School bosses OK drugs tests

Twin Falls administrators suggest, agree to random tests for themselves

By Robert Mayer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Administrators in the Twin Falls School District have agreed to random drug testing.

In fact, it was the principals themselves who initiated the concept Wednesday at the district's first administrator meeting of the school year, said Superintendent Terrell Donich.

During the meeting, Dennis Sohius, principal at Morningstar Elementary School, brought the idea to the table, Donich said Thursday. Sohius was upset at the negative light cast upon the district and its employees because of the actions of a single person, Mary Lee Roberts, former principal of Bickel Elementary School, pleaded guilty recently to a charge of possession of a controlled substance.

"The motivation is to show to the public that nothing is going on here; we are models for your children," Donich said.

Discussion was minimal, objections were nonexistent, and the topic lasted perhaps five minutes, he said.

"I was kind of surprised they jumped on the issue the way they did because frankly, I don't think it's necessary," Donich said. "They're aware that they don't have to do this."

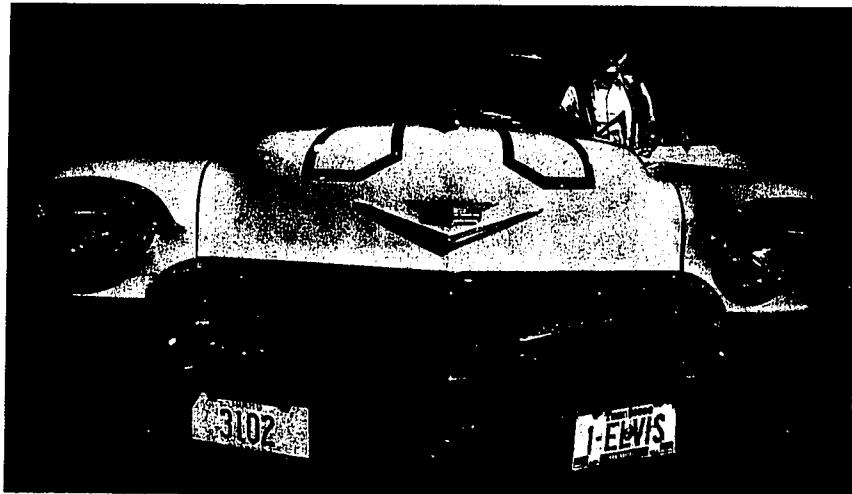

Should the district adopt this voluntary policy, it will join the Minidoka School District as the Magic Valley's only two school districts that randomly drug test administrators.

The process won't happen right away, however. Donich said he wants to speak to all employees, teachers and classified staff to see if they care to participate and to gauge their

USA IN COLOR/The Times-News

Eugene Fischer has owned his 1956 Elvis-inspired dusty rose-colored Coupe de Ville Cadillac for 22 years. Fischer has been a big Elvis fan from the start; he saw him twice in concert and even shook hands and spoke with him once in 1959. Fischer has added onto the original car, including 'hood bras' taken from a hearse, just as Elvis had done. 'As far as Elvis was concerned,' said Fischer, 'the more chrome the better.'

25 years later, Elvis faithful keep 'King' alive

JEROME — He was, says Eugene Fischer, "way down deep in the blues" when he heard the news.

The news about the death of The King 25 years ago today. For true Elvis faithful, even talking about Presley can turn without warning into an Elvis lyric.

"I remember when I was a kid in Winnemucca (Nev.), those dances didn't stop at 1 in the morning," said Fischer, 70, a retired construction worker. "They went on until 2:30, and they were dancin' to Elvis."

There came Aug. 16, 1977: The Day the Music Died.

Elvis Presley, age 42, was found dead at his Graceland mansion in Memphis, Tenn. The Shelby County coroner said it was a heart attack, suspected — but never definitely proven — to have been brought on by either prescription drugs or Presley's fuel-the-candle-at-both-ends lifestyle.

"He was the best there was," said Lynn Rasmussen, a 54-year-old Twin Falls Regitor who has on occasion sung Presley tunes at public events. "I listened to his music from the time I was 8 years old, and I watched him on 'The Ed Sullivan Show.' My mother didn't like it because of the way he swayed his hips."

Elvis the Icon has, for better or worse, long since eclipsed Elvis the Man. Seventy thousand fans are expected at Graceland today for a vigil. A remixed version of "A Little Less Conversation,"

Health officials find virus in Colorado livestock

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — West Nile virus looks to be just a state away.

The virus's westward march has apparently reached the border of Colorado and Wyoming, where health officials reported four animal cases Thursday.

If the cases are confirmed by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Colorado would become the 28th and western-most state to report the mosquito-borne virus this year.

CDC Director Dr. Julie Gerberding has said birds and mosquitoes could spread the virus all the way to the Pacific Coast. The CDC has confirmed 159 human cases of the disease and nine deaths so far this year. There have been no recorded cases in Idaho, where state health officials are monitoring the situation, said Cheryl Becker, the epidemiologist for South Central District Health in Twin Falls. But officials expect it will eventually reach here.

"Everyone seems to think it will spread clear across the country," said Bob Stoltz, recently retired University of Idaho entomologist.

Colorado health officials said a crow and two horses tested positive for West Nile in Weld County, just south of Cheyenne.

Bush tells ranchers to hang tough

The Washington Post

MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL, S.D. — President Bush invoked the spirit of pioneers Thursday in urging desperate ranchers to endure the worst drought since the Dust Bowl without insisting on extra federal aid, which would help them but increase the budget deficit.

Bush began a campaign this week to convince Congress that

Federal assistance conflicts with fiscal restraint, he says he's determined to put a brake on federal spending, even during a war on terrorism. He told residents of the Black Hills here that he'd made the politically painful choice of rejecting pleas for new drought money from Rep. John Thune, R-S.D., the Republican who Bush personally recruited to try to unseat Sen. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., in one of the nation's hottest Senate races.

Bush said he was optimistic about overcoming the challenges posed by terrorism and a listless economy. He vowed to set priorities and watch spending at the same time.

Attorney: Jumping could be trouble

But lawsuits over bridge activity seem to be rare

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just how responsible is the state for people who want to parachute 500 feet off the Perrine or Hansen bridges into the Snake River?

In light of two deaths and at least one jumper who sustained serious injuries in just the past three years, the Idaho Transportation Board pondered that question Thursday at its regular meeting at the College of Southern Idaho.

A lawyer from the attorney general's office told the board there could be some liability issues, even though there don't seem to be any lawsuits resulting from the activity in other parts of the country.

Attorney Stephen Bywater advised board members they could face liability on three fronts: "You could face liability from the participants themselves," he said. "You wouldn't think logically people would sue over their own decisions, but it does happen. The likelihood of that happening in this instance isn't great."

A slightly greater risk to the state could come from people under the bridge in boats who would be inadvertently hit by BASE jumpers landing on them. But the greatest risk — if there is any — would come from drivers losing control of their vehicles because they are rubbernecking the BASE jumpers as they drive by, Bywater said.

He also indicated the Department of Administration has said the Idaho Transportation Department is not covered by any kind of insurance as far as BASE jumping is concerned. However, other sports — such as bicycling — are covered because of a permitting system.

To permit or not to permit seems to be the real dilemma facing the Transportation Department in regard to BASE jumpers. BASE is an acronym for bridges, antennae, spans and earth.

Board members acknowledged that forcing jumpers to get permits might make the state more liable by making it appear the

NASA's comet-hunting spacecraft goes missing

The Baltimore Sun

NASA's Contour spacecraft has gone missing only six weeks into a planned four-year, $159 million mission to fly past two comets.

Controllers at the Johns Hopkins University's Applied Physics Laboratory near Laurel, Md., said Thursday they lost contact with the one-ton spacecraft early Thursday, soon after it was scheduled to fire its solid rocket engine and zip away from Earth toward its first comet rendezvous in 2003.

They immediately issued an all-points bulletin, asking NASA's powerful Deep Space Network antennas to begin searching the skies and listening for Contour's radio signals. Communications experts worked to command the probe to call home. But by late in the day, there was only silence.

APL spokesman Mike Buckley said Thursday it is possible the spacecraft's engine misfired, or blew up.

Feds probe dietary drug seller

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department is conducting a criminal investigation into whether a leading ephedra seller lied about the safety of the long-controversial dietary supplement.

The Food and Drug Administration, which sought the investigation, dismissed as "disingenuous" MetaboliX International's offer Thursday to turn over 13,000 health complaints from its consumers years after federal health officials sought the records.

Sleuths invade military computers with ease

The Washington Post

SAN DIEGO - Security consultants entered scores of confidential military and government computers without approval this summer, exposing vulnerabilities that specialists say open the networks to electronic attacks and spying.

The consultants, inexperienced but armed with free, widely available software, identified unprotected PCs and then roamed at will through sensitive files containing military procedures, personnel rosters and financial data.

One computer at Fort Hood in Texas held a copy of an air support squadron's "smart book" that details radio encryption techniques, the use of laser targeting systems and other field procedures. Another maintained hundreds of soldier records containing Social Security numbers, security clearance levels and credit card numbers. A NASA computer contained vendor records, including company bank account and financial routing numbers.

Available on other machines across the country were e-mail messages, confidential disciplinary letters and, in one case, a memo naming couriers to carry secret documents and their destination, according to records maintained by ForensicTec Solutions Inc., the four-month-old security company that discovered the lapses.

ForensicTec officials said they first stumbled upon the accessible military computers about two months ago, when they were checking the network security for a private-sector client. They saw several of the computers' online identifiers, known as Internet protocol addresses. Through a simple Internet search, they found the computers were linked to networks at Fort Hood.

Former employees of a private-sector firm - and relative newcomers to the security field - the ForensicTec consultants said they continued examining the system because they were curious as well as spurred by the ease of access. They made their findings public, said ForensicTec President Brett O'Keefe, because they hoped to help the government identify the problem and to "get some positive exposure" for their company.

"We were shocked and almost scared by how easy it was to get in," O'Keefe said. "It's like coming across the Pentagon and seeing a door open with no one guarding it."

In response to an inquiry by The Washington Post, military investigators were unable to find some of the intrusions at Fort Hood, saying they occurred on unclassified PCs. Senior officials said they are preparing a new Army-wide directive requiring shared computer files containing sensitive information to be password-protected. Sensitive information includes such things as Social Security numbers, confidential plans and so on, officials said.

Jumping

agency endorses the sport, in spite of its dangerous aspects. But in addition, a permitting process implies ordinances at the county or state level so that law enforcement officials could make sure jumpers are being reasonably safe.

The board discussed the idea of avoiding liability by warning drivers not to look at BASE jumpers as they drive by.

"I think signage would be more distracting," said board member Monte McQuire. "If you saw a sign, you might start looking."

Another board member, John Combs, pointed out that putting up signs also implies some responsibility on the part of the Transportation Department.

After the meeting, longtime BASE jumper Paul Roberts, who said he has jumped from various places throughout the country, offered a solution. He said a West Virginia county has established one weekend in October for BASE jumping. Every jumper has to sign a waiver saying that no government entity bears any responsibility for injuries or death. In addition, jumpers have to prove they have proper equipment, and they are not to perform stunts when they jump off the 836-foot New River Bridge in Fayetteville County.

Getting more information about what goes on in other BASE jumping areas is something board members decided to do before making a decision.

"I don't care if people jump off the bridge," said board member Gary Bick. "We just should not rush into something. We need to find out more about penalties, enforcement and legislation. I just want to make sure the department is not liable for some guy who jumps off a bridge and sinks a boat and kills four kids."

Elvis

1968 Presley single that didn't even make the Billboard charts at the time, is the No. 1 record at the moment in the United Kingdom.

And Eugend Fisher's 1956 Cadillac restored with the tailpipe through the bumper and with sport hood-bras - both in the style of Elvis' own - silver pink Coupe de Ville - is the talk of every car show he enters.

"Elvis really liked this particular color of hot pink," Fischer said. "So that's the color I painted it."

Presley, it's said, bought his Cadillac several at a time, and the first went to his mother and dad.

"He was a good man," Fischer said. "In his heart, he was a good Christian."

But a shy one, and worse, an incurable performer. That contradiction might be the death of him, says Bill Goertzen, a 52-year-old disabled veteran who used to be a sometime Elvis impersonator.

"I think that's what may have hastened his death," he said. "He was pretty heavy, and that would have embarrassed him."

Yet Presley might, Goertzen response. The outcome of those discussions will dictate whether all school employees participate in the random tests or just the administrators.

The timing coincides with a new policy of random drug tests for student athletes already slated to begin this school year.

The tests will be carried out for the employees in the same manner as student athletes - sca-tered randomly throughout the year, Donich said. The tests will run taxpayers $35 a pop.

It is hoped, Donich added, that legislators will allow suit and submit to random drug tests as well.

"It would be a reflection of their commitment to the process to random drug tests of public employees," he said. "That would show this is a state step for professionals to take."

Mexico leader's trip cancellation helps him at home, hurts Bush

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Under pressure from critics who say his close friendship with President Bush has not paid off, President Vicente Fox's cancellation of his trip to the U.S. leader's Texas ranch has cooled relations with Washington but enhanced his power to get things done at home. Fox has struggled with a hostile Congress that has blocked his proposals, or modified them beyond recognition and, in one case, prevented him from traveling to the United States, arguing that he needed to focus more on Mexico.

Late Wednesday, hours after Texas ignored his pleas and put a Mexican-American drug smuggler to death for killing a Dallas police officer, Fox canceled his Aug. 26-28 trip to four Texas cities and to visit Bush at his ranch in Crawford, where he had planned to push the U.S. president for an immigration accord. Some Mexican politicians have felt that Bush has increasingly abandoned this country after the Sept. 11 attacks shifted the focus of U.S. foreign policy from immigration reform to fighting terrorism. Some argue that Fox's cozy ties with the U.S. president have accomplished little south of the border. "It seems there is much giving, and we get nothing but smiles in return," said Mexican lawmaker Eddie Varon, a member of the former ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party. That sentiment is a far cry from the optimism on both sides of the border in February 2001, when Fox and Bush - both newly elected - walked like old friends around the pond at Fox's ranch and talked about ways to ease illegal immigration.

Weapons sales drop following four-year rise

WASHINGTON (AP) - International arms sales declined substantially last year to almost $26.4 billion compared with about $40 billion in 2000. It was the first decrease since 1997.

The United States retained its position as the world's biggest arms dealer, but its arms transfer agreements declined to nearly $12.1 billion from $18.9 billion in 2000, the Congressional Research Service reported.

American arms sales last year accounted for nearly 46 percent of all weapons sales. Russia was second with $5.9 billion and France third with $2.9 billion.

India and China are Russia's main customers. Notice given by Russia in late 2000 that it would pursue sales with Iran, a principal customer of Russian fighter aircraft, tanks and attack submarines in the early 1990s, could result in sales worth billions of dollars, the report said.

The United States has tried to dissuade Russia from selling sophisticated weapons and technology to Iran, but "a series of ongoing discussions" suggests lucrative deals are in the works, according to the report.

Many Sept. 11 victims sue Saudis, banks

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some 600 family members of Sept. 11 victims filed a trillion-dollar lawsuit Thursday against the Sudanese government and Saudi officials, banks and charities, charging they financed Osama bin Laden's network and the attacks on America.

The 15-count federal lawsuit, modeled after action filed against Libya in the Pan Am Flight 103 disaster, seeks to cripple banks, charities and some members of the Saudi royal family as a deterrent to terrorist financing schemes.

But the suit also is therapeutic for relatives of the victims, who acknowledge they face long odds of collecting anything.

"It's not the money. We want to do something to get at these people," said Irene Spina, whose daughter, Lisa L. Trerotola, 38, perished in the World Trade Center. "There's nothing else we can do."

"This is the right thing to do," said Matt Sellito, father of Matthew Carmen Sellito, 23, who also died in the World Trade Center. "If the odds are stacked against us, we will beat them."

Troops will be in Afghanistan for years - U.S.

WASHINGTON - The United States is likely to keep troops in Afghanistan for many years to guard against it becoming a haven for terrorists again, the American war commander said Thursday.

Army Gen. Tommy Franks made no specific prediction about how long U.S. forces would remain there. Noting that the United States has long-term military commitments in many countries, Franks singled out Korea, where tens of thousands of American forces have been stationed for half a century.

Court: Bush can keep detainees names secret - A5

The detainees are being interrogated and are not allowed lawyers.

The legal limbo has outraged human rights activists and psychologists who say the uncertainty the men face is unbearable and counterproductive to interrogators seeking information.

"Once you're in that condition, you're not rational," said psychiatrist Stuart Grassian of Harvard University in Boston, an expert on the affects of long-term confinement in maximum-security conditions.

"Leaving people in confinement, or pushing them to the breaking point, won't necessarily improve the ability to get information," Grassian said. "When people break, a lot of times it isn't in a way that's particularly useful to anyone."

Terror suspects attempt suicide, U.S. military says

Some criticize legal limbo at Guantanamo base

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - Four terror suspects being held at the U.S. naval base in Guantanamo Bay tried to kill themselves in their cells, a military official said Thursday.

One man tried to slash his wrists with a plastic razor, and three others tried to hang themselves with "comfort items" at Camp Delta, the prison in eastern Cuba where 598 men are being held, said Army Lt. Col. Joe Hoey, a detention mission spokesman.

