Family of Trade Center victim starts new life in Idaho

By Karen Bossick Times News correspondent

KETCHUM – Laurie Murach will spend the first anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks at her new home in Ketchum – thousands of miles from the New York life that once made her so happy.

While others attend memorial services in New York City, she and her young daughters plan to go on a hike through the woods. Somewhere along the way, they'll stop to bury something – perhaps a tiny knapsack full of "letters to Daddy."

a tiry knapsack full of "letters to Daddy."

But her heart and mind will be at the eight-story-deep crater where her husband died a year ago in the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center.

"We just couldn't go, You think of the prospects of repeat attacks and ... we'-just couldn't go," Murch said.

Her husband, Robert Murch, 45, worked on the 101st floor of the North Tower. He was among 651 of 1,025 Cantor Fitzgerald employees killed when a hijacked plane slammed into their offices.

Laurie and the girls had traveled often to the World Trade Center before its collapse. They'd ride the ferry from Hoboken, Laure Murach was glued to the TV in the days following Sept. 11. On today's anniversary, she said, she might watch a little of the memorial services. But she and daughters Madison, left, and Hayley plan to mark the death of their husband and father with a hike in the woods near Sun Valley.

Lawmakers bristle at Iraq attack pressure

WASHINGTON — As President Bush leans on Congress to authorize action against Iraq in a mater of weeks, many leading lawmakers — including some members of his own, party — are, bridling at the pressure and warning that considerably more groundwork needs to be laid before they are prepared to vote on the White House request. "There is not consensus on many critical questions" about the use of force in Iraq, Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del, and Sen. Richard G. A year ago on the knall behind the White House, where the Washington Monument thrusts itself into the sky, the flags extended straight out sideways in a stiff breeze. Falls County Fair on Pal Day. It was true the Twin Falls County Fair management group had made some much-needed improvements. I also think they did a very good job with the fair's promotions this year. The real problem is that, in their push to make as much money as they possibly can, they are forgetting why the fair is there in the Iirst place – to be affordable enough for all families to attend.

If the property is to be farmed, and products sold in competition with private enterprise, it should be done on a competitive bid type operation. The state of Idaho, we believe, has mad of done on the state of Idaho, we believe, has mad of the state of Idaho, we believe, has mad of the state of Idaho property. We have no problem with the McFaddens being good farmers, but they, too, are wroing when they operate state of Idaho property under these terms.

The attorney general should advise the governor and the parks department of their malfunction of error in this agreement and corrections should be made to rectify and remedy this operation as soon as possible.

I own a local business. I asked many of my customers if they were going to the fair. Many of them said no, they could not afford the $100 or more it would cost the average family of four to go for a day of furf at the fair. I have a family of six and, even when we try to watch what we spend, it always comes to around $140. And yes, we try feeding the kids before we go to the fair and other tricks that just never seem to tricks that just never seem to work. This year, we chose Pal Day.

It was supposed to be the cheapest family day of the week. We paid our admission and told the person collecting the money we were there for Pal Day; no response. We then went up to the first ticket booth we saw and said we were there for Pal Day. They charged us $10 each, costing $50. Waiting to go on a ride, we were told we had to go to the lost children's booth to get the "buy one get one free." Our hearts sank; already ripped off $30 and we hadn't even played any carnival or fair sames.

Socond, as the one-year anniversary of the tragic events surrounding 9-11 fast approaches, our desire to put this behind us may be happening too quickly. Our military and diplomatic successes in Afghanistan not withstanding, this war hasn't even-really begun yet. Yet we are preparing for a Hollywood light and sound show in remembrance of 9-11 that will be worthy of an Academy Award.

We certainly should not yet be giving the world the impression that we now consider 9-11 to be merely a historical footnote. Perhaps this is why the Bush administration is spending so much time waving the red cape of slightly velled threats in front Saddam Hussein. Not so much to Saddam Hussein, Not so much to get Saddam to charge forward and die, but to remind us that the world is still a dangerous place, with or without Osama bin Laden in it.

