Feds target Burley man

Leslie Bowcut faces global Internet porn ring charges

The Times-News and wire service reports

BURLEY - A Burley man is among 20 people in the United States and Europe charged with posting pornographic images of minors - most of them their own children - on the Internet.

Leslie Peter Bowcut, 28, faces a federal charge of conspiring to sexually exploit children, U.S. Customs Service spokesman Pat Jones said. If convicted of the federal offense, Bowcut faces a mandatory prison sentence of 10 years in prison, up to a maximum of 20 years in federal prison.

In a Washington, D.C., press conference, Customs Commissioner Robert Bonner said 10 U.S. citizens were arrested Friday and 15 search warrants were issued. Fifteen of the suspects were indicted on federal conspiracy charges Thursday in the Eastern District of California. Six of those people are foreign nationals, Bonner said.

The global investigation revealed a ring of pedophiles who sexually molested children and distributed child pornography via the Internet, Bonner said. Some 45 children - 37 in the United States - were involved. In 80 percent of the pornographic images, the children were being molested by their own parents, officials said.

"I've rarely seen crimes as despicable and repugnant," Bonner said.

ANOTHER DAY ON THE FIRE LINE

The sun rises over the fire base camp setup along the Chetco River road near Brookings, Ore., Friday. Fire continued to threaten the community of Agness in the Rogue River Canyon and an area near the small coastal town of Brookings. One wildfire in the area - the nation's largest - grew to 308,000 acres Friday, threatening to become the biggest fire in Oregon history. For more, please see page A9.

Police: No evidence of sale in drug case

Former-principal waives hearing right

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The amount of marijuana investigators claim a former Twin Falls elementary school principal tried to mail herself was enough to make hundreds of joints - or even more, experts said.

But there's no reason to think the drugs were intended for anything more than personal use, said Capt. Clark Rollins of the Idaho State Police investigations division.

"We found no evidence of drug distribution in the house," he said.

Meanwhile, Mary Lee Roberts, 48, who faces a charge of possession of a controlled substance in the case, on Friday waived her right to a preliminary court hearing.

Roberts did not appear in court, but instead sent written notice to the court through her attorney that she agreed to waive the hearing, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Leuchs. Idaho law allows defendants under some circumstances to do that without appearing in court, he said.

The next step will be for Roberts to go before a 5th District Court judge for an arraignment and possibly to enter a plea, but that hearing hadn't been scheduled as of Friday, Leuchs said.

The charge stems from investigators' allegations that Roberts last month tried to mail a package containing about a pound of marijuana from Houston to her Twin Falls County home.

State eyes panel to study revenue gap

By Julie Pence Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Though numerous Republicans insist there are no tax hikes in the works, there is talk of appointing a panel to study how to balance Idaho's 2003-04 budget before the 2003 Legislature convenes.

But people sit on the "blue ribbon commission," as lawmakers and government officials are already calling it, won't be named until after November's election. Likely candidates will come from a pool of former government and legislative budget experts and also private-sector business people.

Their job will be to make recommendations to the Legislature.

"If revenues continue to fall, and if we are needing to take some sort of action - and these are big ifs - we ought to look at all the possibilities," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, co-chairman of the Legislature's finance committee. "To do that, we would need some sort of blue ribbon commission or task force."

Jeff Youtz, budget director for the Legislature, thinks the panel would be a good idea.

"I think if we wait until Jan. 1 to take a hard look at reality, I think it will be an extremely difficult session," Youtz said. "The earlier we start ramping up the public's perception of the kind of budget we are facing, and the earlier we see TAXES, Page A2

Economic woes among seniors could spell trouble for politicians

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Stock market losses are forcing retiree Michael Dalal back to work just to pay the bills.

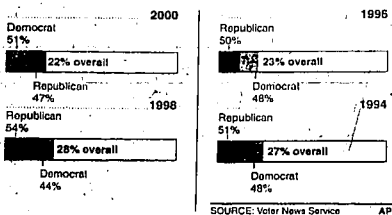

A former lawyer, businessman and mortgage banker at a brokerage company he owned before retiring two years ago, Dalal, 67, of Monroe, N.J., has lost more than half of his savings. Besides the slumping economy and corporate executives, he blames Congress, which he says hasn't done enough.

"Both the parties are to blame," said Dalal, who has started looking for a mortgage banking job that will allow him to work about five hours a day. "I wish they'd all resign and let some new people come in."

Report: Militant groups join forces in Pakistan

The Washington Post

KARACHI, Pakistan - Recent attacks on Christians and Westerners in Pakistan were part of a coordinated campaign by Pakistani Islamic militant groups linked to al-Qaida and the Taliban, military and security sources said Friday.

Hours after a grenade attack on a chapel at a Presbyterian hospital killed three people Friday morning, top security aides to Pakistan's president, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, told him they have intelligence reports that factions of at least two banned Pakistani groups have joined forces to wage terrorist attacks on Westerners and Christians, senior officials familiar with the briefing said.

"The president was told that al-Qaida has waged a proxy war against Pakistan and its key strategic interests," one official said. "Most unfortunately, al-Qaida has been able to exploit Pakistani citizens and its soil for (al-Qaida's) terrorist motives."

Security officials said the top leaders of the banned groups, Harkat ul-Mujaheddin and Jaish-i-Muhammad, voluntarily informed Pakistani intelligence officials that some of their "trained elements" have broken ranks to form "anti-Christian, anti-West" strike groups.

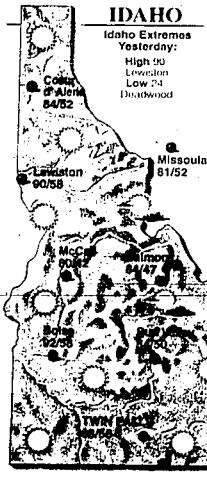

"A full-fledged local al-Qaida is now active in Pakistan," a security official said. "We have got it from the horse's mouth."

Harkat ul-Mujaheddin and Jaish-i-Muhammad are two of the most prominent Pakistani Islamic militant groups supporting a 13-year-old guerrilla war in the divided region of Kashmir that is aimed at ending Indian rule there.

Rescuers find another body

CAGUAS, Puerto Rico (AP) - Rescuers Friday recovered the body of an eighth American serviceman killed when a U.S. Air Force special operations plane slammed into a Puerto Rico mountainside earlier this week.

The body was found far down the mountainside where the MC-130H transport plane military personnel crashed Wednesday night on the outskirts of Caguas, 20 miles south of San Juan. On Thursday, rescuers found seven bodies, some charred, and parts of the fuselage. Two bodies are still missing.

The search team also found one of the aircraft's two "black boxes," said Adolfo Menendez, commander of a National Guard unit at the scene. He did not know if it was the data or voice recorder.

The bulky plane was flying in rain and fog when it struck a heavily wooded area on Monte Peruchó, broke in two and erupted in flames, witnesses said.

Democrats must gain seven seats in November to be assured of a majority in the House. Republicans need to gain one seat to return the Senate to a 50-50 tie that gives them control on the strength of Vice President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote.

Voters 65 and older accounted for 19 percent of all votes cast in 1998. They accounted for 14 percent of all votes cast in congressional races in 2000.

Those statistics contributed to a flurry of activity in Congress, including the corporate accounts-ability bill President Bush signed into law last week.

Republican pullsters recently warned the GOP that corporate scandals and economic angst have soured the national mood noticeably, which could trans-

White House scales back anti-terror tip plan

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration, backing away from a controversial anti-terrorist plan in the face of a public backlash, said Friday that it will no longer solicit terrorism tips from utility workers, postal employees and anyone else with access to people's homes.

lier we can start educating the agencies and legislators, the easier we will sort things through to a consensus during the session.

But Youtz isn't predicting a gap of at least $164 million between state revenues and budget needs. The reason is that the $164 million is one-time money that was used to cover this year's budget, and it won't be available for next year's budget.

"That's point A, and point B is whether economic growth will be enough to cover the increase in state needs of about 5 percent, which are largely demographically driven such as Medicaid, school enrollment and corrections," Youtz said.

He figures that could be around $100 million.

If the growth rate turns out to be only 2 or 3 percent, then the shortfall is upped to $200 million.

Bush: No timetable for decision on attacking Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the administration intensified contacts with Iraqi opposition leaders, President Bush said Friday he has no timetable for deciding on a military strike against Iraq and may not decide this year.

"And if I did, I wouldn't tell you or the enemy," Bush told The Associated Press during a brief interview at his ranch in Crawford, Texas.

Pressed on whether he would decide this year, he said, "Not necessarily."

Bush said he did not object to congressional committees holding hearings on how to carry out the administration's goal of achieving regime change in Iraq.

terrorism replaced by one with a democratic cast.

He also said he is opposed to the fragmentation of Iraq, an outcome that some believe could result from a U.S. military attack. Under some scenarios, the Kurdish population of northern Iraq would break away and form their own state.

"We would like to see a country that forswears weapons of mass destruction and says, that's really not in the interest of the people," Rumsfeld added.

He also expressed concern that international economic sanctions against Iraq have eroded over time.

Meanwhile, a coalition of leaders from six Iraqi opposition groups met with administration officials at the State Department to discuss ways of cooperating to achieve the U.S. goal of regime change in Iraq.

Leading the Iraqi delegation was Ahmed Chalabi, a longtime Iraqi exile who heads the Iraqi National Congress, an opposition umbrella group.

U.S. seeks to expand sea patrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving to widen its hunt for terrorists and cut off their weapons routes at sea, the Bush administration is negotiating agreements with dozens of nations for new powers to police the world's waters, defense officials said.

The plan being developed, which hasn't yet been approved by the Pentagon, builds on the months-old ship interdiction operation started largely to capture al-Qaida members fleeing Afghanistan across international waters, four officials said on condition of anonymity.

It envisions giving U.S. forces rights to chase down and board vessels not only in international waters but in another nation's sovereign waters in some circumstances — such as when pursuing ships believed to be carrying al-Qaida or other terrorists whose organizations have global reach. Ships thought to be carrying terrorist weapons or other contraband used to finance them could also be boarded, two of the officials said.

The planning to improve and refine maritime efforts comes as the military looks for more innovative ways to press the war on terrorism — including, possibly, more covert commando missions — now that al-Qaida has largely been crippled in Afghanistan.

Lawyers group criticizes enemy jailings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration was asked Friday to defend its jailing of Americans as enemy combatants without charges or access to attorneys.

The administration's use of the enemy combatant status for certain people arrested as part of the war on terrorism was criticized by a panel of the American Bar Association. The ABA will decide later whether to take a position on the practice.

"We think it is something that ordinary people should definitely be concerned about,"

ABA President Robert Hirschman said.

The White House contends the jailings are necessary to protect national security. That position is being challenged in courts and has been questioned on Capitol Hill.

An ABA task force said the White House should better explain its rationale and that Congress should set standards for U.S. citizens held in America as enemy combatants.

"It cannot be sufficient for a president to claim that the executive (branch) can detain whomever it wants, for as long as it wants, as long as the detention bears some relationship to a terrorist act once committed by somebody against the United States," the report said.

The group took only a mild stand on the government's holding of non-Americans as enemy combatants. About 600 people are in this category, in custody at the U.S. military prison in Cuba. They're being interrogated for information about terrorist groups.

The report recommended that Congress and Bush consider the international impact of the detentions.

Al-Qaida may have been planning Olympics attack

SALT LAKE CITY, (AP) — More than a year ago, a man who is himself a Muslim cleric visited the University of Utah, asking about security for the Winter Olympics and President Bush's appearance.

He was arrested and jailed on immigration charges and deported.

Now it appears Ghulam Rasool Chisti of Pakistan may have had links to al-Qaida and Osama bin Laden, U.S. Attorney Paul Warner said Friday.

"We didn't have any evidence that he was planning an attack" at the February games, Warner told The Associated Press on Friday. "But I didn't want to find out the hard way."

Chisti, 59, visited Salt Lake City for a religious conference May 31-June 4, 2001, staying at what was to become the Olympic Village for athletes.

He aroused suspicion by asking people at the university about Olympic security, the living arrangements for athletes and the visit of President Bush, who opened the Olympics at Rice-Eccles Stadium.

He was quickly arrested and convicted for lying on his U.S. visa by failing to disclose rape convictions in England. Chisti was jailed for eight months and then deported to Pakistan.

Jury in murder case breaks for weekend

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The jury deciding whether a neighbor abducted and killed 7-year-old Danielle van Dam ended a two-day deliberation Friday without reaching a verdict.

David Westerfield, a divorced, self-employed design engineer, is charged with murder, kidnapping, and possessing child pornography.

Jurors began their deliberations Thursday, following a two-month trial and more than two days of closing arguments. They were to reconvene Monday.

West Nile virus death toll climbs in Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The death toll from the worst outbreak of West Nile virus in U.S. history climbed to seven Friday as state health officials said two more victims had died in parishes north of New Orleans.

The latest victims were identified as a 76-year-old woman and a 94-year-old woman. Both live across Lake Pontchartrain from New Orleans and are where many earlier cases occurred. Health officials said another 14 human cases have been confirmed, raising the state's total to 85.

The outbreak in Louisiana is the deadliest since the virus killed seven people and hospitalized 55 others in the New York area in 1999, when the disease was first detected in this country.

All West Nile deaths this year have been in Louisiana, but Mississippi officials were awaiting test results to confirm whether a death there was due to the virus.

TV appearance defies rape stigma

By Nora Zaniclow
Los Angeles Times

Days after being abducted and raped, two California teens went on national television. As cameras rolled, Tamara Brooks, 16, and Jackie Morris, 17, both of being tied with duct tape and rope, at the front desk capturing his gun and threatening their lives. They described how they later attacked him, one girl stabbing him in the neck and the other smashing his face with a whiskey bottle. They spoke of watching their captor die in a shower with sheriff's deputies.

Critics harp on the girls' parents for allowing the NBC "Today" show interview, of being dazzled by a change in celebrity rather than focusing on the recovery of their daughters. But experts say the TV appearance points to a shift in how people view the victims of sexual assault.

The stigma, they say, is not what it used to be. The girls' appearance marks a new attitude of empowerment, the sense that they have no reason for shame. "Twenty years ago, no one talked about rape," said Marie Lema, president of People Against Rape. "We've gone from 'Don't talk' to 'Stand up and talk.'"

In the past, most rape victims wouldn't tell family members or police because they felt the crime cast doubt on their integrity and intentions. Many people viewed rape victims as women whose behavior or attire elicited sexual assault.

Today, rape is seen as a crime "not of passion but of anger, control, and domination," Lema said. The antidote is to restore a sense of safety, power and trust. Over the years, the notion that speaking out is both empowering and therapeutic has gained acceptance.

In explaining why she agreed to the TV interview, Tamara Brooks explained, "It wasn't like I was pressured one way or the other. It was up to me. My parents said whatever I felt comfortable doing, they were behind."

"Me and Jackie want to get the message across to everybody to never give up on anything," she said. "If you ever give up, you've lost. Whatever obstacles you have, you've got to fight your way through it."

Tamara was also clear that she and Jackie wanted to keep some of their privacy. "It's just retelling the story, and it's not hard to talk about it, but I let everyone know there are certain things I will not talk about and I think everybody knows what I'm talking about."

Tamara's father, Sammie

Brooks, said he believed the public spotlight would help his daughter recover.

"I think she's having fun with the publicity," said Brooks, a teacher at Antelope Valley College in Lancaster, Calif. "People wanting to see her and have her on TV and magazines is good healing for her."

Brooks, who is separated from Tamara's mother, said he hadn't seen his daughter since he picked her up after the rescue Aug. 1. Since then, his daughter has been "on tour," he said. "It gives her something to draw on so the horror of the experience will be dulced."

But not everyone agrees that a televised interview is the answer. "Talking in a therapy relationship is different than being on national television," said Gail Abarbanel, director of the Rape Treatment Center at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center.

Jackie and Tamara have been inundated by interview requests. Hollywood producers asked to buy the rights to their story. Three network morning news shows wooed them.

At first, the girls decided to go on all the morning shows, but they were talked out of it by NBC staffers after they agreed to appear with Katie Couric on the "Today" show.

Couric's exclusive interview aired Monday. NBC officials have since disclosed that the show's booker bought Jackie an $80 pair of pants, a violation of NBC's standards. The purchase was made after the girls agreed to appear, said Allison Goldust, spokeswoman for the "Today" show.

"The booker felt bad for someone going through such an emotional time," said Goldust, who added that "appropriate action" will be taken against the booker.

During the interview, which was taped in Lancaster, Tamara and Jackie finished each other's sentences. They exchanged knowing glances. They reached out for each other's hands.

They told Couric about their abduction, their struggle with their captor and their rescue. But there was one word they never uttered: rape. Nor did Couric. The closest Couric got to asking about rape was when she inquired: "Did he hurt you in any way?"

Tamara quickly shut down the question, saying, "Yes, but that's something we won't discuss."

Several experts felt the omission was telling. "What's significant is they're not talking about the one part of the crime that no one wants to talk about," Abarbanel said.

White House issues rules on medical privacy

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration Friday issued final rules designed to protect the confidentiality of computerized patient records, for the first time giving Americans certain federal rights over how their medical information is used — but offering weaker safeguards than consumer advocates have sought.

When they take effect, for the most part next spring, the rules will mandate a host of new protections, including guaranteeing that people may inspect their medical records. The final version, however, omits a requirement that patients give written permission before their personal health information can be handled by doctors, hospitals, pharmacies and insurance plans. It also protects that lawmakers and two White Houses have contemplated for years.

The rules go further than the administration previously considered to rein in the use of medical information for marketing products, particularly prescription drugs, by companies that gain entry to individuals' records. Critics in Congress and elsewhere said substantial marketing loopholes remain.

The standards, produced Friday by the Department of Health and Human Services, culminate a debate that has raged in Washington for a decade over how much control patients deserve over proliferating access to their medical secrets. The debate has pitted privacy advocates and civil libertarians against employers and a large bloc of the nation's health care industry, which has argued that a free flow of information is essential to deliver medical care economically — and well.

While the administration tipped that balance somewhat further towards the interests of health care companies, officials said the safeguards remain comprehensive. "This regulation gives patients the power to protect their privacy and still get efficient care," Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said, in announcing the administration's decision.

GOING BACK HOME

Raymond Ulrich, left, laughs with younger brother Milton as Raymond gets his first look in more than 35 years at the honey house for which he built the rock walls on the family homestead near Filer. The Ulrich family has been unable to visit the farm until this year, when the new owners, Carl and Brandie Ingram, invited the family to their old home for a reunion.

Family will reunite at honey farm

By Loretta Burkhardt
Times-News correspondent

FILER - Mary Ulrich built the rock home "stone by stone" in the early 1930s and, along with husband Edmund, raised a large family there.

They also used rock to build a honey house, where the family worked together extracting honey from hundreds of colonies of bees each year.

But until recently, it had been at least 35 years since anyone from the Ulrich family had set foot on the old homestead near Clover. And descendants of Mary and Edmund Ulrich are saving the opportunity to gather there this weekend.

"It gives me goose pimples just to think about being there - back where I was raised," said Enola Maier-Moer, who comes from Brentport, Wash., to be with six of her siblings - and more than an expected 100 members of the Ulrichs' extended family - on Sunday.

Although there has been a considerable amount of remodeling done to the upper level of the original family dwelling, the rock portion of the house - which connects to the honey house by way of an underground tunnel - is still much like it was when it was built.

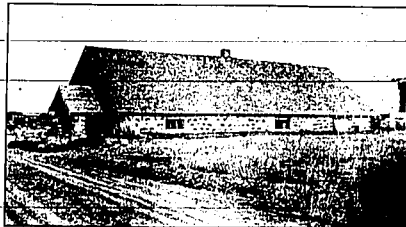

And though the honey no longer flows, the emotions still do.

"Memories," said Raymond Ulrich, brushing away some tears while looking over the storage room in the old honey house earlier this week.

"I helped with the digging. Please see REUNION, Page A7

About the reunion

An Ulrich family history book is available with all the names, births, marriages, and deaths recorded. It is 66-70 pages long.

Next year a family cookbook is planned for publication. Families have been asked to bring a favorite recipe to include in the book. It will be dedicated to Grandpa and Grandma Ulrich and titled "Cooking with the Ulrichs."

This year a dutch oven cooking contest will be held and judged by those in attendance at Sunday's event. Games for the kids, face painting, a tug-of-war and bingo for all will round out the day.

