U.S. links Iraq, al-Qaida

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a series of statements over the past 48 hours, the Bush administration has reignited debate over an issue it laid aside weeks ago: whether there is evidence of substantive, ongoing ties between al-Qaida and the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. On Tuesday, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said there is evidence of links between al-Qaida and Iraq, which he said had been discussed during a CIA briefing for NATO defense ministers meeting in Warsaw. On Wednesday, President Bush spoke of "the danger ... that al-Qaida becomes an extension of Saddam's madness," and noted that "you can't distinguish between al-Qaida and Saddam when you talk about the war on terror." Wednesday night, White House National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said al-Qaida captives, "in particular some high-ranking detainees, have said that Iraq provided some training to al-Qaida in chemical weapons development. ... And there are some al-Qaida personnel who found refuge in Baghdad" after U.S. attacks against them began in Afghanistan last October.

While the comments appeared to announce new proof of such ties, administration officials offered no details to substantiate them, leaving what some officials acknowledged was a confusing picture of both the strength and the substance of the evidence. "We have solid evidence of the presence in Iraq of al-Qaida members, including some members who have been in Baghdad," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer

DAIRY DISAGREEMENT

Mike Quesnell scrapes feed closer to cows on his dairy near Twin Falls. Quesnell bought property near Hazelton to consolidate his three sites into one dairy and to expand the operation, but some neighbors are protesting the move.

Hazelton residents oppose dairy proposal

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — A new 2,000-milking-cow dairy permitted by Jerome county has a few neighbors seeking to stop it, and among their arguments is the proposed dairy's proximity to the Snake River canyon. There aren't many neighbors in the area, which is why the Quesnell family dairy chose the location that reaches to within less than a half mile of the canyon. The Quesnells have been operating since the 1940s south of Twin Falls, but the growing city has reached the edge of the farm. "We feel like because of the encroachment of the city of Twin Falls, we cannot expand where we are right now," Mike Quesnell said.

Quesnell and his son, Matt, operate Harvey Quesnell Ranches Inc. Dairying is a played into the decision. In the dairy's county permit application, the Quesnells outlined why they chose the Hazelton site. It is rural but only about 3 miles south of the Greenwood exit off Interstate 84, and still within commuting distance for dairy workers who live in surrounding communities. And a couple of the neighboring farms have agreed to take manure for their fields.

"We feel like because of the encroachment of the city of Twin Falls, we cannot expand where we are right now."

—Mike Quesnell, on expanding to a new site in Jerome County

But a few neighbors aren't supportive. They lost appeal to the county commission. New rules are challenging a water right transfer still needed by the dairy. A hearing is scheduled today in Jerome. They also are challenging the county permit in 5th District Court. Neighbors Scott and Diana Breeding, Gerald Huettig and Evan Klotz are representing themselves in the appeal. Lee Halper of Jerome is joining them. Mike Quesnell said the challenges come with the territory. Nearly every water right transfer sought by a dairy in the Magic Valley is protested, he said. The dairy would nearly surround Klotz's 11 acres. He lives there and had plans, he said, to rebuild a historical rock house and sell it for profit. "I love the area, but it's going to make it much less desirable to live here," he said.

Five die during bank robbery in Nebraska

Police arrest three suspects 75 miles away

By Art Hovey
Lincoln (Neb.) Journal Star

NORFOLK, Neb. — As quickly as the shots were fired, it became the deadliest bank robbery in Nebraska history.

It brought the governor on the run, and it brought a community to its knees. "In a tight voice, Mayor Gordon Adams offered his condolences to the families of five victims "who were agelessly and stupidly taken from us."

Now, three men matching the descriptions of the suspects who shot and killed five people at a Norfolk bank Thursday are under arrest. They are expected to make their first court appearance today at the Madison County Courthouse in Madison, Neb.

The three were arrested shortly before noon Thursday at an O'Neill service station after a stolen pickup was spotted there, about 75 miles west of Norfolk and about 200 miles northwest of Lincoln, Neb. "Police offered no details about how the robbery turned into mass murder."

"It's not dark yet and three guys are in jail," said Madison County Attorney Charles Smith. "And more will come of this."

Arrested in O'Neill were: Erick Fernando Vela, 21, Madison; Jorge A. Galindo, 21, Madison; and Jose Sandoval, 25, Norfolk.

Bailiff's actions wipe out conviction

Conversations void T.F. woman's case

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Court of Appeals has voided the drug convictions of a Twin Falls County woman because of conversations a court bailiff had with the jury.

In the unanimous decision, the three-judge panel ruled that because prosecutors could not show that the communications between the bailiff and the jury were harmless, the verdicts against Michelle Egulior had to be set aside under state Supreme Court precedents.

Egulior was convicted and given a 3- to 10-year sentence after being charged with selling marijuana to an undercover informant for the Twin Falls Sheriff's Department in 2000. A search of her home turned up more marijuana, methamphetamine and drug paraphernalia.

During the jury deliberations that led to her conviction, a bailiff — an employee of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office — reportedly spoke to members of the jury. The bailiff was not identified in court records.

Egulior's attorney raised the issue with 5th District Judge Roger Burdick, who determined that the bailiff in fact did have unauthorized contact with jurors on three separate occasions. But Burdick ruled that the conversations didn't prejudice the jury and denied Egulior a new trial.

One of the bailiff's conversations with the jury involved a procedural issue. But the appeals court said there was no evidence in the record to indicate what the other two conversations were

Suit seeks damages in Canyon View shooting

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Massachusetts man who was shot last year by a Twin Falls police officer during a confrontation at a public hospital is seeking compensation and damages, according to a lawsuit filed by the man's attorney in U.S. District Court.

Police and staff at Canyon View Psychiatric and Addiction Services were negligent in letting David A. Smith, 48, be taken out of restraints and wander about the hospital on May 10, 2001, according to the lawsuit.

Smith later found two butter knives — the typed used by patients for ordinary meals — and confronted police officer Tim Green and others, according to police reports. Smith was "growling" during the confrontation and at one point threw one of the knives at Green, reports say. After Smith ignored repeated warnings from Green and continued to advance, Green shot Smith twice in the abdomen, according to reports.

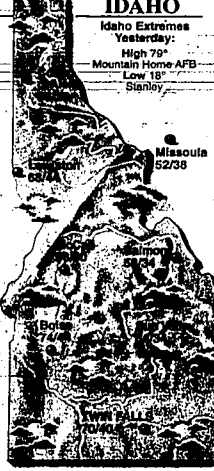

Smith — who has since gone back home to Greenfield, Mass. — suffered serious and permanent injury, required extensive surgery and still needs special care, according to the lawsuit. It was filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Boise by Smith's attorney, Greg J. Fuller of Twin Falls.

Smith was permanently disabled and has not been able to return to his work as a bus driver, or find another job, according to the lawsuit, which calls for at least $75,000 to cover medical costs and other damages. A previous tort claim — a precursor to a lawsuit —

Tropical Storm Isidore drenches Gulf Coast with 15 inches of rain

DELACROIX, La. (AP) — Tropical Storm Isidore blew ashore Thursday with near hurricane force wind, spinning off tornadoes, swamping the Gulf Coast with 15 inches of rain and knocking out power to more than 140,000 homes and businesses.

Thousands fled their homes in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama before the storm reached land at 3 a.m. Floodwaters swept through houses in communities across the region and rose to the windshields of cars in low-lying New Orleans.

"I don't know whose they are, but I've got three recliner chairs in my yard," Susan Serpas said in Delacroix, a fishing town east of New Orleans, where screen doors, mailboxes and furniture bobbed in 3 feet of water.

Gov. Mike Foster said the storm did at least $18 million in damage in Louisiana, including $3.7 million in lost sugar cane. He said the damage estimate will grow and he was seeking a federal disaster declaration.

The storm was packing wind up to 65 mph when it arrived, below the 74 mph threshold of a hurricane. Isidore lost its punch and was downgraded to a tropical depression as it moved past Jackson, Miss., in late afternoon.

Forecasters said the storm would slide into the Ohio Valley by the weekend, bringing heavy rain to the Midwest and the Northeast. Up to 8 inches of rain were forecast in Tennessee.

Several tornadoes spun out of the storm and touched down in the Florida Panhandle. One hit a barn near Graceville, Fla., breaking the leg and collarbone of a farmer, while another damaged more than a dozen houses in Santa Rosa Beach.

There were no other reports of injuries across the South.

The wind toppled trees in Alabama and gusts of 40 mph hit Birmingham, more than 200 miles from the coast. Most schools in the region were closed.

Mississippi kept its floating casinos shuttered. One, the Treasure Bay in Biloxi, sustained a 12-foot gash when the surging sea drove its entrance ramp deep into one of its walls. Backup security cables were the only thing keeping the casino barge from floating away.

"This was totally unexpected, this much water," Bernard Carlson, 71, said as he watched the swollen Tchoutacabouff River from the upstairs porch of his flooded home near Biloxi. City officials estimated 50 to 75 homes were damaged by floodwaters.

Foster said Port Fourchon appeared to be hit hard by surging tides. The huge oil terminal on the Gulf Coast is a clearing-house for about 13 percent of the nation's crude.

"Fourchon, I am told, is a lake right now," Foster said.

More than 100,000 people lost power during the storm, including 87,000 in Louisiana (half of them in greater New Orleans) and 47,000 more in Alabama.

As the storm passed over Houma, La., tree limbs fell on utility lines and power went out throughout the town.

"We woke up and found 2 feet of water in our apartment," said Laquincy Nixon.

U.S. presses Russia, France on Iraq plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States intensified efforts to win over Russian and French support for a toughly worded U.N. resolution on Iraq but Secretary of State Powell said Thursday he was a long way from getting an agreement.

The state department dispatched Undersecretary of State Marc Grossman to Moscow and Paris Thursday to help sell the U.S. plan for a resolution that would lay out a tighter timetable for Iraqi compliance with weapons inspections and authorize force if President Saddam Hussein fails to do so.

In a sign of U.S.-British agreement on the direction of a resolution, Grossman will be accompanied by a British diplomat-whom state department officials wouldn't identify.

"We are a long way from getting an agreement but we are working hard," Powell told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington.

The United States had hoped to push through the resolution by Monday, Sept. 30, when chief U.N. weapons inspector Hans Blix is scheduled to meet with Iraqi experts in Vienna to finalize plans for the inspectors' return.

But interagency wrangling in Washington and the continued opposition of some allies has delayed a draft from reaching the Security Council, diplomats said.

Threat: Iran, al-Qaida will fund attacks

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Taliban fugitives and Afghan fighters loyal to a former foe have allied and are getting arms and money from al-Qaida and Iran for planned suicide attacks on American troops in Afghanistan, one of their leaders says.

The new alliance is said to be based in eastern Afghanistan and involves men led by several former high Taliban officials and fighters of Herzb-e-Islami, a group headed by former Afghan Prime Minister Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

Hekmatyar's force was one of the U.S.-aided guerrilla armies that fought the Soviets in the 1980s. He fled to Iran in 1996 after his group was defeated by the Taliban, but he has recently been seeking to incite a "holy war" against American forces in Afghanistan.

The new alliance is known as Lashkar Fedayan-e-Islami, or the Islamic Martyrs Brigade, a Hekmatyar military commander, Salauddin Safi, told The Associated Press at a secret meeting Wednesday in this frontier city.

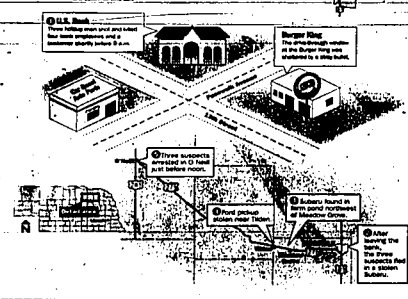

"There will be suicide attacks, ambushes by suicide attackers and bomb blasts against soldiers as they are moving from place to place and when they go out and disperse into smaller numbers, like in searches," he said.

The threat comes against a backdrop of unsolved bombings in Afghan cities, and there already have been sporadic attacks on U.S. military posts as well as on American troops traveling the countryside.

Deadly bank robbery

Unsettling Thursday in the robbery of a U.S. Bank branch.

Robbery

Smith said he will file five murder charges against each of them today.

The dead at the U.S. Bank branch included the branch manager, three employees and a customer. A second customer was wounded before the three suspects burst out of a main bank door, which was shattered by gunfire. That was just moments before law enforcement officers responded to an 8:47 a.m. emergency call.

The three are believed to have run down an alley behind the bank before escaping in a car stolen from a nearby home. Officers recovered the stolen car from a rural pond near Meadow Grove, about 20 miles west of Norfolk and less than 2 miles off the U.S. 275 route that connects it to O'Neill, said Norfolk Police Chief Bill Mizner.

The second vehicle - a Ford pickup - was also stolen from the Meadow Grove area. The FBI joined the Norfolk Police Department, the Madison County Sheriff's Office, the Nebraska State Patrol and other swarming over the crime scene.

As light rain fell on this city of about 23,500, police cars with their lights flashing still blocked the west-bound lanes of U.S. 81 long after the arrests.

