Kempthorne defends record

Challenger levels heavy criticism at effect of tax cut on Idaho's finances

The Associated Press

BOISE - Republican Gov. Dirk Kempthorne attempted to fend off attacks by fussy Democratic challenger Jerry Brady Thursday evening in a debate televised on Idaho Public Television.

It was the first time the two have met on the same stage since the campaign began, and Brady aggressively took on the one-term incumbent on issues ranging from education funding to the governor's own chartered aircraft trips. Kempthorne, who spent most of his time defending the past four years of his administration, linked Brady several times to former Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, who served under the Clinton Administration.

Central to Brady's attacks in the hour-long debate was Kempthorne's approval of $100 million in tax cuts in 2001.

"I did not expect to be in the contest, but when I saw this governor had turned $300 million surplus and turn it into a $200 million dollar deficit, and spent all of our savings, I knew we could do better," said Brady, an Idaho Falls newspaper publisher.

Kempthorne defended the tax cuts, saying 500,000 Idaho families and 24,000 farms and ranches have benefited from state tax savings. The governor also pointed to statistics showing that Idaho and Florida are the only two states that have shown positive growth rate during the recession.

"Idaho is fifth in the nation in jobs, we've created 3,400 new businesses in four years and 34,000 new jobs. That's a good record," Kempthorne said.

One of the most uncomfortable moments of the debate for Kempthorne came when Brady asked him why his office was

Recalled meat hits schools

But area students did not eat any, officials say

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Schools in the Magic Valley and Wood River Valley had a close brush with contaminated poultry meat, but officials said no local children ate the fowl.

Bliss and Camas County were among the school districts nationwide that received some of the 27 million pounds of recalled chicken and turkey meat linked to a listeria outbreak. The outbreak sickened 39 people and killed seven nationwide, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Nearly 1.8 million pounds of Wampler Foods' turkey meat was purchased for distribution to schools and other agencies participating in the federal lunch program.

Both Bliss and Camas caught the meat in time and didn't serve it to students. Twin Falls School District was scheduled to receive its shipment of 30 cases of the contaminated meat this morning. However, the warehouse was notified and pulled the meat off the shelf, said Susan Henderson, food service supervisor.

In Blaine County, meat that was supposed to be delivered never arrived because of an apparent mix-up, said Lauri Frost, the district's spokeswoman.

Camas County School District received one case of deli turkey breast. School officials wrote on the case in large letters, "Do Not Use - Contaminated Meat," and set it out for the freight company to pick up, said district Business Manager Wendy Strickler.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman said in a statement that the department is tracking where the poultry products recalled by Wampler Foods were distributed.

So far, no illnesses have been reported by any of the schools, said Steven Cohen, a spokesman for the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

News that the contaminated meat had entered the schools angered members of Safe Futures Our Priority, an organization of victims and families affected by foodborne illnesses.

Donna Rosenbaum, the group's spokeswoman, said at a news conference in Washington that food inspection officials should have

PICKIN' PUMPKINS

Four-year-olds Whitney Chape and Keeley Salazar of Burley use all their strength to lift a giant pumpkin out of the Craney pumpkin patch east of Burley Thursday morning. The girls and their classmates at Rainbows and Ribbons Day Care visited the patch to purchase pumpkins which they'll transform into Jack-o'-lanterns.

Candidates focus on rural Idaho

By Julie Pence Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The theme that emerged in legislative debates Thursday was rural Idaho: how to preserve and protect it. And predictably, the two subjects that got the most attention in regard to that were confined animal feeding operations and term limits.

Candidates from the new legislative Districts 23 and 24 participated in a televised forum sponsored by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce and Cable One at the City Council chambers.

Schedules somehow were mixed up, so some candidates showed up late. The result was that Tom Gannon and Bill Chisholm in the inter-debate Senate race in District 23 did not debate each other. Gannon had the stage to himself at the beginning of the legislative face-off, and Chisholm at the end, though both addressed the same questions.

Gannon, a retired Navy commander who is now the planning and zoning clerk for the city of Burli, only touched on the subject of confined animal feeding operations. He said it's not a good idea to site them close to

CIA: Bin Laden pushed bigger planes

Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON - Osama bin Laden personally rejected a colleague's plan to fly small, explosive-packed aircraft into the World Trade Center, suggesting the deployment of "even larger planes," according to a declassified report from CIA Director George Tenet released Thursday.

And the crash of an Egyptian flight off Nantucket in 1999, apparently by a suicidal pilot, helped convince al-Qaida leaders that U.S. air travel was vulnerable to attack and manipulation, Tenet said.

U.S. vows to hit Iraq Scud sites to protect Israel

Combined wire reports

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration has told Israel that it would deploy Special Operations forces in the western Iraqi desert at the start of any operation against Iraq to destroy facilities that could be used to launch missiles at Israel, senior U.S. and Israeli officials said Thursday.

The administration's pledge, which was conveyed during this week's visit to Washington by Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, follows an undisclosed reconnaissance mission in western Iraq this summer by Israeli special forces, according to a former U.S. defense official.

The covert Israeli operation was aimed at determining whether the Iraqis had the capability to launch drone aircraft, in addition to Scud missiles, from its desert air bases.

The administration's decision to commit ground forces to destroy what military analysts say is a relatively small number of mobile Scuds in Baghdad's arsenal underscores the strong U.S. desire to keep Israel out of any war, as the first Bush administration succeeded in doing during the Gulf War 11 years ago.

Meanwhile, the United States has removed language explicitly threatening military action, while making clear Baghdad will face consequences if it fails to cooperate with weapons inspectors, diplomats and U.S. officials said Thursday.

Iraq

Continued from A1. from powerful Security Council members including France and Russia, which want to give Iraq a chance to cooperate before authorizing force.
A senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the proposed resolution wouldn't spell out the consequences if Iraq's President Saddam Hussein will be in "material breach" if he violates any U.N. resolution.
That term, material breach, allowed for military action to be taken in Kosovo in 1999. The official said that since no measures would be ruled out in the text, the White House believes President Bush would have "maximum flexibility" to mete out consequences should Saddam fail to comply.
While U.S. military officials have long said that preventing Iraqi Scud attacks on Israel would be a top priority if and when a military campaign against Iraq begins, the administration's pledge to use ground forces to attack the missile sites as one of the opening steps of a war signals a radical departure from the Gulf War.
In that conflict, the Pentagon only reluctantly involved Special Forces in the Scud hunt after more than 1,000 aircraft sorties failed to stop the Iraqis from firing 39 Scud missiles at Israel and others at U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia and other targets. The military's inability to destroy a single mobile Scud ranked as its single biggest failure during Operation Desert Storm.

U.S.: Top al-Qaida financiers are Saudis

The Washington Post. list targets people who have given tens of millions of dollars to Osama bin Laden's terrorist organization through the years by routing the money through charities and legitimate businesses around the world.
Since the Sept. 11 terror attacks, the United States has frozen $112 million in terrorist assets, designated 240 people and organizations terrorist supporters and moved against several large Islamic charities in the United States.
But senior U.S. officials said that, until recently, they had not been able to trace the money to its source. Now, they said, recent intelligence gathered through interviews with captured al-Qaida operatives and other methods has given them a clearer picture of where much of al-Qaida's money originates.
The official said most of the alleged financiers are wealthy Saudi bankers and businessmen. Because the Saudi government has previously proven uncooperative in confronting its prominent citizens about links to terror, the United States has not yet sought its help in the new effort, officials said.
Instead, the government hopes to freeze their assets in Europe, where the Saudi financial and business firms have much of their money, and put together the broadest possible consensus to demand that the Saudi government crack down on the alleged terrorist financiers, they said.
The designations are likely to exacerbate recent strains in the U.S. relationship with the Saudis, who provide the United States with vital oil supplies and would be crucial to any U.S. military action against Iraq.
Thursday, the influential New York-based Council on Foreign Relations released a report contending that Saudi officials have for years "turned a blind eye" to wealthy Saudi citizens' funding of terrorist activities. Earlier this year, senior Pentagon officials received a briefing from a consultant who said the Saudis were active in all levels militant Islamic terrorism.
U.S. and European intelligence officials said that although al-Qaida has millions of dollars stashed away in gemstones, gold and other commodities, in recent months there have been signs the organization is having difficulty moving the assets to its operatives around the world.

Meat

Children are among those who are most vulnerable to the disease.
The agency needs to publicly announce which schools are affected by the recall, Rosenbaum said.
Schools are notified "anytime a recall is issued for a product," said department spokeswoman Alisa Harrison.
A lot of time lapsed before the agency announced that the meat was delivered to schools, said

Debate

Carol Tucker Foreman, director of the Consumer Federation of America's Food Policy Institute, which represents 258 consumer groups.
"they have known for at least two weeks," said Foreman. "Why haven't they told the public that that was the case?"
Indeed, Bliss School District received its contaminated meat on Oct. 10 and wasn't notified until Oct. 14. The box containing the meat was never opened, said Superintendent Kevin Lancaster.
Foreman said she wondered when the government is protecting by writing so long before notifying the public about contaminated meat. In this case, "was USDA waiting until some school child got sick?" she asked.
"legislation and manage to get it passed while standing up to the challenges of "competing interests."
Jones pointed out that restricting is giving over more power to the legislators, and as a result, it will be more difficult to convince them of the importance of effective ag odor legislation. They'll be preoccupied with the interests of their own constituents, he said.
Chisholm, a well-known activist of 24 years, got to deliver an "I told you so" comment afterward when he took his chance at the microphone. In his closing speech urging people to vote for him, he said he has the vision necessary to serve, and the proof of that is he had predicted many of the problems the valley is now facing with CAFOs. He even suggested requiring managers or owners of CAFOs to be licensed so the public would be reasonably sure they were qualified to run something that big, he said.
Interestingly, Chisholm did not take what he called the traditional Democratic "no term limits" line. He and Gannon both said most other candidates were against term limits, and some pointed out the idea doesn't help rural Idaho.
"Magic Valley has an unusual amount of influence in the Legislature," said Rep. Sharon Reagin, R-Twin Falls, who is running for the District 24B seat. "If we had term limits, we would lose that power would go to Ada County."
Erick Buller, who favors no term limits, said he would not see how to limit the same amount of influence. He said he would not see how to limit the same amount of influence.

Governor

Continued from A1. rental cars, hotels and other travel costs. "How is it everybody had to be cut and you didn't?" Brady asked, referring to the governor's office budget.
"Mr. Brady, we made our cuts. In fact, we led in the percentage of reductions," Kempthorne responded, adding that he took a three percent reduction in his own salary.
"Do we use charter aircraft? What is this a beautiful large state and Idahoans appreciate it when their government is willing to come out and meet with them personally in their own communities. And I will continue to do that travel," Kempthorne said.
Later in the debate, Kempthorne fired a question at Brady, asking whether the challenger would support the Endangered Species Act, with the same spirit as Babbitt, who contributed to Brady's campaign.
Brady responded that Babbitt was a former classmate at Notre Dame, where Brady attended undergraduate school. "That's not having to do with politics. But the Endangered Species Act is very important. It protects endangered species. It could be reformed and changed. Gov. Kempthorne tried to change it when he was a senator. For six years he tried, and didn't succeed. That's because it's not easy and he was not creative at doing it."
Brady, backed by former Democratic Govs. Cecil Andrus and John Evans, has advanced big game plans for fixing the state budget, furthering economic development and lowering prescription drug costs for seniors.
Kempthorne, meanwhile, has taken every opportunity to tout his accomplishments, pointing mostly to statistics that show Idaho has not suffered as much as other states in the national recession.

Fairfax County police officers search a man on Thursday in Falls Church, Va., in the area of the Home Depot store where the ninth person killed by a Washington area sniper Monday night.

Police: Witness gave fake story of sniper

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) - A witness who says he saw the Washington-area sniper fire with an assault rifle and flee in a cream-colored van gave a phony story, investigators said Thursday in a setback that casts doubt on much of what the public thought it knew about the roving killer.

Prosecutors are investigating the witness to determine whether he should be charged with filing a false statement.

Fairfax County police Lt. Amy Lyles said the inaccurate account didn't match that of other witnesses to Monday night's killing of an FBI cyberterrorism analyst in a crowded Virginia parking lot outside a Home Depot.

Asked if the witness intentionally misled investigators with his description of a cream-colored van and a burned-out rear taillight, Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose, who is heading the investigation, said simply, "Yes."

Investigators were optimistic after the latest attack seemed to yield the best details yet about the killer. But that gave way to anger Thursday. While Moose did not give the witness' exact description of the shooter, he chastised reporters for running reports that variously described the gunman as dark-skinned, olive-skinned, Middle Eastern or Hispanic.

Enron trader says he juggled power supply

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A former Enron trader accused of masterminding a scheme to drive up energy prices during California's power crisis pleaded guilty Thursday to conspiracy and agreed to cooperate with prosecutors.

Timothy Belden, the former head of trading in Enron's Portland, Ore., office, admitted to one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud.

U.S. Attorney Kevin Ryan said the guilty plea shows that the rolling blackouts and huge price increases that rocked California last year were the result of illegal conduct. "These charges answer the question that has long troubled California consumers: whether the energy crisis was spurred in part by criminal activity. The answer is a resounding yes," Ryan said.

Belden, 35, who now lives in Houston, could get up to five years in prison at sentencing in April. He was released on $500,000 bail.

He will also help federal prosecutors in their case against higher-ranking officials at Houston-based Enron, the energy giant whose collapse last year has roiled the energy industry, prosecutor Matthew Jacobs said.

Belden's attorney, Cristina Arguedas, said his client was following Enron's instructions when he handled his trades and will "make amends for that by cooperating with the government."

Belden is the first person to be charged in the manipulation of Western energy markets, and the third Enron figure to be prosecuted.

"Tim Belden is not a high-level executive who was lining his pockets out of greed," Arguedas said. "He did his job. Tim was always honest with others at Enron about his actions, and was never disciplined by Enron."

Judge orders White House to open energy documents

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - A federal judge on Thursday ordered the Bush administration to turn over key documents about its energy task force for a second time, while government lawyers gave notice that they plan to take their case to an appeals court before complying.

U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan gave lawyers representing Vice President Dick Cheney until Nov. 5 to produce documents that detail the membership rolls and meeting schedules of the National Energy Policy Development Group, which Cheney chaired. Sullivan had ordered the same documents turned over in August.

If the government doesn't produce the documents by the November date, Sullivan said, the administration must submit a claim of executive privilege and the reasons for it.

The hour-long hearing, marked by a series of sharp exchanges between Sullivan and Shannen Coffin, the Justice Department attorney handling the case, is the latest development in one of a handful of lawsuits that have sought to force the Bush administration to release information about the task force.

The Sierra Club and Judicial Watch, the plaintiffs in this case, are two of several groups that have alleged that the administration improperly met with private officials from the energy industry last year while shaping its energy policy. Environmental groups say they were largely excluded from the meetings.

While federal judges in other suits have ordered the Energy Department and other agencies to turn over tens of thousands of pages of documents about the meetings, the documents from inside the White House haven't been revealed.

Report: Vatican trims abuse policy

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Elements of the toughened sex abuse policy approved by U.S. Roman Catholic bishops have been rejected at the Vatican, which has warned American prelates about going ahead with some reforms, church sources familiar with the Holy See's response said Thursday.

The Vatican is particularly concerned that some parts of the policy would violate the individual rights of accused clerics now protected under church law, the sources said.

Victims' groups in the United States were outraged, and said this shows the church is still more concerned about sheltering molester priests than helping children.

Senator fights congressional pay raise

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the second time in two years, Sen. Russ Feingold is working to block a pay raise for members of Congress, arguing it would be unseemly as the nation battles a struggling economy and prepares for war.