Judge reschedules shooting suspect's hearing for late August

TWIN FALLS - The case against a 17-year-old boy charged in connection with an April shooting that left one man dead and his twin brother wounded was delayed Friday.

A preliminary hearing for Rolando Garza of Twin Falls set for Friday was rescheduled for Aug. 23.

Garza faces a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The hearing was delayed to give lawyers more time to prepare their cases.

The charge stems from a shooting at a party in Hansen that left Twin Falls resident Victor Cuellar, 19, dead and his brother, Francisco Cuellar, hos-

Hispanic Heritage Parade will take place today

TWIN FALLS - The Hispanic Heritage Parade will begin at noon today.

Floats will stage at 10 a.m. in the Fred Meyer parking lot in Twin Falls.

The parade will start at Caswell Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North and proceed south toward Shoshone Street. It will then follow Shoshone Street past City Park and end at Second Avenue South.

The parade route will be closed to traffic from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Motorists can get across town by using Falls Avenue to the north and Minidoka and Sixth Avenue West to the south.

Twin Falls Police Sgt. Matt Hicks said parents attending the parade should watch their children closely and restrain them from running onto the road to gather candy thrown from the floats.

Candy throwing in the parade is illegal.

In order to prevent parking congestion, people are advised to park their vehicles two to four blocks away from the parade route.

Judge hands down 59-year sentence in drug case

HAILEY - A Judge this week sentenced a Hailey man to at least 39 and possibly 59 years in prison on drug trafficking charges.

Robert Hall, 50, was arrested last year after officers with search warrants found 60 pounds of marijuana, almost four pounds of methamphetamine and a pound of cocaine at his house in Hailey and his mother's house in Twin Falls, according to court records.

Commission meeting

In addition to an ordinance addressing a monthly fee for 911 dispatch service, Minidoka County commissioners have these agenda items Monday:

- 9 a.m. - George Fallner talks about the Civil Defense budget.
- 9:30-11 a.m. - Commissioners discuss 2003 budget.
- 11 a.m. - Cassia County Sheriff Jim Higgs talks about the Minidoka Local Emergency Planning Committee.
- 2 p.m. - Public hearing on the Minidoka County zoning map.

911 fee heads to phone bills

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT - A monthly $1 fee to provide money for enhanced 911 services might appear on Minidoka County telephone bills starting in October.

Voters approved the fee in a May election; county commissioners are set to look at an ordinance at a meeting Monday at the courthouse that would start collecting the fee on Oct. 1. County Clerk Duane Smith said beginning collection on Oct. 1 would coincide with the start of the county's fiscal year.

Commissioners have said both land lines and cellular lines would be charged the $1 per line per month, but it might be awhile before cellular lines are included. Charging the fee on cell phones has not been done in many other counties, Minidoka County Planning and Zoning Administrator Paul Aston said. So, while there is every intention to charge cellular lines along with land lines, cellular phone bills might not see the charge right away.

Food bank looks for assistance

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

BURLEY - While a food bank in Burley has been asking businesses for help, they say they have no plans to shut their doors.

Cody Thornton, director of the Helping Hands Christian Mission in Burley, sent letters to area businesses about a month ago through the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce newsletter asking for money.

"We have no government funding and operate strictly on donations from our community," the letter says. "There are 500 businesses in Burley. If each one would consider a monthly donation of five dollars each it would provide enough revenue for both missions in our area to continue services to those in need in our community."

Burley has the Helping Hands Christian Mission, which serves food boxes to those in need; Report has the Community Oasis Outreach, which provides temporary housing and hot meals.

The Helping Hands mission has only received two or three responses to their letter. Cody Prosecutors contend that Hall's mother had no knowledge that her home was being used as a "stash house" and was never charged, according to a release from Blaine County Prosecutor Jim Thomas.

The total street value of the seized drugs was estimated at nearly a quarter-million dollars. A cache of gold coins and other high-end collectibles was also seized during the searches, according to the release.

The sentence is essentially a life sentence, because Hall won't be eligible for parole for 39 years, according to the release.

Bowcut

this case is that the majority of the people who have been charged were actually the parents who were sexually exploiting their own children," Bonner said. "The children all have been taken away from their alleged molesters, and most were placed with other relatives, customs officials said.

Investigators allege that members of the ring befriended each other through Internet chat rooms and began trading explicit computer messages. Men sometimes requested photographs of children in specific sexual poses, then asked for an audition so he could hear a child crying while being spanked, the indictment said.

Arrests are expected. Authorities are still trying to identify other children in some of the explicit pictures.

The indictments follow nine months of investigation by law enforcement agencies, Bonner reported.

In November 2001, the U.S. Customs Cybermuggling Center was coordinating its efforts with the Danish National Police, after the Danish police received information from an Internet watchdog group about online photographs of a man sexually abusing a young girl.

That man and his wife were later arrested, after police learned they had posted images on the Internet of their 9-year-old daughter being molested. Those images were shared over the Internet with people in other countries, including the United States.

The case was identified by the Customs Service as "Operation Hamlet" because of the connection to Denmark.

Long before the federal indictments, Bowcut was already in jail in Burley on related state charges. He has pleaded guilty to 14 Idaho counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor younger than 18. Each state charge could yield a life sentence under Idaho law.

He was in the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center Friday, awaiting sentencing on his Idaho charges. He'll remain there for now, Cassia County Sheriff Jim Hignens and Cassia County Prosecuting Attorney Al Barrus said.

If federal authorities need him to appear in court in California before Bowcut is sentenced in Cassia County, it's possible Bonner might be transferred out of the local jail long enough for those court appearances, Barrus said.

Hignens said he expects a U.S. marshal to serve indictment papers on Bowcut soon. Neither Hignens nor Barrus had been notified Friday of any scheduled federal court appearances for Bowcut.

The federal prosecution doesn't really affect the Idaho prosecution of Bowcut, Barrus and Hignens said. It's likely Bowcut will be sentenced in Cassia County before he is sentenced on any potential federal conviction.

If Bowcut is sentenced to prison in Idaho, and if he's convicted of the federal offense, the federal and Idaho sentences could run concurrently or consecutively, Barrus said. In the latter case, Bowcut would be transferred to a federal penitentiary.

Although Customs Service press releases stated Bowcut "allegedly operated a photography business that he utilized to produce child pornography," local authorities said the charges against Bowcut involve only three girls.

"We don't have any evidence of picture taking of him and any other girls," Hignens said.

"We don't have any reason to believe his lewd and lascivious actions involve more than three victims," Barrus said.

The three victims' identities have been blacked out in local court documents.

Others indicted by the U.S. attorney's office Friday were Lloyd Emerson of Clovis, Calif., Paul Whitmore of San Diego, Calif., Brooke Rowland of San Diego, Tracy Reynolds of Longview, Texas, Michael Hand of West Palm Beach, Fla., Harry Tschernetzki of Spokane, Wash., John Zill of Greenville, S.C., Craig Davidson of Kansas City, Kan., Egbert Jensen of Benet, Denmark, Jean-Michel Catin of Switzerland, Marcel Egli of Switzerland, Dirk-Jan Prins of the Netherlands and Peter Alhaus of Switzerland.

Another man, Jeffrey Naimo of Killeen, Texas, was arrested earlier in connection with the pornography ring. He pleaded guilty to child molestation and was sentenced to 20 years in prison. An 11th U.S. citizen, Sean Bradley of Reno, Nev., committed suicide before the filing of formal charges, the Customs Service reported.

The Justice Department is seeking the extradition of the foreign citizens so they can face charges in the U.S., Bonner said.

"This is the evil underbelly of

How the probe unfolded

- Jan. 28 U.S. Customs agents and officers from the Clovis Police Department in Fresno, Calif., arrested a suspect upon locating the bowcut images on the Internet with another couple involved in the ring. The suspect was subsequently charged with child molestation and other related violations.
- Jan. 27 U.S. Customs agents in San Diego, along with members of the Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force, arrested a child counselor, charged with child molestation and distribution of child pornography.
- Feb. 15 U.S. Customs agents and detectives from the Cassia County Sheriff's Office arrested Bowcut in Burley. He recently pleaded guilty in Idaho's 5th District Court to 14 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor younger than 18.
- Feb. 15 An advertising salesman was arrested in San Diego on charges of child molestation and distribution of child pornography.
- Feb. 15 U.S. Customs agents in Reno, Nev., and detectives from the Reno Police Department executed a search warrant at the home of a suspect who committed suicide before the filing of formal charges on molesting several children.
- Feb. 24 U.S. Customs agents in Dallas, assisted by the Harrison County Sheriff's Office and the Texas Department of Public Safety, arrested a suspect from Longview, Texas. The suspect was arrested on charges of sexual assault of a child under the age of 13.

U.S. Customs agents in West Palm Beach, Fla., and detectives from the West Palm Beach Sheriff's Office arrested a suspect from Palm Beach Gardens on charges of child molestation and manufacture and distribution of child pornography.

A federal arrest warrant was issued for suspect from Longview, Texas, on child pornography charges.

U.S. Customs agents in Austin, Texas, arrested suspect from Killeen, Texas, for possession and receipt of child pornography.

This suspect allegedly had asked a man and wife involved in the ring to send him images of child molestation while posing as a teenage girl on the Internet. On July 10, the suspect was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

A suspect from Spokane, Wash., was arrested on child sexual exploitation charges. The suspect entered a guilty plea on Aug. 1.

Eighteen people were indicted on federal conspiracy charges in the Eastern District of California. Six of those indicted are foreign nationals. Ten suspects have been arrested in Denmark, Belgium, Germany, England, Switzerland and the Netherlands. Additional arrests in the United States are anticipated.

Bowcut asks judge to close hearing

BURLEY — Leslie Peter Bowcut's lawyer is asking 5th District Judge Roger Burdick to ban the public from an Oct. 4 court hearing where Bowcut is scheduled to be sentenced for sexually abusing children.

Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus said Friday he plans to argue for the hearing to remain open.

In a motion filed Friday, Bowcut attorney Steven Richert wrote that the hearing should be closed to protect the identities of children who are victims, noting that the case has attracted significant media coverage, "with reports of some or all of the proceedings to date ...

"If the sentencing hearing is not closed to the public, then similar dissemination of the identities of the victims will follow," Richert wrote. "The privacy of these children victims outweigh the right of the public to know."

But Barrus said there is a way to protect the children's privacy without closing the hearing.

"Our position is that the public does have a right to know, if the rights of the children involved can be protected," he said. "I think there are ways it can be done."

District Court hearings generally are open to the public, though judges have the authority to close them under certain circumstances.

Bowcut, 28, last month pleaded guilty to 14 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor younger than 16 as part of a plea agreement. He had been charged with 25 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct, 13 counts of sexual abuse of a child under age 16, and two counts of sexual exploitation of a child.

The charges stemmed from actions he said took place between April 1999 and April 2000, when Bowcut engaged on a variety of sexual actions with three children. Court documents also indicate that Bowcut's actions were recorded by a digital camera, were loaded onto computer disks and eventually were shared via the Internet. He faces a federal indictment in connection with the Internet images that were distributed.

Richert wrote that Bowcut wants to close the sentencing hearing "to protect the identities of the minor children whom are the victims of the public dissemination of images similar to those involved here."

Barrus said images of Bowcut and the children likely will be displayed during the sentencing hearing, but he thinks the courtroom can be arranged so that the pictures can't be seen by the audience.

"Our concerns are first, to protect the children, and second, the right of the public to know what's going on," Barrus said.

A lawyer for The Times-News also will ask Burdick to reject the closure motion, according to Managing Editor Tom Bonner. "The Mini-Cassia community is intensely concerned about the outcome of this case," Walworth said. "Nobody needs to look at these pictures, but citizens have a basic right to observe how the justice system does its job."

child pornography that he hoped didn't exist," said San Diego Deputy District Attorney Jeffrey Darr.

While there have been arrests in recent years involving large-scale rings that sell child pornography, the swapping of pictures for personal enjoyment is new, Darr and other investigators said.

The phenomenon also presents new challenges to law enforcement because, unlike the commercial rings, the parents are not prone to taking chances and use sophisticated encryption techniques to trade pictures with others.

The indictment states all the defendants are charged with conspiracy to sexually exploit children. Emerson and Whitmore are also charged with the sexual exploitation of children, and Emerson faces a third count of receiving and distributing material involving the sexual exploitation of minors.

Each count carries the mandatory 10-year prison sentence and a maximum of 20 years in prison. Among other things, the indictment charges that Emerson, a chiropractor from Clovis, Calif., and Whitmore, a youth counselor and school director in San Diego, visited each other last year for the purpose of arranging pornographic photographs of children.

The two men drew up a "written rules of conduct" for club members to follow when photographing children, the indictment says. Another man, Brooke Rowland of San Diego, had sexually explicit photographs of himself made with a young girl at Whitmore's home, authorities charged.

Bowcut is accused of trading sexually explicit photos of children with Emerson. He is also accused of communicating electronically with Emerson on more than one occasion about producing and transmitting such images.

Bowcut is also accused of discussing with Whitmore, by e-mail, the arrest of Zill and a minor who was in Zill's custody.

Education spending gap narrows

BOISE (AP) — The funding gap between Idaho's poorest and richest school districts is getting closer, according to a national study released Thursday.

The study shows that the most low-income and minority students in 2000 got an average of $157 less per student in state and local money than districts with the fewest poor and minority students.

The gap has declined since 1997, when there was a $227 percentage difference.

Although Idaho's funding gap is relatively small, the dollars add up quickly, said Craig Jerald, senior policy analyst for the Education Trust, the Washington D.C. advocacy group that wrote the report. A $157 difference per student totals more than $60,000 when spread across a school of 400 kids, he said.

"A school can buy a couple of reading specialists for that," he said.

In Idaho, many of the districts with the most low-income and minority students also have test scores that are lower than those in districts with wealthier students.

The Education Trust chose districts with the most and least poor kids to study based on census income and other data.

Idaho officials said the difference between the amount wealthy and poor districts spend on education has little impact.

"I think (the amount) is insignificant," said Tim Hill, chief of finance and transportation for the state Department of Education.

Museum director leaves debt behind

BOISE (AP) — Officials at the Idaho-Black-History-Museum appear to have been hit by the museum's former chief administrative officer.

Tamara Mullins, 39, allegedly used a museum credit card to rack up nearly $9,000 in personal charges and then fled to Florida.

The museum's board of directors fired Mullins on July 24. Police in Florida, where she went a month ago on personal leave, are searching for her.

Mullins faces felony charges of grand theft and fraudulent use of a credit card. If she's found guilty, Mullins could spend five years in prison and be fined $50,000.

"It was a crime that was committed against the museum, the board, our supporters and really against all the people of Idaho," Wanda Lynn-Riley, president of the museum's board of directors, said.

Museum treasurer Sue Reents discovered the credit card charges on July 22 when she audited the museum's financial records after realizing Mullins had not turned over two months' worth of credit card statements.

Mullins had taken a leave of absence for personal reasons earlier in the month, so Reents called the credit card company to check on the balance.

"I found out the balance was really high," Reents said.

Idaho gives dentists Medicaid discretion

BOISE (AP) — The state has given dentists discretion to treat dental emergencies for Medicaid patients, eliminating the black and white policy that for a time denied a low-income senior dentures so she could chew her food.

The compromise reached earlier this month with the Idaho Health Care Association carries State Dental Association director Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's directive that Medicaid officials factor in human dignity when deciding whether dental work should be billed to taxpayers.

Health and Welfare Department spokesman Ross Mason said the 600 dentists treating Medicaid beneficiaries have been told that "if you feel this is an emergency and you can document it, go ahead and do it."

"That's up to the dentist to define that and explain to us why it is an emergency," Mason said. "It gives them a fair amount of leeway."

The association said the agreement resolves the immediate debate but falls short of addressing underlying problems in the Medicaid system.

The accommodation followed the highly publicized incident this spring in which the treatment of a 92-year-old Dorothy Misner's deteriorated teeth got caught, figuratively, in the legislative process. Her dentist's decision to deny all emergency dental care to low-income adults on Medicaid.

Tens of thousands of adults have been affected by the decision that lawmakers hope will save $2 million a year.

Misner had her teeth pulled five days before the new policy took effect.

Her appointment for dentures to replace those teeth was after the restrictive policy was in effect and she was denied dentures, reportedly being told she could gum her food.

Kempthorne quickly directed the department to pay for Misner's dentures and called his "human dignity" directive.

Mason said a handful of similar cases were immediately dealt with the same way. The 60 other appeals for previously denied Medicaid coverage for dental care under Kempthorne's "human dignity" exception were held up until the agreement was worked out last week with dentists.

Jackpot works on recreation plan

By Sam Fellman
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. — The Jackpot Advisory Board is working on a 20-year recreation master plan for its parks and recreation, which is key to obtaining future grants.

Jackpot's recreation budget is maintained by room-tax money and pays for the golf course, the pool and rec center as well as the parks and ball fields. The golf course and pool and rec center will be paid for within a year, said Dixie Chino, Jackpot town clerk and tourism representative.

The advisory board has been working with Jerry Drago of MIG Inc. of Portland, Ore., to find out how best to invest Jackpot's recreation dollars in the future.

MIG conducted a survey of both residents and guests, Jim Bentley, advisory board member, said he feels the survey was not conducted properly. He said he never received a survey form, and he wonders how many other members of the community never had the opportunity to take part in the survey.

The people who took the survey were wanting things that the board felt private enterprise could provide, such as bowling alleys and movie theaters.

MIG sent the board a memo of several options ranging in price from $175,000 to $1.2 million.

The board decided it will need more time and also more comments in order to decide which direction the town's recreation dollars should go.

Other board business included:

- Road repairs — The road north of Jackpot leads to Salmon Falls Creek and needs repair. Chino said it needs to be fixed and asked the Jackpot Advisory Board for support in writing a letter to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management asking for it.
- The road, which is used by many sports enthusiasts from rafters to fishermen, has always been a rough road.

"It's beyond rough now," was Jackpot Civic Club President Brad Hester's comment. The road was made impassable in early June after record rainfall washed out the road.

The road is used in the late spring as a spot to pick up rafters launching at the rest stop south of Jackpot. Fishermen getting to the backwaters of the Salmon Dam also use it, as do hunters and bird watchers.

- Sewer pilot program — Ed Ellis, public works supervisor, said the Jackpot-sewer pilot program is complete. The pilot program is an experiment conducted by the Nevada Department of Environmental Quality, Elko County and the town of Jackpot. The program consists of several monitoring wells around the lagoons plus experimental treatments of the lagoons.
- "It will take several months to see if it's working. But we're done with construction," Ellis said.

- Ambulance report — Shelly Hester with Jackpot fire and ambulance said there were 29 ambulance calls with 12 transports in July.
- "For some reason our calls are way up," Hester said. She said they are seeing less accidents and the calls are for a variety of things. She said the department even handled a rattlesnake bite, a first for the department.
- Risk analysis — Jackpot's safety director Vert Jarvie presented the board with a Risk and Hazard Analysis. In this report he lists, in order, incidents that have the highest risk of happening in Jackpot, which are medical emergencies, to that which has the lowest risk of happening, which is terrorism.
- Beth Wiggins, advisory board chairman, asked whether the list was a precursor to an equipment list.
- Jarvie said he will work from this analysis to identify needs.

Castleford might get telecommunications tower

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — Castleford could have a telecommunications tower in the near future as the result of an agreement with TowerLink America approved by the City Council this week.

TowerLink, a cooperative program with the Idaho and national rural water associations, will use water towers as pedestals for telecommunication antennas and satellites.

According to the agreement, TowerLink will now look at the feasibility of installing a structure on the Castleford tower.

If TowerLink approves the Castleford site, the telecommunication structure would be installed and the system would be leased to carriers. The lease payment ranges from $1,500 to $2,000 per month for each company using the tower. It is possible to rent more than one space on a tower. The community of Castleford would receive 63 percent of the lease dollars; Township, 33 percent; National Rural Water Association, 15 percent; and Idaho Rural Water Association, 2.5 percent. Based on a single $1,500 per-month lease, Castleford could earn a little over $1,300 annually.

TowerLink is responsible for the lease negotiation and management services, collection and distribution of lease payments, and the tower's posts and upkeep of the equipment.

Also this week, the City Council approved the city's $167,007 budget for the 2002-03 fiscal year following a public hearing. Dollars have been allocated in the general fund for the city's portion of Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Mike Cooper's wages. The council is hopeful the county commissioners will designate funds in next year's budget to fund Cooper's position for another year. A grant that has paid for much of Cooper's wages for the past two years runs out Oct. 1.