Yellow security tape surrounded the single-story bank building, a nearby Burger King with windows broken by bullets, and a home at 1203 Hayes, where the suspects are believed to have stolen a white 2003 Subaru.

FBI Special Agent James Bogner said authorities were searching "methodically and meticulously" for clues to what happened in a span of just a few minutes at the bank, about a half-mile north of the intersection of U.S. 81 and U.S. 275.

Those dead at the scene included: Branch Manager Lola Elwood, 43, Norfolk; employees Lisa Bryant, 29, Norfolk; Samuel Sun, 50, Norfolk; Jo Mausbach, 42, Humphrey; and customer Evonne Tuttle, 37, of Stanton.

Mizner would not identify the wounded customer, whom he said was treated and released from a local hospital. Smith said he was "confident now that evidence exists for probable cause."

He said he had cautioned all local investigators not to speculate on unknown aspects of the case.

Gov. Mike Johanns attended both a 2:30 and a 5 p.m. press conference.

"On behalf of the entire state, I offer my sympathies to the families of the victims," Johanns said at the 2:30 event at Norfolk's City Hall. "This is an enormous, tragic event that occurred here."

At that point, prior to the news of arrests, Johanns said he was offering "whatever state resources we can bring to bear" and that he considered the crime "a state emergency. And we will continue to consider it a state emergency until these individuals are captured."

The governor said he fielded several phone calls from Nebraska's Hispanic population worried about the ethnic implications of the investigation. He tried to set their minds at ease.

"These are very, very tragic deaths," he said, "but Nebraskans are just not about to go out and seek retribution against innocent people."

Dale Tomka, owner and manager of a flower shop about a block north of the bank, said he saw three men in stocking caps and dark clothing go past his shop about 8:40 a.m. One had a backpack and appeared to have smeared black paint under his eyes.

"They looked strange," Tomka said, "but there are a lot of strange people walking around here."

Tomka left to make a flower delivery before the robbery occurred and heard about it later on the radio. "It's pretty scary," he said. "Things like this - you just don't expect that to happen."

Researchers grow teeth in laboratory

BOSTON (AP) - A team of scientists grew accurate versions of natural teeth in a laboratory, raising the possibility of an eventual replacement for manmade implants such as dentures, bridges and crowns.

The scientists, based at Forsyth Institute, were reportedly the first to grow such a complex tooth structure from a collection of individual cells.

"This is very exciting, and I don't think it's expected," said R. Bruce Denoff, dean of the Harvard School of Dental Medicine.

Researchers said it would be at least a decade before the technique could be used to help patients.

The results appear in the October issue of the Journal of Dental Research.

The Forsyth scientists manipulated pigs' dental stem cells - primordial cells that differentiate into the various tooth structures - to make enamel, which gives teeth their distinctive, hard exterior.

U.S., Britain agree on U.N. resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States has reached agreement with Britain on a tough U.N. resolution on Iraq and will present a proposed text to Russia, France and China, the other permanent members of the Security Council, Secretary of State Colin Powell informed Congress Thursday.

Powell telephoned French Foreign Minister Dominique de Villepin on Wednesday and called Foreign Ministers Igor Ivanov of Russia and Teng Jiaxuan of China on Thursday.

He also spoke Thursday to British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw. "Winning over Russia, France and China to a tough resolution - one that threatens Iraq with consequences if it does not comply with UN demands for weapons inspections - could be difficult."

But Powell told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that "there must be hard-core sequences" for Iraq to be leaving the United Nations.

All these countries are inclined to take President Saddam Hussein upon his offer to let weapons inspectors back to threatening military action.

Powell, U.S. Deputy Ambassador James Cunningham and other American diplomats at the U.N. are open to other proposals, said a U.S. official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Israel strikes back at bomber, outcome uncertain

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Israel tried to kill the mastermind of the Hamas bombing campaign Thursday, firing two missiles into a car in crowded Gaza City. Two bodyguards died and 35 bystanders were wounded in the helicopter attack, but the fate of the Palestinian militant remained uncertain. Hamas promised revenge.

A senior Palestinian security official said the 37-year-old Mohammed Deif escaped with moderate injuries. Israeli police sources said the Israeli military told them Deif — atop Israel's wanted list for years — was killed. The military had no public comment. Hamas official Abdel Aziz Rantisi said Deif was not even in the car. But he said the group would avenge the attack nevertheless. "We will hit Tel Aviv. We will hit everywhere." In other violence, four Palestinians — including two gunmen, a civilian and a baby — and one Israeli were reported killed. Israel maintained its stranglehold on Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's headquarters in the West Bank town of Ramallah in defiance of Tuesday's U.N. Security Council resolution to end the siege. Two helicopters appeared in the sky over Gaza just after 1:30 p.m., firing missiles that blew apart a green Mercedes sedan and sent a plume of white smoke over the Sheikh Radwan neighborhood.

Lidia Risotto, one of three Italian restoration directors who collected fresco fragments at the St. Francis Basilica, works on a Cimabue fresco in Assisi, Italy, Thursday.

Basilica restores fresco after destructive earthquake

ASSISI, Italy (AP) — St. Jerome's white beard is largely gone, his rich cloak looks like it was devoured by moths and the roll of writing paper on his desk has disappeared. But in a kind of restoration miracle, much of the rest of the Giotto fresco is back on the soaring ceiling of St. Francis Basilica, five years after an earthquake sent the masterpiece crashing to the floor in tens of thousands of fragments.

Like a giant puzzle knocked apart by an angry child, the fresco was painstakingly pieced back together by a team of restorers, who celebrated their achievement Thursday as this town marked the fifth anniversary of a year of powerful quakes hours apart that claimed 10 lives and destroyed homes and artwork across Umbria in central Italy.

The race to save the fresco, which experts believe was painted by Giotto at the end of the 13th century, began almost immediately after a huge chunk of the basilica's nave fell a distance of seven stories in the earthquake, burying two Franciscan monks and two workers in a mound of dust, plaster and bricks on Sept. 26, 1997.

After the bodies were pulled out, volunteers and restoration experts, who slept in a tent camp with some of the thousands left homeless in the quake, started sifting through some 50,000 fragments of the fresco of St. Jerome and pieces of lesser-known frescoes of eight other saints.

They tried to match pieces to an enlarged photograph of the original St. Jerome work and carefully laid unmatched pieces on cushions in crates and drawers. Days would pass when people would find nothing, or maybe just a little piece," recalled one of the chief restorers, Paola Passalacqua. "Then suddenly we would remember seeing a certain piece in a certain drawer that matched. It was a work of memory."

Part of the ceiling above the altar also came crashing down in the second of the quakes, including another priceless masterpiece, a fresco by Cimabue, who is considered the father of Italian painting.

Restoration work on fragments of Cimabue's St. Matthew will begin in a few months.

Many valley residents eye Sierra Club suspiciously

Some dairy critics may feel inspired by the idea of the Sierra Club coming into the Magic Valley to rally the opposing forces against large dairies.

stations, have received a number of complaints from local listeners. Even Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, a key state legislator on the dairy issue, called them "pretty caustic."

Our view: The Sierra Club's increased activity on anti-dairy issues may not be as successful as some dairy critics think.

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

ral nose into their business decisions at this point.)

Nor will the Sierra Club's involvement do any good for local Democratic political candidates, who already are often linked in the public mind with environmental activism and anti-agricultural positions.

Jones is right when he notes it would be good if the organization offered suggestions, not just negative rhetoric that intensifies the rancor.

The Sierra Club can write all the clever, corn-pone ads it wants to. But as long as it continues a negative ad campaign which is funded by a source which is anonymous to Idahoans - the group will jeopardize local political candidates who are associated with the Sierra Club. That will only hurt their cause in the long run.

Many Magic Valley residents already know the Sierra Club and its environmental politics.

Now that they're seeing the organization's face to face, it may not turn into the success the dairy critics hope for.

Idaho leaders squandered years of plenty

Do you remember the Bible story of Joseph and his coat of many colors? In Egypt, the leader of the government had the good sense to listen to the wise advisor named Joseph. The government saved reserves during seven years of plenty and had the resources to provide necessary services during seven lean years.

played in Egypt, the current administration of Idaho has squandered the opportunity to prepare for the lean years during the many years of plenty. Now is the opportunity for the voters of Idaho to select new political leaders led by a new governor, Jerry Brady.

I knew Jerry Brady when I lived in Idaho Falls. He has many of the answers we need to revive the economy and to preserve our public services, especially public schools. More importantly, Mr. Brady has the good sense to listen to wise advisors when he does not have all the answers. Jerry Brady will be a good governor for Idaho.

Please vote for Jerry Brady for the sake of our children and our grandchildren.

Al Gore's position for 2004: Far left

This week, Al Gore, the Lost Boy of American politics, turned up at the head of the Democratic doves. Spreading in San Francisco, the former vice president came out against war with Iraq. He wants to wait at least until the war on terrorism is won - in other words, forever.

ZEF CHAFETS

Gore's speech was a re-entry vehicle for 2004. He says he'll decide whether he's running in December. That's a yes.

Christmas-time puts people in a giving mood, and they can think of no greater gift than themselves.

It is not a surprise that Gore wants another shot. It is a surprise that he evidently has decided to take it as the George W. Bush of the Iraq war. Gore is a lifelong hawk on the Middle East. He tried for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988 as the candidate of the Scoop Jackson activists. He was one of the few Democratic senators who supported the Gulf War. During eight years as vice president, he did nothing to disappoint the New Republic wing of the party. San Francisco changed that.

What accounts for the new Gore? It's possible, of course, he has undergone a midlife conversion. He is not incapable of sincerity, although it is not his hallmark. It is also possible politics are involved.

Presidential primaries are decided by the party base. The Democratic hard core leans left, and Gore, who has forsown polling and other such unworthy devices, may have got feeling (his only kind) that the true believers are looking for a beta male.

The idea is, first, to get the nomination. If the war is going badly, Gore can run as the Fold-you-so candidate. If it is going well, he can re-reposition himself and even try for some credit ("I was never against fighting Saddam, I just suggested measured steps. The administration took my advice. And it worked!")

President Bush reacted to Gore's turnaround with a shrug. Bush is putting his political chips on war. If he achieves a Middle East Pax Americana by November 2004, he will probably be unbeatable (I know about his father's defeat in 1952, but this is a much bigger deal than the Gulf War). If the United States is still fighting (a more likely scenario, given the open-ended definition of the war on terror), Bush can argue, like FDR, that he can't change horses in midstream. And if, improbably, the war is to capture, it won't matter who the Democratic nominee is. Bush will be home on the range quicker than you can say Lyndon Baines Johnson.

But if Bush is biased about Gore's shift to the left, his dovish Democratic rivals are not. John F. Kerry, the main peacenick candidate, is especially vulnerable. Expect to hear JFK-inspired speakers comparing Gore's classified journalistic duty in Vietnam with Kerry's combat exploits.

Some pundits think Gore's shuffle will enable hawkish Joe Lieberman to capture the party center and win the nomination. But Lieberman's candidacy is all but dead. Running a Jewish, pro-Israel candidate during a Middle Eastern war is, from a Democratic perspective, taking diversity a step too far.

Of course, Gore could change his mind along with his shirt. But if he doesn't, there's an opening at the center of the Democratic Party and no serious wartime applicants. John Edwards of North Carolina is a personal injury lawyer. Richard Gephardt lacks charisma. Tom Daschle is Tom Daschle.

What Clinton-Gore Democrats need is a smart, tough-minded, experienced leader. It won't, it appears, be Al Gore. But it might be a Clinton. After all, the party still has one left.

Zef Chafets served in the Israeli army from 1970 to 1972 and in the reserves until 1997. He is a columnist for the New York Daily News.

Don't buy Saddam's offer to resume inspections

JAMES PHILLIPS

Who says the Iraqis don't have a sense of humor? After all, they slipped an absolute howler into the letter they sent to U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan offering to welcome back weapons inspectors.

"The Government of the Republic of Iraq has based its decision concerning the return of inspectors on its desire ... to remove any doubts that Iraq still possesses weapons of mass destruction," the letter stated.

Of course, when it comes to question of whether Iraq still possesses weapons of mass destruction, there are no doubts to remove. It does. Intelligence from many different countries, U.N. inspectors, defectors from Saddam's weapons program and high-resolution photography can't all be wrong. They indicate that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein has chemical and biological weapons now and is within months of having a nuclear weapon if he can acquire fissile material - the key ingredient in creating a nuclear bomb - either by making it directly or by buying it on the black market.

So send the inspectors back in, some observers say. But, according to the defectors, inspectors likely won't find much. Saddam has had nearly five years since the thwarted last batch of inspectors to build his WMD program and find better ways to hide the evidence. His son-in-law and others who have escaped from Iraq say previous inspectors didn't come close to finding everything they should have - and there's no reason to assume the next group will fare any better.

In short, new inspections won't solve the problems Saddam poses to international security and regional stability. He must be removed, not merely inspected. Inspections focus on the symptoms - the WMDs. But the world community must focus on the cause - Saddam's dangerous regime.