The suicide attempts occurred in August, but military spokesmen gave no details on exactly what they used or how seriously they were hurt. Comfort items include a towel and sheet.

"All of these men are monitored very closely and their attempts were not successful," Hoey told The Associated Press.

Since the first detainees arrived in January, none have been charged by the U.S. government, which says it may try them in military tribunals, send them home or hold them indefinitely.

'NEW' PENTAGON

Peter M. Murphy, right, general counsel for the Marine Corps' commandant, talks with reporters Thursday as he waits for new furniture to be delivered to his restored office at the Pentagon in Washington. Murphy, one of the first 22 Pentagon workers to move back in, said he was standing beside a blast-proof window, like the one behind him, that he says saved his life. Repairs to the Pentagon are proceeding ahead of schedule.

faced hardship and overcome hardships, because we're Americans," he said. "That's what's going to happen in this era, too. We've got problems, we've got challenges. This generation has not challenges to meet and we're going to meet those challenges head-on."

Drought response has become such an emotional issue that the South Dakota Democratic Party on Thursday began running radio ads attacking Thune and the Bush administration for doing too little. Johnson supporters contend that Bush has undermined Thune, since many ranchers thought the presidential visit signaled plans to offer new federal aid.

Bush said that instead, relief should come from the $190 billion farm bill he signed earlier this year, "so we don't run up additional deficits in the federal budget."

The president underscored his commitment to helping ranchers from such current programs when including the Agriculture Department's announcement this week that $150 million in surplus milk - "spoiled milk," Democrats called it - would be made available for use in animal feed in four drought-stricken states, including South Dakota.

"We want to help the hurting people, because it is not only good for the neighborhood," Bush said. "Helping people in the agricultural sector is good for the American economy."

Thune introduced Bush. Johnson wasn't allowed to speak, although he received a presidential greeting and a seat in the VIP section. Thune thanked Bush for coming "to witness our adversity," including the summer spate of wildfires. "Fire and drought are just God's way of reminding us who is really in charge," Thune said to sustained applause.

Bush promised to maintain federal worker protections for employees of the homeland security department he's urging Congress to create. Democrats say Bush's plans would give the government wider latitude to hire and fire than it has with current employees.

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who was present during Bush's speech, said as he left that the president's decision about drought provided struggling farmers and ranchers across the country "little in terms of help or hope." "The people of South Dakota, the people in agriculture, were expecting more," Daschle said.

The president enjoyed a far more enthusiastic reception when Air Force One landed Thursday at a nearby Air Force Base, where the banner headline in the Rapid City Journal said, "Good Morning, Mr. Bush!"

The president was in South Dakota for four hours, taking a helicopter from Rapid City to Mount Rushmore. He conducted a closed-door roundtable discussion about federal spending with several ranchers and other local residents at the Mount Rushmore Sculpture Studio before delivering his speech on Grandview Terrace, beneath the famous faces.

Virus

Wyo. A third horse was found with the disease in southeastern Colorado. "This has been something we have known is coming," said Dr. Ned Colonge, Colorado's acting chief medical officer. "Even with the presence of the virus in our state, the chances of any one person becoming seriously ill is remote."

Illinois health officials reported three new human cases of the virus, all in the Chicago area. One of the victims, a 70-year-old man, was in critical condition at a hospital.

The virus was first detected in the United States in New York in 1999. Most people who get it see mild flu-like symptoms, or no symptoms at all. But it can cause encephalitis, a potentially fatal swelling of the brain, especially in older people and people with weakened immune systems.

Steps to avoid contracting the virus include using mosquito repellent, removing any standing water where mosquitoes can breed and wearing protective clothing.

Move to back gay mentors prompts attack on Big Brothers, Big Sisters

NEW YORK (AP) - Big Brothers Big Sisters of America has told its 490 local affiliates to give openly gay and lesbian volunteers an equal chance to serve as one-on-one mentors to children, incurring the wrath of several conservative groups.

The 98-year-old youth organization - devoted to helping children from single-parent homes - says it is undaunted by the criticism. "We're getting incredible, positive support for the action we took," the organization's president, Judy Vredenburgh, said Thursday.

Big Brothers Big Sisters, or BBBSA, has endorsed nondiscrimination principles for 25 years that cover sexual orientation, race, religion and ethnicity. Only last month, however, did the provision about sexual orientation become

'We're getting incredible... support...'

- Judy Vredenburgh, organization president

The organization 'will become a magnet for homosexuals...'

- Donald Wildmon, American Family Association

mandatory policy for all BBBSA affiliates, a few of which had been rejecting gay volunteers.

Though BBBSA gives parents the option of rejecting mentors for various reasons, including sexual orientation, the move to make the non-discrimination policy binding on affiliates has provoked outrage from several conservative organizations.

Donald Wildmon, chairman of the Tupelo, Miss.-based American Family Association, contends that BBBSA "will become a magnet for homosexuals who exploit opportunities to engage young, impressionable children with their unhealthy lifestyle."

His association's Web site offers a form letter to be sent to BBBSA's corporate supporters, asking that they suspend donations until BBBSA "repeals this dangerous and troubling policy."

Judge: Bush can withhold names until after appeal

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ruled Thursday that the Bush administration does not have to immediately reveal the names of those detained in the investigation of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler issued a stay of her earlier order to give government lawyers more time to appeal. The appeal could take weeks or, possibly, months.

On Aug. 2, Kessler gave the Justice Department 15 days to release the names, ruling that federal attorneys had not proven the need for a blanket policy of secrecy for more than 1,200 people picked up since the attacks.

The government informed the court of its intention to appeal last week, arguing in documents that Kessler had missed the point about keeping the names secret.

Kessler rejected the government's contention that the terrorist group al-Qaida would be tipped to how much progress investigators had made if the detainees' names were released. She said al-Qaida already would be aware of its operatives in the United States were missing.

CDC: A quarter of U.S. kids regularly walk, bike to school

ATLANTA — Only a quarter of American children walk or bicycle to school, which may be contributing to the country's growing problem of childhood obesity, federal health officials said Thursday.

In its first national survey to look at why children aren't walking, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention asked parents their reasons for not sending their children to school on foot. The top concerns: distance, traffic, weather and crime.

The CDC described the lack of exercise as a worrisome trend. The number of overweight teens has tripled since 1980, and in 1999 some 13 percent of children and teenagers were overweight. At the same time, Type 2 diabetes, once unheard of in children, is increasing dramatically among adolescents.

Getting more children to walk or bike to school should be a national health objective, the CDC report says. It set a goal of getting at least 50 percent of children who live less than a mile from school walking or cycling by 2010.

Amtrak pulls express trains after finding new cracks

WASHINGTON — Amtrak's optimistic timetable for restoring Acela Express service broke down Thursday when additional cracks were found on the undersides of locomotives that power the high-speed trains.

For the second time this week, Amtrak canceled all Acela Express runs and tried to plug the scheduling gaps by putting more conventional trains into service. The locomotives were built under the same contract, and by the same manufacturers, as the 18 Acela Express trains. Amtrak quickly pulled the conventional locomotives from service, exacerbating its equipment squeeze.

Gov. Bush names father's former aide to position

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Gov. Jeb Bush on Thursday named a former aide in his father's presidential administration to head Florida's beleaguered child welfare agency.

Bush announced the appointment of Jerry Regier to replace Kathleen Kearney, who resigned Tuesday as secretary of the Department of Children & Families. Kearney's resignation, which takes effect Sept. 3, comes after widespread and highly publicized problems within the department, including losing track of foster children, leaving children in abusive situations and the falsification of reports by its caseworkers.

Regier, 57, worked for the first President Bush as head of the National Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention in 1992. Earlier, he was appointed to the National Commission on Children by former President Reagan in 1988 and was reappointed by Bush.

Former sheriff gets life plus 23 years for killing successor

DECATUR, Ga. — Former DeKalb County Sheriff Sidney Dorsey was sentenced to life in prison Thursday for murdering his successor and given another 23 years for corruption.

The former sheriff told Superior Court Judge Cynthia Becker that he was innocent of plotting the slaying.

"I know you're going to sentence me severely, but I do not have the blood of Derwin Brown on my hands," Dorsey said. "I'm going to be in prison on the outside, but I'll be free on the inside because I do not have the blood of the sheriff-elect on my hands."

Farmer leaves estate to ease tax burden of Iowa neighbors

WEST BURLINGTON, Iowa — Bachelor farmer Dewey Byar never spoke much, though friends said he always loved his neighbors for buying his corn, livestock and hay in this southeastern Iowa river town.

More than two years after dying of cancer, Byar's plan to return the favor is about to unfold in the form of a tax break for everyone in Des Moines County.

In accordance with Byar's will, most of the proceeds from the auction of his estate this weekend will be put in an investment trust and the annual income will be used to reduce property taxes. The will does not contain a provision to notify taxpayers.

Kent Gaudian, an estate executor and president of the West Burlington Bank, said the trust could earn $75,000 to $150,000 annually, depending on the auction and the rate of return.

Bowcut hearing shouldn't be concealed from public

Clas County residents have every right to feel shocked and angry about the sexual misconduct case of Leslie Peter Bowcut. They also have a right to witness the proceedings when justice is served.

The 28-year-old Burley man pleaded guilty last month to 14 Idaho charges of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under age 16. Each charge could come with a life sentence under Idaho law.

Clas County residents have every right to feel shocked and angry about the sexual misconduct case of Leslie Peter Bowcut. They also have a right to witness the proceedings when justice is served.

Our view: Officials in the Leslie Peter Bowcut child pornography case need to keep the sentencing hearing open to public observers.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

President follows in father's footsteps

This time, the president hopes for a different ending.

But the prospect of a war against Iraq is only one of several similarities between the senior and junior George W. Bush's presidencies and the second summer of his father's presidency 12 years ago.

As in the summer of 1990, the president's initial surge of popularity is starting to ebb. He faces increasing problems with Congress over a growing budget deficit.

His party's prospects look uncertain in midterm elections. And the No. 1 problem on his foreign policy plate is Iraq.

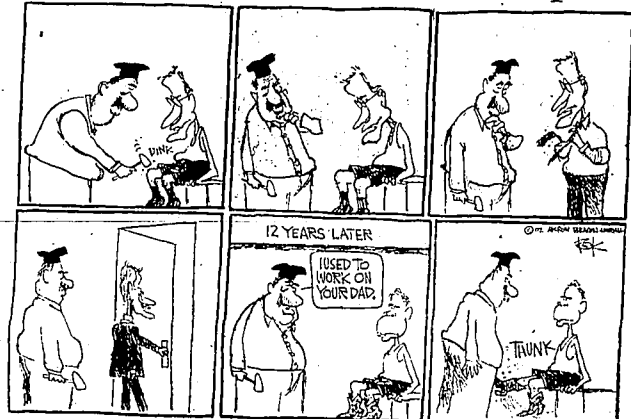

To be sure, a number of aspects of the looming confrontation between the American president and Iraq's Saddam Hussein are different from the situation in 1991, when a U.S.-led allied coalition routed Iraqi forces in a 100-hour ground campaign after weeks of air attacks.

This time, no single event is precipitating the situation in the way Hussein's conquest of Kuwait led to the 1991 war. And attitudes among U.S. allies in the region range from wariness about an attack on Iraq to outright opposition.

In addition, Iraq isn't the only challenge facing Bush in the region. He also must deal with the continuing violence between Israelis and Palestinians and the war on the terrorist al-Qaeda network.

President Bush has made "regime change" in Iraq a major goal. Public support for the goal is overwhelming.

But doubts persist within both parties about the wisdom of a unilateral U.S. effort, even though such key Democrats as House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, 2000 vice-presidential nominee Joe Lieberman and Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Joe Biden indicate they ultimately will support it.

Earlier this month, a number of analysts dressed to Biden's committee that uncertainties about the proposed attack abound: Would other countries assist the United States? Would an attack prompt Hussein to use deadly chemical or biological weapons? Would anti-Hussein elements in Iraq assist a U.S.-led assault? And what kind of ground would take over Iraq?

Leads from within the Bush administration also suggest uncertainties over the size and nature of the military effort. Some scenarios require a massive invasion force of 250,000 troops, while others call for a smaller, more mobile force that could act more quickly.

Finally, there are questions of timing. Most analysts believe a U.S. attack won't come until next winter, given November's elections, the need to gain allied backing, the time required to get troops into position and the need to mobilize the American people.

Since 1991, former President George Bush and his top advisers have defended the conditions in which they mobilized the coalition and the limited goals they set.

Some indicated the United States hoped to kill the top leader in the air attacks that preceded the ground invasion, but they never located his whereabouts in sufficient detail to hit him.

Interestingly, there seems no unanimity among top advisers to the former president.

Dick Cheney, then defense secretary and now vice president, reportedly is leading the pressure for an attack. Colin Powell, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and now secretary of state, is considered among those urging caution.

So is Brent Scowcroft, the onetime national security adviser who now heads the president's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. He recently warned on CBS "Face the Nation" that an attack on Iraq might complicate the U.S. efforts to fight terror and resolve the Middle East conflict.

In the end, the president will make the decision. But the only real questions seem to be when and how, since there seems little doubt that George W. Bush is determined to finish the job his father started.

Carl P. Leubsdorf is Washington bureau chief of the Dallas Morning News.

Bowcut's guilty plea came from an agreement with prosecutors to drop 11 other lewd and lascivious conduct charges, as well as 13 counts of sexual abuse of a child under age 16, and two counts of sexual exploitation of a child.

Now, Bowcut will also face federal charges of involvement in an international pornography ring. He is among 20 people charged with posting pornographic images of minors on the Internet. The broad reach of the Web magnifies the repugnance of Bowcut's deeds.

Residents in Burley may feel some shame for Bowcut's crimes, since he was a member of their community. But his crimes don't reflect on his hometown or its citizens. They reflect only on Bowcut himself, and on the other alleged members of the online conspiracy.

Crimes involving child pornography and the Internet do not flourish in the open. They thrive in a secretive world unknown to family members, friends, neighbors and the community at large.

The best way to rectify these crimes, and to give the community assurance that Bowcut is receiving the full measure of justice, is to air the court proceedings in public.

Bowcut's crimes were committed in darkness. They should be dealt with in the full light of public awareness.

For that reason, 5th District Judge Roger Burdick should reject Bowcut's request that the public be banned from his October hearing. The prosecuting attorney and the public should continue voicing opposition to any closure of the proceedings.

Because Bowcut pleaded guilty, there will be no trial — only a sentencing hearing. Now Bowcut and his lawyer say the victims' privacy will be violated if the hearing is open.

But that's nothing more than an effort by the defendant to shield himself from further embarrassment. If Bowcut were truly concerned about the welfare of these children, he never would have abused them. He never would have distributed their images on the World Wide Web.

The Times-News joins prosecutors in arguing for an open sentencing hearing in this case. The anonymity and privacy of the victims can and should be protected to the fullest extent in these proceedings. That can be done while still holding Bowcut publicly accountable for his acts.

Bowcut's crimes damaged not only the lives of three children, but also the psyche and trust of an entire community. He has kept his crimes secret long enough. It's only appropriate that he face justice in an open court of law, and in the court of public opinion.

Walking kids to school might help relieve traffic danger

The recent move toward lowering school-zone speed limits is one way to keep our kids safe. But here's another. Because of space constraints, please limit letters to 400 words, include your signature, mailing address and telephone number.

Children who walk to school get healthy exercise and fresh air. Parents who walk with their kids get a chance for some quality family time and exercise, too. My daughter and I enjoy our near-daily walks past some of the last remaining pastureland in Twin Falls. We see the seasons change, glimpse duck families afloat on Perrine Coulee and notice day-to-day changes in our neighborhood. As Natalie gets older, I know she'll soon be insisting she can walk to school by herself. I'm sure I'll miss our walks when that day comes.

Very few children in Twin Falls live beyond walking distance to and from their schools. This coming school year, do your family a favor and consider walking to school. You'll find it's time well spent, and a no-cost way to help relieve school zone congestion.

Replace flags from Sept. 11 with new ones

As members of the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, one of our highest respects for the flag of the United States of America. After Sept. 11, we were encouraged at the sight of, and interest in, seeing "Old Glory" being flown everywhere.

We have noticed lately, however, that those once bright, beautiful colors have, in many cases, faded, and the flags have become tattered. In some instances, almost shredded. This is evidenced where flags fly on homes, cars and at some business locations.

As an organization, we would like to encourage the continuation of flying "Old Glory," but to replace the faded and tattered flags with proud and bright new ones.

Educator's arrest shows need to decriminalize drug

The recent felony arrest for a Twin Falls educator for marijuana possession makes a strong argument for decriminalizing marijuana in the United States.

What has the state accomplished by destroying the career of a productive member of the community? He was anyone harmed by his behavior? When will we acknowledge the hypocrisy of tolerating alcohol, with its immense social, economic and legal cost, and penalizing marijuana, which is almost benign by comparison?

The fact is that for more harm is done by the marijuana laws than by the drug itself: In the last 10 years, 5 million Americans have been arrested for marijuana violations and 60,000 are currently incarcerated. The annual cost to society of enforcing our marijuana laws is estimated to be $10 billion, the diversion of law enforcement resources to prosecute a victimless crime is utterly wasteful.