"Mike Cooper has had a very positive effect on the community," said Patsy Kynyon, city clerk. "We have better enforcement of our ordinances and traffic laws. Mike has developed an excellent rapport with the community youth of all ages. He has earned their respect and they know they can go to him for help anytime."

Other city business included:

- Community beautification — Councilman Oscar Flores reported a representative of Franklin Chamber Company has offered to help with a new community beautification project. Each year the council will select one resident to help with home improvement. The proposal for this year is to roof the home of Amelia Garza.
- Irrigation — A county crew will be doing community service hours in Castleford early next week, cleaning out ditches that carry Twin Falls Canal Company irrigation water.
- Council election — Councilman Herb Runyan was elected council president.

Board of Environmental Quality elects new officers

BOISE — The Idaho Board of Environmental Quality elected new officers to oversee the panel's activities for the next year.

Board members elected Moscow attorney Paul Agidius to serve as chairman of the board. A former Moscow city councilman and mayor, he also serves on the State Board of Education. Agidius replaces Burley attorney Don Chisholm, who will continue to serve as a board member.

The new board vice chairman is Randy MacMillan, vice president of research and environmental affairs for Clear Springs Foods Inc. in Buhl. MacMillan, who replaces Agidius, worked as a research biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Former state Sen. Marti Calabretta of Oshum will continue to serve as board secretary. She is a member of the Idaho Board of Health and Welfare and serves as vice chairman.

The board was created in June 2000 when the former Division of Environmental Quality became a full-fledged department. The board is a rulemaking and advisory body whose members are appointed to four-year terms by the governor. Chisholm was the board's first chairman and was instrumental, the department says, in the panel's formation.

Thornton said. But even with minimal responses, the mission is not thinking about its closure.

"We're not thinking of closing. No," Cody Thornton said. "We have no plans to close the door."

Donations have fallen flat since Sept. 11, Cody Thornton said. Annual donations which come every year to the mission are down; donors have said they donated heavily to Sept. 11 efforts.

Judy Thornton illustrated the decrease in donations with an example of the annual Boy Scouts canned food drive, which happens in November. In 2001, Boy Scouts gathered 3,500 cans. In November 2001, that drive brought in roughly 500. "That's the change," Judy Thornton said.

If businesses would donate just $5 a month it would keep services going at both the Helping Hands Christian Mission and Ruppert's Community Oasis Outreach, Cody Thornton said.

"It's not for us, it's not for me. It's for the people who are in need," Cody Thornton said.

Monthly expenses at the mission are at least $1,000, Cody Thornton said. That covers rent, utilities, insurance and gas. No salaries are provided for anyone at the mission.

I spent a lot of years gathering stones for the house," said Ulrich, who was the seventh of nine children born to Edmund and Mary Ulrich.

"I went to old rock piles near Berger to find rocks that were smooth enough to use, but I liked to drive my dad's pickup, so I didn't mind."

Ulrich, a young teen-ager at the time, said the family "looked for rocks every place we'd go. And then I'd go to the canal to get sand and rock to mix with the cement."

beekeeping remained a part of the Ulrich family tradition. And while it has become more of a hobby than a real source of income, Raymond and his brother, Milton, continue to keep more than 50 colonies of bees around the Magic Valley.

Now, with the invitation to drive my dad's pickup, my work seems to have paid off.

"This is going to be a very special time," Milton Ulrich said.

Plans for the reunion on the old place came during a "chance meeting" while she talked some of the family honey at a Farmers Market in Twin Falls.

starting it," Aston said, but county officials are not sure exactly how to get it done.

"First off, we need to identify every provider in the county," Aston said.

Smith said county officials have not identified which companies offer cell phones in Mindokka County, nor have they contacted the companies.

The county might choose to not even budget fees from cellular lines as revenue in this budget year, but plan to have the fee implemented on cell phones by next year, Aston said.

Land lines are much easier to work with. The two providers in the county, Project Mutual Telephone and Qwest, have both been contacted about the fee, Aston said. PNT is "up to speed"; Qwest has been contacted and no problems are anticipated.

Charlie Creason, PNT's general manager, said the company's system is set to add the $1 charge to Mindokka County bills. The company already adds the surcharge to Cassia County bills. Creason said he sees no problems.

Aston said the telephone companies will collect the fee and then give the county a payment of fees collected. Aston said he assumed payments would come to the county monthly, but he was not sure.

If the ordinance is approved, county officials will send telephone companies a copy of the ordinance and of the election results, giving the companies authority to begin charging the fee, Aston said.

"The public knows it's coming," he added.

The fee will provide money to upgrade equipment in the Mindokka County Sheriff's Office dispatch center. Sheriff's office personnel have estimated a cost of $175,000 to $200,000 for the upgrade.

The fee on telephone lines can't be up to $1. Commissioners have said the fee needs to be at the maximum of $1 until equipment in the dispatch center is upgraded. It could drop to a lower amount at that time.

Candidate proposes spending cuts

POCATELLO (AP) - Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jerry Brady is proposing more cuts in state spending and intensifying the crack down on tax scofflaws to keep cash flowing to schools and the state in the black.

During a stop in Pocatello this week, the challenger to incumbent Republican Gov. Dirk Kempthorne told civic leaders he would restore money to education and other programs that have been cut to balance the budget. He also would go after more people who are not paying their taxes.

The Idaho Falls newspaper publisher blasted Kempthorne for using every penny of state reserves to sop up the current red ink and protect the record 2001 tax cut that Brady has called unwise.

"Today we stand on the verge

of bankruptcy in this state," Brady said. "I'll be happy to reduce some of the cost of government to pay for education. ... Little by little, you'll find savings in most of the departments."

Tax receipts are estimated to fall $123 million short of financing the current state budget, and that gap is expected to widen when an audited revenue estimate is released in several weeks.

"Today we stand on the verge of bankruptcy in this state. I'll be happy to reduce some of the cost of government to pay for education. ... Little by little, you'll find savings in most of the departments."

- Jerry Brady

It was unclear how Brady's plan to cut elsewhere to avoid cuts in education would work. Nearly $1.3 billion of the existing $2 billion budget finances education. Another $560 million is earmarked for health and welfare programs, prisons, courts and the State Police. Spokesman Brian Cronin cautioned on Friday that Brady had outlined only a general strategy. "Our full plan has not been released and will be forthcoming in the next few weeks," Cronin said.

The Republican majority on the budget committee last winter rejected a proposal to step up tax collections from evaders. Leaders said it would send the wrong message to add tax collectors when the state is cutting everywhere else. The committee cut 10 workers from the enforcement staff.

Officials estimate 40,000 people and businesses are not paying $15 million a year in taxes and tens of thousands more owe $90 million in back taxes. An investment of $2 million in increased enforcement four years ago is now yielding $20-million a year in additional tax collections, they said.

Divers find WWII bomber in lake

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Divers using advanced sonar and high-powered lighting have spotted a World War II-era B-29 bomber long hidden in the waters of Lake Mead.

The Superfortress, the same type of plane as those used to drop atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki during World War II, crashed just over 54 years ago but is largely intact, divers said Friday.

The bomber took off from California on July 21, 1948, on a radiation measurement mission.

It crashed into the lake and sank 300 feet to the bottom. All five crew members were rescued.

The plane rested untouched and unseen until the dive team, including conservative Patriot movement leader Bo Grish, discovered it last summer.

They told the Las Vegas Sun that they spent months videotaping and taking pictures of the find before releasing the images Friday.

A spokeswoman for Lake Mead National Recreation Area said the National Park Service knew the general location of the bomber earlier.

The Park Service has contacted federal underwater archaeology experts to assess and document the site. Norris said that after the assessment, authorities will decide whether to retrieve the 141,000-pound plane or leave it.

The plane was found in the Overton Arm of Lake Mead, about 60 miles northeast of Las Vegas. Lake Mead is on the Colorado River between Nevada and Arizona.

Exchange program placed Japanese teenagers with alleged polygamists

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Two Japanese teenagers visiting on a foreign exchange program were inadvertently placed with a host family of alleged polygamists.

The volunteer coordinator who organized the sister city exchange this summer said she never directly asked the family if they were polygamists, but that if she had known she would have chosen a different family.

The situation has caused Salt Lake City Mayor Rocky Anderson to pledge better screening procedures for host families, according to the Anderson spokesman Joshua Ewing.

"It wouldn't be appropriate to place visiting guests in the home of someone who was disobeying the law," Ewing said.

A city board handles the initial requests from students looking for the exchange experience. Representatives from the Mayor's office also greet the dignitaries when they arrive. The mayor's chief of staff, David Nimkin, welcomed the teenagers last month.

Given Springmeyer - who has volunteered to manage Salt Lake City's sister city youth exchange with Matsumoto, Japan, since 1978 - first realized the host family might be polygamist when a reporter from "The City Weekly" called and questioned her about it.

"When he said something, I knew exactly what family he was talking about," Springmeyer said.

She said after reports about the family surfaced, she felt uncomfortable confronting them about their lifestyle.

"I know they are (polygamists), they know I know they are," Springmeyer said.

She wouldn't release the family's name, saying they don't want to put themselves at risk.

"I think the world of this family," Springmeyer said.

There were nine teens visiting Utah from July 22 to Aug. 2 from Matsumoto, Japan.

Usually host families take in one teen. This year, two 16-year-old girls wanted to be placed together with a host family because they were uncomfortable with their ability to speak English, Springmeyer said.

Oregon fire approaches record size

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — The nation's largest active wild fire grew to 308,000 acres Friday, threatening to become the biggest fire in Oregon history.

The blaze, in the Siskiyou National Forest and adjoining lands in southwestern Oregon and Northern California, was close to surpassing a 1933 wildfire that burned 311,000 acres in northwest Oregon.

The wildfire had at one point threatened about 17,000 people in several small towns in the Illinois Valley. That danger has eased, but the fire continued to threaten the community of Agness in the Rogue River Canyon and an area near the small coastal town of Brookings.

Sheriff's deputies Friday were asking some Brookings-area residents to prepare to leave their homes immediately if notified.

More than 5,000 people are fighting the fire. More than $27 million has been spent trying to extinguish it, but it was only 15 percent contained.

Weather was becoming less cooperative. Forecasts called for a warming and drying trend into the weekend, with winds of up to 40 mph.

After touring the wildfire Thursday, U.S. Forest Service Dale Bosworth said thinning national forests and restoring the natural role of fire in the ecosystem should be made a top priority.

"The most important thing we can do in a good part of the West is doing some thinning and reintroduce fire back into these fire-dependent ecosystems in a controlled manner," Bosworth said.

Pam Callaway, right, and her daughter, Marisa Callaway, 11, carry supplies Friday to a community meeting in the Wilderness Retreat subdivision east of Brookings, Ore. The two are wearing masks provided by the Red Cross, because of the intense smoke in the area from a wildfire. The nation's largest active wildfire grew to 308,000 acres Friday, threatening to become the biggest fire in Oregon history.

The National Interagency Fire Center reports 5 million acres have burned in the country this year, including more than 715,000 acres in Oregon. Bosworth said the fires have cost $325 million to fight.

Elsewhere, portions of Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado reopened to the public Friday, 10 days after a wildfire near its best-known archaeological attractions forced it to close.

Areas closest to the 2,601-acre fire, including the museum, the library and two cliff dwellings, remain closed. Park Superintendent Larry Wiese said helicopters were still dousing hot spots, and fire crews were still cleaning up.

The fire scorched a wall of one archaeological feature, but did no damage to any other park ruins.

East of San Diego, fire crews hoped have a 56,500-acre wildfire burning across dry mountains fully contained by Sunday.

Marshals Service defends funeral bust of wrong man

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A spokesperson for the U.S. Marshals Service says there was nothing wrong with the way federal lawmen stormed a funeral last week and arrested the wrong man at gunpoint.

Witnesses said services for a man recently killed in a logging truck accident had just concluded when the agents took action.

Outside the northern Idaho funeral home, just as the casket was loaded into the back of a hearse, marshals pushed through the crowd with guns drawn. They took Rick Henry of Elk City to the ground, cuffed him and quickly took him away. The event happened in about 30 seconds, witnesses said. It was unclear how many officers were involved.

"I was pretty appalled," said Connie Weeks, a Grangeville resident who witnessed the incident last Friday.

Henry, who was not the intended target of the bust, was taken to the National Guard Armory. His identity was confirmed and he was later released. He has not been available for comment this past week.

"These types of situations regrettably happen from time to time in law enforcement," said Davis Dezulovich, public affairs specialist with the U.S. Marshals' Office in Washington, D.C. "They used all appropriate measures in taking custody of that person. But I'm sure people who were unaccustomed to law enforcement were understandably nervous."

Dezulovich said the marshal's office acted sensitively in that officers waited until the funeral was over before making the arrest.

Killer gets life without parole

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Convicted killer David "Coo" Merritt has been sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole for the murder of a Panhandle teenager two years ago.

Merritt, 49, is already in prison for sexually assaulting a friend of his victim. He entered an Alford plea on the murder charge, which means the defendant maintains innocence but admits prosecutors have enough evidence to win a conviction.

He is convicted of raping, killing and beheading 14-year-old Carissa Benway, a return for an Alford plea, he avoided being sentenced to death.

"Every time you think about Carissa, remember that she won," her mother, Bonnie Heilander, told Merritt before the sentence was formally imposed on Thursday.

"She is at peace. No one can hurt her now. Carissa's pain and suffering are over," Heilander said. "Yours has just begun."

First District Judge Charles Hosack discussed the appropriateness of ordering the execution of a convicted sex offender and child molester but accepted the bargain Merritt cut with prosecutors because it achieves his primary goal of protecting the public.

"He simply cannot be out in society," Hosack said. "And the plea agreement does assure that."

Four die in small plane crash in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A single-engine plane crashed Thursday evening in the mountains near Richfield. All four on board were killed, officials said.

The plane left Richfield around 5:30 p.m. Thursday intending to travel to Colorado City, Ariz., said Mike Fergus spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration's regional office.

Fergus said Civil Air Patrol found the downed plane Thursday night using an emergency beacon after someone had called to report the plane didn't make its destination. The names of the passengers had not been released. Investigators were on the scene Friday and hadn't determined the cause of the accident.

The plane is a Mooney M20A registered to an owner in Green River, Utah.

How to Buy a Home With Absolutely No Money Down

SOUTHERN IDAHO - A new home ownership program allows qualified buyers to buy a home with absolutely no down payment. You may have owned a home before and are presently renting, or maybe you are a first time home-buyer and need a way to break into the housing market but are holding back because you think you require $10,000, $20,000 or even more for a down payment. Well regardless of your present situation, if you want to get into, or re-enter the housing market without having to make a cash down payment, then this new program may be just what you're looking for. Why pay your landlord's mortgage when you can be building your own equity.

Industry insiders have prepared a new special report entitled, "How to Buy a Home With Zero Down" which reveals how this new and innovative program can get you into the housing market immediately and with absolutely no down payment.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report, call 1-888-521-9738 and enter ID #1025. You can call anytime, 24 hours, 7 days a week to discover how you can get into the housing market NOW and with ABSOLUTELY NO DOWN PAYMENT.

This program is not available in all states. See www.magicvalley.com for details and copyright 1999.

Is now the time to privatize Social Security?

Yes

Privatization guarantees benefits, recipients' survival

regardless of retirement savings, are entitled to the minimum benefit from traditional Social Security.

supported vigorously by Tony Blair's Labor Government. By restructuring its state pension system to include personal accounts, Britain has managed to amass huge retirement savings while controlling entitlement spending. According to Robert Moffit of The Heritage Foundation, the United Kingdom will be debt free by 2030.

The 60 Plus Association, for whom I am an honorary Chairman at age 80, was, in 1997, the first senior citizen group to publicly favor privatizing Social Security and to develop a plan that, if adopted, can save the Social Security system by reforming it. The six main points of our plan are worth serious discussion:

- Enact a Social Security contract between the government and citizens, specifying the benefits that current and future retirees will receive.
- Allow workers to place a portion of their payroll taxes into personal retirement accounts.
- Require all personal retirement accounts to include an (insured) annuity equivalent at least to the Social Security benefits.
- Make no changes in Social Security's disability and dependent programs.
- Ensure that all Americans are free to remain in the existing system.
- Ensure that all Americans,

Vocal opponents of privatization are now using the stock market's nosedive as their main argument against privatization. But I think most Americans understand that retirement investing is not day trading.

Retirement savings involve long-term investments that recognize that occasional downturns will be balanced by more frequent positive returns. Stock investments held for 20 years or longer always have positive average annual returns. Nothing about the recent stock market losses changes this fact.

Because Social Security still pays extremely low rates of return and faces significant financial problems, workers—even with the recent market fluctuations—could expect to earn significantly more from personal retirement accounts than they would from Social Security, accumulating a nest egg for retirement or to pass on to their families.

Some say that choosing between higher risk and higher returns is like choosing between eating better or sleeping better. Allowing workers to invest some of their existing Social Security taxes in their own personal retirement accounts would enable them to do both.

Roger Zion is a former Republican congressman from Illinois, honorary chairman of the 60 Plus Association.

Market decline shows privatization will force cuts

JON S. CORZINE

Social Security is the most successful social program in American history. It is based on a promise: Work hard, pay your taxes, and play by the rules, and you will be able to retire with a guaranteed level of benefits—regardless of the state of the economy or the stock market.

But now, President Bush's privatization plans would break that promise and force deep cuts in Social Security.

The President would divert trillions of dollars from the Social Security Trust Fund to finance privatized accounts. According to the nonpartisan actuaries at the Social Security Administration, his plans would cut guaranteed benefits by more than 25 percent for many current workers and more than 45 percent for later retirees. And the cuts would be even deeper for those who choose to risk their benefits in privatized accounts.

The recent volatility in the stock market has highlighted the critical importance of Social Security in providing a basic level of guaranteed benefits. In recent months, millions of seniors have been hit by significant losses in the values of their 401(k)'s.

Meanwhile, fewer Americans have the kind of traditional pension plans that provide a predetermined benefit. As a result, the fall in the stock market is forcing many workers to delay their retirement and many retirees to reduce their standard of living.

After the recent stock market decline, we might have expected the Bush administration to reconsider its determination to privatize Social Security.

Instead, the President and his supporters continue to push for privatization, although Republicans have calculated that it's politically prudent to put off any action until after November. The strategy is to avoid the controversy that could cost them congressional seats in the mid-term elections, then move behind closed doors afterward to implement privatization and related benefit cuts.

To prepare the ground, some privatizers are trying to scare middle-aged and younger Americans into believing that there is a crisis that demands radical changes in Social Security.

For example, the chief White House spokesman recently claimed that young people will get "nothing" from Social Security. This claim is fear mongering, and it's false.

Right now, with no other changes, the Social Security Trust Fund will be able to pay every penny in promised benefits for forty years into the future. Even after that there will be sufficient resources, with no changes, to pay the vast majority of promised benefits. While some reforms will be needed in the long-term, the claim that Social Security is in fundamental trouble is completely wrong.

To get some perspective on the long-term problem, consider this: The shortfall in the Social Security Trust Fund over the next 75 years is $3.7 trillion. By contrast, last year's bill will reduce government revenue by $8.7 trillion—more than twice as much. Remember that the next time privatizers argue we have no choice but to make deep cuts in Social Security benefits.

The real choice is clear: Social Security provides contributing Americans with a rock solid guarantee on which they can depend upon.

Privatized accounts, by their nature, provide no such guarantee. Instead, they would drain the Social Security Trust Fund, force deep cuts in guaranteed benefits, and gamble the retirement security of seniors on a volatile stock market.

My bottom line is simple: We should never accept changes that take the security out of Social Security.

Sen. Jon S. Corzine is a first-term Democrat from New Jersey and former co-chairman and chief executive officer of the investment company Goldman Sachs.

Twin Falls holding facility mistreats another inmate

I am also one who has been mistreated by Twin Falls holding facility or jail. I have seen my lawyer one time since March 9. I've been placed in another jail with no law library or chance to talk to my lawyer. I've received one call from him telling me to take two years for a check that I didn't cash and tore up.

Is this right?

Get to the source of the problem in school zone

I have listened and watched on the sideline as long as I can stand in the dispute over school zone speed restrictions. Fear of upsetting the largest, most powerful employer in the county, combined with making a church group upset has hindered me. But someone pointed out a non-tax, logical solution to the problem encountered in front of the Twin Falls High School daily.