Saddam himself has removed any doubts he'll use his weapons if he's not dasturmed and deposed. He's used missiles against Israel, Saudi Arabia and Bahrain. He's used poison gas against his own countrymen and against Iranians in the Iran-Iraq war of 1980-88. He has invaded three of his neighbors - Iran, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. He tried to assassinate former President Bush. He's done what he can to destabilize the situation in Iraq, even to the point of paying $25,000 bounties to the families of Palestinian suicide bombers.

Saddam's contempt for the international community is boundless. Nearly 20 U.N. resolutions direct him to destroy and dismantle all chemical, nuclear and biological weapons and delivery systems, cease his brutal treatment of his own people and those in neighboring countries, allow unfettered inspections of all of Iraq, and to repatriate or account for thousands of people he has seized as hostages. He stands in "material breach" of all of them, says the war resolution President Bush submitted to Congress.

Saddam absconds with humanitarian aid sent to his country, sells oil beyond what is allowed under U.N. sanctions to finance his weapons production and continues to repress all dissent brutally. He's shown a remarkable capacity to bob and weave through the sanctions, around the resolutions and right past the money. He's foregone more than $100 billion in oil sales to retain his forbidden weapons.

It's time he and other would-be Saddams worldwide see that the United States and the international community are serious about keeping the peace and preventing rogue leaders with dangerous weapons from using them on other nations or selling them to those who would.

Given that Saddam has proved over time he has no intention of disarming, the only realistic means of removing the WMD from Iraq is to remove him.

The Bush administration should push for a U.N. Security Council resolution with enforcement teeth, then be prepared to carry out that enforcement and install a government in Iraq that poses no threat to its neighbors or to its own people.

Saddam's offer to resume inspections is strictly a delaying tactic. Already he's backpedaling, insisting that Iraq and the United Nations must strike "a balanced formula" for inspections that would "reassure Iraq with regard to its security, sovereignty, territorial integrity, and its right to choose its own way without interference." Of course, his way puts the lives of millions of people at risk.

Quite a jobber that Saddam. But we can't afford to laugh any more. Inspectors aren't the answer. Removing Saddam is.

Phononum will be 'dream of health' to Idaho senate
 With the main lawyers and Gov. Kempthorne are in court begging for half the volume of buried phononum waste to be removed, The Times-News again misrepresented the court case. In the Sept. 19 Times-News, it states, "The department and the state of Idaho are in the midst of a lawsuit over whether a 1996 agreement restricting the energy department to dig up and remove all of the buried waste."
 Come on, now. "All of the buried waste" is not even part of the court case. The governor is only asking for half the buried phononum waste to be removed, and it is time to report it to the people.
 A search can check the district court Web site at <http://www.id.uscourts.gov>. Go to Case Files. Slide over to "district" and click on "access to case files (RACER)." Just click on submit on the next page. Then type in the case number to the "search" field and click on submit. The case number is 1991-cv-35. CLICK on Document 237 to see the Department of Energy quoting the state officials changing their story. Click on Document 245 to see my friend of the court motion.

 On a local level, it was odd to see state senate candidate, Mr. Cannon, finally articulate an issue, the ponytail issue. I hope he won't be trying to ban the dollar bill or quarter because of George Washington's ponytail, since there are only "three places" a ponytail belongs.
 I am glad to have the chance to vote for Bill Chisholm. He is a breath of fresh air, while Mr. Cannon opposes dairy regulations. Bill's work on the matrix regulations shows he can compromise.
 While state officials keep the manure disposal figures a secret, nitrate levels in our water increases. What are our limits in manure disposal? Don't ask Mr. Cannon, but Bill Chisholm has asked that question.
 Nobody is right all the time, but Bill has been right so often, for so long. On many Eassey, Sundays, Bill protested the atomic explosions in Nevada. Now we find out that the government waited for the wind to blow toward Idaho before detonating their bombs.

 Bill has shown more heart and soul for Idaho's vetters, air and children than all our elected officials combined. Although he would be just one senator in a sea of good old boys and girls, he would be the best "Bill" ever introduced in the Senate.

Sen. Craig looks for state's oldest Hispanic

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Sen. Larry Craig, who serves as a ranking member of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, is honoring Hispanic Heritage Month by searching for the state's oldest Hispanic residing in Idaho. "In the past 10 years, Idaho's Hispanic population nearly doubled from just over 50,000 to over 100,000," Craig said. "Finding the oldest Hispanic person in Idaho will give me the opportunity to honor all the Hispanic people in Idaho for their contributions to the state. If you know of someone of Hispanic heritage who may qualify as the oldest Hispanic senior citizen in Idaho, I ask that you contact my nearest office immediately."

The senator's local office can be reached at 734-6780 in Twin Falls. Those who speak only Spanish should contact Maria Vallejo, who works for Craig on the Special Committee on Aging in Washington, D.C., at (202) 224-4839.

The deadline for notifying Craig's staff is Oct. 5.

Craig said he plans to present the winner with a framed U.S. Senate floor statement acknowledging the contribution Idaho's oldest Hispanic senior has made to both the Gem State and the nation.

Hispanic Heritage Month began Sept. 15, a day which marks the anniversary of independence for five Hispanic countries — Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua. Mexico achieved its independence on Sept. 16 and Chile on Sept. 18.

The U.S. Census defines Hispanics as people who originate from Spanish-speaking countries in regions. Hispanics can be of any race.

Group promotes 'Walk to School Day' Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — Child pedestrians are still at great risk of being seriously injured or killed, despite a sharp decline in the death rate during the last 10 years, according to a report issued by the National SAFE KIDS Campaign.

That's why the Magic Valley SAFE KIDS Coalition supports National Walk to School Day on Wednesday to highlight pedestrian safety issues and continue efforts to fix environmental dangers, especially near schools.

"Walking is an essential part of a child's health and well-being. Even when it rains, we need to get to school should have the privilege of walking there safely," said Kyia Kelly, director of the Magic Valley SAFE KIDS Coalition.

"We encourage adults to take time to walk to school on Oct. 2 to recognize this important focus on the safety of our children."

A national analysis of pedestrian injury research and data from 1990 to 2000 shows that more than 700 children died and under 100 died from pedestrian-related injuries in 1999, making it the third-leading cause of preventable injury-related death among kids. The report also indicated that elementary school-age children, especially boys, are being injured disproportionately, and that after school and dusk are the most dangerous times for children who walk.

Cassia sheriff's office sells, dumps guns

BURLEY — After giving owners three months to claim confiscated weapons, the Cassia County Sheriff's Office is ready to sell the guns.

"Many people have called the sheriff's office hoping to retrieve stolen guns, but most of the weapons in the evidence locker were seized in drug cases, Cassia County Under Sheriff Cary Bristol said. The sheriff's office matched the owners with their guns, he said.

About 135 guns, worth thousands of dollars, have piled up in the evidence locker at the sheriff's office for the last 32 years. Sheriff's office employees have begun declassifying the guns, and are now selling the others, Bristol said.

Five from M.V. gain spots on task force

Panel will review all facets of state government

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — Five Magic Valley residents are part of a 47-member "blue ribbon" committee named by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne Thursday to review all facets of state government.

They are car dealer Con Paulos of Jerome, Clear Springs Foods President Larry Cope, grain producer Duane Grant of Rupert, homemaker and small business owner Debbie Hall of Twin Falls, and John Kee of Twin Falls, chief executive officer of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The list of names, which is larger than the state Senate roster and nearly half the size of the entire Legislature, includes a broad mix of leaders in business, technology, agriculture and education. The group — called the 2020 Task Force — will be led by outgoing Democratic state Controller J.D. Williams and Idaho Transportation Board Chairman Don Winder. The group includes political stars, such as former Republican Sen. Jim McClure, and analysts, such as Associated Taxpayers of Idaho President Randy Nelson. Its members come from all political stripes and all corners of the state.

"This blue ribbon task force may be the most comprehensive and diverse group ever formed to examine the way we govern ourselves in Idaho," Kempthorne said.

The committee will hold its first meeting Oct. 11 and 12 at a location yet to be announced. Kempthorne has asked for a preliminary report in early December. Previously, he had indicated he wanted an initial

The committee's scope goes far beyond what was called for by Kempthorne, a political opponent, Idaho Falls newspaper publisher and Democrat Jim Brady, who first said he would assemble a panel to find ways to make government more efficient earlier this summer.

KEEPING THE MUSIC ALIVE

Angie Fillmore leads an elementary school orchestra in a lesson at L.B. Perrine Elementary School in Twin Falls on Thursday. Fillmore is volunteering her time to bring back the orchestra after budget cuts killed it.

Teacher volunteers her time to instruct orchestra

By Robert Mayer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Once silenced, the strings are singing once again.

In a small room at L.B. Perrine Elementary School, some 45 students new to the violin and cello drew their bows across the strings, bringing forth a sound which orchestra director Angie Fillmore described as "absolutely gorgeous."

The Twin Falls School District elementary orchestra — a program eliminated because of budget cuts — is back, thanks to Fillmore's dedication.

Now an after-school program called "Strings Alive," the beginning orchestra draws elementary students from all over the district.

Fillmore isn't getting paid for her efforts. But she just couldn't say "no" to the numerous pleas from her students to continue the orchestra.

"It's very simple. I'm doing it for the students, period," she said. "The children are what give me the energy."

So after a full day teaching music to elementary students, Fillmore volunteers her time to conduct the orchestra after school five days a week.

"She ought to be given a plaque and a statue made in her likeness," Superintendent Terrell Donicht said.

While the district allows the use of the room, Donicht said there still isn't any space in the budget, even with an emergency property tax levy, to offer any financial gesture toward the program.

Fillmore said she's understanding of the district's financial situation and isn't expecting any district funding.

Fortunately, an anonymous donation from a close friend of Fillmore will go toward the purchase of strings, sheet music and other supplies. She's also toying with the idea of buying orchestra T-shirts for the students.

Some parents are looking into grants for extra funding.

Fillmore welcomes any kind of help from parents. Some are already doing so.

Dobby Bly — whose daughter

Erika, a fourth-grader at Harrison Elementary School, plays an instrument in the orchestra — has been volunteering her time for the past three days. She helps students find chairs, resin for their bows, and anything else that needs to be done.

"I've always been supportive of music and the arts. It just broke my heart (when the program was eliminated)," she said. "I just want my daughter to have that opportunity."

Fillmore will hold a meeting this week with parents, she said.

"I need to know which parents have experience with stringed instruments," Fillmore said. "They (need to) understand exactly what we're doing. They

Sierra Club remarks get D.J. suspended

By Nate Johnson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Horizon Broadcasting Group manager suspended a disc jockey Thursday for referring to Sierra Club members as "fairies."

Bob Adams, who hosts the morning show on KIKX 104.7-FM, ran a song mocking the Sierra Club's stance on large dairies, calling the members fairies and telling them to go home, said KIKX market manager Mark Maier. Maier suspended Adams for the remarks.

Maier said he doesn't object to Adams airing his views in the form of parody, but Adams crossed the line when he referred to Sierra Club members as fairies, Maier said. Adams will remain on suspension until station owners decide how to react to his actions.

Ketchum police chief plans retirement

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Although he wears the uniform of Ketchum police chief, 57-year-old Cal Nevland also has proven to be an unbeatable political force in crucial showdowns in City Hall — once when his job was at stake 10 years ago.

Now Nevland has decided to retire effective Nov. 30, after 22 years as the department's top cop and as a Ketchum policeman for a total of 30 years.

Nevland delayed his retirement decision while fighting — and winning — his latest City Hall battle against the same man who tried to fire him 10 years ago.

In this latest skirmish, with less than a year in office, Mayor Ed Simon refused to allow Nevland to name Lt. Michael McNeil as his assistant chief. Instead, Simon picked Lt. Ron Taylor, a Blaine county deputy sheriff, for the $54,000 assistant chief's job.

But Nevland and McNeil sued to block the mayor, who backed down rather than go to court.

Nevland's pick of McNeil was approved in an out-of-court settlement. But the city was required to pay Taylor $65,000 in damages for being denied the mayor's appointment.

This was Nevland's second victory over Simon. In 1992, Simon attempted, along with several other councilmen, to fire Nevland.

But Simon and the others were recalled from office in a popular uprising in support of the chief.

As the city advertises for a successor, Nevland said one of the main challenges of a new chief will be to increase the size of the police force to keep pace with the city's growth (it now has 12 sworn officers, 10 other personnel) and to improve salaries. He said his annual salary of $74,604 as chief is probably less than a sergeant with six to eight years of experience earns in a large city.

"It's impossible for this area officers to buy a home in young on their salaries," he said.

Nevland said among the high points of his career has been the strong support from the public. He said a successful police department is one that provides good service and security, especially in an area such as Ketchum that attracts wealthy business and entertainment celebrities as residents.

He also is proud that Ketchum has little violent crime.

His worst moments, he said, were when he had to tell a mother some years ago that a boyfriend had beaten her infant to death, and the June day in 1990 that Mitchell Odiaga, of Boise, drove into town and killed two men in senseless drive-by shootings.

Although relatively young at 57, Nevland says he has no plans for another career, including politics.

"I'm going to be so detached that I'll be the last person you want to call to find out what's going on," Nevland said with a chuckle.