Studies reveal that 80 million Americans have tried marijuana; it is unconscionable to continue to punish people for a crime that 35 percent of adults in our country have committed. It's been 30 years since a commission appointed by President Nixon recommended that the personal use of marijuana be removed from the criminal justice system; it is high time that our lawmakers joined the legislatures of 12 other states in our country to enact unnecessary marijuana laws.

Twin Falls jail system could be a lot worse

Response to "Justice system views citizens as merely a means to make money" by Allen Friesquez.

Mr. Friesquez, one finds your comments on Aug. 9 regarding the justice system in Twin Falls County to be quite concerning. However, I suggest you not attend the facilities provided for those who break the law in Maricopa County, Ariz. Sheriff Arpaio has (legally) established a very expensive means to take care of law breakers using old army tents. Yes, World War II. Army tents with dirt floors, World War II cots for sleeping and a fan for air conditioning. Mr. Friesquez, it was a cool 95 degrees at 5 a.m. this morning.

By the way, the prisoners get a total of two meals per day and pay for those two meals. The main course is (green) balcony sandwich with water to wash it down. No coffee, no sodas, no cigarettes, no TV and no magazines. You would get to view a nightly news via VCR with the sheriff reading from a book. Should you step out of line, you can be put on a bread and wild diet until you decide to get your act together. If you were real good, you would be allowed to join the chain gang and clean up along the county roads with a green uniform that has black and white stripes (pink underwear is a requirement).

Mr. Friesquez, I suggest you be thankful for what you have, as it could be a lot worse. Those who visit the facilities in Maricopa County, Ariz., find it in their best interest to break the law in their municipalities.

Have a great day!

Article doesn't apply here; beware of 'common' slogan

Mrs. Stoddard, I read the Aug. 5 U.S. News & World Report, Page 48, for the information you suggested, and either you need new glasses or I do. How it is possible that you can link that article to local dairies is beyond belief.

The articles discussed treated sewage sludge fertilizer that comes from wastewater treatment plants. The sludge, a biosolid byproduct, comes from the flushing of toilets and drains from industrial plants, hospitals, gas stations and households. It is not dairy fertilizer. Nowhere in the article is it implied that it comes from dairies.

I would suggest everyone read the article at the Twin Falls Public

Teen's death angers Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers strapped a bulletproof vest on a Palestinian teenager and ordered him to approach a house where a Hamas militant was hiding, with instructions to bring out everyone inside.

As he neared the house in the West Bank village of Tubas, 19-year-old Nidal Daraghmech was shot in the back of the head and killed — though it's not clear who pulled the trigger. Troops then flattened the house with bulldozers, killing the Hamas militant, the only person inside.

The Wednesday evening operation outraged Palestinians and sparked a sharp debate in Israel over a tactic the army has used for years. The army calls it the "neighbor procedure." Critics say the army is using Palestinians as "human shields."

Daraghmech was one of dozens of residents in Tubas who were called out of their homes by soldiers as they surrounded a home where Hamas militant Nasser Jerar was hiding, the army and Palestinian witnesses said.

The soldiers sent the residents to a nearby field, but ordered Daraghmech to approach the home and told him to persuade everyone inside to come out so they could arrest Jerar.

But before Daraghmech reached the door, he was shot in the back of the head, according to family members who saw the body before Daraghmech — was buried Thursday afternoon.

Soldiers announced on a megaphone that Daraghmech was approaching the house. But despite the warning, the army said, Jerar fired and killed Daraghmech.

Jerar, who was from nearby Jenin, was staying at the home of a fellow Hamas member and the man's wife. The woman, Sana Abu Muhssen, said that after residents in the area were evacuated, she saw soldiers send Daraghmech toward the house in a bulletproof vest. Moments later she heard gunshots, but said it was not clear who fired at Daraghmech.

Soon after the shooting, two army bulldozers destroyed the house with Jerar inside, crushing the militant, who used a wheelchair since losing both legs and an arm when a bomb he was planting exploded prematurely last year.

Jerar had been planning a massive bombing at a high-rise building in central Israel, the army said.

Ethnic Albanian protesters clash with police in Kosovo

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Hundreds of ethnic Albanians clashed with U.N. special police units in western Kosovo on Thursday, protesting the recent arrests of several ethnic Albanian rebels, an official said.

A NATO peacekeeper and 11 police officers were injured. The clash occurred after Spanish forces in riot gear tried to move a crowd that was blocking a key road in Decan, 55 miles southwest of Pristina. The protesters threw rocks at police.

The protest was the latest in a series of demonstrations against the United Nations, which has shown greater resolve recently to arrest former ethnic Albanian rebel leaders. The former leaders remain popular in the province for having fought Serb forces during a crackdown on ethnic Albanians in 1998-1999.

Ethnic Albanians accuse the United Nations of a political campaign against leaders who fought for Kosovo's independence. U.N. officials have denied that the arrests are politically motivated.

Kosovo officially remains part of Yugoslavia, but has been administered by the U.N. and NATO since June 1999, after an air war by the alliance halted a crackdown by Serb forces on independence-minded ethnic Albanians.

Police in turn used tear gas to disperse the crowd, said Andrea Angeli, a spokesman for the U.N. mission in Kosovo province. "The demonstration was planned and authorized, but they were told not to block the main road," Angeli said.

The protest ended with the detention of 23 protesters, but tensions remained as riot police and NATO-led peacekeepers were positioned in and around the town in armored vehicles.

Millions battle for survival from floods in India's remote northeast

LAHORIGIAT, India — The flooded Brahmaputra River has cut a vicious swath through India's remote northeast, killing hundreds of people, leveling homes, washing away schools and leaving millions homeless.

Arun Kalita's village, Sootea in Assam state, was swept away, and he now lives with his wife and four children in a tarpaulin-roofed riverbank shelter in this rain-drenched town, depending on government handouts to stave off hunger for himself, his wife and his children.

Kalita is one of the lucky ones — he and his family survived. But he's haunted by the memory of the home he lost.

"We just kept watching from a distance and could do nothing," said Kalita, 57, his voice choked with emotion. "My home now lies on the river bed."

In Europe, meanwhile, Elbe floodwaters in Dresden rose to their highest level in more than a century Thursday, threatening the Baroque city's famed opera and art collections as east Germany became the focus of flooding that has killed at least 100 people across Europe.

A levee broke about 80 miles to the northwest near a huge chemical industry complex at Bitterfeld, prompting officials to order the evacuation of the town and NATO-led peacekeepers revoked the order after the Mulde River began receding.

The rising Elbe has been fed in part by high water on the Vltava — the river that devastated Prague over the past week.

On Thursday, Czechs crowded onto Prague's riverfront lookout points to watch the Vltava's muddy waters recede.

Annual monsoon flooding has wreaked havoc across South Asia, killing more than 900 people in India, Bangladesh and Nepal since June and displacing or trapping about 25 million more.

Some of the most isolated victims are here in Assam, along the rugged foothills of the Himalayas. At least 39 people have died and nearly a quarter of the state's 26 million residents are now homeless.

Surveillance video shows a red pickup driven by the suspect in a July 30 bank robbery in Twin Falls.

FBI identifies pickup used in bank robbery

TWIN FALLS - The man suspected of robbing a Twin Falls bank July 30 was seen driving a red pickup near the bank before the robbery, and a surveillance camera caught images of the truck being driven away afterward, according to an FBI report.

The robbery was at the Lynwood branch of Wells Fargo Bank at 1329 Filer Ave. E. The truck is described as being a red or maroon Ford F150 or F250, model year 1987-1991. It had a white camper shell, custom wheels, rear mud flaps and chrome or aluminum "hoop" type side steps.

The truck also had oversized door mirrors - possibly towing mirrors - and a bug deflector on the hood.

Witnesses say the suspect approached a teller, displayed a small handgun and demanded money. He was described as about 6 feet tall, 250 to 300 pounds, bald on top with dark hair on the sides in a crew-cut style, with a round face and goatee or mustache.

Anybody with information should call the Twin Falls office of the FBI at 733-5720 or the Twin Falls Police Department at 735-4357. Wells Fargo is offering a reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction.

Police: Car with bodies was sold in Wendell

MOUNTAIN HOME - The car in which three badly burned bodies were found Sunday near the Snake River in Elmore County was sold about a year ago by a man in Wendell, an investigator said.

Detectives tracing the car's records determined that the white Pontiac was sold by a Wendell man to another private party in early 2001 - and was then sold again some time later, to Elmore County Sheriff's Office Chief Deputy Nick Schiltz. Exactly who owned the car and what path it took after it was sold the second time wasn't yet clear, he said Thursday.

The bodies - believed to be those of two children and an adult - were reportedly burned beyond recognition and were found south of Mountain Home. The bodies were still unidentified Thursday, but investigators hadn't yet labeled the deaths as an official case of suspected foul play, Schiltz said.

Easement saves scenic roadside property

SESSIDIAN - Seven acres of scenic roadside property at the Sessions Lodge will be protected under a conservation easement purchased by the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The easement will keep large commercial developments from destroying the view of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area Range Ranger Deb Cooper.

The land borders Idaho Highway 75 and is owned by Don and Nedra Sessions, who run Sessions Lodge.

The $386,700 easement essentially limits the property use to what exists, while allowing modest 25 percent to 40 percent expansions of the store and restaurant, said SNRA lands program manager Craig Sheely.

The easement will prevent large, commercial development like hotels, condominiums or trailer parks, Sheely said.

It's the 87th easement purchase since the 756,000-acre recreation area was established in 1972. The law establishing the area contained provisions for the federal government to control the use of the land to protect aesthetic values.

Third bridge project is alive again

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A third bridge over the Snake River Canyon is back on the agenda, but when construction might begin - nobody knows.

One million dollars has been approved by the U.S. Senate, however - thanks to Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. And the prospects look good for approval in the House, too, said Dave Maestas, who is the chairman of the Greater Twin Falls Transportation Committee. Committee members gave an update to the Idaho Transportation Board on Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho. Maestas said the bridge is the committee's No. 1 project.

Devon Rigby, district engineer for the ITD, said the study will likely take a year or two, but he has no idea when actual construction would begin. The study will determine the best location for the bridge and for a corridor so the ITD could begin purchasing rights of way at some point.

The talk in previous years is that it would be located west of the Perrine Bridge and probably north of the U.S. Highway 93 Highway 30 junction. A price tag of $200 million has been previously mentioned, but how to cover that is not clear. Rigby said federal dollars will require matching funds from the state and county. The concept of a toll bridge is also floating around.

Also Thursday, committee member Dale Riedesel praised the board for funding a curb-and-gutter plus turn-lane project extending eastward one-half mile from Eastland Drive to the city limits. The project will cost about $3.5 million, Rigby said.

Riedesel had asked the City Council on Monday to write a letter to the ITD recommending a turn lane at least out to 3200 East, or Hankins Road. At this time the ITD has no plans for that improvement.

Riedesel also mentioned a study, already funded, for an alternate route to run from the Perrine Bridge to Jackpot, Nev. No one had information Thursday on the cost of the study.

TRIMMING AWAY FIRE DANGER

Students offer wildfire protection to homeowners

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL - Amidst the smell of smoke and chain saws at work, residents along River Road near Buhl got help in protecting their homes from wildfires on Thursday.

Directly behind Marge and Jack Skinner's home is a row of evergreens above a retaining wall. Marge Skinner said they had planned them there to keep rocks from falling down onto the driveway and to provide shade.

"If we had known how to plant properly beforehand, we probably would have decided on different shrubs and plants that wouldn't burn so easy," said Marge Skinner. "The wildfire in the area last year came so close to us that we continually watch for ways to improve our safety."

A team of Student Conservation Association Fire Education Corps members demonstrated ways to reduce risk to homes and make defensible space. The Corps is offering its services to interested homeowners through August. Making a few simple adjustments to a home and the landscaping around it can improve the probability that the structure will survive a wildfire.

A final, buffer may make all the difference. Flammable vegetation and underbrush, if not removed, tend to gather in these spaces around homes. A 30-foot buffer around the perimeter is the guideline for defensible space. Assisting the Corps on Thursday were Buhl Fire Chief Mark Grimes and volunteer firemen, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management.

Buhl volunteers Richard Azevedo and Payson Reese burned weeds and dry grass on the vacant lot next to Fred Kamblich's residence while a forestry team cleared branches and underbrush next to the Skinners' home to make a fire break.

Picnic revelers enjoy prime rib, prizes

TWIN FALLS - A red 2002 Volkswagen Beetle, late summer and high temperatures mean only one thing: Hot August Nite Picnic and Auction.

It was the ninth year for the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce's largest annual fundraiser Thursday. More than 1,000 people filled the southern portion of Twin Falls City Park to partake in freshly cut prime rib, Clear Springs grilled trout and to peruse business-sponsored booths. Oh, and there was the $20,000 turbo-charged beetle that people paid $10 a raffle ticket to win.

"It's a wonderful community kind of event, a great way to spend a summer evening," said Kent Just, the chamber's executive director.

Charm Fields of Buhl, who wasn't present, won the car donated by Con Paulos.

Paulos, who just accepted a position on the chamber board, said he delights in good causes.

"We believe that you should invest in communities that you do business in and give back to those communities," Paulos said. "Being involved is very important."

Candidate apologizes for his remarks

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Republican candidate for the state Senate in the newly created District 23 is backing off remarks he made about his Democratic challenger at a Tuesday rally.

District 23 takes in western Twin Falls County and all of Owyhee County.

Tom Gannon of Buhl had told about 200 Republicans that folks in the mostly rural Owyhee County think Bill Chisholm's ponytail would be more appropriate on a girl or the back of a horse. Gannon also said that if he lost to the well-known environmentalist who has been defeated in a dozen other races, Gannon would be so embarrassed he'd have to leave the state.

"It is probably a remark that would have been better left unsaid," Gannon said Thursday. "I regretted it after I said it."

As for Chisholm, he said, "I was disappointed. I know Tom. We've worked together on some things. I thought we were going to take politics to a higher level. I've had 13 races, and I've never gone to that place."

Gannon said he owes Chisholm an apology.

But the comments have leaders in the Democratic Party wondering if Gannon has the skills to work in the Legislature.

"Mr. Gannon sounds like he wants only white male Republicans that look like him in the Legislature," said House Minority Leader Wendy Jaquet of Ketchum. "If he has such a lack of appreciation for diversity, if I were in that district I would wonder if he could represent me very well."

Senate Minority Leader Clint Stennett, also of Ketchum, said he thinks politics should be about

Experts pick 'top 12' state land sites for wind power

By Lorraine Cavener
Times-News correspondent

BOISE - Wind energy development is the fastest-growing segment of the national energy sector, including here in Idaho.

Now, state energy officials are scrutinizing Idaho public lands to determine their potential for generating taxpayer revenue with wind farms on state lands, said Dick Larsen, public information officer for the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

State energy wind power specialists met Thursday with the Idaho Department of Lands to create a list of the top 12 Idaho endowment lands suitable for wind energy development.

The 12 sites chosen will be selected and evaluated for their wind energy development potential, Larsen said.

From these sites, five will be selected where wind-measuring devices called anemometers will be installed to record actual wind data for one year. The anemometers are installed on towers where they measure and record wind speeds data, a crucial element in determining whether a site has commercial development potential.

Wendell police seek replacement cars

By Gina Mulder Times-News correspondent

WENDELL -- With two of the fleet's four cars barely operable, Police Chief Dave Fisher has been shopping for a couple of replacement cars...

Ford Crown Victorias with about $8,000 in the odometer. "These are fully equipped," Fisher said. "All I would have to do is license them and put a driver in them."

Fisher said there were a couple of financing options available. One would be a two-year lease with two annual payments of roughly $6,600. The lease option would also include a two-year warranty. The second option is to buy the vehicles at a cost of $9,000 for both but without a warranty.

Since city leaders have until October to decide on the method of payment, Councilman Don Bunn suggested the city spend a few dollars having a mechanic check out the engines.

"I think we ought to spend a couple hundred dollars to have them checked out and then decide on the warranty/lease option," Bunn added.

Also Wednesday, city leaders approved a new ordinance changing regular council meeting dates to the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month.

Isaacson said that Tuesday meeting dates fit better with individual council members' schedules and didn't conflict with other organizations' Wednesday meetings.

Council members approved a request from J-U-B Engineering to solicit bids for trenching work on the city's sewer project. Bunn said there was about 3,500 feet of trenching that needed to be done. Bringing in an outside contractor could help facilitate the completion of the project.

Public Works Superintendent Rick Boss said he would send crews to the alley between First and Second streets to repair an irrigation line damaged by city work crews. Wendell residents and contractors reported that when the irrigation water runs through the line, it floods neighboring property.

Filer City Council passes sewer rate hike

By Mickey Brown Times-News correspondent

FILER -- The City Council adopted higher sewer rates this week following a public hearing at which only one person spoke in protest of the hike.

The increase will raise the average residential use of $10 per month to $15.50 for the first 7,000 gallons of water.

The cost to commercial users will increase from $12 to $17.50, and the flat out-of-city residential fee would rise from $15 to $20.50.

Marcy Brodine, manager and co-owner of Country Vu Trailer Park, asked for individual meters to be installed on the park's 28 units.

"If the city is going to charge per unit, each unit should have its own meter," she said. "That way, units that are empty would not be charged."

