clipping hair at the Highview Barber Shop in Louisville, Ky. "I really didn't follow it. Every now and then I'd read in the paper about something silly someone had done and ask myself, Why would someone do something like that?
"My guess is that not too many people care one way or another.

I'd say that more than likely, (Fossett) is someone with an awful lot of time on his hands." In Keene, N.H., accounting clerk Doreen Ballou said she had heard about the balloon trek briefly but couldn't remember Fosseti's name.

work of pediatric emergency doctors at Chicago's Children's Memorial Hospital is highlighted in "The Detectives." Not only do they have to treat youngsters, they also have to determine the roots of the patients' situations.

"I think that naught is worth a thought, and I'm a fool for think-

-- W M Praed

The following dual from the Junior European Championships exactly two years ago was not well handled by many declarers. At most every table reached four hearts by South, and West led the club queen. How do you play?

The unsuccessful declarers put on the club king and started thinking. Too late! There was no recovery. Count your tricks: six hearts, two clubs and two diamonds. However, to make the diamond tricks ou need an entry in dummy AFTEI you have drawn transparentles club lang. If the club lang was the club lang was the club lang of the club lang. If declarer wins the first club in the South hand, draws trumps, and plays the diamond jack, he has to ecrtain tricks. Those who fell into the trap of winning the first trick in dummy could not recover. If they drew trumps, East would hold up the diamond age until the second round and then lock duclarer back in his own hand. And if declarer trick esting up his diamonds before drawing trumps. West could obtain a club ruffished would reduce declarer Some greeds declarers avoided that trap to fall into another, one. They remembered to was the club acc, but tackled diamonds before drawing trumps. East won and gave his partner a club ruff, then got in with the spade ace and gave their partner a second ruff, for down one.
