Expect hospital bills to rise

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley Regional Medical Center expects to bring in 9 percent more revenue next year, and the hospital will spend 14 percent more for employee salaries. Meanwhile, patients will see their health care bills go up by 4.5 percent. The rate increase is lower than the 6 percent increase last year

New budget includes 14 % increase for some employee raises and considerably lower than the 12 percent national average, said Chief Financial Officer John Groesbeck. "I was pleased our price increase was as low as it was, though I would have liked to see it lower," Groesbeck said. The reason for the price increase is to hold onto a 3 percent operating margin - money used to buy additional equipment, provide staff training, provide new services and recruit medical staff in order to maintain the quality of care - Groesbeck told Finance Committee members Thursday before they approved the hospital's 2003 budget. The salary increases are for the people on the front lines - for example, nurses, diagnostic imaging technicians and respiratory therapists - to bring their salaries up to market level, Groesbeck said. Those employees could receive up to a 15 percent salary increase. Other employees will probably receive a 3 percent cost-of-living raise, he said. The budget approved last year called for an increase of 4.4 percent in spending on employee salaries in the current fiscal year. Nationally, the demand for health care workers is high, creating a tight labor market. By reducing turnover, the hospital is able to maintain a high-quality staff, Groesbeck said.

Schools dip into reserves

Most use it for non-salary expenses

By Robert Mayer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - You're the superintendent of a local school district. The state's economic downturn has hit your district, forcing you to make the unattractive decision of eliminating teacher positions and making other cutbacks.

Fortunately, you have an emergency reserve set aside for economically-challenging times. Do you use the reserve? This year, most districts haven't. Most have chosen instead to keep reserve funds and other carry-over money intact.

Nick Hallett, superintendent of Mindok County schools, says it isn't smart to spend the one-time, emergency fund on recurring expenses such as salaries.

District by district - A4

"It should be an absolute, dire and unavoidable emergency," he said.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, has a slightly different view. While salaries are perhaps beyond the intention of reserve funds, districts should feel free to use that money for all other expenses, such as buying textbooks, he said.

"I think it's highly appropriate to use those contingency funds for those necessary expenditures," Cameron said. "Frankly, we anticipated that they would."

Most school districts in Idaho carry reserves in the form of contingency funds. Some districts don't have designated contingency funds but do have carry-over from the previous fiscal year. In all, districts statewide in 2001 had $1.06 billion in general expenditures and $106.3 million in carryover funds after budget holdbacks. That's 10 percent of the general expenditures.

While some districts used the reserves to make up the difference from last fall's holdbacks, most have been reluctant to use them to pay for teacher and other personnel salaries, choosing instead to eliminate the positions.

Mindoka County School District has set aside $1.14 million out of its $24.2 million budget.

Simpson, Otter question 'quick' expulsion vote

By TJ Greeney
States News Service

WASHINGTON - Should Jim Traficant, the rogue Ohio lawmaker who was convicted of 10 felony counts, have been expelled from the House of Representatives? Idaho's two House members aren't sure.

Reps. Butch Otter and Mike Simpson both voted "present" when the House considered Traficant's expulsion late Wednesday night, joining seven other lawmakers in objecting to the haste in which their colleagues ousted the Ohio Democrat.

The passive protest of Idaho's two representatives could not stand up to the torrent of indignation aroused by Traficant's conviction on charges of bribery, tax evasion, racketeering and obstruction of justice. The House voted to expel Traficant by a vote of 420 to 1 with nine votes of "present."

The lone vote against expulsion came from Rep. Gary Condit, the California Democrat who lost a primary following a sex scandal involving former intern Chandra Levy, who was later found dead. Otter and Simpson said they had hoped for more time to consider the charges against Traficant, a nine-term lawmaker.

Lawmakers needed more time to consider ousting Ohio Congressman Traficant, they say

Simpson was particularly frustrated that he was not given more time to read the six-volume, 9,200-page report on Traficant's alleged transgressions produced by the ethics committee.

"When you don't get all of the volumes until an hour and a half before you're supposed to vote on it, there's no way to really evaluate it," he said. "For me this vote is every bit as important to the integrity of the House as impeachment proceedings." "It's probably the most serious vote we'll cast while we're here," he said. "I mean, it is a big deal."

Rep. Mike Simpson and Rep. Butch Otter

Rep. Steven LaTourette, an Ohio Republican who sits on the House ethics committee and is one of Traficant's closest friends in Congress, introduced a resolution that would delay the expulsion vote until September, allowing Traficant to exhaust his appeals in the Ohio courts and give lawmakers time to consider the charges. The resolution failed despite the support of both Simpson and Otter.

Simpson said he and Otter talked about the vote on the House floor and decided that if they voted "no," it would give the impression that they believe Traficant is innocent, while a "present" vote simply reflects that "we think this needs to be done in a more deliberate manner."

Traficant became only the second person expelled from the House since the Civil War.

For many Idahoans, these proceedings brought to mind the case of former Rep. George Hansen, the Idaho Republican who was convicted of filing false financial disclosure reports and delivered a tear-filled speech when the House reprimanded him in 1984.

Simpson, who is friends with Hansen and his wife, said the former representative's case weighed heavily on him as he considered his vote in the Traficant matter.

"It had an effect in my mind," Simpson said. "In my very cognizant of the implications here. This is the equivalent of the political death penalty, and I think we rushed into this."

Rescue teams race to save miners

The Associated Press

SOMERSET, Pa. - Encouraged by a tiny tapping sound coming up from the depths, rescuers drilled an escape hole Thursday in a race to save nine coal miners trapped 240 feet underground in a dark shaft filling up with millions of gallons of frigid water.

After about 1.5 hours, crews had bored 45 feet toward the 4-foot-high chamber where the men were believed trapped. Rescuers hoped to use the 2.5-foot-wide shaft to pull survivors out of the mine 55 miles southeast of Pittsburgh. Rescuers were also pumping air

Shooting charge against area youth could go to adult court

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Prosecutors have decided to file an involuntary manslaughter charge against a 17-year-old boy in connection with an April 6 shooting that left one man dead and his twin brother wounded.

There will be a closed juvenile court hearing today to determine whether the involuntary manslaughter charge against Rolando Garza will be waived into adult court, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb.

In another closed-court case, Garza faced a misdemeanor count of being a juvenile in possession of a firearm.

The charges stem from a shooting at a party in Hansen that left Twin Falls resident Victor Cuellar, 19, dead and his brother Francisco Cuellar hospitalized for several days.

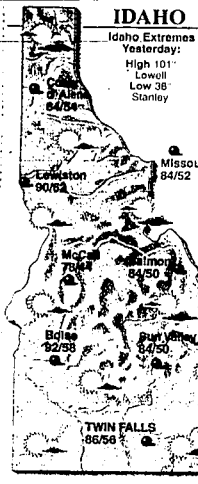

Francisco Cuellar later faced a charge of intimidating a witness based on the allegation of Garza's mother, Irma Garza of Twin Falls, that Francisco Cuellar and others had threatened her near her get as an emergency reserve. However, with a monthly operating outlay of $2.2 million, "it won't get us very far," said Pam Wade, business manager for the district.

The district used the fund to accommodate its nearly $250,000 holdback, to pay the bills. But when it came time to balance the new budget, positions had to be eliminated. A loss in student enrollment and state funds made it necessary to cut the positions, Hallett said.

The Twin Falls School District is anticipating $2.2 million in carry-over money from the just-completed fiscal year, of which $1.5 million will be placed in a contingency fund. But that carryover figure is misleading, said Superintendent Terrell Donchick. There are obligations on carry-over money. Often there are outstanding purchase orders and other expenses whose bills arrive later in the year and must be paid for with those carry-over funds, he said. Only contingency funds are unencumbered with no strings attached.

The Twin Falls district used about $300,000 in contingency funds to accommodate the holdbacks last fall.

"When everything's said and done, we spent $300,000 more than we look in," Donchick said.

This is in a year when 13 teaching positions and several classified jobs were eliminated.

Yes, he could have prevented some of those losses with the use of reserve funds, but that would just delay the inevitable and leave the district vulner-

Bush, lawmakers fight over Homeland employee rights

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The White House threatened Thursday to veto legislation to create a Department of Homeland Security if it does not include language limiting the workplace rights of the proposed agency's 170,000 employees.

Hours after the White House's warning, a Senate committee crafted a homeland security bill that rejected President Bush's request for unprecedented freedom to hire, fire and discipline employees, setting the stage for a contentious vote in the full Senate next week.

The House, meanwhile, began debate on its version of homeland security legislation, which contains most of the workforce provisions sought by the president. A vote on the bill is scheduled for Friday.

In the seven weeks since Bush proposed merging all or part of 22 agencies into a new Department of Homeland Security, Republicans and Democrats have largely supported the plan, which would be the largest reorganization of the federal bureaucracy in more than 50 years.

Miners

"We still believe there are miners alive. We obviously don't know how many," said David Hees, Pennsylvania secretary of environmental protection. "This is a very tricky and dangerous situation, and I don't want to raise expectations."

Twenty-four hours after the accident, noise and dust rose from the site, which was illuminated by bright floodlights. Medical personnel were standing by. Neighbors on a fence to watch the rescue efforts.

"They're working feverishly. You can sense when people are determined and have their grit about them," said Gov. Mark Schweiker, who toured the site Thursday night.

The miners, ages 30 to 55, were trapped after apparently breaching the wall of a flooded and abandoned mine next to them, releasing more than 50 million gallons of water into the shaft where they were working.

The miners believed the old mine was still some 200 feet away, but their maps were incorrect, officials said.

It was unknown how high the water was in the shaft, but officials said cold water was rushing past them as they huddled in the dark. Between the water and an air temperature of no more than 60 degrees, rescuers feared the men could suffer hypothermia before they were rescued.

Hospital

Finance Committee member Doug Vollmer said it can be difficult for a county-owned hospital to compete with private hospitals when it comes to hiring and keeping good employees.

"Just because we're a county hospital doesn't mean we shouldn't have quality people," Vollmer said.

The hospital expects to bring in $97.5 million in revenue during the 2003 fiscal year which runs from October through September. That's up from $93.3 million this year - a 5.1 percent increase.

The hospital plans to spend $94.6 million in 2003, up from $86.4 million this year.

The largest spending increase will be in repairs and maintenance. The hospital plans to spend $2.8 million on repairs and maintenance in 2003, up from $1.9 million this year - a 45 percent increase.

Groesbeck explained that warranties have run out on some of the hospital's medical equipment and their maintenance agreements have kicked in. That means the hospital will shell out more for repairs, he said.

The hospital's capital plans for 2003 include reinvesting $5 million to acquire new equipment, replace old equipment and repair and maintain existing buildings, Groesbeck said. A planned $3.69 million project to expand the hospital's emergency room and same-day surgery departments and add a corridor will soon get underway and is expected to be completed by the time the 2003 fiscal year comes to an end.

The hospital's numbers crunchers considered a number of things to consider when trying to decide when trying to prefer what the 2003 fiscal year would look like.

U.S. war plans against Iraq move ahead

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is moving forward aggressively with planning to oust Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, laying the groundwork for a possible U.S.-led invasion early next year, according to senior U.S. officials and individuals involved in the planning.

Under one scenario being discussed at the Pentagon, a force of 250,000 to 300,000 U.S. troops would invade Iraq and overthrow Hussein, backed by massive air strikes. Turkey, Kuwait and Qatar have indicated they would allow their territory to be used for an attack.

But some civilian aides to Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld are pushing for a quicker — and, critics say, riskier — thrust in an attempt to catch Hussein off guard. That strategy would involve roughly 80,000 troops and could be in place by this fall.

"If it happened in October, I wouldn't be completely surprised," said one official involved in the planning. He and others spoke on condition of anonymity.

Proponents of this approach argue that a surprise attack is vital because the Iraqi leader knows that, unlike the 1991 Persian Gulf war, the U.S. goal this time will be his ouster. Thus, he may be tempted to lash out first with chemical or biological weapons.

What Hussein might do is at the center of the debate over which plan to follow.

President Bush — who has repeatedly declared his intention to get rid of Hussein — has made no final decision on which, if any, plan to execute, the officials emphasized. And the White House has not yet begun a concerted effort to convince the U.S. public, Congress or American allies of the need to pre-emptively strike Iraq. "It is absolutely clear to me they have not made the case yet and they know that. They haven't made it to the American people, they haven't made it to our allies, and they haven't made it to the region," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. Biden, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, opens hearings on Iraq policy next week.

Lawmakers break yearlong deadlock on bankruptcy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking a yearlong deadlock, key lawmakers reached agreement Thursday night on legislation making it harder to dissolve debts through bankruptcy court.

The legislation has been hung up over a Democratic demand for a provision ensuring that abortion protesters who are sued successfully may not use bankruptcy laws to avoid payment.

Final details of the abortion-protester provision were not immediately available. "We have worked hard for a year to make this a better and more balanced bill, and we have succeeded," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The legislation applies a new standard for determining whether people filing for bankruptcy should be forced to repay debts under court-approved reorganization plans rather than having them dissolved. If a debtor is found to have sufficient income to repay at least 25 percent of the debt over five years or less at least the median income for his or her state, a reorganization plan generally would be required.

Two Republican lawmakers, Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa and Orrin Hatch of Utah, told reporters they expected the measure to clear Congress within a matter of days.

"This is a victory for women," said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who had been negotiating for the abortion provision. "The agreement we reached today ensures those who use violence to close clinics can't use bankruptcy as a shield to escape liability."

Kempthorne lauds help from feds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a measure Thursday that would send $9 billion in Medicaid help to states struggling to care for the poor amid shrinking budgets.

Governors, who had pressed for the proposal, praised the 75-24 vote. "Many states continue to face budget shortfalls and face the prospect of instituting significant cuts in health care and social services to curb expenditures," said Kentucky Gov. Paul Patton, as chairman of the National Governors Association.

The measure "is an important first step in helping states maintain service levels during the continuing fiscal crisis." Idaho Gov. Kirk Kempthorne, the association's vice chairman, said the Senate action "ensures that many low-income families will be protected from drastic cuts."

The measure would give states $6 billion in additional federal matching funds and $3 billion in grants to help them pay for child care and other social service programs.

Congress sends Bush 'scandal bill'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mindful of midterm elections just three months away, Congress sent legislation to President Bush on Thursday creating stiff penalties for corporate fraud and document shredding in hopes of easing economic jitters and restoring confidence in the markets.

In overwhelming votes, the House and then the Senate approved the sweeping compromise legislation, which rivals revisions to federal laws responding to the stock market crash of 1929.

Bush said he would sign the bill.

"Today's passage by Congress of corporate accounting reforms is a victory for America's shareholders and employees," Bush said. "House and Senate passage of this legislation demonstrates what can happen when leaders work together to solve problems." In the compromise measure, House Republicans accepted most of the stricter parts of a bill that the Democratic-controlled Senate passed unanimously last week.

Cops arrest pair in girl's kidnapping

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Acting on a tip, police Thursday arrested two men wanted in the kidnapping-for-ransom of Erica Pratt, the 7-year-old girl who authorities say escaped from her captors by gnawing through duct tape.

Both men have long criminal records, and police said they were investigating whether the kidnapping was the work of a violent drug gang.

James Burns, 23, and Edward Johnson, 23, were arrested before dawn just blocks from where Erica was abducted Monday night while playing with her 5-year-old sister in front of their grandmother's rowhouse.

The alleged kidnappers apparently knew the Pratt family. The connection was unclear, but court records show that the family had at least one violent run-in with one of the suspects. "Investigators continued to hunt for other suspects."

"I suspect that we will have additional arrests within a week," said Lt. Michael Whitwood.

But despite having to dip into the state's emergency funds to balance the budget, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne is not necessarily recommending school districts do the same, said Mark Snider, the governor's press secretary.

"The governor is not going to tell a school district how to make its budget decisions," he said. "That would be inappropriate."

Some districts are choosing to use their contingency funds, most for the first time in the districts' history.

Such is the case with the Hagerman School District.

"This year we've made a promise to stay status quo," Superintendent Lee Mitchell said.

With a $2.3 million budget, the district has chosen to draw $100,000 from reserves to maintain all personnel and programs. That leaves $500,000 for emergencies.

Another argument for keeping a solid reserve fund through the years is to maintain a solid bond rating, Donich said. The Twin Falls School District was dinged by bond rating agencies a few years back because the district didn't have enough in the fund and because the balance wasn't kept steady.

Times-News writer Robert Mayer can be reached at 735-3231 or via e-mail at rmayer@magicvalley.com.

About carryover

School districts can carryover the amount of unused money at the end of the fiscal year — as include the following:

* A designated contingency fund. A district may legally divert up to 5 percent of its budget into a contingency fund for such uses as unforeseen emergencies.

* Money that was expected to be spent but wasn't. For example, if a district budgets a certain amount to pay for natural gas for the year, and the winter turns out milder than expected, money will be left over.

* Money that is committed to be spent for bills that have yet to arrive.

Schools

In its $5.6 million budget, only $150,000 remains. Add to that a possible $100,000 in additional state appropriations, and it's still not much. It's certainly lower than last year's $476,000 fund balance.

With nearly $500,000 in monthly operating expenses, "we don't even have enough to carry us a month," Manly said.

There haven't been any position eliminations, per se, although a Wendell Middle School social studies position will remain unfilled. There is, however, a freeze on salaries for administrators and classified personnel.

"Next year will be the big hit," he said. "We can't keep spending more than we're receiving."

On the other end of the spectrum is the Valley School District. Years of conservative financial stewardship have left a reserve of $900,000, which is 24 percent of the district's $3.73 million budget.

Some say that percentage is excessive, especially at a time when the state budget is pinched by declining revenues.

High school exit exam should test early skills

The move to bring more accountability into Idaho public schools continues to take shape. And while that effort is making noteworthy progress, comments from some educators suggest they are still missing the point.

First, the idea of holding parents accountable for student achievement — an idea pushed by some educators — is hollow. Parents, unlike teachers, aren't public employees. Besides, life already holds parents accountable for students' performance. If little Johnny and Jane waste their school days, drop out and join the Hell's Angels, Mom and Dad are likely to regret it — and pay for it — in the long run.

