Simpson says he's not yet convinced of military action

WASHINGTON - Putting his case before Congress, President Bush has gained support from Idaho's delegation for military action against Iraq.

President asks Congress for free hand in dealing with Iraq

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - President Bush asked Congress Thursday for unlimited authority to take whatever action he sees fit against Iraq, including the use of military force, without any further congressional consultation or approval.

In a White House-drafted resolution, Bush cited for the first time "the high risk that the current Iraqi regime" would use weapons of mass destruction to "launch a surprise attack against the United States or its armed forces," in addition to the possibility it would turn such weapons over to international terrorists.

The proposal was favorably received by most members of both parties on Capitol Hill. Although Senate Majority

FBI saw terrorism threat as foreign

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The FBI was confident that Osama bin Laden's al-Qaida network had a limited presence in the United States prior to last year's terror attacks, even though the bureau had never assembled a comprehensive assessment of the group's domestic threat, according to testimony Thursday from Clinton and Bush administration officials.

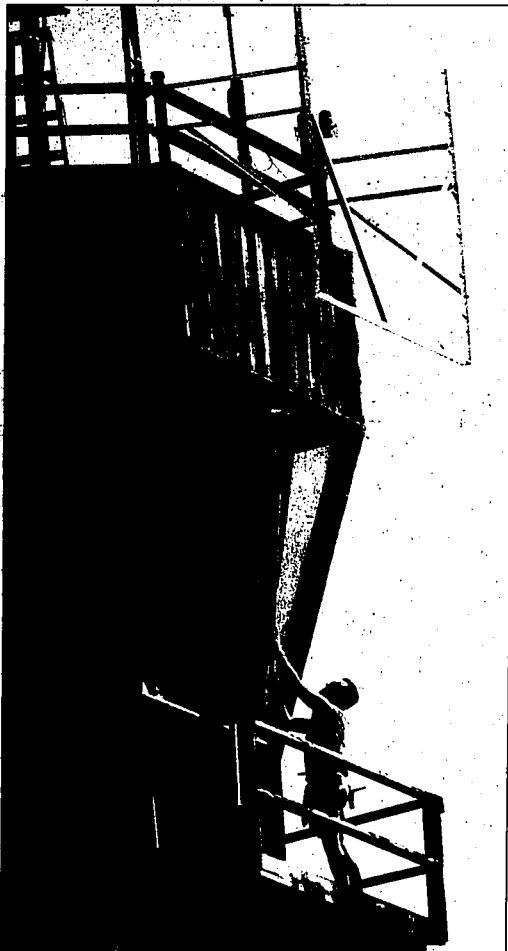

As a result, several current and former national security officials said, the U.S. government focused on the threats posed by al-Qaida overseas and lacked specific tactical information that would have been necessary to thwart the Sept. 11 attacks.

"Until the very end of our time in office, the view we received from the bureau was that al-Qaida had limited capacity to operate in the U.S. and any presence here was under surveillance," said Sandy Berger, Clinton's national security adviser from 1997 to the end of Clinton's term. "By and large, if there was a flood of threat information from the CIA, there was hardly a trickle from the FBI. We were getting very little information on domestic capabilities and threats."

The testimony Thursday before a joint House-Senate panel investigating intelligence failures leading up to the Sept. 11 attacks again focused the spotlight on the FBI's handling of the al-Qaida threat, just months after the bureau came in for criticism for missing important clues that a terror strike was in the works. Thursday's remarks followed the release on Wednesday of a report by the congressional panel that concluded that U.S. intelligence agencies received numerous indications that bin Laden was planning "spectacular" attacks in the summer of 2001, but failed to piece the warnings together.

The difference between the urgency afforded the bin Laden threat abroad by the CIA and the FBI's treatment of it domestically has been highlighted during the panel's first two days of testimony.

Candidates spar over image of AG office

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - One of Idaho's most successful defense attorneys, Keith Roark, says the current attorney general's office is generally perceived throughout the legal community as ineffective.

The most recent example is what he claims to be the state's explicit lack of a death penalty. Roark, the Democratic candidate for the office in the November general election, is referring to a recent Arizona ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that many in the state's legal community say voids Idaho's death penalty.

Keith Roark

"One of the current attorney general's office is that they were totally unprepared for the Ring vs. Arizona," Roark said.

Roark and his Republican opponent, Lawrence Wasden were in Twin Falls Thursday speaking to Idaho police chiefs when they convened at the WestCoast Twin Falls Hotel. Both also spoke with The Times-News.

Wasden, who has been second in command in the attorney general's office for the past four years, said he had discussed the possibility of a problem several times a year ago with Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Burley. Darrington chairs the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee.

"But you don't know where the hole is going to be, how do you fix it," Wasden said.

Roark, who says he is a solid proponent of the death penalty, said that Montana's attorney general advised the state Legislature the Supreme Court was likely to rule that juries, not judges, must decide if a convicted murderer will be executed. As a

Virus enters nation's blood supply

Official says he sees chance of 'infected' transfusion as low

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - If you need a blood transfusion, the Food and Drug Administration suggests that you consider alternatives, such as storing your own blood or delaying surgery, to avoid a chance of infection with the West Nile virus.

The virus is known to be present in some of the nation's blood supply, and federal health officials are scrambling to find a way to test hundreds of thousands of units of donated blood for the sometimes deadly mosquito-borne disease.

Studies: Parasites in men may lead to earlier deaths

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Male mammals are bigger and juicier targets for parasites than females, and two Scottish scientists suggest that may be one reason the males often have shorter life spans.

Kenneth Wilson and Sarah L. Moore of the University of Stirling say in a study appearing Friday in the journal Science that males have a shorter life expectancy in animal species where the males are larger than the females, which is the general rule among mammals.

The reason, said Wilson, may be parasites. Parasites of all types, from bacteria that invade and cause disease to insects that bite, chew and suck blood all tend to favor the larger males, said Wilson. This may cause the males to age and die more swiftly than the females, he said, although he acknowledged that this conclusion is just educated speculation.

"Simply by being big, you expose yourself to more parasites," said Wilson. Bigger animals must eat more food, increasing the risk of swallowing bacteria. Mosquitoes, fleas and ticks all can find bigger animals more easily than smaller ones, he noted.

Also, male defenses against disease may be more fragile than those of females, said Wilson. The male hormone testosterone, he said, is known to slightly weaken the immune system, allowing bacteria and other parasites to more easily thrive.

Blood

But because those tests will not be developed and ready to use before next spring at the earliest, the FDA is advising people who need blood transfusions to consider alternatives.

"We believe there is a risk and we're acting on it," said Dr. Jesse Goodman, the deputy director of the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research. "We in all honesty do not have information yet to define how great that risk is."

Officials emphasized that they're acting on a precautionary basis and that the public should not overreact. Even though some people probably have gotten the disease through blood transfusions, it's not as if all the nation's blood supply is tainted, said Dr. Louis Katz, the president-elect of America's Blood Center.

"The question is how frequently (getting the disease through a blood transfusion) would happen," Katz told Knight-Ridder Newspapers. "My guess is it's not very frequent."

Health officials repeated that people cannot get the disease by donating blood and that current blood supplies are tight, so donations are needed urgently.

Officials from the FDA, National Institutes of Health, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the nation's blood banks and medical testing companies will gather today in Bethesda, Md., to discuss how to speed development of quick West Nile tests, Katz said.

As of Thursday afternoon, 1,745 human cases of West Nile had been confirmed this year in the United States, causing 84 deaths. Six cases in Mississippi and Louisiana have been associated with polio-like paralysis, officials said Thursday.

Goodman told reporters Thursday, "It's most prudent to assume that blood-borne transmission can and likely has occurred."

After weeks of investigating whether any West Nile patient got the disease from blood transfusions, officials said the evidence was convincing that a 24-year-old woman contracted the disease through blood transfusions after giving birth in July.

The woman received 13 units of blood, 15 of which were tested after the fact. Of those 15, three had West Nile. Officials also are investigating at least five other cases in which people are suspected of contracting the virus through blood transfusions. And the CDC has confirmed that four people contracted the disease from transplanted organs.

"We have been able to wait until we have proof on additional cases... before moving blood screening testing forward would be a mistake," Goodman said. "It is likely that it will be needed."

For the 4.5 million people who receive blood each year, "the potential benefits outweigh the risk" of contracting West Nile virus, Goodman said. Even so, he added: "We do think people need to be aware of this potential risk."

Goodman said patients might want to look at alternatives to receiving blood if they were worried. Those include donating blood for your own surgery in advance, utilizing blood-recovery techniques during surgery and perhaps delaying elective surgery.

this regime."

"While I will vote for this resolution pledging congressional support for action, I trust the president will continue the trend of communicating with Congress as decisions are made about our goals and timelines in Iraq, before we send men and women into harm's way," Craig added.

In a similar shift of position, Rep. C.L. "Bud" Omer, R-Idaho, also announced Thursday his support for military action against Iraq after he received classified information at briefings with administration officials and congressional leaders over the past week.

Crapo's, Craig's and Otter's switch marks what could be a turn in opinion among Republican members of Congress as they continue to receive more classified information outlining the risks Iraq poses and the strategy the president plans to follow.

Meanwhile, Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, who had a breakfast meeting Thursday with Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, said he is still not fully convinced. Simpson said there remains a need to continue to gather more information before fully supporting military action.

But Simpson did say that if Saddam Hussein fails to comply with United Nations weapons

President George H.W. Bush during a visit to Kuwait and firing on U.S. planes enforcing "no-fly" zones over northern and southern Iraq.

The resolution backs off previous allegations by the administration of possible involvement by Baghdad in the Sept. 11 attacks. "Members of al-Qaida are known to be in Iraq" and, without further explanation, says the attacks "underscored the gravity of the threat that Iraq will transfer weapons of mass destruction to international terrorist organizations."

The possible nexus between anti-U.S. terrorists and countries possessing or seeking biological, chemical and nuclear weapons has long been the keystone of the administration's case for preventive action. The new expansion of the threat assessment to include a "high risk" that Saddam would launch a direct attack on the United States reportedly last year, a case that the United States is justified in acting outside the United Nations

Daschle rebukes Bush over environment record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle attacked President Bush's environmental record Thursday, accusing the administration of "a disturbing trend of rollbacks."

It was the second assault on the administration's policies by Daschle this week as the Senate's top Democrat sought to move attention away from talk of war with Iraq to domestic issues in the weeks before November's congressional elections. In a Senate floor speech Wednesday, Daschle, D-S.D., chastised Bush for his handling of the economy.

In a speech to the League of Conservation Voters, Daschle accused the Bush administration of scuttling a variety of environmental regulations, slowing toxic waste cleanup and packing advisory panels with pro-industry scientists.

"The very first act of this administration... was to put on hold... balanced, modest scientific regulations that had been years in the making. That set off a disturbing trend of rollbacks that has continued in a daily drumbeat of destruction."

Daschle said the administration's actions to expand oil and gas drilling on federal land now off limits; approval of a less ambitious efficiency standard for air conditioners; and efforts to ease air pollution requirements on power plants.

Daschle has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 2004, but his primary goal now is retaining the Democrats' slim hold on the Senate in November's elections.

Animal lovers don diapers in protest

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A plan by city fathers to diaper carriage-drawing horses in order to keep streets clean has animal lovers and horsemen in arms.

Donning diapers, animal rights activists lined up at Heroes' Square in front of the former imperial Hofburg Palace

Thursday to protest the plan they say would inflict unnecessary suffering on the animals.

"The display would restrict horses' movement and would risk causing wounds," said Attila Cerman, a spokesman for Four Paws, the group that organized the protest.

Wassden admitted the office has lost a handful of notable cases. A $27 million settlement made by the state after it lost a lawsuit filed by the American Trucking Association three years ago is one he mentioned.

"Certainly we don't like losing," he said. "We always look back at cases to see what we did wrong or to see where we have to work with the Legislature to make sure we go forward."

result, the Legislature changed the law during its last session so the state still has a solid death penalty, he said.

Even though a 3rd District Idaho judge just this week avoided confronting the death penalty issue in the coming trial of a baby sitting "cousin" that befell toddler to death, Wassden isn't convinced Idaho's law isn't still viable.

To prove his point, Wassden pointed to the language, which says the court "shall determine if execution is appropriate. The language is broad enough to include either a judge or a jury, he said.

Analysts: Farms present bioterror targets

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States is highly vulnerable to terrorist attacks on its livestock and food crops and needs a national plan to identify threats, direct research, gather intelligence and respond to outbreaks, a committee of experts said Thursday.

A report by the National Academy of Sciences said that while agricultural bioterrorism was "highly unlikely to result in famine or malnutrition," it could have "a major direct and indirect cost to the agricultural economy."

Researchers suggest national effort to prevent, respond to attacks

The report also cautioned that there could be "adverse health effects" caused by agents — such as anthrax — that can move from animals to humans, as well as "loss of public confidence in the food system ... and widespread public concern and confusion."

The report, titled "Countering Agricultural Bioterrorism," was prepared over the past three years by the academy's National Research Council at the behest of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Parts of the original report dealing with specific case studies were put in a classified annex withheld from the published study.

"We thought about it all along — whether we were giving anybody a recipe for how to mount an attack," said David Franz, a bioterrorism expert and NAS panelist who is vice president of the Southern Research Institute.

"You always have to weigh your vulnerability against the need to educate people about what they're up against and to overcome their natural reticence."

Reticence is no longer a problem, said Iowa State University veterinarian Harley Moon, chairman of the 12-member NAS panel.

"September 11 fixed that," Moon said. "People became so outraged that they went ahead on their own."

But while "there's increased general awareness and agency interaction," he added, "we need a national response, as well."

Acetaminophen overdoses

Drought relief comes with political overtones

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress running for reelection this fall fought to take credit for the Bush administration's announcement Thursday that it was providing $752 million in drought aid to livestock farmers.

Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman made the announcement during a conference call that included some Republican lawmakers, including Rep. John Thune of South Dakota, and Sen. Craig Thomas of Wyoming.

The lawmakers are running in farm states that could tip the balance of power in the House and Senate. They promoted the package as an excellent step toward helping farmers who have suffered financially because of the drought.

"This is great news for South Dakota. It's great for livestock producers all across the country," Thune said. "Conditions out there are devastating. I have visited all corners of my state and seen the impact that this drought is having not only on our farms and ranches, but also in our communities."

Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman announces details of relief bill worth $752 million for states hit by the West's worst drought in a century as Rep. John Thune, R-S.D., left, looks on.

Thune's opponent, Democratic Sen. Tim Wynn, wanted to claim credit a day ahead of the administration's announcement. Johnson said he and Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., the Senate majority leader, had asked the Bush administration for the money.

The White House went out of its way to give Thune credit for the allocation. President Bush has aggressively worked to see Thune promoted to the Senate. He raised money for Thune in April and appeared with him last month in South Dakota.

While Daschle said that he appreciates that additional relief is being given farmers, he questioned Republicans' motives for their participation in the announcement.

"I sincerely hope that today's announcement is not a political ploy intended to reduce the pressure on the House and White House to pass the drought assistance bill," Daschle said in a written statement.

The Senate approved a $6 billion drought assistance package last week, although Bush had said that Congress should provide aid for the farmers by taking money from the $180 billion, six-year farm bill passed in May.

The administration objected to any drought assistance that could increase the budget deficit and has opposed the congressional package.

But this latest relief will not be enough for farmers and ranchers, Daschle said.

His office estimates that South Dakota alone loses $5 million in its economy every day of the drought.

Feds suggest stronger warning for pain drug

Tylenol, other medications use acetaminophen

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — Federal scientists urged stronger warning labels Thursday on every bottle of acetaminophen, based on evidence that thousands of Americans may unwittingly take toxic doses that could harm their livers.

"You cannot allow more innocent men, women and children to suffer," Kate Trank, whose 23-year-old son Marcus was one of about 100 people thought to die every year from unintentional overdoses, told a panel of Food and Drug Administration advisers. "Death is not an acceptable side effect."

The FDA panel voted 21-1 to back her call for more warnings about the risk.

Some 100 million people a year take acetaminophen, and serious liver damage is very rare, manufacturers insist. Although best known by the Tylenol brand, acetaminophen is in almost 200 different branded and generic products, from headache relievers to cold-and-cough remedies. While mostly sold without a prescription, it's also in a few prescription painkillers such as Percocet and Vicodin.

Acetaminophen bottles currently recommend taking no more than 4 grams a day, or eight extra-strength pills, and to seek help for overdoses.

People often attempt suicide by swallowing handfuls of acetaminophen.