The 3.3 percent cost-of-living increase, which would raise the congressional salary to $155,000, automatically goes into effect next January unless Congress blocks it. The House defeated an attempt to block the raise in July. "It seems to me about the worst time you can imagine to give yourself a $5,000 pay raise," said Feingold, a Wisconsin Democrat who wants the Senate to schedule a vote on the increase.

But the Senate Democratic leadership has said there may not be time to do that this year.

"It's about 50-50," said Senate Majority Whip Harry Reid, D-Nev.

If no vote is scheduled, Feingold said in an interview Thursday, he would try to attach his legislation to a spending bill in the waning weeks of Congress.

Last year, the Senate voted 65-33 against his attempt to block a 3.4 percent raise. This year's increase would be the fourth in four years.

U.S. spy effort led to disclosure

The Washington Post

North Korea's surprise admission of a secret nuclear program was prompted by a U.S. intelligence discovery that the isolated state was trying to acquire large amounts of high-strength aluminum, a metal used in gas-centrifuge plants for enriching uranium for a bomb, weapons experts and officials familiar with the finding said Thursday.

The attempted acquisition of the metal helped U.S. analysts conclude that North Korea was constructing a secret uranium-enrichment facility somewhere in the country, which North Korean officials are reported to have then confirmed in talks with a U.S. diplomat earlier this month.

It's not known what progress North Korea has made toward enriching uranium, or which other countries or companies have assisted in the pursuit of uranium-enrichment technology.

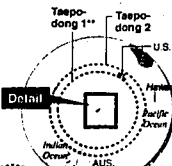

"Centrifuges are hard to build, and North Korea could not have done it without outside help," said David Albright, president of the Washington-based Institute for Science and International Security. Albright, a physicist, has tracked North Korea's nuclear program since the late 1980s and was a weapons inspector for the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Rumors about a secret uranium-enrichment facility have circulated for years, but the discovery of the attempted aluminum procurement was described as the first hard evidence that a program was actually under way.

North Korea's nuclear secret

represent vastly different levels of threat, and therefore require different responses.

One day after the White House revealed North Korea had admitted it was pursuing a nuclear weapons program in violation of an agreement with the United States not to do so, administration spokesmen maintained the danger posed by the Stalinist Pyongyang regime might still be contained through diplomatic pressure.

But that diplomatic option had long since failed in the case of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, officials said, adding Saddam's willingness to use his presumed nuclear, chemical and biological weapons is far greater than Pyongyang's.

President Bush, pointedly seeking not to further inflame the fresh crisis with North Korea, avoided any public comment on the issue during his appearances Thursday in Georgia and Florida.

His spokesman, Scott McClellan, said the president regards North Korea's nuclear program as "troubling and sobering news" but added "this is something that is best addressed through diplomatic channels at this point."

The White House declined to say whether it believes North Korea already possesses nuclear weapons ready to be deployed, although intelligence officials have suspected for years that the reclusive nation possesses enough plutonium for one or two bombs.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld told reporters he thinks North Korea has "a small number of nuclear weapons."

If true, that would put North Korea ahead of Iraq, where the administration argues Saddam is on the verge of acquiring a nuclear weapon and therefore must be stopped before he gets one. North Korea also possesses long-range ballistic missiles that could be used to deliver a nuclear warhead.

Experience, philosophy guide legislative picks

Several Magic Valley legislative races this year pit respected incumbents against promising newcomers. Experience is likely to be the deciding factor for some voters. For others, the candidates' political philosophies will tip the balance.

Here are our suggestions:

Commission, would enter the Legislature as an exceptionally well-schooled freshman. His resume includes service on his local school board, the regional solid-waste board, a federal grazing committee and the Idaho Association of Counties' Legislative Committee.

Election 2002

About these races

In District 24, covering eastern Twin Falls County, Republican state Rep. Sharon Block is facing a challenge from Democrat Will Buhler.

In District 25, covering Blaine, Camas, Lincoln and Gooding counties, Democratic Sen. Clint Stennett is being challenged by Republican Tom Faulkner.

Also in District 25, Republican state Rep. Tim Ridinger faces Democratic challenger Donna Pence.

In District 26, covering Jerome and Minidoka counties, Republican state Sen. Dean Cameron faces Democrat Douglas S. Jones.

The Times-News offers its editorial endorsements as a service to readers. We welcome opposing viewpoints.

Smart and well-spoken, Faulkner promotes less spending, less taxing and more local control. He's a good bet to liberate District 25's Senate seat from its long Democratic captivity.

House 25: Ridinger

In the other District 25 race, for House Seat 25B, voters would be wiser to stick with the incumbent. Republican Tim Ridinger has given the district a solid, reliably conservative service.

Ridinger is a voice for fiscal restraint. He endorses "zero-based" budgeting, in which every recurring expense must be justified anew. He's also a protector of his district's agricultural base.

His opponent, Democrat Donna Pence, is bright, personable and well-informed. But as a career educator and long-time leader in the teaching union, she's unabashedly in the camp of more spending and higher taxes.

District 25 voters should keep Ridinger.

Senate 26: Cameron

Minidoka County and Jerome County voters share the impressive distinction of sending both Joint Finance and Appropriations and Committee chairmen to Boise. Together, Sen. Dean Cameron and Rep. Maxine Bell wield considerable spending authority - generally in defense of Idaho taxpayers.

So why discard one of these powerful Republicans in favor of an untried freshman from the minority party?

Cameron's challenger, Douglas S. Jones, has a broad background and a command of the issues. But he would replace Cameron's proven conservatism with a more liberal outlook. For instance, he is sharply critical of the 2001 tax cut and stands eager to repeal parts of it - though Idaho's economy is in no shape for a tax increase.

District 26 voters would be wise to re-elect Cameron.

House 24: Block

Sharon Block didn't have to campaign for her current legislative seat, but she's had to fight to keep it.

Appointed mid-term to replace the late Rep. George Swep, Block survived a vigorous GOP primary. Now she's contending with a Democratic challenger.

But Block is up to the challenge. A veteran GOP workhorse, she led the powerful Twin Falls County women's group for four years. With a farm heritage and backgrounds in both the public and private sectors, she's well-prepared to represent her conservative, ag-dominated district.

She earned respect in her first session as a good listener who cares what citizens think. She showed solidly conservative moorings, earning a perfect voting score from the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry.

Challenger Will Buhler is a thoughtful and moderate Democrat. But he hasn't made a persuasive case for replacing Block. In our view, District 24 voters will be best served by giving Block a full two-year term.

Senate 25: Faulkner

If Idaho liberalism has one foot in the grave, the other is firmly planted in Blaine County. That encircled stronghold of Democratic diehards has kept Clint Stennett in office since 1990.

Leading a Senate minority outnumbered 10-1, Stennett has represented his Blaine County constituents alike in an alien Legislature, while making a credible effort to connect with his district's conservative-leaning southern and western regions.

But many of those conservative stalwarts - in Lincoln, Camas and Gooding counties - have been waiting for a suitable champion to unseat him. Tom Faulkner may be just the fellow.

Faulkner, currently chairing the Gooding County

Rumsfeld's optimism keeps growing

If Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld were at all superstitious, he might regard what happened to him last week as a cautionary signal. For three days, Rumsfeld went without a brace to support his surgically repaired thumb, only to have his hand and wrist swell and become very painful again.

On the morning I saw him, he resumed wearing the protective leather wrap and acknowledged that he had been rushing things.

If the gods were sending him a message to slow down his preparations for a war with Iraq, Rumsfeld was not hearing it. Nothing he said in the next 45 minutes suggested any doubts on the part of the man who may in the near future have to order American troops to carry out a presidential decision to oust Saddam Hussein.

DAVID S. BRODER

Earlier that morning, he had met with a couple dozen members of Congress to urge them to support administration policy. "Their questions were good," he said, "and I'm sure (were) coming from their constituents." He took with him John McLaughlin, the No. 2 man at the CIA, in order to deal with the previous day's news stories reporting that McLaughlin had said that there was little likelihood Saddam would launch a chemical or biological weapons attack - unless the United States invaded.

Rumsfeld said McLaughlin had told the legislators that he quoted excerpt of his testimony was "a cartoon" fragment of 200 pages of national intelligence estimates - and that any calculation of Iraqi intentions was uncertain. Then Rumsfeld pulled out a pencil and drew me a simple chart - a downward sloping line tracing the erosion of Iraq's conventional military strength in the decade since the Gulf War, an upward sloping line showing its growing store of WMD - weapons of mass destruction.

Given Saddam's brutal and bloody history, Rumsfeld said, "the stronger he gets, the greater the likelihood he will attempt to use that strength."

This operating assumption - that capacity is equal to intent - would explain why President Bush has consistently argued that "time is not on our side," and that pre-emptive action is not only justified but necessary.

If Saddam sees himself in danger of being removed by an American force, would he not then use WMD against our troops? "I think that's a possibility our military has to consider," Rumsfeld said. "But he can't use them himself. He has to have other people use them, and that means somebody has to obey orders. And already word has gone out that anybody who gets near those weapons or follows such orders ... would be tracked down and charged with war crimes."

What is true of those commanders, Rumsfeld said, is equally true of much of Saddam's army - "a military of uneven loyalty" which saw mass surrenders during the Gulf War. They too would be likely to weigh the costs of resistance should America attack. The hard core might well be concentrated in Baghdad and other cities, and "urban warfare is not anything anyone would want to get involved with if you could avoid it. There are people thinking carefully about what you might do."

All this implies the belief that an American force might expect help - or at least passivity - from all but "the clique at the top," because Iraqis are really "hostages" of the regime, not supporters.

Rumsfeld sounds equally optimistic about the prospects of enlisting significant allied help, if and when Bush decides to use force, and about the shape of a post-Saddam Iraq. "Keeping that country together is critically important," as is assuring that it is disarmed and democratic, he said.

Unlike Afghanistan, Iraq has a ready source of wealth in its oil reserves, Rumsfeld said, "but it would take some time" to get it back on its feet. He demurred when I used the word "occupation," but later reports from the Pentagon suggested that a military government might be required until an acceptable indigenous government was ready. Germany and Japan are the examples Rumsfeld suggested - and we have military forces there more than half a century after World War II.

Overall, Rumsfeld left me with the impression that he is aware of the risks of war with Iraq, but confident they can be handled. He had also been confident he didn't need the hand brace any longer, but that error of judgment was readily reversed. When I left, I wished him good luck and was careful to shake the other hand.

Pence will keep serving all constituents

I am writing to voice my support of Donna Pence as candidate for Legislative District 25-B. A vote for Pence is a vote for balance.

I have known Donna Pence as a teacher, coach and fellow professional for the past 20 years. She believes in balance and will work diligently for all members of our communities. Through her efforts to coordinate activities for our youth, she wrote and secured the grant that created the spring volleyball programs through the Gooding Recreation District. Donna envisioned securing grant money to develop the Gooding community fitness trail. It is her belief that federal dollars need to return to and benefit the local taxpayer. She will take the initiative to get involved and encourage others in our communities to bring federal tax dollars to the people of District 25-B.

As a representative, she will do her homework, gather information and you will see balance in her decisions. Donna will be available to her constituents; she has proven that as she has spent endless evenings "door-belling" throughout her district.

I urge you to vote for energetic leadership, to vote for Donna Pence for Legislative District 25-B. Donna is a hard-working individual that is committed to the welfare and needs of the diverse members of our district.

Stennett's actions are louder than critic's words

Regarding the letter from Lathan Williams recently, Mr. Williams, you made a point about Sen. Clint Stennett but not the one you thought you made. In less words than you used, I'll tell you why, and I'll make more than a point for the senator.

Simply stated, Sen. Stennett is more interested in working for his constituency, meeting with groups and individuals to learn needs and then putting forth effort to help, plus keeping us informed. He is busy with what we sent him to the Senate to do.

Why should he be concerned about you trying to steal his name? No matter who he called you, what you did was a low-down trick!

Yes, we agree on one thing - Actions do speak louder than words. No matter who he called you, what you did was a low-down trick!

Questionable Journalism is used in coverage

In following the ongoing saga of the Dr. James Retzlmer story in The Times-News, I find myself wondering where reporter Mark Heinz received his journalism degree.

Essential qualities of a good news reporter are for the true facts of a story to be presented clearly, accurately and truthfully. Innuendoes, speculation, gossip, hearsay and half-truths are left to editorial writers who choose to present divergent views.

I find myself wondering if I am perhaps reading "The National Enquirer" rather than The Times-News.

Field will keep getting the job done in T.F. County

Our loss is Twin Falls County's gain. Under the realigned legislative districts, Frances Field - from Owyhee County is now representing Twin Falls County instead of Elmore County. We are losing a great representative.

I have worked with Frances on many issues over the past decade or more. In every instance, she was energetic, hard working and thorough. She returns phone calls promptly and doesn't "double talk." She is experienced and can get things done as the vice chairman of the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee.

The people of Twin Falls County will be well served by electing Frances Field as their state representative.

Local Red Cross services were wonderful

As the anniversary of my son's house fire draws near, I am ashamed that I have put off writing this letter for so long.

Until that day, I had never had any dealings or opinion of the American Red Cross. Literally before the smoke cleared, a representative of the Twin Falls Chapter was there offering shelter and food. In the months that followed, they provided clothing, toiletries, food, bedding and even major appliances. These items were all new and completely free. What a wonderful blessing they were to my son and his wife and three small children! Thank you seems so inadequate.

I know there was trouble with the Red Cross funds back about after 9-11-01, but the Twin Falls Chapter has proven its integrity to me and I will send my cash

AROUND THE VALLEY

Deputies probe bomb threat at Valley School

JEROME - Jerome County Sheriff's Office deputies Thursday were investigating a bomb threat that prompted an evacuation Tuesday at Valley School in Hazelton.

After the threat was made that afternoon, deputies and the school staff organized an evacuation of the school, located at 882 Valley Road S. A search turned up no device and nobody was hurt, according to reports.

Anybody with information about the incident should call Lt. Jim Dunsberger at the Jerome County Sheriff's Office Investigation Section, 324-8845.

Canadian musicians have trouble crossing border

SUN VALLEY - Sun Valley's Swing'n Dixie Jazz Amboree had its run-in with the efforts to fight terrorism this week.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service turned back the seven-member Dixieland Express band as it tried to cross the Canadian border into the United States.

Band members had filled out the paperwork for their temporary work papers in the United States three months ago but the INS lost them, said the band's assistant director Carol Loefer. So the men were sent back to Victoria, B.C., after landing in Seattle.

The men got held up a second time this week when the INS office in Vernon wasn't able to fax rushed paperwork. After dozens of phone calls between Amboree officials and the INS, the other band members did finally make it to Sun Valley on Wednesday, where they will perform their usual British Invasion set and other numbers.

"It's amazing the length we'll go to keeping some Canadian trumpet players out of the country while we have so much trouble keeping back the real terrorists," said Amboree Director Tom Hazzard.

Tickets are on sale for Maghalls showcase

TWIN FALLS - Tickets are on sale for the Twin Falls Maghalls' 37th annual Barbbershop Harmony Showcase, scheduled for Nov. 9.

The showcase will feature the Barbbershop group Acoustic, of Dallas, and West Coast Filled Out of Southern Idaho Jazz Band.

Tickets, which are $8 for general admission and $6 for seniors and students, are available at Kurt's West Coast Hotel, Everybody's Business and Welch's Music in Twin Falls, at SavMor Drug and Smith's Dairy in Buhl and at Washington Federal Savings and Loan in Jerome.

Performances will be at 2 and 7:30 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium.

Novelist will sign book today in Burley

BURLEY - Novelist Nikki Schmutz plans a signing of her books "Found" and "Out of Step" today at The Book Plaza.

Schmutz, of Orem, Utah, is the author of "Out of Step," the story of a small-town Utah dancer in New York City filmed earlier this year by Canadian director Ryan Little.