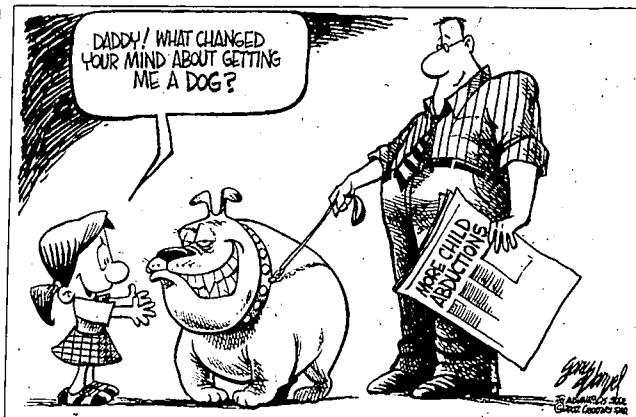

So the goal shouldn't necessarily be to impose sanctions on parents. The goal should be to inform parents about their children's needs, and to help them appreciate the long-term consequences of failing to meet those needs. The consequences themselves already are abundant.

Second, if the state is to effectively use high school exit exams to satisfy graduation requirements, it's reasonable for the student to be tested on skills learned throughout school — including material learned as far back as ninth and 10th grades.

Some educators say it's unfair to test high school seniors on material learned as underclassmen. But if a senior can't retain the fundamentals of freshman algebra or world history, then what was the purpose of teaching them?

A successful education is more than filling seat time and earning satisfactory report cards. The Idaho Standards Achievement Test should assess what kids have learned in school. If they don't know it when they graduate, they didn't really learn it.

Barbarism runs rampant in Holy Land

HUSSEIN IBISH

The latest atrocity in the Middle East, in which an Israeli F-16 jet fired a missile into a civilian neighborhood in Gaza in a successful attempt to kill a noted Palestinian, is emblematic of the degree of barbarism that has come to characterize this hideous conflict. Inevitably and predictably, the attack took the lives of many innocents, including at least nine children, two of them infants.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon wasted no time in crowing that this horror, which would certainly meet any reasonable definition of the term "terrorism," should be counted as "one of the great successes." No matter that the murder of Salah Shehadeh, one of the top leaders of the military wing of Hamas, left in its wake so many dead children, as well as more than 100 others wounded and at least five houses destroyed.

While apologists for Israel's brutalities were quick to boast about the Israeli army's efforts to avoid civilian casualties, this assassination by air raid indicated with stark undeniability the utter lack of concern for those who might have gotten in the way. Some pundits were even reduced to chiding Shehadeh for "nanking sure he was surrounded by his wife and children and other civilians," as if a family deserves to be killed for living in the same house as a terrorist.

This wanton brutality and cynical apologies for it are, of course, perfectly mirrored on the Palestinian side by Shehadeh's colleagues in Hamas and their apologists, who have come to regard the murder of Israeli civilians in buses, discos, cinemas and pizzerias as not only acceptable but somehow heroic.

The extent to which Palestinian extremists see themselves as fighting all of Israeli society, men, women and children in everyday activities anywhere in the country, has been well recognized in the United States because of the appalling suicide bombings. What is less well recognized, but no less significant and immoral, is the degree to which the Israeli government too has adopted an attitude in which the entire population of Palestinians is the target. This is demonstrated by the killings of militants' families, which look increasingly less "accidental" as the conflict drags on.

This attitude is also demonstrated when Israel destroys the homes of people suspected not just in suicide bombing attacks but other activities directed against the occupation. How else can one explain the plan — later rejected by Israel — to expel relatives of suspected militants?

And finally, what other mindset could have resulted in the killing of more than 1,000 Palestinian civilians in less than two years, hundreds of them children?

Both sides grope for rationalizations and evidence of their own "moral superiority." Many Palestinians claim that the occupation justifies resistance by any means necessary. Many Israelis claim that they in fact never target civilians, and those 1,000 deaths were all the result, in effect, of tragic accidents.

Others, including Americans, openly embrace the idea that targeting civilians is a good idea. Harvard professor Alan Dershowitz has advocated the destruction of an entire Palestinian village in revenge for each suicide bombing attack, and Washington lawyer Nathan Levin has demanded the murder of the entire families of suspected suicide bombers.

And while the Bush administration has called for restraint on both sides, it registers moral outrage only when Israelis are killed. It is particularly pertinent given that it came just hours after Hamas' spiritual leader said the organization would consider ending suicide bombing attacks if the Israeli troops withdrew from the recently invaded Palestinian cities, as President Bush and the U.N. Security Council have demanded.

Sharon knows perfectly well that the inevitable result of this assassination, particularly given the extraordinary brutality with which it was carried out, can only lead to grim vengeance from Hamas. This in turn will provide him a further excuse to reinforce and reoccupy Palestinian areas in the West Bank and Gaza.

Pervasive moral blindness is mirrored by strategic blindness. Since Hamas kill in the name of a military victory that will never come.

Hussein Ibish is communications director for the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee.

Teaching abstinence can work

Let's be realistic, say critics of President Bush's proposal to spend $135 million next year on "abstinence only" sex education: Kids are gonna be kids.

So it would be "dangerous and unnecessary" to increase spending on abstinence programs, Rep. James Greenwood, R-Pa., wrote in a letter to the president. "There is no scientific evidence that 'abstinence only' or anti-marriage programs work."

But there is. In fact, my Heritage Foundation colleague Robert

Reich has found that "abstinence-only" programs have a record of success that the "if you're gonna do it, do it safely" programs can't match. One "abstinence only" program, for example, calls on teenagers to take a "virginity pledge." Researchers used a sample of more than 5,000 students to evaluate it for the American Journal of Sociology. They found eighth and ninth grade students one-third the probability that an adolescent will begin sexual activity. Pair the pledge with strong parental disapproval of pre-marital sex, and the probability that teens will become sexually active drops by 75 percent or more.

Another program, called "Not Me, Not Now," used radio and TV ads to promote abstinence among teenagers in Monroe County, N.Y. A study published in the Journal of Health Communications found that during the period the ads were being aired, the pregnancy rate for girls aged 15 to 17 fell from 6.4 pregnancies per 1,000 girls to 4.95 pregnancies.

Then there's the Abstinence by Choice program, which operates in 20 schools in the Little Rock, Ark. area. It targets seventh-, eighth- and ninth-grade students and reaches about 4,000 youths each year. A researcher at Case Western Reserve University's School of Medicine, using a sample of nearly 1,000 students, found the program reduced the sexual activity rates of girls by about 40 percent and the rate for boys by approximately 30 percent, compared with similar students who were in the program.

Other "abstinence only" programs, from Operation KeepSafe in Cleveland to the Teen Aid Family Life Education Project in California and five other states, show similar results. Research conducted by the Alan Guttmacher Institute found that the Postponing Sexual Involvement program in Atlanta reduced sexual initiation rates among eighth-grade boys by 60 percent and among eighth-grade girls by 95 percent.

So-called "safe sex" programs, by contrast, can't boast such a success rate. But considering that most are little more than thinly disguised efforts to promote condom use, how could they? Programs that carry the caveat "if you have sex, here's how to do it" undermine warnings against premarital sex.

These programs send a clear message that society expects, and accepts, early sexual activity. This despite the fact that sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) in this country have reached epidemic proportions among young people. Some 3 million teen-agers contract STDs each year, afflicting roughly one out of every four teens who are sexually active.

True abstinence programs help young people build an understanding of commitment, fidelity and intimacy that will serve as the foundations of healthy marital life.

Edwin Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation (www.heritage.org), a Washington-based public policy research institute.

Rim plan needs more compromise

If Jerome County rim preservation planners want to see their proposal advance, they will have to compromise with those citizens who are rightly concerned about property rights.

Opposition from rim property owners has gathered steam ever since a group of volunteers presented a proposal for preserving the north rim of the Snake River Canyon. Last week, a group called the Property Owners Petition Committee turned in a petition with 156 signatures, asking that a preservation zone be limited to public lands only.

Private property owners will rightly oppose any plan that draws a 300-foot preservation zone along a 35-mile stretch. That setback proposal bans construction within 100 feet of the rim — a virtual confiscation of canyon frontage.

That's not the worst of it. The proposal also seeks to dictate aesthetic standards for property and buildings, what color paint to use, what bushes and trees to plant, which kinds of material to use on a fence.

Jerome County isn't Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., where rules mandating tile roofing and royal palm tree gardens are all the rage. Recent history has proven Magic Valley property owners aren't receptive to stringent preservation standards that reduce property values and limit owners' rights.

There are sensible regulations, such as limits on land use for health and safety reasons. But if the planners who wrote these proposals want to get them off the shelf, the preservation ideas should be scaled back.

Constitution does not establish religion

Robert W. Bartlett II, your media bias is showing as badly as the editors you herated. I'll not question most of your letter because it is mostly well done and researched. Yet you, media people and far too many lawyers and politicians have not really read the Constitution in its historical context.

"That clearly indicates a law that establishes religion," your statement, Mr. Bartlett. Belief in a god does not establish a religion. Everyone believes in a god, some made of stone, some of metal, some or only ideas. Some show their belief by denying it. Belief in a god shows a religion of sorts exists for each of us. It does not establish that religion for anyone else. That belief is wide open.

Before the Constitution was written, there were colonies and states with established churches. Most of Europe had them and colonists brought them here with them. The marks of an established church were these: (1) The state collected taxes to pay the church bills. (2) To get full rights as a citizen, one had to belong to the established church. That meant voting rights in America. (3) Other churches had no legal standing. These are what the Constitution prohibits; it does not prohibit a belief in religion nor does it prohibit any presentation of any general religious belief. Americans did not and do not want to be told what and how to believe, but they want the right to believe. Religious tolerance has always been the American dream; intolerance is the practice of atheists. Atheists, it would seem, are no less tolerant.

The statement, "under God," does not establish a religion. It does not even establish what god it mentions, for there are too many ways to believe in a god. When the statement was ordered stricken, that judge took the first step in establishing a religion by pushing one belief over the others. That does not establish a religion, but it opens the door.

In my opinion, people who accept God's guidance are more likely to be good upstanding citizens. Makes no matter what they believe about God.

Don't abuse dogs, especially when it's hot

If we tried to invent the cruellest punishment for dogs, we probably couldn't come up with anything worse than "solitary confinement" on a chain or in a kennel.

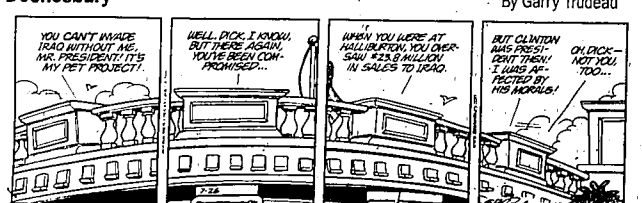

Dogs are pack animals who crave companionship. Scratches behind the ears, games of fetch or walks around the block mean the world to them. Curling up at your feet while you watch TV is their idea of heaven. Many dogs left to fend for themselves at the end of a chain fall prey to attacks by other animals or cruel people, and many are injured or hanged or choked as a result of getting entangled or caught in their tether. If you have a backyard dog, please bring him or her inside. They don't want much — just you.

Did you know that on a 78-degree day, a car parked in the sun can reach 160 degrees in minutes? Did you know that a dog left in a car on a warm day can collapse from heatstroke in just minutes? With only hot air to breathe, dogs and other animals can suffer irreversible brain damage and even die of heatstroke. Please, leave your dog at home on warm days. Even just a quick trip to the store can be deadly.

President's defensiveness backfires on him

During his years in top public posts, the aristocratic and reserved Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr. was hardly the epitome of the back-slapping, gregarious politician.

But he understood the need to cultivate good ties with the press and had the good sense to hire a one-time El Paso disc jockey named Jack DeVore.

A serious practitioner of the public relations art beneath a gruff, sometimes profane manner, the longtime aide who died last week never lost sight of the fact that, while he was there to help reporters cover his boss, he worked for Bentsen. But he did it in a way that reporters got what they needed and felt he had been fair.

In contrast with Bentsen, George W. Bush should be a press agent's dream. Congenial and engaging, his natural warmth has enabled him to charm voters and disarm reporters.

But underneath a sunny exterior, the president has a hard-edged disdain for the press and a determination to keep as much from it as possible. That has persisted, whether his chief press adviser was Karen Hughes, his recently departed counselor, Dan Bartlett, his communications director, or Ari Fleischer, his press secretary.

That attitude nearly cost Bush the presidency when a decision to keep secret a 1976 conviction for driving under the influence backfired. It would have had far less impact if it had been disclosed earlier at a time and setting of Bush's choosing.

As president, he has maintained his distance from the press corps, holding few full-length news conferences and confining himself to answering questions tossed to him during photo sessions or in very limited press conferences with foreign visitors.

Since Sept. 11, Bush's public support has been so strong that his attitude toward reporters hasn't mattered much. But the climate is changing, and his most recent press conference showed the potential problems from failing to deal effectively with the press.

The July 9 session was just the third time since Sept. 11 that he has held a full-blown news conference. His stated goal was to prod Congress on its return from the July 4 recess and to preview his speech on corporate responsibility.

Instead, Bush was overwhelmed with questions on his handling a decade earlier of his investment in the Harken Energy Corp. His refusal to release all available information prompted persistent questions.

Besides making him look like he was resisting disclosure, Bush's response seemed to put him in a bad mood. When asked politely by The Dallas Morning News' Bob Hillman about criticism of his civil rights record, he snapped an answer about the prominence of Colin Powell and Condoleezza Rice, his two most powerful black appointees, before turning quickly to the next question.

A few days later, Bush showed why his handlers may be so reluctant to expose him to the press. At a brief press session with the visiting Polish president, he was asked if he was confident that Vice President Dick Cheney would be cleared in a probe of his stewardship of Halliburton Corp.

Though Cheney and his staff have refused to discuss the case while the probe continues, Bush showed no hesitation in proclaiming his confidence that his No. 2 would be cleared.

That drew widespread commentary on the inappropriateness of his pronouncing judgment on a case being probed by his own administration.

More important, it showed again that even presidents need to get, and take, the kind of advice that Lloyd Bentsen got over the years from Jack DeVore.

LETTER

Closing pool in winter would break a promise

After all the work and raising of the funds for the bubble, now the powers that be want to put it in storage, and at what cost? They want to close the pool for the year-found use and convenience of the swimmers. What happened to the promise made to us? Weren't we promised the funding would be there?

I have a wonderful suggestion - why can't the school system use the pool? Why not incorporate swimming in the lifetime sports program? We have a plethora of athletic personnel employed by us, the taxpayers, to teach our children. Why not use them to help our students develop a love for a sport they can enjoy all their lives? Swimming is one activity the whole family can enjoy even into old age.

There comes a time when the few sports our schools focus upon are not utilized in the adult world. How many working people do we have who play football, basketball, run track or play volleyball after a busy day of work and family commitments?

As an older citizen of the Magic Valley (I'm 68), I know that swimming is much easier on the joints of senior citizens than running or walking.

Remember, the responsibility of parents, our city council, the school board and the schools themselves is to prepare all our children to live as educated, healthy and self-disciplined adults.

Jerome drinking water turns out to be safe

JEROME - A regular monthly test for monitoring drinking water showed some contamination earlier this week, but city officials said the water did not test positive for bacteria.

The test was taken on a section of water line on 300th Ave. F. However, the contamination turned out to be sediment, said City Administrator Travis Rothweller.

Bob Culver, public works director, said the lines have been flushed. He said he is waiting for the results of a second test, which is required by federal law. The water is safe to drink, officials said.

BURLEY - Saturday's Lions Spudman Triathlon is expected to result in traffic delays on area roads, Cassia County Sheriff Jim Hignens said.

Race officials expect nearly 1,000 competitors in the 16th annual event. A bicycle race begins at 7:45 a.m. at Scholer Park, travels to the intersection of S. Highway 20 and Idaho Highway 81, where the race turns onto Highway 81 and continues to a point about five miles east of Declo.

Racers are expected to be on the road for about three hours, Hignens said, resulting in some traffic delays. He asks local drivers to consider adjusting their travel schedules to take an alternate route.

Runners are expected to cross Highway 81 about a half mile east of the Burley Municipal Golf Course Saturday morning also, causing traffic delays, Hignens said.

MVRMC looks at acute rehab

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Long-term acute rehabilitation care could be one of the areas where Magic Valley Regional Medical Center expands.

The hospital is investigating the possibility of partnering with a rehabilitation provider to help patients readjust to life again after suffering accidents, strokes and other life challenges.

Hospital board members,

Hospital budget - A1

administrators and others took time Thursday evening to hear presentations from two long-term acute rehabilitation providers - one small, nonprofit Idaho provider and one huge, for-profit provider with facilities throughout the United States and as far away as Australia.

Both organizations approached Magic Valley Regional to present their programs, said Hospital Board member Terry Schultz, head of the board's Planning and Community Development Committee.

About 50 of the 1,300 inpatients the nonprofit Idaho Elks Rehabilitation Hospital in Boise admits each year are from Twin Falls, said Joe Caroselli, the hospital's administrator. The hospital also provides outpatient services.

"We appreciate the opportunity to share our mission with a dominant medical provider in a growing Idaho community," Caroselli told Thursday's audience at Magic Valley Regional's downtown location.

The rehabilitation industry grew 50 percent between 1988 and 1999 and is expected to continue growing as baby boomers start reaching their golden years, Caroselli said. Today, 65 percent of rehabilitation patients are on Medicare.

Caroselli said if Magic Valley Regional wants to venture into the long-term rehabilitation business, "You better understand Medicare."

Caroselli said the secret to success is staying one step ahead of Medicare and private insurers. "As reimbursements go down, so must your costs," Caroselli said. "You have to be creative. You have to be ahead of the game. It's a very profitable business the first year but then it becomes more difficult if you can't control your costs."

Burley man pleads guilty to sex charges

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A Burley man faces a sentence of up to 14 consecutive life terms in the state penitentiary after pleading guilty to 14 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor younger than 16.

Leslie Peter Bowcut, 28, entered his guilty pleas in a Thursday morning 5th District Court proceeding before Judge Roger Burdick. The judge accepted the pleas. Cassia County Prosecuting Attorney Al Barrus did not dismiss the other 26 counts of sexual abuse which had been filed against Bowcut, telling the judge he would reserve the motion to dismiss those charges until sentencing.

Barrus said he plans to ask that Bowcut be sentenced to a term of 25 years to life in prison. "We may change our mind. We feel 25 years is a very serious charge," he said. "The state intends to recommend a very severe penalty."

Burdick reminded people at the hearing that he has full discretion in sentencing Bowcut. And the judge told Bowcut that the court isn't obligated to accept the sentencing recommendations offered by either the prosecuting attorney nor the defense attorney.