As a veteran of America's new kind of war, where the enemy is more of an idea than an army, I can absolutely assure you that—the next Geama bin Laden will beform in the windshield of the future and not in the rearriew mirror of the past. We cannot afford to become less diligent nor allow America's enemies to think that we have let our guard down. This is precisely what they will be waiting for.

The committee reconvened after Jerome County commissioners asked the committee to consider reworking pieces of the proposal. Commissioners John Elorrieta and Veronica Lierman said they could not support a set-back restricting all development on private property within 100 feet of the canyon rim.

But the five advisory commit-tee members at Tuesday's meei-ing decided not to reconside the the setback adopted by the group – 16 members at its full size – after nearly two years of discussion.

Scott Bybee, city engineer reported this week to the council on the changes made. The most significant change will be the filling in of the old basements below Main Street.

Main Street.
Years ago, the stores along Main Street had large basements for storage of coal and fuel. The basements are muder the street in some places and now have to be filled before the streets and side-walks can be remodeled, according to the project plans.
Department of Commerce grant money will pay for the jobs, which will soon go out for bid, Bybee said.

RICHFIELD — The City Council took on action this week following a resident's request to open an alley.

The alley had never been open to traffic. Opening the alley would give Trevor Ward vehicle access to his back yard, where he plans to build a shop someday.

There were many comments from the audience concerning this request. Trees, shed, ditiches and power poles would probably have to be moved to clear the alley. Some neighbors were concerned it might make a dark place for hiding and become unsightly if weeds take over. Ward said the proposed shop would be built in voy ears.

A day of remembrance.

You are invited to attend a community service of remembrance September 11, 2002 at the Jerome South Park at 6:00 p.m.

It was a day of heartbreak...and of heroes. It was a day that tested our faith... and strengthened our unity. It was a day unlike any other. This September 11, we will raise our flag to half-mast and burn a candle in remembrance of the day that changed us all as a nation. • State insurance – The council accepted the new Idaho Counties Risk Management Program insurance policy at a cost of $8,230.

ICRMP is the state insurance fund. Patricia Baker of Baker Insurance discussed the new policy with the city. New exclusions to the policy are terrorism and mold and fungus.

• New library – Patrick Riley, contractor, reported on the progress of the new city library. The building is framed and the current furnace would probably not be large enough to heat the building efficiently.

The council approved $2,000 or a propane forced-sir furnace and ductwork. He also said the shelving from the old library was mismatched and needed to be replaced. The council approved $6,000 for new shelving.

Police report – A sheriff's deputy reported the department had spent 205 hours in Richfield in the last month.

The deputy reported on the new state law on abandoned cars. If anyone abandons his or her car and the city pays to have it towed, the cost will be $300 plus the towing bill. If the person does not pay this, his or her license will be revoked.

Bank closing – A discussion was held about Richfield's bank closing. City clerk LouAnn Swainston is researching alternative locations to deposit the city's money.

Jabil Circuit will shut down Idaho manufacturing plant

MERIDIAN (AP) – Jabil Circuit Inc. will lay off 500 workers by the end of the year and close its southwestern Idaho manufacturing plant, company officials confirmed on Tuesday. A company spokeswoman said demand for Jabil's telecommunications and networking products has dwindled. Jabil, which employs 17,000 worldwide, targeted the Meridian plant for closure because of performance with the company of the compa issues.

"The three things that we considered were its historical performance, its manufacturing capabilities and its organizational depth," Lisa Allison said from the company's headquarters in St. Petersburg, Fla.
Most of the jobs affected are in manufacturing, Allison said, though some engineering and management jobs asso will or climinated. Allison declined to estimate the average wage of the manufac-turing jobs to be cut. Statewide, the average wage for line produc-tion of electronics products is about $10 an hour, according to the state Department of Labor. Jabip lants to close the plant by December. #### Dairies show how to handle odor

HEYBURN - Twenty new dairies in Mini-Cassia would bring money to the counties, but do residents of the two counties really, want 55,000 more cows?

If every dairy were as clean as the Whitesides and Midway dairies, residents might embrace the idea.

"The environmentalist community has done the dairy industry a huge favor," Brent Whitesides said.

huge favor," Brent Whitesldes said.
Environmental protesters have forced dairy owners to clean up their act, he said. Dairies have to pay more for odor control, but because they must all pay this price, no dairies are at an economic disadvantage.