Country Vu also submitted a letter opposing the sewer increase after just having to pass on a water rate hike. Owners were afraid the increased fees would hurt their business. They felt it could prove to be a hardship on fixed-income tenants and other good customers. It also suggested the city supply the meters and maintenance and take over the park's sewer lift station.

There was some discussion by council members regarding single water meters and multiple-dwelling units. However, no consensus was reached.

The next City Council meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 3 at City Hall.

Carnie culture changes, but they're still family

By Nate Johnson
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Mix the scents of caramel corn, cotton candy and axle grease and you'll have a distinctive aroma.

After 32 years of working carnivals, it's a perfume that makes Earl Witherspoon think of home.

For Mini-Cassia residents the carnival lasts a few days each year during the Cassia County Fair, but for a few, the carnival lasts a lifetime. These old-timers form a great wandering family with relatives in a thousand shows strewn from Sydney, Australia, to Anchorage, Alaska.

The carnival culture has its own living legends, its own code of honor, even its own language. Or at least it used to.

"We used to have our own language," said Phil Parenti, the ride supervisor for Brown Amusements. "Now there's probably only a few old-timers left who can speak carnies."

Carnivals have evolved. Scott Thompson, the games manager or "pit boss," said. Now Thompson's workers give away prizes even to losers. Today the carnivals pay for insurance and workman's compensation. The business is not quite as profitable as it once was, Parenti said.

"It's not like it used to be in the early days, in the late '60s and early '70s," said Witherspoon, one of the "ride jocks" who run and maintain the rides. The carnival used to be a place where runaway addicts and heavily tattooed bikers congregated, he said. Now Brown Amusements, the company operating the carnival at the Cassia County Fair, gives its employees random drug tests and asks employees to wear uniforms covering any body art. Carnivals are better off for the changes, Witherspoon said.

But as the old-timers move out something will be lost, they say. The carnival culture is not as strong as it was. It may no longer be the haven it once was for those who had run out of luck.

Witherspoon ran away from home when he was 15. He could have been just another boy who fell through the cracks, but he found work with Thrill Time Rides in Texas: He says it was the best thing that could have happened to him. A few carnies took him in and taught him how to work as a mechanic, repairing and maintaining the rides. His father came and checked on him, but decided he was all right.

Witherspoon has been working carnivals ever since.

"I enjoy making people happy," he said.

Witherspoon does not worry about the dilution of the carnival culture.

"We still consider ourselves a family," he said.

Everyone calls Paul Branch, who operates a pop-the-balloon booth, "Bum Bum." He is a free agent who jumps from one carnival to another. Some of the old-timers at Brown Amusements are celebrities, known throughout the carnival world, he said.

"There's Micko over there," Branch said, pointing to Mick Angell at the Ferris wheel. "Probably the best wheel man in the nation."

Then there is "Frogman," another living legend, who sometimes runs the Graviron, which says. It may no longer be the glory days, but there are still heroes.

Paul woman must remove animals from property

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT - Arbelia Guiterrez has been paying part of her mortgage payments by raising calves, sometimes housing up to 25 on her 1-acre of pasture land.

The Minidoka County Planning and Zoning Commission decided Thursday she will have to limit the number of cows to four.

Guiterrez was appealing a ruling made by county Planning and Zoning Administrator Paul Aston, who ruled Guiterrez was violating the zoning ordinance by having too many animals on her property.

The property, which is across from Minico High School along the Rupert-Paul highway, is zoned commercial, which allows no animals to be kept on the property, Aston said. However, the county is viewing the property as residential and allowing up to two animals per half-acre according to the old zoning ordinance.

"A commercial zone doesn't allow any livestock. Period," Aston said.

Neighbors filed complaints about odor and flies when county officials investigated, there were too many animals on the property, Aston said.

"There is no remedy short of rezoning," Aston said.

Guiterrez said she has raised calves since February 2001, having up to 25 calves at one time. However, no one complained about the practice until now. No one informed her of the zoning ordinance either, she said, or that she was violating it.

When Guiterrez and her husband bought the property, corals, sheds and pasture land were already in place, she said. They were excited about raising a few animals on their property.

Aston said a complaint was filed in the first year and county officials did talk with someone at the house. Board attorney Alan Goodman said it is a buyer's responsibility to find out what the property is zoned and what is allowed within that zone.

Neighbors to the Guiterrez home said they wanted the family to abide by the laws like anyone else.

Charles Clark, who lives across the road, said the ordinance was made to be adhered to. He hated to see people "thump their noses at the zoning board."

"They were not small," Clark said of the cows on Guiterrez' property. "They were several hundred pounds. They were not calves."

Suspected carjacker shoots self after police stop

WALLACE (AP) - A man suspected of a carjacking in Colorado shot and killed himself Wednesday after he was stopped by police near Wallace, authorities said.

The man and his female companion, being held at gunpoint by Wallace police officer

Art Harris when the man pulled out a gun and shot himself, said Shoshone County Sheriff Chuck Reynolds.

The car stolen in Colorado was spotted Wednesday morning, abandoned along Interstate 90 near milepost 56, Reynolds said. Police received reports of the couple changing clothes before leaving the car and heading into Osburn.

"They made it on foot to milepost 62 near Wallace near the freeway, where they contacted a transient and were trying to hitchhike," Reynolds said.

They were spotted about 12:30 p.m. by Harris, who ordered the pair onto the ground and held them at gunpoint.

"While the man was on the ground, he pulled out a weapon and shot himself," Reynolds said.

The entire incident from initial contact to the shooting took about 30 seconds.

Whitman's short visit upsets some Silver Valley residents

WALLACE (AP) - Local officials may be beaming over this week's tour of Idaho's Silver Valley by Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christine Whitman, but some residents feel shortchanged.

She can say that she visited the area when she drove past it 55 miles per hour," retired school superintendent Robin Stanley said.

He spent four hours preparing a presentation for Whitman and wound up with just 20 seconds to make his case during the former New Jersey governor's whirlwind tour of the Coeur d'Alene Basin on Tuesday.

Stanley was among dozens of residents expressing their dissatisfaction during a townhall meeting U.S. Sen. Michael Crapo held in the aftermath of Whitman's visit.

"We're like an old dog right now that is down, and everybody wants to kick us," said Bill Delbridge, a Wallace grocer who has lived in the area for 38 years.

"The Silver Valley is tired of it," Security concerns and scheduling constraints cut Whitman's tour short, officials said.

"I am very much aware that you're mad," Crapo told the crowd. "We could have had her here for a week and not been able to discuss everything we wanted to talk about."

Immediately after Whitman's 90-minute tour, however, local elected officials declared success after securing an agreement that puts local leaders in charge of the pollution cleanup in the basin.

"I'm very confident that she heard the message and understands the commitment of this community to put into action the absolute best plan possible," Coeur d'Alene Mayor Sandi Bloom said.

Kootenai County Commission Chairman Dick Panabaker said Whitman "has to walk away from here knowing the pulse of the community."

At the townhall meeting, Crapo gave Whitman credit for making the visit to one of the oldest and largest Superfund sites in the country. A final plan for cleanup, estimated to cost $359 million over 20 years, will be released at the end of the month.

response time quicker to homes along the winding roads leading into the canyon, Grimes said.

The Corps has more than 200 college-age volunteers who will spend the summer in Twin Falls and other communities in the region helping homeowners reduce their fire risks.

The volunteers are trained in wildland urban interface education, wildfire ecology and property evaluations.

The teams offer free home evaluations and recommendations based upon these evaluations.

There are 32 teams in 14 states funded by National Fire Plan. The program is supported by many forestry, agriculture and conservation services.

Ten things people can do to protect their homes from wildland fire include:

- Create defensible spaces around their homes
 - Use fire resistant plants when landscaping
 - Use flame-resistant building materials, especially on the roof
 - Regularly remove any pine needles or leaf litter from the roof
 - Cut back tree limbs that overhang their homes
 - Make sure emergency vehicles have access
 - Keep lawn and shrubs watered
 - Trim lower branches of trees to a height of 6 feet or more
 - Ensure there is an adequate water supply ideals, not ponytails.

"I think it was very narrow minded," Stiemend said. "It's Bill's ideas and his leadership that matter."

Gannon had also taken aim at Chisholm's comments about the contentious dairy issues in western Twin Falls County. He predicted the anti-dairy faction would be Chisholm's only following.

Chisholm responded, "Tom has accused me of being a socialist candidate. OK, if there is a single issue, the issue is leadership, and the dairy issue is an example of the ineptitude and the incompetence of the Republican Legislature."

Chisholm also said his work on regulations for large-scale dairies has been done in the county in Twin Falls County but also Owyhee County.

"I've worked with some people from Marsing on dairy legislation," he said. "In Owyhee County, they have over there what I consider to be a very fine lifestyle, and I intend to help them keep it."

Wind

technology that can overlay digital Idaho wind power resource maps with grids outlining state-owned lands, Maps showing power transmission lines, roads and other important wind power development requirements are then added. The result is a ranking of areas of public land with high potential for wind energy development.

Once the wind measurement plan is completed, state land managers would have a comprehensive listing of state-owned lands that could potentially be marketed to commercial wind energy developers as possible wind power development sites. Wind power developers typically pay landowners upward of $4,000 per year per turbine to lease ground on which the wind turbines are situated, Larsen said.

One private wind power developer, enXco, pays between $2,000 to $4,000 per year per turbine, said Dave Luck, who oversees enXco's Idaho wind power development efforts.

While none of the government land sites are in the Magic Valley, enXco has 13 landowners in southern Idaho signed on for potential wind farms, and several are located in Magic Valley.

enXco will be putting up testing equipment, and if the wind paid out, the company would build wind farms on these sites, enXco does not expect that every one of the sites will pass all requirements during the testing and data gathering phase, Luck said.

If they did, all 13 sites - with between 13 and 40 turbines each, using turbines rated at 115 megawatts each - would supply enough energy for 140,000 homes, he said. Experts estimate that an average home uses 9,400 kilowatt-hours per year, he said.

"Of course, Idaho has other electrical loads than homes - irrigation being a big one," Luck said.

Idaho, Jalisco look to chips and beer to strengthen deal

BOISE (AP) - The governors of Idaho and the Mexican state of Jalisco met at the Capitol Thursday to talk about chips and beer.

Semiconductor computer chips, that is, and the Modesto malting plant planned for southern Idaho.

It was Jalisco Gov. Francisco Ramirez's first visit to Idaho. He came with a 21-member delegation of leaders in the foods, plastics, construction, electronics, agro-industrial and produce industries.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne said the visit will strengthen both states' economies through future business opportunities.

"It's very interesting to me the number of similarities between Jalisco and Idaho," Kempthorne said. "We both have agriculture-based economies that expanded to include the technology industry."

Using an interpreter, Ramirez said both states have much to share.

"Our primary objective is to promote agriculture, which is our strongest base," Ramirez said. "And also to expand the high-tech opportunities that Jalisco offers and enjoys in a relationship with HP (Hewlett-Packard). Our third purpose is for us to stay in touch with the Spanish-speaking community here."

Jalisco could provide fresh vegetables for Idaho that cannot be farmed here, Ramirez said. Idaho could share its semiconductor expertise - something that Jalisco is lacking.

Educators warn against further cuts

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Idaho's higher education professionals warned the Board of Education on Thursday that further cuts in state support will undermine future economic development and the ability of skilled workers to get new jobs.

Officials from the colleges and two secondary programs said the $33 million reduction in basic budget support from the state in the current spending year forced them to pare back operations to their core level.

Deeper reductions, like those the board directed an analysis of, will cut into that core, they said, eliminating basic programs, denying technical training to even more people needing new careers and further limiting access to education after high school.

Any further cuts, the Division of Professional Technical Education said, "will be compounded by the fact that difficult economic times have always increased the demand for technical training. Businesses seeking to shore up their ability to survive and workers seeking new job skills will need technical training to get them through the economic downturn."

The board reviewed administrators' analyses of the impact of another 5 percent cut in state support during the next budget year on the colleges, professional technical education, health education programs, public television, the Historical Society and State Library.

In its assessment, the University of Idaho took the directive for the analysis as a signal of "further holdbacks in state funds in this fiscal year and the next."

The last round of cuts prompted a 12 percent increase in college student fees, denial of technical or professional training to about 500 students, layoffs of scores of university faculty and reductions in the available courses for students.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and legislative leaders offered educators what they thought were assurances earlier this summer that there would be no further budget cuts.

That plan was calculated to bridge a gap of $110 million between authorized spending and tax receipts. But the gap is already $123 million and likely to increase by tens of millions of dollars when the administration issues its new revenue estimate in the next few weeks.

Republican lawmakers have declined to publicly discuss tax increase options before the November election, but work has begun on some tax increase options and even Kempthorne opened the door to a possible tax increase several weeks ago when he said he would never rule one out.

College of Southern Idaho officials said more cuts in their state support will mean lost jobs, higher prices for students and the possibility of the school's quality and integrity being undermined.

Polygamist town holds service for crash victims

COLORADO CITY, Ariz. (AP) - Thousands of people from the polygamist border towns of Colorado City, Ariz., and Hildale, Utah, as well as extended family members from across the two states, attended two days of services for four men killed in a plane crash last week.

The sudden loss of four fathers in a community that is suspicious of outsiders and dependent on the company of one another, is uniquely painful, said Marianne Watson, a plural wife from Salt Lake County and cousin who attended the funeral.

"I'm sure it will be difficult," she said Wednesday. "I can certainly empathize with the family and the impact this is going to have on their lives. To lose a father figure is devastating. To lose so many is tragic."

All businesses along Central Street in Colorado City closed Wednesday afternoon as residents paid their last respects to the four men, all of whom were born and lived in Hildale.

The crash Aug. 8 claimed the lives of Gregory Holt, 38, and brothers John O. Barlow, 39; Ronald O. Barlow, 49; and Michael D. Barlow, 44.

"It was a shocking experience having four of our most productive men taken out," said Dan Barlow, mayor of Colorado City and uncle to three of the men.

"Everyone knew them."

Holt was a concrete worker, and the Barlow brothers were involved in several businesses, including trucking, family members told The Salt Lake Tribune.

The relatives said the four men had at least six wives and at least 50 children, the newspaper said.

The four had flown to central Utah to meet with a banker.

Soon after taking off for their return trip, their single-engine plane crashed into the 12,200-foot summit of Delino Peak in the Tushar Mountains. Their bodies were recovered Friday.

Woman hesitates to help sister who betrayed her

DEAR ABBY: I have a huge problem on my hands. Four years ago, my sister was living with my husband and me. I trusted them both, but they betrayed me by having an affair.

DEAR DOUBTS: Level with your best friend. After you do, it will be her decision whether or not you'll participate in the wedding party, feeling as you do. Whatever the outcome, you'll have peace of mind knowing you shared your feelings.

After that, my sister moved miles away and met a man she ended up living with and having a baby girl. The guy turned out to be an abuser. Now she wants to leave him and "come home."

DEAR ABBY: I have been invited to a baby shower for a former co-worker who was an absolute witch when we worked together. In my 22-year career, I have never experienced such disrespect and hatefulness for no apparent reason. Before she left on her pregnan-

Our parents are no longer living, and my sister has no other family to turn to. I don't know if I'll be able to trust them - even though I have forgiven them both and love them with all my heart.

- DOUBTS ABOUT THE GROOM SOMEWHERE IN MINNESOTA

My husband has told me repeatedly that he will never hurt me like that again. He also said if the possibility of my sister living with us is going to stress me out, we shouldn't allow her to stay with us. But if that happens, she and her baby are at risk of remaining under the thumb of that abusive man.

DEAR ABBY: I have been invited to a baby shower for a former co-worker who was an absolute witch when we worked together. In my 22-year career, I have never experienced such disrespect and hatefulness for no apparent reason. Before she left on her pregnan-

Viking's antics led to a sing-song nursery rhyme

Q. Did London Bridge really fall down, as it says in the nursery rhyme?

A. It was pulled down. By the ship's ropes of a Norwegian pirate called King Olaf the Saint. The nursery rhyme alludes to that ancient Viking attack.

It was a popular notion of 100 years ago that men who wore shoes with gum rubber soles were either thieves or detectives. Such shoes were called "felonies," thanks to the thieves, long before they became known as sneakers. The detectives would use them as gumshoes.

Q. How did June come to be the traditional marriage month?

A. In part, because May was when the deep ground thawed. In the northlands, this May was the month of funerals, because bur-

A. Your attitude about them might. White, purple and brown have been categorized by those who purport to know as "tiresome" wall colors.

Feeding their fury

Sun Valley will reconsider 'Taming of the Shrew'

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Taming the shrew.

It is, of course, a foreign concept in today's society.

Ideally, men don't try to tame their wives, anymore. If there's any taming to be done, it's usually at the hands of the wife trying to convert her man to her way of hanging the toilet paper and squeezing the toothpaste.

But wife-taming was very much in vogue in William Shakespeare's play, with a whole genre of wife-tempering plays - many of them atrocious, even brutal.

In Shakespeare's hands, the subject becomes an excuse for merriment - a battle of the sexes that rushes headlong into sound the chimes-true love.

You can see the play through Sept. 1 at the Third Annual Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival. That's when 13 outdoor performances will begin at 6 p.m. in Ketchum's Forest Service Park.