"There is no bargain between the parties in that regard," Burdick said.

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered by Burdick. Sentencing has tentatively been scheduled for Sept. 11.

Bowcut was charged with 25 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct, 13 counts of sexual abuse of a child under age 16 and two counts of sexual exploitation of a child.

The plea negotiation between the county attorney's office and Bowcut is expected to result in the dismissal of 11 lewd and lascivious conduct charges, the 13 counts of sexual abuse and both counts of sexual exploitation.

In an interview after the hearing, Barrus said no victims would be removed from the case by dismissing those charges. All 40 charges involved three children, and all three were involved in the remaining 14 charges, he said.

"These 14 represent the most serious charges, the most outrageous conduct," Barrus said.

Before accepting the pleas, Burdick told Bowcut he "could spend the rest of your natural life in prison. You could die in prison."

And, Burdick said, if Bowcut is ever released from prison, he will be required to register as a sex offender. Bowcut could also be fined up to $50,000 per case and could be ordered to pay restitution to victims. Burdick pointed out. Civil penalties could also be imposed.

Bowcut told the judge he was pleading guilty of his "own free will. I want to accept full responsibility for what I did."

"Bowcut also said he understood the terms of plea agreement and he knew he didn't have to accept the agreement.

On each of the 14 counts, Burdick asked Bowcut if he pleaded guilty or not guilty to the charge, and each time - some prefaced by a long pause as Bowcut and his attorney read the charge - Bowcut responded "guilty."

The judge didn't require Bowcut to detail the accusations of each count, after posing such a question on the first count. When the judge did so, Bowcut struggled to answer the question, while crying.

The judge changed his approach then and asked Bowcut on each of the charges if he committed the acts as alleged in the count, to gratify his sexual desires. Bowcut answered "yes" to all of those questions.

Burdick said it's important "in terms of rehabilitation that the defendant admit what they did."

When asked by the judge if he feels he suffers from any mental illness, Bowcut responded "no."

One bit of new information came out in court Thursday. The charging documents indicate that Bowcut's actions occurred between January 2000 and September 2001. But Thursday, Bowcut said the actions occurred between "about April 1999 and April 2000."

While sentencing has tentatively been scheduled for Sept. 11, Burdick said some expert witnesses might have conflicts that will prevent them from being in court that day, and the sentencing might be rescheduled.

Barrus said two days have been blocked out on the calendar for the sentencing proceeding.

Bowcut will remain in jail on a $500,000 bond, the judge ordered. Because one case against Bowcut is essentially going away, his bond would actually have been half that amount, but Barrus requested the judge set the higher bond, and Burdick concurred.

Bowcut's attorney, Steven Richert, said his client didn't anticipate bonding out, so "whatever level it is, we won't make it."

About 30 people were in the courtroom for the plea agreement hearing, which lasted about 45 minutes.

Prosecutor, judge defend plea agreement

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A 5th District Court judge and the Cassia County prosecuting attorney said they both received an outpouring of phone calls and some letters following news reports that a plea agreement had been reached with Leslie Peter Bowcut.

Many of those calls were from people who were worried the prosecutor's office wouldn't ask for strict enough punishment for Bowcut, Prosecuting Attorney Al Barrus said. "I want the public to rest assured we're taking this case very seriously," Barrus said after Thursday's court hearing on that plea agreement.

"There's been a tremendous public outcry in the last couple of days," Barrus said. "I'm pleased about that."

Fifth District Judge Roger Burdick, who was out of town when "many" callers were trying to contact him, said he also received three letters asking that he not accept the plea agreement. In spite of those contacts, Burdick said, "I will accept this plea resolution."

The judge said it was evident it would be valuable to have Bowcut cooperate with the state to address other cases similar to his, as conditioned by the plea agreement.

As well, Barrus and Burdick both said that unless someone has set through a lewd and lascivious conduct trial, it's difficult to understand how tough such a trial is on victims, especially children.

"To save the victims - that is valuable to this court," Burdick said.

Barrus said his office negotiated a plea agreement with Bowcut primarily to prevent the victims from having to go to trial and be further victimized.

Barrus said Bowcut's conduct was outrageous and he needs "severe punishment."

Field hearing talks about bull trout

By Karen Terrell
Times-News correspondent

ELKO, Nev. - In an attempt to determine if the bull trout population in the Jarbidge River is really threatened, the U.S. House Resources Committee will hold a field hearing Saturday in Elko.

U.S. Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., requested the hearing earlier this month after receiving documents from Elko County commissioners questioning the listing of the fish under the Endangered Species Act.

Commissioner Mike Nannini has maintained the delisting of the bull trout should be a priority for the county since the fish's current status greatly affects the rebuilding of South Canyon Road. Gibbons questions the process the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service used to designate the fish as threatened and said "subjective opinions have been substituted for sound science."

The witnesses invited to testify at the hearing include county commissioner Brad Roberts and Nevada Assemblyman John Carpenter, R-Elko. Both are strong supporters of delisting.

Topless ordinance foes plan Saturday protest in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) - A group opposed to a new city ordinance passed after some women operated a topless car wash plans a Saturday protest rally.

That gathering by Muscovites for Equal-Rights stems from the ordinance, approved by a 5-1 council vote last week, that ended the city's policy of allowing women to bare their breasts.

The ordinance does not directly address the car wash, the issue that prompted the council vote, the group said.

"Instead, the law restricts any woman from going topless in public. While MER understands the cultural stigma regarding the display of female breasts in public, MER hopes to educate the public as to how this law unfairly restricts the rights of women and how this sexist stigma can be overcome."

Women are now allowed to display only the cleavage between their breasts.

Denver TV show airs photos of prostitution customers

DENVER (AP) - There are 11 men who probably never wanted to get their 15 minutes of fame this way. They were the first guests on "John's TV."

The program premiered on the city's cable access channel Thursday. It included a slide show of men convicted of soliciting prostitution with their names shown below their photos. The images are also displayed on the city's Web site.

A Denver cop standing by his cruiser warns rather ominously that anyone hiring a hooker may be arrested.

The idea for using publicity as a deterrent started with the publication of photos in newspapers. Several other cities have already started TV shows: "BUSTED" in Orlando, Fla., "Shame TV" in Charlotte, N.C., and in Calgary, Alberta, it is the "Calgary Ho Down."

"I see it as a deterrent. We know we are not going to stop the problem. There is a reason why they call it the oldest profession in the world," said Pamela Corwell, a neighborhood activist who has campaigned for a crack-down on prostitution.

ISU, BLM work to predict fire hazard

POCATELLO - Researchers from Idaho State University and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management are teaming to help communities reduce the risk of wildfire on their perimeters.

"There has been increased danger from fires on private property as more people move into fringe areas where wildland meets urban areas and private developments," said Felicia Burkhardt, geographic information systems coordinator for the Upper Snake River District of the bureau.

The bureau is funding a five-year fire risk study at the university's Geographic Information Systems Training and Research Center.

The university is completing an analysis of wildland fires and a study of emergency response times to fires near Pocatello. A similar study of the Lava Hot Springs area began this summer.

Keith Weber, the university's GIS director, said researchers are analyzing data collected from 1939 to 2000, showing wildfire locations, and comparing it to NASA satellite images to assess risky areas.

"We use a variety of data such as vegetation growth, topography, steepness of slope and the roads and streets of an area to determine fire hazards," Weber said.

Officials will advise citizens living in areas of highest fire danger of steps to take to protect themselves.

"We anticipate other BLM offices across the state may participate with other higher education institutions to complete the same type of studies," Burkhardt said. "We're trying to collect information to provide to the public so individuals and local fire protection authorities can help protect their own backyards."

Poet, teacher sues school district over broken foot

COEUR D'ALENE - A poet is suing the school district for more than $100,000 following a tumble she took two years ago.

Marti Mihalyi of Kansas broke her ankle on July 19, 2000, at Coeur d'Alene High School. While on her way to teach a class, she stepped and fell into a sunken concrete area in the commons where students gather.

The award-winning poet and former University of Idaho teacher was teaching at the high school in a university-sponsored program.

Mihalyi's foot was fractured in several places. She taught the rest of her classes from a wheelchair, despite excruciating pain, said her attorney, Mark Moorer.

He said The Pits - which have since been filled in as part of a renovation project - were in a dimly lit area.

Mihalyi's injury prompted a depression that interfered with her work and her marriage, the suit said.

School district attorney Charlie Dodson said he was not familiar with the case, but surmised the district would win at trial.

"When you walk into a place, you're generally held to the standard - as all people are - of seeing where you're going," Dodson said. "It's like if you're walking down an icy sidewalk and fall down.

Generally, the defense is, 'Hey, you knew it was an icy sidewalk.'"

Nampa Salvation Army tries to persevere

NAMPA - The Salvation Army office that provides services to this community may not be able to help itself in a bleak year for contributions.

Capt. John Stennett said the organization is struggling to make it through to Oct. 1, the start of the new budget year.

It needs to raise up to $40,000 to meet payroll and other expenses this year.

Programs in trouble include family financial assistance, after-school and summer camps for youngsters and the community shelter for homeless families that opened this year.

The Salvation Army did not pay for the shelter building but provides for its day-to-day operation.

Nationally and in Nampa, the organization has suffered from a decline in contributions brought on by a weak economy and September terrorist attacks, which diverted contributions to elsewhere.

Several weeks ago, the Salvation Army in Baker City, Ore., shut down after 108 years of operation - the fourth closure in Oregon during the past year.

Stennett said his office received nearly $100,000 less than expected in contributions this year from the state, United Way of Treasure Valley and other regular sources.

Carpenter appeared before a congressional hearing several years ago speaking in favor of removing the fish from the endangered listing.

Also on the witness list is Bob Williams, Fish and Wildlife supervisor; Terry Crawford, head of the Nevada Division of Wildlife; and Bob Vaught, Humboldt-Tolaybe forest supervisor. Crawford and his staff say their research indicates the bull trout population is not threatened and the fish should be de-listed.

Steve Meyer from Trout Unlimited and Bert Brackett from the Flat Creek Ranch in the Three Creeks area are also designated as witnesses. Trout Unlimited was instrumental to having the bull trout placed on the endangered species list several years ago.

Amy Spanbauer from Gibbons' office said Thursday it is not certain how many congressmen will be in attendance.

Other commitments and a rush of business in Congress may prevent the full committee, chaired by U.S. Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Utah, from attending.

The audience also heard from the for-profit HealthSouth. Headquartered in Birmingham, Ala., HealthSouth is the world's largest provider of rehabilitation care with more than 2,000 locations, including 58 inpatient facilities, in 50 states and Canada, Puerto Rico and Australia.

HealthSouth currently provides outpatient services in Boise, Coeur d'Alene and Nampa.

HealthSouth representative Tony Morris said there is a growing need for rehabilitation care.

"The elderly are a fast-growing population and life expectancy is increasing," Morris said.

HealthSouth offers inpatient and outpatient care and also operates a number of surgery centers.

"Acute rehab is a very specific need and it can really benefit a community," Morris said.

HealthSouth has a number of innovative programs not only for patients, but also for staff. Through Partners and Futures, HealthSouth teams up with high schools to provide a certified nurses aid training program.

HealthSouth University offers employees a number of ongoing education programs to choose from.

Schultz said the board is just in the very beginning stages of looking at a possible partnership with a rehab provider.

"We want to understand what their vision of a partnership can be," Schultz said. "It's just one of the areas we'd like to explore."

"If a judge is going to give this man a harsh sentence, he's got all the ammunition he needs," Barrus said. "It doesn't matter if it's 100 or 200 counts."

Barrus hesitated to call the negotiation with Bowcut a plea bargain.

"We didn't give much," he said.

There were other reasons for making the deal, Barrus said, including potential difficulties in proving some elements in some

Firm plans legal move to halt bluegrass burning

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - A Seattle law firm plans to file a court motion to head off bluegrass growers' annual practice of burning their fields, choking the area with smoke in the late summer.

It will be the second legal attempt to ban the practice this month - this time in state court.

"These people are relentless," said Linda Clovis with the North Idaho Farmers' Association. "It's to the point where you can't farm anymore. You have to spend half your time fighting all these battles."

Washington, Idaho and 12 other states.

He will ask a 1st District Court judge to issue a temporary restraining order for 14 days, or to grant an injunction against burning, arguing that the practice violates Idaho's public nuisance and trespass laws.

"These people are relentless," said Linda Clovis with the North Idaho Farmers' Association. "It's to the point where you can't farm anymore. You have to spend half your time fighting all these battles."

Farmers are coming off a victory last week, when a federal judge dismissed a lawsuit brought by clean-air advocates seeking to ban field burning, which shocks the grass into producing more seed.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ruled the federal law the case was brought under was not applicable.

Berman filed a class-action complaint in June, arguing that field burning violates state nuisance laws designed to protect public health.

of the other counts.

The prosecutor's office went through the list of charges carefully, Barrus said, to select "the most atrocious" charges. "Each of these, we feel, represents an area the judge needs to see."

All 40 charges involved the same three victims, Barrus said, so dismissing some charges doesn't remove any victims from the case. His office would have the right to file more charges against Bowcut if evidence is collected which shows there were other victims.

Barrus told some of the people who attended Thursday's court proceeding that if they have information about other crimes that might be related to the charges against Bowcut, they need to share that information with Cassia County Sheriff's Detective Rod Gates.

"We are very concerned there are other victims. We need that information. We don't want to leave anyone out," Barrus said.

In exchange for the dismissal of charges, Bowcut has agreed to provide Cassia County Sheriff's Office authorities with information, Barrus said. "His charge is to cooperate fully."

Bowcut has agreed to forfeit all of his cameras and computers which were used to take photos of him and three children in various sexual acts and then transmitted and shared by computer. Any evidence collected from Bowcut's home related to any of the 40 charges, not just the 14, is also to be turned over to the state, Barrus said.

The plea agreement provides if Bowcut is ever released from prison that he not be allowed to photograph children.

Barrus plans to ask that the sentencing order also prohibit Bowcut from ever again having contact with the victims.

The plea agreement "serves the interests of justice," Barrus said, terming it "sufficient."

Barrus said he wants the public to know the details, which has been tough in this case, because portions of the record have been sealed to protect the identities of the victims.

Barrus said anyone with questions, concerns or comments about the case may call him to discuss the matter.

"We're happy to talk to anyone about this," he said.

Wendell sewer upgrade might miss deadline

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondence

WENDELL - As the anticipated completion of the west-side sewer project prepares to slide past its scheduled September date, Wendell city leaders are looking for alternative construction strategies to gain back some lost time.

The plan agreed upon during Wednesday's City Council meeting was to ask for bids from contractors to lay a portion of the pipe needed to complete the sewer project. The extra help might be just what city crews need to bring the project in on time.

J.E.B. engineer Rob Hegstrom said he suggested to City Council members before the meeting the option of contracting out a small portion of the work. During a Thursday telephonic interview, Hegstrom said that about $50,000 of the $700,000 Idaho Community Block Grant being used to partially fund the sewer upgrade had been set aside for contingency items. The money

"It's just been tough, but the city crew has been trying their best."

- Susan Riddle, community developer could be used to pay an outside contractor to lay some of the sewer pipe during one of the project's final phases. Currently, the bulk of the sewer project is being handled by the city's public works crew.

"We're talking about a very small percentage of the project. Off the top of my head, I'd say we're talking about roughly 3,000 feet of pipe in all," Hegstrom said. "This way, we might be able to bring this project in closer to its scheduled completion date."

Susan Riddle, a professional community developer who has been assisting Wendell with the grant process formalities, said Thursday that exceeding the September contract deadline isn't anything to be too concerned with, and that the Idaho Department of Commerce, the agency that awarded Wendell the grant, is aware of Wendell's situation.

The belated construction schedule has to do with a contracted city budget that simply won't allow for the luxury of hiring extra manpower to help the city's four-man crew wrap this project up on time.

"It's just been tough, but the city crew has been trying their best," Riddle said. "But it's hard when you have only a few people available to work on the sewer project and to handle the day-to-day situations that come up within the city."

Other business Wednesday included:

- Groundwater plan - Melinda Harper, a groundwater protection specialist with the Idaho Rural Water Association out of Boise, gave a power point presentation regarding the creation of a drinking water protection plan.
- Harper called the protection plan a "cheap insurance plan," saying the plan is aimed at protecting a municipality's water source by encouraging new and existing water users to be better stewards of the resource and by reducing risks of contamination, and treatment costs if something does go wrong.

Harper said developing the plan would require the formation of a community drinking water protection plan committee; the delineation of land areas that need protection by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality; the identification of potential sources of contaminants; and development of management and contingency plans.

City leaders didn't take any action regarding establishing a plan.

- Lighting ceremony - The Wendell Hub City Sign lighting ceremony has tentatively been scheduled for 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 17.

Kimberly scholar earns Idaho student of the year honor

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - A Kimberly High School student was named the United Dairymen of Idaho student of the year.

Luke Lindley was featured on a student recognition spot on a local television broadcast Tuesday morning.

Lindley was selected for the award after the United Dairymen named him student of the month. Students are judged on their academic achievement, public service and other activities.

The school will also receive $5,000 to be used in the library, high school principal John Miller announced during last week's school board meeting.

Other school board business included:

- New board members - Board members Rob Champlin and Dick Rees took the oath of office.

The board voted to retain Jim Wright as chairman for another year. Dr. Kent Allen will be the vice-chairman. Sheri Bradley, treasurer, and Cathy Cooper, clerk.

The board will continue to meet at 7:30 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month.

- Taking bids - The board will call for bids for milk, gasoline and diesel fuel for the coming year. Interested dealers may contact the district clerk at the superintendent's office.

• Contract - The board approved a $1,407 contract with the Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation for next year's services. This is a service for special education students through their Individualized Education Plan in preparation for their future. This is a program that has been offered to 15-20 students in the past and it is a "good deal for the money spent," Miller said.

The district will participate in the Vocational Educational Cooperative of Southern Idaho and use the South Central District Health Department's services for the school's medical needs for the coming school year.

• District study - Board members received the results of a study of needs and plans for the district's future. A strategic planning committee has been working on this plan since September. The board will study the document and it will be on the August agenda.

• Work session - A work session meeting will be held at 9 a.m. Aug. 10 in the secondary elementary school library. The public is invited.

Child dies after TV falls on her in Circuit City

OREM, Utah (AP) - Officials are trying to reconstruct the accident in which a 100-pound television fell on a 5-year-old Payson girl, killing her, said W. Alan McCullough, Circuit City chairman and chief executive officer.