Cut excessive fines and 24/7 speed reductions are not proper or logical expenses for this issue. Correction of this problem must start with the students. Applying proper street-crossing techniques at normal amounts of education in their daily activities would go a long way in correcting this problem. If the students are not teachable, then groups causing their dangerous activities must step up and become accountable.

Other school zones in this town have crossing guards supported by parent-teacher organizations or other non-tax based groups. They have been fairly successful in dealing with our city's youth. The problem is with high school students leaving the campus to go back and forth to seminary.

If this educational experience is so worthwhile, then the church, which sponsors this training, for credit at our school should gladly step up to protect those youth that use this training. This specifically could be done by having the church put an adult at the crossing to protect the teenagers that aren't sure how to properly cross streets. If they can't get a volunteer, then perhaps the construction of a pedestrian overpass—at church expense—for its members to safely get the services their church is providing is in order.

I beg our city council to consider some logical, problem-oriented and cost-effective solutions before jumping to a major catch-all solution that is overkill, in my opinion.
LYNN LANGFORD
Twin Falls

My concerns are not so much about the reduced number of charges but that in allowing Pete to plead guilty to these charges, he will not go to trial. With a trial, he will not have a jury of his peers who have seen and witnessed the evidence against him. Our community will not have the opportunity to impose an appropriately long sentence on him for his actions. His sentence will be at the sole discretion of Judge Burdick. It could be anything from "therapy" for his "problem" to 14 consecutive life sentences.

My fear and my nightmare is that he will not spend an appropriate amount of time in prison for his crimes. Will they let him out too soon so that we can have a predator on our hands like the one who kidnapped and killed the little Rannion girl? I can't help but wonder whose pornographic pictures that perpetrator was looking at that incited him to commit those actions. Could some of those pictures be that Peter was sharing with others on the Internet?

Our community has been irreparably damaged by the actions of a man who was very involved in church, scouting and the youth in the community. We were all deceived, and now our ability to trust others has been severely damaged. Typically, judges pass sentences with guidance from the law and with the values and the sentiments of the communities involved. We need to make sure that those in charge of this case know the values and feelings of our community. We need letters and communications sent to the prosecutor's office and to the judge so that they can be made aware of the strong sentiments of our community against

Taxing isn't the answer to decreased state revenue
I have noticed recently that because of decreased state revenues, the bureaucrats are putting pressure on our elected officials to increase taxes. Unfortunately, this is their solution regardless of whether the public has been doing with less and less in recent years. If you starve the horse, what is going to pull the plow?

Rains bring flooding to parts of Europe

At least 40 people across Europe have been killed by flooding. The most serious damage occurred along Russia's Black Sea coast, where $32 million in damage was estimated.

European floods leave 40 dead, many missing

NIZHNYAYA BAKANSKAYA, Russia (AP) — Heavy rain and wind swept southern Russia's Black Sea coast on Friday, threatening more of the flooding that has killed at least 34 people in the region. One village was hit with a 6.5-foot wall of water.

Six people died in other parts of Europe this week in floods born of pounding storms, some dropping record rainfall. Choking back sobs, 72-year-old Yevdokia Aksonova surveyed what remained of her modest home — a few bricks, a piece of iron bedpost, and a TV antennae poking open of the roof.

The 6.5-foot wall of water flashed through her village of Nizhnaya Bakanskaya on Thursday. When she returned from a higher ground, Aksonova found a huge, uprooted tree had rammed her house, smashing it to bits.

"How can I live now," she said, huddling with her dog — the only thing she did not lose — in a shack that survived the flood. "I've lost everything I've saved during my life."

The governor of Russia's Krasnodar region, Alexander Tkachev, told ORT state television. He said the flooding had done an estimated $32 million in damage. Residents of Nizhnaya Bakanskaya were in shock Friday after the torrent of water that washed away homes, roads and people in the village of 8,000 people. Many residents are missing but the number isn't known.

Lydia Kostinika mourned the death of her 82-year-old mother-in-law, Darya, who was napping outdoors when the flood hit. Lyuda said she tried to save the older woman but couldn't force open the front door of her house and had to flee to the roof to save herself.

When the flood waters began to recede Friday, she found Darya, drowned.

Sixteen of the dead in Russia were found in the village of Shirokaya Balka, near the Black Sea port of Novorossiisk, the Emergency Situations Ministry said. Rescue workers there managed to save two people trapped under a collapsed house.

Rescuers discovered the body of a young girl in nearby Abrau-Dyurso. Six people camping there are missing. Four bodies were recovered from another village, also called Dyurso. The region is a popular spot for summer vacations.

Scientists claim to solve prime number puzzle

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian computer scientists said Friday they have solved a mathematical problem that has eluded researchers for 2,200 years — and could be crucial in modern times in improving computer configurations.

A three-member team of scientists at the Indian Institute of Technology in the northern Indian city of Kanpur have devised a method that will make no mistake in quickly determining a prime number — those that are divisible only by themselves and 1.

Prime numbers hold the key to solving many mathematical problems. Scientists have long worked on ways to improve methods to identify a prime number.

Greek mathematician Eratosthenes was the first to raise this problem around 200 B.C., when he offered one way of determining whether a number is prime.

Computer scientists and mathematicians have since devised many faster ways to solve the problem, but all such methods carry a small risk of error. Some methods occasionally fail to detect a prime number, while others may select a nonprime number.

Russian official says Georgia is major terrorist 'nest'

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's defense minister said Friday that Georgia had evolved into the world's second major "nest" of terrorism after Afghanistan. It was the latest salvo in the escalating war of nerves between the two former Soviet republics.

Russia has long accused Georgia of harboring Chechen rebels holed up in its lawless Pankisi Gorge near the border with Chechnya, and demanded that the Georgian authorities allow Russian troops to flush them out. "The international community has just crushed the nest of international terrorism in Afghanistan," Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said, according to the Interfax news agency. "We must not forget about Georgia nearby, where a similar nest has recently begun to emerge."

Zimbabwe's white farmers face an uncertain future

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The government deadline for Zimbabwe's white farmers to give up their lands passed Friday with President Robert Mugabe's regime taking no action against landowners who defied the order.

It remained unclear how the government will treat 2,900 white farmers who had been ordered off their land by midnight as part of the country's program to seize white-owned farms and give them to blacks.

"It looks bleak. We are trying to carry on, we are on high alert and we don't know what happens next," said Warwick Evans, a farmer facing eviction in the Trelawney district, 50 miles northwest of Harare, the capital.

The evictions deadline passed as half of Zimbabwe's 12.5 million people face a severe hunger crisis, according to the World Food Program. The WFP blames the crisis on drought combined with the agricultural chaos created by the seizures of commercial farms, mainly owned by whites.

The Mugabe government has targeted 95 percent of white-owned farms for seizure. No attempts were made Friday to force the farmers in Trelawney from their land, Evans said.

He said he hoped the standoff might produce a policy shift by the government to allow some farmers to stay on their farms if they gave some plots to blacks or forfeited most of their land, retaining only limited areas for themselves. "If there are new criteria, you either live with it or you move on, and that'll be it," he said.

The Commercial Farmers Union, representing the nation's 4,000 white farmers, reported two incidents Friday in eastern Zimbabwe in which ruling party militants and blacks already resettled on seized land tried to pressure white farmers to leave.

"Police were called and it seemed the issue would be resolved," said Colin Cloete, head of the union.

Ben Zietsman, a union official in the western Matabeleland province, said farmers reported no incidents there Friday.

"Farmers are generally staying at home to assess the situation as it develops," he said.

Many white farmers were deeply sentimental about leaving land that had been in their families for decades. But Evans, 42, only bought his 3,600-acre farm in 1987, when it was nearly derelict. He turned it into a profitable business, tripling its production, mainly tobacco while raising a young family.

"Sure, it's been a large investment, but it's a business — like selling secondhand cars — and you mustn't get sentimental about it. If things don't work out, you have to have a plan B, to move on, because there are other things in life," he said.

Barry blasts No. 600

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Barry Bonds hit his 600th homer Friday night, capping an amazing two-year power surge by becoming the fourth major leaguer to reach the lofty mark - and the first in 31 years.
 With a 421-foot, solo shot to center field in the sixth inning, the San Francisco slugger joined Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth and Willie Mays - Bonds' godfather and idol - in the exclusive club. No player had crossed the threshold since Aaron did it in April 1971.

Bonds hit his 500th homer on April 17, 2001, and he has passed 13 players on baseball's career list since then in an unprecedented display. In 2001, his 73 homers broke Mark McGwire's single-season record.

 Bonds' shot off Pittsburgh right-hander Kip Wells was his 33rd of the season and his 106th since the start of the 2001 season.
 It also put the 38-year-old slugger 155 homers away from Aaron's record total - though Bonds claims he has no chance to catch Aaron.
 Of course, Bonds also thought he had no shot at McGwire's single-season

San Francisco slugger Barry Bonds connects for his 600th career home run, a solo shot against the Pittsburgh Pirates during the sixth inning Friday in San Francisco.

Tigers rally to prevail

Lewiston's Adam Dolkins is late with the tag on Jerome's Casey Schvaneveldt as he slides in safely at second base during a double steal attempt in the fourth inning Friday afternoon. Tigers standout Kiel Thibault stole home on the play to give Jerome its first lead, 6-5, during the Class A state American Legion baseball tournament first-round game at Wigle Field in Boise.

BOISE - There were some anxious moments for the Tiger-fans at Wigle Field Friday.
 A team that had won with its offense all year, Jerome struggled early, then finally got things going.
 The Tigers scored eight runs in three innings to defeat the Lewiston Cubs 8-6 in the first round of the American Legion A state tournament in Boise.
 Jerome fell behind, then rallied to tie the game. The Cubs jumped out again, but each time Jerome came back. The Tigers scored a pair in the bottom of the sixth, then shut down Lewiston to advance to the second round.
 In the late game, the host Boise Senators downed Marsh Falls 5-4, breaking a 4-all deadlock in the bottom of the seventh.
 In early action, Mountain Home topped Area C runner up Teton 6-2. The Boise Gems, the third place team from Area B, blanked Area A champ Moscow 8-0.

Today Jerome will face the Boise Senators at 7 p.m.
 The day opens with a pair of loser out contests. Teton and Moscow meet at 10 a.m. followed by Lewiston taking on Marsh Falls at 1 p.m. The Boise Gems and Mountain Home battle in the other winners bracket game at 4 p.m.

NFL's OLDEST, AND UNKNOWN

At 97, Presnell still hopes to make the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Glenn Presnell had to upstage the Galloping Ghost to make it from a small Ohio river town to the NFL.
 Presnell is 97 now, making him the NFL's oldest living player. As the league prepares to begin its 81st season, Presnell is a largely overlooked figure from the sport's early days.
 Still, supporters in his hometown of Ironton haven't forgotten him, and they continue to lobby for his induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.
 "I know how good I was," Presnell said during a recent interview. "It would be fun and nice to be in there."
 Presnell was the star quarterback and running back for the Ironton Tanks when the semipro team faced Red Grange and the Chicago Bears for a 1930 exhibition in Cincinnati. Presnell got loose on the left side and outgained Grange for an 88-yard touchdown as Ironton surprised the

 On July 21 - less than two weeks before the latest Hall class was inducted upstate in Canton - the state of Ohio placed a historical marker at Ironton High School to honor the Tanks, who played at the school's field from 1919-30. After Presnell unveiled the memorial, Pro Football Hall of Fame executive director John Bankert told a crowd of about 500 people that Presnell belongs with the other 216 men enshrined in Canton.

Report: Players will likely set strike deadline Monday

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Baseball players are likely to set a strike date for later this month or early September when their executive board meets Monday in Chicago, two lawyers familiar with the union's deliberations said.
 "If we don't make a deal by Monday, then we will probably be forced to act, but it's not inevitable," Arizona player representative Craig Counsell said Friday.
 "I think sometimes unless you set a deadline, things don't get done," Florida's Mike Lowell said. "The irony is that setting a strike date might avoid a strike."
 Union boss Donald Fehr said it was too early to determine what action would be taken by the board, which includes two representatives of each team plus two players representing each league.
 "It depends on what happens over the weekend," Fehr said. "We will go through all the options with the player, and the players will decide what they need to do."

 While it's possible the players might pick a range of dates for a strike, they probably will pick just one date, two lawyers said, speaking on condition they not be identified.
 On July 28, 1994, the executive board set a strike date for Aug. 12. The walkout lasted 232 days, ending only after a federal judge issued an injunction restoring the work rules of the expired contract.
 This time, players have seemed reluctant to set a deadline that could trigger the sport's ninth work stoppage since 1972. However, they would rather set

Sports, crime often overlap in former Soviet Union

By Steve Guterman Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW - In some cases it's as fleeting as a photograph, in others as powerful as a fatal gunshot.

The turbulent recent history of the former Soviet Union is packed with evidence that suggests connections between organized crime and sports.

But in other instances, the tie between crime and sports is clear.

In 1994, a reputed crime boss who headed a foundation for retired athletes was gunned down in Moscow.

The sports and crime worlds were drawn even closer together in the mid-1990s with the creation of the National Sports Fund, a group set up under the aegis of President Boris Yeltsin's tennis partner and sports minister to revive Russian sports.

The fund was among special interest groups that enjoyed vastly profitable exemptions from tariffs on imported alcohol and cigarettes - privileges that invited corruption and drew criminal elements.

Violence also has persisted, though it is less common than in the 1990s. By meeting with athletes and show business figures from the former Soviet Union, Tokhtakhonov has cultivated the image of a patron of the arts among Russians in Europe...

Rudd wins pole at Watkins Glen International

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) - Ricky Rudd won the pole at Watkins Glen International after turning a lap at 122.696 mph in a Ford.

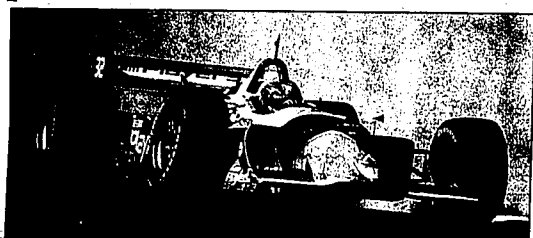

Michael Waltrip qualified second from the pole at 122.635, while the Pontiac of Tony Stewart placed on probation for the rest of the season earlier this week for an altercation with a photographer last Sunday at the Brickyard 400, was third at 122.485.

Qualifying fourth was Bill Elliott, who has won the last two races and has started 1-12-24 in the last four. His Dodge got around at 122.425. Rookie Ryan Newman was next in a Ford at 122.401.

Completing the top 10 were Kevin Harvick, Bobby Gordon, Matt Kenseth, Kurt Busch and Ryan Newman.

Jeff Gordon, the defending race champion, will begin his quest for a fifth Glen victory in six years with the 2.9rd spot on the grid. Dale Jarrett, who set the track record of 122.698 last year, will start 17th in the race sponsored by Sirius Satellite Radio.

Rounding out the top 10 in Friday qualifying were Alex Tagliani, Tony Kanaan, Scott Dixon, Michael Andretti, Takagi, Kenny Brack and Junqueira.

Bliss takes Nashville pole for Craftsman Truck Series... Gladeville, Tenn. - Points leader Mike Bliss won the pole Friday for the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series Federated Auto Parts 200 on Saturday at Nashville Superspeedway.

Bliss, five points ahead of Terry Cook and 29 in front of Jason Leffler after 14 of 22 events, drove his Chevrolet to a track-record speed of 157.322 mph on the 1.333-mile concrete oval.

David Starr, matching his best series start, grabbed the other front-row position, also in a Chevy. Starr, seeking his first series victory, qualified at 156.033. Both Bliss and Starr bettered the year-old qualifying mark of 155.477 set by Scott Riggs, who also won last year's race.

Many moutm Lakers announcer at service

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Los Angeles Lakers play-by-play announcer Chick Hearn was eulogized Friday as a broadcaster who loved his team and listeners, and whose legacy is a unifying enthusiasm among fans in an extremely diverse city.

Basketball stars present and past filed St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church Brentwood for a funeral Mass celebrated by Cardinal Roger Mahony. Among them were Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul Jabbar, Phil Jackson, John Wooden and No. 1 fan Jack Nicholson.

"He just loved his work, he loved his audience and more importantly he loved the Lakers," former team star and executive Jerry West said in his eulogy.

West, now a Memphis Grizzlies executive, recalled watching this year's Lakers championship parade on television.

"I must tell you just looking at the faces in the crowd and how he brought these people together, that will be his legacy," West said.

Hearn, who made "slam dunk," "air ball" and expressions involving mustard, hot dogs, Jell-O, butter, eggs and refrigerators part of the basketball lexicon during 42 years with the Lakers, died Monday night of brain injuries suffered in a fall. He was 85.

Current Lakers Kobe Bryant, Derek Fisher, Brian Shaw, Mark Madsen and Samaki Walker attended Center Shaquille O'Neal was in Florida.

Owners agreed with part of the union's proposal, which calls for each player on a 40-man roster to be tested for illegal steroids. If more than 5 percent of players test positive next year, there would be a second year of testing to confirm the results of the first.

Owners proposed fixed fines and suspensions for violations, while players have proposed penalties only for "just cause."

Dolphins face two preseason games in four days

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) - The Miami Dolphins are glad next week's games don't count. They have to play twice because the NFL wants them on national television. "They do crazy things in this league," safety Brock Marston said. "Two games in four days is a prime example." The Dolphins open their exhibition season Monday at Tampa Bay. On Thursday, they play the New Orleans Saints in Miami. "I feel like a baseball team," defensive end Jason Taylor said. "Unfortunately we can't stand out in the outfield and rest."

The Dolphins open their exhibition schedule when their game at Tampa was pushed back three days to accommodate ESPN. It will be the final game of the first full weekend of the NFL preseason. Miami was locked into Thursday for its second game because that's the only night Pro Player Stadium is available next week. The Florida Marlins have home games on the other dates. "It makes no sense," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "Preseason is supposed to be for evaluating, and how do you evaluate? You almost have to lump them together, because you're not going to get much corrected or much work done between them."

In fact, the Dolphins will go five days without practicing in pads. They'll work out Saturday and Sunday against the Buccaneers in Orlando. Players are off Tuesday and Friday, and Wednesday's practice will be a brief walk-through. "You get days off, and that's nice," Taylor said. "You've got to try to find a positive." Wannstedt said he hasn't decided how to divide playing time in the two games, but they'll be determined when starts the season opener Sept. 8 against Detroit. Decisions must be made at four positions on offense and one on defense. Left guard, where Jamie Nails is trying to beat out Mark Dixon; Left tackle, where Dixon might be moved to start ahead of Brent Smith; Tight end, where rookie Rundy McMichael has a chance to beat out Ted Weaver; Fullback, where recently acquired Oluwatomi Ayinbadejo is challenging incumbent Rob Konrad; Left defensive end, where the candidates are David Bowens and newcomers Jay Williams and Rob Burnett.

Harrington interception sinks Lions in 12-6 loss

BALTIMORE (AP) - Will Demps ruined Joey Harrington's debut by returning an interception 18 yards for a touchdown with 1:55 left, giving the Baltimore Ravens a 12-6 victory over the Detroit Lions on Friday night. Both teams struggled on offense. The Lions averaged eight yards and managed only two field goals by Jason Hanson, one of which was set up by a 51-yard interception return by newcomer Brian Walker.

The Ravens did virtually nothing against Detroit's overhauled defense. Quarterback Chris Redman went 10-of-20 for 93 yards with an interception in his starting debut, and backup Jeff Blake was 8-of-15 for 75 yards. With the score 6-6, Demps grabbed Harrington's errant pass and sprinted into the end zone for the game's lone touchdown. Demps, a free agent sign-out of San Diego State, is vying to make the team as a reserve starting safety.

Lions quarterback Mike McMahon is chased down and sacked for a 13-yard loss by Ravens defensive end Marques Dions during the second quarter at Ravens Stadium in Baltimore on Friday.