Those attending the Mini-Cassia dairy conference Tuesday toured the two dairies to see how new technologies can solve the old

Vanek's August

Burley woman creates luxuriant greenery

URLEY - Audrey Vanek began planting her city lotsized garden in 1957, and still growing today - 45 years later.

"When we built this house, the yard was nothing but dir," Vanek said." A friend came over with a start in a little bag, it was from her deep purple illac that I had admired."

Vanek planted it in her bethe fearce line, never imagining that this spindly off-shoot would become a 20-toot "tree." She kept the number of trunks and main branches to a minimum. This year, she pruned it back sharply because it had nearly taken over her yard.

That is some thing 'Valek' couldn't allow, because that back yard is overflowing with roses, Illies, heliopis and much more. Two elderly blue spruce back up to the fence line.

"They really grow magnificently," she said.
Does she fight powdery mildew?
"Well, I had to spray once this year," she recalled. "There's a little mildew. But if you water early so the plants are dry by sundown, that helps."
She also said her raised beds thry our faster, which helps keep mildew to a minimum. And regular feeding keeps growth even, instead of encouraging sudden spuras. Thumminghots of varket maintains a feeder for them. She also plants flowers that provide their feed – coneflower, scarlet trumpet vine, buddleia. A scarlet trumpet vine, buddleia. ### As autumn approaches, help your plants ease into the 'slow season

There's a lot of growing time left, but it's time to help plants slow down. If the plants in your yard and garden were "out in the wild, they'd be taking all their cues from nature. They would respond to the ups and downs of rainfall, the shortening day length and cooler temperatures. Plants know that it's time to slow down, toughen up and prepare for winter. Let them.

DEAR CATHY: I am having trouble with my raspberries. This year my plants are getting all brown leaves and look like they are dying. I was advised to use Kelthane spray for spider mites. Yee sprayed twice but this doesn't seem to help. I was told to add iron to the soil, then someone told me it was blight. I was told to water them deeply. I pray you have an answer for me.

-FRUITLESS

DEAR FRUITLESS: Rasp berries won't tolerate highly alka-line soil – like ours. Their leaves will look scorched and discolor as a result of iron, magnesium and manganese deficiency.

ar result of fron, magnesium and manganiese deficiency. Raspberries prefer a nice loamy soil, in a sunny spot with a little shade to protect them from our hot afternoons. Raspberries will not put up with wet feet, so if your soil is clay, they'd appreciate it if you could amend the soil with manures and other organic materials to improve the drainage. On the other hand, if your soil is sandy, poor and stony, raspberries need the organic materials to help retain moisture.

Adding organic matter to the soil will lower the pH, but it would be a lot smarter if you had the soil tested first. When you know what the soil needs, you can correct it for a better season field year. Thanks for writing days of winter. They toil for hours in the kitchen making sauces, salsas, relishes and pick. They boil, simmer, puree, freeze and can. Some even dry their tomatoes. Homemade dried tomatoes are a far cry from the chewy, leathery strips found in those pricey jars of "sun-dried" tomatoes. The home-dried tomatoes retain their color and delicacy, while offering concentrated flavor. And you can even do it overnight while you sleep.

The next morning, pack the tomatoes in herb-flecked olive oil and befriegate.

Tomato racines

You can dry all sorts of tomato varieties.

Small tomatoes, like cherry, grape or pear tomatoes, can be dried whole.

Most important, the tomatoes won't have a heavy or watery feel ack the tomatoes in an impeccably clean plastic or glass container. Layer them tightly, but don't crush them.

Place a few sprigs of any fresh herb in between the layers. Use whatever is in the garden or at the market; parlsely, basil, sage, summer savory or thyme. Pour in enough olive oil to cover the tomatoes completely, about 1-1/2 to 2 cups. to 2 cups.

Cover the container, and refrigerate.
The olive oil will congeal around the tomatoes. Don't worry about it. When ready to use some tomatoes, scrape off the congealed oil, or leave the tomatoes in a shallow dish to reach room temperature.
As the tomatoes warm, the oil will reliquely and drip off. Don't throw the oil away! It has a lovely flavor that would be great in sautes or salads.