"Found" is the tale of a pregnant runaway girl who struggles to put her life back together.

Schmutz will be on hand at The Book Plaza from 2-4 p.m. The Book Plaza is located at 220 W. 11th St.

Who high court dismisses Simplot, Hayburn suit

REYBURN - The order of dismissal in the last of several court cases between the J.R. Simplot Co. and the city of Hazelton signed Oct. 9, City Attorney Steven Tuft said.

The Idaho Supreme Court signed its dismissal of Simplot's appeal of its ruling upholding the city's right to annex the Simplot plant into the city limits.

Earlier, 5th District Judge John Hanson signed an order of dismissal upholding the city's right to annex the plant. The city was charging Simplot with illegal land use.

El Niño saps moisture from Idaho

System still has more water than last year

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley irrigators made it through another dry year, and farmers are winding up the harvest with hopes for healthy winter snows. "We're very hopeful, but all of the indications are déjà vu," said Ron Carlson, Upper Snake River water master.

Irrigators stretched their water supplies thin for the past two years, and forecasters expect another dry southern Idaho winter. A mild El Niño pattern has set in over the southern half of the country, which holds wetter storm patterns to the south and means dryer conditions for Idaho, the National Weather Service in Boise says. But irrigators have more water in the system this fall than they did a year ago, Carlson said. That water will be stored for winter 2003. With canals shut down for the year, the reservoir system from Milner to Jackson Lake in Wyoming holds 118,000 acre feet of water more than it did this time last year. About 596,800 acre feet of water remains in the reservoirs. Each of the two uppermost reservoirs - Jackson Lake and Falls Lake - has more water than a year ago. They are key reservoirs and particularly important to northside irrigators. The Northside Canal

Co.'s water right relies heavily on stored Jackson water. Twin Falls farmer, Chuck Colter, a member of the Twin Falls Canal Co. board of directors, said he is apprehensive about next year's water supply. But there was water enough to get by this year, and the season is ending with more water in storage than there was last year. "I'm just amazed we got through this year as well as we did," Colter said. "I think in our system we did very well. Upper Snake I know there were people who were out of water."

Ron Abramovich, a hydrologist with the Natural Resources Conservation Service in Boise, said southern Idaho needs a normal to above-normal snowpack to have an adequate water supply next year. Fall moisture also is important. "We really need some fall rains right now to get the soils saturated," he said. Dry soils soaked up a considerable amount of spring snowmelt before it reaches reservoirs. Forecasters expecting a mild El Niño year say there is little chance that Idaho will see any extra snowpack this winter. "In modest El Niños, there have been a couple of wet years, so we can't say for sure what will

We're very hopeful, but all of the indications are déjà vu.

T.F. County Board of County Commissioners

Main duties: Makes and approves county rules and ordinances; approves county budget, executes contracts; approves purchases and sales of property; appoints county personnel, appoints people to boards and committees, establishes election districts, polling places and canvasses election returns. Annual salary: $40,976.

	 Gary Grindstaff Republican	 Howard Meiers Democrat
BACKGROUND	Age 62, Twin Falls County native, county commissioner for three years, former farmer and dairyman, chairman of the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee for five years, currently the Region 5 chairman, he and wife Joyce have five grown children.	Age 58, has lived in Twin Falls County for 30 years, works in construction, political newcomer, he and wife Evelyn have seven children.
WHY RUNNING	He enjoys the job and has the experience of three years. The county needs to hold on to that experience.	There is a lack of leadership and decision-making on the commission and there is no direction for the future. If you know something is wrong yet do nothing about it, then you agree with it. He said he has a history of leadership that would benefit the commission. Also, people need a choice.
DAIRIES	County commissioners have worked with neighbors of a dairy south of Filer to try to solve the odor problem, and there has been improvement. Dairies are an important part of the economy in Twin Falls County. In the future, the county should be careful in siting dairies to minimize problems for daily neighbors.	Twin Falls County is situated with large dairies. There are good CAFOs and bad CAFOs. Daily neighbors and small family farms need protection from the bad CAFOs.
JAIL	The jail committee is gathering information to see which way to go. If the committee decides there should be a new jail, the committee should also decide whether to ask voters to approve a bond issue or to ask a judge for judicial confirmation. He said commissioners would do what the committee recommends.	We probably need a new jail, but we need to take it to the public and sell them on the idea. Needs to be more research on things like land appraisal and zoning.
HOSPITAL	Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has helped the county with indigent costs the past two years. He agrees the hospital should be able to change its governance, but if it decides to go to a for-profit, he said the hospital's owners - county taxpayers - should decide.	It shouldn't be up to the Hospital Board to look at different kinds of governance. That is the job of county commissioners. The board's job is to run, manage and operate the hospital. It's commissioners who should be making the decisions. He wants to know why county commissioners thought it was necessary for the hospital to purchase the former Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital.
COUNTY BUDGET	Housing county inmates in out-of-county jails is straining the county budget. The county spent $450,000 between October 2001 and October 2002 to house its inmates in other county jails. Drug court and other treatment programs have helped ease some space. But inmates are full and 290 prisoners are now being housed in county jails.	The budget needs to be overhauled and looked at to see which departments need more money and which departments need less money.
COUNTY MANAGER	Voters said "no" to a county manager in 1998. County commissioners are the county administrators.	There is absolutely no need for a county manager, especially since the person wouldn't have to be responsible to voters. County commissioners are the county's administrators.
TERM LIMITS	Term limits should be decided at the polls by voting. If you don't keep experience at the county level, it could hurt county government.	There is no need for term limits. People should get out and vote. However, he said it's unfair that Republicans step down before their terms are up so other Republicans are appointed to take their places.

T.F. commissioner candidates debate

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - All four of them have sown deep roots in Twin Falls County. Two are farmers. One has called Twin Falls County home for 30 years and another for 26 years. Two are Democrats and two are Republicans. Two have served in public office and two are newcomers to the political arena.

One thing is for sure. The winners of the two open county commission seats on November's ballot will have plenty of work to do come January.

They gathered Thursday evening at Twin Falls City Hall to discuss some of the issues facing the county, including urban sprawl and whether or not it's time the county considered hiring a county manager to oversee the day-to-day business of county government.

The county Commissioner Marvin Humpalman, retiring at the end of the year after 22 years representing District 2, voters will choose between Republican Tom Mikseal, the 48-year-old owner of Tom's 50-Minute Photo and a former City Council member, and Democrat Bob Powers, a 58-year-old part-time Twin Falls County reserve sheriff's deputy, to take the two-year commission seat. Meanwhile, over in District 1 it's a race for a four-year commission seat between incumbent Republican Gary Grindstaff, a 62-year-old former dairyman, and Democrat Howard Meiers, a 58-year-old political newcomer who works in the construction business.

Why are they running? Grindstaff has been in the District 1 seat for three years but says there's still more work to be done. Meiers said the reason his running is his frustration in what he says is a lack of leadership on the county commission. Mikseal remembers what it was like starting his own business in his hometown, and he wants his children to have the same opportunities he has in hope they'll continue to call Twin Falls home. Powers said his experience planning budgets would benefit the commission and a two-party system is a better form of government.

The Democrats at both places say it's time for some new ideas on the commission, a group both say needs more leadership. "We've never had a problem sitting on a fence," Powers said. "I can make decisions."

Ditto for Meiers. Please see CANDIDATES, Page B3

Official: Animals at Jerome shelter are fed

By Dicie Thomas Rasale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Animals at the Jerome Animal Shelter are fed and watered every day, but their cages are not always cleaned on weekdays, the city's animal control officer said Thursday.

Colleen Leninger was responding to a story in that day's Times-News, which reported concerns voiced by Marge Dubois and Karen Kramer of Pet Pals, volunteers who work for the betterment of animal conditions in the Jerome shelter.

The woman told the City Council on Tuesday they had gone to the shelter on Sunday and again on Monday over the Columbus Day weekend, and it appeared that the animals had not been fed or watered or had their cages cleaned.

Leninger, who works at the shelter during the week, said the animals are always fed and watered every day, but their cages are not always cleaned on weekdays, the city's animal control officer said Thursday. Leninger said the city hired someone on Wednesday. "My wife has wanted that part-time weekend job for months but was told she couldn't have it because it would be nepotism," Leninger said. "The city couldn't find anyone else to take the job so they decided to hire her. We are hoping that someone can be given our part-time schedule so that someone can be available at the shelter on weekends and after-hours for adoptions." She is advertised and advertised for the part-time position but nobody would take the job," said Leninger. Please see SHELTER, Page B3

Foundation gives money to schools with improving students

By Robert Mayer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It has suddenly become profitable for schools to make sure that students perform well on standardized tests. The J.A. & Kathryn Albertson Foundation has made $8 million in one-time money available to schools whose students show improvement on the Idaho Standards Achievement Test.

The more students who improve, the more money the school receives, up to $250 per student. "It's to give them encouragement to keep up the good work," said Chris Letter, spokeswoman for the foundation. Schools generally welcomed the money.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm excited about it because teachers will get recognition for what they're already doing," said Beth Olmstead, principal of Lincoln Elementary School. But there was a touch of skepticism as well. When Twin Falls School District principals informed their teachers Wednesday evening of the financial plan, some teachers had some reservations. Some thought this might be the first steps toward merit-based pay. That is, teachers whose students perform higher receive larger salaries.

Others feared that the Legislature would view the money as supplementary to the public education budget, allowing them to make a smaller budget thanks to the Albertson money. Letter said because the money goes directly to the schools and not the teachers, this shouldn't open the door to merit-based pay. With regard to lawmakers drawing up the state's education budget, Letter said the Albertson money is meant to supplement and not replace state money to improve education. "We want to do everything we can to enhance what the state is doing," she said. Dennis Sonius, Morningstar Elementary School's principal, said he liked the ISAT because it isn't a test that compares against each other as was the case on previous standardized tests, such as the now defunct Iowa Test of Basic Skills. "So long as each student, regardless of learning level, shows sufficient improvement, his or her efforts will result in more money for the school. All the money goes to the school, rather than to the school district. The money is divided up within the school - 60 percent goes to the high-performing grade levels, 40 percent goes toward the entire school. The one-time awards given out next summer can be used on equipment, materials, programs or staff development but not toward salaries. The ISAT is given twice a year, once in fall and again in the spring. However, if they offer the test in January as a progress check. While most schools intend to use the money. Marlin worked all of his life as a farmer and a cattleman. He spent his life outdoors and was one of a dying breed. He knew how to work and work hard. Marlin traveled all over Idaho and he being the only one who he used a buckboard. From Jarbridge to Clayton, Idaho, he wore a groove in the seat from all the time spent driving the buckboard. As a young man, he wooed and won his sweetheart and the love of his life, Annie Petras. They were married in the Clover Lutheran Church on February 2, 1935, and for 67 years, he was a devoted husband. He would get a twinkle in his eye at the mention of her name and his love for each other never wavered.

In his spare time, Marlin played trumpet in the Clover Band, and loved fishing and hunting. He especially enjoyed fishing for Steelhead in the Columbia River. Every year, on the day after Christmas, he would go Steelhead fishing for a week. One of these trips, he was on the boat and it was his job to cook for the "men", so he had to get up to help to fry. He grabbed a bottle that he thought was oil and poured a generous helping onto the potatoes, as it turns out, it WAS SOAP! After the potatoes were experienced some serious leaching from the others for his error.

Marlin was a kind and gentle man, with a stubborn streak, who was independent and taught his children to be the same. He loved his wife, his family and his friends. # Alliance Land and Livestock buys feedlot

The Times-News
BURLEY — The partners of Alliance Land and Livestock recently purchased a 10,500-head feedlot in western Cassia County.

The purchase doesn't change the company's plans to seek a permit for a 9,999-head feedlot northeast of Declo, partner Brent Stoker said. The partners bought the Burley Butte Custom Feedlot, at 400 S. 600 W., west of Burley. Alliance Land and Livestock will raise dairy heifers on the feedlot to supply its dairy, Stoker said.

"It will help the situation," Stoker said. Even with the new acquisition, the partners would like to raise more heifers on the proposed Declo feedlot, Stoker said.

The Burley Butte Custom Feedlot was built before June 28, 1993, the cut-off date for which confined animal feeding operations were required to comply with the Cassia County zoning ordinances. Because the feedlot existed before the ordinance was adopted, owners do not have to comply with the ordinance requirements. That grandfathering of the operation will be allowed to continue, county officials said.

The county transferred the prior use permit to Alliance Land and Livestock on Sept. 13.

The Cassia County zoning ordinance does not have a provision that allows officials to reconsider or limit a prior-use permit upon the transfer of sale of a venture, said Cassia County Administrator Tim Hurst said.

Janitor extinguishes fire at Heyburn Elementary

HEYBURN — Elementary school students evacuated the school Thursday morning after a janitor put out an electrical fire.

"A wire on an old heater sparked and started a minor blaze," Heyburn Elementary School Principal Randy Reddington said.

Janitor Steve Morin was changing a light bulb in the computer room where the fire started. Morin called for help, then put out the fire with a dry powder fire extinguisher, Reddington said. The fire lasted about 60 seconds, he said.

Students were evacuated from the north building, where the fire occurred, and stayed in the south building for about an hour while the Heyburn Fire Department checked the wiring for further fire danger.

The fire caused some minor smoke damage, and the computer technician will have his hands full cleaning extinguisher powder out of the computers, but the fire caused "no serious damage," Reddington said.

The north building of Heyburn Elementary School is 75 years old, Reddington said.

Open house is Saturday for Marilyn Howard

BURLEY — An open house for State Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard is scheduled from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday at 504 Riverside Drive, between Burley and Declo.

Howard, the incumbent Democrat state superintendent, will also attend a lunch that day from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Albion Cafe while on a campaign swing through Cassia County.

Howard is challenged by Republican Tom Luna.

Up to 100 steelhead die in canyon

BOISE (AP) — Up to 100 hatchery-raised steelhead apparently became trapped and died in a small pool of water in the Snake River above Hells Canyon Dam, Idaho Power Co. officials said.

The discovery was reported to the utility, who notified the Idaho Department of Fish and Game on Oct. 8. A Fish and Game inspection determined all the steelhead were hatchery-bred and there were no wild fish that are protected under the Endangered Species Act. A single channel catfish also was found. It appears the pool was created by water entering between a concrete sidewall near the dam and a natural rock wall.

"To our knowledge, this is the first time in the dam's 35-year history that this has occurred," said Idaho Power Hells Canyon operations manager Ric Bobier. "For some reason, fish apparently could enter into this area when flows were high and were trapped in the pool, he said.

When the flows dropped below that level, the fish were trapped in the pool, he said.

Lower Granite is the last dam on the lower Snake River before the returning fish reach Idaho.

This year's return is close to last year's record of 262,500. The 10-year average at Lower Granite is 85,000 fish.

"Because the numbers of returning fish are so high, this event will not impact sport fishing opportunities in the Snake River," Abbott said. "It also will not hamper our artificial spawning operations at the nearby Oxbow Hatchery."

Since Monday, Idaho Power has reduced flows to 8,700 cfs to provide suitable conditions for the upstream chinook salmon spawning season.

Search continues for Alzheimer's victim

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Authorities are looking for a 61-year-old Hayden man with Alzheimer's County who disappeared after leaving for a day-long fishing trip near Libby, Mont.

Searchers have used dogs, boats and a helicopter since Tom Grindstaff was reported missing Sunday night. His car was found in Lincoln County, about eight miles from the Libby Dam in a parking lot popular with anglers.

Since then, sheriff's deputies, volunteers and relatives have scoured the brushy banks of the Kootenai River.

"There's a hundred possibilities that we're dealing with," said Lincoln County Sgt. Rob Lowe, head of the search-and-rescue team.

Family members said May left early Saturday morning for a fishing trip and was expected back Saturday night.