But unintentional overdoses also can destroy the liver. Consumers often swallow a few extra pills in hopes of faster pain relief, falsely thinking that over-the-counter medications are safe enough to push the dose.

Locations, reviews deadlock Senate on forest thinning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hopes for a compromise plan to speed thinning in national forests to reduce the risk of wildfire collapsed Thursday, as the Senate reached a partisan deadlock.

Democratic Sens. Ron Wyden of Oregon and Dianne Feinstein of California, who with Republican Sen. Larry Craig of Idaho had been trying to broker a bipartisan compromise, said they were withdrawing their plan after failing to get needed support from either party.

Lawmakers could not resolve partisan disputes over the size and location of areas to be thinned, as well as possible limits on judicial review of projects proposed by environmentalists. Wyden, in a speech on the Senate floor, blamed senators of both parties for failing to support the compromise plan, which had the support of the Bush administration.

"If members want to get something done, they are going to have to take some political risk,"

Wyden said. "Unless there is some willingness ... to find common ground, we will see these devastating, unnatural fires summer after summer after summer."

A longtime friend of the environmental movement, Wyden has been under attack from conservationists for pushing the compromise plan.

Country near Yemen welcomes U.S. troops

DJIBOUTI (AP) — As an American helicopter hovered overhead, several young men said Thursday they welcomed U.S. forces in Djibouti a day after the Pentagon said it had sent 800 troops to the tiny but strategically important nation in the Horn of Africa.

Acting Foreign Minister Mahmoud Ali said several hundred American troops have been stationed at Le Monier barracks for about five months and that Djibouti has been cooperating in the U.S.-led war against terrorism.

shade chewing a semi-narcotic leaf known as khat said they've seen U.S. forces in town since April, particularly at the small airport. "I'm happy they're here. There are no problems in Djibouti, the security is very good," said Abdurhaman Moussa Soulehan. "I don't like al-Qaida ... they have no intelligence."

Others said they hoped the U.S. presence would mean jobs in this poor country which relies on port fees and foreign aid for survival. "For us it's good because we can make conversation with them and maybe have some jobs when more of them come," said Mohamed Said Ali. "We like to have Americans here."

The foreign minister said the U.S. troops have been training "in preparation for the next few months."

"The U.S. presence is not new; we have been working with them since Sept. 11," he told The Associated Press. "We have been hearing (media reports) these days they are moving to attack Yemen. We have no information on that. We have helped them get the necessary facilities to carry out their maneuvers."

Singapore: Terrorists targeted U.S. troops

SINGAPORE (AP) — A U.S. Navy ship and a bar frequented by American troops had been targeted for attack by 21 men arrested last month with alleged links to al-Qaida, government officials said Thursday.

The terror group also planned to hit the country's Defense Ministry and water pipelines, officials said.

The men were acting on orders from an Indonesian Muslim cleric, Ridwan Tasuddin, also known as Hambali, said Singapore's Home Affairs Ministers. Hambali, whose whereabouts are unknown, is believed to be the leader of Jemaah Islamiyah, a regional group officials have linked to Osama bin Laden's al-Qaida terror network.

NASA films a real star

Images collected over several months from NASA's Chandra X-ray Observatory have been combined to make an animation of a collapsed star, the Crab nebula, in the constellation Taurus.

These images have advanced our understanding of the neutron star.

Rotation generates a magnetic field so powerful that particles of the dense core are jettisoned at about half the speed of light.

Core

The highly compressed core of pulsar produces energy 100,000 times stronger than the sun.

The magnetic axis is oblique to the pulsar's rotation axis.

Astronomers investigate heart of Crab nebula

The Washington Post

Astronomers using NASA's most powerful space telescopes have produced an unprecedented time-lapse movie showing the eerie pulsing, still-beating heart of a star that exploded a thousand years ago.

The movies are expected to serve as real-world tests for theories that attempt to explain how these unimaginably powerful dynamos evolve and interact with the surrounding space environment.

"The remarkable thing here is we are getting to see, before our eyes, what's happening in a truly extraordinary environment, an environment that is nothing like we know in our everyday lives," Jeff Hester, an astronomer at Arizona State University said Thursday.

Hester and a team of astronomers used the Hubble Space Telescope and the Chandra X-ray Observatory to make repeated photographs of the inner regions of the Crab nebula, the remnants of a supernova first observed by Chinese astronomers in 1054.

The still-expanding cloud of gas and debris, visible today in even modest amateur telescopes, is known as the Crab nebula.

Hidden in the heart of the nebula is what's left of the wrecked star's core. Containing twice the mass of Earth's sun, the core's collapse halted when its density reached that of an atomic nucleus.

The result was a rapidly spinning neutron star, or pulsar, that powers the entire nebula. That much isn't new. But for the first time, Hester and his colleagues have been able to assemble movies in visible light and X-rays showing the pulsar in action.

"This is an object roughly the size of Manhattan, with something like twice the mass of our sun, a magnetic field two trillion times the magnetic field of the Earth, the whole thing is rotating 30 times a second," Hester told reporters.

The Hubble-Chandra movies show a knotty inner ring around the pulsar that glows in X-rays, a region where particles blown outward by the pulsar slam into the surrounding environment at nearly the speed of light.

Huge jets spew out of the pulsar's poles while wispy arcs of glowing matter-antimatter debris move outward from the inner ring like ripples in a cosmic pond.

The observations are discussed in the Sept. 20 issue of the Astrophysical Journal Letters.

Judge lets ex-Tyco execs stay free on bail

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge Thursday allowed former-Tyco International Ltd. chief executive L. Dennis Kozlowski to remain free on bail while authorities determine if assets pledged for his bond are linked to his alleged multimillion dollar fraud.

State Supreme Court Justice Michael Obus set a Sept. 27 hearing to discuss the source of the money, which prosecutors contend was stolen from the company and should not be used for bail.

Kozlowski and former Tyco chief charges if convicted.

Prosecutors filed criminal charges against the man soon after the Securities and Exchange Commission accused them of hiding huge loans and other money allegedly taken from Tyco.

The SEC said Kozlowski used $242 million from an employee loan program, established to help workers buy Tyco stock, to pay for yachts, art, luxury apartments and vacations. Kozlowski already had pleaded innocent to charges of evading New York sales taxes on $13 million in art, including works by Renoir and Monet. He resigned from Tyco in June.

Everything is a conglomerate that makes everything from coat hangers to security systems and medical devices.

Lawyers for Kozlowski and Swartz had complained earlier this week that the men's personal assets had been frozen, and money offered by relatives and others for the bail had been rejected by prosecutors as possible proceeds of the crimes with which they are charged.

Experimental cancer therapy works well in test on patients

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some seriously ill melanoma patients were left virtually free of disease after researchers injected them with billions of laboratory-grown white blood cells that attacked and shrank their skin cancer tumors, National Institutes of Health researchers say.

In a study appearing today in the journal Science, a team led by Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg of the National Cancer Institute reports using amplified lymphocytes — the body's white blood cells — to attack melanoma tumors in 13 patients. Ten of those patients are still alive, four are "virtually cancer free" and two others have experienced "substantial" shrinkage of their tumors, the researcher said.

Rosenberg, who has spent years developing ways to enlist the body's own immune cells to combat cancer, said his team has learned how to grow huge numbers of cancer-killing cells within a patient, enough to overwhelm the tumors.

"The major difficulty is to get enough immune cells to reach against the cancer," he said. In previous efforts, researchers were able to prompt a small fraction of the immune cells injected into the body to attack the cancer, but only briefly.

"We would end up with a half percent (of the total immune cells) and they are gone two weeks later," he said. "With the current approach, we can get 90 percent of the body's lymphocytes to react against the cancer."

Some other experts in the field called the research "an important advance."

"This demonstrates something that has not been shown before in therapy using immune cells," said Dr. Cassian Yee, a researcher who has experimented with a similar technique at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

The body makes T-cells, or lymphocytes, that will attack cancer, but the natural number is seldom large enough to check the disease's progression. To amplify these cells, Rosenberg and his group removed cancer-killing T-cells from the patients and then grew the cells until there were billions.

Alleged drunken driver kills mother and her three kids in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mother and her three little children were struck and killed Tuesday evening by a suspected drunken driver as they crossed the street. The driver grabbed his vehicle registration papers from his van and ran away but was later caught, police said.

Martin Valdez, 30, was arrested and booked for investigation of vehicular manslaughter, hit-and-run and driving under the influence. His blood-alcohol level was measured at more than twice the legal limit, the California Highway Patrol said.

The scene was so disturbing that 15 firefighters will be given counseling, authorities said.

Judge approves $10M settlement in case of former Boston priest

BOSTON (AP) — A $10 million settlement between the Boston Archdiocese and 86 alleged victims of child-molesting priest John Geoghan won final approval Thursday, six months after the church backed out of a much costlier agreement.

A $10 million check from the archdiocese was given to the plaintiffs' attorney, Mitchell Carabedian.

The last obstacle to the settlement was removed when Superior Court Judge Constance Sweeney approved a request from a 12-year-old boy to participate in the settlement.

Sweeney addressed the alleged victims who appeared in court, saying she wanted to acknowledge their pain and make clear that the settlement means the court recognizes that Geoghan did what they say he did.

An earlier settlement worth up to $30 million had been announced in May, but the archdiocese backed out of that deal soon afterward, saying it could not afford the deal because of hundreds of other lawsuits being filed.

Carabedian said the plaintiffs agreed to the lower figure because they want to try to put the abuse behind them.

The archdiocese issued a statement saying Cardinal Bernard Law is grateful a settlement could be reached.

Cruise ships promise not to pollute bay

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — To the dismay of environmentalists, a cruise ship docked off this picturesque city for the first time in five years after promises to keep the nutrient-rich waters clean.

As a pair of young sea lines traced arcs in the air, a small group of protesters gathered Wednesday at Fisherman's Wharf, fearing that trash would be tossed overboard the super-sized Royal Caribbean ship and oily bilge water and sewage discharged.

Pollution from cruise ships has become a major target of environmentally concerned lawmakers and lobbyists since 1999.

Suicide bomber kills five in Tel Aviv

Israel sends tanks into Arafat's compound

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Palestinian blew himself up on a crowded Tel Aviv bus Thursday, killing five other people, wounding nearly 50 and provoking a swift response, as Israel sent tanks rumbling into Yasser Arafat's compound in the West Bank town of Ramallah. The tanks fired in the direction of the Palestinian leader's battered office, as Prime Minister Ariel Sharon convened his Cabinet in emergency session, fueling speculation about he intended to confine Arafat to the building or perhaps to expel him from the West Bank. The Israeli military said that "in response to the terrorist attack, Israeli forces surrounded the compound." Soldiers with loudspeakers called on wanted Palestinians inside to surrender, naming Tawfik Tirawi, a senior security commander, an Israeli official said.

Nabil Abu Rdeneh, a senior Arafat aide, said the Israelis were targeting Arafat himself and called for international intervention to stop the incursion. "Arafat is fine, but the situation in the compound is very dangerous," Abu Rdeneh said. Two Palestinian security officers were wounded as the tanks moved into the compound firing shells and machine guns, Palestinian officials said. Israel TV reported a huge bulldozer knocked down some trailers in the compound.

Russia asserts right to strike at militants

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov stepped up pressure on Georgia Thursday, warning that Moscow may launch pre-emptive strikes against Chechen rebels in the Pankisi Gorge. "If we see that bandits are headed in our direction... should we wait for them to cross the border, kill someone and disperse?" Ivanov, who is on a trip to Washington, said in televised remarks broadcast Thursday. "Naturally, in this situation we will take a preventive action to protect our security and lives of our citizens."

Ivanov's statement drew an immediate angry response from Georgia. Dzhemal Gakhokidze, deputy chief of President Eduard Shevardnadze's Security Council, said a Russian operation in Georgia would amount to an "aggression and an international crime." Rya Shabalkin, a spokesman for Russian forces in Chechnya, said Thursday that federal forces Thursday were battling several dozen rebels who had crossed into the region from Georgia, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

A week ago, Russian President Vladimir Putin issued a tough ultimatum to Georgia to take firm action against militants in the lawless gorge or face Russian action. He fired Col. Gen. Leonid Ivashov, who headed the Russian Defense Ministry's international cooperation department until Putin fired him last year, warned that an attack on Georgia would be pointless and damaging for Russia's reputation worldwide. Washington sent U.S. military instructors to Georgia to teach its military anti-terrorism skills. The United States has warned Russia that Georgia must be given a chance to carry out its own security operation in Pankisi, where U.S. officials have said militants with ties to al-Qaida may be located.

Skeptical scientist concedes creation of antihydrogen

GENEVA (AP) — A skeptical scientist at Europe's leading particle physics center reversed course Thursday, conceding his rivals had successfully created elusive and long-sought atoms of antihydrogen. "I will celebrate with them today," said Harvard physicist Gerald Gabrielse. Nevertheless, he vowed to press on with his competing drive to compare atoms of hydrogen and antihydrogen — the goal of his ATRAP team at CERN, the particle physics laboratory outside Geneva. ATRAP's rivals at the ATHENA experiment announced Thursday in the journal Nature that they had created enough antihydrogen — the simplest "antimatter" atom — to test scientists' understanding of the make-up of the universe.

Canyon rim preservation plan should be stopped

The decision to submit a Jerome County canyon rim preservation proposal for public review isn't a bad idea. Now, the voting public will have a chance to express on the record how excessive the proposed setbacks actually are.

ing colors, fence design, and which shrubs and trees to plant, will be seen as too strict by many property owners.

The fact that the group Property Owners Petition Committee came so quickly together with a request against the proposal shows that resistance to the plan is strong. There may be a number of county residents who like the proposal, but commissioners should expect rim property owners to make plenty of objections against it.

Our view: Now that a Jerome County citizens advisory committee has pushed forward its canyon rim preservation plan, the county commissioners should drop it.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

A five-member citizens advisory committee that has worked on the proposal for almost two years decided to leave their original form.

Even though two Jerome County commissioners have said they would never support a 100-foot setback requirement included in the proposal, the committee left it in.

Don't be surprised if the plan is rejected because of the specific setbacks left in, which many private property owners on the canyon rim dislike.

In the plan, the committee has proposed a canyon rim overlay zone extending 300 feet from the rim. Private property owners wouldn't be able to construct within 100 feet of the canyon rim without a permit forcing them to follow guidelines. Development in the remaining 200 feet would be subject to approval by the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission.

Advisory committee members have focused on preservation of the canyon rim from excessive development. But the setbacks and other guidelines, such as enforcing build-owners, the commissioners should drop the matter completely.

It may be a city planner's dream to curb use of premiere property so that it blends in perfectly with surrounding geography. But it can turn into a nightmare for private property owners, who save for years to purchase prime land only to see government lay down the law on how it's used.

Apparently, many canyon rim property owners won't let that happen. They have every right to oppose this proposal, and protect their private property rights.

This proposal is clearly dead on arrival to the commissioners. They should give it a quick burial.

Inspections won't resolve Iraq problems

President Bush has captured the momentum in his war against terrorism. It's what his father once referred to in another context as "Big Mo." He must not lose it or Saddam Hussein will slip through his fingers as he did with previous presidents, to the detriment of a lot of people, including U.S. citizens.

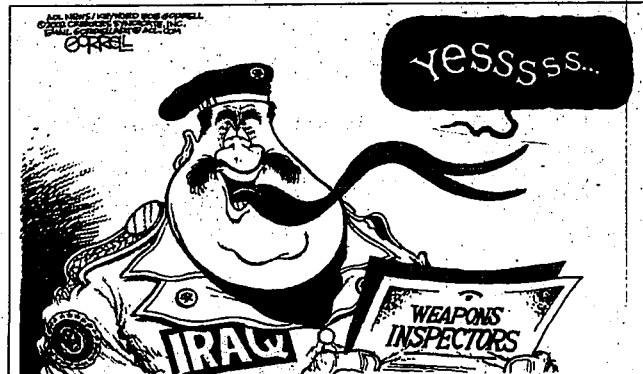

CAL THOMAS

The president is bringing (or scaring) reluctant members of Congress to his view that Saddam Hussein cannot be reformed or transformed but must be removed. He's also winning over some reluctant editorial writers and former members of his father's administration, who have urged him not to "go it alone," or not to go at all. He's even persuading some European leaders of the necessity of his position.

This is not the time for the president to "go wobbly" and to buy the lie from Iraq which, after resisting weapons inspections for four years, now claims on the eve of another conflict that it is willing to let them in "unconditionally." Most people with a sense of recent history know Saddam has always had conditions.