"It's a fun play to watch from start to finish," said Diane Wagner, an Atlanta actress who plays Kate, the shrew. "There's a lot of music, dancing and colorful costumes - it's very festive."

The play is typical Shakespeare with a mishmash of identities. Petruchio, a brash young man from Verona, has come to the Italian town of Padua in search of a wife. As far as he's concerned, it doesn't matter what she's like as long as she's rich.

In the process, he meets up with Lucentio, a university student who has fallen in love with Bianca.

Trouble is, Bianca's father refuses to let anyone court her until he has first married off her older sister Kate, an ill-tempered shrew who seems destined to be an old maid.

Wooed by the handsome dowry that her father is offering, Petruchio leads Kate to the altar kicking and screaming and then sets about trying to tame her.

Meanwhile, Lucentio tries to impress the father with imagined riches in order to gain Bianca's hand. In the process, he finds he may have gotten more than he bargained for.

The play, written in 1596, was conceived in an era of great flux as Shakespeare's cohorts attempted to make the transition to modern times and deal with new notions like Galileo's idea that the Earth was not flat, said Co-Director Peter Wittrock, who teaches voice and speech at the University of California-Los Angeles.

Hence, everything is topsyturvy. Masters and servants masquerade as masters in a nod to status issues of the time. Actors and actresses have created their own masks to help identify them.

The play also addresses the economic and social implications involving marriage, as well as the problem of cantankerous wives who resist their husband's authority.

One of the play's most captivating lines is uttered by Petruchio, played by Wittrock: "Where two raging fires meet together they do

If you go ...

- What: The Shakespeare Company of the Wood River Valley will present "The Taming of Shrew," part of the third annual Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival.
- Where: Forest Service Park, Ketchum.
- When: Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Thursday at 6 p.m. The production continues Aug. 23-26 and Aug. 29-Sept. 1.
- How much: Tickets, which are $18 for adults and $12 for senior citizens, students and children, are available at Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum or by phoning 726-9124. Monday night's show, and the performance of Aug. 26, are "pay-what-you-can."

consume the things that feed their fury."

"It's a great romance, a wonderful relationship that happens between Kate and Petruchio," angry facade."

With the exception of Wagner, Wittrock and Wittrock's two teenage sons Dylan and Finn, all the actors and actresses are local.

Scott Creighton and Dean Cerutti play Petruchio's servants; Larry Kelly plays Kate's father; Jess Gelet, Kate's sister Bianca; Tim Tracey, Lucentio, the young man who falls in love with Bianca, and Tolly Wilson, Hortensio, another of Bianca's suitors. Others include Joe Marshall, J.D. Ryan, Franny Cheston and three youngsters, Chyna Karterman, Alison Rush and Kayla Harrison.

Erica Lynn plays flute, recorder, bells, whistles and a host of other noisemakers.

This is the first time the Shakespeare Company has performed a Shakespeare play in Sun Valley in the setting that Shakespeare intended. The company's first production, "Twelfth Night" was set in a Mardi Gras-like Caribbean setting. Last year's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was set in a Wild West town.

"I just got the feeling that people wanted to see Shakespeare with Renaissance costumes," said Co-Director Kimberly White, who teaches voice and Shakespeare at the University of Washington. "And this play lends itself to that in its reflection of the commedia dell'arte tradition."

Wagner said. "And it's a great journey - about how someone like Kate who seems so different from Petruchio can become comfortable enough to let go of her

Folk diva Shawn Colvin will play Ketchum

The Times-News

KETCHUM - Folk music was dander on a dobro with a busted neck when Shawn Colvin and her musical sisters came upon the pop scene in the late 1980s.

"Her graceful melodies, reflective lyrics and achingly pure soprano led some critics to compare her to her idol, Tom Mitchell," according to "The Rolling Stone Encyclopedia of Rock 'n' Roll." "New folk" as her sound and that of Suzanne Vega, Tracy Chapman and the Indigo Girls was known, proved to be ephemeral, but Colvin helped transform the female singer/songwriter into a staple of rock 'n' roll, making the careers of Melissa Etheridge, Alanis Morissette and Jewel possible.

Born in small-town South Dakota 44 years ago, Colvin taught herself to play her brother's guitar when she was 10. As a teen-ager, she became a rocker and later fronted a country swing band called the Dixie Diesels in Texas. She even did Bruce Springsteen covers for a while.

But in 1983, Colvin moved to New York's Greenwich Village - and the proud heart of folkdom - and slowly earned a regional following on the folk circuit. In 1987, she sang backup to Vega on a single called "Liza," about an abused child. The disc was a huge hit on the rock charts, and Colvin toured with Vega and eventually landed her own record contract with Columbia.

Colvin's debut album, "Steady On," won a folk-category Grammy, and her second album, "Fat City," a growing crossover audience. "I Don't Know Why," a single, became an adult-contemporary hit.

"A Few Small Repairs," an album released in 1996, slowly became a hit over the course of month and the single, "Sunny Came Home," in 1998. "Sunny Came Home" won Grammy Awards for Record of the Year and Song of the Year.

'Pluto Nash' rockets into theaters this weekend

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Reviews are by The Associated Press, Los Angeles Times and Knight Ridder Newspapers:

'The Adventures Of Pluto Nash'

Lunar nightclub owner Eddie Murphy gets in trouble with the mob on the moon. With Randy Quaid, Rosario Dawson, Joe Pantoliano and Jay Mohr. Directed by Ron Underwood.

'Austin Powers in Goldmember'

Ordinarily you would have to go to a kindergarten lavatory to hear bathroom jokes the caliber of those found in 'Austin Powers in Goldmember.' This third installment of the spy spoof conceived by and starring Mike Myers is as unfunny as the first two were giddy goofs. PG-13 (crude humor, sexual jokes)

'Blue Crush'

The story of surfer girls braving fierce Hawaiian waves beautifully, with underwater moments that are so vivid, you'll feel like you're getting sucked into the undertow. Stars Kate Bosworth, Michelle Rodriguez and Sanoa Lake provide the right balance of eye candy and athleticism, and it's hard to resist the feisty, you-go-girl attitude that oozes from every pore of their tanned, toned frames. But then they open their mouths, and it's all about the usual crumb sports movie clichés. It's so MTV-ready, though, it'll appeal to the teens who bought albums by girls with guitars, like Michelle Branch and Avril Lavigne. PG-13 for sexual content, teen prying, language and a fight. 109 minutes.

'Blood Work'

There's a certain pleasure in seeing a thief that's almost a relic of a bygone era. However, the way Clint Eastwood has directed the actors he has chosen makes this film's lack of energy hard to miss. The flip side of classicism is lethargy, and this film, based on Michael Connelly's excellent novel, can be so complacently paced you may want to give it a shot of Red Bull. Eastwood gives the film that shot whenever he can, but it's not often enough. With Jeff Daniels, Anjelica Huston and Wanda DeJesus. (125. R, for violence and language.)

'The Bourne Identity'

Amnesia, one of Hollywood's hoariest devices, spins the plot wheels of 'The Bourne Identity,' a nimble spy thriller adapted from the Robert Ludlum best-seller and starring Matt Damon as the operative with the identity crisis. Directed by Doug Liman, 'The Bourne Identity' has all the necessary components of the genre, and deploys them well. PG-13 (violence, profanity)

'The Country Bears'

Making a feature-length movie about a theme park attraction may not be quite as dumb an idea as it sounds. Still, this live-action Disney flick whose stars wear bear suits and sing like 1970s rock stars is as sluggish, silly and awkward as grizzlies performing 'Swan Lake.' Haley Joel Osmen provides the voice, not the body, to a cub organizing a C-Bears' reunion. 'And Christopher Walken plays yet another evil land developer determined to spoil the fun. Songs by John Hiatt. Directed by Peter Hastings. (128. G.)

'The Emperor's New Clothes'

Ruefully funny historic fantasy that imagines Napoleon did not perish in exile on St. Helena, but instead returned to Paris and lived humbly and happily ever after. Lovely performance by Ian Holm as Bonaparte. 1 hr. 47 PG (language, discreet bathroom and bedroom references)

'Halloween: Resurrection'

More rehash than rebirth, this eighth entry in the popular horror series finds serial slasher Michael Myers stalking a group of college students in a house where his initial murders were committed. It's as stupid as you'd expect, but the movie has surprising shocks and style; these meddling kids are equipped with Webcams so we see what they see. Rated R: gory violence, language, nudity. 1 hour, 25 minutes.

Rosario Dawson, left, and Eddie Murphy star in Castle Rock Entertainment and Village Roadshow's action-comedy 'The Adventures of Pluto Nash.'

Big box office

- Last weekend's top-grossing movies:
1. 'XXX,' Sony.
 2. 'Signs,' Disney.
 3. 'Spy Kids 2: The Island of Lost Dreams,' Disney.
 4. 'Austin Powers in Goldmember,' New Line.
 5. 'Blood Work,' Warner Bros.

'Hey Arnold! The Movie'

As movie adaptations of Nickelodeon cartoons go, 'Hey Arnold! The Movie' is a step up from 'Jimmy Neutron' and two steps down from 'The Rugrats' features. Indifferently-animated (enlarged to film proportions), the art looks more crudely sketched than the crayon-colored rowhouses from the TV episodes) and unaccountably (enlarged to film proportions) the art looks more crudely sketched than the crayon-colored rowhouses from the TV episodes)

'K-19: The Widowmaker'

Kathryn Bigelow's subversive submarine thriller, set in 1961 and based on real-life events, takes the showdown between two Soviet sub captains (Harrison Ford and Liam Neeson) as a microcosm of the Cold War. The film subversively suggests that he who blinks first might be braver than he who strikes first. PG-13 (radiation poisoning)

'Lilo & Stitch'

A light and likable animated feature from the folks at Disney - who have happily jettisoned the stock, Barbie-like heroine of recent films for a different-looking sort of lass. 'Lilo & Stitch' is simple, sweet family fare, and a picture that extols the virtues of comradeship and community in a spunky, spirited fashion. PG (mildly scary sci-fi stuff)

'Martin Lawrence Live: Runteldat'

In the comedian's latest, corrosively funny concert film he sounds off on many topics, with some scabrous views on sex, as a prelude to giving his version of what caused him to start yelling in a Ventura Boulevard intersection in Sherman Oaks in 1996, and his collapse into a coma from heat exhaustion three years later. Lawrence seems wiser without losing his sharp comedic edge. (1:43. R, for strong crude sexual dialogue and pervasive language.)

'The Master of Disguise'

The title sounds like a natural for Dana Carvey, but the film is a thuddingly ponderous and under inspired comedy with Carvey playing the nerdy scion of an ancient Italian family whose art is for disguise have made them formidable crime fighters. 'Disguise the Limit' puts the promos for the picture, but 'Rock Bottom' is more like it. With Jennifer Esposito, Harold Gould, James Bralton and Brent Spiner. (120. PG for mild language and some crude humor.)

'Men in Black 2'

Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith are cool, so much so that cukes want to chill like Tammy Lee and Will. But the real mystery of this sequel to their 1997 blockbuster about the men who police alien activity is how they maintain their cool with such tepid material. With Rosario Dawson and Lara Flynn Boyle. 1 hour 22 minutes PG-13 (sexual references, violence, goody aliens, expletions)

'Minority Report'

Steven Spielberg directs this mostly taut and satisfying sci-fi thriller, about a cop (Tom Cruise) accused of a crime he has yet to commit. Much running around through very cool mid-21st century sets ensues. PG-13 (violence, drugs, icky eye surgery, knotty issues about pre-determination and free will)

'My Big Fat Greek Wedding'

While this autobiographical comedy from Second City veteran Nia Vardalos would like to be the Greek 'Moonstruck,' it never flies that high. Still, its fairytale story about a Greek-American (Vardalos) who makes her crazy family crazy by falling for a WASP Prince Charming (John Corbett) lets Vardalos show off her talent as an actor and an observational comic. Michael Constantine and Lainie Kazan play her parents, loudly, and many lambs are sacrificed in the name of tradition. Rated PG; language. 1 hour, 35 minutes.

'The Powerpuff Girls Movie'

Most days, the Powerpuff Girls could make kasha out of Charlie's Angels. But the day the girls' creator, Craig McCracken, artist of the sharpest retro-modern cartoon around, made a feature-length origins saga about the Powerpuffs was a sad one for the City of Townsville. The movie is half enjoyable goof, half an uncomfortable panorama of urban terrorism that just doesn't sit well after Sept. 11.

'Reign of Fire'

A clunky conflation of 'Mad Max' post-apocalyptic hysteria and medieval dragon hoo-ha, in which squadrons of napalm-spewing dragons terrorize what's left of the world and Matthew McConaughey and Christian Bale argue a lot. Not even unintentionally entertaining, and there's nothing special about the special effects. PG-13 (violence, dragon-generated global destruction, language)

'Road to Perdition'

Tom Hanks and Paul Newman star in Sam Mendes' gravely beautiful period piece about mobsters divided in their loyalties to crime family and nuclear family. Cinematographer Conrad Hall's frozen dreamscapes of 1931 Chicago are haunting, likewise Thomas Newman's evocative score. Finally, one wishes the movie had a little less art and a little more heart. R (violence, profanity)

'Signs'

Writer-director M. Night Shyamalan's great gift is the creation of atmosphere, the conjuring of spooky, unseen menace. When he gets around to doing this here, all is well, but it's a tossup as to whether the film offers enough of a payoff considering how long it takes to get where it's going. There's a strain of quirky, laconic humor here that is unexpected but effective. Less successful is the film's main theme: the power and even the necessity of faith. It's finally a B picture at heart, and what ever heartfelt messages the Bs convey is never what's memorable about them. With Mel Gibson, Joaquin Phoenix, Rory Culkin and Abigail Breslin. (147. PG-13, for some frightening moments.)

'Spy Kids 2'

Following the disarmingly clever and successful 'Spy Kids' with a sequel that's almost as good, Robert Rodriguez is proving himself to be perhaps the most gifted maker of live-action family adventure films around. Though it's longer and more elaborate than it needs to be, 'Island of Lost Dreams' shares its predecessor's smart but relaxed sense of humor, a sophisticated imagination and the ability to be sharp and playful without being malicious. With Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino and Steve Buscemi. (1:40. PG, for action sequences and brief rude humor.)

'Star Wars Episode II'

Three years after 'Star Wars:

Episode 1 - The Phantom Menace' descended in a megastorm of hype - and disappointed all but the most die-hard of lightsabre-wielding devotees - the sequel to the prequel is upon us. George Lucas' digitally shot movie, the fifth installment in his promised 'a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away' sextet, looks incredible. But good luck to the hapless soul who wanders into 'Clones' without being steeped in the lore of 'Phantom Menace' and the original trilogy. PG (violence, sci-fi action, frightening aliens)

'XXX'

A turbocharged Vin Diesel, reunites with 'The Fast and the Furious' director Rob Cohen and stars as an underground thrill seeker recruited by government agent Samuel L. Jackson to use his skills as an undercover operative. Marton Csokas and Asia Argento co-star. (2:04. PG-13 for violence, non-stop action sequences, sensuality, drug content and language.)

S.V. show explores 'Manifest Destiny'

WEDDING

The Times-News

KETCHUM - The romanticized and idealized American landscape paintings of the 19th century and the notion of Manifest Destiny will be the subject of a multidisciplinary show at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts, starting today.

"Manifest Destiny and the Contemporary American Landscape" will explore the reality of America's evolving relationship to the natural world through paintings, contemporary sculpture, photography, drama, music and literature.

Manifest Destiny was a phrase used by American leaders and politicians in the 1840s to explain continental expansion by the United States, and it revitalized a sense of "mission" or national destiny for many Americans.

In addition to lectures and a performance of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" on Sept. 27, the show will include a display of paintings by Albert Bierstadt, Thomas Cole and others in the Magic Valley Symphony tickets go on sale

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Season tickets are now available for the Magic Valley Symphony's upcoming season of "Great Musical Stories."

The season starts in Oct. 13 with a performance by this year's Youth Soloist Audition winners: pianist Nyle Matsuko who will perform the first movement of the Klachaturian "Piano Concerto," clarinetist Natchelle Holloway performing "Concertino for clarinet and orchestra," and mezzo-soprano Jenette Miller, who will sing Mozart's "Exultate, Jubilate."

The Symphony will perform the first movement of Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, "Eroica."

In November, virtuoso pianist Johann Vargas and the Symphony will take on Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor" along with Mozart's "Overture to The Mercy of Titus," and Gianini's Symphony No. 2.

Orchestral masterworks are the highlight of the Feb. 28 concert. The program will feature the Magic Valley Symphony's rendition of Schubert's Symphony No. 8, "Unfinished Symphony;" music from Strauss's ballet "The Firebird" and Smetana's tone poem from Bohemia, "Meadows and Fields."

The Symphony will wrap up the season with its traditional Pops Concert on May 2.

The evening's festivities will include guest conductor Kurt Anderson who will lead the Symphony in music composed by his father, the legendary Leroy Anderson, composer of many pieces made famous by the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. Such standards as "Blue Tango," "A Trumpeter's

Mothers association invites art show entries

The Times-News

SHELLEY - The Idaho Association of American Mothers Inc., will sponsor a statewide art show Oct. 16-23 in the Bingham County Library here.

