Students are still fearful despite drop in school crime WASHINGTON - Metal detectors and surveillance cameras have sharply reduced weapons and crime at the nation's schools, but a government report says students are more afraid on school grounds than off because of a problem that hasn't changed: the school bully.

shares nusic with community seniors.

For 18 years, he has provided them free music instruction.

"We've just found that music is just really good for elderly people's minds. It's healthy for them to be involved in a music program," Naylor says, owner of the Organ Learning Center in Twin Falls. "We do group organ lessons-for-seniors-Theyra-free-of charge. Seniors can come whether they have an organ or they don't have an organ or they don't have an organ."

Joan and Keith Walker, who learned the organ from Naylor and are still taking classes, have been playing for 10 years.

"We got our first organ in 1992, and we didn't know how to play a note," Joan recalls.

The Walkers agree that the music has been a fun thing to share.

The case drew much attention, partly because the

was a straightforward enforcement of the ordinance.

The Nuneses

A Boise judge ruled in July that the moratoriums were indeed against the law. Then last month, the Nungses' autorney said his clients would have been granted a permit based on the ordinance in place in July 2000, when they first wanted to expand.

The strategy is to cover up a misdeed by overwhelming the readdeed by overwhelming the read-er or listener with so much information that the lie will either not be noticed or believed.

Now, after years of denying he has weapons of mass destruction, deceiving the world and delaying inspections. Saddam Hussein has released more than 12,000 pages of text that basically claim he has no such weapons. The titles of the documents sound as if they are covering up the obvious: "Currently Accurate Full and Complete Declaration: Chemical Activity," as yes one. Another repeats the title and inserts "Biological Activity," as its subject matter. Why is so much information about weapons necessary if they do not exist? How does one prove a negative? War on terrorism brings lackluster results

As we move closer and closer to war, it appears fo me that the sensible solution to terrorism its oreturn terrorism with terrorism. Why engage Iraq, with its small army, and find overnight it includes Russia, India, China and all Arab nations? If terrorism why benkrupt our army and treasury by sending the whole army? Let us seek out their leaders and destroy them using terrorism.

Perhaps the answer is we need a little war to keep our economy from totally collapsing. Our current administration is pouring money into every crack and crevice to turn the economy around. Money was pumped into New York City after Sept. 11 like it had no accountability. President Bush has hired 60,000 federal employees to secure the air terminals of America; 22 are stationed at the Twin Falls air terminal. They will become the world's best

Twin Falls air terminal. They will become the world's best card plavers, hobby specialists—and the nighest paid. This is probably sufficient personnel to completely staff our terminal if it were private enterprise. Pouring money down a rat hole could be just as productive. The president's brilliant advisors provided us with guards aboard most flights. Arming pilots and crews would have been much more effective and nearly cost free. Doing the smart thing would not have included an army of new federal employees to redistribute money. Likewise, the new department of national defense will employ tens of thousands. This should be our own army brought back from ociense wai employ tests or thousands. This should be our own army brought back from around the world. Sticking our nose in everybody's business has generated the hate and terrorism for us. We Americans are not too smart, are we? NATO has all barriers removed, and terrorism can be brought across the border truck with few or no inspections or restrictions. A heavily loaded ruck with hidden explosives could cause bridges to collapse, for they could be used to destroy for they could be used to destroy for they could be used to destroy the could be used to destroy the country of the could be used to destroy the country of the countr bannage they both thrift - Just peanuts.

Before long, we will find weeping replacing the flag wav ing and cheering. We will find our efforts were mistakes. We will scratch our heads and say, Afghanistan was not a victory? The only accomplishment - we killed masses of people and destroyed their country so we could rebuild it. In what way has it reduced terrorism. Why will it be any different with Iraq? NOLAN VICTOR Twin Falis

The bankruptcy filing is the sixth-largest in U.S. history, coving $22.8 billion in assets.

United operates about 1,700 flights a day, or about 20 percent of all U.S. flights. It has the most extensive worldwide route structure of any airline, but also the industry's highest costs.

Passengers are not likely to see any immediate effect on flights or frequent-flier miles, according to both United and industry analysts.

But the bankruptcy filing could set in motion a restructuring of the entire industry, with large airlines forced to become more like their low-cost rivals, with fewer and smaller planes and lower wages for its workers.

United has lost $4 billion in the last two years because of the weak economy, flawed business strategies and fallout from the Sept. 11 attacks.