Previously, and within hours of Iraq's "unconditional" letter to the United Nations, Ali Muhsen Hamid, the Arab League ambassador to London, added the condition that inspectors could only visit "military sites." That's because Saddam is strongly suspected to have hidden whatever it is he has to hide inside or under structures occupied by civilians.

We've gone down this alley before, only to be mugged by Saddam at the end of it. In 1998, President Clinton announced that Iraq had agreed to resume "unconditional cooperation" with the United Nations. In response, the United States suspended a threatened military attack, pledging that it remained "ready to strike" should Iraq fail to comply. Iraq failed to comply, eventually expelling weapons inspectors. President Bush boldly confronted the United Nations last week, suggesting that the world body would become irrelevant should it fail to enforce numerous resolutions and sanctions pertaining to Iraq.

Saddam Hussein has failed to allow unfettered access to outside inspectors since the end of the Gulf War. Eleven years was more than enough time for him to create and store all sorts of weapons of mass destruction, and more than enough time for the world to realize his promises are worthless.

In 1998, the U.S. Senate unanimously passed a non-binding resolution with no debate accusing Saddam of war crimes and calling on the United Nations to bring him to trial.

The more the United Nations and the United States dither, the more emboldened Saddam becomes and the closer he gets to holding free nations hostage when he has the elements in his possession that could wipe out by explosion, disease, or poison a major American, British, or Israeli city.

Responding to Iraq's "offer" Monday to allow inspections, the White House issued a statement: "This is not a matter of inspections. It is about disarmament of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction and the Iraqi regime's compliance with all other Security Council resolutions." The statement called Iraq's response a "tactical step by Iraq in hopes of avoiding strong U.N. Security Council action."

Four years ago, at the time Saddam supposedly re-opened his doors briefly to U.N. weapons inspectors, Ron Ben-Yishai, a leading Israeli military analyst, wrote in the mass circulation publication, Yediot Aharonot:

"For the first time, the United States...publicly announced...that it wants Saddam out of the way. It is exceedingly unusual...for one country, especially a world power, to call for the ouster of another sovereign government...Washington has reached the conclusion that Saddam is a palpable threat to world and Middle East peace and that he must be removed. The United States further concluded that Saddam's oppressive policies toward his own people and his deceptive strategy vis-à-vis the international community made him lose his legitimacy as a head of state and also made him fair game."

That was true in 1998 and it remains true. Forget the inspections. The ultimatum should be: Disarmament, or he's out of there. The Bush administration knows this and can be expected to keep its momentum going.

U of I didn't support Indian gambling study

Recently, your paper featured or discussed an article about a study on the impacts of Indian gambling in Idaho, which stated and implied that the study was a formal University of Idaho research project. That is not the case.

The economists who conducted the study are faculty at the University of Idaho. However, they undertook this activity as private consultants, separate and apart from their responsibilities at the university.

Threat of war on Iraq elicits many concerns

A war against Iraq would be exceedingly unwise.

First, from a practical military standpoint, it is estimated that 200,000 troops would be needed to invade Iraq. With our already down-sized number of combat ready troops, that would make it more difficult to defend the homeland.

Our military leaders, including Colin Powell and Norman Schwarzkopf, are against the war as our troops are already spread too thin around the world.

With an already depressed economy, the estimated $100 billion cost along with skyrocketing gas prices will deepen the recession. National Guard families will greatly suffer. War always results in more power to the federal government and less freedom for the people.

Warhams are ignoring a far greater danger to the United States and that is Red China. The Beijing regime has weapons of mass destruction, trashes human rights, and is a major weapons supplier to Iraq, Iran, North Korea and Libya.

Military force is justified only in self-defense. Naked aggression is the hallmark of dictators!

When Congress evades its Constitutional responsibilities and allows war to be declared by presidential executive order or the anti-American United Nations; it ceases to represent the very people for whom the war supposedly will be fought! No war with Iraq!

Tribute in light is all we need to properly honor Sept. 11 victims

On April 19, 2000, five years to the day after the Oklahoma City bombing, I stood in the media bleachers at the former site of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building as President Clinton dedicated a memorial to the victims.

RICHARD SPEER

memorial should look to the Oklahoma City National Memorial as a cautionary example of what their memorial must not become.

It was probably Lin's brand of understated overstatement, inimitable yet much imitated, that the 350-member Oklahoma City committee hoped to evoke with what is actually six different memorials, including a survivor tree, a reflecting pool and 168 empty chairs inscribed with victims' names.

Any one of these elements alone would have provided the requisite pathos. Six of them, to use a terribly inappropriate term, is overkill, a morbid theme park. Branson, Mo., meets Timmy McVeigh. This is what you get when you try to appease too many competing alliances. This is what New York must avoid.

Yet already the Lower Manhattan Development Corp. has bowed to public complaints that the World Trade Center project is not inclusive enough, opening the doors to additional architecture firms after thousands of amateur critics have panned the initial proposals.

How many memorials does the World Trade Center site need? One. How many contests should be held to find the best use for ground zero? Zero.

The best design has already been submitted, built and dismantled. It was called the "Tribute in Light," and it was the brainchild of six designers who created a temporary homage not only to the victims but also to the great minimalist doctrine, less is more. Unlike the latter-part Oklahoma City memorial, the "Tribute in Light" expressed its power not in preponderance but in singularity.

If there is a lesson from the hear-dart that New Yorkers should take to heart, it is this: One terrorist atrocity is too many for any city to live through, and one memorial is enough to remember it by.

The price of dairies is worth the benefits they represent

This summer I had a very determined swallow that decided my front door would be the perfect spot for her nest. After several weeks of confrontation, the swallow won — I have bird do-do by my front door but I have no mosquitoes and had cute little faces peering down at me. The price was steep but worth it.

I feel sorry for those who are sickened by dairy and feed yard operations, but I have lived 1.5 miles downwind of a large feed yard for many years and could count the times I have smelled it on one hand. I hate those pesky biting flies, but they were here long before man settled the West. They are in the desert, by the lake in the mountains and on the ocean beaches. I built my white home 30 years ago and that fall, I had a south wall covered with black flies although there was no livestock for miles around. This is an annual event at my home; flies know the weather is cooling and look for a warmer spot. It is a price one pays, although not very willingly.

Everything has a price. If an unwilling to pay that price, I will have to make a choice. It may be that I need to boycott all farm products (in other words, not eat) and live somewhere else (perhaps a cave), but I don't think that is a reasonable choice. That would be too great a price tag in itself, if you love life. I am very thankful I have all the meat, dairy and other farm products that I can possibly eat at the local grocery at reasonable prices.

We are spoiled as Americans. We demand our rights, but in many countries, the individual has no rights. I get very tired of all the complaining. Have the complainers tried to work with the dairies and feeders so as not to have a divided community? A divided community is a price no one should have to pay.

Yes, everything has a price tag except for the most precious thing of all. Eternal life has been paid for us by Jesus Christ (and what a price he paid), but everything else in life has a price tag.

Living with dairies isn't new and not only cows stink

I have just about had enough of the pity pot all the way around. I read Ms. Redfern's letter and I would like to reply.

I have lived in the Magic Valley most of my 46 years, being raised and graduated from Buhl. If you want to play the remember game then listen up. I was raised living in Buhl near Green Giant. We also had a ranch in Muldoon Canyon (Bellevue).

Here's what I remember: the Wood River Valley was full of ranches and grazing land for sheep and cattle (my grandfathers had grazing rights on Warm Springs) and you could ride trails without putting a diaper on your horse. Not full of houses, golf courses and "No Trespassing" signs.

I remember the farms and dairies my friends lived on smelled. There was no such thing as waste management. I remember the sticky road on Clear Lakes with the flies so bad it made the road look like it was moving.

I remember when families moved their dairies here from California. When I married, my husband came with a farm and a few dairy cows. I adjusted. When the large dairies grew up around us, I adjusted. Most of the time, I don't have any problems.

Sometimes if the small is bad during the day, I light a candle. Sometimes it is really bad, but I know that it is not because the dairies surrounding me are being negligent.

Most of the dairies I have been to work very hard with their neighbors.

I know the Filer people are having some real problems and I personally don't know what's going on there, so I am not commenting on them.

My point is: Don't lump everyone together. And for those of you who are not familiar with agriculture, not all odors come from the dairies — rotten potatoes, silage, etc.

Racing begins at 9:15 a.m. Saturday and will run all day with seven classes and two heats per class. One heat and then the main events will run Sunday.

Entry is $25 for first class and $20 for second class.
For more information, call 733-8667.

T.F. homecoming parade is today at 4 p.m.

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls High School's homecoming parade is at 4 p.m. today on Main Avenue.
The parade starts at Magic Valley High School, 512 Main Ave. N., and proceeds southeast to nearly the end of Main. The public is invited to watch.

Also today is a tailgate party hosted by the TFHS Booster Club between 6 and 7 p.m. The taco bar dinner is by donation, and it will be held on the south side of the field near the TFHS stadium at the west entrance.

The football game against Minico starts at 7:30 p.m.

Emergency preparedness fair is Saturday in Halley

HALLEY - Instruction in financial planning, food storage and disaster preparedness will be available to the public during the Wood River Valley Emergency Preparedness Fair from 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Halley.

Numerous booths are planned by local emergency services, hospitals, utilities and other organizations. Seminars are planned about making bread from scratch, budgeting and removing debt, storing and preserving food, and what to do in time of disaster. Blaine County Sheriff Walt Felling conducts the latter seminar.

A free dinner is planned at 6:45 p.m. Miniature first-aid kits will be given.
For more information, call Steve Fry at 788-5110.

Sun Valley arts center presents Copland opera

SUN VALLEY - The Sun Valley Opera for the Arts will present Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land" in semi-staged format Sept. 27 and 28 at the Presbyterian Church of the Big Woods.

In conjunction with it, Seattle conductor Adam Stern will present a free lecture on "Copland, the Cowboy from Brooklyn," at 4 p.m. Sunday at St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Copland was one of America's great 20th century composers. "The Tender Land," which debuted in 1954, contains colorful, layered references to American expansion, escape and the loss of innocence as a small town is rocked by two male strangers and a young woman's search for a new place and new life.

The opera will be performed by nationally known opera singers, such as soprano Amy Bills, as well as local community members. R. L. Rowley and Ken Kott will sing. Aaron Copland on the lawn at Wolf Trap, will serve as music director.

Tickets to "The Tender Land" are $10 for adults, $5 for senior members and $15 for non-members. Children 18 and under will be admitted free. For information, call 726-9491.

Entertainment and games begin at 10 a.m. The Potato Contest will be held at 11 a.m. The Potato Contest will display some during the contest.

Jerome man faces bomb threat charge

By Dixie Thomas Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The man charged in connection with Wednesday's bomb threat at the Jerome County Courthouse was identified Thursday.

Donald Tanner, 45, of Jerome was arraigned Thursday in front of 5th District Magistrate Judge Mark Ingram. Tanner is charged with one misdemeanor count of threatening public officials and one felony count of making a false bomb threat.

Tanner was being held

Threatening note was addressed to county sheriff

Thursday at the Jerome County Jail on a $50,000 bond, according to court records. He was also ordered to stay at least 300 feet of the Jerome courthouse, any courthouse in Idaho, or any school.

A preliminary hearing is set for 2:30 p.m. Oct. 3.
According to an affidavit signed by Jerome police detective Dan Chatterton, a note delivered at The Rock coffeehouse in Jerome was addressed to "Mr. Weaver," assumed to be Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver, who frequents the coffeehouse.

The note, discovered Wednesday morning, said there was a bomb at the courthouse which was going to detonate, the affidavit said. The note had the initials "D.T." on it.

The threat prompted authorities to evacuate the courthouse, nearby businesses, residences and streets. In addition to local authorities called to the scene, explosives experts from outside the area were alerted and arrangements were made for federal assistance, the affidavit said.

Police suspected the person responsible might be lingering in the area of The Rock. Tanner was located about a block from the scene and questioned, the affidavit said.

Tanner initially denied having or threat, the affidavit said. Then he said it was "a joke," and he had written the note because he was "bored," the affidavit said.

A search of Tanner's home on the 1200 block of South Davis turned up a notebook of the same style that the threatening note was written in, the affidavit said.

That notebook was a page with the words "I got a bomb in the middle school." No explosives device was found in the courthouse or Tanner's home.

KEEPING YOUR FOOD SAFE

Ryan Young, a senior chemist with the Idaho Food Quality Assurance Laboratory, uses a piece of equipment designed to identify chemical compounds. The lab tests food and other items for residual pesticides or herbicides.

State lab at CSI protects consumers, industry

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Idaho Food Quality Assurance Laboratory helps ensure Idaho farmers don't suffer the same fate as apple growers back in the 1980s.

In 1989, a report by the National Resources Defense Council identified Alar, a chemical pesticide sprayed on apples, as a human carcinogen. The link between apples and cancer encouraged many to throw their fruit in the trash and pour their apple juice down the drain. Although today some people dispute just how real the danger was, apple growers in Washington state ended up losing $100 million. Alar is no longer used today.

Michael Becerra remembers that time well. He used to work for the NRDC. Today, he's the lab manager at the Idaho Food Quality Assurance Laboratory on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

The lab held an open house Thursday to invite the community to tour the facility and see first-hand what kind of services the lab provides.

The Idaho Potato Commission is the lab's biggest client, bringing more than 500 potato samples to the lab each year to ensure the crops don't contain excess levels of agrochemical residue. Test results are reviewed twice.

"I've never seen residue that exceeded tolerance," Becerra said. "Farmers don't use any more control agents than they have to. It's expensive."

In addition to raw commodity testing, the lab provides processed foods agrochemical residue testing, regulatory enforcement testing, crop damage and environmental assessment, export commodity residue testing and federal agrochemical registration support data.

The lab will fund next year's $334,000 budget from a number of sources, including state Department of Agriculture funds and money it makes from testing. The Idaho Potato Commission will spend $160,000 next year to have the lab test its crops.

The Idaho Food Quality Assurance Laboratory is managed by the University of Idaho and has seven full-time employees. The lab is overseen by a 13-member board appointed by the governor. Current board members include state Ag Department Director Patrick Takasugi, state Reps. Maxine Bell, Wendy Jaquet and Darrell Boiz, Sen. Clint Stennett and representatives from various producers. Institute partners include the Ag Department, the University of Idaho, College of Southern Idaho, Idaho Potato Commission, Idaho Wheat Commission, Idaho Mint Commission and the Idaho Alfalfa Seed Commission.

The lab is also great training ground for students in agriculture and chemistry programs at CSI and the University of Idaho who serve internships at the lab. Their internships are funded by their colleges.

"They leave here with more analytical experience than I had with a bachelor's degree," Becerra said.

Buhl schools rethink Castleford deal

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL - The decision not to renew a cooperative agreement with Castleford School District has left a bad taste in the mouths of some Buhl School Board members.

Castleford does not have teams for baseball, softball and wrestling and has had agreements with Buhl for years which allows Castleford students to play for Buhl. The School Board voted in August not to renew the agreements for baseball and softball.

The School Board made the decision at a board meeting with only three out of five members present. Two members voted against renewing the contract.

All board members were present at this week's meeting, including Dave Kiesel, who was absent Wednesday.
Board member Don Campbell, who was not present at the August meeting, requested the board take another look at the agreement and discuss it further at its October meeting.

Board member Pam McClain explained that the board was told a decision had to be made at the August meeting.

"After further consideration, I think the entire board should be present to vote on the agreement," McClain said. "I also would prefer Athletic Director Gary McLean be present."

Other School Board business included:
• National Merit Scholar semifinalist - High school senior Tracy Franzen is a semifinalist in the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Ill.
• Franzen earned the honor by placing in the top 1 percent on a Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Franzen is president of the National Honor Society, participates in sports and carries a 4.0

grade point average.
• State standards - Mary Wiggins, district curriculum director, outlined the process for preparing students in the district's three schools for the state standards.

"We must have three elements in place for curriculum alignment, written, taught and tested. The more the curriculum is aligned, the greater the quality of education," Wiggins said.
Idaho Standards Achievement Tests are in progress now in all school districts and will continue until Oct. 18.

New tennis courts - Armand Eckert, representing the Buhl Tennis Association, outlined the plan to build new tennis courts in Buhl. The town has courts at Faux Field and Popplewell Elementary School.

Cassia County might receive weather radio

By Nate Johnson
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Drivers heading toward on Interstate 84 may soon be able to tune their radios to a frequency broadcasting up-to-date weather reports.