Harrington, the third overall pick in the 2002 NFL draft, was 12-of-21 for 117 yards and three touchdowns. Mike McMahon, Detroit's projected starter, was 8-of-20 for 65 yards and an interception. He was sacked four times and finished with a meager 28.1 quarterback rating. Bengals 24, Bills 17. ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. - Drew Bledsoe shined in defeat in his new team, the Buffalo Bills. Greeted by elongated chants of his first name, Bledsoe quickly established himself in his Bills preseason debut, a 24-17 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals. The Bengals won the game in the second half with the second- and third-stringers on the field. Akill Smith hit Sean Weaver with a strike in traffic for the go-ahead, 8-7 yard touchdown with 2:42 left in the third quarter, and kicker Neil Rackers added a 34-yard field goal as the Bengals overcame a 17-7 deficit.

and the Falcons opened the preseason with a 23-13 victory over the Jacksonville Jaguars on Friday night. Vick was solid in his first outing as the No. 1 quarterback. He was 7-of-12 for 53 yards and guided the Falcons to two field goals in the first half. Duckett looks as though he'll make an immediate impact. The 25-year-old running back carried 10 times for 53 yards, including a 25-yard gain that featured a ferocious stiff arm. Not bad for a guy who missed the first nine days of training camp in a contract dispute. Doug Johnson, Vick's backup, helped his cause by going 14-of-15 for 151 yards. Duckett's big run came in the third quarter at Atlanta's first touchdown drive. Mark Brunell played the first four possessions for Jacksonville, going just 3-of-8 for 28 yards. Garrard was 4-of-8 for 35 yards and led the Jaguars with 47 yards rushing.

Cowboys 20, Raiders 6. IRVING, Texas - Quincy Carter directed the Dallas Cowboys to victory in their first three possessions Friday night and they spoiled the coaching debut of Bill Callahan with a 20-6 victory over the Oakland Raiders. Carter, who started eight games in an injury-plagued rookie season last year, had a promising debut in new offensive coordinator Bruce Coslet's West Coast-style offense. He played the entire first half, completing 10 of 13 passes for 96 yards and one touchdown and also rushing twice for 24 yards. The Raiders, however, opened the Callahan era under a hail of yellow penalty flags. Callahan, who was promoted from offensive coordinator when Jon Gruden went to Tampa Bay, saw the Raiders turn in a sloppy performance that featured no touchdowns and 17 penalties for 170 yards.

Falcons 23, Jaguars 13. ATLANTA - The Atlanta Falcons gave their new fans something to cheer about. Michael Vick led two scoring drives, first-round draft pick T.J. Duckett got off to promising start yards, threw two touchdowns and was intercepted. Eric Moulds ran in a 31-yard touchdown reception to open the scoring. Feeless Price, on a fade into the left corner, caught a Bledsoe's perfect touch pass for a 12-yard touchdown early in the second quarter. Mike Hollis later hit a 36-yard field goal for the Bills. Cincinnati's Curtis Keenum, with a strong burst through the middle, scored on an 8-yard run, while Gus Frerotte hit Peter Warrick for a 9-yard touchdown reception. Frerotte struggled, going 6-of-10 for 67 yards, with an interception. Kinn went 7-of-10 for 51 yards. He was particularly sharp in the opening drive, taking the team 71 yards on 13 plays for a touchdown.

much faster than expected from a potentially serious medical condition. Running back Amos Zereoue is beginning to regain his leg strength after missing most of the team's offseason workouts and minicamps. He lost 12 pounds during a hospital stay in March, when a benign cyst was found on his liver. Zereoue has since regained the weight he lost - he's at 208 pounds - but the medical problem slowed his offseason conditioning. The problem didn't prevent the Steelers from signing Zereoue to a four-year, $8.8 million contract extension, a large deal for a backup. He will make $2.839 million this season.

Philadelphia Eagles. A.J. Feeley and Koy Detmer are battling for the backup quarterback spot to D o n n a M c N a b b. Detmer has been the backup the last two seasons. Feeley, a fifth-round pick in 2001, completed 10-of-14 passes for 143 yards, two touchdowns and one interception in the meaningless regular-season final against Tampa last year. Wide receiver Freddie Milons, a fifth-round pick, is having a solid camp in his bid to earn a roster spot as the fourth or fifth receiver and backup returner. Fullback Cecil Martin's starting spot isn't secure. He's fighting backup Jamie Reeder.

Oldest. "Could he play in today's game? You bet," Bankert said. "He was a genuine superstar in the National Football League. He was a complete player. He was a 60-minute man who played both offensively and defensively. He was an excellent passer, a runner, a punter, a place-kicker. He has been nominated for the Pro Football Hall of Fame and remains eligible. So Glenn, don't give up hope." At 5-foot-10 and just shy of 200 pounds, Presnell was a formidable runner and a versatile player who excelled in an era when offensive outbursts were rare. He scored six touchdowns in 1933, tying for the league lead with the Giants' Ken Strong. Never a terribly accurate passer - he had 17 career touchdowns passes against 37 interceptions - he had six scoring passes in 1933. He also kicked a 54-yard field goal to beat Green Bay 3-0 in 1934. Another interesting fact about Presnell: He picked the Lions' uniforms, the same color scheme they have today. "(Mr. George) Richards, the owner, the day I was up there and signed my contract, he said, 'There's a table out there in that next office covered with uniforms, if you don't you pick out the colors you like,'" Presnell said. "I went out, my wife was with me, we saw this Honolulu blue and silver, and we fell in love with it."

Derrick Alexander isn't the answer for the Vikings, yet

By The Associated Press. Minnesota Vikings. Derrick Alexander, signed as a free agent, was supposed to replace Cris Carter at wide receiver and complement Randy Moss. Alexander's hamstring injury has hampered Alexander, who had 470 yards and three touchdowns in an unspectacular 2001 with the Chiefs. Coach Mike Tice is disappointed that Alexander hasn't been able to practice much. So D'Wayne Bates, signed from Chicago, is the starter. "He has worked hard to gain that spot," Tice said of Bates. "I would wish that players, when they have a chance to compete for a starting spot, would step up to the plate and go ahead and compete for that spot, but that's not the case with all players."

Green Bay Packers

Terry Glenn has given the Packers two scares with minor knee injuries. Glenn has a long history of knee injuries and has a reputation in New England for an inability to play through pain. Bill Parcells once referred to him as "blue." He was hurt last Wednesday during a one-on-one passing drill when he reached back for a pass and his left knee buckled. Glenn hurt his right knee during the first week of camp. The Packers are counting on Glenn to be a major part of their passing attack now that Antonio Freeman, Bill Schroeder and Corey Bradford are gone.

John Bankert, Pro Football Hall of Fame executive director

After his NFL career, Presnell coached at Nebraska in 1942 before serving a stint in the Navy. He later spent 24 years at Eastern Kentucky as an assistant coach, head coach and athletic director. Presnell still lives in Ironton, in southern Ohio near the Kentucky and West Virginia borders, with his wife of 25 years, Mary. He watches a lot of football on TV - colleges on Saturdays and the pros on Sundays. In his southern Ohio drawl, Presnell talks with wonder about how much the NFL has changed over the past seven decades. "Our game back when I played was more like the college game," Presnell said. "You ran until you needed the long yardage and then you threw a long pass. Now they pass on every down."

Kansas City Chiefs

The riskiest experiment in pating and communicating better last season. "Everything's slowed down," Dyson said. "It's a little easier. Last year I was having to learn a lot of stuff and being thrown in having to think so much. This year I really don't have to think as much. Just go out and play."

Tennessee Titans

Cornberger Andre Dyson has been the most impressive defensive player in camp. Keith Jackson, former Oklahoma tight end, speaks at the Mayor's Breakfast as part of the College Hall of Fame enshrinement activities Friday in South Bend, Ind.

Former Sooner Keith Jackson hits Hall of Fame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Keith Jackson never played for a team at Oklahoma. He didn't grow up in South Bend, becoming one of college football's greatest tight ends. Jackson used his 6-foot-2, 250-pound frame and big-play ability to make himself a can't-miss target, becoming a two-time All-American and threetime All-Big Eight selection. He helped the Sooners win the national championship in 1956. His love for college football never waned, and one of his biggest honors comes Saturday when he is enshrined in the College Football Hall of Fame along with 24 others, including his former coach, Barry Switzer. Others entering the Hall of Fame this year are former Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young, Michigan receiver Anthony Carter, and Michigan State safety Brad Van Pelt. "There is no time like college. It is the most exciting time for any kid," Jackson said Friday as induction festivities got under way. "Win, lose or draw, at the college level, it didn't make a difference. They still came Saturday after Saturday. If one of your players fell down and a touchdown was caught on him and cost you the game, and your teammates would walk up to him and pick him up and say, 'Hey, we play again next Saturday. We'll win that one.'" Jackson played from 1984-87 on a team that rarely threw the ball. He still caught 62 passes for 1,470 yards during his career. In 1986, he had only 14 catches, but five of them went for touchdowns as he averaged 28.8 yards a catch for a school that finished last in the nation in passing. "He was a great athlete. He was a big, fast tight end who had great hands, extremely talented," Switzer said. "He just had magic, big-play ability." Jackson, who played in the NFL with three teams and won a Super Bowl with Green Bay in 1997, is now helping others enjoy the same excitement he experienced in college. After retiring, Jackson returned to his hometown of Little Rock, Ark., and started a program called Positive Atmosphere Reaches Kids (PARK), an after-school program for at-risk children. PARR has 120 children in eighth through 12th grades who take part in a five-year program to help them get into college. Jackson said working with the children is far more rewarding than playing football. "The biggest thrill is knowing that if you were not a part of that student's life, that kid might not have an opportunity to go to college," Jackson said. "So when that kid walks across the stage to get their diploma, you know if it wasn't for you being there that student wouldn't be there. It's not a guess. You know you're helping that student. That's the thrill." Now it's Jackson's turn for one more football thrill.

Rogers falls short in perfect-game bid

CLEVELAND (AP) - Kenny Rogers flirted with perfection again, retiring his first 21 hitters, and Rafael Palmeiro homered in the ninth inning to send the Texas Rangers to a 3-2 win over the Cleveland Indians on Friday night.

Rogers (12-6), who threw one of baseball's 14 modern-era perfect games in 1994, had another one going through seven innings.

The left-hander retired 21 in a row before walking Jim Thome on a 3-2 count to lead off the eighth. Milton Bradley followed with a double to left. Rogers allowed two runs and two hits in eight innings. Palmeiro homered off Mark Wohlers (1-2) leading off the ninth.

Twins 5, Red Sox 4

BOSTON - Doug Mientkiewicz and Corey Kosie drove in two runs each as Minnesota stopped a season-high four-game losing streak. Cristian Guzman went 3-for-4 and scored a run for the Twins.

Nomar Garciaparra went 3-for-4 with a solo homer and two RBIs. Boston has lost three of its first four games on a six-game homestand.

White Sox 10, Mariners 2

CHICAGO - Paul Konerko hit a three-run homer and Magglio Ordonez drove in three runs with a solo shot and a double.

Mark Buehrle (15-8) had a shutout bid until Jeff Cirillo's RBI double in the eighth and wound up allowed one run and six hits in 7 1/4 innings.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 4

TORONTO - Rookie Orlando Hudson hit an RBI triple off the top of the right-field wall.

Chris Woodward had a two-run single, and Hudson's two-out triple off Ramon Ortiz (9-9) gave Toronto a 4-2 lead in the fourth.

Tigers 3, Orioles 0

DETROIT - Rookie Mike Maroth (4-4) allowed six hits in 8 1/3 innings. Juan Acevedo closed for his 21st save, completing the Tigers' sixth shutout of the season.

Jason Johnson (3-9) gave up one run and three hits in five innings. George Lombard hit an RBI double in the third, and Robert Fick homered in the eighth.

Royals 5, Devil Rays 4, 12 Innings

KANSAS CITY - Michael Tucker drove in Joe Randa with a 12th inning double, leading the Kansas City Royals over the Texas hurler Kenny Rogers pitches to Cleveland's Karim Garcia during the sixth inning Friday in Cleveland.

Tampa Bay Devil Rays 5-4 Friday night.

Raul Ibanez walked against Travis Phelps (0-2) leading off the 12th and Randa hit into a fielder's choice. Tucker followed with a one-hopper to the fence in left-center field.

National League

Reds 12, Padres 10

CINCINNATI - Aaron Boone hit three homers off Brett Tomko, two of them during Cincinnati's nine-run first inning, and the Reds held on for a 12-10 victory Friday night over the San Diego Padres.

Boone hit a pair of two-out shots off Tomko (5-8) during the biggest first inning ever allowed by the Padres. He added a solo shot in the fourth, matching his career high with five RBIs.

Expos 11, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE - Jose Macias drove in a career-high five runs, and Bartolo Colon won for the fifth time in six decisions with Montreal as the Expos beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Vladimir Guerrero tied Ken Griffey Jr. as the second youngest player to reach 200 homers when he hit his 30th of the season, a line-drive to left-center off Mike DeJean leading off the ninth.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS - Al Leiter allowed one run in seven innings, winning for the first time in four starts, and Mo Vaughn homered as the New York Mets silenced the slumping St. Louis Cardinals.

The NL Central-leading Cardinals have lost eight of nine and totaled one run in five of the last six games. The exception was a 5-3 victory over Montreal on Thursday that ended their season-worst seven-game losing streak.

Rockies 2, Cubs 0

DENVER - Denny Neagle pitched three-hit ball over seven neat innings, and the Colorado Rockies beat the Chicago Cubs for their fourth straight win.

The game was the fastest of season at Coors Field, taking only 2 hours, 19 minutes. It was third shutout of the year at Colorado, all through by the Rockies.

Neagle (6-7) walked one and struck out a season-high eight. He outdudded rookie Carlos Zambrano (2-3), who also went seven innings, allowing four hits and one run.

Jerome

Tiger legion team has won their first game at the state tournament.

Nerves got to Jerome early with a few miscues on defense and rushing at the plate. Probably the only person not nervous during the game was Jerome coach Jeremiah Johnston.

"We are never out of a ball game. I have confidence in our offense and defense," Johnston said.

The only player with state Legion experience, Kiel Thibault, played like it. The Gonzaga-bound catcher went 3-for-4 and twice and chipped in three RBIs.

"I was nervous, but when I got to the plate the nerves went away," said Thibault. "I was trying to hit the ball hard every time. It feels awesome to win."

In the second inning an error and hit batter put two on. A single put Lewiston on the board first.

Thibault smacked a double to the fence in the first inning, but was stranded at second. Otherwise there was little offensive output.

"We hit the ball early, but they made the plays. We were being too aggressive at the plate," Johnston said.

The Cubs added to their lead in the fourth as No. 9 hitter Trent Hollingsworth smacked a double against the wall in left center to score Jake Cannor, who scored two runs.

In the bottom of the fourth, Johnston had a talk with his players.

"I told them to calm down and work the count. They did," said Johnston.

Jerome finally got their offense going in the fifth. Thibault was hit by a pitch, then moved to third on a single by Casey Schvanveldt. Johnston called the double steal and it worked - to perfection as Schvanveldt slid under the tag and Thibault went home on the throw.

Jed Seamon followed with an RBI double in the bottom of the fourth and the game was tied.

It didn't take long for Lewiston to jump back on top. In their half of the fifth, the Cubs loaded the bases with a walk, base hit and an error. Rico Pichone singled to center and when the ball was misplayed the bases were cleared.

Again the Tigers rallied. The bases were loaded with a pair of walks and a single by Kyle Roberts. Up to the plate stepped Thibault who promptly ripped a long two-run single to the fence in right. Thibault suite second, then scored on an infield error as Jerome finally took the lead, 6-5.

Lewiston walked in a run to tie it and the bases were still loaded with two outs in the top of the sixth inning.

Roberts, who's only loss of the season came against the Cubs, then took over on the mound in relief of starter Josh Galley.

He promptly struck out the batter to end the rally.

"The last out against them, I struggled, but today I had my stuff," said Roberts, who will get the start today against the Senators. "It didn't matter who it was, I just tried as hard as I could."

Roberts also got the job done in the sixth. He reached on a fielder's choice, and then Doug Benson smashed one just a few feet from the top of the fence in right to score Roberts in the bottom half of the sixth.

Benson, who had struggled, came through at the right time.

"I got the nerves out and just relaxed. I knew I had to come through," said Benson, who struck out twice.

Thibault added another hit, this time an RBI single and the advantage was two, 8-6. Lewiston still had a chance to rally after Roberts grounded the first batter. But two worked outs and a fly out to left ended the game.

Now that the nerves are gone, Jerome will try to keep the streak going with what has served them all year - the bats.

"They are going to make mistakes, but our offense batted back and got us in the ball game," Johnston said.

Other games

Mountain Home 6, Teton 2

The Snow Devils surprising run ended Friday morning as they could muster just two runs off four hits and fell to the Mountain Home Royals 6-2.

Teton pitcher Nick Lowery gave up just five hits, but two costly errors scored three runs and a passed ball brought home another one.

The Snow Devils got their two runs courtesy of Royal errors.

Boise Gems 8, Moscow 0

The Gems broke up the scoreless game, putting four runs across in both the fifth and sixth innings to advance.

Boise pitcher Nick Schreiner was solid, giving up just three hits and striking out five to earn the complete game victory.

Pete Richter went 3-for-4, knocked in five RBIs and scored a run. The Gems totaled 12 hits for the game.

Boise Senators 5, Marsh Falls 4

In the final game of the night, the last error was the most costly for the Marsh Falls Eagles.

Cory Griffith legged out an infield single to lead off the bottom of the seventh inning for Boise, moving to second base on a sacrifice bunt by Dane McGrady.

Senators catcher Cooper Blum later hit a line-drive single into center field, where the Eagles player mishandled the bouncing ball, allowing Griffith to score, ending the game.

Bonds crushed a 2-1 pitch from Wells, taking a long moment to admire his blast as Pac Bell erupted and fireworks launched from the arcade atop the right field wall. The ball hit near the edge of the left-field bleachers, and the fan who grabbed it emerged with a bloody face.

Bonds stepped lightly on home plate and pointed skyward with both hands. He then waved to his wife and daughter-sitting next to the dugout, and he pointed at his cheering father.ubby Bonds, who had surgery last month to remove a cancerous tumor from his kidney.

record - until he surprised everyone, including himself.

Mays is next on the career homer chart with 660. The former Giants star was not at Pacific Bell Park to see Bonds because of a prior commitment.

The chilled crowd at Pac Bell, where Bonds hit his 500th career homer and both his 71st and 73rd last season, sparkled with camera flashes and raised its voices with each of Bonds' swings against the Pirates.

The cool seaside air was in optimal condition for homers, and the long ball was in the air. In the first inning, Aramis Ramirez hit a two-run homer for Pittsburgh a few minutes later, Rich Arzola hit a two-run homer to almost the same spot in the left field stands.

Manager Dusty Baker and Benito Santiago were the first of the Giants to hug Bonds. The rest of the team crowded around him on the way back to the dugout. Bonds emerged for two standing ovations, waving and pumping his fist.

Bonds needed just 710 at-bats to zoom from 500 homers to No. 600. Ruth had been the fastest to make that climb, and it took him 1,121 at-bats.

When Bonds took his position in left field after the inning, the fans rose for yet another standing ovation. Bonds doffed his cap as Pac Bell unveiled a design on the left field wall honoring the accomplishment.

Bonds, the four-time and defending NL Most Valuable Player, has remained among the NL leaders in several offensive categories this season while playing through a hamstring injury and receiving 127 walks from petrified pitchers and managers.

In late July, Bonds didn't start 10 straight games while trying to recover from a torn hamstring. Last week, he returned to action even though the injury still prevents him from playing at full speed.

Appropriately, Bonds reached the mark against Pittsburgh, where he played his first seven major league seasons and hit 176 homers. Bonds homered in each of the Giants' final two road games at PNC Park last weekend, but he hadn't homered since Tuesday night, when his 599th was a 432-foot shot against Cubs rookie Steve Smyth.

Company delays sale of Paul dairy

Posts lower net earnings

The Times-News

PAUL - Boulder, Colo.-based Horizon Organic Holding Corp. - an organic foods marketer and the outgoing parent of a Paul dairy - earned $647,000, or 6 cents per share, from continuing operations during the second quarter.

That's up from $112,000, or 1 cent per share, from continuing operations in the year-ago quarter. Horizon said sales rose 16 percent to $44.7 million, reflecting improvements in both the U.S. and U.K. operations. For the first six months of 2002, earnings from continuing operations rose to $1.5 million, or 14 cents per diluted share, from a breakeven year earlier. Sales of $86.9 million were up 14 percent.

"We are very pleased with the stronger sales growth in both the U.S. and the U.K., which have been driven by distribution gains and new products," said Chuck Marcy, president and chief executive. "In the U.S., Horizon Organic products now are available in approximately 54 percent of conventional grocery stores due in large part to new customers in the Southeast."