The airline cut service and laid off nearly 20,000 workers after the terrorist attacks, but it has not come close to making up for the terrorist attacks, but it has not come close to making up for the terrorist attacks, but it has not come close to making up for business travel.

United had hoped to stave off bankruptcy by obtaining $51.8 billion feders! loan guaranize.
But the Air Transportation. Stabilization Board, created to help the industry recover after respenses week as too risky of united $1.5 billion in financing from several banks to continue operating in Chapter 11.

The bankruptcy filing will come at a steep price for the $3,000 employees who own $5 percent of the company. Members of the dockworkers'

TWIN FALLS - Although strides have been made in elimi-nating some of the barriers Latinos face when it comes to votroblems in November show 's still some work to be done.

The Idaho Hispanic Caucus went to work on its Latino Vote 2002 project in July with the goal of getting more voters, especially Latino voters, out to the polls. They made sure farmworkers working long hours in the fields during the harvest knew about absentee voting. They asked county clerks to provide plenty of sample ballots and to make them.

And they got the Idaho secre-tary of state's office to print vot-ing guides in Spanish for the first

Board, Scouts work out concessions differences

FILER A local Boy Scout troop has agreed to sell its concessions equipment to the Twin Falls County Fair Board, but the Scouts were able to strike a deal with the board that will help keep the troop in charge of the stand most of the time.

arrangement," said Laind Stone, an attorney representing Boy Scoul Troop 67 in the master.

The troop sgreed to sell the equipment - which is in the main grandstands booth at the fairgrounds in Filer - for $3,000.

That will give the Fair Board the authority to let other vendors use the booth and equipment during events other than the Twin Falls County Fair. But the Scouts will still have first crack at run-

Here are some of the goals.

Resource allocation – Prioritizing finances, redistributing money as needed.

To ensure that no child is indeed left behind, the district might well have to pour money into before and after-school tutoring programs as well as sumers school. To do so might require a repeat of last year's budget cuts trimming the popular but non-essential programs and employees.

The victims of last year's budget cuts that drew the most public outcry – the district audiologist and the elementary school orchestra—were extras.

Thus, a request for a supplemental levy in the next school year shouldn't come as a surprise.

School/community relations with the Legislature - The key to successful communication with lawmakers is to speak in specifics, not conceptually or in generalizations. That is, specify the exact items and programs that state money goes toward, the exact programs or staff members that will be cut should funding not come Epidemiologist Cheryle Becker said that instead of 30 confirmed cases as reported in recent weeks, the Wood River Valley probably has had 80 cases – 66 confirmed and another 14 probable cases that conform to Centers for the stubborn diseases, known-medically as perusis.

Between September and November, she said, 181 suspected cases in Blaine County had been investigated. None of the sufferest has required hospitalization, she said.

Outside Blaine County, statewide health statistics through the end of October showed that 63 whooping cough cases had been reported for the rest of Idaho, the said. Becker said Blaine County cases involved sufferers from 1 to 63 years old, with an average age of 21 years. The average age for all investigated cases was 34 years, she said.

But the outbreak could have been worse, according to public health response manager Tom Machala.

"Promote testing and resources."

"Frompt testing and treatment of super cases and contacts (by health care providers) has prevented many new cases from occurring," Machala said. He also praised schools for "control efforts that were instrumental in stopping the spread..."

The health district conceded in a statement that I ab testing methods were brought into question early in the outbreak. The lab at the state Department of Health switched from a speedy test that was providing false posites.

JEROME – Two serious discases – one already in Idaho, the other a potential bioterror threat – were subjects of discussion for a group of Magic Valley county commissioners, state legislators and South Central District Health officials Monday.

But while horse owners are being urged to vaccinate their animals against West Nile virus, —there are no plans to offer small—horse description of the public, health district officials said attemeting in Jerome.

Wendi Lane, epidemiologist for South Central, said West Nile virus is a big concern. While there have been 3,775 reported human cases with 216 deaths, horses are perhaps the biggest concern. One horse in Canyon County tested positive for the virus earlier this year.

"Horses are extremely-sensi-flve," Lane said. In the United States, 14,000 horses have contracted the disease.

"Forty percent of horses that get it die," she said.

Horses can and should be vaccinated, Lane said. Horse vaccinated, Lane said. Horse vaccinations for West Nile should be done in March or April, with a booster in July, and a booster every year.