ANSWER: Adult Western cherry-fruit files emerge about five weeks before cherry harvest. To pipter your cherry tree from them, you must spray at 7 to 10day intervals - depending on the chemical you use - during the editer time period that begins a fout seven days after they energe and ends after harvest.

If you don't spray early plough or frequently enough, required, you will still have worms in your cherries," says Tim Dayis, University of Idaho Extension.

educator. That's because the adults deposit their eggs under the cherry skin. "Once the eggs get in the fruit, you can't control the flies. You have to spray before they lay their eggs."

Because microclimates vary from yard to yard and even within yards, determining the precise time to begin spraying is tricky, he says. To pinpoint the flies arrival and to schedule sprayings next year, hang a trap in the tree that will lure the flying adults. "The trap won't control the flies, but once you see the adults on your traps you'll know it's time to spray."

Food dryers come in variety of types

DEAR JIM: I plan to buy a lot of fruits and vegetables now (lower prices) and preserve them for natural snacks and cooking, I thought about drying them. Do solar dryers work well or are elec-tric ones best?

DEAR PAT: Drying is one of the best methods to preserve foods for snacks or for use in cooking. It is ideal for fruits and vegetables, and when done properly, very little nutritional value is lost. The savings by drying your own food in volume can be substantial, especially when using free solar energy.
Also, if you are trying to live and ear as naturally as possibly, building or buying a solar food dryer makes the most sense. It is a little less convenient than using an electric dryer (often called dehydrator), but solar dryers require no power other than the sun. Both types are equally effect.

there is less mixing of flavors if you are drying different foods. If you are handy with tools and have 550 to invest, consider building a solar-powered food dryer. The design concept is a plywood box with a clear top over a solar collector cheating plate). The purpose of the collector is to create even heating and to-shield the food from the direct sun rays. The plywood box should have screened openings at the bottom and top. The solar heat creates the natural air flow through the dryer. An old storm window works well for the clear top. ### Multi-faceted Finley flashes with curb appeal

A harmonious blend of shapes and textures give the Finley a visually engaging front facade. Bold raised corner quoins accent the fine regularity of the brick veneer, and these two materials are again integrated in the graceful keystone arch that crowns a set of multipaned windows. Rectangular shutters offset the crisp lines of lap siding on one side, and the airy grid of multipaned windows on the other. One column, simple and stately, supports the roof of a covered porch that could be home to an old-fashioned porch swing. Entering, you step into a vaulted entry that leads directly into a spacious vaulted great room. Light spills in through two atrium windows at the rear. The left is actually a door that swings open to access one of two patios or decks.

Can't beat wood decks for the look, but don't knock plastic

QUESTION. My wood deck is 25 years old and has been painted many times. It has deteriorated on much that Lwant to replace-its should I replace it with a good grade of reated wood or the new plastic materials?

ANSWER For the decking or floor of the deck and the railings, an excellent choice is one of the low-maintenance wood composites sold under such brand names as Choice Deck, Timber Tech, Trex and Boardwalk. These products are made of ground-up wood and recycled plastic, pressed into the shape of boards.

Wood-composite decking requires little maintenance except occasional deaning. Paint, stain or even water-repellent scalers are not needed, although paint or stain can be used. Composite will not rot, splinter or split.

They are also free of wood paint or stain can be used. Composites will not rot, splinter or split.

They are also free of wood preservatives, which have become controversial in recent months. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and companies have agreed to phase out wood treated with chromated copper arsenate because the arsenic might pose a health hazard. This wood will no longer be available for residential use by the end of next year.

Composites typically cost about twice as much as CCA-treated wood, but the low maintenance and safety can make it well worth the extra cost.

L'exas executes man found guilty of killings

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) – A man was executed Tuesday for the rape and fatal beating of a 65-year-old woman. Her husband was also killed in the 1992 attack. In a brief final statement, Tony Walker said goodbye to a friend in Switzerland and another in England.