"We are finding it fairly difficult to do so," he said, because they can't find anyone who saw the split-second accident that occurred Wednesday afternoon as the girl's parents were shopping in the Circuit City store in Orem.

Police Lt. Doug Edwards said a 32-inch television sitting on a stand fell over onto the girl, whose name has not been released.

"Though she didn't see it happen," Edwards said, "the girl's mother was close by and lifted the television off the girl."

The girl suffered head injuries and died en route to a hospital.

Edwards said police investigators plan to review video footage captured by the store's theft-prevention cameras.

McCullough flew from the company's Richmond, Va., headquarters and met with managers and employees of the store, which was closed Thursday. Counselors have been hired to help any workers suffering emotional distress, he said.

"We have two interests here: How do we find a way to support the family and make sure we've also supported our own folks here who also would have had a tough day yesterday being in the store when this happened," he said.

Managers at the Orem store contacted local Mormon church leaders after the accident. McCullough said the company wants to coordinate its support for the family, through the church's "extraordinary support system."

He has not spoken with the family, but plans to meet with their local church leader.

Kemphorne challenger wants to change direction of F&G board

Jerry Brady

LEWISTON (AP) — If elected, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jerry Brady would follow the framework laid out in last spring's unsuccessful Fish and Game Commission initiative for appointing new commission members. During a campaign swing, the Idaho Falls newspaper publisher said he would test the procedures immediately by replacing three existing commissioners he believes have set the commission on the wrong course. "You have to change the direction," Brady said, "and you can't do that without getting a new balance, a new majority."

Brady contended the current commission has played too much to the interests of landowners, farmers and ranchers and lost its focus on wildlife. If he upsets Republican Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in the fall, Brady said he would dismiss Commission Chairman Marcus Gibbs of Grace and Commissioners Roy Moulton of Driggs and John Burns of Carmen. A month ago, Brady called for Moulton's resignation for the commissioner's role in the illegal killing of a coyote last March. Moulton watched as an out-of-state expert on predator impact on big game shot a coyote even though he had no permit or hunting license. A backdated permit was issued later, and the shooter wasn't cited. To replace the three, Brady said he would call on sportsmen in the regions with the vacancies to propose a nominee or slate of nominees for him to consider. Brady called that method preferable to having a governor select people who will carry out his purposes, "and those are often the purposes of their supporters, usually people in the resource industries who's first concern is not the welfare of wildlife." "I just think the people who are out in the water and out in the hills and are true lovers of that wildlife, I think they're going to make wiser decisions than people who are appointed and represent the Idaho Farm Bureau," Brady said. He argued that ranching influence led to the ouster of former Fish and Game Director Rod Sando, although Sando had made public statements at odds with specific environmental policies outlined by Kempthorne.

Jury convicts man in sex predator case

RESERVE, N.M. (AP) — Jenny Cashman Lisignoli battled five years in search of justice after her ordeal in the forest, researching bears with a sexual predator who drugged, raped and videotaped her.

That battle has peaked with the conviction of co-worker Patrick Ryan on 36 counts of rape, aggravated battery with a deadly weapon, kidnapping and other sex-related charges. Two other counts were dropped.

Ryan, 51, maintained the sex was by mutual consent while the two worked for the Idaho-based Hornocker Wildlife Institute studying the behavior of black bears under a New Mexico Game and Fish Department contract.

His attorney viewed an appeal. "I know it's not over, but I will fight until the end," Lisignoli said after the verdict was read in state district court on Wednesday. "We need to stop sexual predators and change the system so that women but there who are victims will step forward. That's why I came forward."

She wept when the verdict was read but afterward breathed an audible sigh and said she was ready to get on with her life.

"After all the publicity and questions of my past, I'm now thinking about moving forward," she said.

Her husband, Andrew Lisignoli, agreed.

"I think we're going to dance tonight. It's been a long time coming. This case has been a real struggle between an animal."

Judge Edmund Kase III said sentencing would be in about two months. Prosecutors said Ryan could face 180 years on just the 20 sexual penetration charges.

According to Lisignoli's civil allegations, her troubles began in 1995 when other researchers were taken off the bear project, leaving her alone with Ryan.

SW Idaho county leads state in crashes

CALDWELL (AP) — The grid of rural roads crisscrossing Canyon County has become the most dangerous in the state.

Accidents have risen so much, especially at lightly traveled rural intersections, that Canyon County now leads the state in vehicle crashes. Six people have been killed in just the past month.

"People are moving into the rural areas, which means they're further from work and are trying to get to work faster, and they're not paying attention," Nampa Highway District Director Jim Wellington said.

"Most rural intersections are controlled by stop signs that motorists seem increasingly to ignore."

"These little rural roads out here are dangerous because people don't pay attention," Notus Parma Highway District Director Von Bowman said.

"With traffic lights a very pricey solution at up to $300,000 apiece, county-highway officials have been trying other options."

Accident claims Idaho women

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — Two people were killed when their car collided with a motor home towing a minivan in southern Idaho.

The Idaho State Police identified the victims as Darcy Bollinger, 34, of McCammon and his passenger, Elizabeth Harris. Authorities said Bollinger was westbound on U.S. Highway 30 near Lava Hot Springs when he hit the motorhome Wednesday evening.

The motorhome's driver and his passengers were treated for minor injuries at Bannock Regional Medical Center.

Underbrush counters trees' defenses - Fire crews divert fires from famed sequoias

Flames can climb shorter plants, ignite sequoias' branches

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - As some of the oldest and largest trees in the world, giant sequoias have a unique place in the human imagination.

Growing taller than the Statue of Liberty with trunks so massive they could provide lumber for 40 homes, the trees can withstand almost any natural fire. Some have been growing strong since the dinosaurs' time.

But forestry officials worry that the fire now raging through the Giant Sequoia National Monument is something else - a conflagration blown by erratic winds and rapidly consuming a forest unnaturally thick with chaparral and small trees after years of aggressive fire prevention.

This fire is so intense that firefighters have said they won't be able to save the big trees if the flames reach them - and the edge of the wildfire was as close as a mile Wednesday to one stand of big trees, the Packsaddle Grove.

The grove includes the Packsaddle Giant, which has the fourth largest circumference of any sequoia.

"These are the most massive living organisms ever to exist on the Earth," said Matt Mathes, spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service. "We regard them as some of the most important parts of the national forest system."

The fire was far from the largest, sequoia, the General Sherman, which at 275 feet tall and 30 feet across also is considered the world's largest living thing by volume.

The monument is contained within the Sequoia National Forest, which has up to 13 million visitors a year.

Giant sequoias need fire to free the tiny seeds in their chicken-egg-sized cones, and easily withstand the smaller-scale, lightning-caused fires that have tickled the bases of their trunks throughout history.

But decades of fire suppression has allowed brush and smaller trees to accumulate that burn intensely and can pass the fire up into the big trees' vulnerable limbs.

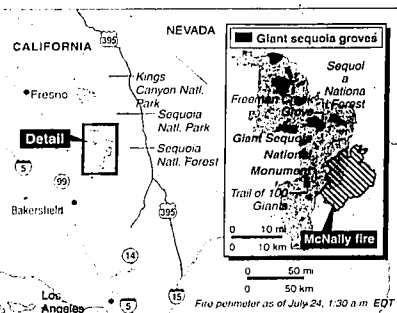

The trees have a natural defense mechanism against small fires - they flare out at the base, which helps deflect falling vegetation, lowering the chances of danger when the leaves and branches eventually burn.

The giant sequoias also are very resistant to insects and disease, said Tom Bonnicksen, professor of forest science at Texas A&M University. "It's not entirely clear why ultimately kills them in old age," he said. "But they're very durable trees."

Wildfire blazes towards treasured sequoias

The McNally Forest Fire has burned more than 57,000 acres. Half of that inside Giant Sequoia National Monument. Hundreds of firefighters were called in to help save the centuries-old giant sequoias.

Limbs are at risk of flames spreading from fires in other trees.

SOURCES: U.S. Forest Service; USGS

Sequoia 220 feet tall - The thick bark is more resistant to fire than the branches.

Shallow roots make sequoias susceptible to toppling.

A Forest Service firefighter watches for spotfires as a 60-foot pine tree burns Wednesday near Johnsonville, Calif., in the Sequoia National Forest.

In prehistoric times, redwoods grew all over around the world, but as the climate and Earth's topography changed, giant sequoias survived only on the western slope of the Sierra Nevada.

"They are unique in the world, and they have endured for millions of years," Bonnicksen said. "They are not only beautiful, but they are the last of their kind."

KERNVILLE, Calif. (AP) - Firefighters said the 57,000-acre fire in the sequoias remained only 5 percent contained Thursday, but crews appear to have saved several groves of massive trees that were in the fire's path.

"This is good day for firefighters," said Jim Paxson, spokesman for a national team of elite firefighters called in to manage the blaze, which began Sunday.

Still, officials expected several thousand more acres to burn and said eleven sequoia groves remain at risk. Firefighters are working day and night to complete a fire line along the blaze's west side within the next three days to minimize risk to all groves, Paxson said.

Flames have reached within a mile of the Packsaddle Grove, a stand of ancient, towering trees including the Packsaddle Giant, which has the fourth-largest circumference of any sequoia. Firefighters bulldozed a firebreak and set backfires to keep the wildfire away.

"The only way to stop fire with fire," said Paxson, who said Thursday those efforts appear to have saved the grove.

Earlier this week, the fire reached within two miles of the Trail of 100 Giants, a grove of towering trees that are among the Earth's largest and oldest.

About half of the fire burned in the 327,769-acre Giant Sequoia National Monument, which is located within the 1.2 million-acre Sequoia National Forest. The monument preserves about half of the existing groves of giant sequoias, as well as the surrounding ecosystem and American Indian archaeological sites.

More than 1,500 firefighters and 12 air tankers are battling the blaze both day and night, and at least a thousand campers and residents have fled with no estimate of when they might return. At least 10 structures have burned and about 200 homes were threatened, with firefighters in place to protect them. Paxson said the fire itself is making less progress.

"There'll be fingers of fire, but not huge acre-gobbling runs," he said Thursday.

Saving the biggest trees was a top priority, U.S. Forest Service spokesman Matt Mathes said. He called the sequoias "priceless" and said while spending was being watched, resources were not being spared to protect them.

Wildfires across the nation already have burned about 6.7 million acres, twice the annual average for recent years, according to Joe Albaugh, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. That increases chances of erosion and devastating floods, including flash floods, he said.

A Sikorsky Skycrane helicopter drops water on the fire near the Giant Sequoia National Monument Thursday.

Suspect has history of drug charges

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) - Peri Van Brunt, the woman arrested on suspicion of accidentally starting the fire razing in Sequoia National Forest, has a history of drug convictions, court records show.

Van Brunt, 45, has been arrested twice since 1992 on charges that she had drug possession and sales involving marijuana and methamphetamine, according to Kern County Superior Court records. She pleaded guilty to one count of possessing a controlled substance far south in 1991 and was sentenced to six months in jail and three years probation.

In 1993, she pleaded guilty to another count of possession of a controlled substance for sale and was sentenced to three years in prison, court records show.

Van Brunt was arrested Wednesday at her Bakersfield home on suspicion of accidentally starting the fire in Sequoia National Forest, said Brian Adams, a Forest Service officer.

"No formal charges had been filed Thursday, according to Carl Fuller, chief assistant U.S. attorney in Fresno, who said Van Brunt would be arraigned today.

Mary Van Brunt said her sister-in-law often came in the woods with her family and insisted she would not intentionally start a wildfire. "She's very conscientious of the forest and the animals," she said. "She's not some pyromaniac. She just wouldn't do that."

Peri Van Brunt was cooperating with authorities, said Jim Paxson, spokesman for a national team of elite firefighters called in to manage the blaze.

Interior chief says Bush will go slow on logging

RENO, Nev. (AP) - Unlike Sen. Tom Daschle, the Bush administration is not yet ready to waive major environmental laws so as to expedite logging to reduce wildfire threats, Interior Secretary Gale Norton said Thursday.

Norton said she's extremely concerned about overstocked forests contributing to fires in the West and is examining a variety of ways to accelerate reforestation efforts.

But she said she was surprised that Daschle, D-S.D., went so far as to push an amendment through the Senate exempting such projects in his home state from environmental assessments under the National Environmental Policy Act and other laws.

"I think everybody was surprised," Norton told reporters Thursday after touring a geothermal plant on the edge of Reno.

"We are looking at ways at streamlining studies to try to move more quickly on being able to restore the forest to health ... ways at working within the existing environmental legislation to do that," she said. "Sen. Daschle went further - in trying to NEPA analysis, no environmental analysis - than what the administration has ever proposed."

Daschle's measure on the way to the White House would exempt a 700-acre timber sale in the Black Hills, from NEPA and the National Forest Management Act and insulate the logging from any court challenges by environmentalists.

The Black Hills Fire Prevention Agreement amendment passed the House late Tuesday and the Senate on Wednesday as part of a $28.8 billion defense supplemental-appropriations bill.

The legislation applies only to the Black Hills. But Daschle said he could support similar legislation for other states. "I think the Black Hills could be a model for the rest of the country," he said.

Rep. Dennis Rehberg, R-Mont., and Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., introduced legislation in the House Thursday that would effectively apply the Daschle measure to all states.

U.S. getting ready to expand Cuban prison for terror suspects

WASHINGTON (AP) - With captures of terrorist suspects expected to keep mounting, the U.S. military is planning to build more cells at its high-security prison in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

The permanent jail at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station - the main military facility for holding and interrogating suspects - is nearly full, with 564 suspected al-Qaida and Taliban prisoners from the campaign in Afghanistan and elsewhere.

The Pentagon has accepted bids and expects to award a contract within days for construction of 200 more units at the 600-cell facility, known as Camp Delta, officials said Thursday on condition of anonymity.

The military also has about 80 detainees at a base in Bagram, Afghanistan, some of whom it would like to transfer to Cuba. An unknown number of others are held by U.S. forces in undisclosed locations, and still undisclosed others are under the control of the CIA and foreign governments, defense officials said.

The Cuba facility - as well as the administration's holding of prisoners without charges nor access to lawyers - has drawn criticism from human and civil rights groups.

Moussaoui tries to plead guilty to four counts, then withdraws

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) - Zacarias Moussaoui declared Thursday he was guilty of four of six charges accusing him of conspiring with the Sept. 11 hijackers, then abruptly withdrew his attempted plea after arguing with the judge.

"You want to link me to certain facts that will guarantee my death," Moussaoui told U.S.

District Judge Leonie Brinkema as he withdrew a plea he tried to make an hour earlier.

Moussaoui had begun his arraignment Thursday by saying he wanted to plead guilty to the first four of six charges in the indictment the government brought against him last December. All four of the charges carry the death penalty.

But the hearing took a turn when Brinkema declared she did not believe Moussaoui intended to admit his full guilt as laid out in the indictment.

Moussaoui, the lone person charged with conspiring with the September hijackers, balked when the judge asked him directly if he had joined with members of al-Qaida in a plan to seize aircraft. "I want a recess," he asked. The judge allowed a brief break, and then Moussaoui returned and said he wanted to withdraw the attempted guilty plea.

The judge then ended the hearing and told the government that if the case continues to trial, she will not allow prosecutors to mention Moussaoui had tried to plead guilty once.

A canvas of feathers

Iris Boyd's feathered creations will be on display at this weekend's Art In The Park.

Art is sometimes unconventional in the park

'I saw beauty in paintings that had been done on feathers. So I got some feathers and began experimenting, using acrylics for the first time. I eventually settled on very thin acrylics, like a canvas painter would use watercolors, and I really like the effects.'

- Iris Boyd

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Besides, turkey-feather art doesn't take up a whole wall.

But for Filer artist Iris Boyd, portrait art with small is part of a larger spiritual quest.

"I used to be landscape painter, working on canvas," said Boyd, 53. "But I saw feather painting and decided it was something I'd like to try."

The Stanley-bred Boyd, who will be among about 70 artists displaying their work Saturday and Sunday at the Art Guild of the Magic Valley's 43rd annual Art in the Park, says she had a religious conversion a few years ago and began reordering her work as well as her life.

"I saw beauty in paintings that had been done on feathers," said Boyd, who taught herself how to paint as a child. "So I got some feathers and began experimenting, using acrylics for the first time. I eventually settled on very thin acrylics, like a canvas painter would use watercolors, and I really like the effects."

Boyd paints animals' and other subjects on white turkey feathers she orders via the Internet from Missouri.

"I had to do some looking to find a dependable supplier," she said.

This weekend's art show - which is also a juried show and sale - is the summer season's marquee event for many local artists like Boyd. The Art Guild is changing the name of the venerable artfests show next summer - it will become the Summer Fine Arts Festival - but the format will remain the same.

"It's just a lot of fun for people to come out in nice weather and look at some great art," says organizer Diane VanDine, who estimates Art in the Park attracts between 3,000 and 5,000 visitors to City Park on the last weekend in July. "A lot depends upon the weather, and this weekend is supposed to be good."

With gallery space not plentiful in south-central Idaho, Art in the Park is an important marketing event for many artists, some of whom - like Boyd - earn a significant part of livelihoods from their art.

In addition to the artists, there will be nine food vendors on hand throughout the weekend and live music from noon until 5:30 p.m. on Saturday and from noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday; bids lighted by a noon Sunday noon performance by the Idaho Old-Time Fiddlers.

Proceeds from Art in the Park go into a scholarship fund for artists.

Star violinist comes to S.V. - WHATEVER'S FAIR

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - Joshua Bell is the equivalent of a rock star in the classical musical field.

The 35-year-old violinist was named as one of the 50 Most Beautiful People on the Planet by People magazine - right in front of Penelope Cruz. He's performed on "Sesame Street" and on "Prairie Home Companion" with Garrison Keillor.

He's provided the music and body double for such movies as "The Red Violin," "Iris" and Disney's "Music of the Heart." He won a Grammy last year for his recording of "Bernstein: West Side Story Suite" and just received his first Emmy nomination for his performance of that piece in "PBS Great Performances: Live from Central Park."

He was the only classical musician featured on "this year's Grammy Awards telecast. And, like many a rock star, he gets his share of calls from girls who wonder if he remembers the girl in the red dress sitting on the first row.

"Never mind that he plays a 17 1/2 Stradivarius, rather than an electric bass guitar.

