Another possible economic booster is a distance learning center, where Challis-area students could take classes from the College of Southern Idaho.

Snowmobilers – currently the most reluctant group, Simpson said – could be won over by legally designating some back-country areas for their use. One proposal calls for a recreation trail linking Fairfield with Stanley.

"That's economic stimulus for Stanley," Simpson said. "They snow machine in and stay the night and head back the next day."

Success hinges on providing certainty through federal law for all interested parties, he said. Simpson is seeking advice from two now-retired veterans of the Idaho wilderness issue. Back in the late 1980s, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus and Republican U.S. Sen. Jim McClure formed an unlikely – and ultimately unsuccessful – partnership to resolve the issue.

More cash-strapped schools look to bus fees to help with finances

BOSTON (AP) - Lawmakers and school officials in Massachusetts have a stark message for parents who think their taxes already pay for school bus transportation. No more free rides.

Cash-strapped public schools trying to hang on to their teachers are increasingly turning to busing fees to raise money. The move has angered parents and raised concerns that children may be forced to use more dangerous means—like walking—to get to school. "It seems like this country can ufford a lot of other things, but we can't send our students to school on buses?" asked Jane Million, spokeswoman for the National Association of Elementary School Principals. the control Bedke, R-Oakley, that could lead to real reform in education spending. For years, Idahoans have been told by educrats that Idaho needs to spend more on schools for the spending rises, the added money often spending rises, the added money often seems to disappear into higher salaries for administrators and teachers, with little evident impact on the quality of Tubblic education.

Bublic education.

Bedke's proposal could cap what the state spends and it would create more detailed accountability for spending.

The new plan has been discussed for weeks by the governor's office and members of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, the legislative budget writing panel. The key element is a plan to separate the public schools appropriation into five budget areas: administration salaries, teacher salaries.

plan to separate the possible of the budget areas: administration salaries, teacher salaries, operations, children's programs, and facilities.

Under this structure, organs, and facilities.

Under this structure, increased funding intended to offset higher costs in student testing, new curriculum, or technology needs would go directly to those areas. And taxpayers would have a better understanding of public school spending, thanks to intent language that determines how and where school funding is to be used.

Private businesses commonly use this detailed approach to budgeting, and it's long overdue in Idaho's school budgeting process. With nearly half of the state's general fund going into public schools, it makes no sense to make such a large appropriation with no public breakdown of how it is to be spent.

In addition to the changes in the appropriation structure, JFAC's new plan would include statutory changes in school funding to create savings over time. These measures would include:

According to estimates from the Legislative Services Office, these changes could save more than $115 million over five years.

the Legistative of the Legistative of the Colfice, these changes could save more than $115 million over five years.

One more element of the new plan is to create a Public Education Stabilization Fund. Assuming Gov. Dirk Kempthorne gets the $943 million he wants for education, lawmakers propose to send $930 million to Idaho schools. The other $13 million would go into the stabilization fund, to be used in emergencies such as budget holdbacks. The educarcy, predictably, is howling. Yet Bedke's proposal is founded on common-sense principles, in harmony with the spirit of accountability most taxpayers have come to expect in state spending.

Perhaps the only problem with the new JFAC plan for public schools is its timing. It is emerging late in a difficult session. Such an important proposal should receive plenty of debate, and that could mean it needs to wait until next year's session.

But lawmakers are on the right road. As a relatively new player on the House Education Committee and JFAC, Bedke deserves credit

Lounge lizard poll yields interesting results

On Saturday night, I conducted what I hope will be the first in a series of polls to gauge the mood of the country on a variety of issues. This poll took place at a lounge in Ios Angeles, at 12:40 a.m. There were nine respondents, representing what I believe to be a cross section of the nation, or at least something pretty darn close. The mood was relaxed and informal.

What emerged was a startling portrait of modern American life and a glimpse into the collective psyche of a nation struggling to find itself in the rubble of these daying times. (Note: Because of the limited number of respondents, the margin of error may deviate somewhat from that of more traditional polling methods.)

I began with the topic foremost

I began with the topic foremost I began with the topic foremost on the minds of Americans, the war in Imq. According to my data, 100 percent of the country now supports it. Also interesting to note. 100 percent of Americans claim they have always supported it. This is rathe contrast to the alleged peace marches we've seen on television. Good news for MIKE ARMSTRONG the president indeed. But there's bad news too.

Fully 33 percent of the country is now unemployed. Not since the Great Depression have numbers like this been recorded, and there is not one to the doubt that the situation of the country is now the state of the country of the c movie.'

Shockingly, the number of Americans who own cell phones is so low that it's statistically insignificant. And 45 percent of Americans continue to be optimistic 100 percent of the country purchases lottery tickets each week and 89 percent of them are convinced that they will eventually hit the jackpot. More than 44 percent of the country intends to open a bar with their winnings, while the rest of the nation has no idea what they would do with the money.

As my research continued into the week hours, 11 percent of the country intends to open a bar with their winnings, while the rest of the nation has no idea what they would do with the money.