But the numbers above don't reflect the Paul dairy's results. The company clarified its farm operations in Idaho and Colorado as discontinued operations.

"The sale of the Idaho farm, which was expected to close during the second quarter, has been delayed while government agencies in Idaho finalize a required transfer of water rights and complete other regulatory reviews," Horizon said in a statement this week. "These regulatory issues are being resolved, and the sale of the farm to an experienced dairy farmer is expected to be finalized this fall."

That accounting treatment, which includes recording anticipated closing costs and estimated depreciation through the end of the third quarter, results in a loss from discontinued operations of $294,000, or 3 cents per share, and $2.8 million, or 26 cents per diluted share, in the second quarter and first half of 2002, respectively, Horizon said.

As a result, second-quarter net income was $353,000, or 3 cents per share, and the first half showed a loss of $1.3 million, or 12 cents per diluted share. That compares with 2001 net earnings of $442,000, or 4 cents per share, for the second quarter and $207,000, or 2 cents, for the first half.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

IDACORP chiefs affirm SEC filings

TWIN FALLS - IDACORP Chief Executive Officer Jan B. Packwood and Chief Financial Officer Darrel Anderson on Friday filed sworn statements with the Securities and Exchange Commission, affirming SEC filings made by the company in 2002.

"Our signatures are the final step in a very detailed and thorough review and audit process that has reaffirmed what I've always been confident of, our financial reports are accurate and complete," Packwood said.

The SEC in June ordered 947 public companies to submit sworn written statements from their CEOs and CFOs backing the accuracy of financial statements.

Copies of IDACORP's sworn statements and all its financial reports can be viewed at the company's Web site, www.idacorpinc.com.

Boise-based IDACORP is the parent of Idaho Power Co., the electric utility for much of Magic Valley.

Officials say no new code needed until 2009

BOISE - The state will not need a second area code until at least 2009, public utility officials said.

The administrator for the North American Numbering Plan told the Idaho Public Utilities Commission this week that the projected exhaust date on Idaho's "208" area code has been extended to 2009.

Earlier projections said Idaho would need a second area code by the third quarter of 2003.

In response to the earlier deadline, the commission had petitioned the Federal Communications Commission for authority to reclaim numbers that have been assigned to telecommunications companies in the state but were not in use.

"We're pleased with this decision," Idaho commissioners said in a news release. "It demonstrates that number pooling policy was the appropriate approach rather than having to split the state into two or three area codes and inconvenience at least half of Idahoans with long telephone numbers when that clearly was not necessary."

Weak July leads Best Buy Co. to slash outlook

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. - In another sign that consumers are becoming more skittish about spending, the nation's largest electronics retailer, Best Buy Co., this week slashed its near-term earnings outlook because of lower-than-expected sales in July.

Investors fled the company's stock, sending it down to its lowest level since December 2000, when 0.6 percent of retailers experienced a slow holiday season and resorted to discounts and financing incentives to move merchandise.

Best Buy has a Sam Goody store in Twin Falls.

U.S. productivity grows at slowest pace in a year

WASHINGTON - The productivity of U.S. companies grew at its slowest sluggish pace in a year during the second quarter as the nation's economic recovery downshifted into a lower gear.

The Labor Department reported Friday that productivity - the amount of output per hour of work - rose at an annual rate of 1.1 percent in the April-June quarter, a sharp slowdown from the sizzling 6.6 percent growth rate posted in the first three months of this year.

Economists believed that the slowdown in the second quarter was temporary for this key ingredient to the economy's long-term vitality. The outlook, they said, remains bright.

Former high-tech manager puts his background to work in tavern

The Associated Press

BOISE - When Steve Lipkin traded in the world of high technology for beer and satellite sports stations at his new Stubs Sports Pub in Boise, he didn't stop being a techie.

The former Extended Systems manager, could not help combining his two loves - sports and technology.

At the bar, he brought in a partner who developed a way to wirelessly transmit customer orders to the kitchen. The wait staff uses Casio Casiopeia handheld computers to input orders at customer tables, and those orders immediately pop up on a screen in the kitchen or the bar. Food orders are automatically routed to the kitchen, while drink orders only transmit to the bar.

"The use of pad and paper is just antiquated," Lipkin said.

Partner Ray Nelson, a network engineer at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, developed the application, which uses the same technology employed in building Web pages, making it more flexible.

"Most applications require a certain amount of intelligence on the part of the client, but in this case, the handheld PDA is used just like a terminal," Nelson said.

Instead of needing to build an entire software package for the menu-ordering application, Nelson wrote the program in HTML, allowing for immediate transmission of orders.

Any device able to access the Internet would be able to use the application, he said.

It's all turned out to be a winning combo, drawing in workers from its location at the Boise Research Center, and from Hewlett-Packard across the street. Tech workers appreciate the sportstechnology twist, and likely were responsible for naming the new pub Best Place to Watch a Game recently.

"We're in the Boise Research Center, so we wanted to be different," said Lipkin, who was national sales manager for Extended Systems before he left last summer. "This expedites orders, and we probably can use half the wait staff as normal. The people we have can concentrate on the customers more."

In addition, the partners have launched a Web page that includes a Web cam of the bar area and will allow customers to participate in fantasy football later this year as well as see what games will be aired each night.

Later this summer, customers will also be able to order to-go lunches online.

But this is a sports bar, and Lipkin easily flips to the subject of sports-watching, convincingly describing himself as an avid fan able for naming the new pub Best

Clear Channel's founder unloads stock

Knight Ridder News Service

SAN ANTONIO - B.J. "Red" McCombs is selling more than half of his stake in Clear Channel Communications to pay off more than $200 million he borrowed to buy the NFL's Minnesota Vikings.

San Antonio billionaire car dealer and financier McCombs bought the Vikings in 1998 from a group of Minnesota business owners for about $200 million and the assumption of $45 million in existing debt.

McCombs, a founder of radio, billboard and entertainment giant Clear Channel, is selling 11.3 million shares of the company in a series of transactions that's mostly complete, said Gary Woods, president of McCombs Enterprises.

In Twin Falls, Clear Channel has county radio station KEZJ-FM, news and talk station KLDX-AM and oldest station KLDX-FM. McCombs' finances, said the money primarily would be used to pay off most of the debt on the Vikings purchase. McCombs borrowed $100 million from the National Football League and another $100 million from J.P. Morgan Chase Bank.

McCombs' sale of the Clear Channel stock is not immediate. Instead, it's a complex hedge transaction known as a "variable prepaid forward" that allows McCombs to receive cash up front, but not actually deliver the shares to the buyer for several years.

That means McCombs still will be able to vote the shares in any decision put before Clear Channel shareholders, yet he can defer taxes until the shares go to the buyer.

The pact also protects McCombs from any continued depression in the stock price and allows him to make money if the stock price climbs in the next few years.

a downturn in advertising revenue, continuing economic uncertainty and the threat of stiffer regulation in the radio industry has sent Clear Channel stock steadily downward.

Those same shares were worth about $220 million at the middle of this week.

When the deal is complete, McCombs will retain ownership of 3 million Clear Channel shares, and McCombs family trusts will hold an additional 7 million shares, according to McCombs' disclosure to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

"I am extremely confident in the future of the company and chose this transaction to allow me to retain participation in the future appreciation of the stock," McCombs said in a statement.

Ameristar opens $360M expansion of casino

Knight Ridder News Service

ST. CHARLES, Mo. - Nearby businesses are counting on the Ameristar Casino's upgrade to boost their fortunes.

Elvis Presley's "Viva Las Vegas" was booming over the sound system at Ameristar Casino St. Charles this week as executives gave government officials and other guests an early peek at the new gaming floor.

Although Las Vegas and St. Charles will never be mistaken for one another in style or substance, the opening of Ameristar's $360 million expansion brought an extra measure of glamour to the region's riverboat gambling business.

More than 7,600 people were on the guest list for the grand opening party, a prelude to a weeklong celebration.

Groups support changes for gaming employment Potlatch Corp. strike could affect Lewiston operations

Knights Riddler News Service CARSON CITY, Nev. - Regulations that would bring a uniform state-wide work-card application process for gaming employees received support this week from civil libertarians and labor groups.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the Alliance for Workers' Rights had criticized an earlier draft of the Gaming Control Board regulations, which said arrest information could be used to deny an applicant a work card.

A new draft was the subject of a board hearing Thursday. The language was changed to say a conviction for specified types of crimes was justification to deny an applicant. References to arrest information were deleted.

Cary Beck, executive director of the ACLU of Nevada, said the change has made the proposed regulation generally acceptable to the organization.

"This latest version of these regulations ... I think have moved considerably in the direction that I've been recommending since the beginning of what we have expressed," he said. "We support in general what we see here."

Other speakers who had questioned the earlier version of the regulations also endorsed the changes.

Casinos near Nevada's north border are major employers of Major Valley workers.

The new Nevada regulations, which must be approved by the Nevada Gaming Commission before taking effect Jan. 1, will charge gaming employees $75 for a five-year work card.

The regulations, required because of legislation approved last year, create a uniform application process for gaming employees to move from one job to another or from one end of the state to the other without obtaining a new card.

Current law allows local jurisdictions the authority to develop their own work-card rules, and employees who move from one jurisdiction to another often must obtain new cards. Although some employers are pleased with the new version, Beck said one area of concern remains the confidentiality of the work card information and a blanket waiver of responsibility for its release. Beck said the regulation should be strengthened so only accidental, not intentional violations of the confidentiality requirement by government officials would be protected.

Peck said the regulations under development do not specifically address the wide-ranging authority gaming regulators have to investigate and deny work card applicants on any grounds they believe are reasonable.

Peck asked the Gaming Control Board to consider an evaluation of this part of the gaming regulatory law once work on the current regulations is finished.

Members of the Gaming Control Board, who will vote later in the year on whether to recommend the changes to the Gaming Commission, said the new rules will make it easier for workers to obtain the cards.

Member Bobby Siller said the intent of the law was to improve the process for workers. The current process, with different rules in different counties and cities, is inconvenient and burdensome, he said.

"We just had to come up with a way to make it better," Siller said. "We're off to a real good start."

Chairman Dennis Neillander agreed, saying "This regulation is going to make it easier for work permit card holders."

Information provided to the board indicates that there are 255,000 gaming work card holders. There are about 70,000 new applications processed each year under current regulations.

Of the 70,000 processed last year, gaming regulators initiated 10,000 investigations. Of that number, 275 were rejected by agency staff.

LEWISTON (AP) - A strike at a Potlatch-Corp. lumber plant in Warren, Ark., could spill over into the company's local operations. Some of the 252 striking employees plan to bring the picket line to Lewiston, which might disrupt plant operations. The 1,423 union members in Idaho would be forced to decide whether they want to cross that line.

The Spokane, Wash.-based company has had two consecutive losing years in 2000 and 2001. It has yet to turn a profit in 2002.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers has 1,006 members in the Lewiston pulp and paper operations, as well as 320 at the Clearwater Lumber Mill.

I would expect and would welcome the Warren picket line in Lewiston sometime this month," said William Street, union national representative.

The Warren strike comes as Potlatch, the Lewiston-Clarkston Valley's largest employer, is preparing for negotiations with the Paper Allied Industrial Chemical and Energy Workers International Union and the International Brotherhood of Electricians. Together, the two unions represent 1,123 employees, a majority of the hourly workers at the Lewiston site. Negotiations start Monday, and the contracts expire Aug. 31.

"One constant at all our plants is we're under tremendous pressure to be competitive, but what constitutes competitiveness at each site may not be the same thing," Potlatch spokesman Michael Sullivan said.

Crossings Potlatch is seeking in health insurance are a major issue in the strike at Warren, Street said.

The union will accept doubling of payments for doctors' visits, plus doubling deductibles and other concessions, at a loss to workers of 29 cents per hour.

The union also has offered to forego a pay raise in the first year of the contract. But Potlatch also wants employees to help pay for their health insurance premiums, a change that would cost an additional 25 cents per hour. The union said all the insurance concessions Potlatch seeks equal a 5 percent decrease in income for workers whose base rate is $12.50 per hour.

All major stock indexes end week higher for first time in months

NEW YORK (AP) - Investors, feeling more confident after the market's huge rally, refrained from making major moves Friday, allowing the three major stock indexes to end the week higher for the first time in three months.

The Dow industrials soared just over 700 points in their first four-day winning streak in nearly seven months. Technology advanced, but on Friday was pulled lower in large part by a downgrade in the storage sector.

There are a number of issues that are giving investors a little more confidence about putting their money to work in stocks," said Charles C. Crane, strategist for Victory SBSF Capital Management. "I think there is a realization that earnings, while maybe not on a rocket ship trajectory, are trending up."

The Dow closed up 33.43, or 0.4 percent, at 8,745.45. Combined with a triple-digit surge Tuesday through Thursday, the Dow hadn't had four consecutive gains since the four sessions that started Jan. 28 when it netted 90 points.

The broader market was higher for the week, but mixed on Friday. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 3.15, or 0.4 percent, to 908.64, following a three-day advance of 70.86. The Nasdaq composite index fell 10.40, or 0.8 percent, to 1,306.12, following a three-day gain of 110.51.

A simple and basic as it sounds the market has some positive momentum. It always swings on emotion," said Tony Cecin, director of institutional trading at US Bancorp Piper Jaffray in Minneapolis.

The market's recent strength comes as investors are increasingly confident that the Federal Reserve will cut interest rates either at next week's meeting or in September, to keep the economy from falling back into recession.

An economic report Friday gave the market another reason to expect a rate cut. The Labor Department reported that productivity grew at its slowest pace in a year, rising at an annual rate of 1.1 percent in the second quarter. Economist' expectations ranged from growth rate of 0.5 percent to 1.5 percent.

Analysts said investors are also feeling more in the mood to buy stocks as the Aug. 14 deadline approaches for the nation's largest companies to certify their financial results.

"You have an environment where stocks will have an opportunity to go up ... We are at a point where the number of negatives out there, and there are still many, are most neutralized by a growing number of positives," Crane said.

Global Crossing gets sold for $250M

NEW YORK (AP) - Global Crossing sold itself for $250 million Friday to the same Asian companies that tried to buy the fiber-optic network company for three times as much when it first filed for bankruptcy.

A bankruptcy judge approved the agreement with Hutchison Whampoa and Singapore Technologies. The deal is much smaller than an offer Global Crossing's banks and creditors received in May, and a sliver of the company's peak value of $50 billion during the heyday of dot-coms. But banks and creditors raised no objections to the latest deal.

A former financial adviser to Global Crossing who was called to testify at a hastily scheduled hearing Friday said only three credible bids had been received during a lengthy auction process.

Tavern

Continued from B6. For instance, who else but a sports nut would install 4 TVs, with eight different satellite receivers, in a small, deli-sized space? Who else would put TVs in the bathroom... making sure a rear-view mirror is placed above the men's urinal to capture the screen - so no big plays are missed? Who else would toss out sports trivia questions to customers and delight in providing the answer? And then there's the bar, custom built, embedded with a lifetime's worth of ticket stubs from sporting events - thus the pub's name. "I've saved ticket stubs for every sporting event I've ever been to," Lupkin said.

Casino

Continued from B6. Ameristar has just completed the biggest capital project in the history of Missouri's casino industry. It already is eyeing additional development in the state. Ameristar wants to build a hotel at its St. Charles operation and plans to make further investments in the Kansas City, Mo. area. Neilson, chairman and chief executive. "That's our one property that we think is underperforming," he says. The St. Charles casino is the only one of Ameristar's six operations without a hotel. The company struck a deal with Station Casinos Inc. in October 2001 to buy Station's operations in St. Charles and Kansas City for $475 million. The deal closed two months later, after the Missouri Gaming Commission approved the license transfers. When Ameristar bought the properties, it pledged to revive the expansion project that Station had started but abandoned in St. Charles. Neilson - also a developer of prominent Twin Falls properties - said he was pleased that the state and its contractors completed the St. Charles project on schedule, despite a doubling in the size of the original plan. "The new casino has more than 3,000 slot and video-poker machines and more than 90 gaming tables. The expanded operation will have a $50 million payroll and will spend more than $30 million a year on goods and services," said Gordon Kanofsky, Ameristar's executive vice president. "This property, through its size and scope, sets new standards of excellence for us," he said. The quality of the Ameristar project is an outgrowth of the state's "go slow" approach to casino licensing and development, said Kevin Mullaly, executive director of the Missouri Gaming Commission. "The gaming commission has been very prudent, rather than just adding capacity in one big shot," he said. "The new Ameristar can hold 12,000 people - 9,000 in the casino and 3,000 in the restaurants, the music club and other attractions outside." Ameristar expects big crowds today and Sunday, Raymond said. "There's a reason we opened up on a Tuesday," he said. "It kind of gives us a running start on the weekend."

Woman overcomes shyness by getting others to open up

DEAR ABBY: When I was young, I was extremely shy. I finally got over it, and here's how: I came to the realization that shy people have one thing in common—they're all overly sensitive about how others perceive them. "Am I dressed right? Does my hair look OK?" They obsess about themselves.

Then one day someone asked me about a necklace I was wearing—and that one question distracted me so I didn't think about myself. After that, I made an effort to find something of interest to ask other people about, and it would usually open up a conversation.

Conquering my shyness didn't happen overnight, but I was eventually able to go into sales and even make "social calls." I've come a long way from the shy girl I was as a child.

If my experience helps even one shy person to be less self-conscious, the time it took to write this letter will have been worth it. Thanks, Abby.

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: My husband's 19-year-old daughter is being married in May of 2003. She has asked us to pay half of the cost of the wedding.

The problem is that she has a 15-month-old baby whom we've never met; she lives with her boyfriend, whom we've also never met; she dislikes me, and for that reason refuses to visit us. (She lives in Nebraska and we live in New Mexico.)

This girl has informed my husband that they will be 150 people at the reception dinner after the wedding, and 400 more coming to the reception later—out of whom only my husband, myself and my mother-in-law will be invited from our side of the family.

In other words, we're being invited to this wedding as guests, but are expected to foot half the bill. What do you make of this, Abby?

—MIFED STEPMOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MIFED: I don't know enough about the history of your stepdaughter's breach with you and her father to make a judgment. However, the guest list seems decidedly one-sided to me, and you should pay only what you feel you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: "Very Sad Ann" wrote about her brother's two children and their stepfather's abuse of them. Your advice was good, but did not go far enough.

I am a police officer in Maine, and I am familiar with how much time it takes for social services to investigate reported child abuse. Sometimes social service agencies will not even open a case until four separate referrals have been made.

The aunt needs to talk to her brother about seeking an "order of protection" from the local district court. He can then gain temporary custody while the allegations are thoroughly investigated. Imagine how this aunt and her brother would feel if they sent these children back to that household and one ends up seriously hurt—or worse.

Abby, please urge them to get a protection order and remove those kids from that environment immediately. It could save their lives. Sign me.

—COP FOR THE KIDS

DEAR COP: You have done that for me, and for that I thank you.

A. He was. His mother was imprisoned at Fort Christiansvaern, St. Croix, Virgin Islands, for disobeying her husband. When freed, she refused to go back to the man. She later gave birth to Hamilton on the island of Nevis.

Do you know the whorls of Great Turtle Island? Ouch! It's what the tropics called all of North America.

Gary Kasparov to play computer chess giant in first public rematch

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP)— Former world chess champion Garry Kasparov announced this week that he will play his first public match against a computer since his stunning loss to IBM's Deep Blue machine five years ago.

The match will take place in October in Jerusalem—at about the same time Vladimir Kramnik, the man who took Kasparov's title from him in 2000, will be playing against a different computer in Bahrain.

Each man will be playing for a $1 million prize. The dueling matches from two of the top players in the world are marked by some of the politics that have surrounded the game for the past decade.

Kramnik will be playing the Deep Fritz computer, which has defeated the Israeli program Deep Junior that Kasparov will be playing. "Deep" is used to refer to programs that run on multiprocessors.

World Junior recently won the World Computer Championship in the Netherlands.

"American grandmaster Larry Christiansen called Kramnik and Kasparov 'solid favorites' against the computers.

"The top guys still have the edge if they're smart about it," he said.

'All in the Family' producer Lear plans patriotic-traveling show

By Christopher Grant
Associated Press writer

SHAFTSBURY, Vt. — Norman Lear, among the most influential television producers of all time, says his best production is yet to come. It won't be a TV show, though. It's a gift from the heart. "I am building a show," said Lear. "It's a revival, a red, white and blue revival—that will get people to their feet, witnessing to the fact that they realize they matter as Americans."