A grant could provide money to purchase and install a radio transmitter on an existing state-owned tower on Catterell Mountain. Cassia County Undersheriff Cary Bristol, who doubles as assistant coordinator for Cassia County's emergency services, applied for the grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The radio address-system would flood Cassia and Minidoka counties with radio waves carrying emergency weather notifications, Bristol said. The broadcasts might reach Oakley and radios could probably pick up the signal in parts of Blaine, Power and Oneida counties, he said.

There is a National Weather Service transmitter in Idaho Falls and one on Jerome Butte, Bristol said. But Cassia County is sheltered from those radio waves. A new radio transmitter would provide drivers with information on the conditions of the sometimes dangerous stretch of I-84, which runs south from the Snake River to Oden, Utah.

There are usually a few weather-related traffic accidents on that section of the interstate each year, Bristol said. Dust storms, heavy whiteouts can reduce visibility on the road to a few feet, making driving impossible. If Cassia County receives the

Sen. Noh campaigns against gambling

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Gambling opponent state Sen. Laird Noh campaigned Thursday against what he sees as the potential proliferation of casinos across Idaho should voters pass Proposition 1 in November.

Gambling proponents say such talk is a scare tactic and that it would not politically be possible in Idaho to gain the support needed to establish casinos off reservations.

Noh, a Republican senator from Kimberville, held up an inch-thick file Thursday for the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club. He proceeded to read from it news reports about Indian gambling's growing political campaign contributions and growing political inroads across the country.

Congressional political contributions from the casino and gambling industry have grown from 78 in 1990 to a list of the top 80 industry campaign contributors to 30th so far this year, according to rankings compiled by the Center for Responsive Politics. The industry has reported contributions of about $6.4 million so far this year with about 64 percent going to Republicans, says Responsive Politics, a Washington, D.C., group that tracks money in politics.

"Idaho has so far been somewhat immunized from what's going on in other states, because of our constitutional amendment," Noh said.

Proposition One - called the Indian Gaming and Self-Reliance Act - seeks to legalize video gambling in Idaho on Indian lands. A 1992 amendment to the Idaho Constitution prohibits such gambling, allowing only a state lottery, pari-mutuel betting at racetracks and charitable bingo.

CPA: Filer schools' finances are OK

By John E. Swartz
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer School District's finances are in order, the School Board heard this week.

However, Certified Public Accountant Raymond Ware did point out that the current general fund balance of $849,599 would only cover a month and a half of operating expenses. Expenses for the past 12-month period totaled $6,750,637.

"What we like to see is approximately two months' operating," said Ware, whose firm, Ware and Associates, performed the district's annual audit. "But you're in much better shape than a lot of districts around the state."

The general fund is down about $187,000. A fund transfer of $100,000 went into capital projects and $87,000 is a revenue shortage created by property taxes and a downturn in the economy.

Also this week, the board approved a memorandum of understanding with Twin Falls School District. Pending Twin Falls School Board approval, the agreement would allow Filer buses to continue driving a half mile out of district boundaries to pick up students at 4000 N. 2500 E.

The memorandum is the result of parents questioning why Filer buses were no longer picking up their children.

"The way we have had two children and then a day care center of her home, said she would like to see the boundaries changed."

"I moved here so I wouldn't have to send my kids to Twin Falls," said a parent.

Until recently, neither the district nor Western States Bus Service was aware that Filer district boundaries were set at 2450 East.

"I've been here for 10 years, and as I understand it, this has been the practice for at least 25," said Superintendent Bill Feunshaus.

The Filer School Board will next meet at 7 p.m. Oct. 16 at the Filer Elementary School library.

him as an accessory to a felony. He was released on his own recognizance following an arraignment in front of Magistrate Judge Robert Burton.

Hunting incident kills Craigmont teen

LEWISTON — The teenager killed in a hunting incident earlier this week has been identified as Colby James Thomason, 17, of Craigmont.

A family representative said Thomason was practicing elk bugling with a friend on forested private property at the southern end of the Nez Perce Indian Reservation when he was shot Monday evening.

Kim Ellery Rickman Jr., 21, has been charged with involuntary manslaughter and is under a suicide watch in the Latah County Jail. A tribal spokesman said Rickman heard bugling, saw movement and fired before hearing screaming.

The Thomason family spokesman said Thomason was shot between 8:15 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. According to Fish and Game Department regulations, shooting hours north of the Salmon River ended at 7:01 p.m. last Monday.

Fumes send 29 training for missions to hospital

PROVO, Utah — Carbon monoxide fumes forced the evacuation of 1,200 Mormon missionaries from the church's Missionary Training Center on Wednesday.

Twenty-nine of the missionaries who reported nausea or headaches were taken to Utah Valley Regional Medical Center for blood tests early Thursday. All were treated and released.

The medical staff told us the highest level of carbon monoxide measured was the equivalent of being stuck in a traffic jam in L.A., church spokesman Michael Purdy said.

The exhaust leak was detected about an hour after Brigham Young University turned off power at 10 p.m. to make repairs at an electrical substation, triggering emergency generators.

One of the generators in a dormitory basement didn't vent its exhaust, sending fumes to the floor above, where missionaries were sleeping.

U of I president Hoover has prostate cancer

MOSCOW — University of Idaho President Robert Hoover has prostate cancer, the university announced Thursday.

In a short statement released by the University Communications office, Hoover said he learned of his condition following an annual check-up.

"Prostate cancer is one of the most successfully treated cancers," Hoover said. "I expect to make a full recovery."

Hoover, 61, met Thursday morning with key administrators to let them know of his situation, university spokeswoman Kathy Barnard said.

"It is given no indication that he has any plans at all to leave his position," Barnard said.

Hoover told his staff that he was still consulting with doctors and will be making decisions shortly about his course of treatment.

Ida Ruth Barnes 'Mama Barnes'

Ida Ruth Johnson Barnes, 77, of Burley, died Wednesday, September 18, 2002, at her home, surrounded by her family.

She was born August 8, 1925, in Wilson, N.C., the daughter of Minnie Williams and William Whitehead Johnson, Sr. She received her education at Topsy Hill School in Edgecombe County, N.C. She married Durand Sylvester, Dr. V. Barnes on November 6, 1944, in Dillon, S.C. They lived in North Carolina and Ohio, prior to moving to Burley on June 30, 1970, where she has since resided.

What she loved most was to read and Durand joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Their marriage was solemnized in the Salt Lake LDS Temple in 1958. Ida was faithful in serving her Heavenly Father in various callings in the church.

She had a passion for cooking and used that great talent in not only raising her own children but in raising over 200 foster children. Her time spent with her children was important. She spent countless hours in teaching and rearing her family. She always looked forward to the yearly trips back home to the family reunions in North Carolina.

She is survived by her husband, Durand "Daddy Barnes" of Burley; her children, Ronnie L. Barnes of Burley, Sharon S. (Ken) Ball of Rupert, Wendy R. (Ken)ingham of Burley, Constance A. (Avin) Honore of Malibu, Calif., Sheila (Jeramie) Coates of Twin Falls, Keith D. (Denise) Barnes of Lancaster, Calif., Jared J. (Maimelle) Barnes of Santa Rosa, Utah, and Durand D. Barnes of Twin Falls; 32 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and her sisters, Minnie Williams of Best Hope, N.C., Nell Norman of Whitakers, N.C., Edith Watts of Tarboro, N.C., and William Johnson, Jr. of Elm City, N.C.

She was preceded in death by her parents; one daughter, Glenda Lynn Barnes; five sisters; one brother, and two grandchildren, Erin Barnes and Kira Barnes.

The funeral will be held at 2:00 p.m. Saturday, September 21, 2002, at the Pella First and Second

Theodore Austin Helms

Theodore Austin Helms, 92, of Burley, formerly of Oakley, died Wednesday, September 18, 2002, at his home.

He was born July 18, 1910, in LaJuntura, Colorado, the son of Theodore Jackson and Alice May Grovett Helms. He attended school in Cassia County. He married Ellen Louise Johnson on August 2, 1933, in Minidoka County, Idaho. She preceded him in death in 1938. He married Leona Maxine Myers on December 24, 1941, in Boise, Idaho, and she survives.

He was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Austin taught all the children if they played all night they could work all day. He taught honesty by example. He had worked at the Saw Mill in Hazelton. He worked also for the Andersons. He enjoyed challenges, welding, reading, the mountains, but most importantly, he loved his family.

He is survived by his wife, Leona of Burley; his children, Forrest (Connie) Helms of Burley, Gloria (Ken) Dixon of Bakerfield, Calif., Wayne (Dorothy) Helms of Pleasant Grove, Utah, Mary (Tom) Reed of Lakewood, Wash. Ted (Karon) Helms of Portland, Ore., Leona Rasmussen of Pocatello, Vanda (Harold) Johnson of Filer, Ray (Helen) Helms of Burley, and John (Judy) Helms of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and Linda (John) Blunt of Manitou Springs, Colo.; a daughter-in-law, Marion Helms of Burley; five sons, five sisters, Minnie Hunter of Twin Falls, Alice Staley of Burley, Virginia Mullen of Oakley, Dorothy Bush of Burley, Utah, and Jackie Gochman of Hazelton; 38 grandchildren; 59 great-grandchildren; and six great-great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his parents; one son, Robert Helms; seven brothers; two sisters; one grandson; and two great-grandsons.

Deputy becomes Idaho's appellate public defender

BOISE — The deputy who has served as interim head of the State Appellate Public Defender's office has been named the new appellate public defender.

Huskey replaced Ronald Ron Coulter, who resigned nearly a year ago to take a job with Boise Cascade Corp. Her appointment, subject to Senate confirmation, was recommended by a panel that included the president of the Idaho Bar and the chairmen of the House and Senate Judiciary committees.

Huskey graduated from the University of Idaho and worked as a deputy prosecutor in Bonnevill County before joining Coulter's staff in 1998.

Utah sees $15 million drop in tax revenues

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The state's budget is down $15 million in tax revenues just two months into the new fiscal year.

Gov. Mike Leavitt accused legislators, who have already trimmed more than $400 million from state spending and drained the state's surplus fund, say they are not concerned.

"Things should be OK," said House budget-co-chairman Rep. Jeff Alexander, R-Provo.

"It's not too bad at all. We're in pretty good shape," Sen. Leonard Blackham; R-Moroni, told the Senate GOP caucus — on Wednesday.

While personal income-tax withholding was down $15.4 million in just two months, some other tax revenues were up and others down for an overall average of a $15.2 million drop.

"We kind of expected that. We believe income tax (revenue) will be up in the spring," Alexander said.

Doug Macdonald, Utah Tax Commission chief economist, isn't as optimistic.

"We think things will improve after January, but it's still ugly," he said.

Personal income tax revenues were down more than 8 percent from projections in July and August, Macdonald's report shows.

*An 8 percent drop (in personal income tax revenues) is not a good thing," he said. If the trend continues during the next 10 months, it would equal a $92.4 million revenue shortfall, he added.

That would mean more budget cuts.

More than 50 state workers were laid off through the cuts this spring. State officials had expected that more than 300 workers could lose their jobs, but department executives were able to absorb much of the cuts through not replacing workers who left and diffusing around other responsibilities.

During the next three weeks, an economic board that advises the Legislature will review updated data and provide new estimates in October.

"We really don't have enough good numbers" to make a valid revenue projection now for the next nine months of the fiscal year, John Massey, legislative budget director, said Tuesday.

After the fiscal 2002 cuts, the state was able to end last fiscal year June 30 with a $4.4 million cash surplus. By law, $2 million had to go into the state's rainy day fund. $1 million had to go into the Industrial Assistance Fund and another $400,000 into a tiny fee account. So only $700,000 was officially surplus, said Alexander.

But because of the painful budget-cutting legislators made over the past nine months, less money was taken out of the reserve fund that originally believed.

Instead of $10 million left in the reserve fund by July 1, as expected — the fund now sits at $2.4 million, said Alexander.

Make it easier for those you love. Today, not Tomorrow. Together, not alone.

Cheney comes to Idaho to aid GOP campaigns

BOISE (AP) — Vice President Dick Cheney is expected to come to Boise next week to raise campaign funds for Idaho's top-of-the-ticket Republicans.

Netting the vice president's name when the administration is in the middle of negotiations with Congress and world governments about Iraq may be a coup for the beneficiaries, Republican Gov. Mike Kempthorne and 1st District Rep. Butch Otter.

But Democrats suggest the event is an indication that Kempthorne and Otter are having a hard time funding their campaigns.

The plans call for the vice president to be at Boise Centre on the Grove on Friday, Sept. 27, at 10:45 a.m. Those willing to shell out $2,000 can have their picture taken with Cheney.

Following the photo session, a luncheon is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. and will cost $125 per person, or $2,500 for a table for 10 persons.

Cheney last visited Boise in August 2001 for a $1,000-per-person event that raised more than $100,000 for Sen. Larry Craig's reelection bid.

Kempthorne campaign spokesman Jason Lehotski said that because of security concerns, he could not confirm that Cheney definitely was coming, although the invitations have been printed.

No candidates in recent memory — Republican or Democrat — have been able to garner a campaign visit from such a high-ranking official so close to the election.

Kempthorne faces Democratic challenger Jerry Brady, an Idaho Falls newspaper publisher who has the active support of former Democratic Govs. Cecil Andrus and John Evans.

Brady spokesman Brian Cronin said the vice president's visit might be an indication that Kempthorne is having trouble raising money for the campaign.

"I think bringing in a big gun like the vice president suggests that the Kempthorne campaign is very concerned about the challenge that Jerry Brady represents," Cronin said.

Lehotski said that's not the case.

"We're having a good time and being very successful with the events that we've had. We've had thousands of contributors statewide, and this visit will only help to increase the activity we already have out there."

Lehotski said he could not comment on how the vice president will schedule a trip to Idaho; whether the state Republican party first approached Cheney, or vice versa.

According to the most recently filed campaign finance disclosures statements, Brady had a cash balance of about $133,000 on June 7, while Kempthorne had $160,000.

Otter, who served as lieutenant governor under Kempthorne, faces Democrat Betty Richardson, a former U.S. attorney for Idaho.

Campaign finance disclosure reports filed with the Federal Election Commission in July showed Otter with a total financial commitment of $840,000. He had $149,000 of that in the bank when July began.

Richardson's total contributions were listed at $320,000, with about $112,000 in the bank.

Emotions flow at start of Yosemite killer's penalty trial

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — On the night he learned his daughter's charred body had been found in a car trunk near Yosemite National Park, a despondent Jose "Pepe" Pelosso set off to throw himself in front of a freight train.

The burly cattle rancher tearfully recounted his suicidal thoughts as he testified Thursday in the death penalty phase of Cary Stayner's trial for murdering his daughter Silvina and two family friends on a trip to the park three years ago.

Pelosso and his wife, Raquel, testified about the impact the crime has had on their lives since they temporarily uprooted to California in February 1999 in the hopes of finding their daughter alive after she vanished.

"A person who's never had the fortune to have a child will never know what it's like to lose one," Jose Pelosso told jurors. "It's a pain that doesn't just hurt a person physically or on the inside. It also hurts down to a person's soul."

The courtroom, a forum most recently of psychiatric opinions about Stayner's sanity, became an emotional stage on the day jurors were told that Stayner's life is in their hands. They are expected in two weeks of testimony before deciding whether Stayner gets life in prison or goes to death row.

The same panel convicted Stayner, 41, last month of mur-thoughts of his family and his remaining daughter quell the impulse to kill someone he refers to as a "nothing."

It was a phone call from his other daughter, Paula, 24, that kept Pelosso from hurling his body in front of the train in Modesto that night in March 1999 when he learned his younger daughter was dead.

Pelosso, whose broad shoulders shuddered as he sobbed, said he thinks the dead girl sent a signal to her older sister that her father was in trouble and the call saved his life.

"I knew Silvina had told her sister to call me," he said. "I can't think about any other thing."

FBI, police bust ring of prostitution on West Coast

SEATTLE (AP) — Young Southeast Asian women were brought to the West Coast with the promise of jobs, then forced into prostitution to pay their travel debts, say federal authorities who broke up a string of brothels.

A two-year investigation involving the FBI, Seattle police and other agencies led to the arrest of eight defendants in Seattle, Los Angeles and Portland, Ore., U.S. Attorney John McKay said Wednesday.

Arrested were seven men and one woman. The woman, Yuen Lan, of Los Angeles, was accused of supplying prostitutes to brothels nationwide.