He has middle-aged hunting dogs — "middle age like me," he said with another chuckle — that he has promised to finally take on hunts.

Ex-school official faces theft charges

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The former director of finance and operations of the Cassia County School District was charged Thursday with six counts of grand theft by unauthorized control in connection with the writing of unauthorized checks and making unauthorized withdrawals on school district bank accounts.

The charges also include using school credit cards for personal expenses.

In a criminal complaint filed in the magistrate division of 5th District Court in Cassia County, the Cassia County prosecuting attorney charged Jim Pehrson with stealing $48,240 from the school district between October 1996 and May 2002.

Pehrson is accused of writing checks or withdrawing funds totaling $11,657 from a district checking account at Key Bank. Another charge says he used a Key Bank credit card to charge $5,561 worth of unauthorized goods.

The third count accuses Pehrson of using a Zions Bank credit card to charge $7,621 worth of goods. Count 4 accuses Pehrson used a First Federal Savings Bank credit card to charge $6,000 worth of unauthorized goods.

Pehrson is also accused of charging another $9,264 on a First Federal Savings Bank credit card, without authorization.

And he's charged with withdrawing writing unauthorized checks totaling $8,137 from a school district checking account at D.L. Evans Bank. Those checks were paid to other credit card companies to pay off the balances on Pehrson's personal credit cards, according to the court affidavit.

Each charge accuses Pehrson of having the intent to deprive Cassia County School District of their property.

According to the affidavit, the Cassia County Sheriff's Office was notified of the unauthorized expenditures Aug. 28, when a detective met with school district officials and the district's accountant.

In that meeting, Detective Richard Edwards, writing, Superintendent Mike Chesley told Detective Rod Gates that Pehrson "had admitted to making numerous unauthorized charges on his credit cards for his own personal gain" using school funds.

Accountant Ed Evans told Gates an audit of some school bank accounts showed that Pehrson had made about $55,000 of "unlawful expenditures... for his personal gain," the affidavit states.

Chesley told police that Pehrson had access to the bank accounts, but Pehrson was not authorized to use the money "at will," the affidavit states.

This affidavit was accessible to Pehrson but every use of this account had to be approved," Chesley told Gates, according to the affidavit.

Pehrson had been issued school district credit cards which were to be used to cover expenses when Pehrson traveled for work, according to the affidavit.

Chesley said every school credit card he used the credit card "to make numerous unauthorized purchases." Please see CHARGES, Page B3 raised in Livingston. His family moved to Bremerton, WA, where he graduated high school in 1957. He attended Linfield College in McMinnville, OR. He worked for Fibreboard Corporation in Boise, ID and San Francisco, CA. He spent 30 years working as a salesperson for the Boise Cascade Corrugated Container Division in Burley, until his retirement in 2001.

Jake was an avid outdoorsman who truly believed, "A bad day fishing was better than a good day working." Whether fly fishing the Madison River in Montana or taking his annual Steelhead trip to Shepp Ranch in Idaho, he was happy to be on the river. In October however, he would trade his fly rod in for a rifle and head for the hills to track down deer, elk or moose.

When Jake wasn't camping, fishing or hunting, he could be found in the garage tinkering away at projects, or in the yard working on something new for the house. At times, it was as simple as putting together a model airplane, but he was always working on one project or another.

In May of 2000, Jake was united with the birth family he had never known, and had come in contact with a cousin he had never known. He had two brothers as well as two sisters. Jake went from being an only child to being the second oldest of five. His and his siblings spent the last two years making up for lost time and getting to know each other.

Jake was a sensitive but strong man. He was willing to help anyone who needed it. He would literally give the shirt off his back if he knew it would help. He was a proud member of the NRA, Ducks Unlimited and Pheasants Forever.

Jake is survived by his wife, Arden; brothers, Gary and Harvey; sisters, Mary and Kathryn; and his three daughters, Tami, Melanie and Tara. He is also survived by his granddaughter Malia and numerous nieces and nephews.

A memorial service will be held on Monday, September 30, 2002, at 2 p.m. at The United Methodist Church, 450 E. 27th St., in Burley, Idaho. In lieu of flowers, please send donations in his memory to: Shodair Children's Hospital, PO Box 5539, Helena, MT 59604.

E. Leona Jaynes 1913-2002

E. Leona Crane Jaynes, our devoted and loving mother, great-grandmother, and friend died quietly and peacefully, Monday, September 23, 2002, in the Brigham City Nursing and Rehab. Center of natural causes.

She was a kind, gentle woman who never complained or criticized and who enjoyed so many simple pleasures of life.

She was born September 19, 1913, in Springfield, Oregon, in a tent in the middle of a homestead. The daughter of Ethyl Yarnell and Charles Fritz Schmidt. On August 23, 1928, she married Leo Crane after a fun courtship at the Twin Falls Roller Skating Rink. They farmed and milked cows together for many years before Leo died of a sudden heart attack in 1966. They were the parents of five children.

She was later married Fred Jaynes of Twin Falls on April 4, 1972. They enjoyed a happy, peaceful life together before he preceded her in death in 1981. Leona enjoyed her second family to the fullest measure, always considering the Jaynes family as part of her own.

Leona always and consistently spoke well of everyone and devoted so much joy from her family. She loved her yard and garden, loved watching the hummingbirds, playing Yahtzee, going to the fair, and eating a great piece of chocolate now and then.

She was proud of her German Heritage and over the years, taught herself to read, write and speak the old German language. She was always excited to share this knowledge with anyone who would listen and learn.

She loved being a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and to her dying day, she had a true and everlasting testimony of it's truthfulness. She was known for her love of genealogy work and spent countless hours successfully researching the family heritage which she had. Leona found so much joy and satisfaction in this work, that she actually has filing cabinets full of genealogy.

Our Mom and Grandma, our security, filled our lives with so much love and comfort that there will be a saddened void in her empty chair. But as a family will never forget her sweet smile and loving kiss.

Leona is survived by two sisters, Thelma (Harold) Caldwell of Twin Falls, and Eva Phillips of Buhl, Idaho. 5 children, Arlene McKenzie, Ethel Anderson and Pat Elliott, all of Brigham City, Utah; Donald (Jean) Crane of Kennewick, WA and Linda (Jack) Davies of Monroe, Utah; 24 grandchildren, 61 great-grandchildren and 13 great-great-grandchildren.

Congressman: Remove Jarbidge bull trout from list

By Karen Turrell

Times-News correspondent

ELKO, Nev. — U.S. Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., has asked for the immediate removal of federal protection for the bull trout in the Jarbidge River — a move applauded by at least one Elko County commissioner.

Gibbons met with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director Steven Williams on Thursday and urged the agency to take immediate steps to remove the fish's designation as a "threatened" under the Endangered Species Act, said Amy Schaefer, the congressman's press secretary. She had no comment on Williams' response.

Gibbons held a congressional hearing in late July to take testimony on the bull trout's listing and heard from several people who offered the opinion the fish did not qualify as threatened.

During the hearing, Gibbons said the ESA has become a "primary land management tool in the hands of regulatory agencies," a theme he addressed in his remarks to Williams and in a letter sent to the Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The listing of the Jarbidge bull trout as a threatened species was unwarranted, and its listing will in no way increase its population. Given the weak case for listing the bull trout in the first place, I do not see what its continued listing will accomplish."

"Even more disturbing, the Fish and Wildlife Service is not even expecting to issue a final recovery plan for another two years — six years after it was originally listed. The intent of the Endangered Species Act is to help a species immediately, not let it languish in bureaucratic red tape," Gibbons said.

"It is clear to everyone familiar with the issue that the impetus for the emergency listing by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was the South Canyon Road action by Elko County," the congressman wrote in his letter to the agency.

Commissioner Mike Namtini, who has pushed for the delisting, said Gibbons' actions were "great" and commended him for his assistance.

"If we can get this done (delisting), we can finally get things done. There is a spirit of cooperation with the Forest Service, and with the bull trout delisting, South Canyon Road can go forward," Namtini said.

County officials' plans to repair South Canyon Road have been hampered by the bull trout protection, because federal officials say the planned road repairs would disturb the Jarbidge River.

Official says Congress must decide dam issue

LEWISTON (AP) — An Environmental Protection Agency official says it will be up to others to decide whether keeping Snake River water temperatures at levels safe for salmon and steelhead outweighs preserving the four lower Snake dams. The agency's preliminary work on a draft water quality improvement plan for the Columbia and lower Snake Rivers cites the dams in eastern Washington as some of the biggest contributors to the warm water problem.

Rick Parkin of the Environmental Protection Agency's regional office in Seattle said municipal and industrial sources of so-called thermal pollution "seem to be having a relatively small affect and the dams are having a rather large affect."

Even eliminating non-dam sources of heat would not fix the temperature problems in the two rivers," said Parkin, who was in Lewiston this week for a public briefing on the plan's progress.

The EPA along with the states of Idaho, Oregon and Washington and tribes from the region are developing a plan to keep water temperatures within the state standard of 64 degrees in summer that has been determined safe for salmon and steelhead.

The EPA is currently trying to determine where the hotter water comes from to regulate that overall temperature and to what extent each source is responsible for the additional degrees of heat.

"The first step is to determine how much needs to be done," Parkin said. "It's going to take a while for us to sort of some of this out."

Twin Falls hospital offers no-interest plans

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — QUE Financial is handling both Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and its patients. The company handles the billing of patients on payment plans and, unlike payment plans through a bank, patients pay no interest. Magic Valley Regional spent $11,000 for the service in August, says John Greenbeck, general manager. He says the hospital, and its patients, time and money in the long run, hospital officials say. "It's good for our facility, and it's good for our patients," hospital Chief Operating Officer Kent Louis told the Finance Committee Thursday. Also Thursday, Chief Financial Officer John Greenbeck gave committee members a breakdown on the hospital's finances. The hospital brought in $12.4 million in total patient revenue last August, up from $10.7 million, or 16 percent from the same month the previous year. After deductions from revenue, the hospital ended up with $8.1 million in total operating revenue for the month, up from $7.1 million — or 14 percent — from August 2001. The hospital spent $7.8 million in August, up from $6.8 million during the same month the previous year. The largest expenditure was on salaries — $3.2 million — up from $2.7 million, or 21 percent, from the same month last year. Supplies were the second largest expenditure, with the hospital spending $1.2 million in August, up from $1.1 million, or 6 percent from the same month last year. The number of outpatient visits also climbed. Magic Valley Regional admitted 877 patients during August, up from 741, or 18 percent from the same month last year. The number of outpatient visits also climbed. The hospital counted up 16,526 outpatient visits in August, up from 13,912, or 19 percent from August 2001. At the end of August, the hospital had $105 million in total assets, up from $90 million the previous year.

Oktoberfest offers food, drink and fun

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

RUPERT — People who visit the Rupert Square for Saturday's Oktoberfest should expect to hear plenty of music, smell the scents of German sausages, hamburgers, pizza and all sorts of other foods being cooked on site, nibble on cheese and meat products and sample alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages.

The Oktoberfest, sponsored by the recently formed Square Events Inc., begins at 11 a.m. and runs until 8 p.m. People who want to try the many varieties of beer and wine in the sampling area may do so from noon until 6 p.m.

The Oktoberfest is designed to showcase regional microbreweries, wineries, meat producers and cheese plants. Several local homebrewers are expected to showcase their wares, and make both wine and beer.

Musical entertainment will occur on the gazebo from 2 to 6 p.m.

To enter the wine and beer sampling area, people must be 21 or older, and proof of identification will be required. A $10-per-person fee will be assessed to get into that area. All the other Oktoberfest events are free.

Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne proclaimed Saturday as "Winners and Brewers Day." His proclamation points out that "wine and beer have been a part of the American life and culture from the moment settlers first set foot on this country's soil... the founding fathers embraced wine making and brewing as worth and noble profession, and studies by medical and health organizations have concluded that beer and wine consumed in moderation has direct, positive benefits." Among the breweries and wineries which will be represented are:

- Rogue Brewing, Newport, Ore., with Dead Guy Ale.
- Watkins Distributing, Twin Falls, with Budweiser and Bud Light.
- Magic Valley Distributing, Twin Falls, with Alaskan Amber, Grand Teton, Coors, Coors Light and Deschutes.
- Hayden Beverage, Twin Falls, with Fat Tire, brewed by the New Belgium Brewing Co. in Fort Collins, Colo., and several wines.
- Twin Falls Brewing Co., Twin Falls, with Fall Down Brown and other beers.
- BRJ Wine Cellars of Twin Falls.
- Nouveaux Beverage of Sun Valley.
- Kerbs Oil, Burley, with a variety of wine and microbrews.
- Bitterroot Distributing.
- Rupert Brewing Co. Juice, pop, bottled water and other non-alcoholic beverages will also be available.

Musical entertainment includes the Rupert trio of Dirk Weeks, Kirk Grogan and Rick Bolivar, who perform as the Snake River Paddle Co. They'll perform from 3 to 3 p.m.

The Alpine Stiebers German Band will perform the stage from 3 to 4 and 4 to 5 p.m. The group of about 10 people will entertain with "mostly polkas and waltzes." They encourage the crowd to dance the polkas to have dances geared to children.