"It could be anything. With Alzheimer's, who could say," said daughter Jeanette Fairchild.

May is an avid outdoorsman and fly-fisherman. He was diagnosed with Alzheimer's about two years ago.

Buhl School Board renews Castleford contract

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The School Board voted this week to accept the cooperative sports program with Castleford School District after Athletic Director Gary Moon spoke to the board this week.

Agreements between the school districts allow Castleford students to play on Buhl's baseball, softball and wrestling teams.

In August, the board, with only three of its five members present, voted 2-1 not to renew the agreement for baseball and softball. In September, the board said it had been told a decision had to be made at that meeting.

Moon this week presented letters from coaches and parents supporting the program.

"There was a misunderstanding about the deadline for this agreement when the board voted previously," Moon said. "The program links the two communities together and overall is a good program."

Moon recommended the board accept the baseball and softball agreement for four years, and when the other agreements come due, the board accept them for a period of time that will also put them up for renewal in 2007.

Other School Board business included:

- Tennis courts — The board voted to rescind the motion to kick in $25,000 toward the tennis court project. The original motion had been contingent on a grant from the Idaho State Water Board, which was denied.
- Curriculum alignments — Mary Wiggins, district curriculum director, gave the board an update on the progress made to align the district's curriculum with the assessments of the Idaho

Standards Achievement Test.

Wiggins reminded the board that Oct. 23 is a planning day for teachers, so there will be no school for students.

Nov. 27 is a scheduled half-day for everyone preceding the Thanksgiving holiday, and Wiggins requested the board give the students the full day so the teachers could do more work on the scheduled planning time frame.

The board agreed to the request.

More half-day planning sessions are scheduled throughout the year to meet the ISAT assessment planning schedule, said Wiggins.

- Land proposal — Cally Parrott and Steve Kaatz presented the board with a proposal for the district to donate 2 acres of land either by McCluskey Park or on the corner of Seventh and Sawtooth Boulevard to build a Boys and Girls Club facility.

The board tabled a decision until the school district's attorney could review the proposal.

- Building inspection — The board agreed to hire Claude Hayes Construction of Buhl to repair the problems found at the middle school by Scott McClure, a professional engineer.

Some rafters are split and need reinforcing, some roof joists reinforced and masonry work done on the chimney and parapets where caulking is loosening.

- School resource officer — The board is writing a letter to Sheriff Wayne Tousey and County Attorney Gary Cristoff to voice displeasure about the decision to remove the school resource officer in Buhl.

Hill said the county said the sheriff's department was short men and needed the deputy elsewhere.

Candidates

"I'm honest and I'm not afraid to make a decision," Meiers said, adding that, "When you make a decision you're not going to please all the people all the time."

Grindstaf and Mikesell are touting their experience in public office as one of their biggest assets.

Meiers understands the needs of the community," Mikesell said. "I understand budgeting. I understand grants."

All four candidates agreed that urban sprawl is the problem.

"Planning and zoning allowed a lot of urban sprawl in the past and it's causing problems between urban (residents) and agriculture," Grindstaf said.

When asked whether the county could benefit from hiring a county manager, Mikesell was the only candidate willing to give the idea some thought.

"I think it's a work but it's up to the voters," Mikesell said. "If it needs to be explored, it should be explored."

Grindstaf disagreed.

"I don't think we need a county manager," Grindstaf said. "We are the county managers."

Meiers called the idea of having a county manager "the most detrimental thing" Grindstaf said. Grindstaf manager would not be responsible to voters. Powers reminded the audience that voters said "no" to a county manager back in 1998. He said it would put an unelected person in a position of overseeing elected officials and "that wouldn't be a workable solution."

But Mikesell said a county manager would only be implementing policy. County commissioners would still be making policy.

One of the things on which all the candidates agree is that term limits won't work in small government. The Legislature should stay out of it and allow voters to make their own decisions at the ballot box, they said.

happen, but chances are we'll be drier," Bill Ondrechen of the Idaho Department of Water Resources said at a meeting of water experts Wednesday in Boise.

El Niño is the name given to a cyclical warming of eastern Pacific Ocean waters, which typically brings drier and warmer weather to Idaho. An opposite phenomenon called La Niña, is characterized by wetter and cooler temperatures.

Nate Mantua, a hydrologist with the University of Washington, said the characteristics of an El Niño even favor a warm and dry fall, winter and spring in Idaho.

"Fall precipitation has already been below average, which increases the odds of the continuation of a dry period," Mantua said.

city administrator Travis Rothweiler.

Leiningner's wife, June, will be paid $8.50 per hour for no more than 80 hours of work per week.

Police Chief Bill Reid had told the City Council Tuesday that police officers "help" at the shelter on weekends, but he didn't specifically say that officers feed and water the animals.

He had said that officers don't have to clean the cages because that involves hosing the area, and officers would have to go home to change their uniforms afterward.

Leiningner said he received many calls from concerned residents Thursday.

"I got several phone calls saying that I am a terrible person for letting this happen. Then I stopped answering the phone," he said.

Kramer said Thursday afternoon she and Dubois shoveled out the animal cages on Monday night and fed and watered them.

"We are not authorized to go in there and do that but we did it anyway because it looked like it hadn't been done," Kramer said.

"The mother dog drank four bowls of water before she finally stopped drinking. She was emaciated."

Leiningner said that last week he had taken off Friday afternoon for the Columbus Day weekend.

"It was the longest life cages have gone without cleaning since I took the job two years ago. The animals were fed and watered, but their cages were not cleaned. ... It may have been early in the morning that the animals got fed but they were fed.

"I'm sure it was an awful mess when those ladies saw it on Sunday and Monday. I appreciate their concern and all the work they do for the shelter but it was an unusual situation and they saw it at its worst."

plement the mid-winter test, they do so reluctantly. That's partly because the ISAT is a one-consuming test. It's three one-hour tests — math, reading and language — taken on the computer. Because the school's computer lab can fit only a small number of students, the school schedules three weeks just to give the ISAT to allow time for all students to take the test — that's three more weeks of testing in a school year already loaded with an unprecedented number of standardized tests.

The test is particularly demanding on the younger students.

"The little guys really tire out. That's a long time to sit at the computer and not interact with others," Fonus said.

Superintendent Terrell Donich said he finds the timing of the test questionable.

Spring scores will be measured against the ISAT tests just completed last week. However, that test is considered a pilot test, testing the test more than testing the students.

Moreover, the test still has bugs, he said. For instance, districts were suppose to receive their results within 72 hours. A week has passed and the Twin Falls district still don't have the test scores.

"The data isn't as clean, genuine and accurate this first go-around as it could be," Donich said.

Albertson's efforts would be more effective had it waited until the ISAT graduated from the pilot test stage, Donich said.

Still, most educators, including Donich, applauded Albertson's efforts.

"I think it's a really generous and kind thing," said Chris Gillette, principal at Harrison Elementary School. "It's probably going to help schools."

Jerome Pet Pals will hold adoption clinic, open house

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Wagging tails and loving, soft brown eyes will be yours for the adopting this weekend.

The Jerome Pet Pals is holding an adoption clinic and open house at the Jerome Animal Shelter, located on Ironwood Drive between 1 and 4 p.m. Saturday.

The city of Jerome and Pet Pals have been working on repairing and upgrading the animal shelter for the past couple of years. More than $21,000 worth of improvements have been made in the last two years. Pet Pals donated $3,000 and the city covered the balance. Jerome City Administrator Travis Rothweiler said.

"Work was done using city and volunteer labor, and now Pet Pals wants to show off the newly refurbished shelter."

"New additions to the shelter include a 4-by-8 mural painted by Lorna Irwin's 4-H club and placed on a newly landscaped knoll at the shelter's entrance."

"A 12-foot-by-20-foot building was moved from the old city building and placed on a foundation a few yards east of the shelter. This building was repaired and painted and is being used for storage. It has freed up space in the shelter, said Pet Pals Board of Directors member Karen Kramer."

"New cages were built inside the shelter and the cement floor was redone for easier cleaning. Cement runs on the outside of the shelter are being completed now. Seven animal runs on the north side and seven on the south side of the building are attached by animal doors to inside cages. The dogs will be able to come and go into the runs as they wish. During bad weather the animal doors can be sealed shut to keep out the cold, Kramer said."

"A parvo vaccination project is in progress at the shelter. Valley Co-op and D and B Supply have donated vaccine to Pet Pals, and private citizens have contributed $2.50 apiece for vaccinations for dogs brought to the shelter."

"The vaccinations help stop the spread of parvo, a highly contagious and deadly disease among dogs. Having been vaccinated for parvo makes the animals at the shelter more adoptable, Kramer said."

Investigators identify burned body as stranded Rexburg motorist

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A burned body found in rural Jefferson County last week was a stranded motorist from Rexburg who died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Theron Dickerson, 40, was hospitalized by a butane heater he used to keep warm after his Chevrolet Sprint broke down, said Jefferson County Sheriff Blair Olsen.

Investigators are not sure why

Hageman pet drive

There will also be a pet supply drive Saturday at Hageman Elementary School for the People for Pets Humane Society in Twin Falls.

The school's sixth-graders will have the drive from noon to 4 p.m. in the multi-purpose room. People can stop by and donate the following items: dog food, cat food, kitty litter, old or new blankets in good condition, collars (no choke chains), rawhide bones, pet toys, pet brushes and combs, and bleach.

If people would like to make donations today, they may drop supplies off at Hageman Elementary School.

Those who donate on Saturday will be signed up for a quilt raffle. Refreshments will be served. Only pet supplies — no cash — will be accepted.

Governor pardons four exonerated in murder

CHICAGO (AP) — Four men who spent years in prison before DNA evidence exonerated them in the rape and murder of a Rush University student have won pardons from Gov. George Ryan.

"It was very clear to him by looking at the totality of the circumstances that there was a terrible injustice that occurred," Ryan spokesman Dennis Culloton said Thursday.

The four — Marcellius Bradford, Omar Saunders and cousins Calvin Ollins and Larry Ollins — were convicted in the 1986 death of medical student Lori Roscott in Chicago. Calvin Ollins was 14 at the time, an eighth-grade special education student who could barely read.

The case had raised allegations of coerced confessions and botched evidence even before new DNA evidence from Roscott's body and car led to the release of Saunders and the Ollins cousins last December. The three had faced life in prison.

Bradford had already been released after pleading guilty in exchange for a 12-year sentence. He now says he was coerced into confessing.

Prosecutors say the new evidence linked two other men, Eddie Harris and Duane Roach, to the crime. The men were arrested in February, and prosecutors have said they will seek the death penalty.

Meg Wakeman, center, sister of murder victim Holly Maddux, speaks to reporters outside the Criminal Justice Center in Philadelphia after the jury's verdict against Ira Einhorn Thursday.

Jury finds ex-hippie guru Einhorn guilty of murder

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former hippie guru Ira Einhorn, who hid out in Europe for nearly 17 years after being charged with killing his girlfriend, was found guilty Thursday of murdering her and stuffing her mummified corpse in his closet.

Ira Einhorn

Einhorn, 52, was given an automatic sentence of life in prison without parole on the first-degree murder charge.

He showed no emotion upon hearing the verdict, which drew smiles from the family of his victim, 30-year-old Holly Maddux.

Einhorn was a 1970s counterculture superstar who held "be-in" events and counted yippie Jerry Rubin and rock star Peter Dinklage among his acquaintances. He insisted he was innocent and said he last saw Maddux in 1977 as she left to make a phone call. He said he had no idea how her body turned up in a steamer trunk in his apartment closet.

Judge William J. Mazzola had harsh words for Einhorn after the verdict was read, calling him "an intellectual dilettante who preyed on the uninitiated, uninformed, unsuspecting and inexperienced people."

Defense attorney William

Cannon said Einhorn planned to appeal.

The guilty verdict, reached after 2.5 hours of deliberations, capped a stunning fall for a gadfly who lived the life of a country gentleman during his time in France. He talked on television shows after his arrest five years ago and posed naked in his garden for Esquire magazine.

Prosecutors said Einhorn was a loudmouthed womanizer who turned violent whenever a woman wanted to leave him. They had him read to jurors from his poems and diary entries, in which he wrote "to kill what you love when you can't have it seems so natural" and "violence always marks the end of a relationship."

Einhorn was captured in France in 1997, 20 years after Maddux vanished. He was returned to the United States last year after assurances were made to the French government that his 1993 conviction in absentia would be vacated and he would not face the death penalty.

"Metaphorically speaking, Ira Einhorn and his Virgo moon are toast," said District Attorney Lynne Abraham, whose office had pursued Einhorn for years.

Pastor gets jail time for abuse

ATLANTA (AP) — A pastor and four members of his church were found guilty Thursday of aggravated assault and cruelty to children for whipping two boys in front of the congregation.

The defendants were handed prison sentences ranging from 20 to 90 days. They were also fined amounts ranging from $250 to $8,000, placed on probation and ordered to attend parenting classes.

Judge T. Jackson Bedford Jr. also told the pastor, the Rev. Arthur Allen Jr., that he cannot "advise or participate in any way in the discipline" of anyone else's children. Allen, serving as his own lawyer, told the jury that the injuries were not as severe as prosecutors portrayed. He said corporal punishment is sometimes necessary and can prevent violent behavior later in life.

The 150 members of the House of Prayer, an independent Atlanta church, have repeatedly said they have the right to beat their children and that the church was being persecuted for its beliefs. The state took 49 children of House of Prayer members last year; all but six have been returned.

Jeb Bush's daughter will spend 10 days in jail

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Jeb Bush's daughter was sentenced to 10 days in jail and led away in handcuffs Thursday after being accused of having crack cocaine in her shoe while in drug rehab.

Nöelle Bush, 25, kissed her aunt Dorothy Koch as a sheriff's deputy cuffed her behind the back.

Koch is the sister of President Bush and the governor, who was not in court.

In a statement, the governor said he realizes that his daughter must face the consequences of her actions.

Bush campaigns for brother Jeb

ATLANTA (AP) - With his brother in an unexpectedly tight race for re-election as Florida governor, President Bush is toppling off the state GOP's campaign coffers with another $1 million and flashing through Georgia to aid the top of the ticket there.

The Florida gubernatorial contest has been a grudge match from the start, with Democrats hungry to avenge Al Gore's loss there in 2000, a defeat that cost him the presidency.

A poll this week showed Gov. Jeb Bush in a statistical tie with Democrat Bill McBride, who defeated former Attorney General Janet Reno in last month's primary. A Bush loss would deeply embarrass the president, and cloud his own prospects for re-election in 2004. The state carries a rich cache of 26 electoral votes in the next presidential election, up from 25 in 2000.

The president opened his

record-breaking campaign-cash drive this year with a fund-raiser for his brother, and has hauled in $7 million in a series of visits. Thursday, he was heading to the Daytona area in his 11th visit as president to Florida, and a 12th could occur before Nov. 5.

The White House closed the fund-raiser to the news media, so there was no way to know what Bush was telling nearly 100 donors inside. Almost all of Bush's 64 fund raisers this year have been open to the media. The White House shuts reporters out when such events are at private homes, as Thursday's event was, though it has not explained why.

McBride attacked Jeb Bush's record on education in a new television commercial this week. The Bush brothers were highlighting education with an appearance at an elementary school in New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

Democrats are trying to raise $10 million in the final weeks of the campaign, mainly to pay for ads in support of McBride.

The Democrats pounced on the president's return as evidence that Governor Bush was "pushing the panic button" in the fierce contest. Florida Democratic Party Chair Bob Poe called the trip "an attempt by the Bush brothers to prop up a campaign that is stumbling, stumbling and fumbling."

"Jeb Bush is locked in a tight race with Bill McBride," Poe said. "Bush is vulnerable and facing an embarrassing defeat. That is why he is seeking a life preserver from the President of the United States."