"And to my family," he said, choking back tears, "nothing."
In a written statement released later, Walker said he was sorry for the crime and asked the victim's family for forgiveness. Walker, 36, was high on crack cocaine and armed with pieces of railroad it eabout the size of a baseball bat when he dubbed to

Walker, who was condemned for the woman's death, lived nearby and knew the victims. He confessed to police a couple of days later after his bloody shirt and other items from the crime scene were found in a wooded area, prosecutors said.

At his trail, Walker disputed his confession, testifying other men the rape. Evidence, however, showed Walker was alone.

DNA frees man after 15 years

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) - A man who has spent the past 15 years in prison should be set free because DNA evidence shows he did not rape an 8-year-old girl, Attorney General Mike McGrath said Thesday.

General Mike McGrath said Tuesday, McGrath-joined Yellowstone County Attorney Dennis Paxinos in asking a District Court judge to vacate the convictions against Jimmy Ray Bromgard, now 33. "Clearly there has been an injustice in this case," said Paxinos, who was not the county prosecutor when Brongard was convicted. "The last thing anyone wants is to keep' a man behind bars when, in fact, held not commit the crime that put him there." McGrath said it is the first case in Montana in which DNA evidence showed a person convicted of a crime was innocent. Bromgard's half-brother, Rodney Bromgard's half-brother, Rodney Bromgard, said news of the request that his brother be set free brought mixed emotions. "There's joy and then there's sadness," he said Tuesday.

Tensions between Zadran and Karzai's allies have been festering for months, sometimes prompting sporadic fighting.

But the clashes underscore the difficulties of the U.S. strategy of trying to forge alliances with Afghan fighters to avoid committing large numbers of U.S. ground troops, whose presence could trigger a backlash similar to that which drove the Soviets from this country in 1989.

Navigating among the factions is complicated by Afghanistan's nuclent tribal feuds, complex ethnic loyalties and unfamiliar codes of conduct and honor.

Afghanis here believe the Americans inadvertently triggered the weekend upsurge in fighting when Lt. Gen. Dan K. McNeill, the commander of U.S. forces in Afghanistan, met Zadran on Sunday.

rumors swept through the region that the Americans had arrested Zadran.

That prompted Gov. Hakim Taniwal's fighters, hoping to take advantage of the situation, to attack Zadran's militiamen in Khost city, the provincial capital. They drove Zadran's fighters from the Customs House, several municipal buildings and one of their main bases. Several of Zadran's fighters were killed.

"Many of my Iriends were killed then. We didn't start the fight. They thought Bacha Khan high. They thought Bacha Khan kis," a Zadrafan fighter, Bahadar Khan, said.

In a makeshift mosque decorated with giant posters of the Muslim holy city of Mecca and verses from the Quran, Zadran's men vowed revenge for the Sunday attack.

"In the next two days there will be a big battle for Khost," Mohammed Amin said Tuesday. "We will fight until they are gone or until Bacha Khan is finished."

In a mud hut at the top Gaday Kandow Pass outside the city, Zadran's fighters talked Tuesday of an impending, allout assault on Khost city.
"We are on all sides. We have them surrounded. But right now, we are in a defensive position." Bahadar Khan said, using a stick to draw a makeshift map in the sand.

In truth, if she had it all to do over again she would prefer not to take the call that has brought her fame and more than two dozen awards for heroism, Jefferson said.

"I was glad to be there for Todd to comfort him and I would do it again if I had to," she said. "But if I had a choice – if I knew this was happening before it actually happened – I would not have wanted to be the one who took the phone call. I would have tried to push it off on someone else. I don't think anyone would want to be in that situation. It was a horrible event."

All 44 people aboard United Flight 93 died in the crash. From the information relayed in 26 Airfone calls from that flight, and from cockpit recordings, investigators think the passengers on board attempted to overwhelm their four hijackers before they could crash it into their intended target. The intended target was the Capitol, according to a recent interview by an Arab television station with alleged planners of the attacks.

The operator was shaken by an urgent report of a hijacking in a call placed aboard United Flight 93, which had left Newark International Airport bound for San Francisco at 843 a.m. Its departure had been delayed by 43 minutes because of heavy air traffic that morning. Following procedure, Jefferson saw to it hat the FBI was notified. She then took over the call from her operator. "She told me later that she was glad I took the call," Jefferson said.