Fair helps residents monitor their health

By Shari Chahey
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Mini-Cassians can easily and cheaply check their overall health at the upcoming family health fair.

The fair runs from 8 a.m. until noon Oct. 5 at the Minico High School gymnasium. A blood chemistry analysis is available for $25, along with many free screenings including blood pressure checks, hearing tests, screening for headache, neck pain and lower back pain, vision tests and body fat percentage computation.

Employees in the lab at Minidoka Memorial Hospital are already busy processing blood samples. Anyone interested in having the blood chemistry analysis done can have blood drawn Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m. at the hospital lab through Oct. 4, according to lab manager Ann Lee Owens.

"People can then pick up their blood test results at the health fair," she said.

Blood can also be drawn at the health fair, with results available the same day. Before having blood drawn for the test people should fast, eating or drinking nothing — except water — for 14 hours.

As of the end of the blood chemistry analysis, men may also have a prostate specific antigen for an additional $15.

Tests are significantly cheaper at the fair. The blood chemistry analysis is roughly a $300 test. Owens said the tests are being done at cost; employees even donate their labor to process the tests.

"It's hard on the hospital,

Owens said, but the service is valuable and often the only way people can check their health. It's also a way to let the community know the hospital is here, providing good service.

Medicare and Medicaid do not pay for preventive screenings, Owens said, only "medical necessities."

"You have to be sick before they'll pay for this. That's too late," Owens said.

The blood chemistry analysis tests for many things, including glucose, salt levels, kidney and liver functions, along with cholesterol and iron levels.

Results include a reference range so people can see if they are "normal." Some people will not fit the "normal" range, but can discuss irregularities with doctors, Owens said. The results will help when discussing overall health with their regular doctors.

Last year, Owens said, 1,368 blood draws were done, with 150 draws on the Saturday of the health fair. Owens said the current pace is kept up, the lab will have about 1,500 draws this year, "which is wonderful."

es for his own personal gain. Peirson was never authorized to purchase personal items with any County School District credit card.

School district officials are asking that Peirson pay the district the $9,891 which has been spent representing the alleged financial discrepancies.

Peirson resigned July 16, although school officials didn't discuss his resignation until later.

They announced Aug. 14 that school officials had uncovered irregularities in the district's financial records. Last month Chesley said the amount in dispute was about $40,000.

Alaska will pay each resident $1,540 in annual dividend

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska will pay established residents $1,540.76 each this fall, an amount $310 less than last year because of the falling stock market, and officials warned that Alaska's unique oil dividend payment will continue to dwindle in years to come.

The amount of the 2002 dividend was announced Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Alaska Permanent Fund Corp., which manages the $21.8 billion investment fund created from Alaska's oil riches. An estimated 591,537 Alaskans will receive a dividend check in October, compared to 586,052 who received the 2001 dividend.

The Permanent Fund was created by voters in 1976 as an investment account for royalties after oil was discovered on the North Slope.

The first dividend of $1,000 was paid in 1982. Dividends essentially are paid to each Alaskan who has lived in the state for a year.

State offers money for youth camp

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — The state Department of Correction has offered the city $400,000 to secure the old hospital annex for expansion of the prison work camp.

But St. Anthony officials are still considering the offer, which is contingent on the city donating the part of the building that houses the current work camp operation.

"We've also asked the work camp to consider some in-kind labor to help in the remodeling of the Forest Service building we're purchasing," city clerk Taci Stoddard said.

voiced opinions about large dairies in radio advertisements. The radio spots drew more attention when first Clear Channel Communications and then Lee Family Broadcasting dropped the advertisements. Adams did not refer to the refusal of the radio stations to run the advertisements in his report, Maier said. Maier declined to release the complete lyrics of the parody.

As a morning show host, Adams often gives his opinion and sometimes he has had a certain extent disc jockeys will be disc jockeys," Maier said.

But he said Adams overstepped his bounds when he insulted Sierra Club members specifically rather than the actions of the organization. Many people called the radio station complaining about the song, Maier said.

"We're not in the business of trying to alienate people," he said.

Duane Reynolds, chairman of the Sawtooth Group of the Sierra Club, was one of those who complained to the station that Adams fired. Suspending a disc jockey for making an offensive remark seems a bit harsh, Reynolds said.

"Though Reynolds didn't hear the song, he did hear complaints and wanted to find out what Adams had said. Maier explained the general tenor of the song but did not give Reynolds a copy of the words.

"Since I wasn't privy to what was said, I don't know if the suspension was appropriate," Reynolds said.

Reynolds objected more to the derisive use of the word "fairly," slang for a homosexual man.

"It's not hard to see how much bad press nationwide about people who are racist or otherwise bigoted," Reynolds said. "It makes Idaho look bad."

Many people called the radio station to complain that Adams had been fired, Maier said. During Adams' suspension station officials will try to establish a policy to correct the problem, the station decided how to move forward, Maier said.

The Sierra Club has not tried to buy advertising spots from the Horizon Broadcasting Group, Maier said.

The Sierra Club's Ken Midkiff had earlier said the group would air radio spots in the Mini-Cassia area. The Mini-Cassia station has not received Sierra Club requests to air John Sedler's Lee Family Broadcasting in Burley.

for the creation of committees to take on major issues, but the extraordinary thing is that a group like this is convened so close to the election," Weatherby said.

But Kempthorne probably will not suffer from using an idea first proposed by his opponent. As successful politicians have done that throughout history, it's bad to plagiarize in academic circles, but not in political circles," Weatherby said.

Several state departments and divisions will lend staff assistance to the committee, though the details of how the committee will function have yet to be worked out.

Weatherby said the key will be whether the governor and lawmakers take the recommendations to heart when the Legislature convenes in early January.

"I think they will come up with funding recommendations. The question is how much influence they will have."

IDAHO

Ex-UI cashier agrees to pay back money

MOSCOW (AP) - A former University of Idaho cashier has agreed to pay back $80,000 she allegedly embezzled while on the job.

Kathy D. Adair also agreed on Wednesday to spend up to 90 days in jail, remain on probation for up to 14 years and submit to unspecified treatment.

The plea agreement must still be accepted by 2nd District Court Judge John Stegner.

Adair's attorney, John Judge of Moscow, filed the proposed plea agreement after his client waived her right to a preliminary hearing.

Magistrate William Hamlett accepted Adair's decision after reminding her that she should remain silent until the deal is formally struck at the district court level.

"In short," said Hamlett, "you ought to keep your mouth shut and not say a word."

Judge also declined comment after the hearing.

According to the proposed plea agreement, Adair, of Viola, will plead guilty to one count of grand theft.

In return, Latah County Prosecutor William Thompson Jr. has agreed to ask that Adair spend no more than 90 days in the county jail.

Probation could be terminated prior to the 14-year maximum if full restitution is made.

Adair was a cashier in the Office of Student Accounts. She was fired in April after being placed on administrative leave in March.

An audit showed that $112,256 in cash was missing.

Brady says Kempthorne misleads voters on education.

BOISE (AP) - Keeping his focus on education, Democratic challenger Jerry Brady is accusing Republican Gov. Dirk Kempthorne of misleading voters by claiming his budget-balancing decisions were made to protect schools.

"The real tough choices are those that nearly every school district in the state is currently facing as they stare devastating budget shortfalls in the face," Brady said, claiming the shortfalls were created by Kempthorne's historic reduction in state support for public schools last year.

In his newest television advertisement, Kempthorne moves easily through a classroom filled with young children and then out the doors as the children leave, talking about his unwavering commitment to education and that "we've increased education funding every year since I've been governor."

Kempthorne was campaigning in northern Idaho on Thursday, the eve of a major fundraising event in Boise with Vice President Dick Cheney. GOP officials said the event could raise $100,000 for Kempthorne and 1st District Congressman Burch Otter to split.

But Kempthorne campaign manager Jason Lehost pointed out that no matter how you cut it, public schools received $812.6 million in state support for the 2000-2001 school year, $845.2 million for the 2001-2002 school year and $852.2 million for the current school year.

"Figures don't lie," Lehost said.

"All that matters is how much money education spent, and those are the numbers. They spent more than they did the year before, and more's not less."

But Brady, the Idaho Falls newspaper publisher, concentrated on the fact that Kempthorne and the Republican Legislative majority gladly claimed credit 18 months ago when they approved $868.4 million in state support for schools, an increase of more than $50 million.

Huge blaze threatens mountain village

MOUNT BALDY VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Firefighters prepared defenses Thursday as a 31,500-acre wildfire burning above Los Angeles' eastern foothill suburbs moved toward this community high in the San Gabriel Mountains.

The so-called Williams Fire, one of two major California wildfires, remained a risk to suburbs pressed against the south edge of Angeles National Forest but was moving to the northeast, focusing the danger on the village more than 4,000 feet up Mount Baldy.

"We are at the top of the chimney," said Capt. Jim Wilkins, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service in the village, where firefighters were doubling 10,000 feet of fire hose already laid and strike teams were being posted to defend homes and businesses.

Flames were at the bottom of a canyon within two miles of the village, where only about 80 of its 500 fulltime residents remained. Air tankers regularly rumbled overhead on sorties to bomb distant flames with retardant and water.

"I'm nervous," said resident Ralph Burleson, 54. "I don't want

California's other major blaze, covering 2,529 acres in Santa Cruz County near Morgan Hill was 30 percent contained after destroying 11 homes and damaging four. It was burning toward remote neighborhoods along the forested Santa Cruz Mountains.

Activists sue over Utah drilling

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Conservationists worried about oil drilling near one of Utah's most identifiable landmarks have filed a lawsuit to stop an exploration project in southern Utah.

The area in question is known as "Yellow Cat." It is on Bureau of Land Management property, about 10 miles from the border of Arches National Park, home to Delicate Arch, the sandstone landmark depicted on some Utah license plates.

The BLM property, east of the national park, has been open to oil exploration and other development for decades, according to Maggie Wyatt, field manager for the 2 million acres of BLM land surrounding the Moab field office.

You are most warmly invited by the children of Bob and Jane Amoureux to participate in the joyous celebration of their parent's 75th Wedding Anniversary. # Former WorldCom exec pleads guilty, says he was following orders

NEW YORK - WorldCom's former controller pleaded guilty to securities fraud Thursday, saying he was told by "senior management" to falsify records in what became the largest corporate accounting scandal in U.S. history.

David Myers, 44, entered the plea in U.S. District Court after telling Judge Richard Casey he wanted to waive his right to be indicted on the charges. It was the first admission of guilt in the multi-billion-dollar scandal.

Prosecutors say Myers and Scott Sullivan, the former chief financial officer at WorldCom, directed employees to falsify balance sheets to hide more than $3.8 billion in expenses. The deception enabled WorldCom to report a profit when it was actually losing money, according to regulators.

Myers faces up to 10 years on the most serious charge. WorldCom, which owns the nation's No. 2 long-distance telephone company MCI, became the biggest corporate bankruptcy in U.S. history in July.

Report: Merrill Lynch worker will testify in Stewart case

NEW YORK - An assistant at Merrill Lynch & Co. has agreed to plead guilty to a misdemeanor and testify against Martha Stewart in a federal investigation into sales of InClone stock, The Wall Street Journal reported in Thursday's editions.

Prosecutors had sought to charge the assistant, Douglas Faneuil, with a felony of making false statements in investigations but agreed to a misdemeanor in exchange for his cooperation, the newspaper said.

Merrill Lynch handled Stewart's sale of nearly 4,000 InClone shares in late December, shortly before the company announced that federal regulators would not review the company's cancer drug, Erbitux. ### House tries to limit damages in medical malpractice suits

WASHINGTON - Responding to physicians' complaints that insurance rates are driving them out of business, the House passed a measure that would limit malpractice awards to patients injured by their doctors.

The bill passed 217-203 on Thursday. Debate was emotional as Democrats and Republicans traded barbs over whose proposals would best help patients faced with doctor shortages or rising health costs.

"We are very close to Americans dying because they can't get emergency care, and the quality of our health care system deteriorating across the board," said Rep. Jim Greenwood, R-Pa., the measure's sponsor.

But Rep. Stephanie Tubbs Jones, D-Ohio, said Republicans had offered a bill that does nothing to help patients. "People aren't going to get any better health care because of this bill," Tubbs Jones said.

Nation in brief

It is unlikely the bill will be acted on by the Democratic-controlled Senate, which has already rejected a similar measure.

Judge denies class action for patients, OKs doctors

MIAMI - A judge ruled Thursday that millions of managed care patients cannot sue their insurers in a single nationwide lawsuit. But he gave about 600,000 doctors the go-ahead to pursue a class-action case against the industry.

The ruling virtually wipes out a colossal lawsuit covering an estimated 145 million patients. The patients accuse the managed care industry of skimping on care by making decisions based on the bottom line rather than good medicine.

U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno scheduled a trial for next May on the doctors' racketeering suit. The doctors claim that they are routinely shortchanged by managed care.

Survey: Sexual intercourse among teens is declining

WASHINGTON - Sexual intercourse among high school students has dropped significantly in the past decade, a federal health survey reported Thursday.