Generally in their 20s, the women were brought to the United States from countries including China, Malaysia and Korea. Upon arrival, they were coerced into prostitution, McKay said.

The women were rotated to brothels throughout the country as far away as New York, he said, but declined to provide details on other areas involved.

These women are basically enslaved into this type of activity," McKay said.

The prostitution ring is the largest that has been addressed at the federal level in Seattle, said Charles Mandigo, special agent in charge of the Seattle FBI office.

It proved difficult to infiltrate because its operators were a tight-knit group that only served Asian men.

"They were very careful screening, so it makes it that much more difficult to get into the organization and understand what it is," Mandigo said.

Through the use of electronic surveillance and confidential informants, authorities were able to identify key people in the operation and obtain evidence leading to the arrests.

McKay said he anticipates more arrests around the country, but he did not elaborate.

In addition to the arrests, authorities have seven women in custody in Seattle, two in Portland and five in Los Angeles. The women were being held as witnesses in the investigation and for immigration investigations, McKay said.

He had no estimate of how many young women might have been involved.

Jury finds Idaho man guilty of possessing child pornography

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A federal jury on Thursday found a Boise man guilty of possessing child pornography while on the military base at Redstone Arsenal.

Ernest Michael Dodds, 32, of Boise, was charged with possessing obscene material from the Internet in U.S. District Court Thursday.

He was indicted May 2 when about 3,000 images of child pornography were found on his computer hard drive and a CD-Rom while he was on Redstone Arsenal.

Sentencing was set for Dec. 17 before Judge Tom Jackman. Dodds faces up to 10 years in prison without parole and a $500,000 fine.

The association had previously presented a plan which included money from a grant, city school foundation, school district and private parties. The grant was denied and the school district's funds were contingent on the grant.

The school foundation's $20,000 is still available and Eckert asked the district for $25,000 from the plant facility fund to hire a company from Salt Lake City to put a tension cement coating over the broken and cracked asphalt for a cost of $58,000. The tennis association has pledged to raise the remaining funds to complete the project.

Brian Bridwell, district treasurer, said because some bids came in lower than budgeted, there is about $400,000 available for various projects concerning the district.

The board agreed to consider the proposal and tabled a decision until October's meeting.

School district audit — Mike Burr, certified public accountant and district auditor, gave his report to the board.

"The district is in a good financial position but will want to watch the finances if the state Legislature makes another cut in schools," said Burr.

machines are used on Indian reservations in the state, and tribes so far have failed in the courts to legalize them, Noh said.

Leaders of the Coeur d'Alene, and Nez Perce tribes have said Proposition One is about jobs for Indians and money for Indian schools. The measure would require tribes to give 5 percent of their net gambling profits to reservation schools. And it would allow them to keep the video gaming machines as a source of much-needed income, the tribes said.

McKinnon can keep up a fast-paced game with the video machines that drain pockets quickly, Noh said.

"They have been called the crack cocaine of gambling," he said.

If Proposition One is passed, it could conceivably allow a casino to be built on any Indian lands, including land owned by the Shoshone-Bannock tribes next to Idaho State University, Noh said. The proposition doesn't define what it means by "Indian lands."

The tribes say they can get a special exemption for an off-reservation casino on lands they have owned before a 1988 federal law was passed. But it would require approval by the governor, proof that an exemption is needed in cases where the tribe doesn't have reservation land, proof that there wouldn't be any significant harm to local communities, and approval by the federal government.

But Noh will be among those challenging Proposition One's constitutionality in court should it be passed by voters. He belongs to the group Straight Talk: Gambling in Idaho Inc., a nonprofit organization created to raise money for legal challenges against the ballot initiative. The group lost its first constitutional challenge before the Idaho Supreme Court. The court said it couldn't rule on the initiative before it had become a law.

Noh faces Proposition One — even though it may not hold up in court if it is passed — will pave the way for Idaho to legalize gambling in the state. That is how the lottery materialized, he said. Voters passed a ballot measure ultimately deemed unconstitutional, but it generated enough political pressure that lawmakers eventually established the lottery.

Washington jury convicts confessed serial killer

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A Pierce County jury on Thursday convicted confessed serial killer Robert Lee Yates Jr. of aggravated first-degree murder in the killings of two prostitutes — the only crime in Washington state that carries the death penalty.

After less than two days of deliberations, the jury found Yates guilty of all three possible aggravating factors on both counts: he robbed his victims, that he killed them to conceal another crime and that the killings were part of a common scheme.

The same jury will decide whether he receives the death penalty or life in prison without the possibility of parole. The penalty hearing begins Tuesday.

Yates' lawyers opened their case by conceding their client admitted the shooting deaths of Melinda Mercer, 24, in 1997 and Connie LaFontaine Ellis, 35, in 1998, but argued the crimes did not meet the legal criteria for aggravated first-degree murder. Pierce County prosecutors countered that the murders fit the pattern of Yates' 10 Spokane-area slayings between 1996 and 1998, thus constituting a common scheme of crime. Yates, 50, and a father of five confessed to 13 murders in Spokane County two years ago and is serving 408 years in prison under a plea deal with prosecutors there. Pierce County prosecutors refused to agree to that deal, reached in October 2000.

Police linked Yates to a string of murders in 2000, when they traced carpet fibers in a white Corvette Yates once owned to Jennifer Joseph, 16, whose body was found in rural Spokane County 10 days after a friend saw her getting into the car.

The state called 90 witnesses during the five-week trial, including detectives from the Spokane Serial Homicide Task Force that arrested Yates, an FBI profiler and friends of the victims.

Defense attorneys presented their case in less than two days last week, calling 10 witnesses. Yates did not testify.

Four defense witnesses were prostitutes who described Yates as a "good date" who paid up front, did not request kinky sex and wore a condom.

The two women Yates has killed since 1996 all were involved in prostitution. All were shot in the head.

Therapists face loss of licenses for conduct

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — State licensing officials are accusing two Orem social workers of unprofessional conduct and gross incompetence for treatment methods that could sicken the children they purport to help.

Lawrence Lee VanBloom and Jennie Murdock Gilliam run the Cascade Center for Family Growth. The clinic once treated a 4-year-old Springfield girl who died after her adoptive parents allegedly forced her to drink too much water.

The parents, Richard and Jennette Killpack, appeared on national television to deny they intentionally harmed their daughter and said they were acting on the advice of Cascade and VanBloom. The Killpacks are charged with child abuse homicide.

The petition, filed on Wednesday by the Utah Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing, could strip VanBloom and Gilliam of their clinical social worker licenses.

It does not, however, implicate the clinic or its therapists in the 4-year-old's death. VanBloom has said he never recommended that the parents force the girl to guzzle water. The petition is based on alleged conduct with other patients — not the dead 4-year-old.

The 14-count petition alleges offenses including failure to properly document their treatment methods, failure to get parental permission for treatments and use of inappropriate physical treatments such as lying across children's chests.

A message left by The Associated Press at the clinic was not immediately returned on Thursday.

Scott Thompson, a spokesman for the state Department of Commerce, which oversees the licensing division, said the social workers have 30 days to respond to the charges.

While Thompson called their conduct "unprofessional," it doesn't necessarily warrant criminal charges. A spokesman for Orem police, Lt. Doug Edwards, said he knew of no pending criminal investigation concerning the clinic.

District judge apologizes for remarks to attorney

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The district judge who has presided over a field burning case has apologized for criticizing the grass-seed growers' attorney after the lawyer questioned the judge's objectivity.

First District Judge John Mitchell apologized for claiming grower attorney Mike Ramsden blind-sided him by questioning the judge's authority to restrict field burning while arguing the case to the state Supreme Court. Ramsden had not brought up the issue with Mitchell beforehand.

"This is an emotionally charged area," said Mitchell, whose restrictions on burning were overturned by the high court last week. "It is frustrating, though, to me, trying to do my job, to not have all the evidence presented to me."

Ramsden replied by accusing Mitchell of maliciously trying to damage his reputation in remarks during court proceedings.

"Can this court give all of the parties a fair hearing?" Ramsden asked. "Within the limits of what I can say, I am worried."

Ramsden also objected to Mitchell's characterization of the comments of Republican state Rep. Wayne Meyer, a Rathdrum seed grower, as "arrogant and insensitive." Meyer had suggested that children sickened by the field smoke could move somewhere else.

A coalition of doctors wants to ban field burning, claiming it is damaging to health. But growers have maintained there is no scientific link between poor health and smoke from field burning.

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush answers questions from reporters Thursday in Boynton Beach, Fla.

Florida seeks feds' help with election mess

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida has issued a call for help to the U.S. Justice Department as it tries to shake off yet another election fiasco.

In a letter sent Wednesday to Attorney General John Ashcroft, Florida Secretary of State Jim Smith said problems in Miami-Dade and Broward counties during last week's primary rattled confidence in the state's efforts to reform its election system.

Smith said Thursday he had "absolutely no evidence whatsoever that any civil rights violations occurred or anything of that nature" during the primary when some polling places didn't open on time, others closed early and some votes were not counted in the original tally.

He said the Justice Department "has broad powers" and "lots of options" in responding to the state's request for help.

"We're reaching out to every level of government," Smith said during a stop at the Broward sheriff's office to thank deputies for helping with the county's ballot review.

Political newcomer Bill McBride narrowly defeated former Attorney General Janet Reno in last week's Democratic primary for governor, but the election miscues were reminiscent of the debacle in Florida during the 2000 White House race.

The balloting this time was beset with equipment failures and human errors despite a $32 million overhaul of Florida's election system to get rid of punch-card ballots and install touch-screen voting machines.

Smith, Florida's top elections official, said the state is reviewing the problems and asked Ashcroft to "take whatever steps you deem necessary to participate in this review." He also asked the Justice Department to assist elections supervisors in entering a smooth general election.

Gov. Jeb Bush, the president's brother, also sent Ashcroft a letter supporting Smith's request.

Justice spokesman Jorge Martinez said the department would carefully review the letter, but declined further comment Wednesday.

Prison releases wrong man — son instead of father

YORK, Pa. (AP) — A 16-year-old was mistakenly released from prison instead of his father, who was supposed to be freed from the same facility.

York County Prison officials meant to release Marty Boanes Sr. Wednesday, but instead set free Marty Boanes Jr. "It was a human error. We'll have to deal with that," said prison Warden Tom Hogan. "There's nothing wrong with the procedures in place. We have to figure out what went wrong."

The younger Boanes, who is charged with aggravated assault and reckless endangerment, had not been found by Thursday morning, police said. He was incarcerated Aug. 26.

Marty Boanes Sr. was still released as scheduled.

Scorpio exudes sex appeal; Libra should concentrate on job at hand

IF SEPTEMBER 20TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you are analytical, possess instinctive sense of what is secure or otherwise. You could succeed in real estate or as "marriage broker."

Capricorn, Cancer natives play active roles in your life, could have these letters in names: B, K, T. In October, you undergo period of introspection. November will be most memorable!

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Keep out of sight as much as possible. Work behind scenes; you will be trusted with secret. Get promises in writing; don't confide or confess. You'll make remarkable comeback.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Suddenly, the world seems beautiful. Wishes comes true in areas of money and love. Make this your power-play day! Organize priorities, then take direct action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will be "flirting" with fame, fortune. You possess secret of universal appeal. Shake off lethargy, get into the game - the game of life!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will make fresh start; plus, philosophical concepts undergo transformation. You will be involved in discussions over politics, religion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Guard valuables, don't give up something for nothing. Focus on unique collections, major decision relating to home, marital status.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Forces are scattered; don't permit any person to "borrow" your signature. Spotlight on proposals that include business, marriage. Be positive concerning legal rights, permissions.

HOROSCOPE

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Grass is not necessarily greener across the way. Concentrate on the basics. Finish job at hand. Health matters require attention; keep resolutions relating to exercise, diet and nutrition.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You emit vibrations of personality, creativity and sex appeal. Gain via written word. Keep promises to young person. You will obtain story behind the story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be alert concerning upkeep of property. Family member will cooperate. Domestic adjustment includes where you live, marital status. Dance to your own tune.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relative could deceive you, deliberately or otherwise. Define your own terms, perfect techniques and speed up production. Look behind the scenes; something "mysterious" is going on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight on organization, financial reward. Relationship gets hot and heavy. Decision relates to marriage. Older individual exerts influence on your side.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Rise above current circumstances. Look beyond the immediate; journey overseas is distinct possibility. Glamorous individual falls in love with you.

IRISH FLAVOR

The four members of Wood's Tea Company specialize in Celtic music, but play other styles as well, including bluegrass.

Wood's Tea Company opens concert season

Wood's Tea Company is working on a new live album from recordings made during its 2001-2002 tour. "We had great success with the previous 'Live' album," Wooden said. "It's been a best-seller. But the band's sound has changed quite a bit in the past few years, so this new recording will be more in line with where we're at today." The Community Concerts season will continue Nov. 12 with a concert by singer-songwriter Elizabeth Von in the Roper Auditorium. Baritone Robert Sims will sing on Feb. 21 at the Roper, and vocal quintet Hudson Shad will perform on March 23, also at the Roper.

TWIN FALLS - A musical group that defies categorization, Wood's Tea Company uses as many as a dozen different instruments ranging from banjos, bezouks and bodhrans to guitars and tin whistles. They'll open the Magic Valley Community Concerts season with a Saturday-night concert in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium. Vocalist/guitarist Rusty Jacobs and vocalist/banjo-player Mike Lussen have played together for years, inspired by the music of folk legend Woody Guthrie.

They started out playing to small college audiences in New England, then expanded to coffee houses and Irish pubs. Their repertoire today is largely Celtic, but add in folk, bluegrass and maritime music, mixed with dry humor. Together with bassist Howard Wooden and violinist Chip Chase, Jacobs and Lussen have produced seven records and have toured widely nationally, including concerts in Twin Falls in 1996 and 1998. "We've got 20 concerts planned for September," Jacobs said. "So although there will be a lot of travel, we're really looking forward to playing these shows and meeting new folks."

Children tilt away from pinball machines

The Washington Post
That moment of pinball Zen arrives for Michael Moon when he becomes one with the plastic flippers and the steel ball ricochets around the table for minutes on end. The "Attack from Mars" machine he's playing comes alive with gaudy effects - zapping, bubbling and erupting with robot-like digital exclamations such as "Jackpot!" "When people see you're still playing and it's getting more noisy, sometimes crowds gather around," said Moon, 32, of Alexandria, Va. "It's a great feeling to have people clapping for you when you're done." For pinball, though, the applause is dying out. Blame the stunted attention spans of children. Blame the Internet. Blame Bill Gates and his little X-Box. Whatever the reason, pinball's vanishing - from America's cultural landscape, and a handful of pinball fanatics think that's a shame. In the basement vending room of the Northern Virginia Community College cafeteria building in Annandale, Moon and others in the Free State Pinball Association take turns hunching intently over four machines. Members of the group, created in Maryland in 1995, work magic with the flippers - using spfers, traps, nudges and a bump transfer between flippers equivalent to basketball crossover dribble - to keep the ball going and to win up to $1.56, 613,020 on machines with names such as "Monsters Bash" and "Medieval Madness."

Fans lament the game's fading glory

Inc. now has the market to itself. Company President Gary Stern said his company survives by shipping two-thirds of its products overseas. Gary Stern is "about the last of the Mohicans," says Vending Times publisher Vic Levy. To stay alive in the vending world, companies had to make the machines less cheesy and more sexy, linking them to movies and pop culture. One company made "Dirty Harry" pinball machines in the mid-1990s with Clint Eastwood doing the "Go ahead, make my day" voice recordings. Stern is following that path, cranking out about 10,000 machines a year with modern or R-rated themes, including "South Park," Austin Powers, Playboy and Harley-Davidson. By contrast, four companies made 100,000 machines a year in 1990. "It's an American icon," said Stern, ever the salesman. "Pinball is cool because it is retro. It's a Volkswagen bug, a PT Cruiser, khaki pants." Computer chips have made the games more intelligent, but they remain unpredictable. "The ball is wild," Stern said. "Unlike a computer-generated game, a video game or a touch-screen game, you have a ball that you don't know exactly what it will do." Pinball association President Bernie Kelm of Glen Burnie said that "little bit of randomness" makes the game's appeal last longer than a game that can be absolutely mastered. Arcade operators say youngsters like to master a game and move on. They don't like games like pinball that are impossible to defeat. "People just don't know how cool pinball is," Moon said.