The caller was Todd Beamer, a 32-year-old Oracle software account manager from Cranbury, N.J., who was seated in the rear of the plane. "He told me that he had dilad zero to report his plane was being hijacked and he wanted someone to talk to," she said. At first Beamer was calm. He told her that three (later a fourth was identified) hijackers with knives and wearing red bandans had taken over the plane. He said bne was standing guard in first class with what appeared to be a bomb strapped to his wais.

Study: Many Americans ready to forgive

BOISE - As Americans look back on the year since the East Coast attacks, researchers at Idaho State University say many have not ruled out forgiving the

A poll of 408 randomly selected adults from across the country found that six to rifne months after the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon just over four of every 10 people questioned said they would hold a grudge against the terrorists Changes.

But a slightly higher number said exactly the opposite, and just over one in 10 had not decided either way.

Loren Toussaint, an assistant professor of experimental psychology on the Pocatello campus, oversaw the study. He said that analyzing the responses to those two statements and three others indicated that Americans are much more forgiving toward the terrorists than might have been expected.

"I really expected people to just say no." Toussaint said.

The margin of error was plus or minus 5 percentage points in the study financed by the university's Humanities and Social Sciences Research Committee.

Toussaint and the other researchers said an analysis of the responses to all five statements found 47 percent undecided about forgiving the terrorists. Twenty-one percent would forgive them while 30 percent would not would not.

Health and Welfare has received $8.9 million for anti-bloterrorism measures and the National Guard has received $217,000, state officials said. But while the state may gain federal dollars, Weatherby is concerned about the people's apparent willingness to trade their rights and freedoms for a false sense of security.

The federal government, Weatherby said, is pushing the envelope of civil rights with the detention of American clistens at the U.S. Navy base at Guantianmo Bay, Cuba.

On the state level, the Idaho Legislature earlier this year passed laws exempting some blueprints of state buildings from public disclosure and enhancing penalties for terrorist acts. reported first-quarter profits of #3,082.

Earnings in the quarter ended, July 22 were 35 cents a share, compared to $314,787, or 15 cents a share, in the year-earlier period.

Much of the profit increase came from the sale of company-owned restaurants in Medford, Grants Pass and Roseburg, Ore, to a franchise group for $1.4 million in cash and $349,500 in promissory notes.

Excluding the sale, Elmer's earned $379,072 or 17 cents a share. Restaurant sales rose 3 percent in the quarter compared to a year ago, the company said.

The Portland-based restaurant chain, with an eatery in Twin Falls, said that without the three restaurants, first-quarter revenue dropped $829,441, to $94 million.

Simplot expects fewer layoffs

HEYBURN - Attrition has shrunk to 184 the number of J.R. Simplot Co. plant workers who will receive pink slips in early November. Simplor's Heyburn potato-processing plant will eliminate one production line on or about Nov. 1 as the first phase of plant shutdown. Closure is scheduled for April 2004. Many soon-to-be-displaced workers moved on to other things before they had to.

"We've had rather dramatic attrition, particularly in the hourly work force, since we announced the planned closure in May," Simplot spokesman Fred Zerza said Tuesday.

Zerza said Tuesday.

In May, the plant employed 605 hourly and 44 salaried workers, he said. More-than-normal attrition had reduced that work force to 467 hourly and 34 salaried employees by Tuesday.

After the first round of layoffs—which could be a few days later than Nov. 1 – Simplot intends to employ 287 hourly and 30 salaried workers to run the three remaining production lines, Zerza said. Those are bigger numbers than the company projected in id-July. At current staff numbers, that ould mean 180 November lay would mean 180 November offs on the hourly side and four the salary side of the operation Simplet expects to operate two production lines until April 2004, The condition of the April 2004 closure. "We're hopeful that it will, but it depends on the customer requirements," Zerza said. Simplet now expects fewer November layoffs at an ancillary part of the Heyburn operation, too.