However, GT facilitators are loxury items and not required. Given the uncertainty looming in the upcoming legislative session, there's a chance that the district might cut both positions, leaving no facilitators. Again, it's No Child Left Behind factoring in these decisions, forcing the district to focus more on the students at the lower end of the spectrum, those needing remedial education.

The next administrator will be either Tom Miller, Kerry McMürray, Bruce Hunsaker, Darin Taylor or E. Paul Allred. Commissioners will make their choice this week.

Commissioners decided to open the interviews to the public to give Cassia County residents an understanding of the qualities they were looking for in an administrator. The administrator will make between $44,000 and $66,000 per year. Here's what the candidates had to say in their interviews with the commission:

Cassia County plans for voting precinct changes

Burkley- Cassia County is looking to redraw its voting precinct boundary lines, even out commissioner districts and consolidate some of its 25 precincts. The county commissioners have planned an organizational meeting for Feb. 2 to set the goals for chenging the precinct-lines. Commissioners will invite people from the Cassia County clerk's office, the city of Burley and representatives from the Republican and Democratic party central committees, Cassia County Administrator Tim Hurst said.

The commissioners want to make the changes because according to state law, precinct boundaries must follow visible landmarks, County Attorney Al Barrus said Monday. Not all county precincts comply with this law. Idaho law also demands that the commissioner districts have equal populations. The three districts now are somewhat unequal in population. District 3 is larger then District 1 end District 2.

County Elections Deputy Barbark Mai had recommended reducing the number of precincts in the county to cut down on the cost of elections. With fewer precincts it would be easier to provide handicap-accessible polling places, Hurst said. With lewer precincts, there would be less cost for new voting machines when the county switches from a punch-card ballot, he said.

Some people don't like the idea of eliminating precincts. For sparsely populated areas in Cassia County, such as Parsons and Bridge, the precincts help residents maintain a sense of community identity, Hurst said. The Republican Party has spoken against' reducing precincts because the party likes to have plenty of precinct committeement owork as liaisons with the public.

Commissioners might also alien Commissioners might also align the county precincts inside Burley with the city precincts. Instead of having eight precincts in Burley, the county might match the city's four precincts to cut down on voter confusion, Hurst said.

Other county business Monday included:

* Jall intercom bid opening — commissioners opened two bids for a new intercom system at the Mind-Cassia fall. Both bids sure to replace the current analog system: The controlling doors and intercoms with a digital system. The city system is outdated, and fall workers can't replace parts when they break.

Lassco Sound Systems bid $125,323 to replace the systems and Engineered Control Systems bid $30,990.

This office would coordinate efforts if it became necessary to vaccinate the entire population for smallpox, Machala said.

justify vaccinating the entire population unless an outbreak occurred.

Other issues addressed Monday included:

* Budget cuts – Juntenen gave legislators a revenue report, saying that state revenue holdbackshad forced South Central to eliminate some positions, and that was achieved by attrition.

No impacts to programs have been felt because of workload redistribution, she said. But it would be hard for the district to handle more holdbacks, Juntenen said.

"All of us are holding our breath," she said.

"Seat belts - A proposed primary seat belt hill, which would be presented to legislators during the upcoming session, is of interest to South Central, Juntenen said. The legislation would raise the fine from $5 to $10 - half of which would go to county indigent programs. Those fined would also have to pay court costs. All occupants in a vehicle would have to wear seat belts, the said.

I can said only 56 percent of Idahoans use seat belts now. South Central has been pushing stronger seat belt laws for a number of years.

"As long as one acre is allowed, there is pressure on P and Z to allow it," he said.

He hopes an agency will take the lead in encouraging centralized sewer systems in subdivisions. He referred to a 9,000-area near Buhl, which has the potential for 9,000 one-acre lots, each with its own septic system.

an acre and a half is required, Krir said.

Nurrient pathogen studies are being done, which take into consideration factors such as how deep the water is and how close water is to rock, Krir said. These studies could mean changing septer requirements, he said.

Lincoln County Commissioner Jerry Nance said septic systems in subdivisions in his county have become a huge issue, as many new subdivisions are being built.

Voters

"You have to register and vote at the same time," Watts said. And in Cassia County, some Latinos whom volunteers had reg-istered to vote arrived at the polls-to find their names weren't on the county list.