The number of teens who remained virgins rose 16 percent in the past decade. In 2001, virgins outnumbered those who say they have had intercourse 54 percent to 46 percent. In 1991, the ratio was just the opposite.

The number of students who have had at least four sex partners dropped 24 percent, according to studies just released by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In 2001, only 1 in 7 teens - or 14 percent - had had at least four sex partners, down from 19 percent in 1991.

"This is good news. However, there are still too many kids that are at risk," said Laura Kann, research chief for the CDC's division of adolescent and school health, and a co-author of the study. "At least kids are heading in the right direction."

Actors join Bill Clinton to fight AIDS in Africa

KIGALI, Rwanda - They make an unlikely troika: Oscar-winning actor Kevin Spacey, comedian Chris Tucker and former President Bill Clinton. But they're united in their cause of fighting AIDS and encouraging economic development in Africa.

Clinton, Spacey and Tucker are on a five-day tour of Ghana, Nigeria, Rwanda, Mozambique and South Africa, they head back to the United States on Sunday.

On his first trip to Africa, Spacey disappeared at the ravages caused by AIDS, and the difficulty of getting people in the United States to pay attention.

"HIV/AIDS is the single most important issue facing the world today," the actor said Wednesday. "If we don't begin to tackle this one, then it doesn't much matter what else we try to do because we are going to be faced with a devastating plague that would wipe out generations."

Students arrive drunk, so school bans dances

SCARSDALE, N.Y. - School dances at Scarsdale High have been banned after about 200 students turned up drunk at a homecoming party.

Five of the 600 students at last Friday night's dance were taken to hospitals. All have recovered.

Principal John Klemme, who called police to the party, banned school dances until school officials felt sure that the students in the affluent New York City suburb wouldn't misbehave.

Teen thinks curfew is too early to have fun

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl about to start my sophomore year in high school. I play sports; help out with chores around the house, and tend to my little sisters after school until Mom gets home from work. I've always tried to live up to everyone else's expectations of me, because I don't want to let anyone down.

I now want to start dating and hanging out with school friends and go to parties. I don't intend to be wild. I just want to have some fun every now and then. The problem is my mom is strict about my curfew - 11 o'clock. I have asked for midnight, but she thinks that's too late for me to be out. I have friends younger than me who have midnight curfews.

Mom tells me she doesn't want me to make the same mistakes she made. But how will I learn about life if I can't experience things for myself? I'm smarter than she realizes. I know right from wrong. I think I'm old enough to find out who I am. Abby, do you think I'm asking too much?

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

- WANTING TO GROW UP IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR WANTING: Whether you're asking too much depends on the kind of dates you have in mind. If you're going out with groups of friends - and it's supervised - 11 o'clock is fine for a 15-year-old. If you continue to be as responsible as you are, renegotiate the curfew when you turn 16.

DEAR ABBY: Before our wedding, my mother-in-law offered to purchase a set of sterling silver flatware for her son and me as our gift. She instructed us to register the pattern we selected and said she'd buy the set.

Two weeks prior to our wedding, my in-laws came to visit and brought our wedding gift with them. Imagine my shock when I opened the box and found a totally different set than the one we had chosen! Without thinking, I said, "Oh, this isn't the silver we picked!" My mother-in-law replied that her selection was better.

I want to exchange the set for the one my fiance and I wanted in the first place. My husband says to drop the subject, unless I want his mom to comment about it every time we sit down for a meal together.

This has become a bone of contention between my new husband and me. Does his mom have the right to wield that kind of control over us, Abby? What should I do?

- MAD AT HIS MOM IN SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR MAD: Your mother-in-law has the right to wield that kind of control only if her son and you allow her to. What she did may have been well-intended, but it came across as insensitive and heavy-handed.

It's time for you and your husband to have a talk with his mother and tell her that while you appreciate her gift, you chose the pattern you selected for a reason. You both liked it. And while she may prefer the pattern she selected, she is not the person who is going to have to live with it. Therefore the silver is being exchanged for the one you prefer.

Once you put the subject on the table, it's less likely to be rehashed at subsequent family gatherings than if she arrives for a dinner party and is "surprised." Your brand-new hubby owes it to you to back you up on this, and you can tell him I said so.

Monkeys raise eyebrows to show questioning attitude

You know how yet raise your eyebrows to show a questioning attitude? Monkeys do, too. Q. Among the larger animals on earth, which are the most numerous? A. Humans. And they're getting numerous and numerous. The Church in the Middle Ages forbade Christians to lend money for interest. In Virginia, a club of widows and widowers wanted to throw a dance to build membership, but only for other widows and widowers. They didn't want unqualified folks, no matter how lonely, showing up. So they required each arrival to show the death certificate of the dead spouse at the door. Naturalists who trap birds for the sake of science say the most difficult to catch is the cardinal. Will Rogers, who said so much, also said, "Thank God we don't get all the government we pay for."

Russian republic holds day of mourning for avalanche victims

VLADIKAVKAZ, Russia (AP) — Church bells tolled in unison Thursday across the Russian republic of North Ossetia to mark a day of mourning for dozens of people believed killed when a small chunk of ice broke off a Caucasus Mountain peak and roared down the mountainside Sept. 20.

The 500 rescuers picking through the disaster zone — a thick, swampy mass of ice, mud, fallen trees and rocks — have recovered only 12 bodies. But officials fear that as many as 150 people may have been caught in Friday's avalanche, and they hold little hope of finding anyone alive.

The official number of missing people was 99 as of Wednesday, North Ossetia's Emergency Situations Ministry said.

Among those feared dead were popular Russian actor-director Sergai Bodrov Jr., who was shooting a movie in the region. In addition to Bodrov, 48 people from his film crew and local support staff were missing, officials said. "The collapse of the glacier ... became a misfortune not only for North Ossetia but for all of Russia," North Ossetia President Alexander Dzasokhov told mourners during a special government session.

Dzasokhov's speech was followed by a minute of silence, and traffic temporarily stopped in the North Ossetian capital, Vladikavkaz, 937 miles southeast of Moscow.

Shopkeepers draped black bands on the republic's white, yellow and red flag, and concert halls canceled scheduled performances. Television broadcasters were encouraged to revise their programming to keep light entertainment off the air.

Earlier Thursday, relatives and friends filled Russian Orthodox and Armenian churches for special mourning services.

Madina Pukhova, left, who lost her husband in the avalanche, cries as she looks at the place where the village of Nizhny Karmadon was in Karmadon Gorge, 16 miles southwest of Vladikavkaz, southern Russia, Tuesday.

Disaster heats up debate on warming

Los Angeles Times

The entombment of a Russian village under 3 million tons of ice and mud from a collapsing glacier is a sign of the gradual yet vast climatic changes sweeping the world's mountainous regions, scientists say.

Researchers maintain that the avalanche is part of a subtle chain of events that have transformed once-frozen mountains and is altering the course of nearby human settlements in unexpected, and sometimes disastrous, ways. The changes often have been difficult to perceive, both because they have taken place over such a long period of time and their effects are not always clear — some regions have become colder, even as others warm.

Scientists say there is little question that a world of ice is in flux.

Glacier National Park in Montana has lost more than 100 glaciers during the last century, vanished into a slow drip of runoff. In Venezuela, only two glaciers remain where there were six 30 years ago. In Tanzania's Mt. Kilimanjaro, about 75 percent of the glacier has retreated, leaving some to suggest that Ernest Hemingway's famous "Snows of Kilimanjaro" will exist only in literature in about a decade.

The U.N. Environmental Program completed a Himalayan glacier survey this summer that found dozens of mountain lakes in Nepal and Bhutan so swollen from melting glaciers that they could burst in the next few years, inundating villages throughout the region.

"I don't think we fully understand the full extent of these impacts, but I'm convinced they're happening," said Tony Prato, an ecological economist at the University of Missouri.

The human toll has been largely overlooked in the debate over global warming. Much of the attention that has been paid to climate change has focused on the Arctic and Antarctic, regions vulnerable to temperature change but sparsely populated.

The Russian disaster and growing changes throughout the world's mountainous regions show that the warming of the world's climate is beginning to affect areas much closer to home. The last decade has brought some of the most rapid change of the century — seven of the last 10 years were the warmest on record.

"We have to start looking at the human dimension," said Alton C. Byers, a mountain geographer who studies human effect on the Himalayas and Andes. "There are more unanticipated hardships for the future."

Explosives turn up on Moroccan jet

PARIS (AP) — Explosives of the same type found on alleged shoe bomber Richard Reid were discovered on a Moroccan jet after passengers left the flight at an airport in eastern France, authorities said Thursday.

There was no detonator attached to the 3.5 ounces of explosives discovered in the passenger section of a Royal Air Maroc airplane on Wednesday night after it landed at the Metz-Nancy-Lorraine airport, according to police.

BURLEY Don't miss the chance to go back in time with "The Taffetas," a concert-within-a-play featuring four local moms whose voices blend together like butter and sugar.

The Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation production, which opens tonight at the King Center, was first performed by the four women last fall and brought back popular demand.

"This is probably our farewell performance," said Julene Thurston, who plays Donna. After last fall's production, the quartet took the show on the road to Salt Lake City, Spokane, Wash., and Portland, Ore.

And what makes the musical magical is the way the women's voices sound together, according to Alan Hale, the director.

"They blend very, very well, and they do things the way I want," Hale said. "We did the show (last fall) because we knew we had the talent."

The foursome had been singing together for about four years in a local music group Soft Touch. Peggy Harris, who plays Peggy in the show, says that's what made the difference.

"Our blend is almost second nature," she said. "We have such a great time. It's made the four of us really feel like sister."

The premise of the show is simple. The Taffetas, a singing group of four sisters from Muncie, Ind., hopes to catch its big break - and the attention Ed Sullivan - during an appearance on a television show called "Spotlight on Music."

Conceived by composer Rick Lewis in 1987, "The Taffetas" ran for 165 performances at New York's Cherry Lane Theater in 1989 and has been performed worldwide ever since.

It features a collection of hits ranging from "Mr. Sandman" to "Johnny Angel" bringing back fond memories of a long-lost time and sound. The four Taffetas represent more than doo-wop harmony; they embody a simple age of teen romance and innocent dreams of stardom.

Between the four local singers, they have 22 children and all four chose motherhood over the performing arts.

Now they're getting their chance.

"I have always really wanted to do this, but I couldn't leave my kids," Harris said.

Rarely-performed Copland opera comes to Ketchum

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Idaho audiences will get a rare opportunity to see American opera when Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" takes the stage tonight and Saturday.

The partially staged production, featuring three up-and-coming singers, will take place tonight and Saturday at the Presbyterian Church of the Bigwood in Ketchum. The opera - the only one written by Copland - incorporates the upbeat music of Appalachia with the homespun story of a young girl seeking her destiny in this vast land of ours.

Set deep in the heart of Americans, "The Tender Land" looks more like "Oklahoma" or "Annie Get Your Gun" than "Candide" or "The Barber of Seville."

"It has a different feel than the grand Italian operas, in part because it was designed to be an opera that people had access to," said Kristine Bretell, a spokeswoman for Sun Valley Center for the Arts, which is sponsoring the performance.

"It's a great first opera for someone who's afraid of opera," added Producing Director Amy Wigstrom, director of performing arts at the Sun Valley Center.

"Usually when you think of opera, you think of something taking place in another language in another century in period costumes. This feels more like musical theater - something done in folksy style in English so you can sing it with characters close enough to us in time that we can relate to them."

The opera was written for television. But, as is often the case with proposed TV projects, the concept ended up in File 13. It premiered at New York City Opera in 1954.

"It's so rarely produced and yet so easy to produce because it's not written for grand opera. It's meant to be scaled down," Wigstrom said.

Copland, who died in 1990 at the age of 90, is widely considered to be, along with Duke Ellington, the greatest American composer of the 20th century.

"The Tender Land" involves a young woman named Laurie who is just about to graduate from high school - a big deal at a Midwestern farm family of the 1930s. The night before graduation two drifters come through town looking for work.

It's love at first sight for Laurie and one of the young men. But, just as quickly, a rumor spreads that someone has been molesting some farm girls and suspicion immediately focuses on the drifters. Their decision to leave prompts Laurie to contemplate her own future away from the family farm for the first time.

The opera features hoedowns, fiddle music and other vivacious, sometimes nostalgic music that conveys the image of an American landscape full of promise. Copland himself described it as "very plain" music "with a colloquial flavor."

One of the songs, "Stomp Your Foot Upon the Floor," creates the musical allusion of a barn dance that demonstrates sounds of the land and its wide open starry settings.

Seattle-based soprano Amy Bils, who has performed with the Portland Opera, Washington East Opera and Seattle Civic Light Opera, will sing the role of Laurie. Tenor Wesley Rogers, who has performed with Seattle Opera, Opera Memphis and Washington East Opera, will play opposite her.

Smith, who has been in such operas as "Billy Budd," "Madame Butterfly" and "The Marriage of Figaro" will play the Opera, Chautauqua Opera and Sarasota Opera, will play the other drifter, Kathleen Lane, associate professor of voice at Idaho State University, will play Ma and Shawnee Brew, a sixth grader at The Community School, will play the younger daughter.