It's an opportunity for Idaho mothers to share their talents, said Lorayne G. Smith of Twin Falls, District 3 AMI coordinator.

Categories include oil or acrylic, watercolor, mixed-media, pastel, pencil, ink or sculpture. The art work should be chosen around the theme of home and family, but other themes will be acceptable.

If it's impossible for the artists to participate in this show, slides can be sent to be judged.

The only requirement is that participants must be members of the AMI. New members may join for $10.

Entries should be brought to Shelley or Idaho Falls by Oct. 12. Anyone interested can call Rebbie Higham, chairwoman of the show, at (208) 357-3401, or Melodie Lamm, state AMI art chairwoman, at (208) 634-8417.

Winners from this show will be eligible to compete in the 2003 national AMI contest.

ART SHOW

Today through Oct. 10

"Manifest Destiny and the Contemporary American Landscape" part of a multidisciplinary show about the idealized landscape of the 19th century, will be on display Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Ketchum. Admission is free. The Sun Valley Center is located at 191 Fifth St. E.

Through Tuesday

"Spheres & Layers," an art exhibit by Denver-based artist Diana Durig, will be on display at the Magic Valley Arts Council office and gallery today, Monday and Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The gallery is located at 132 Main Ave. S., and admission is free.

Through Aug. 24

A show of the paintings of Huggerman's Archie Teater will be on display at Jean B. King Gallery in the Herrett Center for Arts and Sciences on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls. Through Labor Day, the center will be open from 1-9 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

Through Oct. 20 - Boise

Pacific Northwest painter Lucinda Parker's work will be displayed at the Boise Art Museum. Parker's exhibition will feature 24 paintings and drawings, with several new works. A free opening reception is planned on Aug. 22 from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Boise Art Museum is located downtown in Julia Davis Park. Hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Sundays, noon-5 p.m. Extended Thursday hours: 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults; $3 for seniors (62+) and college students; $1 for children grades 1-12.

Saturday through Oct. 20 - Boise

Forty-five paintings drawn from the Portland Art Museum's collection of American art will be on display at the Boise Art Museum. The exhibition will span 160 years of the American art history, from early portrait painting to American abstraction. BAM's presentation of the exhibition will provide a chronological overview of the history of American art. Boise Art Museum is located in Julia Davis Park. Hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Sundays, noon-5 p.m. Extended Thursday hours: 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults; $3 for seniors (62+) and college students; $1 for children grades 1-12.

Sept. 6-8 - Boise

The 48th annual Art in the Park will be held from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Sept. 6-7 and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sept. 8 in Julia Davis Park. It's the region's largest annual arts and crafts festival, featuring music, food and drink and the work of 67 artists. There's a $2 suggested donation.

Lawmaker's painting will be unveiled at reception

The Times-News

HANSEN - A painting of Rock Creek Station as it would have appeared in 1865, by state Rep. Leon Smith, has been completed at the Rock Creek Station & Stricker Homesite.

A reception is planned for Sunday afternoon from 1-5 p.m. with Smith, a Republican lawmaker and attorney from Twin Falls and sometime painter, and with other artists, whose work will also be on display. Tours of the site and house will be available and refreshments will be served.

There is no charge, but donations will be accepted.

The site depicted in the painting was the center of commercial and transportation in south-central Idaho decades before irrigated agriculture came to the Magic Valley.

The stone, built in 1865, is still standing with large cellars behind it, along with another log building and the 1900 Stricker Home.

'In the Bedroom' hits area video stores this week

The Washington Post

New videos in Twin Falls-area stores this week:

'In the Bedroom'

Matt (Tom Wilkinson) and Ruth Fowler (Sissy Spacek), a middle-aged couple living in a small town in Maine, face a lifetime of bitterness and unresolved rage when they suffer a brutal loss in the family. This psychological drama, which pits New England stoicism against unbearable grief, is a riveting experience. Wilkinson's turn as Matt is stunning in its subtlety, and Spacek may have produced the best performance of her career. Marisa Tomei, who plays Natalie, a working-class single mother caught in this maelstrom of pain, has one of her finest performances, too. Contains obscenity, violence and sexual situations. Rated R.

'Birthday Girl'

In this uninspired comic thriller from writer-director Tom Butterworth, co-writer Jez Butterworth and producer Stephen Butterworth, single bank clerk John Buckingham (Ben Chaplin) responds to the 'From Russia with Love' Web site and gets himself a mail-order Russian bride (Nicole Kidman) named Nadia. But Nadia does not speak English as she claimed. And she has a bigger agenda than just marriage. Kidman undergoes a credible transformation as the Russian Nadia. Chaplin exudes a certain mystery under the surface. And as Nadia's zany cousin, Vincent Cassel and Mathieu Kassovitz are comically edgy. But they're all participating in a movie that promises more than it can actually deliver. Contains obscenity, violence, nudity and sexual content. Rated R.

'Last Orders'

An intentional pun on the final wishes of a dead man (played in flashback by Michael Caine and J.J. Firth) and that last-minute chance for a quick one before the pub closes, this is a lovely little film. It's about drinking, dying and everything in between. In other words, life. But it seems to be mostly about drinking. And what a great cast of British tipplers: Michael Caine, David Hemmings, Tom Courtenay, Helen Mirren, Bob Hoskins and Ray Winstone. They all shine in this drama about a group of friends who gather to scatter their friend's ashes from a seaside pier. The movie's pace is unhurried by Hollywood standards, but it's all the richer in character detail. Contains sexual situations, nudity and some obscenity. Rated R.

'The New Guy'

DJ Qualls is Dizzy Harrison, a nerd who's kicked out of school for breaking a mop. After getting a macho makeover from a jailbird named Luther (Eddie Griffin), Dizzy returns as a tougher, cooler kid. Now he calls himself Gil Harris and he enters a new high school. When he whups the resident cool guys, Gil rapidly becomes his new school's hippest dude. Every bad cliché of every bad high school movie finds a home here. Contains sexual situations, profanity, drug use. Rated PG-13.

'Showtime'

Robert De Niro is Mitch Preston, an L.A. detective who gets into big trouble for shooting at an annoying TV cameraman. He's forced to atone by playing himself in a reality TV show. Eddie Murphy is Trey Scullars, a swaggering cop with acting aspirations who willingly joins him as a telegenic partner. Of course, Mitch hates Trey as much as this dumb TV show. But guess what? They slowly get to like each other. This heavy-handed comedy is supposed to be a spoof on buddy pictures and the media's tacky opportunism, but encourages you to enjoy the very thing it spoofs. Pity Rene Russo, a class act, she's forced into a thankless supporting role as the TV show's ratings-obsessed producer. Contains obscenity, violence and drug content. Rated PG-13.

'Clockstoppers'

Benign but forgettable, the FX-laden sci-fi adventure about a boy (Jesse Bradford) who accidentally gets his hands on a device that appears to stop time is notable chiefly for its reliance on the use of the stereoscopic freeze, a camera trick in which actors and objects seem to cease moving while the hero walks around them. Explained as an innovation that accelerates one's molecular activity to the extent that the rest of the world seems stuck in molasses, the film's wrist watch-like 'hyper-time' gadgets are the film's main attraction, not the brisk direction by Jonathan Frakes, the inoffensive charm of its well-scrubbed cast or premise of the admittedly entertaining, if occasionally inconsistent, script. Contains car-chase violence and unsafe mountain biking. Rated PG.

Pros claim fourth straight Carter Cup

MERIDIAN — The Snake River Chapter PGA Professionals ran away with their fourth consecutive Carter Cup Matches, 44-16, over Idaho Golf Association amateurs Thursday at SpurWing Country Club.

The 28-point triumph is the largest victory for the professionals since 1990 when the pros claimed the Cup by the same margin. It's also the 24th win by the professionals in 33 years of competition.

Poll picks Vandals to finish fifth

NEW ORLEANS — Middle Tennessee hopes to top off another successful season with its first bowl appearance since 1964.

The Blue Raiders' fast rise since joining Division I-A in 1999 continued last year with an 8-3 record and a Sun Belt Conference-best 5-1 mark.

The one loss, though, was to North Texas, which also went 5-1 in conference play and earned the league's berth in the inaugural New Orleans Bowl.

"We've still got a lot of goals, and playing in a bowl is one of them," Blue Raiders coach Andy McCollum said. "But we have no one to blame but ourselves. This

SAN ANTONIO — Jeff Robinson was a senior defensive end at the University of Idaho when he learned in a snap how to make a career out of football.

Forget that Robinson was destined to be a "first-team" All-America that year. The Vandals had lost their deep snapper to graduation, and he was picked to be the new one.

"Coach threw me a ball and said, 'Learn to do this. It'll help you get into the NFL,'" Robinson said.

That was a decade ago, and the 6-foot-4, 264-pound Robinson is still in the league.

Annual Jerome Car Show boasts nearly 400 entries

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Born out of a love for cars and racing, the fourth annual Joe Mama's Jerome Car Show is sure to find a soft spot for car enthusiasts of all types.

Be it the American muscle rods of the 1950s and '60s, the modern day "land rockets" of drag racing, the stylish Ferraris and Vipers, or the old-fashioned carriages of the 1920s, in all, nearly 400 gas, alcohol and nitro-fueled machines will be on display Saturday at the Jerome Wal-Mart parking lot.

The heart and soul of Idaho's "biggest and best car show," is Joe "Mama" Skaug. He says he envisioned the event as a way of putting Jerome on the motor-sports map.

"I love cars. I love racing," he said. "It's an opportunity to bring all of these cars and these folks to Jerome. And it's a chance for a reunion with a lot of neers who I've known for years."

With an anticipated crowd of 8,000, organizers have closed off 200 South Road just north of the store for the overflow of cars and visitors.

"I wanted to attempt to have the best car show in Idaho and apparently we've achieved that," Skaug said. "It was a challenge and both the show car community and the racing community have been very cooperative."

Wal-Mart manager Jeff Hansen said last year's show — the first to be staged at the parking lot — was a rousing success. He said hosting the show is a way for the retail giant to reach out to the local community.

"The car show last year really kicked off a lot of momentum for us. We probably did about 15 percent more business than the prior Saturday," Hansen said.

"It's going to be a pretty big show again. It's a lot of fun and Wal-Mart is pretty good about what's right for the community. (The vice presidents) said they'd never seen anything like it."

Among the crowd favorites on Saturday should be the "world's fastest" custom-built 1957 Chevy of Boisean Dale Harstin.

CHASKA, Minn. — The fourth and final major began as a battle between two Florida neighbors who booted the first three.

When brisk winds finally shooed the storm clouds away from Hazeltine National Golf Club, Jim Furyk and Fred Funk emerged as the early leaders Thursday in the PGA Championship with rounds of 4-under-par 68.

Enormous galleries thracked Masters and U.S. Open champion Tiger Woods and British Open champion Ernie Els, who each managed to hit one tee shot before lightning stopped play for nearly three hours.

There weren't many thrills in the sunshine, with Woods opening at 71 and Els making bogey on the final hole for a 72.

Furyk and Funk slipped by unboiled.

championship.

Funk missed the cut in all three majors, unusual for him since he had taken the weekend off at the majors only twice in his career.

"It's been a good year, and a frustrating year, all in one," said Furyk, who became a father this summer.

For Funk it was worse. He didn't even qualify for the first three majors.

"I knew I was going to get in one of them," he said with a smile.

Little League clears Harlem for World Series

The Associated Press

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — The Harlem Little League team was cleared to play in the World Series on Thursday after providing documents showing that its players met residency requirements.

Little League officials partly blamed the leadership of the New York City team for not submitting the proper documents before the regular season. But the team has since provided paperwork refuting accusations it was ineligible because some players did not live within the league's boundaries.

"These kids weren't recruited from anywhere. They weren't brought in from another district or league. They're homegrown," said Stephen Keener, Little League's president and CEO.

Last summer's Little League World Series also was tainted by scandal when a pitcher from the Bronx, N.Y., Danny Almonte, was discovered to be too old to play.

Almonte's team was forced to forfeit its third-place finish after officials determined he was 14 instead of 12.

This year's World Series is scheduled to begin today. The Harlem team advanced by winning the Mid-Atlantic Regional.

Morris McWilliams, manager of Harlem Little League, said he had "no feeling of bitterness" and they made their decision. "We're ready to play ball."

A protest lodged earlier Thursday by the Lehigh Little League of Bethlehem, Pa., which was defeated by the Harlem team in a qualifying game Tuesday night, was denied, the league said.

Jack Lule, whose son John plays second base for Bethlehem, said players would accept the decision, but he criticized the league for failing to resolve the issue earlier in the season.

"I think Little League needs to get its rules much more organized so these things don't happen," Lule said.

Prior, Sosa help Cubs avoid four-game sweep

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Mark Prior struck out 12 in six innings — including seven in a row — and Sammy Sosa hit a 41st homer as the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 6-4 Thursday and avoided a four-game sweep.

Prior, whose season-high of 13 strikeouts was set Aug. 4 against Colorado, got his first six strikeouts during the streak on missed swings. The seven in a row tied the Cubs record shared by Jamie Moyer and Kerry Wood, and it was three short of Tom Seaver's major league record.

Prior has 129 strikeouts in 100 innings since joining the Cubs earlier this season.

Fred McGriff hit his 475th career home in the sixth against Kirk Saarloos (5-3) of the Hall of Famers Stan Musial and Willie Stargell for 21st on the career list.

Dodgers 1, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Right fielder Shawn Green threw out the potential tying run at home plate to end the game as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Montreal Expos 1-0 Thursday night.

Omar Daal and three relievers combined on a seven-hitter for the Dodgers, who got good news earlier in the day when they activated Kevin Brown from the 15-day disabled list.

Brown, who underwent surgery on his lower back two months ago, warmed up during the eighth and will be used as a reliever for now.

Diamondbacks 7, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Randy Johnson recovered from a one-day illness and gave up only two hits in eight innings, striking out 11, as the Arizona Diamondbacks swept the Cincinnati Reds with a 7-2 victory Thursday night.

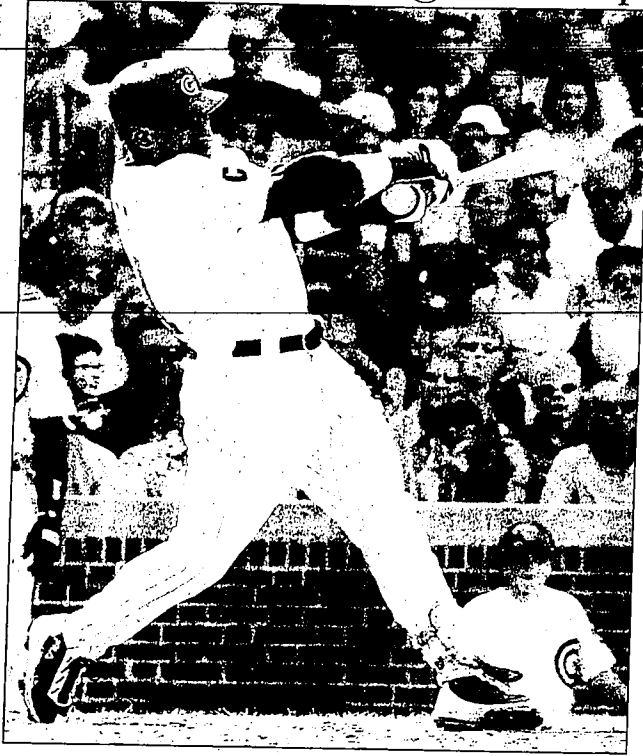

Johnson (18-4) allowed Brandon Larson's solo homer in the second and Steve Casey's infield single as he extended his winning streak to five games. The left-hander has been dominant during that stretch — 41 innings, five runs, 59 strikeouts.

Padres 5, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Tom Lampkin had three hits and two RBIs as San Diego capitalized on three New York errors to extend the Mets' longest home losing streak in 22 years.

The Mets have lost five straight overall and eight in a row at Shea Stadium, falling a season-high four games below .500. It's New York's longest losing streak at home since the Mets dropped eight straight in August 1980 on the way to a 67-95 season.

Bret Tomko (6-8) took advantage of a lineup missing Mike Piazza and Eddie Alfonso to win for the second time in 10 starts. Trevor Hoffman pitched the ninth for his 31st save in 33 chances.

Chicago's Sammy Sosa hits his 41st home run in the eighth inning against the Houston Astros at Wrigley Field Thursday in Chicago.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Eli Marrero hit a tiebreaking single and Tim Lincecum added a three-run double in St. Louis' six-run ninth inning as the Cardinals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-5 Thursday night for their season-high sixth straight win.

Four of the runs were unearned because of third baseman Aramis Ramirez's error leading off the inning. The Cardinals extended their lead in the NL Central to four games over Houston by sweeping a four-game series in Pittsburgh for the first time since Aug. 12-15, 1971. The Pirates have lost six straight, matching their season worst.

Phillies 5, Brewers 0

PHILADELPHIA — Joe Roa scattered four singles over a career-high seven innings for his first win in more than five years as the Philadelphia Phillies completed a three-game sweep of the Milwaukee Brewers with a 5-0 victory Thursday night.

Bobby Abreu and Jeremy Giambi each hit a two-run homer in the first inning for the Phillies, who have won four straight. The Brewers scored just two runs in the series — one in 25 innings against Phillies starters.