Reformed honky-tonker Ray Price plays Jackpot

The Times-News
JACKPOT - One of the legends of Nashville is stopping by for the weekend. Ray Price, a honky-tonk legend and eight times Billboard's country singer of the year, will do four shows at Cactus Petes Resort Casino tonight and Saturday. Price, best-known for his 1970 crossover hit "For the Good Times," has been Nashville institution for 51 years, since he signed a record contract with Columbia. Influenced by Hank Williams, he befriended Williams and joined his show in 1951, then became a member of the Grand Ole Opry in 1952. During his years at Columbia, he hired some of country's best musicians. Willie Nelson, Roger Miller and Johnny Paycheck were all, at one time or another, members of Price's Cherokee Cowboys. In 1956, Price had his first No. 1 hit with "Crazy Arms," and followed it with a long string of top-selling records that included "City Lights," "Heartaches by the Number" and "Heart Over Mind" - many of which featured a 4/4 shuffle rhythm that became his trademark. He later changed his sound and image from dance hall honky-tonker to smooth-voiced country-pop balladeer, a controversial evolution. The Texas-born Price, now 76, began performing while-in-va-venery school. This weekend's four show are cocktails-only.

WEEKEND

Area theaters will go 'Ballistic' this weekend

Combined wire service

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, Associated Press and Knight Ridder reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Austin Powers In Goldmember'

After opening strong with a tribute to itself, packed with movie-star cameos, 'Goldmember' turns into a reheated self-love feast divided four ways: Myers as Austin, returning to the '70s to stop a diabolical genius from destroying the world; Myers as the diabolical Dutch genius Goldmember; Myers as the other diabolical genius Dr. Evil; and Myers as the walking gross-out gag Fat Bastard, whose purpose is undefined. Beyonce Knowles acts sassy as blaxploitation queen Foxy Cleopatra, and Michael Caine shows up as Austin's dad, Nigel, but when Verne Troyer's mute Mini-Me ends up being the funniest thing in the film, you know you have script problems. Maybe in the next film, Myers can play him, too. Rated PG-13; rampant sex and bathroom humor. 1 hour, 34 minutes.

'Ballistic: Ecks vs. Sever'

Antonio Banderas and Lucy Liu star as rival espionage operatives who vie for possession of an advanced assassination device. Directed by Kaos.

'The Banger Sisters'

Chuckles and dry smiles abound as uptight suburban mom Lavinia (Susan Sarandon) gets blindsided by a visit from old friend Suzette (Goldie Hawn) in director Bob Dolman's sweetly nostalgic buddy film 'The Banger Sisters.' While the two women share a wild past as rock 'n' roll groupies who once bedded every drugged-out musician on the plan-

Big box office

- Last weekend's top-grossing movies:
1. 'Barbershop,' MGM.
 2. 'My Big Fat Greek Wedding,' IFC Films.
 3. 'One Hour Photo,' Fox Searchlight.
 4. 'Stealing Harvard,' Sony.
 5. 'Swimfan,' 20th Century Fox.

et, they find themselves on a present-day collision course — and Lavinia has to decide how much of that past she wants to reveal to her very curious family. Can their friendship stand the test of time? You bet, with a fine, funny performance from Sarandon. R for language, sexual content and some drug use. 97 minutes.

'Barbershop'

A warm and wise comedy, often uproarious but with an underlying seriousness, set in a vintage Chicago barbershop, a traditional gathering place for African American males. Ice Cube stars as its proprietor, a well-meaning young man who in setting his sights beyond his previous owners, his father and grandfather, comes to appreciate the barbershop's true value only when it may be too late to save it. This most satisfying movie has a large ensemble cast headed by the one and only Cedric the Entertainer, whose outrageous take on black icons is hilarious. (1:42. PG-13, for language, sexual content and brief drug references.)

'Blue Crush'

What had been hyped as this summer's 'Fast and the Furious,' with estrogen and surfboards replacing testosterone and hot cars, turns out to be all buzz and blue sky, a formulaic melodrama about a gifted female surfer (Kate Bosworth) who jeopardizes her opportunity to make a national splash when she hooks up with a pro quarterback on vacation in Oahu. The locations are beautiful but, as with the surf sequences, it's impossible to know what's real and what's created in the computer. Rated PG-13; sexual situations, language, violence. 1 hour, 47 minutes.

'The Bourne Identity'

A tip-top espionage thriller starring Matt Damon takes the crack-crack premise of Robert Ludlum's 1980 novel about an amnesiac spy and runs with it. In director Doug Liman's hands, this potentially overly familiar scenario takes on unexpected sparkle. He is so good at the mechanics of action that they don't feel like mechanics, and he and his actors have used intense but low-key line readings to infuse a sense of reality onto these proceedings, to make this a character-driven story about young people we might know caught in a situation we can barely imagine. With Franka Potente, Chris Cooper, Brian Cox, Julia Stiles and Clive Owen. (1:58. PG-13, for violence and some language.)

'City by the Sea'

This cop drama veers so far from the actual facts of the fascinating case on which it is based that it either has to be dismissed as a distortion or appreciated simply for the well-acted and -directed movie it is. De Niro plays an emotionally shut-down detective who discovers the primary suspect in the case he's investigating is his estranged junkie son (James Franco), and his performance here is nothing new or revelatory. But after the string of losers he's slummed through lately, it's to be reminded of what he can do with a few spare lines of dialogue and an interesting character. Rated R; violence, language. 1 hour, 48 minutes.

'Lilo & Stitch'

With its lush watercolor-style backgrounds and hand-drawn characters, Disney's annual summer family outing originally appears to be a throwback to the olden days of animation. But as soon we're introduced to its title characters — a lonely, angry little Hawaiian girl and an extremely bad-tempered alien she adopts on the assumption that it's a really ugly little dog — we recognize this as a radical departure. 'Lilo & Stitch' has far more in common with the Looney Tunes lunacy of Bugs Bunny and Road Runner shorts than with 'The Little Mermaid.' It does, eventually, redeem its troublemaking tag team and embrace the Hawaiian concept of ohana — family — but not before a whole lot of stuff gets hilariously wrecked, ripped and eaten. Rated PG; comic violence. 1 hour, 25 minutes.

'Men in Black II'

Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith are cool, so much so that cukes want to chill like Tommy Lee and Will. Big the real mystery of this sequel is their 1997 blockbuster about the men who police alien activity: is how they maintain their cool with such tepid material. With Rose McGowan and Lara Flynn Boyle. 1 hr. 22 PG-13 (sexual references, violence, goopy aliens, exorcism)

Compass from C2
 Via, Vardalos would like to be the Greek Mountie. It never flies that high. Still, its fairy-tale story about a Greek-American (Vardalos) who makes her crazy family crazy by falling for a WASP Prince Charming (John Corbett) lets Vardalos show off her talent as an actor and an observational comic. Michael Costantine and Lailie Kazan play her parents, loudly, and many lambs are sacrificed in the name of tradition. Rated PG; language. 1 hour, 35 minutes.

 Robin Williams may be trying too hard to show his warm and fuzzy image with his recent string of socio- and psychopaths, but he hits just the right level of insinuating creepiness in this first feature from writer-director Mark Romanek. Williams plays a disc-jockey-turned-photo-developer who becomes obsessed with the seemingly perfect lives of a family whose pictures he has developed for a decade. The story itself is pretty predetermined - it's told in flashback - but Williams' performance is composed of small, disturbing and rewarding surprises. Rated R; violence, language, sexual theme. 1 hour, 38 minutes.

'Road to Perdition'
 Director Sam Mendes follows his Academy Award-winning social satire 'American Beauty' with a loss-of-innocence saga of fathers and sons, disguised in the trench coats and tough talk of a gangster movie. Tom Hanks stars as a family man who is also a Depression-era mob enforcer and who gets a taste of his own bad meat when his wife and youngest son are murdered. Now he's forced to take along the older son (Tyler Hoechlin) he barely knows on his quest for vengeance. Paul Newman plays Hanks' weary surrogate father John Rooney, Daniel Craig the no-good blood son of Rooney and Jude Law a hit man dispatched to take Hanks down. The film is beautifully designed and photographed by the great Conrad Hall, and it is surprisingly entertaining considering its dark, deliberate tone. Rated R; violence, language. 1 hour, 59 minutes.

'Scotland, Pa.'
 A black comedy retelling of Shakespeare's Macbeth, set against the backdrop of a fast food restaurant in early 70's, rural Pennsylvania. This classic tale of gall and betrayal centers on the McBeths, Joe 'Mac' (James LeGros) and Pat (Maura Tierney) who are stuck in their dead end jobs at Duncan's Restaurant. Pat is getting restless and hatches a plan as 'Mac' starts to see things - three hippies, Andy Dick, Amy Smart and Timothy 'Speed' Levitch) to be exact. Their boss, Norm Duncan (James Rebhorn), is a visionary who has dreams of turning his restaurant into a Fast Food empire. His idea will revolutionize the Fast Food industry and nobody knows about it - not the happy customers in his small town, his employees, or his two dysfunctional teenage sons, Malcolm (Tom Guiry) and Donald (Goff Dunswoth). When Norm meets with a bizarre death, Lieutenant Ernie McDuff (Christopher Walken) is called in to investigate.

'Serving Sara'
 One of the more cynical and insulting Hollywood offerings of recent memory, this crushingly unfunny new comedy was nominally directed by Reginald Hudlin and ostensibly written by Jay Scherick and David Ronn, who either show guile or foolishness in keeping their names on this odiferous mess. Smiling through the wreckage, Elizabeth Hurley redies her lines with unmodulated cheeriness, feigning obliviousness to a leering camera. Meow Meow, Matthew Perry, an agreeable small-screen presence seeking a large-screen future, barely registers. With Vincent Pastore, Bruce Campbell and Cedric the Entertainer. (1:40. PG-13, for crude humor, sexual content and language.)

'Signs'
 M. Night Shyamalan creates nearly unbearable dread in this drawn-out thriller about a Pennsylvania farm family whose members discover crop circles in their cornfields and fear this makes them targets for - well, whatever is out there. While it takes itself deadly seriously, it's also the first Shyamalan film that deliberately goes for laughs to ease the tension. Mel Gibson stars as a depressed father and minister who has lost his faith - do you see a sermon coming? - while Joaquin Phoenix plays his rather dim but devoted younger brother. It all works until the climax, which is just ridiculous. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 51 minutes.

'Spy Kids 2'
 If you saw last summer's 'Spy Kids', then this irresistibly clever sequel will surely be on your summer movie agenda. If you didn't, and you end up seeing the sequel anyway, you will almost certainly add a trip to the video store to rent or buy the original. Daryl Sabara and Alex Vega, the children of retired secret agents Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino, compete with another set of spy siblings to locate a secret something-or-other that could destroy the world. The something-or-other has found its way to an island populated by a mad genius and mutant creatures. If their concerned parents weren't enough distraction, they now also have retired secret agent grandparents (Holland Taylor and Ricardo Montalban) to contend with. Rated PG; bathroom humor, violence. 1 hour, 38 minutes.

'Swimfan'
 'Fatal Attraction' for the Britney Spears set, this is a guilty pleasure about a high school swim-team hunk who can't shake a one-night stand. What begins as a fairly no-nonsense thriller takes a dive in the second half as the girl exacts her gruesome revenge. Rated PG-13; language, sexual content, violence. 1 hour, 30 minutes.

'Stealing Harvard'
 Dreadful mamskull comedy about a timid guy (Jason Lee) who turns to his weirdo pal (Tom Green) to get his hands on $30,000 to uphold a long-forgotten promise to his niece to send her to college. This propels them on a series of lame and uninspired shenanigans. With Leslie Mann, Megan Mullally, Dennis Farina. (1:23. PG-13, for crude and sexual humor, language and drug references.)

'Trapped'
 Two couples - one set of kid-nappers and one set of victims - face off as an extortion plan unravels. With Charlize Theron, Courtney Love, Stuart Townsend, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Dakota Fanning and Kevin Bacon. Written by Greg Iles, based on his novel '24 Hours.' Directed by Luis Mandoki. (Not screened for review.)

'Undisputed'
 Director Walter Hill and co-writer David Giler's boxing/prison picture is as smart as it is bawdy. An old con (Peter Falk) schemes to stage a match between the prison champ (Wesley Snipes) and the newly arrived world champ (Ving Rhames), convicted, possibly unjustly, of rape. Sly, funny, consistently imaginative and entertaining, and considering subject matter and setting, remarkably free of violence. With Michael Rooker, Jon Seda, Wes Studi, Fisher Stevens and Master P. (1:30. R, for strong language.)

'XXX'
 Maybe this isn't the first movie titled after a tattoo, but it may be the first one where the tattoo tells a more interesting story. Vin Diesel, he of the big bald head and cruel charisma, plays underground extreme-sports legend X (the other two Xs are for emphasis). He's recruited by National Security Agency agent Samuel L. Jackson (substituting a wig for an actual character) to be a bad-boy James Bond. X is dropped into decadent old Prague to infiltrate

Anarchy 99, which is not one of the industrial noise bands on the soundtrack, but a gang of Eurotrash-terrorists led by Marton Csokas. Director Rob Cohen ('The Fast and the Furious') apparently imagines all this as the epitome of hip, instead of some long-discarded dance club theme night. Rated PG-13; language, violence, sexual situations. 1 hour, 53 minutes.

WEEKEND

'Monsters, Inc.,' 'Panic Room' hit area video shelves

The Washington Post

New movies in Twin Falls-area video stores this week

'Monsters, Inc.'

In a hidden world inhabited by monsters of every shape and size, grizzly-faced James 'Sully' Sullivan (voiced by John Goodman) and his one-eyed blob of a Scare Assistant, Mike Wazowski (Billy Crystal), work at Monsters, Inc. It's a factory that exists to scare kids. But the monsters are scared of kids themselves. Here's another gem from the Pixar Animation team (headed by John Lasseter), which gave us the 'Toy Story' movies, this movie directed by Peter Dinklage is simple and technologically sophisticated entertainment. Contains nothing objectionable except some scary suspense. Rated G.

'Panic Room'

Somewhat less of a white-knuckle ride than you might expect, director David Fincher's 'Panic Room' is a home-invasion thriller about a mother and daughter (Jodie Foster and Kristen Stewart) under siege in the bowels of their own luxury brownstone. It is never less a treat for the eyes and ears. When a trio of bad guys (Forrest Whitaker, Jared Leto and Dwight Yoakam) break into the home of Meg Alister (Foster), she and her preteen daughter retreat to the security of a built-in 'panic room,' which - surprise - turns out to be not so secure. As they sweat it out, Fincher does his best to underscore their claustrophobia and confinement with innovative camerawork. Contains violence, emotional intensity and obscenity. R.

suit played by Edward Norton. On celluloid, however, the film just consumes itself with the aid of its own anger, which spirals way out of proportion to the nature of the offense. Foul-mouthed and unfocused, 'Smoochy' just spews bile at whatever and whomever it can get its hands on. Contains corrosive obscenity, cartoonish violence and sexual subject matter. R.

'40 Days and 40 Nights'

After getting the heave-ho from his glibster boss (Vinessa Shaw), Web designer Matt Sullivan (Josh Hartnett) decides to forego all sexual relationships for Lent. Easter said that done. Matt's world is bustling with babes. To make matters worse, he meets and really likes Erica (Shannyn Sossamon), who could be The One. Director Michael Lehmann, who made the excellent 'Heathers' gives the movie smooth momentum. And first-time scriptwriter Rob Perez tweaks the familiar formula to maximum comedic capacity. You don't even despise yourself for laughing. Hartnett is a charm too. Contains crude humor, obscenity, sexual scenes and nudity. R.

'Frailty'

A stranger (Matthew McConaughey) calling himself Fenton Meeks, walks into the FBI office of Agent Wesley Doyle (Powers Boothe) and claims to know the identity of a serial killer known as the 'God's Hand' murderer. His flashback narrative tells of a Southern family (led by Bill Paxton) destroyed by misguided notions and bloodshed in the name of the Almighty. Paxton's directorial debut is a well wrought horror story, but takes cheap, point-blank potshots at religion more cold and stunned than enlightened. Contains overall intensity and brutal (although off-screen) violence. R.

'Holywood Ending'

Hal Waxman (Woody-Allen) is a washed-up filmmaker who gets a second chance when his estranged wife Ellie (Tea Leoni) and her producer-boyfriend (Treat Williams) offer him a great job directing a movie about his beloved New York City. Val says yes, but his psychosomatic demons are so strong that he goes temporarily blind. Rather than admit his blindness, Val proceeds with the picture anyway. It's a great concept, but the execution is oddly disappointing. One problem: there's zero chemistry or credibility between Allen's Val and Leoni's Ellie. However, Allen being the verbally comic genius he is, comes up with the great lines. So, you won't leave completely empty-handed. Contains sexual language and situations and some drug references. PG-13.