Luckily, a member of the Idaho
Hispanic Caucus was at the polls in Cassia County with her list, and Latinos were allowed to go ahead and yote, Mabbutt said.

Cassia County Elections Cassia County Elections Deputy Barbara Mai said the problems were due to a clerical error.

"They were close to a precinct boundary, and we had them on the wrong side of the fence," Mai sid. "When we realized that, we sent a couple of poll watchers to pick them my and take them to the right precinct so they bould vote."

That wasn't the only problem in Cassia County. Some Cassia County residents who had crequested absentee ballots said they never received them.

"My daughter has an Angloname," said Gloria Lara, who helped with the voting effort. "She never received the absentee ballot she'd requested. It wasn't just Latinos."
Mai said a couple of people

just Latinos:

Mai said a couple of people showed up on election day to vote, but their names were on a list of those who had requested absentee ballots. Mai said officials called the secretary of state's office to see what to do. County officials signed an affidavit saying the absentee ballot had not been returned and the outers were returned, and the voters were allowed to cast ballots on election

Still, the problems of Nove

"I'm just very disappointed to see such practices are still continuing," said Leo Morales of the Idaho Migrant Council, who helped coordinate the project. "This is why the Latino vote is still low in comparison to other groups."

"What happened in Cassia County is indicative of the work that still needs to be done," Mabbutt said. "Some of the issues we identified on election day still need to be addressed."

Despite the problems, the effort did get more people out to vote. Lara said half of the 300 people they registered in the Mini-Cassia area cast ballots.

Meanwhile, the Idaho Hispanic Caucus will continue to work at getting more people to the polis sa well as getting them involved in the political machine serving on school boards, city councils and in the Legislature.

"One of the main goals of the project is to empower our community members so they may be more directly involved with the policy making that affects their lives," Morales said.

Lara said they'll start earlier this year - in January - to get the word out about the importance of voting. She said she'd like to see more voting materials, particularly ballots, translated into Spanish.

"We have a very high Latino population," Lara said. "If they want to get involved in what's going on in our community, they need to vote. If you don't have a voice in community issues that affect us."

The agency had spent about $80,000 on pursuing an option of placing its offices in the old Hailey Medical Center, but that is no longer an option, as the group learned that the medical center would not be feasible for the project, Spencer said.

The board also considered a location in Bellevue, but decided that would also not be adequate.

The health district has consulted with an architect but is not yet at the stage where it has plans on paper, Juntenen said.

The board will later vote on whether to go with the smaller or the larger option, she said.

A suggestion was made that if the agency builds the larger facility, a portion of the building could be rented out until the extra space is needed. But board members were opposed to renting out the space. "Personally, I'm not in favor of being a landlord," said board member Donald Billingsly. Board member Marvin Hempleman agreed but was in favor of going with the larges space option because it would be there when needed. make exceptions.-An ex "I-never mune ception disproves the rule." — Arthur Conan Doyle

Most of us know instinctively that we lead low cards from sults unless we have a suit headed by two touching honors. There are always exceptions to every rule, and on the hand that follows from the semifination of the Spingoid Trophy, both Wests did not fail the test when their chance came to break the rules.

Both Souths, playing a strong no-trump, opened one diamond nod rebid one no-trump-by their partners. Both Wests led a heart to the queen and king, then spill their heart honors on the next round of the suit and were allowed to hold the trick Back came a club to dummy's queen and disown to the suit and were al-lowed to hold the trick. Back came a club to dummy's queen and dis-couragement from their partner, and a spade to the king and ace.

— At this point, West knows that-declarer apparently has seven or right points in hearts and clubs, and the decision to attack spades suggests the queen and kings. There is therefore no room for the diamond ace. Both defenders re-alized it was right to play dia-monds, and a small card looks ob-vious; but both promptly laid down the king and played a sec-ond diamond to their partner's ace. This let East play a third dia-mond through declarer's 9-7 for one down.

mond through declarer's 5-7 for one down.

Note that starting with a low di-amond leaves the wrong hand on lead after the ace and king have been played. Back on lead, declar-er can linesse in hearts, then scamper home with eight tricks — three hearts, four clubs and a

BID WITH THE ACES

West North East 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ 2 ♣ Pass Pass South

ANSWER: Pass, rather than re-opening with a double. Just be-cause the opponents stop low does not mean you have to bid. Here, your club cards do not ap-pear to be lying well, and if the hand is a misfit, you could run into serious problems.