Bell, who will play with the Sun Valley Summer Symphony on Aug. 13, says he doesn't mind the celebrity status he gets playing such gigs as the "Tonight" show something some of his fellow musicians might find disagreeable. But, he said, he has to be careful because how he's considered by his peers in the classical musical field is more important than anything.

Joshua Bell

"I want to be a musician's musician. I want to be consistent," he said. The symphony, now in its 18th season, will perform free concerts in a tent on the Sun Valley Resort esplanade from Aug. 4 through 19, following the seventh annual Edgar M.

Bronfman Chamber Music Series on Monday, Wednesday and Aug. 2.

Bell has been turning the classical musical world on its ear since he won a Seventeen magazine talent contest at age 14. He debuted with the Philadelphia Orchestra that same year and since has performed with the world's leading symphonies and orchestras all over the world, including the New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony and London Symphony.

Watching Bell, who loses up to five pounds in sweat during a performance is electrifying, added Sun Valley Summer Symphony Music Conservatory Director Kim Cassenti. "I really enjoy his passion and enthusiasm for the pieces he plays. He's so enthusiastic and demonstrative when he plays that it's a lot of fun to watch him."

This year Bell will play Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E Minor, Op. 64 on his new multi-million-dollar Stradivarius, which was stolen from Carnegie Hall in 1936 and only resurfaced in the 1980s after the burglar revealed his act on his deathbed.

Austin Powers returns to screen in 'Goldmember'

Combined wire service reports

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, Knight Ridder, Newspapers and Associated Press.

'Austin Powers in Goldmember'

Pretty much every cliché to scorn about a sequel applies here. The movie is terribly unfunny most of the time, constantly repeating its own lame gags and lethargically regurgitating some of the best bits from the previous two films. Mike Myers returns as Austin, Dr. Evil and Fat Bastard and plays an irritating new villain, Goldmember, who plots to destroy the world with a golden meteor. Beyoncé Knowles of Destiny's Child is Austin's new love interest and sidekick, a sassy update of 70s exploitation heroines. Michael Caine plays Austin's neglectful super-spy father. The best thing the movie has going is a wealth of big-name cameos. PG-13 for sexual innuendo, crude humor and language. 95 minutes.

Mike Myers as Austin Powers in New Line Cinema's comedy 'Austin Powers in Goldmember.'

'The Bourne Identity'

A movie based on a decades-old Cold War novel by the late Robert Ludlum that's already been filmed for television: That doesn't sound like something that would interest Doug Liman, director of the indie hit "Swingers" — or anyone else, really. But this taut spy thriller is as hip as its techno soundtrack and as compelling as its head-banging CIA assassins and trying to figure out why he's able to fight like Jackie Chan and think his way out of the tightest situations. Frank's Parents of "Run Lola Run" costars as a woman whom he initially pays to help him but who sticks around for the excitement, adventure and romance — just like us. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 58 minutes.

'The Country Bears'

Disney has taken the most cornpone of all theater clichés — "We gotta put on a show!" — and turned it into a foot-stomping, crowd-pleasing, heartwarming romp. "The Country Bears" has a catchy soundtrack with several show-stopping musical numbers, comic touches aimed at parents and goopy slapstick humor that appeals to all ages. Tim Allen is screamingly funny as a villainous banker and Daryl "Chill" Mitchell and Diedrich Bader delight as two modern-day Keystone Cops. Haley Joel Osment is earnest as the young bear who leaves his human family to reunite "The Country Bears" rock group and save the hall they made famous. 88 minutes. Rated G.

'The Crocodile Hunter: Collision Course'

Wrestling venomous snakes and crocodiles and keeping it in Italian and explanation points a cable's Animal Planet star Steve Irwin makes Australia safe for both animals and people, and never knows the CIA is after him. Crappy, nutty, consistently funny. And educational! With Steve and Terri Irwin, Magda Szubanski, David Wenham, Kate Beahan. Screenplay by Holly Goldberg Sloan. Directed by John Stainton. (127) PG for action violence/peril and mild language.

'Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood'

Ellen Burstyn, Shirley Knight, Maggie Smith and the scene-stealing Fionnula Flanagan get their ya-yas out in this adaptation of the best-selling novel. Sandra Bullock plays a Louisiana transplant to New York who confronts her painful past by learning about the troubled history of her larger-than-life, self-absorbed mother (played by Burstyn) and as a young woman by Ashley Judd. Though the flashbacks contain harrowing scenes of child abuse and mental instability, the film is really about the lifelong loyalties of the sisters, which Burstyn and company attack without restraint, giving new meaning to the term broad acting. Rated PG-13; violence, language, alcohol abuse. 1 hour, 56 minutes.

'Eight Legged Freaks'

The latest parody/homage to big-eyed-bug movies from the '50s is produced by Dean Devlin and Roland Emmerich, who made two of the biggest-budgeted B-movies ever in the entertaining "Independence Day" and the deadly dull "Godzilla." This is somewhere in between (and a lot less expensive), with David Arquette as a small-town prodigal son who returns home just in time to mix it up with some spider-farm refugees contaminated by chemical waste. Neither scary enough for screaming nor funny enough for choking, all it really has to sell is its intentional cheesiness. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 33 minutes.

'Halloween: Resurrection'

The eighth entry in the franchise marks the return of Rick Rosenthal, who directed "Halloween II," and was written by Larry Brand and Sean Hood. The movie starts off chillingly enough with John Carpenter's theme music from the original 1978 "Halloween" playing over the opening credits. Unfortunately, that's the peak of fright for the film. It's like a roller coaster that starts you off with a nice, slow, anticipation-building climb to the top, only to drop you off on the kiddie coaster in Toontown. With Busta Rhymes, Brian Van Holt and Jamie Lee Curtis. (126) R for sexual violence, language, some gore and brief drug use.

'K-19: The Widowmaker'

The story of the unthinkable's nearly happening on Russian nuclear submarine K-19 in 1961 is chilling enough that the Soviet Union kept it a state secret for nearly 30 years. No, the Hollywood system hasn't completely wrecked this "inspired by actual events" story of undersea heroism in the face of near nuclear catastrophe. The tale is too potent and the talents involved, from stars Harrison Ford and Liam Neeson to top action-director Kathryn Bigelow, are too strong for that. Rather it's the film's determination to push hard for self-congratulatory morals and convenient resolutions that undercuts the film's strengths and makes it more conventional. With Peter Sarsgaard. (2:09) PG-13, for disturbing images.

'Kissing Jessica Stein'

"Kissing Jessica Stein" has the look and feel of a smart, stylish New York romantic comedy in which the principals are articulate and forthright about their intelligence and sophistication. Jessica Stein (Jennifer Westfeldt) is a beautiful but neurotic newspaper feature writer who aspires to be a painter. She is 28 and is yet to find Mr. Right. Meanwhile, Helen Cooper (Heather Juergensen), an assistant director of a trendy downtown art gallery, has just placed a woman-seeking-woman ad in a personals column that begins with a quote from a poem that catches Jessica's attention. Intrigued, Jessica answers it on impulse. Rated R.

'Like Mike'

A sure-fire heart-warmer: lively, funny yet emotion-charged and uplifting. This family-friendly movie, about a little kid who ends up a star on an NBA team, soars above so many sports comedies because director John Schultz and writers Michael Eliot and Jordan Moffat aim as high as the basketball hoops that figure so importantly in their story. Lil' Bow Wow (who recently dropped the Lil') is terrifically opposite Morris Chestnut, who gives a wonderfully nuanced performance as the star player of the Los Angeles Knights. With Eugene Levy and Robert Forster and cameos by 18 NBA players. (1:41) PG, for brief mild language.

'Lilo & Stitch'

Looser and less obviously formulaic in its fresh approach to our hearts than the animated family movies we've become used to, this brush film has an unleashed, subversive sense of humor that's less corporate and more uninhibited than any non-Pixar Disney film has been in time out of mind. With its hand-drawn characters and its use of watercolors for backgrounds (the first time the studio's done that since the 1940s), this is a happy throwback to the time when cartoons were cinema's most idiosyncratic form instead of one of its most predictable. Directed by Chris Sanders & Dean DeBlois. Voices by Daveigh Chase, Sanders, Tia Carrere, David Ogden Stiers, Kevin McDonald, Ving Rhames. (1:35) PG, for mild sci-fi action.

'Men in Black 2'

Director Barry Sonnenfeld knew it would be impossible to replicate the novelty of his 1997 hit, which pitted agents Jay (Will Smith) and Kay (Tommy Lee Jones) in a secret war against insidious alien invaders among us. So the sequel — in which the two agents must prevent an evil vegetable in Victoria's Secret lingerie (Lara Flynn Boyle) from destroying the world and who knows what else — replaces the novelty with cleverness, the kind of gags you laugh at 3 or 4 seconds later. Returning refugees from the first film include the talking pug Frank, the funky Worm Guy and the sleazy pawnshop owner played by Tony Shalhoub; they're joined by a two-headed but dim-witted henchman played by Johnny Knoxville and all manner of new slime and squiggly tendrils.

'Minority Report'

Set in a near future that seems jointly designed by Sharper Image and the Supreme Court, Steven Spielberg's techno-thriller stars Tom Cruise as a cop in charge of an experimental but supposedly infallible program that allows law enforcement to identify and arrest murderers before they claim victims. When this fall-proof system figures him as a future killer, he has to go on the run to clear himself. Beautifully cast, photographed and designed — with some amazing digital special effects — the film has more in common with the chilly "A.I." than anyone wants to admit. This one, too, falters in its final overextended hour, but it still leaves you eager to experience it again. Rated PG-13; violence, sexual situations, language. 2 hours, 23 minutes.

'Mr. Deeds'

What's most interesting about Adam Sandler's latest film is how lacking it is in any of the things, from humor to emotion to halfway decent acting, we might go to a movie for. There's not even enough here to get mad at. Rather, it's more dispiriting than anything else to see how little a film can offer and still get made if a star who commands a paying audience decides to make it his own. With Winona Ryder, Peter Gallagher and John Turturro. Loosely inspired by the Frank Capra/Robert Riskin/Gary Cooper 1936 classic "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." (1:31) PG-13, for language including sexual references, and some rear nudity.)

'My Big Fat Greek Wedding'

Mia Farrow's autobiographical one-woman stage play about growing up Greek is transfigured into a mushy, overcooked ethnic comedy with culture clash jokes whose freshness date expired 30 years ago. Farrow, however, is affecting as the glum, withdrawn single gal who gets everyone at home riled over her engagement

'Reign of Fire'

Dragons have the best lines in the film and they don't say a word. All they have to do is breathe. While the concept of a humans vs. dragons smackdown is a good one, the way it's worked out on screen is more silly than compelling. The script is of the pedestrian "we have paid a terrible price and now we have a chance to make a difference" variety, and Rob Bowman, who directed both "The X-Files" movie and many TV episodes, is better at handling the computer-generated dragon than the film's fallic actors. With Christian Bale, Matthew McConaughey, Isabella Scorupco and Gerard Butler. (1:40) PG-13 for intense action violence.)

'Road to Perdition'

Director Sam Mendes follows his Academy Award-winning social satire "American Beauty" with a loss-of-innocence saga of fathers and sons, disguised in the trench coats and tough talk of a gangster movie. Tom Hanks stars as a family man who is also a Depression-era mob enforcer and

Coroner: Cocaine contributed to Entwistle's death

LAS VEGAS (AP) - John Entwistle, the 57-year-old bass player for the rock band The Who, died from a heart attack caused by cocaine use, the Clark County coroner said Thursday.

Coroner Ron Flud ruled the death accidental and said it was not an overdose.

"The heart attack we believe was brought on by the significant amount of cocaine" that was in Entwistle's system at the time of death, he said.

Entwistle was one of the band's founders. Another original member, drummer Keith Moon, died in 1978 of a drug overdose at the age of 32. Authorities said he took too many pills prescribed to control his alcoholism.

As he often does with classical pieces, Bell has injected his own cadenzas or own composition in the concerto's first movement. Never mind that doing so could raise eyebrows among those who consider classical compositions museum relics never to be toyed with, "I decided: Why not go ahead and shake things up? The notion that a piece is supposed to be untouchable by virtue of being very old is just a phenomenon of the last 50 years," Bell said. "In the 19th century, music was so much more alive and flexible and changing. I'm sure Mendelssohn would have no objection in principle to my cadenza, though he might not like what I wrote. He wrote his own cadenzas to some of Bach's work."

The new CD that features this work also features Bell's first recording of the Beethoven Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 61. Bell considers that piece "the Holy Grail of violin concertos" and says he only recently felt ready to record it even though he's played the piece since he was 15.

"It's the greatest and hardest.

And, as recording opportunities came along, I'd push it aside because I was afraid that after I recorded it a year later I would wish I hadn't. Now I feel settled enough with it. I feel now it is as good a time as ever."

As an adjunct professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Bell has helped develop a variety of high-tech musical toys for tiny tots, including a beat bugs with tentacles coming out of them that do different things when pressed and pulled. He also has been involved with a computer program that lets youngsters compose music without ever having to write a note on a piece of paper.

"I wish I could claim I was some sort of missionary going out there, but I can't given my touring schedule. But I do what I can," he said. "We all worry about the future of classical music. Music has to be part of the diet of a kid growing up, part of his education—just like math and science."

The kid in the fresh-scrubbed Bell, who looks younger than his age, does a thing particularly kidlike on his rare days off. He skips practice to play tennis, ski, golf and play video games.

"Practicing is tough when you're on the road as much as I am," he acknowledged. When I get a day or week off, I like to not look at my violin so I can recharge and go back with a fresh attitude. So I just do one new piece a year."

"Bell will get a rare opportunity to sign his CDs after his performance in Sun Valley—something he likes to do to feel a connection to the people he makes music for."

"I'm looking forward to playing Sun Valley," he said. "A lot of people would say it's not a serious venue because it's too relaxed. But I enjoy it when I see people coming to enjoy themselves. It makes playing more enjoyable. Sometimes in concert halls you get the feeling people are really not there to enjoy themselves."

Movies

who gets a taste of his own bad medicine when his wife and youngest son are murdered. Now he's forced to take along the older son (Tyler Hoechlin) he barely knows on his quest for vengeance. Paul Newman plays Hanks' weary surrogate father John Rooney, Daniel Craig the no-good blood son of Rooney and Jude Law a hit man dispatched to take Hanks down. The film is beautifully designed and photographed by the great Conrad Hall, and it is surprisingly entertaining considering its dark, deliberate tone. Rated R; violence, language. 1 hour, 59 minutes.

'Spirit: Stallion of the Cimarron'

Traditional hand-drawn animation is seamlessly combined with computer-generated imagery to tell the story of the coming of the West through the eyes of a maverick mustang who is captured by the cavalry but refuses to be broken. Spirit escapes with an American Indian (the voice of Daniel Studi) who becomes his ally, not his master. The film draws inspiration from "The Lion King" and from various John Ford Westerns but not from talking-animal cartoons. Spirit's feelings are conveyed through narration by Matt Damon and the ingenuity of the animators. Rated G. Language. 1 hour, 23 minutes.

'Star Wars: Episode II Attack of the Clones'

Can this franchise be saved? Probably not, unless George Lucas - who seems to care more about creating new digital space creatures, paving the intergalactic skyway system and building better droids than he does about crafting an involving story and developing human characters - decides to pass the light saber to someone else for the next episode. This is supposed to be the chapter in which Anakin Skywalker (Hayden Christensen) grows up, wows Senator Padme (Natalie Portman), breaks away from his mentor Obi-Wan (Ewan McGregor) and begins his dance with the Dark Side. But tell us something we don't know. Aside from the eye-dazzling computer wizardry, it all seems ridiculously juvenile, and not in the fun-cheesy style of the first "Star Wars." The bad dialogue and ridiculously simple story twists give this the smell of leftover wet Wookiee. If you love for computer-generated imagery or for inside references to the saga itself, run see it. The rest of us would rather remember this series as it was when it was alive. Rated PG; violence. 2 hours, 22 minutes.

'Stuart Little 2'

True to its name twice over, it's a little movie intended for little people. But, more than the last time around, it has elements that might help divert those bigger people who find themselves unavoidably in attendance. For one thing, the adventures of the 3-inch mouse (voiced by the wonderful Michael J. Fox) who walks like a man now have more visual flair, including a particular emphasis on flying. Freed from the burden of setting up Stuart's world, this film, written by Bruce Joel Rubin and directed once again by Rob Minkoff, gives freer rein to Stuart's enthusiastic personality. With the voices of Nathan Lane, Melanie Griffith and James Woods; plus, Hugh Laurie, Geena Davis and Jonathan Lipnicki. (1.18 PG, for brief mild language.)

'The Sum of All Fears'

Director Phil Alden Robinson ("Field of Dreams") and writers Paul Attanasio and Daniel Pyne rejuvenate the Jack Ryan franchise with this edge-of-your-seat thriller based on Tom Clancy's 1991 novel. Ben Affleck rejuvenates the role of Ryan, now a cocky junior CIA analyst who gets to play with the big boys when Russia and the United States once again find themselves on the brink of nuclear war. Robinson smartly takes the nous off Affleck by surrounding him with more seasoned operatives: Morgan Freeman as the wizened CIA director, James Cromwell as an excitable president and various other old hands as military advisers, heads of state and fascist rogues. Even as it asks us to consider the unthinkable, the film also invites us to think: It puts us in the hot seat and respects our intelligence. Rated PG-13; violence, disturbing depictions of mass destruction, language. 2 hours, 5 minutes.

'Windtalkers'

There's a good story in this World War II drama - inspired by the experiences of the Navajos who were recruited to use their native tongue to transmit a code Japanese intelligence couldn't decipher - but the writers and director John Woo fail to find it. We're left with a formulaic war movie, starring Nicolas Cage as an emotionally and physically shattered sergeant given the job of protecting patriotic family man Adam Beach, not only from the enemy, but from his fellow Marines who don't cotton to Injuns. The B-movie script and ethnic stereotypes keep this film from ever achieving the visceral impact of "Saving Private Ryan" or "Black Hawk Down." And making the hero a white man pretty much misses the point. Rated R; violence, language. 2 hours, 18 minutes.

Idaho's All-Around cowgirl hits barrel in second round

The Times-News

FARMINGTON, N.M. - Roll out the barrels but don't knock them over. Idaho's All-Around cowgirl - Italy Jo Eames of Gooding - saw her hopes of a national title roll away when she knocked over a barrel in the second round of the National High School Finals Rodeo Thursday morning at McGee Park in Farmington, N.M.