R.L. Rowsey, who conducted national tours of "Gypsy," "Kiss of the Spiderwoman" and "Fiddler on the Roof" will serve as music director. Leslie Halla, formerly with the Lyric Opera of Chicago, will be stage director. There also will be a chorus of local singers.

The opera is a collaboration between Sun Valley Center and Sun Valley Opera Company.

The 10th Thousand Springs Festival will start on Saturday

The Times-News

HAGERMAN - The Nature Conservancy's autumnal idyll turns 10 this week.

The Thousand Springs Festival, a combination of art show, crafts fair, music festival and food-fasting, will be held Saturday and Sunday on Ritter Island northeast of here. Proceeds benefit The Nature Conservancy of Idaho's conservation projects along the Snake River.

Over the past decade, the Thousand Springs Festival has grown in reputation, and we are very excited about the artists we have this year," said Geri Oshiro, the festival's coordinator. "It offers art lovers of all ages the chance to enjoy some of the state's finest artists in a beautiful island setting."

About 85 Idaho artists will display their work Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. It includes fiber, glass, jewelry, paintings, photography, pottery, metal sculpture and mixed media.

Live music will be offered throughout the weekend. Food specialties will include trout and barbecue pork sandwiches.

A new booth - "For Kids Only" - we feature donated art objects that only children are allowed to buy.

Horse and wagon rides will be available and storytellers will weave historic tales throughout the weekend. Nature walks, live bird and reptile displays and canoe rides will also be offered.

The festival takes place on the 75-acre island portion of the Conservancy's Thousand Springs Preserve.

"This is a special island, with an interesting history and unique ecology," said Matt Miller, director of communications for The Nature Conservancy of Idaho. "We hope that, as people enjoy the festival, they also take time to learn about the work the Conservancy is doing, to protect plants, animals and natural communities along the Snake River."

'Austin Powers in Goldmember'

The swinging 1970s London spy with the 'yeah, baby, yeah' attitude is clever, funny and gifted Mike Myers plays not only him but also his arch nemesis Dr. Evil plus assorted other bad guys in the third in a series of James Bond/Harry Palmer parodies. The film is directed by Jay Roach, who did the honors on the first two, but 'Goldmember's' guiding light is clearly Myers, who both co-wrote (with Michael McCuller) and co-produced this sequel, where some of the attempts at humor are actually funny. The thing that won't make you laugh is the film's tireless parade of gross-out gags and scatological verbal jests. Michael Caine, Beyonce Knowles, Michael York, Seth Green, Robert Wagner, Mindy Sterling and Yvonne Troyer co-star. (1.36, PG-13, for sexual innuendo, crude humor and language.)

'Ballistic: Ecks Vs. Sever'

Big, noisy nonsense. 'Ballistic' stars Lucy Liu and Antonio Banderas as Sever and Ecks, operatives who wear their world-weariness with all the insouciance of a couple of Milanese runway models. Directed by Thai newcomer Katos and written by Alan McElroy, the film brings the two stars together by way of all the usual rogue-agent complications and a doozy of a plot twist: Sever is a member of something called the Orphan Class, Chinese girls who, instead of being adopted by nice American families, have been raised to become assassins by the Department Intelligence Agency, an outfit that really exists and presumably did not vet the script. Ecks and Sever are supposed to be enemies but seem on friendly enough terms to have coordinated their matching wardrobes of black on black, with a few accents of color. They both look great when running, shooting guns, sailing through the air, shooting guns, riding his and her motorcycles—activities that essentially sum up most of the action and plot, and, along with the usual foreign-market concerns, help explain why neither does much talking. (1.26, R, for strong violence.)

'The Banger Sisters'

A practiced piece of Hollywood hokum, way too calculated and contrived, especially for a film that nominally celebrates the chaos and creativity of the 1960s. It's the Geritol version that is being presented here, the comfy equivalent of a pair of jeans with an adjustable waistband that obligingly offers just a skosh more room to house complacent sensibilities. The film stars Goldie Hawn and Susan Sarandon as a pair of celebrated '60s rock groupies who haven't been in touch for decades, definitely deserve better. With Geoffrey Rush and Erika Christensen. Written and directed by Bob Dolman. (1.34, R, for language, sexual content and some drug use.)

'Barbershop'

A warm and wise comedy, often uproarious but with an underlying seriousness, set in a vintage Chicago barbershop, a traditional gathering place for African American males. Ice Cube stars as its proprietor, a well-meaning young man who in setting his sights beyond its previous owners, his father and grandfather, comes to appreciate the barbershop's true value only when it may be too late to save it. This most satisfying movie has a large ensemble cast headed by the one and only Cedric the Entertainer, whose outrageous take on black icons is hilarious. (1.42, PG-13, for language, sexual content and brief drug references.)

'The Bourne Identity'

A tip-top espionage thriller starring Matt Damon takes the crackjack premise of Robert Ludlum's 1980 novel about an amnesiac spy and runs with it. In director Doug Liman's hands, this potentially overly familiar scenario takes on unexpected sparkle. He is so good at the mechanics of action that they don't feel like mechanics, and he and his actors have used intense but low-key line readings to infuse a sense of reality onto these proceedings, to make this a character-driven story about a young person we might know caught in a situation we can barely imagine. With Franka Potente, Chris Cooper, Brian Cox, Julia Stiles and Oliver Owen. (1.58, PG-13, for violence and some language.)

'Charly'

Adam Thomas Andereg's adaptation of Jack Weyland's novel about the romance between a Mormon and a Gentle in Salt Lake City. With Heather Beers and Jeremy Elliott. Rated PG.

'The Fast Runner'
An award winner at Cannes and Toronto, the first Inuit feature of a mostly nonverbal, stylized and audacious way to tell the story of a 19th-century Inuit in icy northern Canada. At nearly three hours, the mix of 'Spoon of the North' and 'Shakespeare in the Snow' can be plodding, but you won't have another movie experience like it in this year. Not rated; nudity, sexual situations violence. 2 hours, 52 minutes. In English with English subtitles. MPAA-R.

'The Four Feathers'
The key fact about the film is not that the venerable, 100-year-old novel it's based on has already been filmed six times. It's the story of a young man who is absent and the most famous adaptation of all was made in 1939; likely before even the parents of current stars Heath Ledger, Erika Christensen and Shiri Appleby. Directed by John Dahl (12), PG-13, for intense battle sequences, disturbing images, violence and some sexuality.

spunky, spirited fustion. PG (mildly scary sci-fi stuff)

'My Big Fat Greek Wedding'
Nia Vardalos' autobiographical comedy stage play about growing up Greek is transfigured into a mushy, overcooked ethnic comedy with culture clash jokes whose silliest date expired 20 years ago. Vardalos, however, is affecting as the gum, withdrawn single gal who gets everyone at home riled over her engagement with a non-Greek guy (John Corbett). With Vardalos, Cosentino, Eddie Kazan, Melissa Martin and Joey Fatone. Directed by Joel Zwick. (125; PG for sensuality and language.)

A horror story about a soft-spoken psychotic looking for love in all the wrong places, Robin Williams' new film is certainly more doubtful than many of the actor's earlier works, even if it's nowhere as dark (or as scary) as the terrifying 'Mrs. Doubtfire' or the genuinely fear-inspiring troupe of 'Patch Adams,' 'Jacob the Liar' and 'Bicentennial Man.' All top, predictably, as if obeying some rule of genre, writer-director Mark Romanek trades in his more involved ideas about alienation and voyeurism for an eruption of violence, then taps its non-sense about marital fidelity that indicates that while his influences include Stanley Kubrick and Michael Powell, he's also taking notes from Adrian Lyne. With Connie Nielsen, Michael Varian, Gary Cole and Eric LaSalle. (138; R, for sexual content and language.)

'Signs'
Writer-director M. Night Shyamalan's great gift is the creation of atmospheric, terrifyingly spooky, unexplained horror. When he gets around to telling his here, all is well, but he's already promised whether the film offers a payoff (considering how long it takes to get where it's going. There's a strain of quirky, ironic humor here, that is unexpected, but effective). Less successful is the film's main theme: the power and even the necessity of faith. It's finally a B picture at heart, and whatever heartfelt messages the Bs convey is never what's memorable about them. With Mel

Gibson, Joaquin Phoenix, Rory C. O'Connell and Abigail Breslin. (147; PG-13, for some frightening moments.)

'Spy Kids 2: The Island of Lost Dreams'

Following the disarmingly clever and successful 'Spy Kids' with a sequel that's almost as good, Robert Rodriguez is proving himself to be perhaps the most gifted maker of live-action family adventure films around. Though it's longer and more elaborate than it needs to be, 'Island of Lost Dreams' shares its predecessor's smart but relaxed sense of humor, a sophisticated imagination and the ability to be sharp and playful without being malicious. With Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino and Steve Buscemi. (140; PG, for action sequences and brief rude humor.)

'Stealing Harvard'
Dreadful numskul comedy about a timid guy (Jason Lee) who turns to his weirdo pal (Tom Green) to get his hands on $30,000 to uphold a long-gone promise to his niece to send her to college. This propels them on a series of lame and uninspired shenanigans. With Leslie Mann, Megan Mullally, Dennis Farina. (123; PG-13, for crude and sexual humor, language and drug references.)

'Sweet Home Alabama'
Reese Witherspoon stars as a New York-based fashion designer whose glamorous life is complicated by her redneck past, which includes a husband. With Josh Lucas, Patrick Dempsey, Fred Ward, Mary Kay Place and Candice Bergen. Directed by Andy Tennant.

'Swimfan'
Ripped from the pages of the 'See Dick Run. See Jane Stralk' Elm' handbook, the thrillerless thriller is as dumb as it gets. Teenage boy with teenage girlfriend beds teenage girl who isn't his girlfriend. The latter turns out to be psycho. (She has a fatal attraction.) Add per bunny. Str.

NCAA report: Graduation hits 60 percent for athletes

INDIANAPOLIS — The graduation rate for Division I student-athletes has reached 60 percent for the first time since the NCAA began tracking the figures 18 years ago, according to a survey released Thursday. Male athletes are graduating at a rate of 54 percent, up 3 percentage points from a year ago, while the rate for female athletes remained at 69 percent. The NCAA's survey covered on-scholarship athletes who entered college in 1995 and graduated within six years. Among black male athletes in Division I, the graduation rate was 43 percent, and 60 percent for black females. Only 36 percent of male basketball players graduated, however, and the rate for black basketball players was 28 percent. The rate for white male basketball players was 51 percent. The survey also found that 50 percent of male basketball players and 40 percent of female basketball players reported that they were not academically prepared for college.

TWIN FALLS — The 750 fans on hand Thursday saw a match that lived up to the hype pitting two nationally ranked teams. Though most left disappointed. It was visiting Utah Valley State College which prevailed Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho gym in a Scenic West Athletic Conference match full of momentum swings, some applause-inducing efforts and rivalry-flavored emotion. The second-ranked Wolverines grounded out a 17-30, 30-16, 23-30, 26-15-12 win, taking advantage of 35 CSI hitting errors and controlling the net for much of the time. It didn't look like it was going to be a close match early on. The No. 4 Golden Eagles came out on an emotional high and executed well in a 30-17 rout that wasn't as close as the score. Utah Valley looked like it was still on the bus until late in the game. CSI held an 18-5 lead at one point. ## Ryder Cup players pause, look back

Ceremony marks Sept. 11 attacks

The Associated Press

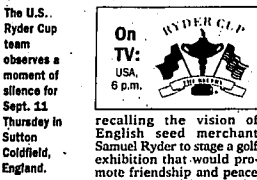

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — Separated on stage by the gold Ryder Cup trophy they desperately want to win, U.S. and European players paused to remember why they had to wait so long for the chance.

U.S. captain Curtis Strange began with a reminder of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the reason the matches were postponed for the team.

"I've lived for the game of golf and I want to drive my decision," Jordan said Thursday in a statement released by the Wizards. "Physically I'm feeling very strong, and feel that

Jordan plans to give it another shot with Wizards

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Michael Jordan plans to play another season with the Washington Wizards, confident his 39-year-old knees are healthy enough to allow him to finish his contract with the team. "I've lived for the game of basketball and I want to drive my decision," Jordan said Thursday in a statement released by the Wizards. "Physically I'm feeling very strong, and feel that the steps I took in the offseason have allowed me to return to the game in great condition." The statement lacked the drama and magnitude of Jordan's announcement a year ago, when he ended a 3.5-year retirement by resigning from the Wizards' front office so he could resume his playing career. Although Jordan has come out of retirement twice before, he has indicated that this would be his last season. At the All-Star game in Philadelphia this year, he answered with a definite "no" when asked if he would play more than two seasons with the Wizards. Jordan is returning as a projected backup. Coach Doug Collins said he has spoken to Jordan about using him as a sixth man at shooting guard, and he's said he doesn't want to use Jordan at small forward because of the physical demands of playing against better

Jordan will turn 40 in February, though, and the Wizards have added some talent since the end of last season. They acquired point guard Larry Hughes, shooting guard Jerry Stackhouse and small forward Bryn Russell to start on the perimeter. "No decisions have been made as to my exact role on the team," Jordan said in the statement. "but I expect that coach Collins will make those assessments next week in training camp."