American League

Yankees 7, Royals 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Raul Mondesi hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning and Bernie Williams went 5-for-5 as the New York Yankees rallied for a 7-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Thursday night to complete a three-game sweep.

Jorge Posada added an RBI single for the Yankees, who matched last year's total by winning for the 17th time in their last at-bat and moved a season-high 31 games over .500. Mike Stanton (6-1) got the win and Mariano Rivera earned the his 27th save.

Devil Rays 4, Indians 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Andy Sheets hit a game-ending, three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to lead Tampa Bay past Cleveland. After Karim Garcia's two-run homer gave the Indians a 3-1 lead in the top of the ninth, the Devil Rays rallied to win it in the bottom half.

Aubrey Huff and Steve Cox had consecutive one-out singles against Mark Wohlers (2-3). One out later, Sheets hit his fourth homer of the year.

Travis Harper (5-6) got the win.

Orioles 3, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Melvin Mora hit a tiebreaking homer in the eighth inning to lift Jason Johnson and Baltimore past Minnesota.

Chris Singleton also homered for the Orioles, who have won five of six against Minnesota the last two weeks.

Talks flounder; strike date likely Aug. 30

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — After three days of bargaining produced disagreements rather than a deal, baseball players were all but certain to set an Aug. 30 strike date when their executive board reconvenes today.

The board had been ready to set a strike date Monday when it met in Chicago but delayed after management officials suggested a few more days of bargaining without a looming strike date might lead to progress.

But owners then moved little on the key economic issue of a luxury tax on high-payroll teams, leaving the union on track to call for baseball's ninth work stoppage since 1972.

"It wasn't good today. They made another proposal that was fair in principle," said Atlanta's Tom Glavine, the national League player representative. "I think they're basically sitting back waiting for them to give us a serious offer."

Rob Manfred is the owners' top labor lawyer while Donald Fehr is the union's chief negotiator.

After meeting twice Thursday, the sides didn't even bother to schedule a bargaining session for Friday, and people aligned with both management and the union described the sides as far apart.

"I've gone from as optimistic as I can be," said Braves player representative Mike Raminler.

The union's board scheduled a telephone conference call for this morning, and the union was likely to announce the deadline later in the day.

"I got a gut feeling they'll probably set a date tomorrow, because they haven't gotten anywhere the last three days, which to me was somewhat surprising," Houston player representative Gregg Zaun said.

Eighth X Games open to large, unique crowd

PHILADELPHIA — With high-flying motorcycles, skateboarders, and a constant rock music beat, the eighth X Games began with cheers from fans who endured the heat outdoors or sought refuge inside the First Union Center.

"It's a little bit hot, but we've enjoyed it," said one mother taking her children to the skate park to "say hi" to competitors who were resting on the other side of the front rail.

During the morning sessions, parents and kids alike at the skateboard vert practice inside the air conditioned arena. Outside in the 90-plus degree

The crowd for the Moto X events provided the most interesting mix of spectators. Heavily tattooed, bearded biker types; teen-agers with baggy shorts; and families with small children all cheered as Moto X rider Clifford Adoptante revved his motorcycle's engine, spurring on the crowd before his run in the preliminary round.

Woods, Els overwhelm defending champion 'Over his dead body'

By Tim Dahlberg AP Sports writer

CHASKA, Minn. - Playing against Tiger Woods and Ernie Els is tough enough. For David Toms, playing with them in the opening round of the PGA Championship was simply too much.

An elite pairing of major championship winners did more than just draw huge crowds on a stormy day at Hazlettine National Golf Club. It also helped knock Toms out of contention before half the field had begun play.

Looking at times more like a club member than the defending champion, Toms shanked a shot on one hole Thursday and didn't come close to clearing the water with a 5-iron on another. He finished with a fat 5-over-par 77 that kept him needing a decent second round just to break the cut.

"People thought I probably looked like a hack," he said. Watching Toms play pepper with Hazlettine's trees, they might have. Worse yet, he seemed intimidated by playing partners who not only hit it a lot longer but also had the enthusiastic gallery on the side.

"You're the defending champion and you kind of feel like an underdog," Toms said. "I heard it, 1,000 times a hole, 'Go Tiger' or 'Go Ernie.' Maybe once in awhile someone would say 'Go David.'"

The slight Toms, who is 77th on the PGA Tour in driving distance and has to lay up on the 18th hole last year against Phil Mickelson to win the PGA in Atlanta, began the day knowing he would not be able to keep up with two of the game's biggest hitters.

He ended it wondering how players like himself are ever going to compete against the likes of Woods and Els in the future. "It's just can't compete with that week in and week out," Toms said. "Other guys think they can, but we're kidding themselves. For the most part we're second fiddle to these guys."

Woods finished at 1-under and Els finished even. Defending PGA champion David Toms, right, leaves the course where play was suspended for lightning.

A day that went bad had actually begun on a positive note for Toms, who stood on the 10th tee with Woods and Els to receive his introduction as the defending champion.

It proved to be a false start, though, as lightning moved in and play was promptly suspended for nearly three hours after the threesome had all hit their tee shots.

Most of the 45,000 or so fans who had to go back to their cars to wait out the weather delay were back in place when play resumed. And they were eager to cheer on Woods, trying for his third major title of the year, and Els, the British Open champion.

Toms was largely overlooked, until things went so bad that he drew sympathy from the masses crowded 10-deep around the fairways and greens. "He was frustrated with the fact that he could not hit the ball where he wanted to hit it," Woods said. "He made some good putts but missed a few, too, which is not like him."

Even words of encouragement from fans who were now on his side couldn't help by then.

"When you know your limitations like I do you accept it," he said. "But when you're paired with them and a couple of them hit it like that it's deflating at times."

CHASKA, Minn. - It's hard to think of golfers as tough guys.

They play in collared shirts the color of citrus-fruit-faces. Some wear visors, the heavy lifter. The closest thing to occupational hazards are mosquito bites and sunburn.

"The first time my dad took me out to play," Peter Lonard recalled, "he told me, 'It's an old man's sport and it's too expensive. So don't think you're going to be playing it every week.'"

The 35-year-old Australian pro remembered his start in golf with a laugh Thursday - probably because he could finally afford it.

Behind Lonard are a rash of injuries, an 18-month battle with a dangerous, mosquito-borne viral infection and years of insecurity about whether his game would ever be good enough to win the PGA Tour. Ahead of him, he is the chance to challenge for a major championship and put the cap on a rookie season like very few others.

"I'm probably the oldest rookie on Earth, so it's not like I never played before," Lonard said after his opening-round 69 left him a stroke shy of the lead at the PGA Championship.

But as a former club pro, the greatest honor LPGA could have would be winning the PGA in front of the best pros in the world. I never played amateur golf, and everything I've learned I've learned through the PGA of Australia. So it would be a chance to maybe give something back.

Lonard's story is different from your typical American pro who comes from a young age. He didn't pick up the game until he was 12 and even then, he only played once or twice a week until age 16.

Without much instruction, his hands-on dad dropped so precariously that, later, he walked into the family home in Sydney's working-class western suburbs and announced he was going to be a golf pro.

"My dad's response?" Lonard said. "That it would happen over his dead body."

Ted Lonard, who worked for the same insurance company for 45 years, is still reluctant to admit his son made the right career choice. Peter Lonard has wondered about it almost as often.

When Lonard was turning up in the game, golf wasn't big in Australia and most of the talented youngsters of his generation stayed close to home or went to European PGA Tour to prove themselves before returning to the States. That was the way Greg Norman did it, so that was the way Lonard decided to try.

He was successful enough several times - topping the Australian Tour money list - but then he hit a rough patch, something always got in his way. Two years ago, it was a broken wrist. But this was a small setback compared to Lonard's bout with "liver fever."

It began with a mosquito bite the week before the 1992 Australian Masters. At first, the symptoms were mild: aches and pains, but soon they became joints ached and swollen, but doctors kept assuring him it was a cold.

He wasn't properly diagnosed until an outbreak of the disease months later, but in Australia.

Lonard tried playing with anti-inflammatory drugs, but wound up spending all of his time on the couch in his parents' home. Unsolicited remedies poured in by the bucket.

"Hang upside down for a day. Drink a gallon of oil, stuff like that," Lonard said. "The only way to recover is to sit it out. I'm sure it was a nightmare for mom and dad. But I was safe, just as I was out of money, I improved so that I could play a couple holes at a time."

He promised himself he wouldn't trade the stability of that life for a pro's rhapsodic existence again until he was sure he could win.

His first real shot came at the 1997 Australian Masters, where Lonard had finished second five times.

"We go to a playoff and my dad decides he's tired of walking, so he goes to watch the rest on his giant video screen near the clubhouse. Somebody next to him turns around. 'This guy has finished second five times.' Lonard said. "So my dad says, 'Yeah, and this will be his sixth.'"

Instead, Lonard won, and quickly reclaimed his spot on the European and Australian tours. Soon after, he started thinking about playing in the States. Stewart Appleby and a handful of up-and-coming Australians who'd seen Lonard play couldn't believe he hadn't tried it before.

"I kept thinking, 'If I'm not good enough, all of a sudden it's back to square one at 34,'" he said. "I guess I got a bit of my father in me for that sort of stuff."

But the family resemblance stopped there. Lonard breezed through PGA Tour qualifying school and has made the cut in all 17 tournaments he entered this season. His best finish was third at Doral in March, but last month at the British Open he took a big step by proving he could contend for a major.

Only one step remains. "If I win this week," Lonard said, "even my dad might think, 'Not a bad career choice.'"

Sorenstam shares first-round lead at LPGA Compaq Open

HELSINGBORG, Sweden (AP) - Hall of Famer Annika Sorenstam, back home in Sweden for the first time in two years, shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday for a share of the first-round lead at the Compaq Open.

Fellow Swede Sophie Gustafson, also an LPGA regular, matched Sorenstam's score on the Vasator Golf Club in southern Sweden. Johanna Head of England and Becky Morgan of Wales were tied for third at 4-under.

Sorenstam, who missed the cut for the first time in 75 LPGA tournaments in last week's British Open, quickly put the debacle at Turnberry, Scotland behind her.

Sorenstam eagled No. 11, a 450-yard par-5, pitching the ball into the hole from about 9 yards. Then, she birdied the 11th.

Sorenstam, who has won 37 LPGA events, last played in Sweden two years ago when current U.S. Open champion Juli Inkster prevailed at nearby Barseback, the site of next year's Solheim Cup between Europe and the United States.

Funk certainly made the most of it what turned out to be a glorious day in Minnesota. Taking only three putts over his final four holes, the former Maryland golf coach shot into a share of the lead, an unfamiliar position for him.

Whether the lead stands will be determined Friday. A storm delay of nearly three hours kept 39 players from finishing the round.

Greg Norman was at 2 under with three holes to play, while Retief Goosen was at the same score with four holes left.

Phil Mickelson, trying to win his first major in 42 starts, had a miserable time at the turn by missing short putts to make bogy and double bogy. He left the course in darkness after a birdie and was 3-over with three to play.

John Daly barely finished, which was the best thing he could say about his round. He took an 11 on the par-4 16th hole by hitting three balls in the water.

"I tried on every shot," Daly said, and the "Wild Thing" certainly kept trying after that. He had a 33 on his second nine for a

Eagle on final hole vaults Golden into Canadian lead

VAUDREUIL-DORION, Quebec - Kate Golden had eagled in a Sunday-par 67 that gave her one-shot lead Thursday over Mi Hyun Kim of Korea after the first round of the LPGA Canadian Women's Open.

Golden eagled her final hole to vault into the lead. In a five-way tie for third were Kelly Robbins, Hee-Won Han and Gloria Park of Korea, Michelle Redman, and Michelle Ellis.

Rosie Jones, Laurie Rinker-Graham, Dorothy Delasin, Marisa Baena of Colombia, Korea's Jung Yee Lee, and Carolina Matthew of Scotland were at 20. Moira Dunn also were 2 under with three holes to play.

Martinez is upset winner in U.S. Women's Amateur

SCARBOROUGH, N.Y. - Mara Martinez, an 18-year old Venezuelan, upset WCHA champion Viradma Nirapathpongpon 2 up Thursday afternoon to advance to the semifinals of the U.S. Women's Amateur.

In Thursday morning's third-round match at the Sherry Hollow Country Club, Martinez, who will start at Auburn next month, also surprised Angela Jernam, of Columbus, Ga., 1 up.

Martinez, the youngest player remaining in the field, is playing in her first-ever USGA tournament.

Her father, Julio, is her caddy. Jernam was a member of the Curtis Cup team that defeated Great Britain and Ireland earlier this month.

As a result of her victories, Martinez opposes Brandi Jackson, of Belton, S.C., who defeated Vikki Laing, of Scotland, and Mollie Frankhauser, of Columbus, Ohio, on the 20th hole.

Also a semifinalist is Becky Lucidi, of Paway, Calif., who opposes Australian Lindsay Wright.

Everyone could see the black clouds behind them, except for Woods, whose eyes were focused on the 10th fairway and perhaps the American Slam. No one has ever won the three U.S. majors in the same year.

He stiffened and looked back when he heard the horn. "I didn't know what it was for, and David said there was lightning in the area," Woods said. "I looked back and said, 'Yeah, let's get out of here.'"

After a long wait, they warmed up quickly. From a sand-filled divot, Els came up short of the green and then chipped in from 60 feet. He added a 10-foot birdie on the next hole, while Woods hit a half-lop from thick rough to 10 inches for birdie on the par-5 11th and joined Els at 2 under with an 8-foot birdie on No. 12.

That's as low as either of them got.

to keep their opponents running. Fellow driver Sam Harris has been a big help this season, Shirley said.

"They take parts out of their boxes to help you out," Shirley said. "Several guys will get together and bang out whatever needs to be done. I really like that."

Shirley has enjoyed it so much he's become a local advocate for the sport. He wants newcomers to join the Thunder ranks.

"It takes experience, skill and a whole lot of luck," Shirley said. "Luck always helps."

By now, Shirley knows that all, too well.

Shirley will likely move up into Mountain Dew Grand American Modified car next season.

"I don't have to win (the Thunder title)," Shirley said. "But it's important to have goals."

Shirley knows everything will have to come together the next three Saturdays, starting tomorrow, for that to happen.

Season points races heat up near the end

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Nightfall may arrive sooner this time of year, but the season points races are certainly heating up as the end nears at Magic Valley Speedway.

The Thunder Stock race is a tight one as the class enters its final three races beginning Saturday. John Urie leads with 536 points, followed by Mike Buddenhagen at 522 and Jim Shirley with 521.

As longtime fans know, that difference could evaporate if one of the three suffers a crack-up and is unable to finish a race. "This is going to come right down to the wire," Urie said.

For Urie and Buddenhagen, consistency has been the key. Both have done a good job of piling up top five finishes.

"I've known if we stayed in the top five we could win the championship," Urie said. "We've been out of it only twice."

Shirley hasn't been as fortunate due to assorted problems including a nagging electrical short that saps his car's power. But a win on July 20 has Shirley confident he can race up the standings.

While Shirley has been up and down this season, Urie and Buddenhagen have been battling for most of the season.

"We've run neck-and-neck with Mike all year long," Urie said. "It's been really close all year. An mistake any night costs you."

Now, it's going to come down to one of three nights. The class runs the next three weekends, concluding Sept. 7.

Saturday's race also includes the return of the Budweiser Grand National Sportsman, where 1999 champion Dale Miles enjoys a comfortable lead with 666 points. Curt Kaneaster is second with 590 points and Bob Nation has 581 for third place. It will be difficult for Kaneaster and Nation to overtake Miles if he can avoid a night-ending crash.

The evening's session includes the return of the Trailer Race of Destruction, the Middlekauff Queen Bees - a females-only version of the Hornets - and the Randy Adams American Race Truck Series, featuring several local drivers.

Speedway promoter Steve York explained the trailer race event's appeal.

"Are you ever driving down Highway 93 behind a guy with a trailer that always seems to get in your way?" York asked. "You ever want to just bump that guy out of your way? Here's your chance."

"The object is to be the last guy with a trailer still attached. It's utter mayhem. It is strictly for fun."

The speedway hosts the trucks' season-ending championship Sept. 14; one of five Idaho stops on the tour. Last time, Buhl's Dan Peterson broke a two-year dry spell by taking a wire-to-wire win on July 20.

Gates open at 4 p.m. Monday with McDonald's time trials at 6 p.m., and racing at 7:05 p.m.

PEPSI

TWIN FALLS - Racing veterans and fans alike know the best car with the most experienced driver can be undone by plain ol' bad luck.

Magic Valley Speedway Thunder Stock driver Jim Shirley knows that all too well, especially this season.

But to his credit, he and his 1977 Chevrolet Malibu are far from out of this season's overall points race. With his main event win of July 20 - the last time the class raced - the three-year veteran looks primed to make a last-minute charge up the standings.

"Hopefully I'm back on the horse side," Shirley said.

He trails leader John Urie by 15 points, 536-521, and second-place driver Mike Buddenhagen by only one.

He's had his share of bad luck to overcome.

A minor fender bender ended one night. The knock, caused by a wreck in front of him he couldn't avoid, snapped his car's battery strap, eventually grounding out the energy coil.