The food distribution warehouse in Heyburn, which employed 98 hourly and 13 salaried workers in mid.July, has since lost nine hourly and three sularied workers to attrition, Zerza said Tuesday. The warehouse stores food products from a variety of Simplor plants besides Heyburn and is likely to survive the Heyburn plant's closure. But Simplot will reduce the warehouse staff when the Heyburn plant trims its production around Nov. 1.

After Nov. 1, Zerza expects the

Stocks rise despite warning of terror risk

NEW YORK (AP) – Investors worried about terrorism but looking for bargains made for a fractious session Tuesday on Wall Street. The market ultimately managed a respectable gain despite anxiety over the government's warning of possible attacks around the Sept. 11 anniversary.

Although investors were interested in picking up cheaper stocks following two weeks of selling on concerns about earnings, stocks fluctuated throughout the session and trading volume was light.

ing on concerns about earnings, stocks fluctuated throughout the session and trading volume was sight.

The market's indecisiveness was clear as stocks kept reversing direction – falling after the government amounced it was raising the nation's terror alert level to orange, signifying high risk of attacks, and then rising after a House committee said it was referring its investigation of Martha Stewart to the Justice Department.

Department areasonably fragile trading areas with no strong conviction. The challenge ahead is for the market to wade through the anniversary of Sept. 11," said Alan Ackerman, executive vice president of Fahnestock & Co. "The market pist seems to have a mind of its own."

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 83.23, or 1 percent, and of its own."

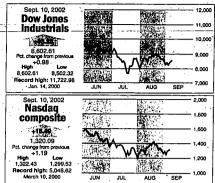

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 83.23, or 1 percent, at 8,602.61, recovering from an earlier loss of 17 points to score a three-day, 318-point advance.

It was the Dow's longest winning streak since Aug. 6-9 when it gained 701.82, recovering from its July 23 low 07,702.34.

The market's broader gauges were also higher. The Nasdaq composite index rose 15,49, or 12 percent, to 15,20,09, for a three-day advance of 69.

The Standard & Poor's 500

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

index advanced 6.62, or 0.7 per-cent, to 909.58, for a three-day gain of 30.

Analysts are wary of reading too much into this week, which is light on economic and earnings news and high on emotion as the nation marks the one-year anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks.

anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks.

"You probably have some hesitation about tomorrow. And, there's the notion that we are going to have a little time out for the next few days as the nation considers what we have been through for the past year," said Kevin Caron, market strategist at Ryan, Beck & Co. LLC.

The Dow stands, 1002.90 points, or 10.4 percent, below $605.51, its close of Sept. 10, 2001. The Masdan is 37.529, or 22.1 percent, below its Sept. 10 level; the S&P, down 182.96, or 16.7 percent.

The market was shut for four days after the attacks, and stocks fell precipitously once trading resumed, hitting their post-Sept. 11 lows on Sept. 21. While the market recovered within a few months, weeks of selling this spring and summer took stocks to four- and flevyear lows.

The Dow is now 366.80 points, or 4.5 percent, above its Sept. 21 low of 8,235.81 but the S&P is 65.22, or 5.8 percent, below its low of 965.8. The Nasdaq is 103.10, or 7.2 percent, below its glow of 1,423.19.

The market was obviously nervous about the posisibility of an attack around the anniversary. News that the government was raising its terror alert to the second-highest level sent prices lower at midday, and while stocks recovered soon after, they fell again as Atorney General John Ashcroft held a news conference to discuss the alert.

Yet prices kicked upward as the House Energy and Commerce Committee said it was turning over information it had gathered in its investigation of Martha Stewart's stock trades to the Justice Department. While analysts downplayed the significance of the market's move, investors have tended to buy in recent months on developments in corporate ethics cases.