'Kissing Jessica Stein'

Jennifer Westfeldt is a charm as the Jessica of the title. Her quest for that someone special becomes easier when she contemplates dating a woman (Heather Juergensen) instead of a man. The movie is hardly going to challenge 'Annie Hall' (which it occasionally emulates) for best New York movie romance. But director Charles Herman-Wurmfeld and writers Westfeldt and Juergensen steer a canny course between the movie's theme (that women can find romantically and spiritually fulfilling relationships with each other) and amusing entertainment (for general or at least open-minded audiences). Contains sexual situations and graphic language. R.

Art project focuses on cancer awareness

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council and the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's Women's Health Center have joined to present a new art project focused on breast cancer awareness.

The project, Art for Life, will showcase the talent of four southern Idaho artists and lend a new visual arts element to breast cancer awareness.

Artists living in southern Idaho were invited to submit proposals for the project and a jury chose four artists - Chris Bolton, Connie Wood, Mickey Tanner and Kay Seurat - to participate in the event. The art pieces will illustrate the artist's conception of breast cancer awareness. The foundation for the artwork will be a bra, and the artists will create individual pieces that are interpretive of breast cancer and the need for awareness and early detection.

The Art of Life pieces will be showcased at the arts council's "Art After Hours and All That Jazz" on Oct. 15 from 5:30 to 9 p.m. at Muggers' Upstairs in Old Towne.

For more information about Art for Life, call 734-2787.

ENGAGEMENT

WILSON-HANCHEY

TWIN FALLS — Jim and Connie Wilson of Longview, Wash., announce the engagement of their daughter, Candi Michelle Wilson, to Jeff Hanchey, son of Bob and Sue Hanchey of Twin Falls.

Wilson graduated from R.A. Long High School in Longview and attended the University of Washington. She is employed at Starbucks in Boise.

Hanchey graduated from Twin Falls High School and attended the University of Idaho in Moscow.

The wedding is planned for

Jeff Hanchey and Candi Wilson

Saturday at the First Christian Church in Twin Falls. A reception will follow the ceremony Saturday at The Ballroom in Twin Falls.

Johnny Carson says he's fine

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Carson, retired king of late-night television, has emphysema, but says it isn't causing any major problems.

Carson had just finished playing tennis when he learned of a tabloid report that claimed he is seriously ill.

A National Enquirer story that the New York Post cited in Thursday's editions said the 76-year-old Carson had become a virtual recluse aboard his luxury yacht.

Carson has "been grappling with killer emphysema for several years and wants to stay out of the public eye," the supermarket tabloid said in an issue on newsstands Friday.

Many cases of emphysema, which causes shortness of breath, can be attributed to cigarette smoking. It cannot be cured, but if caught early, its progression can be halted.

The former talk-show host, who smoked on the air for many years, said he learned of the reports after playing tennis for 45 minutes at his Point Dume estate.

WEDDING

BORROWMAN-BLEVINS

JEROME — Brady Carl Borrowman and Brandon (Brandt) Elizabeth Blevins were married June 1 in Stanley.

The bride is the daughter of Doug and Cheri Blevins of Jerome.

The groom is the son of Mike Borrowman of Jerome and Missy Firth of Hagerman.

Ashley Blevins, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Abigail and Maddison Blevins, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Mike Borrowman, father of the groom, served as best man. Bryce Mangum, brother of the groom, served as groomsman.

A celebration in their honor will be held Saturday at Blue Lakes Country Club.

The couple and their son, Mason, will reside in Jerome.

TRIVIA

QUESTION:

Which school has the NCAA Division I-A record for the longest home winning streak? ...answer below

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

- High school volleyball: Elko, Nev., at Jerome, 6 p.m.
- High school cross country: District 5A-4A at Minico, 4 p.m.
- High school boys soccer: Wendell at Bliss, 5:30 p.m.

IN BRIEF

School District suspends coach

POCATELLO - The head coach for defending two-time Class 4A football champion Century High School has been indefinitely suspended following an apparent confrontation between Century and Highland High School students before last week's game.

"I don't want to say it was an argument or an altercation," Highland vice principal Dave Ross said. "It was more of a discussion."

Layne Coffin was suspended by the Pocatello School District at least until next Wednesday's hearing before the school board. District athletic director Dan Gillins is investigating the incident.

Secondary Education Director Kathy Collins said Coffin is still teaching his regular high school classes. The suspension applies only to his role as football coach. Officials have declined to discuss the incident beyond the comments from Ross that the Century football team came on the field at Holt Arena at about the same time as the Highland team last Friday and "that's when it occurred."

Coffin did not elaborate beyond telling the incident a discussion.

Lewis re-align

SEATTLE - The Seattle Seahawks re-aligned free agent guard Rashard Lewis to a seven-year contract Thursday.

Financial terms of the deal were not immediately disclosed. Lewis, 23, averaged a career-high 16.8 points and seven rebounds in 71 games for Seattle last season, his fourth with the team. He led the team in scoring, second in assists and had 16 double-doubles.

"I am extremely happy to have Rashard back as part of this team," coach Nate McMillan said.

He was chosen with the 32nd pick of the 1998 draft by the team out of Allef Elak High School in Allet, Texas.

In 251 career games, Lewis has drained 12.2 points and 5.5 rebounds.

Bruins, Spartans look to build momentum

T.F. aims to avenge last year's costly loss

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - RESPECT. That's all that is on the line tonight when Twin Falls hosts the Minico Spartans at Bruin Stadium at 7:30 p.m. in the Bruins' home-opener and homecoming game.

Minico's 15-0 victory a year ago snapped a 15-game Bruins winning streak and helped propel the Spartans to their first winning season since 1981.

"That win was just huge for us," Minico coach Tim Ferrigot said. "It gave us a lot of confidence and really helped us the rest of the way."

As big as that win was for the Spartans, it might have been just as devastating to a Twin Falls team that struggled to a 1-8 record.

A vastly improved Class 5A Bruin squad is looking to put the Class 4A Spartans back in their place, and more importantly, put the Bruins back on track after falling to Century Friday. Both teams enter tonight's contest with identical 1-1 records.

The Bruins stayed with the two-time reigning Class 4A state champion Diamondbacks most of the way, but coughed the ball up five times including four interceptions.

"We're definitely going to have our hands full," Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal said. "What it comes down to when you're evenly matched is the turnovers - who causes the most turnovers and who makes the most mental mistakes."

Both coaches know that a victory tonight will be invaluable to building momentum for the remainder of the season.

"They are a lot better team this year," Ferrigot said. "But I really think in the past that when it came down to the last five minutes, we didn't believe. Now, we believe. We know they're beatable."

The Spartans know they will have to stop Bruin quarterback Luc Martin and a much better air attack than the one they faced a year ago to go along with the running game that is powered by Jake Salinas, who has rushed for 260 yards in two games.

"They put you in a seven-man front and then it's just your guys against their guys on the line," Ferrigot said.

A week after Martin threw four interceptions in the Bruins' 43-29 loss to Century, Ferrigot admits the junior signal-caller will see some pressure from his defensive unit. He's just not saying how much.

"He's young and inexperienced and you're going to get some mistakes with someone like that," Ferrigot said. "But he seems like the type of player who will improve every game. There will be certain situations where he will see some pressure."

Schaal feels Martin will be up to the test.

"I think he learned a lot. (Last week) was a big step for him," Schaal said. "He made some poor decisions and hopefully, he'll learn from that and it doesn't happen again."

Brandon Fjeld will be a key cog in keeping pressure off Martin. Fjeld scored a pair of touchdowns

Game of the Week

Minico at Twin Falls
Where: Bruin Stadium
When: 7:30 p.m.
Series: Twin Falls leads 30-7
Last meeting: Minico shut out Twin Falls 15-0 last year.
Keys to victory: Minico - Spartans need to find ways to get ball to Cole and Worthington and stretch the Twin Falls defense to open up running lanes. Twin Falls - Recognizing Minico's defensive alignments and minimizing turnovers.

A's edge ahead of Angels

Long's home run lifts Oakland to division lead

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. - The Oakland Athletics put up another win, then pulled out their cowboy hats to head to a country concert.

Just another reminder how relaxed this group really is - even after one of their biggest games of the season.

"It will be more enjoyable," starter Tim Lincecum said in the sixth inning and the A's broke a tie for first in the AL West by defeating the Anaheim Angels 5-3 Thursday.

Terrence Long hit a tiebreaking, two-run homer in the sixth inning and the A's won the season series 11-9, reduced their magic number for clinching the division to eight. If the teams tie for first, Oakland would win the division based on head-to-head record. The Angels, who lead the wild-card race by 6.5 games, would have held the tiebreaker based on division record if they had won the game.

In Oakland manager Art Howe

playing close games, there was sure to be some drama left for their final meeting of the season, which concluded a crucial four-game series here.

Thirteen of the final 17 games between the teams this season were decided by one or two runs.

"Every game is huge. We're in a pennant race. This is what we want. Hopefully we'll see them again."

Ramon Hernandez drove in two runs for the A's a day after sitting out to rest a sore wrist and Billy Koch worked the ninth for his 41st save in 47 chances.

Koch pitched for the fifth straight day, but assured Howe before the game his arm was fine and he wanted to play.

"I'm available, because it's my job," he said. "I feel great, I'm healthy. I made a point to stick my head in there and tell him 'I told you I was all right.'"

Anaheim scored twice in the sixth of Hudson to tie the game at 3. On Wednesday night, Oakland hit four home runs to get ace Barry Zito his AL-leading 22nd win without being at his best.

Hudson, who shut out Seattle last Saturday, left to a standing ovation when relieved by Mike Venafro in the eighth. Hudson allowed six hits and struck out five.

"I knew our teams match up well, and these games could have gone either way," Anaheim manager Mike Scioscia said. "We've just played them eight games and we played them as evenly as you can play a team. ... Occasionally you're going to hit bumps in the road, but the overall position we're in gives us confidence we're going to rebound."

'Bullet' Bob Hayes dies at age 59

Hayes is only athlete with Olympic gold and Super Bowl ring

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - Bob Hayes, the gold-medal sprinter and Dallas Cowboys receiver who was responsible to catch and tough to cover, died at age 59.

Hayes died of kidney failure at Shands Hospital late Wednesday, daughter Westline Lodge said. He was hospitalized earlier this month and had also battled liver ailments and prostate cancer.

Bob Hayes (70) wins the 100-meter dash at the Olympic Games in Tokyo, in October of 1964. Hayes, who also won a Super Bowl as a receiver with the Dallas Cowboys, was once named the fastest man alive. He died late Wednesday in Jacksonville, Fla.

Pac-10 may be poised for perfect weekend

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press writer

The Pac-10 is looking for perfection this weekend.

A week after its teams went 8-1 in nonconference games, the Pac-10 has a chance to go 8-0 on Saturday.

The toughest test appears to be No. 11 USC at No. 25 Kansas State, although the Trojans (2-0) are coming off a 46-3 road upset of defending Big 12 champion Colorado.

K-State (3-0), meanwhile, has won 37 straight non-league home games dating to 1989, including lopsided wins to open the season against two I-AA teams and winless Louisiana-Monroe. This will be the first real challenge to that streak.

"We really have to bring our 'A' game this week and put up a fight," K-State quarterback Marc Dunn said.

USC, led by quarterback Carson Palmer, is a 3-point underdog. K-State may lead the nation in scoring at 59.7 points per game, but USC is sixth in points allowed at 10 p.p.g.

"This is a game that is going to give us a good feel for what we are all about," Trojans coach Pete Carroll said. "If we are fortunate enough to win, we'll feel pretty good about the start of this season."

Selections are made each week by Times-News sports staffers Kevin Hall, Scott Thompson, Joe Paisley, John Derr and one guest forecaster. During the regular season, we select 10 local high school games and pick five games of local and regional interest from both the NCAA and NFL. This week's guest forecaster is CSI Director of Student Services Graydon Stanley.

Hansen High School senior runner Cody Fowers is healthy, happy and hungry. A year after a "disappointing" fifth-place finish at the state cross country meet in a season in which he battled an ankle injury, Fowers is again running at full strength toward his goal of a state championship. And he's excited, especially after winning the first three races he's entered this season, including a commanding performance Wednesday at the Kimberly meet at Magic Mountain Ski Resort when he broke the tape in a time of 17 minutes, 35 seconds to defeat teammate Landon Teator by 32 seconds. "I could have pushed it even harder and gone a little faster," he said after the finish of the extremely steep route.

But he's got much more lofty goals than that 17:35. "My goal is to run under 15:45 this year," he said. "But I'll wait until October - on the flat course - for that." Of course, the ultimate goal he said without flinching is also easy to figure out: "State championship."

Roll Call

(the best of the rest from the past week)

Football - Jed Thomas, Burley. The Burley senior running back had 22 yards rushing on 24 carries to lead the Bobcats to their first-ever win in three tries against Cassia County. Declo. He also had five tackles and a 44-yard reception for a touchdown.

Volleyball - Sheena Bingham, Dieterich. Bingham had 11 kills, seven blocks and six digs in the Blue Devils' 21-14, 21-10 victory over Camas County. The Magic Valley Christian team deserves notice as honorable mention candidates for two straight victories following an 0-15 season year ago.

Boys soccer - Bernardo Mendonza, Bliss. The Bears goalkeeper recorded a mind-boggling 23 saves in a 2-1 tie to The Community School.

Girls soccer - Robin Keams, Wood River. Keams became the first soccer player in the area to score four goals in a game this season, helping the Warriors to an 11-0 victory over Declo.

Girls cross country - Stephanie Johnson, Burley. The freshman won her second race in three tries, placing the competition by more than a mile and a half at the Kimberly meet atop Magic Mountain Ski Resort.

Continued from D1... against Century - one rushing and one receiving - while kicking PATs and playing linebacker. "He's a big asset on both sides of the football," Schnal said. In addition to Martin's ability to read Minico's defense, Schnal is concerned about the reads of his defense. "They do a lot of different things," he said. "They move kids around. (Nate) Tracy will play quarterback, he'll play wide receiver, he'll play running back, they'll throw double pass. I mean, they do a lot of different things so it's been a tough week, preparation-wise defensively." But Schnal said he feels his team will be in the right position.

"A lot of their formations tell you where the ball is going," Schnal said. "They move their kids around and generally where the Tracy kid is the (Cole) kid are is where the ball is going." Porriest said his offense will have to be at its best to get the better of the Brain defense. "Their linebackers are better than they have been in years," he said. "But we're not going to do anything different. We're going to try to get the ball to our best players." Seniors Tracy and Coultter McKenzie will continue to alternate playing time at quarterback, trying to get the ball to receivers Kody Cole, Skyler Worthington and tight end Jason Tomingas for big plays. Darric Grant is the Spartans' best running back. It promises to be a good one as the early meeting can be a momentum builder or momentum killer for the rest of the season. "It's our home opener and hopefully people come to watch us and we want to put on a good show," Schnal said.

Off to a good start

Bill Elliott has started in the top 10 71.2 of the past 19 Winston Cup races.

Somebody must step up in Winston Cup

By Lee Spencer
The Sporting News

Does anyone really want to win the Winston Cup championship? It doesn't seem that way, considering the myriad calamities that have beset those on the leaderboard this season. Certainly, Jeff Gordon has made a charge of late, bolstered by consecutive victories at Bristol and Darlington, but the Rainbow Warriors have yet to capitalize on opportunities when Sterling Marlin has stumbled. Still, Gordon is in fifth place in the standings, just 70 points out of the lead.

Mark Martin, who stood in Marlin's shadow for several weeks, pounced last weekend at New Hampshire. OK, Marlin finished 16th, not exactly pouncing, but that was five spots better than Marlin, and it allowed Marlin to take the points lead, ending Marlin's run of 25 consecutive races in the top spot.

Crew chief Ben Leslie and his team rallied around Marlin after a poor finish in the first race at Dover and helped him post five consecutive top 10 finishes. In the remaining nine races, Marlin must make sure he leads a lap to secure valuable bonus points, which could be the determining factor at the end of the season.

A six-point lead isn't much, but near the end of September, you can bet it feels pretty good to Marlin, who never has won a Cup title.