Eames wasn't alone in her disappointment as Arizona's Courtney Dobson, who lives and competes in Idaho during the summer, also tumbled over a barrel. Dobson was second in the event after the first go-round.

Both cowgirls were at the top of the all-around standings before the mishaps, said Fifth District representative, Stevia Webb.

"They would have both been right at the top," Webb said. "It was really too bad."

Eames, who was decked out in red, white and blue with western fringe and a white hat, had exhaled in barrel racing during Wednesday's final go-round, timing in at 17.582 seconds for third place Wednesday behind the 17.209 of leader Brittany Pozzi of Victoria, Texas.

Eames, who was in 11th place after the run on Wednesday, persevered despite having problems with her mount.

"Her horse stumbled and pulled off a shoe in the process of making that great run (Wednesday night)," Webb said. "They looked all over and never could find it. So her dad (Vern Eames) nailed a new shoe back on."

Cameron Ebert, a bareback rider from Arizona, is temporarily trapped under his horse, which fell and rolled during the fifth performance of the National Finals High School Rodeo Wednesday morning at McGee Park in Farmington, N.M. Ebert was not seriously injured in the incident.

Here comes the heat

Study: 23 football players died in '01

By Margaret Lillard
 The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. - Heat-related football deaths at all levels have steadily increased, replacing direct fatal injuries as the sport's biggest on-field safety concern.

Eight football players died nationwide last year because of injuries, while another three died from heatstroke, according to a study released Thursday by the University of North Carolina. Twelve more deaths were due to natural causes aggravated by exercise, such as a heart attack.

The number of injury deaths reflected a substantial drop since stricter rules about tacking and blocking were enacted in the mid-1970s, when fatalities regularly reached double digits.

Heatstroke deaths have been quietly climbing, from 13 in the 1980s to 15 in the 1990s to seven in the past two years alone.

"We are concerned about all these deaths, of course, but especially those that resulted from heatstroke, which are almost always preventable," said Frederick Mueller, a professor and chair of physical education, exercise and sport science at North Carolina.

All three heat-related deaths occurred within one week at the end of July and start of August last year.

Minnesota Vikings tackle Corey Stringer collapsed during practice July 31 and died the next day, as did Travis Siowers, a high school player near Michigantown, Ind.

Less than a week earlier, Eraste Autin, an incoming freshman at the University of Florida, died of complications of heatstroke. He collapsed at the end of a voluntary summer conditioning session and was in a coma for six days.

Mueller is also the chairman of the American Football Coaches' Committee of Football Injuries and directs the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injuries, based at North Carolina.

He said 20 football players suffered heat-related deaths since

Armstrong leaves mountains with big lead

The Associated Press

CLUSES, France - Lance Armstrong rode an unremarkable final mountain stage in the Tour de France on Thursday and finished far behind the winner.

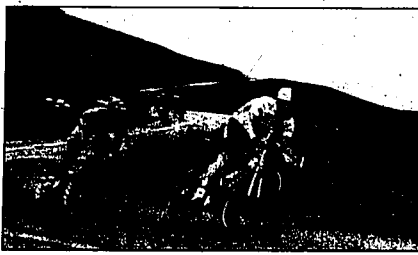

In other words, it was a perfect day.

The leg from Alime to Cluses was the last chance for rivals to seriously challenge Armstrong. When it ended, no threat emerged, and the Texan retained an overall lead of 5 minutes, 6 seconds.

With such a huge advantage, Armstrong is almost certain to take a fourth straight title on Sunday.

"I sleep pretty good at night with the lead that we have," Armstrong said after the 17th stage, which he finished in 24th place, 4:36 behind winner Dario

Frigo of Italy. He certainly can afford to relax. The three remaining stages are much easier than the mountain legs, in which huge chunks of time can be won or lost. Probably the biggest threat to Armstrong now is the possibility Please see ARMSTRONG, Page D5

NFL champs set for opening

The Associated Press

SMITHFIELD, R.I. - The New England Patriots were back at Bryant College on Thursday for training camp, this time as Super Bowl champions and not just another mediocre team.

Last year, they were coming off a 5-11 season and trying to figure out where the many new players fit in. They ended up fitting in quite well. Nine new players - seven veteran free agents and draft picks Richard Seymour and Matt Light - became starters.

This year, 20 of the 22 starters from the championship team return, led by quarterback Tom Brady, a second-year man who took over in the second game when Drew Bledsoe was injured and ended up as Super Bowl MVP.

That didn't stop coach Bill Belichick from signing 14 veteran free agents in the offseason. Tight end Christian Fauria and defensive tackle Steve Martin enter camp as the new starters.

The Patriots were so intent on not standing pat that they even brought in a free-agent defensive tackle who played just one season of college ball at Idaho after growing up in Germany, where he was a discus thrower. Daniel Banecki quickly picked up on Belichick's mantra: last season's success won't help the Patriots this year.

"I know they're the world champion now," said Banecki, who played in NFL Europe last season, "but it's a different season. It was a great job they did, but it starts from zero now."

A year ago, the Patriots entered training camp worrying.

Lawyer: Baseball can reach deal before strike

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Baseball's top labor lawyer thinks there's a way to work out a new contract without another strike.

Sounding unusually optimistic, Rob Manfred said after Thursday's five-hour bargaining session that the sides will meet again Friday and probably will have sessions for five straight days starting Monday.

That would be the longest period of sustained talks since the previous contract expired Nov. 7. "I have said repeatedly, publicly, that I believe it is possible for us to reach a negotiated agreement without having an interruption of the season, and I still believe that," said Manfred, baseball's executive vice president for labor relations.

Players, fearful owners will change work rules after the season or lock them out, are threatening to strike in August or September, which would be baseball's ninth stoppage since 1972. Bob DuPuy, baseball's chief operating officer, concurred with Manfred that the sides had made progress on revenue sharing. Union head Donald Fehr was traveling home from Montreal and hasn't been updated on the session. Gene Ota, the union's No. 2 official, wasn't optimistic but did say the talks were "informal." # Rain pushes AA Legion district back

The Times-News

POCATELLO - Top seed Twin Falls defeated Highland of Pocatello 12-2 in eight innings at the rain-delayed American Legion AA district tournament Thursday at Halliwell Park in Pocatello.

J.D. Litt picked up the complete game win and Brandon Salinas had three RBI. Two early rain delays pushed the start of the game back by almost four hours.

In other games, host Pocatello downed the Minico Spartans 11-9. Highland advanced to play Twin Falls after crushing Upper Valley 14-2 earlier.

Highland faces Minico, which is already guaranteed a berth to state because the Spartans hosted last year's state tournament. Minico loaded the bases in the top of ninth with none out but scored just one run. The Spartans were hurt by a questionable foul ball on what appeared to be a hit batter in the inning, said Pocatello coach Vinnie Benivede.

The Spartans survived giving up seven unearned runs in the first inning and climbed back to even the score at 7-7 after their half of the fifth inning when a two-hour rain delay interrupted play.

Minico allowed a pair more of unearned runs in the sixth inning following the two-run Pocatello fifth inning. Nate Tracy went seven innings for the Spartans on the mound but couldn't overcome the defensive miscues and nine unearned runs.

"Honestly, Nate pitched really well," Minico coach Ben Frank said. "You just can't give a good team like Pocatello extra outs."

Rain forced second seed Idaho Falls to play Pocatello (34-15) today at 10:30 a.m. with the winner advancing to the championship and the loser facing Upper Valley at 4:30 p.m. The tournament concludes on Saturday.

Canadian skaters come to Sun Valley Saturday

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

It may not have the fanfare of the intrigue of the Olympics, but the center of the figure skating world Saturday will be the center of the figure skating world Saturday.

Canadian co-gold medalist pair Jamie Sale and David Pelletier - the subjects of the so-called "Skategate" at the Salt Lake Winter Games - will perform at the sold-out Sun Valley show on Saturday.

It will be only the second time the pair have performed since the Olympics.

A judging scandal at the Games resulted in a second, co-gold medal awarded to the duo when French judge Marie-Reine Le Gougeon admitted she had been pressured to vote for Russians Elena Bereznina and Anton Sikharulidze, who originally were awarded the gold after the long program.

Since then, Sale and Pelletier have had other troubles befall them, most recently the firing of their former agent and having to scrap their own tour plans.

The pair had sequestered themselves in their hometown of Edmonton, Alberta, performing in only one major skating show, in Edmonton, since Salt Lake City.

But the skaters have resurfaced. They've hired a new adviser and signed a lucrative deal with the Stars on Ice tour, which begins rehearsals in September.

In an interview with the New York Times last week, which appears on the figure skaters' Web site at www.sale-pelletier.com, Sale said the months after the Olympics have been frustrating.

"We just had an unfortunate time," she said. "We were led in a direction that we did not want to be led in. We know our reputation isn't ruined. We do miss skating and we did miss being on tour this summer."

Rainer Kolb, who helps organize the Sun Valley show, said he was "extremely fortunate" to get the couple to perform on Saturday. He said the deal was finalized around July 15.

For Sale and Pelletier, who arrive today in Idaho, they are looking at Sun Valley as a chance to relax and get back into form, said Kolb.

"They want to come down here for an easy time," he said. "We try to keep it low-key."

The Canadians will perform two routines approximately four minutes in length during the show, which is slated to begin in

French judge drops appeal

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO - Figure skating's Olympic judging scandal came to a legal end Thursday, oddly leaving every involved party a loser.

The decision by French judge Marie-Reine Le Gougeon to drop her appeal of a three-year suspension by the International Skating Union for improper behavior was the final act in a pairs skating soap opera that began Feb. 11 at the Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

Earlier this month French Ice Sports Federation President Didier Gailhaguet decided not to appeal his three-year suspension for allegedly ordering Le Gougeon to judge in a certain way.

Both decisions were made because the French federation, in a general financial bind, refused to bear the costs of the appeals.

Gailhaguet's decision also was influenced by events at the June ISU Congress, where his two nemesis, Sally-Anne Stapleford of Britain and Britta Lindgren of Sweden, were not re-elected to figure skating's powerful technical committee.

He was re-elected as French federation president in May.

According to a Le Gougeon statement issued Thursday by her attorney, Erik Christiansen of Salt Lake City, she intends to write a tell-all book.

It is time for the dirty little secrets of the figure skating world to come to light," Le Gougeon is quoted as saying.

"The truth will be told in my book, and the world will learn firsthand the truth about the ISU."

The ISU could not be reached for comment.

the evening at Sun Valley Resort's outdoor ice rink around "9:15 or 9:30."

"It's a unique opportunity for the skaters," Kolb said.

Kolb said he had also just signed 2002 World Champion Irina Slutskaya to perform in Sun Valley on Aug. 17.

Agassi, Gambill reach Mercedes-Benz quarters

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Defending champion Andre Agassi needed just 54 minutes to defeat Robby Ginepri 6-3, 6-1 at the Mercedes-Benz Cup on Thursday night.

Agassi, the No. 2 seed, broke Ginepri twice in each set.

His own serve overwhelmed his 19-year-old opponent, and Agassi served two consecutive love games in the first set.

"I felt I was on top of my game early, putting pressure on and controlling the points," said Agassi, playing his first tournament since losing in the second round at Wimbledon.

Agassi advanced to a quarterfinal against No. 5 Gustavo Kuerten, a semifinalist here last year, who beat Britain's Martin Lee 7-5, 7-6 (5). It was Kuerten's second hardcourt victory since last year's U.S. Open.

He beat Michael Gambill in the forgotten man when talk turns to possible American successors for aging superstars Agassi and Pete Sampras.

mative and enlightening" and that "we were able to narrow the focus of what we have to do."

"There are still substantial problems," he said. "I don't mean to sound pessimistic. I just don't think bells and whistles are in order."

He agreed with Manfred that an agreement was possible without a walkout.

"I don't think anyone's ever doubted that," Orza said. "It depends how much are people willing to recede from their positions."

The central issues are management's proposals to increase the amount of locally generated revenue each team shares from 20 percent to 50 percent, and to have a 50 percent luxury tax on the portions of payrolls above $98 million.

Players' think those plans would drain too much money from the big-spending teams that push salaries higher.

The current contract contained a 34-to-35 percent luxury tax for the 1997, 1998 and 1999 seasons, with the threshold at the midpoint between the teams with the fifth- and sixth-highest payrolls.

In other action Wednesday, leads changed in all the girls events. Idaho plummeted from fourth to eighth in the girls standings, as overall state leader Texas took over the girls lead from Utah and Kansas.

Host New Mexico led the boys standings with Colorado second and Utah third. The Idaho boys were not in the top 20. As a team, Idaho was 13th out of the 38 states and four provinces from Canada.

Texas totaled an overall score of 2,346 points. Utah (1,885) and New Mexico finished second and third respectively in the state standings, while Colorado (1,483) and Oklahoma (1,465) round out the top five.

him in a five-way tie for third place at the end of the first go. Big brother, Chase, is 17th in the saddle bronc event.

13th place in bull riding with 71 points. Andrea Porter of Chubbuck, stands in seventh place in breakaway roping with her time of 2.68. All other Idaho contestants have dropped out of the top 20 in their respective events.

Teams try to sign top picks before camps start

The Associated Press

NFL teams spent Thursday trying to sign their top draft picks, thwarted in many instances by a "slotting" system that annually sets the pay checks of high-priced rookies.

Entering the day, only less than half of the 32 first-round draft picks had been signed. They were in clusters — the first three overall choices and nine more from the 20th to the 31st.

No. 17, corner back Philip Buchanon of the Raiders, signed on Thursday and so did No. 30, guard Kendall Simmons of the Steelers. And others were close, like No. 19, Ashley Lefle of Denver.

But the problem for agents and general managers alike is finding the slot in which to fit the contract. That is, 19 is paid a little more than 20, who gets a little more than 21 and so on.

"There is a gap between the fourth pick and the 19th pick and we're 14th," said Giants general manager Ernie Accorsi, who is trying to sign first-round pick Jeremy Shockey, already his starting tight end.

"We'd be willing to take our chances, but he's not. There's no form for him to fall back on," Minnesota was trying to work out a deal for the seventh overall pick, Bryant McKinnie, like Buchanon and Shockey a member of the national champion Miami Hurricanes.

"It's a tough deal to do," said Rob Brzezinski, the team's chief contract negotiator, who is dealing with Jim Steiner, one of McKinnie's agents.

"They're looking out for their client," Brzezinski said. "It's typical for a lot of these deals. We don't report until Friday night, so we should be all right."

Giants
Having extended the contract of starter Kerry Collins, the Giants found enough cap room to re-sign backup Jason Garrett, cut last spring for salary cap reasons.

Garrett will compete for the second-string job with second-year man Jesse Palmer.

Second-round pick Tim Carter also signed, joining Garrett and the rest of his teammates at practice in Albany, N.Y.

Carter, a receiver from Auburn, received a four-year, $3 million contract, while Garrett got $650,000 to return as Collins' understudy for the third straight year.

Garrett, who has not thrown a pass in a regular-season game in his two seasons with New York, is going to be challenged by second-year pro Palmer, who would have been the No. 2 quarterback had Garrett not resigned.

Palmer said having Garrett back helps the team.

"What I am focusing on is just going out and trying to improve myself," Palmer said. "I am going to try to take as many reps as I can get and learn the most I can, and I am sure I am still going to ask Jason a lot of questions. He has a lot more experience than me."

Broncos

Defensive end Mitchell Sinclair, who had spent his entire 11-season career with Denver.

"Anytime you're out of a job, you say, 'Which team has a strong possibility of getting to the playoffs and to the Big Show?'" said the 34-year-old Sinclair, who also talked with the St. Louis Rams and Oakland Raiders. "The Broncos do. Hopefully with this ballclub, I can help these guys get to the Big Show."

The signing gives Denver experience at defensive end with the loss of Paul Tiovessu to what is believed to be a career-ending knee injury. The Broncos waived Tiovessu on Tuesday and agreed to terms with Sinclair on Wednesday.

Four years ago, Sinclair led the NFL with a team-record 16.5 sacks and earned a third consecutive trip to the Pro Bowl.

After he was diagnosed with diabetes, his totals fell to six sacks in 1999 and 3.5 each of the next two seasons. Seattle cut him during the offseason to avoid paying a $1 million roster bonus due in March.

Steelers

First-round draft pick Kendall Simmons reached terms on a six-year contract and reported to training camp in time for Pittsburgh's first workout.

The signing means the Steelers now have all players under contract as their camp opens.

Defensive end Aaron Smith, who was threatening a holdout, signed a package worth $25 million over six years Wednesday, hours before the reporting deadline.

Simmons, the No. 30 overall pick in the April draft, gets a $3 million signing bonus and a contract in the $6 million range comparable to the players drafted around him.

Robert Thomas of the Rams, the 31st player chosen, got a five-year deal worth $5.75 million that included a $3 million signing bonus.

Jets

Defensive tackle Alan Harper, the fourth-round pick, signed.

The 6-foot-3, 285-pound Harper played at Fresno State, starting 45 of the 50 games he played in. He had 21 sacks during his career.

Safety Jon McGraw, the second-round pick, is the only one of the teams five picks still unsigned. New York opens training camp on Friday.

Redskins

Defensive lineman Daryl Gardner, released by Miami, was at Redskins Park in Virginia on Thursday morning to meet with team officials.

Gardner is being courted by several teams.

Camps

about non-football problems, most of all wide receiver Terry Glenn. He was facing assault and battery charges stemming from an alleged domestic dispute with his girlfriend.

This year, they have all six draft choices signed and Glenn playing for the Green Bay Packers after last season's suspension for violating NFL drug rules and a legal fight to recover millions in withheld signing bonus money from New England.

Linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer, suffering from a neck injury, left camp last summer and was recently released.

The most serious blow last season was the death of quarterback coach Dick Rehbein, who suffered heart failure on Aug. 6.

Now offensive coordinator Charlie Weis is recovering from complications following gastric bypass surgery. The Patriots said they didn't know when he would arrive in training camp.

Weis, a key to Brady's development, is resting at home in Cumberland, R.I.

Bledsoe began last season with uncertainty about his supporting cast. Newly signed Antwan Smith had won the starting running back job, but tight end weak with Jermaine Wiggins and Rod Rutledge, while the wide receiver corps included free agents David Patten, Charles Johnson, Bert Emmanuel and Torrance Small.

Of that group, only Smith and Patten remain. Bledsoe, the most prominent, was traded to Buffalo.

Brady has a much deeper receiving corps with tight ends Fauria and first-round pick Daniel Graham and wide receiver Donald Hayes, who played for Carolina last season.