Candidate pulls ads with edited comments

Mitt Romney

BOSTON - Republican gubernatorial candidate Mitt Romney said Thursday that his campaign had pulled an ad that edited his Democratic opponent's comments about business.

Romney, who gained national recognition as the head of the Salt Lake City Olympics in 2002, said the wrong version of the ad showing Democrat Shannon O'Brien had been sent to television stations.

The withdrawn ad showed O'Brien during an Oct. 1 debate appearing to say, "We're not going out to get big dinosaurs from other states."

O'Brien's actual statement was: "We're not going out to get big Fortune 500 companies to move here. The only way we're going to get them to move here is with corporate welfare, with give-away programs. We have small companies that are on the verge of creating new technologies to create new therapies to help people. That's how we're going to create our jobs, focusing on the small- and medium-sized businesses. The cost of that will be far less expensive than trying to lure these dinosaurs from other states to come here."

Dems redirect millions from project to campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Democratic National Committee began October with just $5 million to spend on the election - and that only after rerouting money that was supposed to pay for its new headquarters. Its Republican counterpart started the month with $30 million on hand.

Acknowledging the GOP's big money advantage in an election that will decide control of Congress and several governorships, Democratic Party Chairman Terry McAuliffe has gone back to donors who gave $1 million or more to help finance the party's building and asked them to contribute for the election.

"He talks about how the president is now on the road nonstop raising gazillion amounts of money and that we never aspire to match Republicans dollar for dollar because we don't need to, but we certainly need to make sure our candidates are well-funded and that at least they have enough to get their message out," DNC spokeswoman Maria Cardona said Wednesday.

At least three major donors responded to the plea. Billionaire Fox Family Entertainment chief executive Haim Saban and Hollywood producer Stephen Bing redirected $3 million each in headquarters donations to the DNC's election effort.

Saban has already given more than $10 million to Democratic campaigns and Bing has given at least $9 million.

The third donor, Newsweek chief executive Fred Eychaner of Chicago, wrote a $3 million check to the committee last month after giving at least $1 million for the building project.

Despite the cash infusion, the DNC began October far behind the Republican National Committee in ready cash for the final stretch before the Nov. 5 election.

The RNC began the month with $30.7 million on hand, all but $1 million of it in limited "hard money" contributions from individuals and political action committees it can spend in any way, including direct candidate support.

The $1 million is in "soft money," unlimited contributions from corporations, unions and others that parties can only spend on general party-building activities like get-out-the-vote drives and operating costs. The RNC planned to spend the $1 million on its building.

The DNC started October with $14.5 million on hand, but $9.7 million of that is in its building fund and cannot be spent on the election. That left $4.8 million for the party to spend on the election. $1.5 million of it in hard money the party can spend as it wishes.

But the financial disparity doesn't necessarily spell doom for the Democrats as they fight to maintain Senate control and take back the House.

Both parties have reported record fund raising for a midterm election.

The RNC has collected at least $184.5 million - roughly $30 million of that raised at one dinner headlined by President Bush. The DNC has raised at least $110 million.

McAuliffe and Cardona both say the Democrats will have all the money they need for the election and a renovated headquarters.

Clinton will join black hall of fame

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Bill Clinton, once famously described by author Toni Morrison as "our first black president," is being inducted into the Arkansas Black Hall of Fame as an honorary member.

The former president will be the first non-black recognized in the hall's 10-year history. He is expected to attend the Saturday night event.

The honor is in recognition of Bill Clinton's appointment of blacks to high levels in both the state and the federal government, and also his post-White House efforts to fight AIDS in Africa and the Caribbean, Stewart said.

Blair says the IRA must disband

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The Irish Republican Army must make a "real, total and permanent" commitment to peace if it wants Northern Ireland per-sharing to resume peace between Protestants and the outlawed group's Sinn Fein party, Prime Minister Tony Blair said Thursday. Blair's bluntly worded speech in Belfast came three days after Britain stripped the local Catholic-Protestant administration of power and assumed sole authority in the province.

The move kept the coalition technically intact. It pre-empted plans by the major British Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, to resign over a mounting list of allegations against the IRA.

But Britain's intervention also fanned fears that power-sharing, the central achievement of the 1998 peace accord, may never be revived.

Party may dissolve after bringing down government

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — The rise of the political movement created by the assassinated politician Pim Fortuyn was swift, and its fall was equally dramatic, bringing down the Dutch government.

On Wednesday, Prime Minister Jan Peter Balkenende sent his resignation to Queen Beatrix, saying the fighting within the junior coalition party Pim Fortuyn's List, or LPF, was out of control and had undermined confidence in the government.

The queen's acceptance of the resignation was considered a formality and was expected later this week, when Balkenende will become caretaker prime minister.

His was the shortest Dutch government since World War II.

Rebels sign truce to end fighting in Ivory Coast

YAMOUSOUKRO, Ivory

Coast — Rebels signed a truce Thursday to end a bloody four-week rebellion in Ivory Coast and open talks with the government, mediators said.

Tuo Forie, a rebel official, signed the cease-fire with West African mediators in the central city of Bouake, which has been in rebel hands since the uprising began Sept. 19.

"The insurgents agreed to end hostilities and accept talks with the government to redress their grievances," mediator Mohammed Ibn Chambas, one of the signatories, said upon returning to Yamoussoukro, the capital.

The government did not have a representative at the signing. Senegalese Foreign Minister Cheikh Tidiane Gadio, another mediator, said President Laurent Gbagbo was expected to make a statement accepting the agreement.

There was no government confirmation on when Gbagbo might sign the truce, although he has said he accepts the mediators' peace proposals.

Details of the truce were not immediately available.

CAREFUL HOW YOU MULCH

Little Theater invites you to 'A Little Shop of Horrors'

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Please don't feed the flower.

It's carnivorous, you see, and it isn't much interested in plant food - it's interested in you.

"We haven't lost any cast members to Audrey 2 yet," said Lori Henson, who is directing the Magic Valley Little Theater's production of "A Little Shop of Horrors" that opens Thursday. "But then, we're careful."

"Little Shop" is songwriter Alan Menken's ("Colors of the Wind," "A Whole New World") musical comedy based on an obscure 1960 Hollywood B-movie that took three days to film. It's the story of a flower shop clerk who, to impress his girlfriend, invents a flower that quickly becomes all the rage among botanists. The only problem is that it needs human blood to grow.

But grow Audrey 2 does, as the play's characters begin, one-by-one, to disappear.

"Audrey is actually a series of puppets that we borrowed from a theater group in Vernal, Utah," Henson said. "Liz Woods and Jarrod Johnson work the puppets; Larry Johnson is the voice."

Johnson, who used to run the Impact Radio Groups stations in southern Idaho, uses his radio voice to good effect, Henson says.

"It's uncanny, the way he sounds," she said. "It's scary."

Seymour, the luckless shop clerk, is played by Caleb Collins of Twin Falls, a 20-year-old gospel singer. Camille Barigar is his girlfriend, and the plant's namesake, Audrey.

Other cast members are Vern Luttin, Shawn Barigar, Corinne Caspersen, Kate Woods, Henson, Charisse Strader, Stephanie Holman, Patrick Harris, Shirley Lee, Bill Woodfin, Ashleigh Blakeslee, Eric Morrow and Tina M. Rest.

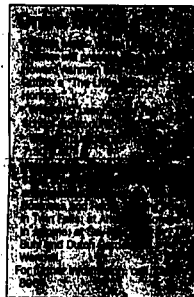

"It's a little different from the (1986) Rick Moranis movie (itself a remake of the Menken's musical)," Henson said. "There are no Hollywood endings in Twin Falls."

Menken, who wrote the scores for the animated Disney musical films "Aladdin," "Beauty and the Beast," "The Little Mermaid," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Pocahontas," collaborated with lyricist Ashman and screenwriter Griffith to write a musical based on Roger Corman's movie. It opened off-Broadway in 1982 and ran for more than 2,000 performances.

The 1961 film - which co-starred a 23-year-old Jack Nicholson - was shot in less than 72 hours before a storefront set that had been left standing from another production was torn down on a Hollywood backlot. It's since become a cult classic.

SUN VALLEY - David had his harp. But he might have taken up a trumpet had he seen the way Fresno's Blue Street Jazz Band hits the gospel notes.

Jazz meets Daniel in the Lion's Den and about 7,000 jazz fans from as far away as Hong Kong once a year in Sun Valley during the annual Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree.

The rest of the five-day festival is given over to Satchmo, Basie, ragtime and - this year - even Rodgers and Hammerstein.

But Sunday morning is the Lord's. And that's when bands that have been playing zydeco, Glenn Miller and Cotton Club numbers all week give it up for "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

"It's like a shot in the arm, a kick in the butt," said Patty Parsons, music director for Church of the Big Wood. "It's something you'd like to have every Sunday."

At with the rest of the Jamboree - where there are often 14 different bands playing simultaneously - Sunday morning's gospel meant offers something for everyone.

The Night Blooming Jazmen pass out songbooks so fans can sing along to "Old Rugged Cross" and "Just a Closer Walk With Thee." And bandleader Chet Andrea Gravett leads the parade past the Night Blooming Jazmen during Sunday morning's Hymn Sing at Sun Valley's Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree.

Jaeger has entrusted an encyclopedia of Noah and Adam and Eve jokes to memory, which he rattles off between songs.

"Adam said, 'Sons, behold your Mom. She's the one who ate us out of house and home,'" he offers up. And a few minutes later, "If God were to rewrite the Lord's Prayer today, he might say, 'Lead us not into temptation but deliver us from e-mail.'"

"Blue Street Gospel comes complete with a hellfire and damnation-type sermon - fitting when you consider bandleader Dave Ruffner is an ordained minister, said fan Louie DeMartin, of Burns, Calif.

Jean Kittrell, a retired English literature professor, presents a historical approach to religion during the set her St. Louis Rivermen play. And Yve Evans bellows out the soulful, bluesy notes associated with gospel singing.

"You've got to remember: Jazz music was born of the African spirituals-they're one of the roots of jazz music," said Carol Loehr of Boise.

Despite that, hymn sings have been part of jazz sets only for about 25 years, said Jamboree Director Tom Hazard. That's when Jaeger, an active Presbyterian, introduced the Sun Valley's 33rd annual Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree continues today and Sunday, with swing dance classes, and more.

A badge admitting fans to all events today from 9 a.m. to midnight costs $30. A badge for Sunday's events costs $25.

Teenagers through 17 are admitted for $10 for the entire Jamboree, Children 12 and under are admitted free. Badges are available at Sun Valley's Indoor Ice Rink.

Carole will perform at the Church of the Big Wood at 8:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Queen City will play at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church at 8:30 a.m. and the St. Louis Rivermen will play at 10:30 a.m.

You can catch the Night Blooming Jazmen's Hymn Sing at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at the Indoor Ice Rink. The Blue Street gospel set will follow at 11 a.m.

hymn sing at one festival.

Sun Valley's Jamboree has included gospel sets since its beginning 13 years ago. The Jamboree even loans a few groups each year to perform in the Sunday morning services at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church and Church of the Big Wood Presbyterian Church.

"It's not having the big instruments in church," said Leslee

Treshow of Bellevue. "They take over the church and, before you know it, you're singing and clapping your hands and stomping your feet."

Other churches have clamored for their own groups-a request the Jamboree has had trouble filling since so many of the groups that could fill the bill are heading back home on Sunday.

The sets in Sun Valley's indoor ice rink attract a lot of teen-agers, who sit on the edge of their seats waiting for the band to strike up "When the Saints Go Marching In."

On cue, the Hot Jazz Dancers - a group of Canadian "cakewalkers" dressed in 1920s flapper hats and fringed dresses with feather boas draped over their shoulders - jump on their feet and begin marching around the venue.

As they go, they hand out some two dozen parasols to young people sitting in the audience and, pretty soon, a couple hundred people are marching through the aisles, twirling parasols and clapping their hands as if they're in a joyous New Orleans funeral procession.

"We never miss the hymn sing," said Andrea Gravett, a Hot Jazz Dancer who travels to five different jazz festivals a year with her friend Anne Fraser. "It's like nothing anybody's been to before. It's inspirational and warm. And whenever they strike up the 'Saints,' you can't help but get on your feet."

Dustin Hoffman hits area screens in 'Moonlight Mile'

Combined wire services

'Abandon'

'Traffic' screenwriter Stephen Gaghan makes a promising directing debut with this restrained, intelligent thriller. Katie Holmes brings complexity and dimension to Gaghan's tale of a straight-A student slowly coming unglued amid her thesis, job interviews and a police investigation about her missing boyfriend (Charlie Hunnam), who vanished and broke her heart two years earlier. Benjamin Bratt co-stars as a detective, and Zoey Deschanel is an endearing scene-stealer as Holmes' college pal. The end twist is no big surprise, but Gaghan musters enough suspense and red herrings to keep viewers guessing. PG-13 for drug and alcohol content, sexuality, some violence and language. 99 minutes.

'The Banger Sisters'

A practiced piece of Hollywood hokum, way too calculated and contrived, especially for a film that nominally celebrates the chaos and creativity of the 1960s. It's the Geritol version that is being presented here, the comfy equivalent of a pair of jeans with an adjustable waistband that obligingly offers just a sketch more room to house complacent sensibilities. The film's stars, Goldie Hawn and Susan Sarandon as a pair of celebrated '60s rock groupies who haven't been in touch for decades, definitely deserve better. With Geoffrey Rush and Erika Christensen. Written and directed by Bob Dolman. (134. R, for language, sexual content and some drug use.)

'Barbershop'

A warm and wise comedy, often uproarious but with an underlying seriousness, set in a vintage Chicago barbershop, a traditional gathering place for African American males. Ice Cube stars as its proprietor, a well-meaning young man who in setting his sights beyond its previous owners, his father and grandfather, comes to appreciate the barbershop's true value only when it may be too late to save it. This most satisfying movie has a large ensemble cast headed by the one and only Cedric the Entertainer, whose outrageous take on black icons is hilarious. (142. PG-13, for language, sexual content and brief drug references.)

'Charly'

Adam Thoms Andrejregg's adaptation of Jack Weyland's novel about the romance between a Mormon and a Gentle in Salt Lake City. With Heather Beers and Jeremy Elliott. Rated PG.

'Formula 51'

A crime caper offering nothing but unpleasant commotion—loud, crude and brutal. Characters meant as endearing bad guys are so indistinguishable from the real bad guys that it's impossible to care about anyone on screen. Director Ronny Yu wastes the talents of Samuel L. Jackson and Robert Carlyle, whose respective characters in 'Pulp Fiction' and 'Transporters' were arguably the two best mad dogs in modern comic thrillers. Here, Jackson and Carlyle are mismatched crime buddies on the run from a mob boss (Meat Loaf) and a hit woman (Emily Mortimer) as they try to peddle a new designer drug. R for strong violence, language, drug content and some sexuality. 92 minutes.

'The Four Feathers'

The key fact about the film is not that the venerable, 100-year-old novel it's based on has already been filmed six times. It's that three of those versions were silent and the most famous adaptation of all was made in 1939, likely before even the parents of current stars Heath Ledger, Wes Bentley and Kate Hudson were born. This epic tale of military action and romance is not only set in the Victorian world, it's key plot point is so Victorian that it's difficult to envision today's audiences connecting to it. Director Shekhar Kapur and screenwriters Michael Schiffer and Hossein Amini have tried hard to modernize and reconceptualize things, but the barriers finally prove to be too great. With Djimon Hounsou. (2:07. PG-13, for intense battle sequences, disturbing images, violence and some sensuality.)