Jimmy Johnson, third in points and 40 behind Marlin, has held his own among the veterans all season. If it weren't for the rookie stripe on his bumper, you wouldn't know he was one. Crew chief Chad Knaus will keep this young team focused, and Johnson shows the consistency that will make him a factor down the stretch.

Tony Stewart is the garage's pick for the title. For Smoke, it's almost like flipping on a talent switch, and his light burns brighter than the competition's. Stewart has six DNFs, but when he finishes, he makes up for it. Still, consistency wins titles, and

One thing about the points race is certain: The frenzy of the stretch battle won't affect Sterling Marlin. He is a hillbilly Zen master—Phil Jackson from Tennessee. Nothing fazes him.

Stewart's team cannot afford any more mechanical failures. He enters the race this weekend at Dover in fourth place, 59 points out of the lead.

So show me a driver who has been more lucky than good this season, and I'll introduce you to the 2002 champion. In the end, that just might be Marlin, who hasn't won since March 17 at Darlington, but who, if he's as some have, that Marlin's team has been on cruise control since early in the season.

"We had those two last-place finishes that hurt us a lot, but we still kept the lead," Marlin says of DNFs at Sears Point and the second Richmond race. "Every weekend, we try to win the race. If we can't win, then we try for a top five. If we can't do that, then we try for a top 10."

"The deal at Sears Point (engine problems) was a freak deal, and then at Richmond, we got in that wreck. But we did keep the lead throughout both of those weekends, so that does say something about this team."

But Marlin lost enough points that it finally caught up with him at New Hampshire. Early in the season, Marlin correctly identified his team's shortcomings as qualifying and racing on road courses. Marlin never has been a poor qualifier, yet just seems the team has focused on the race and not qualifying. Chances are if Marlin had not qualified 32nd at Richmond, he would not have caught the wreck — or sustained injuries that might make him uncomfortable in the car the rest of the season. Marlin strained his shoulder blades and has a finch scar on the back of his left thigh where the seat ripped the skin from his leg. He says the wreck at Richmond was the hardest in his career.

Trainer Al Shuford is coordinating physical therapy for Marlin, who said he felt OK after the race at New Hampshire and seemed more sure that he couldn't get his Dodge to turn well in the corners.

One thing about the points race is certain: The frenzy of the stretch battle won't affect Marlin. He is a hillbilly Zen master — Phil Jackson from Tennessee. Nothing fazes him.

"We'll keep on going the same way from here on out," Marlin says. "We won't know what's going to happen until we add the points up after Homestead."

Bring in the manicurists because this is going to be a nail-biter. At this point, the Winston Cup points race is too close to call.

Starting from the pole, Ryan Newman held off Kurt Busch for the win Sunday.

NASCAR NOTES

Newman's pole run takes track record from teammate

By Al Levine
Cox News Service

Rookie Ryan Newman erased his teammate's name from the New Hampshire International Speedway record book Friday but he was happy to keep the track mark in the family.

Newman won the pole for Sunday's New Hampshire 300 by driving the No. 12 Ford around the 1.058-mile oval in a record 132.241 mph (28.802 seconds).

He bettered the track record previously held by Rusty Wallace, his Penske Racing teammate.

"It's meaningful and you like getting the track record," Newman said. "But you don't want to take it from your teammate. At the same time, it stays within the team. It's something to be proud of."

No complaints regarding track

The track surface at New Hampshire International Speedway, which came away in the July race and brought in new competitors, received mostly favorable reviews over the weekend.

"Everything's lovely," Ward Burton said. "Everything looks pretty good right now. It's a little loose on entry, particularly when you get your left front on the part that the banking is counter-banked. It's got pretty good grip."

Even Rusty Wallace, who has suggested they dig up the track and start over, couldn't find much to criticize. "I was waiting for [the car] to slide all over the place like it always does here in qualifying, but it didn't do it," he said.

A wet win

Ryan Newman solidified his credentials as one of the top young drivers in NASCAR with a victory Sunday in the rain-shortened New Hampshire 300.

Newman held off Kurt Busch, with Tony Stewart right behind, when the race was called after 207 of 300 laps, caution for rain was waved on lap 199. After seven more laps, NASCAR ended the race.

Newman's victory at New Hampshire International Speedway came after consecutive second-place finishes. It was his series-leading 13th top-five finish in 27 races.

Newman, a 24-year-old graduate of Purdue University, has eight top-five finishes in his last 10 starts. He had five second-place finishes before breaking through in his 35th career start.

It was the first points-paying victory for the former United States Auto Club open-wheel champion from South Bend, Ind. In May, he won The Winston, NASCAR's all-star race at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Concord, N.C.

Sterling Marlin finished 21st and lost the points lead for the first time since the second race of the season. Mark Martin, who overcame a tire problem with 50 laps remaining, took the points lead with a finish of 16th. He leads Marlin by six points in one of the closest races in NASCAR history.

Newman became the 16th driver to win this season with nine races left. The record of 19 winners in a season was set last year.

Leader bonus reaches record

The Winston Cup leader bonus went unclaimed for the 22nd straight race and will pay a record $200,000 Sunday at Dover Downs International Speedway to any driver who wins and takes or holds the lead in the series standings.

If the leader bonus is collected Sunday, the payout would eclipse Bob Labonte's $190,000 windfall two years ago for winning the Brickyard 400 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The only driver this season to claim the prize was Sterling Marlin, who got $30,000 for winning in Las Vegas and $20,000 two weeks later in Darlington, S.C.

The prize money increases by $10,000 per event.

Struggle continues for Skinner

New Hampshire 300.

"Considering what I've been through this week, I'm feeling pretty good," he said. "I'm a little short on energy."

Skinner's face was burned after a fire got up through his fire wall and lit his open visor. A plastic sign on his helmet had been near 100 percent when the burn hit.

Skinner could use a little good news. He's 32nd in points with no top 10s and a best finish of 12th, twice.

His car is almost as much a concern. "Right now it's not very good," Skinner said. "It seems when we take the tape off it [from qualifying] and put it in race trim, we lose something. If we raced them two weeks ago, I think we'd kick their [behinds]."

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

AT&T asks states to look at Qwest request

DENVER - AT&T filed motions Thursday asking regulators in Idaho and eight other states to re-examine Qwest Communications International Inc.'s applications to offer long-distance phone service in the states. Qwest dismissed AT&T's request as another attempt to delay the telecom's re-entry into the long distance market and said state regulators would not have to review the applications.

AT&T filed the motions in the states where Qwest withdrew its long-distance applications last week after the Federal Communications Commission raised questions about the company's accounting in Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Iowa, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Utah and Washington.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has been investigating Qwest's accounting practices to see whether it improperly boosted revenues. Qwest has said it expects it will have to restate revenues for 2000 and 2001.

Qwest has said it will refile its long-distance applications this month and create a long-distance subsidiary that will not be affected by the pending restatement. The subsidiary's financial reports will comply with generally accepted accounting procedures, or GAAP.

FedEx reports 45 percent rise in first quarter profits

MEMPHIS, Tenn. - FedEx Corp., which has operations in Magic Valley - reported a 45 percent increase in first-quarter profits Thursday, largely due to growth in the company's ground delivery business. The results beat expectations, and FedEx shares climbed.

The package delivery company, which includes the world's largest cargo airline, reported net income of $258 million, or 52 cents per share, for the quarter ended Aug. 31, compared to $109 million, or 36 cents per share, last year. Last year's figure includes a one-time charge of 5 cents per share for an accounting change.

The latest results beat Wall Street estimates of 49 cents per share, according to analysis surveyed by Thomson First Call.

Boise developer faces charge of grand theft

BOISE - A Boise commercial developer has been charged with grand theft for allegedly keeping more than $300,000 in construction money that should have gone to a project developer.

Larry Durkin, 49, was arrested Wednesday and taken to the Ada County Jail, where he was being held on $150,000 bond.

The alleged theft occurred two years ago while Durkin was the construction project manager of the new Family Center complex, which houses new Fred Meyer and Home Depot stores, according to court reports.

Detectives said Durkin kept two payments from Fred Meyer Stores Inc. that should have gone back to project developer Nick Vidalakis. The arrest came two days after a jury submitted a judgment in favor of Vidalakis in a related civil suit.

Further fraud charges may be filed against Durkin later, said Boise police spokesman Rich Wright.

Durkin is the developer behind a number of high-profile commercial construction projects in the Treasure Valley and helped Meridian city officials develop their comprehensive land use plan.

Salt Lake plant closes, lays off 65 workers

SALT LAKE CITY - Vermax Inc., which makes marble products, has temporarily closed its Salt Lake plant, laying off about 65 workers. The company's acquisition of California-based Century Cast Products made Vermax the nation's largest marble manufacturer.

It also created excess capacity as the industry slowed down, said Raymond Cannefax, Vermax vice president of business development. Though the Salt Lake plant had recently been updated, the company elected to consolidate its operations in California. Vermax will reopen the plant when the industry recovers.

"The assurance of a steady flow of work and an bidding more jobs now than we did prior to 9/11. I think many of the boat-chains are now beginning to make up for the time they lost during the past year," said Leif Anderson, Vermax president.

Citigroup settles lending charges

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Citigroup Inc. agreed to repay customers $215 million to settle federal charges that a company it acquired manipulated people into buying overpriced mortgages and credit insurance.

About 2 million consumers with mortgages or personal loans would receive cash refunds or reduced loan balances under the agreement, which would become the largest settlement in the Federal Trade Commission's history, FTC Chairman Timothy Muris said Thursday.

In mortgage cases, consumers would receive refunds averaging about $1,000, covering about 60 percent of their losses, Muris said. The smaller, personal loans will bring smaller refunds.

"These are positive steps in an industry that for too long has been plagued by deception and abuse," Muris said. "We will be looking to ensure that the law is obeyed."

The commission voted 5-0 Thursday for the agreement, which still needs approval from a federal court.

Consumers should expect to wait about 10 months for the checks, officials said.

By settling, Citigroup - which has a Citifinancial office in Twin Falls - does not admit to breaking any law. The company said it implemented reforms after taking over Associates First Capital Corp.

"When we bought Associates, we found certain unacceptable practices that needed to be changed," Citigroup president Robert Wilton said. "We are confident that today's settlement provides redress to those former Associates customers who were harmed."

A federal court in Atlanta still must approve the settlement, the FTC said.

The agreement also will not become final until a related settlement with

PORT LOCKOUT LOOMS

Flaherman prepares their lines on a public wharf as cranes wait for a vessel to unload at a shipping facility at the Port of Oakland, Calif., Thursday. West Coast ports could be headed toward a major labor stoppage. Negotiators for shippers and terminal operators accuse dockworkers of staging a work slowdown in Long Beach and in Oakland, and are threatening to retaliate with a lockout at all 29 ports.

Employers want workers to end slowdown

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Representatives of West Coast ports said they would close down the biggest complex in the country beginning today, sending workers home without pay and leaving millions of dollars of cargo on the docks unless the union immediately ends an alleged slowdown.

The Pacific Maritime Association, which has been negotiating a new contract with dockworkers since May, said Thursday that workers have "crippled" the operations of one of its members - Stevedoring Services of America - at the Port of Long Beach by holding back workers since Monday.

Trucks entering the terminal were idling in long lines Thursday afternoon, the PMA said.

Unless operations return to normal, workers will be shut out at the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach at 7 a.m. Friday, the PMA said.

"A defensive shutdown is the last thing we want to do, but the union is forcing our hand," said Joseph Minich, president and chief executive of the PMA. "Their destructive actions are debilitating to port operations."

The union leaders are clearly putting their self-interests over those of the nation."

West Coast ports from San Diego to Seattle handle more than $300 billion worth of goods

Jack in the Box plans national expansion

Los Angeles Times

Jack in the Box Inc. plans to expand from a regional player in the fast-food industry into a national restaurant chain by adding nearly 300 outlets a year. The San Diego-based company with Burger and Twin Falls restaurants linked its planned expansion to an optimistic forecast for its operations, including double-digit annual earnings growth over the next five years.

Jack in the Box Chief Executive Robert J. Nugent said the chain-of-1,847 fast-food outlets was actively evaluating the acquisition of other chains and will expand its Box C-Stores, which co-brand a Jack in the Box restaurant with a Quick Stuff convenience store and a gas station.

At the same time, Jack in the Box, which operates in 17 states, will broaden its reach by selling about 200 new franchises annually and it will add restaurants at a rate of about 90 a year.

Jack in the Box said it expects sales at restaurants open at least a year - a key measure in retailing - to grow 3 percent next year. Overall restaurant sales will grow 7 percent to an estimated $1.85 billion next year and the company expects earnings growth of 10 percent to 15 percent annually over the next five years.

With successful menu items such as its Sourdough Jack sandwich, Jack in the Box says it has increased its market share by 25 percent over the last four years, a time when discounting and slow growth have hurt other big fast-food chains such as CKE Restaurants Inc., the Santa Barbara, Calif.-based owner of the Carl's Jr. and Hardee's chains.

Known for its entertaining television commercials - the current versions poke fun at competitors such as Wendy's International Inc. and Subway and feature its fictional pitchman "chief executive" Jack - the fast-food chain has built a strong following among men age 18 to 34.

But in announcing its expanded strategy this week, the company said it is developing "a more relevant menu that includes lighter fare."

Coldwater Creek will add 400 seasonal jobs in W. Va.

The Associated Press

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. - Idaho-based Coldwater Creek will add 400 temporary employees at its West Virginia distribution center to handle the catalog company's Christmas rush.

Chairman Dennis Pusch said "some" of the new jobs will become permanent positions, but he declined to be more specific. Coldwater Creek, which announces its second-quarter earnings next week, closed its northern Idaho distribution center to consolidate shipping operations in West Virginia. The decision idled 150 workers in the

Bad news sends Dow below 8,000

House-building drops for third straight month

NEW YORK (AP) — Another wave of bad economic news, brokerage downgrades and profit warnings further demoralized investors in the Dow Jones industrial...

The Dow closed down 230.05, or 2.8 percent, at 7,942.39. The Dow had traded below 8,000 on Aug. 5, but hadn't closed below that level since hitting a four-year low of 7,902.34 on July 23.

AP The Dow, down nearly 438 points in the past three sessions, also lost more than 1,000 points since its recent peak of 9,053.64 on Aug. 22 as mixed economic reports and worries about war with Iraq have eroded investors' confidence.

The broader market also pulled back Thursday. The Nasdaq composite index fell 35.68, or 2.9 percent, to 1,216.45. The Standard & Poor's 500 index declined 26.14, or 3 percent, to 843.32.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction fell in August for the third straight month, but mortgage rates dipped this week to a new three-decade low, which could spur more home sales.

Housing starts Here is a look at the construction rate of new homes and apartments.

Home builders broke ground on a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.63 million units in August, a 2.2 percent decline from July, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

With mortgage rates continuing to edge lower, and home-builder sentiment resurgent, we believe that housing activity will stabilize," said Murray Harris, chief economist at UBS Warburg.

Although new-home construction has slowed, home sales have been brisk. Newhome sales in July set a monthly record. Economists predict sales of both new homes and existing homes will set records this year as low mortgage rates have motivated people to take advantage of good financing conditions and buy.

The housing market is in good shape," said Joel Naroff, president of Naroff Economic Advisors.

Rates on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages dropped from 6.18 percent last week to 6.05 percent this week, the lowest level in 32 years of record keeping, Freddie Mac, the mortgage company, said in its weekly nationwide survey.

Citigroup

Continued from D6. Settlement in a class action lawsuit in California is approved, the FTC said. Approval of that settlement, which would provide another $25 million to consumers, could take several months, the agency said.

In 2000, Citigroup bought Associates First Capital Corp., which got consumers to consolidate their debts into a single loan — usually a home equity loan — with the promise of lower monthly interest payments, according to a lawsuit filed last year by the FTC.

The loan, however, often came with substantial fees that made them even more expensive than the original debt.

The FTC settlement announced Thursday also requires Citigroup's consumer finances subsidiary to provide annual reports to the government detailing how it sells and markets credit insurance and similar products.

Consumers will receive notices in the mail in the next several weeks explaining how they can get refunds, the FTC said. Consumers who have already received refunds or have given up their claims in other settlements are not eligible.

Consumers with questions about the settlement can call the FTC toll-free at 1-877-832-0888.

Let our customers do the talking.

"We searched to find a reputable dealership with a team of people we felt we could put our trust in. After a long search, but we came across Dale & Christine."

"Mr. Rallo was patient on any level. I was never rushed."

"It has been a pleasure to have this service."

Thank you for your service."