They almost certainly will make the team, unlike Benetka. But all are looking forward to playing for the champions.

"A couple of teams approached me," Benetka said. "I decided to go to the Patriots."

Deaths

1995. In the previous five years, only two football players' deaths were attributed to heat. From 1980 to 1989, 13 players died of heatstroke.

"The trend is really up for those, and it's a real concern," he said Wednesday. "Coaches, players and even parents need to remember how to prevent these tragedies, and that's not hard to do."

Mueller said the number of "direct" injury-related football deaths has generally held level in recent years. Forty players died of "direct" causes from 1995 to 2001; 50 died in the 1980s overall. In the 1980s, 71 "direct" deaths occurred.

Seven of the eight players who died from injuries in 2001 played for high school teams, and one was in a Pop Warner league. Six of those deaths resulted from brain injuries, one from a fractured neck, and the other from a ruptured spleen.

Injury-related deaths have dropped considerably since rule changes, adopted in 1976, prohibited use of the head as a first point of contact while blocking and tackling.

From 1976-2001, 162 players died from injuries. During 1966-75, 213 players died.

Mueller said team officials should keep close track of the temperature, and schedule regular water and cooling-off breaks during hot weather. He also suggested shorter practices and non-contact drills without helmets, as well as holding practices at cooler times of day.

At Florida, where this season's conditioning sessions have already begun, flyers showing the warning signs of heatstroke were posted in each player's locker as well as around the locker room.

Team spokesman Zack Higbee said, "Gators strength and conditioning coordinator Rob Glass said all of Florida's new athletes, not just football players, meet with the school's nutritionist to discuss how each athlete reacts to heat."

"We spend a lot of time with them one on one, trying to educate them," Glass said.

Before Aulin's death, the football team was already holding its voluntary workouts early in the day. The start time was moved Officials with the Indiana High School Athletic Association are urging coaches to pay special attention to heat-related problems during preseason conditioning.

Health and safety data being sent to schools includes extra material on how to measure heat and humidity.

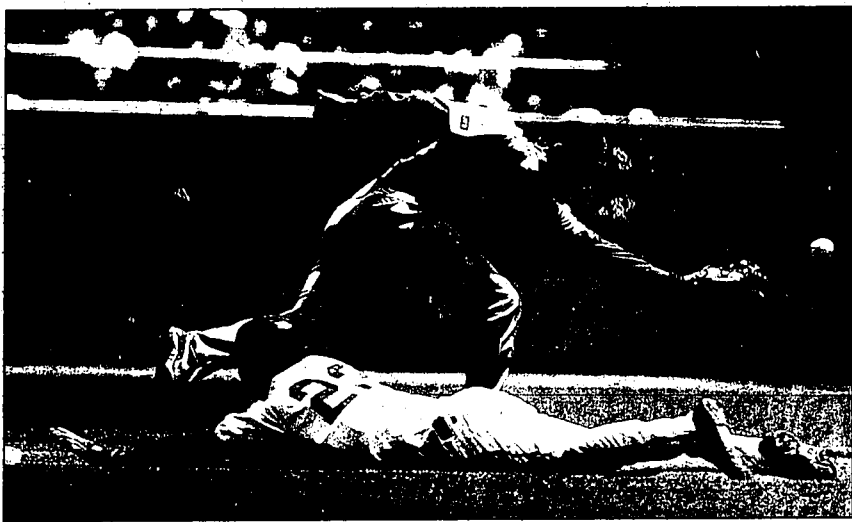

"Hopefully, we can increase the awareness and the attention given to outdoor conditions at practices and contests," IHSAA assistant commissioner Robby Cox said Wednesday.

St. Louis second baseman Fernando Vina, top, misses the throw from catcher Eli Marrero as San Francisco's Shawn Dunston steals second base during the first inning in San Francisco Thursday. Dunston went to third on the play and the Cardinals were given an error.

Drew lifts Cards to sweep of S.F.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — J.D. Drew homered and drove in four runs, sending Travis Smith and the St. Louis Cardinals over the San Francisco Giants.

St. Louis, 9-4 since the All-Star break, finished a seven-game road trip with another strong outing from Smith, the rookie who was recalled from the minors after Darryl Kile died last month.

Smith (4-1), who wasn't even in St. Louis' plans for this season a few months ago, has won three of his five starts since being brought up. He held San Francisco's patchwork lineup to seven hits over six innings while striking out six.

The NL Central-leading Cardinals took three of four from the Giants, who are trying to stay atop the wild card race despite injuries to several regulars.

Jason Irsinghaver pitched the ninth for his 24th save in 28 chances. Ryan Jensen (10-7) took the loss.

Astros 8, Pirates 0

HOUSTON — Rookie Kirk Szaarloos pitched the Astros' first complete game of the season and Jeff Bagwell drove in five runs as Houston beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-0 Thursday.

Szaarloos (2-2) allowed six hits and no walks as he pitched the team's first shutout since Roy Oswalt did it against Milwaukee last Sept. 9.

No Astros starter pitched into the ninth inning this season before Szaarloos, who struck out six.

Bagwell hit a three-run homer off Kris Benson (3-5) and also had a two-run single.

Phillies 6, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Tomas Perez hit a bases-loaded triple and then made a daring dash home in the eighth inning, rallying the Phillies to a 6-2 victory over the Cubs.

Perez (4-1) pitched six innings, allowing three runs and two hits. He struck out six.

Phillies manager Lary Sorensen said he was "impressed" with Perez's performance.

Philadelphia Phillies over the Chicago Cubs.

The Phillies went their third straight after losing the series opener at Wrigley Field. An error by left fielder Moises Alou helped Philadelphia come back in the eighth.

Fred McGriff hit his 470th career home run for the Cubs.

Carlos Silva (2-0) pitched two innings for the win.

Kyle Farnsworth (3-2) took the loss, giving up four runs in one inning of relief.

After Perez tripled for a 4-2 lead, he scored when Cubs catcher Todd Hundley threw to first base when Jimmy Rollins struck out on a ball in the dirt.

Marlins 3, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Juan Encarnacion singled through a draw-in infield to drive in the go-ahead run in the ninth inning, leading Florida over Montreal.

After the two teams traded runs in the eighth, Preston Wilson singled off T.J. Tucker (4-2) to lead off the ninth and advanced to third on Mike Lowell's double off the left-field wall.

Derek Lee was walked intentionally to lead the bases and Encarnacion singled to left to give the Marlins their third and final lead of the game.

Vladimir Nunez (5-3) allowed Fernando Tatis' game-tying single in the eighth while getting the last five outs for the win.

Diamondbacks 10, Padres 0

PHOENIX — John Patterson, in his second big league start, shut out San Diego into the eighth inning as Arizona won their fourth in a row.

Matt Williams hit a three-run homer as the Diamondbacks extended their lead in the NL West to a season-high four games over San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Quinton McCracken doubled in three runs and Steve Finley singled to win in Arizona's six-run seventh inning.

Patterson (1-0) allowed five hits in 7 1/3 innings in his first major league victory. He left the game to a standing ovation after giving up singles to Gene Kingsdale and Trenid Hubbard in the eighth.

In two starts, both against San Diego, since being called up from Triple-A Tucson, the 24-year-old right-hander has given up one run and eight hits in 13 1/3 innings.

Angels 5, Athletics 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Garrett Anderson hit a two-out single in the eighth inning to drive in the go-ahead run Thursday as the Anaheim Angels beat the Oakland Athletics 5-4.

David Eckstein singled with one out for his fourth hit of the game, equaling a career high. Darin Erstad forced Eckstein and took second on a wild pitch before Jim Meier (3-3) walked Tim Salmon.

Oakland closer Billy Koch relieved and Anderson blooped a 10-pitch to left field for his third hit of the game to drive in Erstad.

Scott Shields (3-1) pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings to earn the victory and Ben Weber worked the ninth for his fifth save in seven chances.

The Angels, contending with Oakland and Seattle in the AL West, have played their last eight games against the A's and Mariners, winning six. They open a three-game series in Seattle on Friday night.

Tigers 5, Royals 2

DETROIT — Robert Fick hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the third inning and added a two-run homer as the Detroit Tigers beat the Kansas City Royals for a three-game sweep.

Fick, the Tigers' representative in the All-Star game, also made a key defensive play in right field to preserve the Tigers' edge.

With the Royals trailing 3-2 in the eighth, Carlos Beltran tripled with one out. Joe Randa walked and Raul Ibanez hit a line drive that Fick caught. But before Beltran could tag up and score, Fick doubled Randa off first base.

Fick hit his 12th homer in the bottom of the eighth off Scott Milton.

Damion Easley and Randall Simon homered in the opening inning for the Tigers.

The game took 2 hours, 38 minutes. A day earlier, Detroit beat the Royals 3-0 in 1 hour, 41 minutes, the fastest nine-inning game since 1984.

Rookie Mike Maroth (3-3) picked up the win. Juan Acevedo pitched the ninth for his 18th save in 21 tries.

Miguel Asencio (2-3) took the loss.

Red Sox 6, Devil Rays 0

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez struck out 11 and allowed two hits in eight innings, and Boston beat Tampa Bay.

Trot Nixon hit his 15th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first, and Manny Ramirez and Jason Varitek hit back-to-back homers off Luis De Los Santos (0-2) in the third.

Martinez (13-2) is 5-0 in his last seven starts. In his last five, his ERA is 0.79 with 50 strikeouts, eight walks, 20 hits, and three earned runs in 34 1/3 innings.

Art of stolen bases isn't lost, but it lacks the flare of the past

Many coaches and players in Major League Baseball believe stealing bases is becoming a lost art.

"I don't think guys are working at it as hard as they used to when I played," said Indians first base coach Al Bumbry, who played 14 years in the big leagues, 13 with the Baltimore Orioles.

In 1980, he had a career-high 44 stolen bases.

Rickey Henderson holds the all-time record for stolen bases in a season with 130, set in 1982 when he was with Oakland. Since 1989, when Henderson stole an AL-leading 77 bases while with New York and Oakland, Lofton has the most stolen bases in a season in the AL when he stole a career-high 75 in 1996.

Robert Alomar led the Indians with 30 stolen bases last year and also had 30 in 2000.

Who's leading?

Sunday's race at New Hampshire featured 22 lead changes among 12 drivers — the second highest total in 15 Winston Cup races at the track.

Dale Jarrett drives through 'turn 3' during the final lap of the NASCAR Pocono 500 at the Pocono Raceway in Long Pond, Pa., June 9. A win Sunday in the Pennsylvania 500 would match the record shared by four drivers for the most career wins on the 2 1/2-mile triangular track.

Pole-winner Elliott suffers engine woes

By Rick Minter
Cox News Service

LOUDON, N.H. — A failed carburetor robbed him of any chance to win the New England 300, but Bill Elliott still gave his No. 9 Dodge a real workout. After starting from the pole, Elliott was running in the top three early on when his engine suddenly shut off. He lost 13 laps while his crew diagnosed the problem and switched carburetors. He returned to the track and ran strong from that point on.

"We made up four laps, but that doesn't matter," he said. "We had problems, and we've got to overcome them."

Elliott finished 34th and dropped from eighth to 10th in the Winston Cup standings. He's now 313 points behind leader Sterling Marlin, who finished 14th Sunday but increased his lead over second place Mark Martin from 49 to 55 points.

Strong run for fill-in

Jerry Nadeau, the leading candidate to replace Ken Schrader in the No. 10 Pontiac next season, gave the No. 10 Pontiac (a sister car to the No. 36) one of its best rides of the season.

Filling in for the injured Johnny Benson, Nadeau led five times for 37 laps before finishing 18th after his two-way radio failed midway through the race.

"The car was good enough to win," he said. "But when you don't have any communication between the crew chief and driver, what are you going to do?"

"I had no spotter the last 100 laps. It's just a tough deal."

Nadeau, who was released from Hendrick Motorsports earlier this year, has filled in for Benson and appears set to become his teammate next year because Schrader is likely to move to the Petty Enterprises team.

Cars display tributes

The 43-car field in Saturday's Charter Pipeline 250 Busch Series race carried stickers remembering driver Andy Kirby and crewman Barry Caldwell. Kirby was killed in a motorcycle accident July 18 in White House, Tenn., while Caldwell, a tire changer for the No. 43 car, lost a battle with cancer July 11.

Jarrett tries for Pocono sweep

By Dick Brinster
The Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa. — Dale Jarrett is glad to be back at Pocono Raceway.

"It's been kind of a place that when we've been struggling we can always say, 'Good, we're coming to Pocono,'" he said. "We know we have a chance."

That's precisely the way it worked out last month, when teammate Ricky Rudd developed a tire problem and fell out of the lead with just five laps to go in the Pocono 500.

Jarrett took advantage and hooked his third victory at the mountain top. A win Sunday in the Pennsylvania 500 would match the record shared by four drivers for the most in a career on the 2.5-mile triangular track.

History and the power of the Robert Yates Racing Ford makes Jarrett one of the favorites. But NASCAR is more competitive than ever, and 13 drivers have won in the first 19 Winston Cup events.

"I don't think you could pick anybody anywhere," Jarrett said. "But if it plays out for a long period of time towards the end, then you're going to see the better race cars up front."

Among them should be Jarrett and Rudd, in part because they drive for Yates.

"Our strength is our horsepower and it's a very good place to take advantage of that," Jarrett said.

Essentially, Pocono is three drag strips connected by very sharp turns with various degrees of banking. A car down on power will not compete, but Jarrett insists speed is not the only factor.

"It's about handling and knowing your strengths," he said. "Making a fast lap around there is totally different from making a 35-lap run during the race."

"We've found a very good balance with our cars at Pocono, so I look for Ricky and I to both be strong."

The loss last month was difficult for Rudd's team to accept, and another example of bad luck,

A late tire problem also ended Rudd's chance to win a week earlier in Dover, Del.

"You sure don't want to take me to Las Vegas with you," crew chief Michael "Fatback" McSwain said after Rudd crashed at the end of the Pocono 500 and finished 17th with a dominant car.

Jarrett's victory last month was his second top-five finish in a row, and the 1999 series champion, now has four in his last seven starts. He had only one top five in the first 12 races.

That start has hurt Jarrett, 11th in the standings in a season that was supposed to develop into another run for the championship.

Defending race champion Bobby Labonte has struggled even more, and is 20th in points with just one victory. But the 2000 series champion also is looking for his fourth career victory at Pocono, so he's optimistic.

"I'm not sure what it is about the place, but I am very comfortable here," Labonte said. "I may not always qualify up front, but we have always seemed to have a decent car for the race."

Labonte and crew chief Jimmy

Makar were never better than in 1999. Labonte became the first driver since Tim Richmond in 1986 to sweep the Pocono races.

But he's had his down times on the track.

"In 1996, I didn't finish either of the races," Labonte said. "One of them was a wreck on the second lap."

But since then, I have been running at the finish every other time here. Jimmy seems to know what I like as the race progresses and the track starts to get a little slippery."

Perhaps that also could help Ward Burton, who won last Sunday at New Hampshire International Speedway. A new asphalt surface, not fully cured, began to come apart and mixed with worn rubber to create a racing surface some likened to driving on ice.

But Burton, having a terrible year since winning the season-opening Daytona 500, managed to persevere in the crash-filled New England 300. He finished 33rd last month at Pocono, but is confident of a better result Sunday.

"This time we're bringing a different car and a new attitude to the track," he said.

Rudd may stay with Yates team

By Rick Minter
Cox News Service

LOUDON, N.H. — "Where will Ricky Rudd wind up?" saga took another turn over the week end when Rudd indicated he might be back with car owner Robert Yates next season.

Rudd, who is in the final year of his contract with Yates, is talking with several owners — including Yates — about a job for next season and beyond. But he said he would stay with Yates if his current team, led by crew chief Michael McSwain, stays.

Rudd also emphasized that any hang-up he has with Yates isn't about money.

"We have resolved the money issue between the driver, the sponsor and the owner," Rudd said.

The issue right now is that if Robert will give me some assurances to the best of his ability that he'll keep the team intact without moving people around, then it's a done deal."

CNN struggles against Fox News

By Frazier Moore The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In 1929, a movie house in Times Square tried something novel, becoming the nation's first news-only exhibitor. The idea caught on. Other theaters tried it. But TV's arrival in the late 1940s brought an end to "all news reels, all the time" at your local cinema.

Now "all news, all the time" on your television seems to be a fox's mission as CNN, which invented the genre in 1980, struggles as never before to find an intonating blend that will draw and hold viewers when breaking news won't. Talk interviews, audience interaction, newsmagazines — CNN has tried all these formats in various combinations, with less than spectacular success. Same for MSNBC, which has stumbled through six frustrating years after signing on in July 1996 with the famous pledge "the revolution starts here."

Both CNN and MSNBC have been embarrassed by the ratings dominance of Fox News Channel, which bowed in October 1996 as a clocky yet righteous information hanger. The Fox News Channel proposition — stick around for the scoop from your friends! — scored right away. Since then, its competitors have been in turmoil, trying one thing after another as they resign themselves to cribbing from the Fox News Channel play-book.

For instance, MSNBC, echoing the "fair and balanced" mantra Fox has chanted so effectively, now has this official retort: "fiercely independent." Its latest bid to one-up Fox News Channel in personality-driven news-talk: Phil Donahue, the daytime talk-show veteran who came out of retirement to be host of a week-night hour that began July 15, "Donahue" airs against Fox News Channel's biggest hit, "The O'Reilly Factor."

This is potentially a great face-off: Bill O'Reilly, a feisty, smearing conservative of sorts, butting heads in the time slot with Donahue, a sermonizing, indignant liberal. But the momentum is squarely with O'Reilly, whose average audience last week (2,131,000 viewers) crushed "Donahue" (660,000) and CNN, to boot.

Who is CNN's pony in this race? Connie Chung, hired from ABC

News, who began June 24. Averaging 710,000 viewers last week, she clung to a distant second place. Meanwhile, even sandwiched between CNN's coterminous "Crossfire" and the otherworldly "Larry King Live" (whose recent guests included Art Linkletter, Phyllis Diller and Barbara Eden), "Connie Chung Tonight" has distinguished itself as the saddest indicator yet of a network in disarray.

Does this really represent CNN's best shot at reclaiming vital prime-time turf? While it's hard to overstate the wobbly presentation or warmed-over content of "Connie Chung Tonight," the host's strained performance should be no surprise to those viewers who have never been able to account for Chung's star power. A woman with looks, charm and a legendary drive for chasing big interviews, Chung also suffers from glaring deficiencies — awkwardness on live TV, for starters — that seemed never to catch up with her.