The words, images and ideas tumble out of Lear with an energy and enthusiasm that appear to give lie to the fact he turned 80 on July 27. The man who gave America "All in the Family" now wants to share with Americans their Declaration of Independence. He and a partner bought a rare copy of the 1776 document two years ago for $8.14 million. The broadside forms the centerpiece of a traveling tribute.

"This is the birth certificate of the United States," said Lear, who says he cried when he first saw the copy he eventually bought.

His career as a producer, director, comedy writer and screenwriter brought him four Emmys, a Peabody, induction into the Television Academy Hall of Fame—and the National Medal of Arts, given in 1999 by then President Clinton, who said Lear "has held up a mirror to American society and changed the way we look at it."

Lear's legacy also includes "Sanford and Son," "Maude," "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" and "The Jeffersons," which provided unvarnished views of people and issues not previously seen on network television. He created Archie Bunker, an upper-middle-class bigot, and raised such issues as abortion, homosexuality and anti-Semitism.

However, a thread of nostalgia ran through "All in the Family" as evidenced by the opening theme, "Those Were The Days," a thread that also has been woven through Lear's life and connects him with the future.

"I am of that generation that had a more appreciation for America and American values than I see today," he said.

Today finds people of all political stripes condemning corporate misdeeds, but Lear has been a sounding warning about such a possibility for more than 20 years, through two organizations he founded: Business Enterprise Trust and People for the American Way.

"The name of the game over a great many years has become 'Give me a profit. I must have a profit' this quarter larger than the last' which always comes at the expense of other values. There are no villains. Nobody invented this. This is something that grew up in the free enterprise system."

The answers: GOP book briefs candidates on fielding questions

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - Memo to Republican candidates for the House: Never let Democrats "get away with" using words such as privatization of stock market when they criticize GOP plans for Social Security.

Avoid supporting any specific proposal for personal retirement accounts - the concept backed by President Bush to let workers invest part of their payroll taxes on their own.

"And never use the word 'privatize' when referring to Medicare modernization or reforms."

These and other morsels of advice are in a 280-page campaign primer distributed in recent weeks to House GOP candidates by the party's congressional campaign committee. The material was obtained by The Associated Press.

The volume covers defense, the environment, taxes, Medicare and other campaign issues. Each chapter includes a section entitled "Answering liberal critics," with suggested answers to potentially troubling questions.

If environmental groups endorse a Democratic rival, for example, Republicans are urged to say that the "Sierra Club has given to all 96 percent of their major political party contributions to Democrats."

If challenged on school vouchers, the suggested response is, "I'm not going to engage in class warfare. The real issue here is opportunity."

If asked about the deficits in the Bush administration's budget, Republicans are told, "Don't be afraid to hit back hard. The fact is that circumstances such as the attacks of Sept. 11 have forced the Congress and the president to increase spending to protect the nation. There is hardly anyone who will disagree with this fact.

GOP Q&A Practice book for the party line

Would you support rolling back tax cuts? Rolling back tax cuts would be the worst action the federal government could possibly take. Because tax cuts promote economic growth, lawmakers should look to ways in which they can return more of taxpayers' income to them. Our economy has undeniably suffered from recent events. However, it's due to the resolve of the president and Congress to implement strong tax and fiscal policy that our economy remains surprisingly resilient.

Republicans bring up reform legislation this year? Why not? A prologue for passing Social Security reform legislation is the ability to have an intellectually honest debate. Democrats cannot have an honest debate because they see Social Security as a political issue that they can exploit in the midterm elections. Isn't it true that more guns in public means more crime committed with guns? The crime rate has been on a steady decline since the early 1990s. This is during a time when the number of firearms in the country has increased. These numbers suggest there doesn't seem to be a correlation between firearms in society and the crime rate.

The GOP campaign committee distributed the material in July to its candidates. "We're doing everything we can to prepare Republican candidates to deal with the onslaught of Democrat lies, distortion and deception that will be coming in September and October," said Steve Schmidt, a committee spokesman. Howard Wolfson, executive director of the Democratic campaign committee, responded, "All the rhetoric in the world is not going to make up the substantive shortcomings in the Republican arguments, and our candidates are going to be very aggressive in preventing the Republicans from obscuring or muddying up the issues."

Ex-nuclear scientist still lacks job

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) - Former government researcher Wen Ho Lee says he hasn't found a job since he was fired and prosecuted for making a copy of sensitive nuclear weapons data. "I have tried to get a job in both the university and industry setting, but so far I have not been able to locate a job," Lee said in an interview in the July issue of the American Physical Society News. "I am currently doing my own research on semiconductor design. I hope that someday I can make a contribution to the electronics industry." Lee, responding to written questions posted on an online publication through an intermediary, said foreign-born scientists face difficulties getting jobs requiring security clearance. "I feel that racial profiling may be a very complicated and long-standing problem," he said. "It will take a long time even to make tiny progress." The Lee investigation caused nearly two years of controversy over the alleged loss of nuclear secrets to China and lab security at the Energy Department's nuclear weapons laboratories. Lee, who has been a U.S. citizen since 1974 and spent 20 years doing top-secret work at Los Alamos National Laboratory, was held in solitary confinement for nine months, though never charged with spying.

FBI sends psychological profiler to interview Guantanamo detainees

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. intelligence officials say that sending FBI profilers to interview suspected al-Qaida captives by American soldiers could help them better understand and stop the group's new generation of young terrorists.

The FBI behavioral scientists plan to create psychological profiles of the suspected terrorists imprisoned at the U.S. Naval Base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The results will be analyzed at FBI headquarters and shared with the CIA and the National Security Agency, said an official speaking on condition of anonymity.

"We are trying to get more cultural knowledge and get into the minds of radical fundamentalists," the official said. The behavioral scientists have been asking questions designed to uncover the detainees' personal histories, why they joined forces with the terrorist group blamed for the Sept. 11 attacks and how they view the United States.

The profiles will be used to develop ways to disrupt recruitment and hunt terrorists within the United States. "This is an important piece of our plan to look beyond today and tomorrow and think about preventing attacks even further down the line," the official said.

The United States is holding 564 people at the base in Guantanamo Bay, most of whom captured in Afghanistan. The results of the profiling, which is still under way, have not been used in any law enforcement effort yet.

This is not the first time the United States has attempted to profile prisoners of war. Government contractors conducted similar interviews with Viet Cong prisoners during the Vietnam War and enemy soldiers in the Korean War.

That data was used for propaganda pamphlets dropped over enemy lines aimed at undermining support, researchers said.

A law enforcement official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the profiling effort also was aimed at fostering a better understanding of what the "Sunni side of radical fundamentalism is about."

The two major branches of Islam are Sunni and Shia. Al-Qaida is led by Sunni Muslims. Al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden is credited with giving rise to anti-U.S. extremism among Sunnis in the early-1990s, gaining allegiance from groups in Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

While the number of formal al-Qaida members has remained fairly constant at about 200 since 1990, the fruits of that recruitment have led to a large increase in the number of young men who are willing to carry out directives from the group.

The number of young Islamic extremists is growing because of a backlash against globalization and Western culture, some experts said.

"We are seeing the rejection of the Western world - an attempt to find an identity in a world that has been denied to them," said Emilio Viano, a terrorism expert and professor at American University. "Al-Qaida is offering religion, nationalism and a way to strike back against feeling powerless against the United States."

Guns, gangs blamed for murder surge

WASHINGTON (AP) - The homicide rate in Washington surged 36 percent this year, but local officials insist it doesn't bode a return to the days when the city was known as the nation's "murder capital."

Police say a proliferation of drugs, gangs and prostitution are to blame and officers are being redeployed to better target crime areas and the places that have seen the greatest jumps in violence.

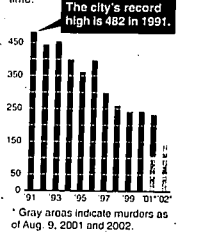

So far this year, 148 homicides have been reported, compared with 109 at this time last year. Aggravated assaults also are up, but only slightly.

At town hall meetings and campaign appearances, Mayor Anthony A. Williams and other city officials urge residents to patrol their neighborhoods and work with police. "When this city comes together and we stand together, we can turn things around," he said.

After years of declines, many major cities are seeing increases in homicides. Boston had a 67 percent jump last year, while smaller

Los Angeles are up 27 percent this year and Oakland, Calif., is on pace for its most murders in seven years.

Washington had a 3.7 percent decrease last year.

Most of Washington's homicide victims are young black and Latino males, and according to police, 30 percent of the deaths are either drug- or gang-related.

"We're now trying to understand the culture of the gangs here in the city," said Carolyn Graham, the deputy mayor responsible for most of the city's human services programs.

In addition to $6 million spent this summer on teen violence and pregnancy prevention programs, the city is restructuring the juvenile justice system to provide additional services for younger offenders to prevent them from becoming involved in subsequent criminal activities.

Washington officials note the sharp increase in homicides comes a year after the city's murder rate reached a 30-year low of 233. And the city's overall crime rate is down 3 percent this year.

Teacher gets probation for burning paper

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A teacher who set a student's newspaper on fire to teach her a lesson about reading in class was convicted of two misdemeanors and barred from returning to the classroom anytime soon.

Diune Mantelius, 31, was sentenced to two years probation after Municipal Court Judge Wendy Pew found her guilty Thursday of possessing an instrument of a crime and recklessly endangering another person.

As part of the sentence, Pew ordered Mantelius to have no contact with children in a school setting during the two-year period, which would keep her from returning to teaching. Because of that, her lawyer said she would appeal the conviction and ask for a trial by jury. She automatically gets a jury trial under state law.

Mantelius, a history teacher at the Philadelphia High School for Girls, had told students not to read materials other than classwork in her room.

She allegedly became angry May 9 that a student was reading a newspaper in class. Investigators said she confiscated the paper, tossed it in a metal trash can and set it alight, then quickly dumped water in the basket to extinguish the flames.

No one was injured, but prosecutors said setting a fire in a classroom was reckless.

Mantelius' attorney, Brian McMonagle, said his client's actions did not constitute a crime.

"It is certainly something that she would never do again in hindsight, but it wasn't criminal," he said. "She is just upset that she can't get back in a classroom. We don't feel we could accept a result that wouldn't allow her to do that."

Bruce Springsteen begins tour in home state of New Jersey

By David Bauder
Associated Press Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sometimes a wounded world needs a house party.

At an arena within sight of New York City's changed skyline, Bruce Springsteen and his E Street Band performed a concert that resisted easy answers, honored the dead of Sept. 11 and ultimately provided a tonic for the living.

Half of the 22-song set came from Springsteen's new album, "The Rising," chiefly inspired by last year's terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

Springsteen never mentioned the day. He didn't have to. Not only does its aftermath dominate his new music, world events lent new resonance to the well-chosen older songs sprinkled throughout the show.

Wednesday night's concert, at the Continental Airlines Arena in Springsteen's home state of New Jersey, opened a 46-city concert tour of North America and Europe.

Standing in near darkness bathed only from a soft light from behind, Springsteen began the night singing "The Rising" with full stage lights coming on when he reached the gospel-like chorus.

Its theme of resurrection was echoed near the show's end, when he sang of heroes ascending the stairs of the World Trade Center on "Into the Fire." During his encore, the audience joined in the chorus of "rise up" on "My City of Ruins."

Springsteen has always stayed away from easy or glib responses to the world, and his song choices Wednesday illustrated the push and pull in his music. A thunderous "Born in the USA," about a Vietnam veteran left behind in the Reagan era, preceded the more hopeful concert tender, "Land of Hope and Dreams," about an idyllic America where "faith will be rewarded."

Bruce Springsteen, right, Clarence Clemons, center, and Nils Lofgren perform during the opening night concert at the Continental Airlines Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., Wednesday.

"Into the Fire," about hero cops and firefighters, immediately followed the night's most overtly political song, "American Skin (41 Shots)."

A song inspired by the shooting of an unarmed West-African immigrant by four New York City police officers, might seem out of place in an era of hero worship, until Springsteen peated a line that has taken on new meaning: "you get killed just for being your American skin."

It wasn't the only time lyrics from his past took on a different shade, like when he sang "it ain't no sin to be glad you're alive" in "Promised Land."

It's an old song, but it's also as close as you can get to a theme for "The Rising." Springsteen wants his audience to relish life, and fans seemed to follow his lead when the house lights revealed a dancing, waving audience on old favorites, "Born to Run" and "Glory Days."

"Are you ready for a house party?" he asked before singing the new song, "Mary's Place."

Most in his hometown crowd — Springsteen owns a farm in nearby Monmouth County — appreciated old touchstones, roaring when Clarence Clemons stepped forward for his first saxophone solo. They also seemed familiar with the new, singing along to the chorus of "Waitin' on a Sunny Day."

"I'm impressed," Springsteen responded. "First time out."

While no longer the lithe athlete who leaped from speaker columns — back when there were speaker columns — Springsteen still puts on a high-energy show. Sweat soaked his shirt before he even finished the first song. At two hours, 25 minutes, his set was generous but no longer the marathon of old.

The E Street Band, 10 members strong, can still make a welcome roar, but sometimes the stage seemed crowded. The song "You're Missing" worked best with just Springsteen and new violinist Soozie Tyrell, and lost momentum when the band kicked in.

Tyrell was, in fact, the night's featured instrumentalist, adding a new dimension to the band. Her work was particularly impressive on a plaintive, "Empty Sky."

There was an occasional opening-night glitch, like when Springsteen and his backup singers were on different pages during "The Rising," but nothing close to nervousness for these old pros.

It was music that uplifted, challenged, rocked. His fans couldn't have asked for much more.

Actor says he has Alzheimer's symptoms

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Charlton Heston revealed Friday that doctors have told him he has symptoms consistent with Alzheimer's disease.

"I'm neither giving up nor giving in," the 77-year-old actor said in a taped statement played at a news conference at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Heston recorded the message Wednesday.

"My dear friends, colleagues and fans, my physicians have recently told me I may have a neurological disorder whose symptoms are consistent with Alzheimer's disease," he said. "I wanted to prepare a few words for you now because when the time comes I may not be able to."

Heston, who won a best-actor Oscar for 1959's "Ben-Hur," has appeared in dozens of films over six decades, including "The Ten Commandments," "El Cid" and "Planet of the Apes."

"I worked my whole life on the stage and screen before you," he said. "I found purpose and meaning in your response. For an actor, there is no greater loss than the loss of his audience. I can part the Red Sea, but I can't part with you."

Heston's most prominent role since 1998 has been as president of the National Rifle Association.

His recorded statement Friday was reminiscent of Ronald Reagan's "sunset of my life" letter, in which he revealed he had been diagnosed with Alzheimer's.

Charlton Heston announces that doctors have told him he has symptoms similar to Alzheimer's disease in this video Friday.

"I applaud his going public with the information," Nancy Reagan said in a written statement Friday. "Our family knows all too well the cruelty of this disease and we pray that God will give the Heston family, especially his wife Lydia, the strength to face each day that lies ahead."

Heston was slow and deliberate as he spoke before a blue drape background.

"For now, I'm not changing anything," he said. "I'll insist on work when I can. The doctors will insist on rest when I must."

"If you see a little less spring in my step, if your name fails to leap to my lips, you'll know why. And if I tell a funny story for the second time, please laugh anyway."

Heston said he's "still the fighter that Dr. King and JFK and Ronald Reagan knew."

As well known for his political activism as his acting, he also made some predictions for the country.

"I'm confident about the future of America. I believe in you. I know that the future of our country, our culture and our children is in good hands," Heston said. "I know you will continue to meet adversity with strength and resilience as our ancestors did and come through with flying colors — the ones on Old Glory."

City, federal officials reach parking deal

NEW YORK (AP) — City officials agreed not to begin towing consular vehicles after striking a tentative deal Friday to end a dispute over more than $20 million in unpaid parking tickets.

"We have an agreement in principle" with the State Department, said Mayor Michael Bloomberg, adding that details still need to be worked out.

The tentative deal resulted from a telephone call from Secretary of State Colin Powell to Bloomberg, just hours before tow trucks were ready to roll Friday morning, Bloomberg spokesman Ed Sklyer said.

The State Department agreed to dramatically reduce the number of consular license plates it issues and promised to help the city collect some of the fines it is owed, Bloomberg said.

The agreement broke the latest impasse in a decades-old dispute over diplomatic abuses of city parking ordinances. While diplomats are expected to obey the laws of host countries, international treaties guarantee them immunity from prosecution.

The city says it is owed $21.3 million in unpaid tickets issued to vehicles with diplomatic or consular plates between 1997 and 2000. Egypt tops the list of offending countries, racking up $1.9 million in parking fines on its cars since 1997, the city says.

Earlier, the State Department had hinted at legal action if the city proceeded with plans to punish scofflaws by towing cars with consular license plates.

NYC mayor seeks smoking ban in bars, eateries

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Michael Bloomberg plans to seek a ban on smoking in all New York City bars and restaurants, a Bloomberg administration official said Friday.

The administration is expected to ask the City Council next week to outlaw smoking in the roughly 13,000 establishments that are not covered by the current anti-smoking law, which permits smoking in bars and in restaurants with fewer than 35 seats.

The mayor has been lobbying council members to approve the expected proposal. He is expected to seek more support by focusing on how bar and restaurants workers are harmed by second-hand smoke.

"If you are a bartender or a waiter or waitress and work in an establishment where there is smoking, in an eight-hour day it's the equivalent of you smoking half a pack of cigarettes yourself," Bloomberg told a morning news conference.

Don't miss chance to reconnect

My mother turned 90 last week. Family and friends came to Tulsa from near and far to celebrate. Birthdays had been in the works for months. The fellowship hall of Grace Lutheran Church was reserved, a brunch and supper were mapped out and games were arranged to keep it fun for adults and kids.

I didn't know what to expect as the day approached. Mom's health has been up and down, and who knew how many guests would attend, especially with temperatures hovering near 100. Yet they came. Not an overwhelming number, perhaps 80; but each said it was important to be there to honor Rhoda Schaefer.

I'm starting to write this late Sunday night, hours after we returned to Wichita and before short-term memory loss knocks out a synopsis or two. I don't want to forget the details. They're like the icing on the cake that made the day so sweet.

TOM SCHAEFER

Can you recall a day that has singular meaning to you? Or can you see only the broad outline and not the hues and shadings of it? That's what happens to most of our memorable events. Weeks, months, years later we struggle to recall the whole of it - able to call to mind only bits and pieces. Photos help, but they miss so many significant details.

The details. Those are what I want to remember from last weekend:

- The early arrival of Mom's nephews and nieces, whom I hadn't seen in years.

- My two sisters, Janet and Elaine, tearing around the hall making sure everyone was taken care of.

- Eight grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren gathering around Mom for an impromptu group photo. Even the youngest cooperated, making room for all to be in the frame.

- Mom choking up as she tried to tell the assembled family how happy and thankful she is for each of us. The momentary silence broken as her 5-year-old great-granddaughter Elizabeth ran to the front and hugged her tightly. She wouldn't let go.

- Mom sitting with her best friend Eleanor, who came from St. Louis, two of the 10 "chums," girlfriends since childhood, chatting like they used to for hours on end.

- The entire clan sitting in the first rows of church on Sunday, singing, praying and listening to the always-reassuring gospel.

- The laughter around the table Sunday noon, as some of the left-over party-size sandwiches were retold for the umpteenth time.

And then the goodbyes.

When would we all be together again? The distances are great. Nieces and nephews and cousins have children of their own. The family tree branches out and away in new directions. Will we ever be together again?

Perhaps that's why I was so conscious of and grateful for the embraces, the arm around a shoulder, the quick hug of a child. I needed to - wanted to - hold on to the moment, to remind myself of those who are part of my life, who are my family.

No, I can't claim to have had a hand in shaping each of their lives. Only one person has that honor in our family.

In the ninth decade of her life, Mom reminds me of how important these times together are. They should never be taken for granted - or missed - when an opportunity to reconnect arises.

I'll try to remember as much of last weekend as I can. It's too important to let it slip into the mist of memories.

So, one more time: Happy birthday, Mom. I love you.

Religious women get together

Carmen Babb, center, laughs with members of the planning committee for the 2002 Magic Valley Women's Conference at Valley Christian Church. The conference will be held on August 24th from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the church.

Upcoming conference will focus on Christian living

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Calling all women interested in learning how to live by Christian principles and magnify Jesus in daily life: An upcoming women's conference is seeking women like these.