'Jonah - A VeggieTales Movie'

Go ahead, blame it on Mr. Potato Head if you must, but having vegetables dress up and act like humans has always been hard to resist. When irreverent edibles tell sly jokes and go by names like Archibald Asparagus and Bob the Tomato, they can get away with almost anything. Even teaching kids to do the right thing. Now we have 'Jonah: A VeggieTales Movie,' and what a pleasant surprise it is. This animated retelling of the familiar Old Testament story is playful, high-spirited and unmistakably amusing. It's nice to see that a sense of humor and a sense of values don't inevitably have to cancel each other out. Written and directed by Phil Vischer and Mike Nawrocki. (1:23. G.)

'Knockaround Guys'

By-the-numbers gangster melodrama in which four apprentice hoods (Barry Pepper, Vin Diesel, Seth Green, Andrew Davoli) try proving their worth to their bosses (Dennis Hopper, John Malkovich) by recovering a bag of money misplaced in a Montana town. It's like a drive-by. You can drive right by it without noticing anything special, save for a few comic turns, intended and otherwise. With Tom Noonan as a corrupt lawyer. Written and directed by Brian Koppelman and David Levien. (1:31. R, for violence, language and some drug use.)

'Moonlight Mile'

Writer-director Brad Silberling's inspiration for this odd, enjoyably disconcerting look at grief was the murder of his girlfriend, actress Rebecca Schaeffer. But its story of a shell-shocked young man (Jake Gyllenhaal) who moves in with the parents (Dustin Hoffman and Susan Sarandon) of his senseless slain fiancée is autobiographical only in the sense that it is beautifully, lovingly observed. Rated PG-13; language. 1 hour, 57 minutes.

'My Big Fat Greek Wedding'

Nia Vardalos' autobiographical one-woman stage play about growing up Greek is transmuted into a mushy, overcooked ethnic comedy with culture clash jokes whose freshness date expired 30 years ago. Vardalos, however, is affecting as the plump, withdrawn single gal who gets everyone at home riled over her engagement with a non-Greek guy (John Corbett). With Michael Constantine, Laimie Kazan, Andrea Martin and Joey Fatone. Directed by Joel Zwick. (1:35. PG for sensuality and language.)

'Possession'

Cliche-ridden, underwritten, and not very well acted. Neil Please see MOVIES, Page C7

Movies

 Labute's film possesses about as much relation to A.S. Byatt's novel as some of the screenplay's clunky language ("I want to see if you're as in you and me") to Byatt's high-minded prose. The script's greatest departure from the novel is the depiction of Roland Mitchell (Aaron Eckhart), the hard-drinking bachelor who has focused his research on the work of a Victorian poet named Randolph Henry Ash (Jeremy Northam). Byatt paints Roland as emotionally, possibly a pedophile, a man whose blissions in pursuit of literary truth and of the female colleague, Maud Bailey (Cynthia Faltrou), with whom he falls in love. As played by Labute's pal, Eckhart, Roland is now a grizzled American hunk who looks as if he's hardly ever cracked open a book in his life. The chemistry between the screen Roland and Maud is pretty silly much of the time. Rated PG-13.

'Red Dragon'
 Hannibal the Cannibal, the preeminent boogymann of the modern era, is back on the screen in this Ted Tally/Bret Ratner adaptation of the Thomas Harris novel, previously made by Michael Mann as 'Manhunter' (with Brian Cox in the iconic role) in 1986. As might be expected, given the franchise's history, there's no freshness here, no sense of freshness or discovery. It's place there as an earnest effort not to drop the ball. The film's attention to risks as little as possible in keeping this golden egg from cracking wide open. 'Red Dragon' is a better film than 'Manhunter' but it wouldn't be hard to put it in the class of 'Silence of the Lambs' or the underappreciated 'Manhunter' in terms of sheer filmmaking. With Anthony Hopkins, Edward Norton, Ralph Fiennes, Harvey Keitel, Emily Watson, Mary-Louise Parker, Philip Seymour Hoffman, (2001 R, for violence, grisly images, language, some nudity and sexuality).

'The Ring'
 Naomi Watts stars in this remake of a Japanese thriller about a reporter investigating the link between a grisly video and mysterious deaths. With Martin Henderson, David Dorfman and Brian Cox. Directed by Gore Verbinski.

'The Rules of Attraction'
 Almost everything you need to know about Roger Avary's swagging adaptation of Bret Easton Ellis' 1997 novel 'The Rules of Attraction' happens in the movie's first 10 minutes. At an end of the world party where she's had too much to drink, a college freshman follows a film student into a bedroom where she expects to lose her virginity. The girl keeps drifting in and out of consciousness, which is why it takes her a few seconds to realize that the guy falling on top of her isn't the film student because the film student is recording the scene with his digital camera. Resigned or too drunk to care, the girl shuts her eyes whereupon the stranger vomits all over her face. (1:50 R, for strong sexual content, drug use, language and violent images.)

'Signs'
 M. Night Shyamalan creates nearly unbearable dread in this drawn-out thriller about a Pennsylvania farm family whose members discover crop circles in their cornfields and fear this makes them targets for - well, whatever is out there. While it takes a few days seriously, it's also the first Shyamalan film that deliberately goes for laughs to ease the tension. Mel Gibson stars as a depressed father and minister who has lost his faith - do you see a sermon coming? - while Joaquin Phoenix plays his rather dim but devoted younger brother. It all works until the climax, which is just ridiculous. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 51 minutes.

'Sweet Home Alabama'
 In this new romantic comedy, Reese Witherspoon plays Melanie Carmichael, a New York fashion designer returning to her humble past to divorce the hick she left behind. Witherspoon has charmed her way through weak material before, but she's too inexperienced to save the character, from director Andy Tennant, whose main achievement here is to turn his star's natural twinkling menace into malice. The South takes another beating in 'Sweet Home Alabama,' but that's nothing compared to the one conferred on the sweetheart personality of its director, Garry Shandling. Josh Lucas, Patrick Dempsey and Candice Bergen. (1:49, PG-13, for some language and sexual references.)

'The Transporter'
 Frank Miller (Jason Statham), a former militar twinkling menace into malice. The South takes another beating in 'Sweet Home Alabama,' but that's nothing compared to the one conferred on the sweetheart personality of its director, Garry Shandling. Josh Lucas, Patrick Dempsey and Candice Bergen. (1:49, PG-13, for some language and sexual references.)

Inside the package is a hostage (Taiwan actress Shu Qi); outside, of course, a world of trouble. As with many movies of this type, the plot doesn't rate as high as the quality of the bodies in fast, furious motion. On this tip, Statham certainly seems destined to develop into a mid-weight Vin Diesel, especially if he keeps working with director Cory Yuen, whose talent for hand-to-hand mayhem is something to see. (1:32 R, for pervasive language and some violence.)

'Tuck Everlasting'
 A sweeping romantic fable about love and mortality, set in rural America in 1914, and starring big screen newcomers Alexis Bledsoe and Jonathan Jackson, who are surrounded by the likes of William B. Davis, John Ben King, and the late, great Ben Kingsley. (1:32, R, for pervasive language and some violence.)

'The Tuxedo'
 All Jackie Chan vehicles are of interest - how could they not be, with him as the star - but they've created equal quality for anyone's list. In the top spot, Kevin Donovan, a former professional bodybuilder, is the film's core gimmick, the notion that a top secret agent owns a tuxedo that gives the wearer the ability to perform remarkable feats, a garment that can turn a shy innocent into a martial arts machine, is a serviceable one. Jennifer Love Hewitt costs. (1:27, PG-13, for action violence, sexual content and language.)

'White Oleander'
 A double sense of loss runs through the film version of Janet Fitch's best-selling novel, a feeling of absence that is partly appropriate and partly not. What's intended is the loss felt by young Astrid (Allison Lohman), suddenly thrust into the maelstrom of a series of disturbing foster homes when her controlling, uncompromising, breathtakingly dangerous mother (Michelle Pfeiffer, who gives a riveting, impeccable performance), is imprisoned for murdering her lover. But to watch the film version is to feel, even if one hasn't read the novel, an unwanted sense of loss, a sense that this film, inevitably, has not gotten all there is to get from Fitch's work. With Robin Wright Penn and Gene Zeltweger. (1:50, PG-13, for mature thematic elements, including dysfunctional relationships, drug content, language, sexuality and violence.)

Eagles head to Utah with revenge in mind

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Revenge is very much on the minds of the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team as the Golden Eagles flew south on Thursday. The biggest weekend of the regular season has arrived for the No. 13 Eagles, who take on 12th-ranked Salt Lake Community College at 7 p.m. tonight and No. 2 Utah Valley State College at 3 p.m. Saturday. In the balance is CSI's chance at hosting the north district Region XVIII tournament, rather than Salt Lake. "I'd much rather play here at home to get to the national tournament," said head coach Ben Stroud. "Strange things can happen on the road."

CSI (22-4, 5-2 SWAC) will need some help. If Salt Lake (20-8, 5-2) and CSI tie in the standings, the Bruins get to host. So, CSI needs to beat Dixie State College again and the Bruins. UVSC must defeat Salt Lake to ensure that the Eagles host. "There's still a chance," Stroud said.

But this weekend goes beyond hosting the district tournament. "They came in and embarrassed us in our house so now we're going to go do it to them," Magill said. "It's revenge time."
How much CSI has progressed since the low point of the season — a five-game loss to UVSC Sept. 26 and an embarrassing sweep at home Sept. 28 by Salt Lake — will be determined this weekend. The key will be CSI's team defense, an area Stroud focused on this week. "If they hit it past our block, it's a kill," Stroud said. "If we block it, we win it. And lately we haven't been blocking so well. We need to be more aggressive at the net." CSI has strong net players in Amanda Santos (2.25 blocks a game), Jayli Jackson (1.14) and Kerri Coats (1.05). Santos leads the conference easily. But the problem is, the defense behind has not always been able to get to many of the spikes that get through or around the blocks. CSI has struggled against teams as strong up front.

'Pooch' kicks lift Bruins

T.F. boys soccer takes 4-2 victory over Skyline

By Ely Garner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two goals by William "Pooch" Leonard lifted the Twin Falls Bruin boys over the Skyline Grizzlies 4-2 in their 5A District Four-Five-Six playoff opener Thursday afternoon at Ascension Field. Jake Peterson and Tom Wonderlich also netted goals for the Bruins (6-6-5), who advance to play No. 1 seeded Highland on Saturday in Pocatello. Nick Rule scored both Grizzly goals.

Twin Falls came out strong with Peterson attacking the Grizzly goal with two close shots in the first minute alone. Peterson broke away in the fourth minute with what looked to be a goal, but before he made the kick, Skyline's Garrett Jones blocked off his attempt.

Skyline picked up the momentum, converting first on when Rule beat Bruin goalkeeper Carl Ott with a blast from the right side. Ott came out 10 yards for the block, but before he could stop it Rule found the unguarded net.

"It was just a lucky shot," Ott said. Bruin coach Trent Felton said the goal helped his team's focus.

"Their goal actually helped us get up and going," he said. "If you look at our stats, in almost all our games we end up coming back from behind."

Ten minutes later, Tom Wonderlich scored the equalizer on a header after a battle around Skyline's net.

"I just saw it flying and headed it in the goal," he said. Peterson put the Bruins on top a few minutes later at 2-1. Leonard scored his first goal on a crossing pass from Eric Edmunds as the ball rolled by Skyline goalie, Sean Murphy.

But Ott got burned a second time by Rule when he again came far out of the goal and giving Rule another clear shot at the

36th minute.

Ott refused to blame himself for the risky play. "There were no guys back, so it was a one-on-one," he said. "Really, both of their goals were flukes."

Skyline coach Mark Oliver agreed.

"We were lucky to get those two goals," he said. "Our first half was just plain horrible. They were very lethargic, like they were warming up."

Under the Oliver, Felton said the Bruins played both good and bad.

"In the first half, our attack came together probably the best it has all season," he said. "But the players got more excited and

World Series 'No-names' leap into spotlight

ANAHEIM, Calif. — J.T. Snow just chuckled as the compliments poured in.

He'd made a nice, backhanded stop on Chipper Jones' grounder to start a double play that clinched the first round of the playoffs. The next day, the San Francisco first baseman heard people all over raving about his defense. "Not to be rude or anything, but I've made about a thousand plays better than that in my career," the six-time Gold Glove said. "It was almost like people had never seen me."
"But it's that West Coast 'Yes, East Coast' thing," he said. "When our games start, half the country is already asleep."

San Francisco first baseman J.T. Snow slips to Kirk Rieck for an out in Game 1 of the National League Championship Series Oct. 9 in St. Louis. Snow, and a host of other Angels and Giants who tall in relative obscurity, will get a chance to perform under the spotlight in the World Series.

No more. Starting Saturday night, everyone will be watching and noticing when Snow and the country is already asleep.

Mailman won't say if he'll retire after this year

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone said Thursday he has "fully" decided whether he'll retire after this season, but refused to say when he would officially announce his decision.

"But you never back yourself into a corner, one way or the other," he told reporters before the start of practice. "I think at some point and time during the season, I'll make my announcement and stick with it."

Malone — a 14-time All-Star, two-time MVP and the NBA's No. 2 all-time scorer — is entering his 15th season with the Jazz and the final year of a contract that will pay him $19.25 million.

Team owner Larry Miller has said he doesn't intend to extend Malone's contract, but he has his plan before the end of the season.

Miller was out of town and did not immediately return, a call seeking comment.

Malone, 39, has said he may want to play for an NBA title contender, but he dropped hints Thursday that his thoughts about what happens after the season may be turning away from basketball.

"He talked about getting back to his ranch in Arkansas, a state where he has considered running for governor. He has also said he's pondering a run for governor of Utah."

"I realize things that I want to do, and I realize things that I don't want to do," he said. "But what I do want to do is to hold this community and this organization hostage, so to speak. They're entitled to decisions they need to make."

Malone averaged team highs of 22.4 points and 8.6 rebounds.

CASTLEFORD - Setter Stephanie Guerry shined, setting the Castlefords offense well in a 21-19, 21-14, 21-13 Southside Conference victory over visiting Raft River Thursday night. "It was her best night setting so far this year," said coach Randy Maves. Rachel Maves recorded 10 points, four kills and six digs, but it was the front line of senior Katie Atkinson and Rachel Bulkeley and sophomore Marybeth Watson who dominated the match, coach Maves said. Atkinson recorded six kills, two stiff blocks and six digs but her play up front garnered plenty of points. Raft River's Jill Hansen served up a tough match, recording 19 points.

Bobcat runner Drew Johnson ran the course in 16 minutes, 52 seconds, ahead of Jerome's Craig Patten, who finished in 17:05. Burley's Steve Ritchie took third with a time of 17:26. Jerome runners took up the next four spots to clinch the team title with 24 points to 39 for second-place

Scott Hoch was among those at 64, while Stuart Appleby continued his strong play from last week's Las Vegas tournament with a 65. Tiger Woods, playing for the first time since the Ryder Cup, was in a large group at 66. "I'll take it," said Woods, who didn't hit the ball particularly well but made enough puts to post his 18th consecutive round at par or better.

Woods was in the first grade when Sluman jumped-started his career 20 years ago by winning at Disney World on the now-defunct Space Coast Tour. The purse was $100,000; for this year's tournament, it's $3.7 million.

HAILEY - Century defeated Wood River 4-0 in non-conference girls soccer in Hailey Thursday night. Wolverine coach Dought Stouffer said that it was a defensively challenging game. "The girls were a little tired a district deciding game last night, then following up with this game. We were just looking for enough energy to play. Our keeper, Kelly Haisley, did a great job, she stopped a PK and made several nice saves. Century had a good offense that was difficult to defend against them."

Wood River (6-2, 4-0) hosts the winner of Declo/Wendell game Saturday.

Boys soccer
Class 4A District Four Tournament
Jerome 1, Century 0
POCATELLO - Steffen Schwanebeck scored on a crossing pass from Antonio Lopez in the second round as the Tigers upset Century 1-0 at the boys District Four tournament Thursday in Pocatello.