"It was very frustrating," Shirley said. "Something so simple took me out."

Later this season, an elusive electrical short sapped his car's power, making competitive racing a struggle for three straight weeks.

"If it wasn't for his bad luck he'd be leading," said Urie at 62, one of the oldest racers at Magic Valley Speedway. "Just three races ago it was a three-way tie."

Mix in three rainouts, including one on Aug. 3, and suddenly, the opportunities for Shirley to get back on top have dwindled. Those hard-luck moments could be the worst of all for Shirley, who gets emotionally keyed up for the competition.

"It's devastating to me," Shirley said of the disappointment. "It's a real tough night for me."

The July 20 victory has Shirley optimistic about his chances.

Urie expects Shirley to challenge for the title as the season winds down.

"If it was a money bet, I'd bet on Shirley because of his experience," Urie said. "He's more focused on the win. Mike (Buddenhagen) is a good driver, but I'd give Shirley the edge on his experience."

It's that experience, including a runner-up finish in the overall Thunder Stock standings last year, and the experiences he's had at the track, that made him a fan in 1983 and a driver now.

Bobby Labonte looks to turn season around

By Keith Parsons
Associated Press Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. - Bobby Labonte has gotten over the shock of performing poorly. Now, he'd just like to get back to the front.

Heading into Sunday's Pepsi 400 at Michigan International Speedway, the 2000 Winston Cup champion is mired in 18th place in the standings, 660 points behind leader Sterling Marlin. Labonte has just one victory and three top fives, on pace for his worst season since 1994.

To make matters worse, Joe Gibbs Racing teammate Tony Stewart still has a shot at the title, sitting fourth just 104 points back.

"It's definitely frustrating to know all of this happened just two years after we won the championship," Labonte said. "We just haven't been doing things as well as we need to."

The quickness of his slide from the top is even more surprising.

In his championship year, Labonte won four races and finished in the top five 19 times in 34 starts. He also finished every race, completing all but nine laps. Last season, the number of victories fell to two, but he managed a sixth-place finish in the standings. He admits part of his problem is the outdated body style of the Pontiac he drives. Developed before the 1996 season, the car hasn't been altered dramatically and has fallen behind the new Dodges, Fords and Chevies.

"I guess I would say the Pontiac is not the most efficient car," Labonte said. "It's a good race car, but the Dodge and Ford have more downforce and make less drag, and we're kind of restricted on what we can do by our body style."

To combat this, the team announced a switch to Chevrolet for 2003, and Labonte and Stewart will use Monte Carlos in some events later this year.

Even without a Chevrolet, Labonte is looking forward to 2003. He's won three times at the track, including a sweep of the two races in 1995. And NASCAR announced a rule change for this race only which will allow Pontiac teams to bump their front air dams out an extra half-inch.

"Theoretically, this should allow for more front downforce and better balanced car," Labonte said. "I'm really not sure what to expect," Labonte said. "I would love to say that's what we needed, but I know we were asking for a lot more than we received. I guess we'll take what we can get and make the best of it."

Qwest stock soars on talk of directory unit sale

Qwest's stock jumped by 35 percent Wednesday as investors anticipated an announcement today of a pivotal sale of the company's QwestDex directory unit. The long-awaited sale of QwestDex could bring the Denver telecommunications company enough money to pay down its hefty $26 billion debt load and skirt bankruptcy court. "The market has been waiting for an announcement of a sale of Dex for months," said Cory Jackson, a telecom-debt analyst with U.S. Bancorp Piper Jaffray. "Any positive information about a sale would be a boost to Qwest in the capital markets."

Qwest's battered stock finished Wednesday at $15.00, up 39 cents in trading of 20.5 million shares. Despite investors' anticipation on Wednesday, sources indicated an announcement was not a certainty. A Qwest spokesman declined to comment on the progress of the QwestDex sale. Analysts have said Qwest needs to gain at least $6 billion from a QwestDex sale. QwestDex publishes phone directories in 14 states. Qwest has sought bids for QwestDex from numerous buyers. According to sources within Qwest and union leaders representing QwestDex workers, Qwest seems to have chosen a bid for the entirety of QwestDex from an investment group led by The Carlyle Group.

Fed policy-makers feel optimistic about recovery

WASHINGTON - Federal Reserve policy-makers expressed optimism about the economy's recovery two months ago despite the accounting scandals that have eroded public confidence, according to minutes of the June meeting released Thursday. Although Americans' confidence "had been shaken by revelations of accounting irregularities, the economy had continued to expand and the prospects for a significant acceleration in the recovery, the minutes said. At that meeting, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and colleagues on the Federal Open Market Committee colleagues decided to hold interest rates steady. "Members saw favorable prospects for a significant acceleration in the recovery, the minutes said. Still, looking ahead, the "timing and the strength of an upturn in the expansion remained subject to considerable uncertainty," the minutes said. Some members said they expected to see "firmer indications of a strengthening recovery" by the June meeting.

By the Fed's following meeting, which took place on Tuesday, policy-makers concluded that the stock market turmoil and the business scandals were hampering the economy's recovery. Although they decided to leave rates unchanged again, they opened the door to future cuts. Compiled from staff and wire reports

Mortgage rates hit record low

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Rates for 30-year mortgages dipped to a new low this week, providing even more fuel for the mortgage refinancing boom. In a nationwide survey released Thursday, Freddie Mac, the mortgage company, reported that the average interest rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage dropped to 6.22 percent, the lowest level in 32 years of record keeping. A year ago, 30-year mortgages averaged 6.92 percent. This week's rate surpassed the previous low of 6.31 percent set last week. And last week's rate had bested the prior low of 6.34 percent reached in late July. Low mortgage rates are feeding a boom in mortgage refinancing. Savings or extra cash coming out of refinancing deals is helping to support consumer spending and offsetting some potentially negative factors, such as the volatile stock market and eroding consumer confidence, economists said. Refinancing activity last week represented 68.8 percent of mortgage loan applications, up from 68.4 percent the previous week, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America reported Wednesday. The average interest rate on 15-year mortgages, a popular option for refinancing, fell to 5.63 percent this week, the lowest level since Freddie Mac began tracking these rates in August 1991. That compared with last week's rate of 5.69 percent. A year ago, 15-year mortgages averaged 6.48 percent. On one-year adjustable-rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 4.99 percent, up slightly from 4.37 percent the previous week. Last year this time, one-year ARMs averaged 5.71 percent.

These rates do not include add-on fees known as points. Thirty-year mortgages and one-year ARMs each carried an average 0.6 point this week, while 15-year mortgages carried an average 0.5 point. Mortgage rates were falling amid growing signs of a sluggish economic recovery and a roller-coaster stock market that has sent investors to the bond market, helping to push long-term rates down.

STILL IN THE FAMILY

Brothers Bob, left, and Randy Harmon help longtime customers Alice and Bob Morgan out with a few tips at picking a good cantaloupe at the Harmon's food store in Sandy, Utah, July 29. When Randy and Bob Harmon were children, they spent time at the family grocery store because it was fun. "Randy would load me in the cart and buzz me around," Bob Harmon said. "As they got older, their dad 'gave them opportunities' to work at the store. They started with part-time tasks like cleaning floors but eventually gained experience in nearly every department, from produce to the bakery. "It was kind of in the blood," Bob Harmon said. "We knew it and enjoyed it as we were growing up." Now Randy, 43, and Bob, 41, are vice presidents of consumer affairs and marketing, respectively, for Harmon's, Your Neighborhood Grocer. But watching them walk the aisles, interacting with customers and each other, you still half expect them to jump in a cart and zip through the store. "He's always been my best friend and vice versa," Randy

Utah grocers celebrate 70 years in business

SALT LAKE CITY - When Randy and Bob Harmon were children, they spent time at the family grocery store because it was fun. "Randy would load me in the cart and buzz me around," Bob Harmon said. "As they got older, their dad 'gave them opportunities' to work at the store. They started with part-time tasks like cleaning floors but eventually gained experience in nearly every department, from produce to the bakery. "It was kind of in the blood," Bob Harmon said. "We knew it and enjoyed it as we were growing up." Now Randy, 43, and Bob, 41, are vice presidents of consumer affairs and marketing, respectively, for Harmon's, Your Neighborhood Grocer. But watching them walk the aisles, interacting with customers and each other, you still half expect them to jump in a cart and zip through the store. "He's always been my best friend and vice versa," Randy Lorie Longaker shops for food as her children, Truman, left, and Abigail play at Harmon's food store July 29 in Sandy, Utah.

Harmon said. "Get us both together, and we have a lot of fun." The Harmon brothers try to convey that mixture of family and fun in the television ads they have starred in for the past four years - Bob said they "couldn't afford real talent" - and believe it is one reason the Utah-based grocery store chain has survived industry consolidation and economic downturns to celebrate its 70th birthday this month. Please see GROCERS, Page E2

The formula has worked for Lorie Longaker of Sandy. Shopping in the Midvale Harmon's last week, she said she likes the store's meat department and its overall selection. But she also appreciates little things like family handing out balloons to her children to keep them happy. "I like the layout, and I like how friendly everyone is," Longaker said. Randy and Bob Harmon say promoting a company culture of quality, good prices and customer service was important to their grandparents, Jake and Irene Harmon, when they started The Market Spot fruit stand in 1932. Their store grew in popularity, and Randy Harmon said his grandfather started adding products as customers asked for items in addition to the family-grown produce. The couple purchased property in Granger in 1945 and built a new store. In 1971, Harmon's went to the "superstore" concept, offering a courtesy booth, hardware department, pharmacy. Industrial production rises; jobless claims move higher

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Manufacturers shifted into a lower gear in July and more Americans filed new applications for jobless benefits last week as companies and workers felt the strain of the struggling economic recovery. Factory production nudged up by only 0.1 percent in July, compared with the 0.6 percent increase from the previous month, the Federal Reserve reported Thursday. For the entire industrial sector - which includes factories, mines and utilities - output rose by 0.2 percent in July, compared with June's 0.7 percent increase. The Labor Department reported that new claims for unemployment insurance rose last week by a seasonally adjusted 6,000 to 388,000, a level associated with a sluggish job market. The reports "suggest that the economic train is still moving, but on the slower freight track," said Tim O'Neill, chief economist at the Bank of Montreal. He and other analysts believe the recovery is hitting a temporary rough patch related to the accounting scandals that have shaken Americans' confidence in companies, the roller-coaster

CEO's statements may be reassuring to investors

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Rattled investors may have gotten an infusion of confidence from the torrent of CEOs swearing to the accuracy of their companies' recent financial reports. After waiting until the last minute, scores of major corporations rushed to comply Wednesday with a new government order requiring executives to attest in writing to the veracity of the reports. Investors appeared unfazed as several big companies restated their finances. The unprecedented requirement was designed to restore confidence in corporate America that was hurt by the accounting scandals at Enron Corp., WorldCom Inc., Adelphi Communications Corp. and many other big companies, and the downfall of the Arthur Andersen LLP accounting firm. But William Leitch, an attorney who has sued several companies embroiled in accounting failures on behalf of shareholders, sounded a note of caution. "There's so much wiggle room in cy, full- and self-service meat department, bakery, post office, dry cleaner, produce department, sporting goods and a full line of groceries. Since then, some stores have added fuel stops and one-hour photo developing.

When Jake Harmon died in 1976, he passed the business on to his sons, Terry, and Terry's wife, Doreen.

Now Jake and Irene Harmon's grandsons are helping run the business, along with their wives, some of their children and a trusted support staff that they say is "like family."

"We're both a little more artistic than being very detail-oriented," Bob Harmon said. "That's why we have good people to help us."

He said the chain is growing by about one store a year - the 11th September will open in Draper in southern Utah. "It amazes me when some of these (chains) grow by 30 or 40 stores," he said.

One store just tears us up ... but we can do it a year," Randy Harmon said.

Harmons has no immediate plans to expand to other states, Bob Harmon said rather, its managers are focusing on thriving in the challenging Utah market.

"When you're a little bit smaller, you can move a little bit quicker," he said, adding that he is glad the company is not beholden to shareholders or the whims of a volatile stock market.

ally safety of Sears employees" because workers at the plant might do them physical harm.

"Many of the tools were not located during the audit," according to the suit. "The tools were a scrap, Emerson conspired with a letter dealer to buy back the tools that Sears had hired the company to destroy, the suit alleges.

One unique aspect of Harmon's is that its owners have chosen not to join Allergens, Smith's and other grocery chains in requiring shoppers to carry a card from Smith's or Kroger purchased on from years or decades prior to the generation to generation.

Jay Dumas of Midvale fits in the former category. He said he has been a Harmon's customer since the beginning, and he likes going to a family-owned business.

"They have good stuff, and as far as I'm concerned, they're cheaper than Albertsons and Safeway," he said. "I've never been in a place where one of the (Harmon family members) has been there."

They didn't come and see me. They're very sociable," Bob and Alice Morgan have been Harmon's customers for about 20 years.

"It's clean, and we can always find what we want," Alice Morgan said. "It's friendly ... It's just a nice store."

Those are the kinds of comments Bob and Randy Harmon love to hear. After all, talking to customers is a big part of what makes work fun, and they hug their children and children's children and will pick up on that.

"You really have to have a passion for any business," Bob Harmon said. "We have generations that are actually looking forward to getting in the business. We'd love them to pursue it, but we'd also love them to pursue what they want."

If their children do decide to follow in the family footsteps, the Harmon brothers said, there is no reason the company can't survive for at least another 70 years.

Not that Randy and Bob plan to leave any time soon. "As long as we can be successful, we want to be in this game," Randy Harmon said. "It's a hard game, it's a competitive game, but it's fun."

The aisles in a grocery store are wide, after all, and they may want to take one of those carts for a spin.

Sears spokeswoman Jan Drummond says Hoffman Estates-based retailer investigated the situation in 1998 but decided to go forward with the suit now because of new information that "came to our attention."

She declined to provide details about the source of that information.

The Dow closed up 74.83, or 0.9 percent, at 8,518.14, for a two-day advance of 335.75. It was the average's highest close since July 9, when the Dow stood at 9,096.09.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index advanced 10.63, or 1.2 percent, to 930.25, while the Nasdaq composite index gained 10.71, or 0.8 percent, to 1,345.01.

The advance came on a day after a sizable rally on news that most of the nation's largest companies had complied with the Securities and Exchange Commission deadline to certify their financial statements.

Investors appeared reassured by the relative ease of the process, but analysts were hesitant to ascribe too much to the market's two-day winning streak. They said that although investor sentiment has improved from a few months ago when it seemed like there was a new corporate scandal every day, market conditions remain fragile.

"There is still a very reasonable negative case to be made against equities starting with valuation, continuing on to the risk of a prolonged period of economic softness and the risk that we may even be heading into a deflationary period of time that's typi-

Dow has best close in five weeks

NEW YORK (AP) - A late surge of buying lifted Wall Street to its second straight winning session Thursday, despite more disappointing economic news and profit-taking following the market's huge rally. The Dow Jones industrials had their best close in five weeks.

The gains came gradually, however, and only solidified in the final hour of trading. Analysts said investors still wary after two years of bear markets, remained hesitant about making many big moves.

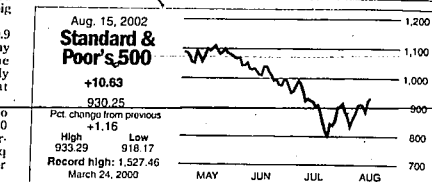

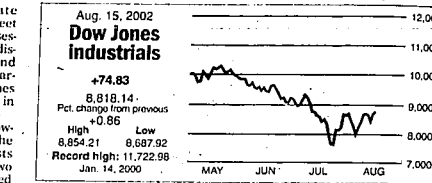

The Dow closed up 74.83, or 0.9 percent, at 8,518.14, for a two-day advance of 335.75. It was the average's highest close since July 9, when the Dow stood at 9,096.09.

ally corrosive to profits," said Charles G. Crane, strategist for Victory S&P Capital Management.

Indeed, Labor Department reported Thursday new claims for jobless benefits rose last week by a seasonally adjusted 6,000 to 388,000, a bigger-than-expected gain. Economists expect the jobless rate to rise higher later this year as cautious employers put off new hires.

A Federal Reserve study found that the nation's industrial sector lagged in activity, with production increasing by 0.2 percent, a slowdown from the brisk 0.7 percent increase posted in June. And a separate regional survey from the Philadelphia Federal Reserve showed a drop-off in spending and manufacturing activity.

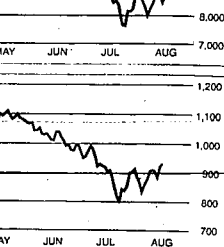

"There's little doubt that the economy weakens," said Barry Hyman, chief investment strategist at Ehrenkrantz King Nussbaum. "The only unknown is if this is going to turn into a double-dip recession. There's no answer to that yet."

Still, investors felt confident enough about the market's prospects to do some selective buying.

In Thursday's trading, Target advanced $2.93, or 9.1 percent, to $35.10 on a 27 percent increase in third-quarter earnings. Nordstrom surged $2.18, or 11.8 percent, to $20.62 on a better-than-expected quarterly report.

Broadcom Communications was also higher, climbing 91 cents to $15.96, after reporting growth in quarterly profits and sales and expressing confidence about the current quarter.