The conference came about after its organizer, Carmen Babb, presented the idea to the pastors of seven churches and they turned it over to their women's ministries. All were interested, and each church took on a specific responsibility.

Participating churches are Valley Christian Church, Reformed Church, Magic Valley Bible Church, Jerome Evangelical Free Christian Church, Rupert First Baptist Church, Piler First Baptist Church and Burley First Christian Church. Women from these churches will teach classes - on Christian marriage, spiritual renewal, Christian joy, spiritual fruit, depression, woman's health issues and Christian finances.

Women's Conference

Where: Valley Christian Church
When: 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 24
Admission, childcare, continental breakfast, lunch: free
More information: 733-3222 or 735-1978

Babb said the marriage class will explore the biblical explanation and rules for marriage. For example, she said, with a prenuptial agreement in a secular marriage, the couple is planning for failure. Before a Christian marriage, they are looking at spending eternity together.

The renewal class will focus on daily devotions and the importance of being in the Word. The joy class will focus on living in a society where not everybody is Christian. Spiritual fruit will focus on witnessing the faith to other people. The depression class will focus on Scriptures about depression. The health class will focus on preventative health maintenance, with the concept that the Bible considers the body the temple of the Holy Spirit. Christian finances will focus on financial principles.

The topics will be taught in three sessions of classes, four classes at a time, so women can attend at least three different classes. There will be live background music from church people during the salad-bar luncheon. Participants are encouraged to bring their Bibles.

"We encourage all ages - it doesn't have to be just older married women," Babb said. "Young women that are just starting out are very welcome to come."

Angry Boston Catholics say cardinal should go

By Susan Hogan/Albachi
The Dallas Morning News

BOSTON - Outside the cathedral, protesters lined the sidewalk, carrying signs bearing their feelings. "Cardinal Law must go!" One of them, a Baby Boomer, gripped a bullhorn. He shouted messages that disturbed the other demonstrators as much as those rushing to Cardinal Bernard Law's Sunday Mass. "Priests will screw your children!" "Your children are safer outside with us!"

Mike Gages surveyed the spectacle from the cathedral steps. He looked inside the church, then back to the demonstrators as if he'd come to a crossroads.

"My emotions are all across the board," said the 49-year-old Catholic from Norfolk, Mass. "I want the cardinal to clean up the mess, but I also want a fresh start."

This is Boston's dark night of the soul. What started as a story of corrupt priests became an epic about the cardinal who protected them, and the clericalism that pervades the Catholic hierarchy.

Cardinal Law, once arguably the most revered prelate in the country, arrived in Boston in 1984. A Harvard graduate staunchly loyal to the pope, he was soon elevated to the rank of cardinal. When the clergy sex scandals broke in Boston this year, the cardinal assured Catholics that he'd handled them. But documents showed he had a long track record of shielding predator priests. In some cases, he wrote letters lauding their ministry.

Around the city these days, he has a new moniker: Cardinal Above the Law.

Boston's storm erupted in January and led to the removal of nearly 300 U.S. priests and four bishops. Pope John Paul II summoned U.S. cardinals to Rome in April. U.S. bishops adopted a clergy sexual abuse policy in Dallas in June. But nowhere has the level of abuse and coverups been more intense than in the Boston area, where more than half of the residents are Catholic.

According to Boston newspapers:

- Nineteen present and former

Cardinal Bernard Law, right, answers a question from attorney Mitchell Garabedian, in Boston's Suffolk Superior Court on Aug. 2, regarding his knowledge and handling of the Father John Geoghan child sex abuse case and the alleged $30 million settlement from the Boston Archdiocese to be given to victims.

priests have been identified as pedophiles.

- The archdiocese turned over to prosecutors the names of nearly 100 priests accused of abuse over the past 40 years.

- The archdiocese settled claims against 70 priests over the past decade.

- Predator priests were transferred from parish to parish and given favorable recommendations from the archdiocese, despite numerous abuse complaints.

Bette McNiff, a 70-year-old church volunteer in Charlestown, Mass., has publicly called for the cardinal's resignation. "The church has always been my life," she said. "You believe and hope and pray, but you also have to do more."

She supports her priest, but will not give a nickel to the cardinal. "I'm sending a message," she said.

Boston parish finds voice amid crisis

By Susan Hogan/Albachi
The Dallas Morning News

BOSTON - Early this year, as the city was engulfed by clergy sex scandals, one priest did something radical. Father Bob Bowers stopped Mass to listen.

One by one, worshippers at St. Catherine of Siena Parish stood and unloaded their feelings. Shock. Disbelief. Anger. Outrage. Betrayal. The silence, once broken, empowered them. As the weeks passed, they came together for listening sessions, as did many other parishes.

Bowers, too, didn't hide his disgust for the scandals and cover-ups. "I was honest. I told the truth.

And I let them vent," the 42-year-old priest said. "People in other parishes are in knots because they aren't allowed to talk."

St. Catherine's is the smallest of three parishes in Charlestown, Mass., the neighborhood that's home to the Bunker Hill Monument. It's a small neighborhood of million-dollar townhouses and poverty housing. The city's largest housing project is next to St. Catherine's.

"Around our church, there are lots of drug and heroin problems," Bowers said.

Once a hub for Irish Catholics, the area is now diversified: Latinos. Somalis. Asians. Catholics. Muslims. Buddhists.

Lifelong residents are known as "townies." The newcomers are "toonies."

St. Catherine's, a 1,000-member parish, benefits from Cardinal Bernard Law's annual appeal for charities. Last year, the parish received $70,000. But this year, $20,000 was slashed because donations to the appeal are down.

For the first time, retiree Bob Cooper didn't give. "The scandals haven't changed my faith in God," he said. "Just my faith in the hierarchy. Investing in the cardinal would be like investing in the stock market now."

Parishioners take fresh look at Lord's Prayer

By Jim Rensen

The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA - "Pray then in this way," Jesus is said to have instructed his disciples. The succinct address that followed is considered the very foundation of Christian prayer life - the Lord's Prayer, the Pater Noster, "the Prayer of Prayers." Countless generations have memorized it and used it in times of need. Worshipers across the church spectrum invoke it weekly, often standing together as they recite or even sing the words.

But how many Christians really "know the Lord's Prayer? Have they grasped its meaning, unpacked its petitions, reflected on its rigorous piety?"

The Rev. Anita Schell-Lambert, associate pastor at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, figured parishioners might benefit from a fresh paraphrasing. So she organized an adult class, "Lord, Teach Us to Pray."

Week one, the class tackled the opening salutation: "Our father in heaven, hallowed be your name." The study guide said those lines underscore the Almighty's unalterable distance from fallen humanity: "Scripture warns that if the distance between God and ourselves should be completely overcome, we should perish..." When we pray in the Lord's Prayer, "Hallowed be your name," we are asking that this distance between God and ourselves be maintained.

The author, a retired Presbyterian pastor, the Rev. John C. Purdy, was conveying his Reformed Protestant tradition's view of sinner and savior. But it didn't go down well at St. Paul's. Student John Zimmerman complained that "distance is not where people are today. God is very close and very near and around us."

Schell-Lambert added her dissent as well - "I hate the word 'distance' - but noted: 'This conversation would not be happening in Bible study in the United States 50 years ago. Eastern religions have affected our way of understanding God and God with us. There is this notion in Christianity, Judaism and Islam, this belief that God is God and we are people and separate... I'm not saying we have to agree with it, but we are really wrestling with it. And that's good.'"

She said the transcendence-immunance paradox is "that God is both near and far at the same time." Hallowed can be seen as "set apart," she said, much as the Bible teaches that both Israel and the Sabbath are set apart as distinct. And the study guide "suggests that separation, human ethical conduct, and the rituals that go with ethical conduct are part and parcel of 'hallowed be your name.'"

Many publications, such as Purdy's guidebook for the Kerygma Bible-study series, exist to help today's Christians understand the Lord's Prayer. The Rev. Philip Ryken, who wrote "When You Pray: Making the Lord's Prayer Your Own," said the prayer's structure is significant: "It begins with God and His glory, the mystery of His nature, His holiness, and only later gets around to our needs. That's a healthy corrective to the way we are usually tempted to pray, where the focus is on us and what we need and want."

It's also instructive, he said, that the petitions are phrased in the plural: "It's not just daily bread for us but for the community of God's people. It's a corporate confession of sin, 'forgive us our debt as we forgive our debtors.' So it lends itself to corporate prayer."

RELIGION LETTER

Don't be casual with Bible references

Mr. Hafner, your self-serving use of the Bible is getting monotonous. You say the "truth has set you free," but your cavalier use of God's word tells you don't even know what the real truth is. I don't question your honesty, but surely you remember Jesus' statement, "I am the way, the truth, and the life..." (John 14:6).

Many well-educated people consider the Bible sheer nonsense. There are multitudes of philosophies, false religions and ethical by-laws out there, but 1 Corinthians 3:19 says: "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God."

You mentioned that when one quotes something, to tell who said it. I suggest you do the same when you quote the Bible; and give him the respect he deserves. I will continue to pray for your salvation. KRISTEN KECK Jerome

Davey and Goliath will have new TV episodes

MINNEAPOLIS - Davey and Goliath, the stop-action animated stars of Sunday morning TV in the 1960s who recently reappeared in a soda commercial, are getting their TV show again.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America plans to produce 26 new episodes of the Davey and Goliath show next year. The denomination's predecessor, the United Lutheran Church in America, produced 65 episodes of the Davey and Goliath show and six specials from 1969 to 1971. The show featured Davey, a young boy, and his dog Goliath, whom only Davey can hear, who face life's ups and downs together. The shows were made by art and Ruth Clokey, who also created Gumby.

The church hopes to "introduce a new generation to Davey and bring quality children's programming to television and video, programming with a moral center and a Christian theme," said the Rev. Eric Shafer, the ELCA's communications director. To help pay for production, the ELCA agreed to sell the characters for commercial endorsements, leading to their appearance in a commercial for Mountain Dew that began airing earlier this year.

"It is our hope that the two denominations will have closer partnerships at the local level to reach a point of reconciliation of ministries, working together in common mission," said United Methodist Bishop William B. Sociologist finds link between church, parenting

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. - Fathers who regularly attend church are more likely to be home for dinner and spend time with their children, a University of Virginia sociologist found.

"Conservative and evangelical Protestant fathers are especially involved with their children compared to fathers with no religious affiliation," said the study's author, Bradford Wilcox, who added that churches are the kind of social organizations that give fathers and children more chances to interact. Fathers who are active in civic organizations are also likely to be more involved in their children's lives, he said.

Wilcox's findings, which appear in the August 2002 issue of the Journal of Marriage and Family, are based on questionnaires from about 1,000 fathers of children ages 5 to 18. The men were either regulars at a Christian church or attended no worship services.

Mayor apologizes for preacher arrests

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Mayor John DeStefano Jr. has apologized for the arrests of two ministers who were charged for holding a loud church service after neighbors complained about the noise.

The mayor's apology came Sunday night during a speech at evening worship at Second State of Jacob Church, the site of the arrests a week earlier. All charges have been dismissed, DeStefano said. "As I come here tonight out of respect and responsibility, I apologize as mayor, because I did not do my job," DeStefano said. Police charged the Rev. Armando Hernandez of the Second Star Church with breach of peace. The Rev. Daniel Rodriguez, a neighborhood resident, was charged with interfering with police. Police Chief Melvin H. Wearing later said criminal charges were not the best way for police to deal with the situation.

Acceptance of gay priests clashes with church law

Seattle stance causes stir in Methodist Church

By Elizabeth Murtaugh
The Associated Press

SEATTLE - There is nothing ambiguous about the United Methodist Church law that forbids the appointment of "self-avowed, practicing homosexuals" as pastors. Yet complaints against two ministers from Seattle who openly declared they are gay were dismissed this year, allowing them to continue to preach and fueling a fierce national debate within the church.

The decisions have galvanized Methodists who say it's time for church doctrine to make room for gay pastors and to be more accepting of gays, in general. Others are crying foul, saying church law should be upheld.

"People of genuine Christian faith disagree about this," said the Rev. Elaine Stanovsky, of the Seattle district of the church's Pacific Northwest Conference. "Both sides feel the church is going the wrong way, so everybody's in pain about it."

The conference's committee on investigation dismissed a complaint last month against the Rev. Karen Dammann, former pastor at Seattle's Woodland Park United Methodist Church, rather than sending the case on to a church trial. Less than two months earlier, the same panel cleared Dammann's successor, the Rev. Mark Edward Williams, who declared himself "a practicing gay man" at the 2001 annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Conference, which includes Washington state and northern Idaho.

"God works in mysterious ways," said Williams, 32, and pastor at Woodland Park since 1999. "I think that the process Karen and I have gone through has had some real moments of grace, as well as painful, frustrating moments."

In Dammann's case, Bishop Elias Galvan of the Pacific Northwest Conference filed the complaint after she wrote him a letter disclosing she was gay.

"I was not going to lie, and I was not going to be evasive," said Dammann, 45, who now lives in Amherst, Mass., with her partner, Meredith Savage, and their 4-year-old son. Three committee members voted to send the case to trial, three voted no and one abstained. Five votes are needed to send a complaint to trial.

The decision to dismiss the complaint against Williams was unanimous, Stanovsky said.

In the eyes of critics like the Rev. James V. Heidinger II, president and publisher of Good News magazine, the committee erred in both cases by letting their personal convictions cloud their judgment on a clear judicial issue.

"When two pastors have publicly admitted that they are self-avowed and practicing (homosexuals), anybody looking at that with any sense of understanding of church polity would say that should be passed along for church trial," he said. To ignore church laws "or act as if those don't matter opens the church really to near lawlessness and moral chaos."

The decisions have galvanized Methodists who say it's time for church doctrine to make room for gay pastors and to be more accepting of gays, in general. Others are crying foul, saying church law should be upheld.

With 8.4 million members nationally, the United Methodist Church is the country's second-largest Protestant denomination. At the church's national meeting in 2000, a majority of Methodist leaders supported a ban on ordination of gays and on same-sex unions. Church leaders also retained language in its doctrine stating that homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian teaching."

United Methodist Church law forbids the appointment of "self-avowed, practicing homosexuals" as pastors, but complaints against the Rev. Mark Edward Williams, who is openly gay, and another minister from Seattle who is gay were dismissed this year, allowing the two to continue to preach and fueling a fierce national debate.

Book deals with issue of giving to church

The Dallas Morning News

Book
"God's Guarantees for Giving," by Ron Knott (Xulon Press)
Few church issues are more sensitive than giving. Pastors often say they dislike preaching about money but must. Churches have to pay bills and fund their ministries. Some pastors teach that the Bible tells Christians to tithe — to give 10 percent of their income. To them, Knott's views may seem heretical. He says believers should not tithe. He even says tithing is contrary to the New Testament. "It is very frightening because I am challenging a deeply rooted tradition in the Church establishment," writes Knott, a former pilot who now speaks in churches. He contends that believers should give freely but that tithing is a legalistic standard fit for Old Testament times, not today. He says Christians should direct most of their giving straight to the poor. He lists Christian organizations that he thinks deserve support. Giving money to a church without knowing how it's spent is bad stewardship, Knott argues. "Are your tithes going to feed strangers, the fatherless and the widows?" he writes. "Have you received your church's financial statements? You might be surprised at what you find."
—Ed Housewright

Religion in the media

often errs toward body-worship, tends to leave some squeamish about the body. The "spiritual" seems the opposite of the "bodily." Paulsell invites readers to think about what it means to honor the body. She reminds them that Jesus was "embodied," a fact deeply entwined with his identity. The book celebrates the ordinary beauty of life in the body. Bathing, eating, exercising and resting have sacred significance. Sexual joy and physical pain both offer holy lessons. Even prayer and meditation, she notes, require the involvement of both body and spirit. Conservative Christians may flinch at some illustrations, such as a poem about a gay man tenderly caring for the body of his dying partner. But anyone will appreciate the invitation to cherish the goodness and mystery of God's creation in the body.

"I dream a church," writes Gary of Monticello, Ark., "that would call the young people of today to the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ so that we might have a chance to know peace, for peace begins in each of our souls." Others write about sharing God's joy with all races, about welcoming gay and transgendered young people, about drawing on young people's talents. The site is a project of the Shared Mission Focus on Young People. Designers have made it easy for young Methodists to add their dreams on the home page.

Mini-forum provides taste of 4-H

RUPERT - More than 180 people participated in 30 different workshops and contests at the 2002 4-H Mini-Forum at the Mindoka County Fairgrounds in Rupert.

Several classes at the May event were taught by 4-H teens from an eight-county area. Representatives from the Mindoka County 4-H Teen Association presented a class about ethics and etiquette where participants learned how to behave at a job interview or a date and to make important decisions about right or wrong. Cassia County teens discussed their successful communications contest, and Lincoln County teens shared ideas about parliamentary procedure and a new 4-H project.

Youth planning committee members from the Know Your Government conference discussed the annual event. Clover Buds, for 4-H members 5-8 years old, also learned about hand washing, along with art activities.

Young people and adults could attend livestock classes in the morning and participate in a livestock judging contest in the afternoon.

There were craft classes and discussions about new and popular 4-H projects, including: aerospace, dogs, rabbits, leather work and horses. Participants also learned more about completing record books, community service, writing resumes, leadership opportunities, future Mini-Forums and the State 4-H Leaders Forum in the fall of 2003. Thanks to donations of wood and time, the Mini-Forum raised more than $2,000, organizers say.

The District 4-H Leaders Association organized the Mini-Forum to celebrate the 100th birthday of 4-H, and raise funds for district activities, such as national trips, scholarships, leadership opportunities, future Mini-Forums and the State 4-H Leaders Forum in the fall of 2003. Thanks to donations of wood and time, the Mini-Forum raised more than $2,000, organizers say.

Area young people participate in one of many learning activities at the 2002 4-H Mini-Forum.

LIONS' GIFT

Jack Fields, left, secretary of the Buhl Lions Club, presents a check for $500 to the Buhl Rodeo Association to help defray the cost of new bleachers. Accepting the donation is Bill Clark, middle, and Darin Haumont.

Kimberly honors good neighbors

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - Two Kimberly area residents were honored for being good neighbors.

Dr. Ivan and Alice Jackson earned the Good Neighbor title for the annual Good Neighbor Day event.

Several nominations were received for the long-time Kimberly residents, who were complimented for their willingness to take people to medical appointments, and check on shut-ins or help them with their shopping.

Alice Jackson has been involved in community activities, and was a blood donor for many years. Dr. Johnson was noted for his special care of his animal patients, organizers say.

Julie Reeves was selected as runner-up for her interest in Kimberly. A few years ago when the Chamber of Commerce disbanded, it left no one to sponsor the Good Neighbor Day celebration. Reeves gathered up a few residents, and last minute plans were made to continue the traditional event, which went off without a hitch. She owns a floral business, which she operates out of her home, four children and a husband, Mike.

Others receiving honorable mention were Jim Sorenson, recognized for his years as a teacher and his work for the city as the mayor of Kimberly. Chuck Lattin was recognized for his interest in the 4-H program, and readiness to help anyone needing a hand, in spite of his own health problems.

FIFTH AMENDED SUMMONS AND NOTICE OF TRIAL
vs
THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS GREETINGS TO THE ABOVE-NAMED DEFENDANT.
YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that a Complaint for possession of the premises commonly known as 1050 Airport Loop, Bldg. #1, Twin Falls, Twin Falls County, Idaho has been filed against you in the District Court of the Fifth Judicial District of the State of Idaho, in and for the County of Twin Falls, by the above-named Plaintiff, and you are hereby directed to file a written answer or motion in defense to the said Complaint on or prior to the time and date set for trial, which shall include:

1. The title and number of the case.
2. If your response is an Answer to the Complaint, it must contain admissions or denials of the separate allegations of the Complaint and other defenses you may claim.
3. Your signature, mailing address and telephone number, or the signature, mailing address and telephone number of your attorney.
4. Proof of mailing or delivery of a copy of your response to Plaintiff's attorney, as designated above.
To determine whether you must pay a filing fee with your response, contact the Clerk of the above-named court.
PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that the Court has scheduled this matter for trial on the 9th day of September, 2002, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock p.m. If you fail to file a written answer or motion and/or fail to be present on the day set for trial, judgment by default may be entered against you for the relief sought in the Complaint, copy of which Complaint is herewith served upon you.
Witness my hand and the seal of this Court this 2nd day of August, 2002.