Iowa's Banks nabs Player of Year honors

For a guy who never started a college football game before this season, Iowa quarterback Brad Banks caught on pretty fast.

Three NFL contenders emerge

Only two of the 12 playoff reams are set, and the APC is particularly muddled.

At least Sunday's NFL games did what no other weekend has did what no other weekend has done this season, separating the from the ones just hopin to one to San Diego next month.

The chief contenders are Tampa Bay, Oakland and Philadelphia. The Eagles get an asterisk - the asterisk being, of course, Donovan McNab's health for the playoffs.

There are other teams that look poised to make some noise in the postseason, of course. Green Bay, Tennessee, Miami and

Miami and N e w England come to mind, as do GOLDBERG

San Francisco and New Orleans.
Atlanta is probably a year and a couple of top wide receivers away.

But with three weeks to go in the regular season, the Bucs, Raiders and Eagles are the most likely to push on. And wouldn't Jon Gruden and Tampa Bay against his old pais from Oakland make an interesting Super Bowl?

A short rundown:

Tampa Bay (10-3). Warren
Sapp said that at one point during the Bucs' 34-10 thrashing of Atlanta, Michael Vick told him:

Tcan't believe you guys are that fast." Sapp has been known to embellish a story, but in this case, Vick's alleged assessment of the Tampa defense is correct. It certainly was fast enough to hold down the fastest quarterback in NFL history.

The Bucs have an offense, too.

all season and Keenan McCardal and Joe Juravicius added to Reynhaws Johnson give the quarterback three big targets. Others of the purchase three big targets. The control of the purchase three big targets. But not year has everything these days. And Tampa Bay's defense, feasuring Sapp, Dearlck Brooks, Simson Rice, John Lynch and Ronde Barber, is as god as ever. It's allowed just 159 points, 48 fewer than Philadelphia, which ranks second. The Eagles are why the Bucs need bome-field advantage. Tampa Bay has never won in temperatures below 40 degrees, has been knocked out of the playoffs in Philadelphia the last two years, and lost there again in October. The Bucs should win at the Lions and Bears (breaking the cold streak) and probably will beat Pirisburgh at home, but they need one Philadelphia loss. The Eagles are home to Washington and at Dellias and the Glants. One positive for Tampa: The Bucs beat Green Bay and have a tlebreaker there, and no one wants to go to Lambeau in January.

first-quarter touchdown passes of 56 and 36 yards as the Hawkeyes rolled to a 57-21 win over Akron. Two games later, fowa and Banks got a taste of national exposure against lown State. It did not end, well. Banks fumbled on consecutive possessions in the third quarter, allowing the Cyclones to rally from a 17-point halftime deficit for a 36-31 victory. Two games later, flows played at Penn State. And Banks was awescome, leading the Hawkeyes to a 35-13 third-quarter lead before the Lions staged a furious rally to force overtime.

Richard Jefferson added 19 points and Rodney Rogers had 18 as the Nets had six players in double figures in atoning for an 82.75 loss in Phoenix on No. 27 – New Jersey's lowest-coring game

But Banks settled down, threw a 6-yard TD pass in OT, and Iowa prevailed, 42-35. Up next was Purdue, perhaps Banks' defining game. Iowa trailed 28-24 and had the ball with 2:16 left, and no, time, outs. Banks calmly drove the Hawkeyes 87 yards for the winning touchdown a 7-yard pass to Dallas Clark on fourth down with 1:07 to 80. Final score: Iowa 31, Purdue 28. MIAMI (AP) - Ricky Williams put on a show Monday night that Roone Arledge would have loved. Williams ran for 216 yards, including a career-best 63-yard touchdown run, and the Miami Dolphins moved into a tie for the AFC East lead by beating the Chicago Bears 27-9.

It was the first game on "Monday Night Football" since the death Thursday of Arledge, who created the show in 1970. Williams became just the third running back to reach the 200-yard milestone in consecutive games, and the first since Earl Campbell in 1980. He carried 31 times, scored twice and overtook Kanasa City's Priest Holmes for the NFL rushing lead with 1,500 yards.

Williams, who ranged a team-record 228 yards last week in a loss at Buffalo, managed an impressive encore. He had 119 yards by halftime for his fourth 100-yard game in a row, and his eighth this season. Williams scored on a 15-yard run in the second quarter, then sealed the victory in the third quarter on a simple counter up the middle.