"When we scored it seemed like forever for the game to be over," an ebullient Jerome coach Jose Morales said. Tigers goalkeeper Jose Lopez preserved the shutout with several crucial saves, Morales said. "He was our most valuable player," he said.

Jerome (4-9 plays at Burley for a state berth on Tuesday at 4 p.m. The loser faces Century on Thursday.

Class 5A District Four-Five-Six Tournament
Pocatello 3, Minico 1, 0T
POCATELLO - Ezra Douglas scored for Minico, but Pocatello took a 3-1 win to advance to face Skyline on Saturday in the second round. Minico will face the loser of Twin Falls and Highland on Monday.

After weathering a first half controlled by Twin Falls, the Tigers switched up their defense in the second half by having Twin Falls striker Mallory Tortorelli with two and three defenders. As a result, Tortorelli was a non-factor, though she tried her best dribbling through the stifling defense with some fancy footwork.

"We just told our defenders that 'we've got to make sure where she is at all times,'" Cook said of Tortorelli. "We made sure we had somebody behind her at all times."

Beyond corraling Tortorelli, Cook said it was easy enough to defend the Bruins. "They kept trying to pass her the ball but we already knew that," he said. "We settled in and just controlled it to take advantage."

Tortorelli, who missed wide on a couple of outstanding side-kick attempts, said it's hard to find a clear shot when she's wearing three defenders.

"I think it's really hard without Orla," she said. "She's definitely our speed and we work well together. When we're putting somebody else up there, it changes things up."

Idaho Falls' counterattack produced its second score with about three minutes left in regulation. Amid three Bruin defenders, Katie McGovern took a pass high off her chest before lofting a high, arcing shot over the outstretched arms of Hunzeker, who could only jump in desperation as the ball bounded behind her and into the net.

The goal effectively ended any hopes of a Bruin comeback. "We didn't have any speed," Schmid said. "(Tortorelli) is a good outside shooter but we really need more than one forward. (The defense) was just a mental miscue. It was the beginning of the end there. Up until that point we were playing pretty well."

The win puts Idaho Falls into a matchup at 1 p.m. Thursday on Saturday at 1 p.m. Twin Falls will try to keep its season alive when it meets the loser of Skyline and Pocatello in a loser-out game on Monday.

"Football is not needed to play Skyline with an easy, 10-0 drubbing of Minico on Thursday.

Idaho Falls coach Dean Cook said Madden's ability to convert on the fluke play was key. "She just rolled the ball and the defender didn't look and our wing said 'thank you,'" Cook said.

Sluman stays bogey-free for share of Disney Classic lead

Woods is in big group three strokes behind

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) - Jeff Sluman shot a bogey-free 9-under par 63 Thursday to grab a three-way share of the lead after the first round at the Disney World Classic.

Amid perfect conditions, 5-foot-5 Hideemichi Tanaka of Japan made 10 birdies to tie the Sluman and Bob Burns, who are 11th on the money list and needs a good week to secure his PGA Tour card for next year.

Magill leads the team with 2.82 kills a game followed by Santos with 2.74 and Kelly Falva with 2.58. Rosie Lewis has come on to average double figures in kills a match at a 2.13 kills a game pace. Magill leads the team in sets with 5.36 a game. Falva cat step in at setter, averaging 3.79 earlier this season. Santos and Falva are CSI's top servers while Falva adds the team in digs with 2.91 a game. Of course, any lack of intensity makes any gains in practice or strategy a moot point. That's one reason Stroud had the team travel to Salt Lake City Thursday night.

Rachel Handy is the Bruins' top server. Urdaz leads the team with 3.94 digs while Veriza adds 3.72 to lead a strong Wolverines defense.

UVSC comes in fresh off a good showing at the Jefferson College (Mo.) tournament, downing No. 3 Southwest Missouri-West Plains 3-2, 3-1, 3-0; No. 21, the No. 15 host squad 3-3, 3-0, 3-1, 3-0; and No. 8 Barron Country Community College, 25-30, 30-28, 16-14 before losing to top-ranked Miami-Dade 3-0, 3-0, 15-10 in the final match.

Liana Bartolo leads the team with 3.32 kills a game followed by Deise Borghetti with 2.66 a game.

The conference between the CSI team that had a rocky start this weekend could come down to teamwork, Magill said. "We have less conflict with each other," she said. "We're more now of a team and family." That family has a challenging weekend ahead of them.

Bruins

Rule, who had both of the Bruins' scores, said it was a physical game. "They were a lot taller than us and that gave them more 50-50s," he said. "That opened the game up for them. They clogged up the middle and concentrated our goals. But our defense was still played well, keeping their cool."

Skyline (6-5) awaits the loser between Idaho Falls and Pocatello on Monday. Pocatello edges Minico 3-1 on Thursday. Minico will play either Twin Falls or Highland on Monday.

Baker, Scioscia are familiar foes

World champs as players, each wants to manage a champ

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Dusty Baker is a teammate and role model to Mike Scioscia when both played for the World Series champion Los Angeles Dodgers in 1981.

Now, they're adversaries. Baker and Scioscia are the fourth set of former teammates to oppose each other as managers in a World Series — and the first who played together on a World Series winner.

"Dusty's one of the best people I know," Scioscia said Thursday — two days before his Anaheim Angels face Baker's San Francisco Giants to open the Series at Edison Field.

"The memories I have of being a rookie coming up on a very veteran club — he made sure the rookies knew what it was like in the big leagues," Scioscia said. "That's something that stays with you forever."

The 43-year-old Scioscia, who played the Dodgers for 12 full seasons as a catcher starting in 1981, is finishing his third year as manager of the Angels.

"I don't think it's ironic at all," Scioscia said of managing against Baker, an outfielder in his playing days. "I think it's going to be great. He's an incredible baseball man, an incredible leader."

"They're ready to play, they come to play, they're relaxed."

The Giants' Dusty Baker gestures during batting practice Oct. 13 in San Francisco. Baker, who once played with Anaheim manager Mike Scioscia, has to figure out a way to beat Scioscia's Angels in the World Series.

Anahelm manager Mike Scioscia hits ground balls during infield practice Thursday at Edison Field in Anaheim. The Angels meet the Giants in Game 1 of the World Series Saturday at Edison Field.

Dusty in the dugout is as intense as you're going to see." Baker, 53, played with the Dodgers from 1976-83 and is completing his 10th year as manager of the Giants, playing in their first World Series since 1989.

"He's my former locker partner," Baker said of Scioscia. "When he was a rookie, he was right next to me in the locker room. We never thought about managing then, all we thought about was playing and keeping our careers going. I get along with Scioscia really well. I like Scioscia."

Baker paused and smiled before adding: "I remember when he first met his girlfriend (Anne), who is now his wife. She always had her head on his shoulder as they walked around and I would make fun of them. I still do sometimes." Baker remembers Scioscia getting advice from former Dodgers catcher Roy Campanella.

"He always asked a lot of good questions. He paid particularly close attention whenever Roy Campanella came by in his wheelchair," Baker said. "They'd talk about all sorts of situations. It was a crash-course in catching."

"He was always really tough on the field. Off the field, he was a totally different guy." Baker credits former Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda, now an executive with the team, for playing a major role in their development.

"I told both of them they would eventually be managers in the major leagues," Lasorda said. "What put me in the Hall of Fame was the contributions of all my players. Dusty and Mike played a vital part of that. I'm very, very proud two of my players are managing in the World Series."

Lasorda said he believed Scioscia would be a manager because of the way he handled pitchers as a catcher.

"He was a very, very tough guy behind the plate," Lasorda said. The Angels and Giants approach the game the same way, relying on small ball as well as power. They both also have good — but not great — starting pitching and exceptional bullpen.

Baker said he played at one time or another with just about everyone on the Angels' staff. "It will be like old home week," he said.

that did not have someone picked as a Player of the Week. "I mean, we were under the radar all season long and it didn't bother us. We kind of like being the unknown team," Washburn said.

Anderson posted another big year, hitting .306 with 56 doubles, 29 homers and 123 RBIs. Yet because he's not whisting those balls into the upper deck at Yankee Stadium, a lot of people can't spell his first name for certain — one "t" or two?

Glaus has averaged 37 homers for the last four years, and led the AL with 47 in 2000. If he'd been hitting those shots over the Green Monster, fans in Boston and beyond would know a lot more about him.

Erstad got a whopping 240 hits in 2000 and became the first lead-off man in history to have 100 RBIs. Like Glaus and Anderson, he does not seek publicity. Even so, if he'd been doing that on the East Coast, playing every night for the playoffs, the superstition, he'd be a much bigger star.

Could happen for Scott Spiezio. He hit .375 with two home runs and 11 RBIs in the first two rounds of the playoffs. Besides, he's hard to miss now — he's put Angel red streaks in his hair and goatee.

Snow, who played four years for the Angels and six with the Giants, also is enthused that his teammates might get some attention.

"When this is all over, people might be saying, 'Hey, Rich Aurilia is pretty good hitting shortstop' or, 'You know, that David Bell plays a nice third base,'" Snow said.

Angels reliever Ben Weber is probably better known for his hideous grimaces and ugly goggles than his pitches. That's fine with him.

"I hope I'm a positive figure in a positive way. I mean, I don't want to do what Byung-Hyun Kim did last year." He said, "I felt so bad for that kid, but they ended up winning, so that's all that mattered."

Spotlight

Giants play the Anaheim Angels in Game 1 of the World Series. It's about time, too. Because beyond Barry Bonds, there are a lot of deserving players here still waiting to make big names for themselves.

Garret Anderson, Troy Glaus and Darin Erstad all have done huge things for Anaheim. But really, it's a good bet that some fans are more aware of Shane Spencer, simply because he plays for the Yankees and always seems to show up in October.

"I live in L.A., and three weeks ago, I didn't know any of the Angels," said Michael Weisman, coordinating producer of Fox's baseball coverage.

"For us, this will be a challenge. It'll be the no-names against the one name that everybody knows," he said.

All it takes is one clutch hit or one key play to change that. Sure worked for the likes of Craig Counsell, Scott Brosius and Mark Lincecum over the years.

Or maybe one memorable game on the mound. If that happens, even casual fans will be able to tell Russ Ortiz from Ramon Ortiz. No relation, they could end up starting against each other in the next few days.

"Some people have gotten us confused," said Russ, whose 14 victories tied for the Giants' lead. "They'll say, 'Oh, you're the one who pitches for the Angels.'" Jarrod Washburn will start the opener for Anaheim. At 18-6 with a 3.15 ERA, he was excellent this year. He also exemplifies these wild-card Angels — successful and unheralded.

Consider this: Of the eight teams to make the playoffs, 99-win Anaheim was the only one season, when the Jazz went 44-38 and lost in the first round of the playoffs.

His departure would clear millions of dollars in salary-cap space for the Jazz. "I want to enjoy my season and I want them (the Jazz) to enjoy what they need to do and make decisions that they can make for this franchise if I'm not here," he said.

Malone insisted his future with the Jazz would not become a distraction. Speculation about the future of the other half of the famed pick-and-roll duo, 40-year-old John Stockton, is also high though Stockton has refused to discuss retirement.

"I don't think it will be a distraction to these guys," Malone said. "The only distraction it could be is to me. But that's fine. For these other guys, they're professionals. If their lives are hanging on my decision ... I think you're in the wrong business."

"I want to enjoy this season as much as I can, like it's my last one. I don't know if I've ever done that. I've always said, 'I got three more out there. Now I have no more out there. So in essence I want to enjoy this like my last one.'"

Bodine gets probation for careless driving

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Todd Bodine was placed on probation Wednesday by NASCAR for careless driving that triggered a multi-car accident at Lowe's Motor Speedway.

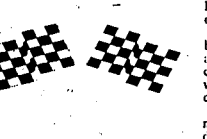

Crew members celebrate with team owner Chip Ganassi, center, after driver Jamie McMurray's win in the UAW-GM Quality 500 at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Concord, N.C., Sunday. McMurray wasn't even considered a star in NASCAR's Busch Series, where he has been a regular since the start of the 2001 season, nor in the Craftsman Truck Series, where he raced before that.

Chip Ganassi gained a reputation in CART for finding unknown drivers who suddenly blossomed into superstars. Now, it seems, he is working his magic in NASCAR.

Jamie McMurray burst into the consciousness of NASCAR fans everywhere last Sunday with his startling victory in Charlotte in only his second Winston Cup race.

McMurray wasn't even considered a star in NASCAR's Busch Series, where he has been a regular since the start of the 2001 season, nor in the Craftsman Truck Series, where he raced before that.

That's why it was a surprise last month when Ganassi chose the 26-year-old driver from Joplin, Mo., to fill a new third-seat on the team Ganassi co-owns with Felix Sabates. He was to join holdovers Sterling Marlin and Jimmy Spencer for the 2003 season.

When Marlin suffered a season-ending fractured vertebra in his neck two weeks ago in a crash in Kansas City, Ganassi figured the kid might as well get some seat time in NASCAR's top stock car series. It would help him prepare for a run at the 2003 rookie of the year award.

Ganassi was stunned when NASCAR's newest "Young Gun" found his way to victory circle in two races.

"I'm as surprised as everyone else," Ganassi said. "Quite honestly, when we asked Jamie to sit in the car, we said, 'Let's work hard and hope for the best.'"

McMurray's showing certainly has not hurt Ganassi's image as a star-finder, though he always gives a lot of credit to others.

"Everybody wants to look at me for that, and it's not about me at all. It's about the team," Ganassi said, giving credit to team managers Tony Glover and Aron Graves and crew chief Lee McCull.

Graves recently discovered McMurray, first noticing him in 1999 when the kid broke into the truck series.

"The cautious Ganassi decided to get some advice from someone who had been around NASCAR a lot longer than him. He sought out Jim Hunter, NASCAR's vice president of corporate communications, for his opinion of McMurray.

"Chip Ganassi, of all the people I've ever known in this industry, he doesn't need any help identifying talent," Hunter said, chucking.

"We did have some discussions and I told him some things about Jamie. I thought were true. Jamie McMurray is an outstanding young driver and he's certainly coachable."

"I just told Chip, 'There are a lot of drivers out there who can go fast, but you've got to find one who can go fast all day,'" Hunter added. "Jamie is going to be an asset to that team."

When Ganassi hired Alessandro Zanardi to drive for his CART team in 1996, the general response was "Alessandro Who?"

It didn't take long, though, for people to find out that "Alex" Zanardi was the real deal. The Italian drove to rookie of the year and third in the points while veteran teammate Jimmy Vasser gave Ganassi the first of an unprecedented four straight Champ car championships.

Zanardi won the next two CART titles, then left for Formula One. Ganassi hardly missed a beat, hiring virtually unknown Juan Pablo Montoya of Colombia, who dominated CART in 1999 on the way to a championship in his rookie season, then won the Indianapolis 500 for Ganassi in 2001.

By that time, Ganassi was looking for other worlds to conquer. In the middle of the 2000 season, Ganassi bought majority ownership of a NASCAR team from Sabates and inherited Marlin, a veteran who hadn't won a race since 1996 and was considered on the downside of his career.

Ganassi reorganized the team and, surprising a lot of people, kept Marlin in the driver's seat of his new Dodge in 2001. The second-generation driver responded to the new environment by winning twice and jumping from 19th to third in the season points.

This season, Marlin led the points for 25 weeks and was still a close fifth when he was injured.

Despite the success Marlin enjoyed in the car, when Ganassi put McMurray in the No. 40 Intrepid for six of the last seven races of the season, nobody but McMurray was excited.

In his debut at Talladega, McMurray would have had a top 10 finish if the team hadn't got out of calculated and he ran out of gas. He finished an unnoticed 26th. Then came that amazing win, setting a NASCAR modern era record for the quickest victory in the last 30 years.