Martha Stewart Omnimedia itself climbed $1.30 to $9.05 following the news. And Imclime Systems, the company whose shares Stewart is accused of sell-situed to the state of the self-share that the self-share that the self-share state of the self-share self-

"In my view, Qwest's applications were razor-close to approval Ultimately, the outstanding issues were very narfrow, but nonetheless important," FCC Chairman Michael Powell said in a statement. "I am confident that Qwest, in consultation with the states, Department of Justice and this commission, will expeditiously resolve the outstanding issues that prevented approval."
Other phone companies, including Verizon, SBC and BellSouth, have refiled applications to restart the FCC review

McWilliams, make the mistake of lumping all their college funds into the newly popular, state-sponsored Section 529 accounts. The plans allow tuxpayers of all income levels to make tax-deferred contributions to these accounts, and the money can be withdrawn tax-free if used for qualified higher education expenses.

qualified higher education expenses.
The 529s are a "very solid component of a college savings plan," said McWilliams, "but I feel most (parents) look at them as 'the' plan rather than one of several tools they should investigate." Many 529 plans that invest heavily in stocks have been hard hit. In addition, McWilliams pointed out, and rightly so, some 529s carry significant expenses. So pay close attendion to the fees. "Bottom line," said McWilliams, "if you invest in a 529, seek a total market index fund with no load and the smallest available total expense percentage." His favorite fund family is Vanguard, which administers several states 529 plans.

If you're looking to diversify your college education portfolio, don't overhook U.S. savings bonds and certificates of deposit.

Another option is the Coverdale Savings Account. The Coverdale accounts, formerly known as Education IRAs, allow you to set aside up to $2,000 a year per child if you meet income guidelines. For joint filters, that's $190,000 or less in adjusted gross income, or adjusted gross income of $95,000 or less for single filters. Contribution limits are scaled down if your income is above those levels.

Also, investment advisers recommend that you keep investing regularly in your college savings plan.

"The holdup is the federal agencies stockpile food and equipment for fires and other uses, but they don't stockpile (all the) materials for rehabilitation," Walters said.
Still, Førest Concepts estimates more than $2 billion is spent in North America each year on habitat enhancement and watershed restoration, and $300 million of that is spent on materials which could be made from small-diameter uniber.
Stands of lodgepole does not prompt an environmental backlash like logging oldgrowth forests.
"I think with lodgepole and other small-diameter trees, there likely are enough quantities close to existing roads and near flat terrain to get them out in an ecologically safe way," said John McCarthy of the Idaho Conservation League.

"If somebody can find an economic use for small-diameter trees, more power to them," he said. "They're also putting extra value into it. They're shipping out a product instead of raw logs."

U.S. Sen. Michael Crapo and Rep. Butch Otter have encouraged the Forest Service and Interior Department to support Forest Concept's enterprise. Walters envisions an industrial park with seven or eight small-diameter timber businesses making FlowChecks, furniture and fencing. His goal is creating up to 100 jobs for the former millwork.

100 jobs for the former millworkers.

"What I hear frqm éverybody, from environmentalists to politicians, is this is what has to be done for the health of the forest," he said. "My big hope is they all step up to the plate and say, "Riere's the contracts. See what you can do."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia

The gods themselves throw in-cense."

When North opens one diamond, you must respond, but you are not strong enough to bit week.

The first strong enough to be the clubs, which normally guarantees 10-plus points; therefore, you must respond one spade. North now shows extras and at least 4-5 in the red suits by the reverse to two hearts, which is not encouraging from your perspective. You bid two no-trump, more as the least of all evils than because you think it will work, and are raised to three no-trump by North, who has extra values over what he has shown.

to three no-trump by North, who has extra values over what he has shown.

Your bidding should pay off, but only if you are careful. When West innocently leads a chub, you should pause at trick one, remembering that more contracts fail through faulty play to the first trick than at any other time. On playing the club queen from dummy, you mits allow East to win the first trick when he produces the club king.

Why is that? Well if you take the first trick in clubs and the suit splits 4-1, you have only three tricks in the suit. Later, when you give up a club trick, you have no sure way back to hand. Of course, if the club suit splits 3-2, you have sacrificed an overtrick unnecessarily, but you can afford to invest 30 points if a vulnerable game is at stake, can't you? As soon as you regain the lead, you can overtake the club 10 safely, and you have at least nine tricks in the greatest of comfort.

ANSWER: Double for takeout, When your partner doubles for takeout and your RHO raises his partner's suit, your double is also for takeout. In this sequence you probably do not hold four spades, since you would have bid spades if you had them.