T.F. will face smashmouth ball in Jerome

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The last time both Twin Falls and Jerome carried winning records into their annual football game was 1980 when both teams were 1-0. Twenty-two years later, the Bruins and Tigers bring identical 2-1 marks to their showdown tonight at 7:30 at Murray O'Rourke Stadium in Jerome.

Though the Tigers trail the series 23-3 since 1970, they won last year's tilt 26-24, snapping a 12-game losing streak to the Bruins. But if they hope to start building their own winning streak, the Tigers will have to continue playing the kind of smashmouth, run-it-at-ya football that has gotten them this far. That begins with 6-foot, 200-pound junior tailback Clay Swan, who has rushed for 310 yards and three touchdowns this season and has 36 tackles to lead the Jerome defense. First-year head coach Terry Waitley said the Tigers start and end with Swan. "Swannie's a great kid, he gives forth 100 percent effort every day," Waitley said. "He rallies the kids up and he wants to be as good as he can be." Bolstering the Tigers rushing game is versatile back Casey Schvaneveldt and quarterback Jesse Pallas, who likes to get out in the open to chew up yards or where he can find receivers Cory Bauer, Charlie Harding or Cory Musgrave in the flat. "He's not real comfy standing in the pocket," said Waitley of his quarterback. "Jesse has grown up

Angels end agony, clinch playoff berth

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Now, the Anaheim Angels can celebrate. After 16 years and a four-game losing streak that kept putting off the party, the Angels finally clinched a playoff berth with a 10-5 victory over the Texas Rangers on Thursday.

"We would have taken it anyway, but to have an opportunity to get to do this right here, it's pretty special," said center fielder Darin Erstad, who was doused in champagne and beer, just like everyone else in the Anaheim clubhouse. Since their last postseason appearance in 1986, the closest the Angels got to the playoffs was when they finished a game behind Seattle in 1995, when Garett Anderson and Troy Percival were rookies.

General manager sees network improvements

BUHL - Rural Idaho is hooking up to the high-speed age.

"Telecommunications are going to get more advanced and technical in the near future with next-generation services, voice over the Internet, video, medium transporting and high speed," said John Gunn, chief operating officer and general manager of Filenational Telephone Co.

Gunn and his son, James, network operations manager, spoke recently to Buhl business people.

John Gunn explained Syringa Networks, a network of fiber optic broadband connections which will link the rural parts of the state with the outside world. The network has worked its way from Idaho Falls to Bliss to Boise, with access connections in each of the towns along the way. The lines have been run close to schools to be used when the districts are ready to hook up.

"We are only using telephone lines now," said Buhl Superintendent Rick Hill, "but future plans will include using the network."

"There's a lot of different services to be had by connecting to the broadband such as Digital Subscriber Line and Asymmetrical Transfer Mode. DSL is a high-speed connection and ATM has a uniform speed," James Gunn said.

In order for home Internet subscribers to connect to those services, a special line must be brought into the area and a gateway established to route to the main transporter, he said.

"Having the access to the many services is a great selling point for new businesses to enter into the rural communities," said Magic Valley rural economic development specialist James Scott.

"I plan to inform new clients of the possibility of connecting to the technical services."

Hotel chain sees improved revenues

TWIN FALLS - Washington-based WestCoast Hospitality Corp., owner of WestCoast Twin Falls Hotel - updated its guidance for the third quarter, which ends Monday.

The company now expects third-quarter earnings per share to be in the range of 25 cents to 33 cents, compared to 23 cents in third quarter 2001. WestCoast will update guidance for the remainder of the year in its quarterly earnings, scheduled for release in the last week of October.

"Revenue is expected to range from $54.5 million to $56 million for the third quarter, compared to $53.8 million a year earlier.

"While current data suggests improving trends... the company remains cautious as the country faces a soft economy, potential conflict in Iraq and continued security alerts issued by the government," WestCoast's statement said.

"The company is encouraged by its continued strong cash flow, which is expected to increase 15.7 percent to 28.6 percent during the third quarter."

KeyCorp will purchase Union Bankshares

DENVER - Cleveland-based KeyCorp, the country's 11th-largest bank and the owner of several Magic Valley branches, has agreed to purchase Denver-based Union Bankshares Ltd. for $66 million in cash.

"Colorado has been one of the top performing districts within KeyCorp for the last several years," said Len Williams, district manager with the bank. "We are interested in continuing to expand in this market."

The acquisition represents the first for Key since 1995, when it bought OmniBank, another Colorado-based bank holding company.

Union Bankshares operates through Union Bank & Trust, which has seven locations, about 150 employees and $454 million in assets.

Airline isn't ready to research T.F. request for service

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls leaders' prime target for air-service recruitment won't consider new expansion plans until spring, its chief said this week.

Billings, Mont.-based Big Sky Airlines has been busy winding down a Dallas service contract and shifting those aircraft to other markets, said Kim Champney, president and chief executive.

The first went to an Idaho Falls-Denver route which Big Sky started Sept. 16.

On Oct. 21, the airline will launch service between Casper and Gillette, Wyo., and Billings. On Nov. 13, Big Sky begins flying between two Washington cities, Olympia and Spokane.

"Those projects will require all of Big Sky's energies until the end of the year, Champney said. "We've started to look at Twin Falls as a possible location to serve," he said.

But it will be spring before Big Sky considers other expansions. Twin Falls is on the airline's list for a closer look, but Champney said he didn't know when that will happen.

Meanwhile, local business leaders - who paid their first visit to the Billings airline in June - are brainstorming ways to strengthen their pitch to Big Sky for air service between Twin Falls and Boise. They might approach the airline again with a proposal for a spring startup, said Bill Carberry, manager of Justin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

One possibility is a bid for a combined Twin Falls-Boise and Sun Valley-Boise route that could keep an airplane in the air more hours each day, Carberry said.

He plans talks with Sun Valley-area business people about the possibility of jointly recruiting Big Sky.

Horizon Air this month announced plans for ski-season service between Boise and the Haley airport that serves Sun Valley. The one daily round trip starts Dec. 15 and continues through March 30.

But Sun Valley certainly could use more connections to Boise, said Carol Waller, executive director of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau. She said business leaders are eager to collaborate with Twin Falls to check out the feasibility of a double-duty Big Sky aircraft.

BREAKING THE AGE BARRIER

Dick Cook, chief executive officer of MAPICS Inc., indulges in his favorite weekend passion, water-skiing, on Lake Lanier in Atlanta last month. Cook, 55, typifies the baby-boom generation CEO, energetic and bent on defying the aging process, whom many observers think will defy retirement tradition and ultimately break through long-axiating retire-at-65 barriers.

Boomer CEOs may buck retirement tradition

The Associated Press

CHICAGO - Dick Cook is an archetypal baby boomer: energetic, ambitious and bent on defying the aging process as long as possible.

He's also a CEO, now less than a decade away from the day he's supposed to turn in his keys and retire, according to time-honored business tradition.

Could a CEO retirement rebellion be on the horizon when the business leaders of the can-do generation turn 65?

Cook won't lead it, but he'd cheer it on.

"I don't think there should be 65 as a formal limit," said the president and chief executive officer of MAPICS Inc., an Atlanta-based software provider.

"With the lifestyle that most CEOs lead today - we're just healthier people, more involved in everything than people of the same age were a decade or two ago."

Mark Rednick, no has-been himself as a 66-year-old CEO, agrees. He contends that boomers are in "10 times better shape than guys from earlier generations."

"Most boomer CEOs don't want to retire, period, or they want semiretirement if they do retire," says Rednick, who heads MRISales Consultants of Dallas, an affiliate of Management Recruiters International.

One attraction of semiretirement is that it may provide lucrative consulting opportunities beyond retirement packages that already can be famously substantial, at least at large corporations. But many CEOs, feeling unfairly tarred by the scandals involving a few high-profile colleagues, say it's about lifestyle and the chance to do something different.

If they do keep working into traditional retirement years, they'll have plenty of age-group company. The number of Americans 65 and older in the labor force has grown substantially in the past two years - to 4.5 million in July, up 7 percent from two years earlier, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Also, a survey of boomers by the AARP, the group that represents people over 50, found that 80 percent believe they will continue to work during retirement.

John Challenger, CEO of the Chicago-based executive outplacement firm Challenger, Gray and Christmas, sees another sign of a potential new CEO trend. He says some personal services contracts - which mandate, among other things, 65-and-out at large corporations - are starting to be loosened, suggesting a

Filming of Chevrolet commercial begins in Blaine

The Times-News

HAILEY - Blind Faith Productions, a Los Angeles television and film production company, is returning to the Wood River Valley to film a national Chevrolet commercial.

The filming starts today and continues through Monday - from south of Bellevue, at the Hailey Rodeo grounds, and north to Stanley.

For Saturday's shoot, Blind Faith Productions is soliciting

1,000 unpaid extras at the Hailey Rodeo grounds, starting at 3 p.m.

The perks for extras, local coordinator Maria Prekeggs said, are seeing how a national commercial is produced, enjoying a mini-rodeo with bull riding and team roping, vying for door prizes and, naturally, being on television.

Blind Faith is asking participants to wear cowboy hats and rodeo-style attire, and to bring cushions, blankets, chairs and shade umbrellas.

Blind Faith Productions and advertising agency Campbell-Ewald of Detroit shot another Chevrolet ad a few weeks ago on a ranch south of Bellevue. After further scouting, they decided to come back to the Wood River Valley for an authentic Western look, Prekeggs said.

"The Hailey Rodeo grounds offered the authentic rodeo setting we were looking for," Jim Gilmore, producer for Campbell-Ewald, said in a statement. "The area also offered the right people for casting."

Local casting took place weeks before the production started, and Jim and Keyser Stoddard from Rexburg were chosen for the father-son principal talent. Kevin and Kleren Donohue, owners and directors of the PBR "Bulls Only" tour, were hired as the rodeo coordinators. The stock company will be P & P Rodeo from Mackay, and most of the principal extras will be from southern Idaho.

Gap selects Disney exec to replace retiring CEO

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Retailer Gap Inc. has picked a Disney executive as its new president and CEO, replacing Millard "Mickey" Drexler, who announced in May that he would retire when a replacement was hired.

Paul Pressler, a 15-year veteran of spent a career at Disney promoting one of the world's best-known brands.

Pressler was responsible for the growth, brand development and operations of Disney's theme parks in California, Florida, Paris and Tokyo, as well as developing a new park in Hong Kong.

Analysts blame "Gap's troubles on a merchandising shift toward more trendy fashion that alienated longtime customers who preferred the retailer's traditionally casual styles.

Gap Inc., the largest U.S. specialty apparel retailer, had sales of $13.8 billion last year at more than 3,100 stores worldwide as well as the company's online stores.

Kmart will hand over data

Did retailer break the law by transferring logo?

Knight Ridder News Service

CHICAGO - Kmart Corp. agreed to provide 66 sets of documents to a group of bondholders trying to determine the retailer's worth and whether the company's claims to debtors by transferring its logo and other intellectual property, valued at up to $4 billion, to a subsidiary for $10 and a percentage of gross annual sales.

Apollonia Management LP, Merced Partners LP, Tamarack International LTD and Third Avenue Value Fund requested information in August about Kmart's credit agreements and intellectual property to evaluate what they may be entitled to when Kmart, which is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings and has a Twin Falls store, files its plan of reorganization.

The companies hold bonds or purchased outstanding bills from various creditors. A number of companies owed money for services and goods provided prior to Kmart's Jan. 22 Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing. They have sold their claims to distressed debt buyers, such as Third Avenue Value Fund, at a discount.

A Chicago bankruptcy court judge was to rule on the request Wednesday, but attorneys for Kmart and the bondholders, reached a resolution.

"We think the documents will answer the questions that they have," said Jack Butler, Kmart's lead bankruptcy attorney.

In exchange for the information, the bondholders have agreed to sign a confidentiality agreement and prove that they collectively hold $400 million in debt and claims. Kmart will also provide the documents, which include details of three separate agreements and the formation of its Kmart Properties Inc. subsidiary, to its three creditors committees.

The bondholders also asked for the ability to interview Kmart employees under oath. That part of the request is scheduled for an Oct. 30 bankruptcy hearing.

The agreements are vigorously opposed to that, Butler said, adding it is premature to discuss the composition of Kmart's subsidiaries.

The agreements also address Kmart and other special interest subsidiaries in its bargaining table during its plan of reorganization.

The bondholders are particularly interested in the Kmart Properties Inc. and Kmart of Michigan Inc. subsidiaries and how the two entities were involved in the transfer of intellectual property such as the Kmart symbol and other trademarks.

According to court documents, Kmart created KPI in 1991 to hold the intellectual property, once valued between $2.7 billion and $4 billion. In October 2000, the documents said, Kmart absorbed KPI and KPI transferred the logo and trademarks to Kmart of Michigan Inc. for $10 and 1.1 percent of Kmart's gross annual sales.

Kmart owed KMI $316 million, according to documents dated April 14, attorneys for the bondholders said.

The group also raises issues with the fee Kmart is paying KMI for the use of logos and trademarks.