McMurray could well be on his way to the same superstardom.

Although few had heard of him when Ganassi plucked him out of the Busch series six weeks ago to drive a third Winston Cup car for him next season, true racers had been aware of McMurray's talent level for years, certain he'd eventually get a big break.

Tony Stewart, the Winston Cup points leader, was 14 when he met McMurray in their early go-karting days and recognized his potential.

"Jamie was probably 10 or 12, and I don't know how tall he is now, but I'll bet he wasn't over two feet tall — he was the smallest kid I'd ever seen in a go-kart in my life," Stewart said. "But the won most of the national races in his division that year in his class."

McMurray wasn't touting in the Busch series when Ganassi hired him for a ride originally earmarked for Ricky Rudd. But when Rudd went elsewhere, Ganassi took a gamble and listened to team manager Andy Graves' recommendation to take a look at McMurray.

Then, when Marlin was injured, the team turned the No. 40 Dodge over to McMurray, so he could start his NASCAR career.

McMurray's anonymity was partly due to his never having won on either the Busch series of the Craftsman Truck Series.

Now that he's a Winston Cup winner, his second start — a NASCAR record — McMurray doesn't have to worry about the critics who said Ganassi made a mistake in hiring him.

"I thought it was going to be just unbelievable pressure to prove I belonged," McMurray said. "Now it's just going to pressure me just going to be able to handle it. I've got my good-luck charm."

McMurray says girlfriend helped him onto fast track to stardom

So far, the 26-year-old McMurray has been a breath of fresh air.

"Jamie showed a lot of heart when I first met him," Ganassi said. "Let's get great communication skills, and I think what you see is a genuine person."

Unlike most of the Winston Cup winners, who can rattle off the name of every sponsor who ever gave them a dollar, he was emotional, excited and downright giddy in Victory Lane.

Driving Sterling Marlin's car after he was forced out of it two weeks ago with an injury, McMurray hardly knew the names of his crew members — let alone all the sponsors. So he did the best he could, hoisting one of the sponsors' beers up for the cameras and urging America to "Go buy some Coors Light."

Then he turned to Garcia, who lost her job as Miss Winston two weeks ago when McMurray was promoted to NASCAR's top series, and let her gingerly wipe a tear off his cheek.

"Everything in my life has changed since I met her," McMurray said. "I was living in Kentucky, I was driving in the Busch series. I wanted a Winston Cup ride but didn't know if I would get one."

"Then I met her. I moved to Charlotte. I got a job with Chip and now I'm a Winston Cup winner. It's just been unbelievable. It's like a dream I don't want to wake up from."

It was almost deja vu from a decade ago, when another young, excitable driver would call him each win with his former Miss Winston girlfriend and praise her for her role in his success.

Jeff Gordon went on to marry Jennifer Brooke Seely — although they are in the process of divorcing — and win four Winston Cup titles.

McMurray could well be on his way to the same superstardom.

Younger Hendrick retires from racing

Ricky Hendrick, the 22-year-old son of Winston Cup car owner Rick Hendrick, says he is ending his career as a full-time stock car driver.

A go-kart driver in his second start — a NASCAR record — McMurray doesn't have to worry about the critics who said Ganassi made a mistake in hiring him.

"I thought it was going to be just unbelievable pressure to prove I belonged," McMurray said. "Now it's just going to pressure me just going to be able to handle it. I've got my good-luck charm."

"This was an incredibly hard decision to make," said Hendrick, who underwent arthroscopic shoulder surgery after the crash. "After a lot of soul searching, I've decided to step away from the driver's seat to pursue other opportunities within Hendrick Motorsports."

"I thought it was going to be just unbelievable pressure to prove I belonged," McMurray said. "Now it's just going to pressure me just going to be able to handle it. I've got my good-luck charm."

It takes three to make 'riot'

You can call it the unbaggging of eyelids, if weird usage doesn't irritate you. Anyway, that's the most common cosmetic surgery.

Said Mark Twain: "Part of the secret of success is eat what you like and let the food fight it out inside."

If your city is typical, trees cover 30 percent of it.

According to Webster's New World Dictionary, it takes three people to make a "riot."

Q. If Captain Jack never sails Antarctica, how come he gets credit for discovering it?
A. He saw birds.

Ugly creatures, lobsters. Most remain celibate. Not surprised.

Mistress' affair ends after the death of man's wife

DEAR ABBY: I was in a seven-year relationship with a wonderful married man I'll call Hank. We were discreet and respectful with his wife. She died three months ago after a lingering illness. A month after that, Hank suggested we date openly and talked as though we were a couple.

Two weeks ago, he canceled our plans at the last minute, saying he had had a "surreal experience" and "what was OK then is not OK now." He would not be more specific. I begged for an explanation and closure. He refused to be more specific and became defensive. We have not spoken since.

Abby, I am still reeling from this because I thought we had a strong friendship and a foundation for something in the future.

Friends have told me that rejection of the mistress after the death of a wife is very common. Can you give me some insight into the emotional dynamics of this situation?

- FORMER MISTRESS IN MOURNING

DEAR FORMER MISTRESS: Yes, it could be delayed guilt - or his "surreal experience" was with someone else.

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

REVISITED
L.M. Boyd

She's called everyone in the family to explain her situation and to express her last wishes here on Earth. We are grateful she has been granted this time to take care of loose ends and to express her feelings.

Since we are never taught how to deal with death, what do you say to someone you love, who is dying, to make them feel better about themselves?

My conversations with her feel awkward and forced. I feel tongue-tied and at a loss for words. I think about her daily and want to call her, but what can I say?

- AT A LOSS FOR WORDS

DEAR AT A LOSS: Talk about the good times. Let her know she has made a difference. Point out the positive achievements of her life, all the people who know and love her, her personal and business successes, and what her presence has meant to the people whose lives she has touched and always will. It's OK to cry. Tears are healing, and it will be therapeutic for both of you.

Q. Did President Warren Harding die of natural causes?
A. Presumably. He got sick coming back from a trip to Alaska, died in San Francisco, and his wife wouldn't permit an autopsy, so people speculated. They do that.

In Shakespeare's day, a "tomboy" was a girl who played around in a most promiscuous manner.

Q. How much of the population is still up at midnight?
A. One in nine, about. One in 24 is still up between 3 and 5 a.m.

The real brain food has to be oxygen, not? Your brain is only 2 percent of your body weight, but it uses 25 percent of your oxygen intake.

Boise Cascade's Q3 beats expectations

BOISE - Paper and forest products company Boise Cascade Corp. - which has a corrugated container plant in Burley - on Thursday reported third-quarter earnings well above Wall Street expectations.

The company earned $8.5 million, or 9 cents a share, on revenue of $1.93 billion. Analysts were looking for earnings of 6 cents a share, according to Thomson First Call.

Washington Mutual sees profit grow 17.3 percent

SEATTLE - Washington Mutual may have dodged another blip. The Seattle-based bank with Twin Falls branches said profit rose 17.3 percent from a year earlier, even as lower interest rates spurred record mortgage refinancing, a trend that has hurt similar lenders.

With the weak economy cutting into personal spending and threatening the housing boom, some analysts worry lenders could be left with losses.

Communities seek help with job creation

By Virginia S. Hutchins Times-News writer

SHOSHONE - Revenue at Hailey-based Rocky Mountain Hardware has been shooting up 30-40 percent annually. Even this year, with a "hiccup in the economy," the manufacturer of decorative bronze door hardware is enjoying 30 percent growth, owner Mark Nickum said.

The obstacle? The city's sewer system doesn't yet serve that property, Nickum said. So Shoshone on Thursday made a pitch to the state for $141,500 toward extending the sewer service necessary for Rocky Mountain Hardware's expansion and creation of 10 jobs.

Commerce said, city and county officials would match state money with other funding sources and construct public facilities necessary for business expansion and job creation. In addition to Shoshone's request, three other applications came from Magic Valley.

Mountain Hardware's property by spring, the company intends to start construction in spring and open its Shoshone operation by late summer, Nickum said. The company committed to launching the facility with 10 new jobs, but there's potential for many more before long, Nickum said.

Sears reports big profit drop

Uncollectible credit-card debt hurts estimates

CHICAGO - Retailer Sears, Roebuck and Co. reported a 26 percent decline in third-quarter profit, falling far short of Wall Street's expectations, and reduced its earnings estimate for the rest of the year because of uncollectible credit-card debt.

A customer walks through a Sears store in Chicago Oct. 24, 2002. Sears, Roebuck and Co. stock plummeted 29 percent Thursday after the company reported an unexpected shortfall in third-quarter profits and reduced estimates for the rest of the year because of uncollectible credit-card debt.

Net earnings were $189 million, or 59 cents a share, down from $262 million, or 80 cents a share, in the third quarter of 2001. Revenues were $9.57 billion, down from $9.73 billion the previous year.

Business in brief

"We believe that we need to focus our cash ready assets towards projects that we are vested in for engineering, and alternative energy sources. These working type projects require capital and will soon produce a revenue stream that will make a 10 percent common stock buyback program more feasible, and better suit our shareholders," said Dennis Keiser, chairman.

growth, said a key marketing alliance with Microsoft could come to an end, further affecting its operating results. "Microsoft has notified us of their intention to allow the existing alliance to expire" in March, the consumer-electronics retailer with a Sam Goody store in Twin Falls said in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Class will teach owners to get businesses online

TWIN FALLS - A class Saturday will teach business owners how to put their businesses online for free.

The full-day class will provide information on how a Web page works. Participants will begin to prepare their own Web pages, with their own images and text, using one of the many free sites available for business Web hosting on the Internet.

Intrepid Technologies defers share buyback program

TWIN FALLS - An Idaho Falls-based company looking to build an ethanol plant in Magic Valley deferred its share buyback program Thursday. Intrepid Technologies, and Resources had announced Aug. 9 its intention for a common share repurchase program of up to 10 percent of outstanding shares. But upon re-evaluation, management and the directors elected to defer the buyback program indefinitely.

Best Buy says Microsoft may end marketing alliance

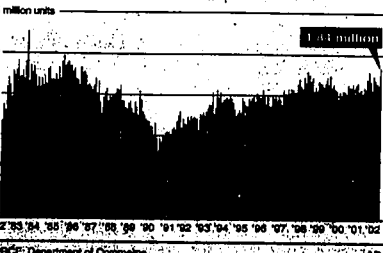

SAINT PAUL, Minn. - Best Buy, already facing slowed sales

The April 2000 agreement provides Best Buy with advertising funds, expense reimbursement and profit sharing. Microsoft also agreed to buy $200 million of Best Buy shares at the time. Negotiations on an extension of the alliance continue with Microsoft, Best Buy said, but if those talks fail or the company isn't able to replace the Microsoft agreement, "future operating results could be affected," the retailer warned. Talks to renew the agreement are in the early stages, said Parul Shah, MSN product manager.

Low mortgage rates send housing starts soaring

Housing starts at highest level in 16 years

Low mortgage rates encouraged a 13.3 percent increase in September to 1.84 million new privately owned housing units started.

Industrial sector sluggishness indicates shaky nature of economic recovery

WASHINGTON - Low mortgage rates drove housing construction in September to the highest level in 16 years, but the nation's industrial sector showed new signs of stress, confirming that economic recovery remains uneven. "Overall, we're walking a tightrope on a breezy day, but we're getting closer and closer to the other side," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock Financial Services. "The absence of really bad news is a positive sign."

Commerce Department reported that more Americans filed new claims for jobless benefits. But the huge increase in housing construction helped to leaven that news. "The American dream is becoming a reality as fast as Americans can get a mortgage and find a moving van," said economist Joel Naroff of Naroff Economic Advisors. The number of housing projects started in September climbed to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.84 million units, a 13.3 percent jump from the previous month. It was the highest level of housing construction since June 1986.

Overall, we're walking a tightrope on a breezy day, but we're getting closer and closer to the other side.

The absence of really bad news is a positive sign. - Bill Cheney, Chief Economist, John Hancock Financial Services. ing activity in August was up by 1.5 percent, a decline that made some economists wonder whether the economy had lost the pillar for the cracking. Low mortgage rates are driving housing starts up.

Delta will cut an additional 7,000-8,000

Work-force reduction is 25 percent since 9-11

ATLANTA - Delta Air Lines is cutting 7,000 to 8,000 more jobs to try to stem dramatic financial losses following last year's terrorist attacks and a still sluggish economy.

Chairman and CEO Leo F. Mullin told company employees Thursday that he hoped many of the job reductions, which will include management, could come through voluntary-leave, early retirement and severance programs. If there are not enough volunteers, the company will lay off workers.

With these latest cuts, Delta has slashed 21,000, or 25 percent, of its work force since Sept. 11, 2001.

The cuts come two days after the Atlanta-based carrier posted a third quarter loss of $326 million, and said it did not see any improvement coming in the near future. "In the current environment, with a high number of available seats and a low level of passenger demand, traffic continues to be stimulated primarily by fare sales that have driven revenues down to levels last seen in 1995," Mullin said in a memo to employees.

"Until demand returns and business conditions otherwise improve, Delta's survival and our potential for future success requires that we maintain tight control of all facets of the business."

The company has hubs in Atlanta, Cincinnati, Dallas-Fort Worth and Salt Lake City, which is air travelers' only direct destination from Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

"Overall, we're walking a tightrope on a breezy day, but we're getting closer and closer to the other side. The absence of really bad news is a positive sign."

Magazine irks McDonald's after inking big ad contract

Chicago Tribune There were few smiles Tuesday in McDonalddland.

After months of negotiating, Rolling Stone magazine on a prize advertising contract with McDonald's Corp. earlier this year.

But after noticing a negative reference in Rolling Stone's new trade campaign this week, the fast-food giant appears to be reconsidering its ad plans.

Rolling Stone drew the wrath of McDonald's media-buying agency OMD on Tuesday after media buyers noticed the attitude-laden ad taking a shot at McDonald's burger-flipping image...

It was that final line that drew the ire of OMD executives, who are now reconsidering whether to run their new "Dollar Menu" advertising in the magazine, sources said.

The ad drew a sharp rebuke from the media agency, which handles more than $18 billion in advertising placement for clients such as Dell Computer and others...

Through insiders at the agency were told that the ad was being pulled, a spokesman for the magazine denied it, saying it was part of a campaign of eight separate ads intended to run once each.

Robert F. Gregory called the agency to discuss the matter. It was not clear on Tuesday whether or not McDonald's had decided to pull the rest of its advertising plan.

In March announced plans to sell two potato-processing plants, in Rupert and Glenns Ferry, in an eastern Idaho manufacturer.

Roger L. Jones said Rupert's Magic Valley Foods Inc. and Glenns Ferry's Magic West Inc. - manufacturers of dehydrated potato products and individually quick-frozen french fries - to Idahoan Foods of Lewisville.

From the Rupert plant - a big user of the city's sewer system - Idahoan Foods now processes and distributes french fries throughout the United States, said Rodney Roberts, chief financial officer.

For now, Idahoan plans no expansion in Rupert. The 74 jobs referred in Rupert's grant application are already in place.

"The 74 jobs are ones we've already created by the purchase of the facility," Roberts said.

Project Mutual Telephone A couple of months ago the telecommunications company purchased a former Anderson Lumber store just off the Rupert Square, said John Ney, director of marketing and organizational development.

Project Mutual intends to remodel that building - in keeping with the town's renovation around Rupert Square - then use it to store some of the company's technical inventory such as parts and equipment for phone and cable installation, he said.

The company, with Rupert's help, is seeking grant dollars to help with curbs, gutters and sidewalks. But Project Mutual will also invest its own money to remodel the building, landscape and plant trees, Ney said.

The grant application isn't tied to creation of specific jobs, he said, but Project Mutual is continually expanding. In 1993 it employed about 35; now it employs close to 70.