Until now. At CNN, Chung is left exposed on a live broadcast with a limited budget and a support staff seemingly as much at sea as she is. Neither her meager skills nor what's left of her marquee value is sufficient to redeem this folly. Her show's claim of "news with a human touch" apparently means a Chung interview will never stray far from a "how do you feel?" investigation. Analytical discourse isn't her thing.

In an interview with Michael Newdow, the Sacramento man who challenged the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance, constitutional issues clearly had escaped her.

"The whole Pledge of Allegiance has to do with being patriotic, supporting America, supporting the flag," she argued. "I never said anything about HAVING a Pledge of Allegiance," replied Newdow with undisciplined annoyance. "I'm all for a Pledge of Allegiance."

"What about 'God Bless America'?" Chung asked. Although each edition is its own mishmash (a bizarre comic riff on award shows by correspondent Anderson Cooper left at least one viewer scratching his head), "Connie Chung Tonight" has a sweet tooth for murder and mayhem. And for any victims it can tap with a satellite feed.

FILER - California-based Seminis Inc., a developer, producer and marketer of vegetable and fruit seeds, on Thursday said it posted positive net income for the first time in a third quarter.

Seminis, which has a research and customer-service facility between Filer and Twin Falls, said sales for the three months ended June 28 were $106.6 million compared to $106.4 million a year earlier.

Gross profit increased to $65 million or 61 percent of sales, compared to $64.1 million or 60.2 percent a year earlier (excluding inventory write-downs of $53.9 million in the prior year).

Seminis said operating expenses for the third quarter were reduced by 20.8 percent to $59.2 million from $74.8 million. Excluding a $12 million severance provision during third quarter 2001, operating expenses were reduced by 0.7 percent.

Operating income was $5.8 million compared to a loss of $64.5 million a year earlier. The company posted net income of $4.3 million compared to a loss of $64.5 million during the same quarter last year.

But as a result of $4.7 million of accrued dividends on preferred class B and C stock, and additional paid in capital, the company posted a net loss available to common stockholders of $400,000, or less than one cent per share. That compares to a loss of $69.2 million, or $1.16 per common share, during the same quarter last year.

Halley firm secures contract with BPA
HAILEY - Halley-based Power Engineers Inc. and GE Industrial Systems, a unit of General Electric Co., said Thursday they have secured a contract with the Bonneville Power Administration for power capacity projects worth $42 million.

The projects are part of a $1.3 billion program by BPA - the agency responsible for bulk transmission of electricity in the Northwest - to improve capability of the transmission system in the West, the companies said in a statement. The projects involve installation of high-voltage series capacitor systems on the power transmission system in Washington, Idaho and Montana through 2004.

Series capacitors represent a cost-effective means of significantly increasing power transfer capability over high-voltage transmission lines, the companies said.

"We expect substantial load growth in the Northwest over the next decade," said Ed Olavarria, BPA project manager. "Installing new equipment on time and on budget is important to maintaining reliability."

GE will manufacture the capacitors, along with other major elements of the systems, in Ft. Edward, NY. Power Engineers, an engineering and construction company, will perform the installation.

Olympics, Lewis & Clark make impact

Events help blunt decline of Idaho tourism

The Associated Press

BOISE - The widespread financial benefit of the Salt Lake City Winter Olympics and the anticipation of the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial celebration helped blunt lower tourism in Idaho during the past year.

The Idaho Travel Council reported receipts from the state's 2 percent tax on hotels, motels and campgrounds fell 5 percent to $4.9 million from mid-2001 through June, reflecting the economic slump since last year's East Coast terror attacks.

"We're down, but we're down very little," said council Chairman Woody Anderson, who owns the Pomerelle Ski Resort near Albion. The fallout from the Olympics and the Lewis and Clark events over the coming four years could help in the years to come, he predicted.

Right now, however, the industry is under the same kind of financial stress the rest of American business.

"What we've been hearing is that business is soft," said Carol Waller, executive director of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce. "It seems that retail is down some, meetings and conventions are off and lodging is off. Overall, the business environment does seem a little softer."

Officials of the National Travel Industry Association of America, wrapping up their annual convention in Boise this week, said Americans are still taking time off, but they are staying closer to home.

Initial requests exceeded $2.9 million, the Idaho Department of Commerce said. Recipients use the grants to promote cities or the region through print and electronic advertising, brochures, travel shows, direct mail campaigns, industry research and the creation of Web sites.

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley and central Idaho groups got nearly half a million dollars when the Idaho Travel Council awarded $2.3 million in Idaho Regional Travel and Convention Grants to 36 regional travel committees, chambers of commerce and other nonprofit organizations around the state.

Initial requests exceeded $2.9 million, the Idaho Department of Commerce said.

Recipients use the grants to promote cities or the region through print and electronic advertising, brochures, travel shows, direct mail campaigns, industry research and the creation of Web sites.

"It's exciting to see how even the smallest of our communities are using the latest computer technology to reach out to the traveling public," said council Chairman Woody Anderson of Albion. "These grants play a vital role in promoting tourism, especially in rural Idaho."

Also this week, the council selected a picture taken by Sun Valley photographer Kevin Syms to grace the cover of the 2003 edition of the Official Idaho Travel Guide. The image is a field of wildflowers on the Camas Prairie.

The 2002 Regional Travel and Convention Grants included $164,909 to groups in south-central Idaho (Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Twin Falls counties):

- South Central Idaho Tourism and Recreation Development Association - $79,414
- Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce - $73,000

• Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association's south-central chapter - $5,495

• Idaho RV Campgrounds Association's south-central chapter - $7,000

Grants in central Idaho (Blaine, Camas and three other counties) totaled $31,621:

• Camas Civic Organization Inc. - $3,300

• Salmon-Valley Chamber of Commerce - $15,000

• Stanley Sawtooth Chamber of Commerce - $26,000

• Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce - $275,321

• Idaho Outfitters & Guides Association's central chapter - $9,000

• Idaho RV Campground Owners Association's central chapter - $3,000

Still spending

Small-town folk keep spending despite economic downturn

The Associated Press

MACON, Mo. - Bill Truitt has seen plenty of dark days before, and not just in the coal mines where he labored for nearly 50 years.

Truitt, 75, is old enough to remember hard times during economic downturns over the decades. So when he structured his finances for retirement, he made sure he wouldn't have to depend on the nest egg he invested in various mutual funds.

He's fortunate. The fund has shrunk by $60,000 in the latest stock market bust, but he and his wife can still live and spend as they did before, relying on his pension from Associated Electric and the yearly fruits of some annuities.

"I figure I'm in too deep, I can't pull it out now," Truitt said of the retirement account.

The Truitts' situation may help to explain why, in towns like this and across the country, the economic downturn has yet to translate into a significant reduction in consumer spending.

This can be seen on Monday nights at Macon's KFC restaurant, where tables and booths are packed with senior citizens. It's half-price night for them.

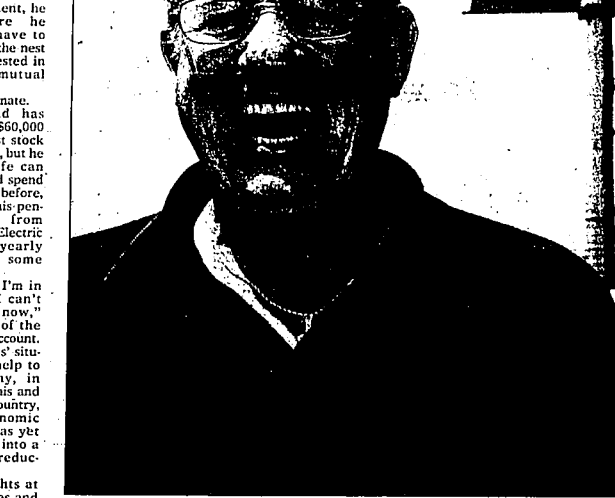

"A lot of these people are pretty wealthy people," said Barry Shatcer. "But they're saving two dollars."

Shatcer, 49, owns and operates Barry's Carpets in Macon's struggling downtown district. His own business has remained steady - maybe even improving over last year.

His older customers always have been penny-wise, he said, reserving a room here or there instead of the whole house.

"They're worried about hospital bills and everything else," Shatcer said. "I think they're just a little more conservative."

What he's seeing fits with recent comments from Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan, who said the sour market hasn't stopped Americans from opening their pocketbooks.

Frank Withrow, chief of economic development in Macon, Mo., laughs at a joke with friends outside Macon July 16. He said the economic downturn hasn't affected consumer spending in Macon.

Frank Withrow, Macon's economic development chief, works from a rehabbed office in the town's old post office building downtown and soon plans to retire himself in Macon, a town of about 5,500 people in northeastern Missouri.

While lots of people are complaining about taking hits in the market, he said it isn't anything that's affected Macon - at least not yet. In fact, sales tax collections have been up recently.

His own personal accounts? "I've lost a lot of money," Withrow, 60, said. "Well, I haven't lost it, because I haven't cashed it in."

"Most of that loss is on paper, because most people have that in retirement programs. But overall, I feel like we're holding up pretty well in our corner of the world."

Over at Butner's Country Mart, owner Kevin Butner hasn't seen a big change either, but he's heard it. While older customers still seem to be spending as much on food as usual, Butner said the seniors - like plenty of others - have been talking about the discomfort caused by the down market.

"It really, at least so far, hasn't changed anything here," said Butner, 40. "But you hear a lot of whinin' and complainin' and carryin' on."

Simplot, conservationists reach agreement

The Associated Press

POCATELLO - Conservationists and the J.R. Simplot Co. have resolved their differences over the Smoky Canyon phosphate mine in Caribou County.

The Greater Yellowstone Coalition dropped the notice to appeal it filed with the U.S. Department of Interior on June 21.

Coalition spokesman Marv Hoyt said the company addressed the organization's concerns about water quality near the proposed waste pile. As part of a consent order with the state Department of Environmental Quality, water quality at the site must be tested.

"I think both GYC and Simplot feel good about the agreement," Hoyt said. "The reason this announcement is pretty bland is intentional. We're satisfied that the environment and human health will be protected."

The coalition was concerned about the water quality in ponds designed to capture runoff. The runoff water will be filtered into the ground, diluting contaminants from the waste pile.

The company agreed the public will have easy access to water monitoring data from the mine.

The two groups had sparred over plans to expand the mine. The coalition accused Simplot of not using the best available technology in minimizing the potential for selenium contamination.

Selenium is a byproduct of phosphate mining that can be harmful to livestock and wildlife if ingested in large doses.

Simplot argued hundreds of jobs could be lost if mining was halted while environmental concerns were addressed.

Development of the mine should begin in less than a week, Simplot spokesman Rick Phillips said. There will be no interruption of the ore supply to the company's fertilizer plant in Pocatello.

Had ore delivery been suspended, Phillips said the future of the plant would have been uncertain.

British firm agrees to sell Burger King

The Associated Press

LONDON - The Whopper is heading home. Britain's Diageo PLC announced a deal Thursday to sell Burger King Corp., the world's second-largest fast-food business, to a consortium of U.S. investors.

Diageo, the world's largest producer of alcoholic beverages, will unload Miami-based Burger King - whose name is on restaurants in Burley, Twin Falls and Jerome - for $2.26 billion in cash and turn its focus to popular liquor brands such as Johnny Walker Scotch and Smirnoff Vodka.

Burger King's buyer is a consortium of venture capital firms led by Texas Pacific Group. The trio also includes Boston-based Bain Capital and Goldman Sachs Capital Partners, the private equity arm of U.S. investment bank Goldman Sachs.

"This is the end of what has been a strategic journey, if you like, for Diageo," the company's chief financial officer, Nick Rose, told reporters in a conference call. "We feel that we've achieved a clean separation at a very good value for our shareholders."

The deal, reached after days of intense negotiations, is crucial to Diageo's strategy of concentrating solely on its more lucrative liquor business. Diageo said two years ago that it planned to unload Burger King in a sale or spinoff.

The change in ownership is also expected to boost Burger King, which has suffered in past years due to inadequate marketing and the lack of a coherent management strategy.

Bain has practical experience with the fast-food franchise business from its ownership of the Domino's Pizza chain, and Texas Pacific is understood to have close ties with senior executives at Burger King. These contacts and knowledge about the fast-food business are expected to help the deal.

Officials investigate telemarketing fraud

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Better Business Bureau President Kathryn Jones had to arrange help to answer all the complaint calls she received about a credit card telemarketer with a rented mailbox in this city.

Lattia Evans of Los Angeles recently received a call from a telemarketer claiming to work for a credit card company called Premier One, which uses an Idaho Falls mailbox. The telemarketer promised to send Evans a cell phone and a credit card for $174. So she gave the caller her checking account number. While she was still on the phone, the money was withdrawn from her account. But the phone and the credit card never arrived.

Officials with the bureau in Idaho Falls said they are getting deluged with calls about Premier One from across the country.

Company in question has mailbox in Idaho Falls

"It got to the point where I had to get someone to help answer all of the complaints," Jones said. The Idaho Falls address the company provides its customers is not a corporate office, but a rented mailbox at Mailboxes Etc. Investigators say it is the first stop in an intricate route of a telemarketing operation in Miami, and eventually Canada. That's where investigators think the company may be operating.

People have reported losing up to $275 to Premier One, but the company may be operating under more than just that name. "We have been in contact with the Canadian authorities," city Police Sgt. Steve Hunt said. Postmaster Jeff Cole said the company provides its customers may have originated in Hong Kong. The more states and countries involved, the harder it may be to prosecute the case. People have reported losing up to $275 to Premier One, but the company may be operating under more than just that name. Jones said when a complaint is sent to Premier One, sometimes the return is made from Advantage Capital.

Roger Manville, the owner of the Idaho Falls Mailboxes Etc., said the company could have picked any spot in the country, but unfortunately picked his business. "We are not Premier One, we just rented a box to Premier One," he said. Manville said as soon as he is notified by an agency with legal authority to shut down the box, he will do so. Evans said that days after talking with Premier One, she discovered a company she had never spoken with deducted almost $300 out of her checking account. "When I asked them how they got my name and account number, they said that Premier One sold it to them," she said.

Utilities commission closes Garnet case

Idaho Power can't buy energy from proposed Middleton plant, for now

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission on Wednesday dismissed a request by Idaho Power to buy energy from the proposed Garnet power plant near Middleton.

Idaho Power asked Monday that hearings scheduled for this week be postponed until IDA-CORP, Garnet's corporate parent, found financing for the project.

IDACORP earlier said it was delaying the start date of its 273-megawatt Garnet plant for a year because of a substantial likelihood the company will not get the financing needed to build. But the Citizens for Responsible Land Use and the Idaho Rural Council also filed a motion Monday asking that the case be dismissed without prejudice. After hearing arguments on both sides, the Public Utilities Commission decided to dismiss the case, at least for now.

"It may be some months before this case is ready for hearing," said Commissioner Marsha Smith. "It will be better to have testimony filed sooner than time than to glean the information that remains useful from what has been filed in the past seven months.

Commissioner said the decision doesn't mean the commission either endorses or opposes the Garnet project. "This decision is no reflection on how the commission views the project," said Smith. "This is merely a procedural decision."

The commission also ordered Idaho Power to file a report with 90 days on the progress of possible financing for the plant. If financing has not been secured, the company must include in the report alternatives for meeting the expected 350-megawatt energy shortfall if participants will occur by mid-2005.

"It may be some months before this case is ready for hearing. It will be better to have testimony filed sooner than time than to glean the information that remains useful from what has been filed in the past seven months."

Stocks see minor losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street tried to extend its big rally Thursday but failed amid concerns about a slump in the semiconductor industry. Another accounting investigation, this time of the WorldCom, reminded investors of their misgivings about corporate ethics.

The Dow Jones industrials fluctuated widely before recording a minor loss. But the tech sector, down for the entire session, suffered a larger decline and the Nasdaq composite index gave up most of its gain from Wednesday.

The slippage wasn't surprising in a market still uneasy after nine weeks of declines that claimed a quarter of the market's value. And analysts were encouraged that the market had not fallen further.

"After such a huge rally, you have to expect the market to vacillate over the next few days. The reason for that is the question of corporate ethics. We don't know whether we have reached the bottom or not," said Peter Cardillo, president and chief strategist of Global Partner Securities Inc. "It is going to take time to reverse negative market sentiment and restore confidence back to the marketplace." The Dow closed down 4.98, or 0.06 percent, at 8,186.31, having risen as much as 118 points earlier in the day.

On Wednesday, the Dow spiked nearly 490 points following the arrest of Adelphia Communications executives for allegedly stealing from the cable TV company and an agreement between House and Senate negotiators on legislation to create tougher penalties for corporate fraud.

The broader market was also lower Thursday. The Nasdaq fell 50.15, or 3.9 percent, to 1,240.08, after a 61-point surge Wednesday. The S&P 500 fell 1.28, or 0.01 index fell 4.75, or 0.6 percent, to 838.68, following a 45-point gain the previous session.

Many analysts believe the 2001 White House budget plan of snapback the market ended after more than two months of declines that saw most stocks fall back to levels not seen since 1997.

Rates for 30-year mortgages drop to lowest level in 31 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rates for 30-year mortgages dipped this week to the lowest level in 31 years of record keeping, helping to spur a further boom in mortgage refinancing.

Freddie Mac, the mortgage company, reported that the average interest rate on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages fell to 6.34 percent this week, down from 6.49 percent the previous week. A year ago, 30-year mortgages averaged 7.03 percent. The mortgage company said the latest decline pushed 30-year mortgages to their lowest level since it began conducting its nationwide survey in 1971. The previous record low level for 30-year mortgages was 6.45 percent, reached in early November. "The current refinancing boom has been going on since early 2001. While the boom has faded earlier this year, low interest rates the last five weeks have rekindled a stronger refinancing wave not seen since last year," said Phil Colling, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

To think is not enough; you must think of something.

Jean Renard

The auction to slam here may look buccolic — essentially South drives to slam facing an opening bid...

What would you lead with that West hand? A trump seems rather passive with a club a sensible alternative...

On the lead of the spade two, it is to South to count his tricks. Six spades, three clubs, two hearts and ... There are three sensible ways to try for the 12th trick...

Win the trump lead in hand, play the heart A, pitching a diamond, and ruff a heart high. Now play a spade to the 10 — you did not waste that card at trick one...