As my research continued into the week hours, 11 percent of the country, 11 percent of the country in the property of the country provided in the stope of my poli significantly, while inversely affecting its accuracy. At least, I think that's how it works. In any event, the polling results became quite controversal during this stage.

When asked the question, "Have you been charged with a felony?" a full 75 percent of the country refused to answer. In fact, 125 percent of Americans were so troubled by the question that 25 percent of the country had to restrain him from assault had to restrain him from assaulting me.

It was around this time that I decided to conclude my research. Interestingly, 100 percent of the country thought that I should pay the bar tab. A vast majority of Americans were quite vocal about it despite my protestations. The net result was a sudden and very unpleasant encounter with the same 12.5 percent of the country who had moments earlier country who had moments earlier country who had moments earlier record. I decided that this segment of the population was to be avoided in the future. I was left with a fascinating snapshot of our nation. Clearly, we remain a spirited country—defiant, strident, steadinst, resolute and decisive. Wer far from perfect, in fact a whopping 78 percent may be alcoholics, and at times we're downright strange. Flexibility is the key word.
There is fear on the part of the environmental community that the proposal is a set of buzz words that signals an increase in stocking rates, said Barry Rose, a spokesman for the BLM Idaho. But the goal is to give ranchers "increased flexibility remaining increased flexibility remaining the said. The underlying pricing pricing the said. The underlying pricing while conserving the land. "I think it would increase protection," Rose said.

Judi Brawer, a staff attorney for the Boise environmental law organization Advocates for the West, said the proposals sound like they are meant to help everybody get along better, but she is skeptical that will be the outcome.

"Flexibility is just a way to give the bad actors what they want," she said.

From the ranchers' perspective, the Bush administration has brought with it a welcome shift in attitude toward rangeland policy.

Ranchers definitely feel like they are being heard by the new administration, said Brenda Richards, federal and state lands committee chairwoman with the Idaho Cattle Association.

TWIN FALLS — The uniform voice that shot down the Twin Falls High School block schedule proposal last month has since splintered.

In trying to form a parent committee to research and develop an alternative schedule, suspicion has taken over, with some parents grumbling that policies and outcomes are already pre-determined.

"There's a lot of miscommunication and mistrust," said Ken Edmunds, a parent chosen to help form the committee.

Once communication begins and the committee is created, however, parents' concerns should be alleviated, Edmunds said.

Minidoka County school bond issue moves forward

RUPERT - The money to pay for a number of projects in the Minidoka County School District should be available by the end of May, school officials learned at Monday's School Board meeting.

Last month, school district vorters agreed to let district officials convert a lease option loan into a bond issue, to generate 51 million more than the district had berowed two years ago. The district is gaining the 51 million because of lower interest rates available today.

The extra money will be used for several construction projects, including renovations in the library at Heyburn Elementary School to remedying a mold problem at Big Valley Elementary.

School Board members started the six-week process to sell the bonds Monday when they approved a resolution appointing Zions Bank the underwriter. That resolution also approved the pre-liminary official statement and notice of sale.

The board opted to use a negotiated sale, rather than a public sale. Bond Counsel Nick Miller said a negotiated sale means less notice is needed for the sale and

The Murdochs get together at almost every holliday. This Easter, in fact, Patti hosted at least 50 kin-folk in and around her house, a job that included feeding them all.

That, along with cooking for church dinners or other social activities, has Mirrdoch cooking for a crowd "about 20 times a year. I always have my share cooking, but it desart intimide me to cook for a crowd."

In fact, she probably has a harder time cooking in smaller amounts, since she's used to cooking for crowds—or even just for the six children she's fed, or the grandchildren who frequent her home.

"I send leftovers to my parents," she said. Luckily, her mom and dad live within walking distance, so sharing leftovers isn't a big deal. And all the food gets eaten instead of going to waste.

Bisquick offers supper-time ease

The Hartford Courant

I am not a baker. My brownies come out dry. My cookies come out dry. My control of courably. And frankly, with three children, a husband who works late and a career. I just don't have time to mix, mash and mush together ingredients, let alone wait around for them to rise into perfect bundt cakes or muffins. But then I discovered Bisquick.

I grabbed it from the store shelf one day by accident while reaching for my usual pancake mix. L was hurrying, home-to-make a quick dinner of flapiacks and microwave sausage links. I made the Bisquick pancakes and cuked the box on the shelf with the rest of my pre-packaged products, figuring I'd only use it again some Sunday morning if I had the energy to make pancakes again.

try that for my book cum meeting.

The next time I went to the store, I bought the 60-ounce size of Bisquick. I had started to really depend on it. I even went online and ordered the Bisquick recipe book.

Still, I stopped short of joining the Bisquick club. My Bisquick dependency was starting to scare me. The product had always seemed just so 1950s housewifey to me. I wondered if next I'd be donning high heels and pearls to vacuum.

donning nign neces was peased vacuum.

One day while waiting for my daughter to finish her after-school drama class I noticed the woman sitting next to me was cutting cereal box tops for the Box Tops for Education program. I was killing time by thumbing through my Bisquick recipe book looking for something to make for dinner. We glanced at each other and both started laughing. "OK, I feel embarrassed. I can't believe I'm thumbing through a Bisquick recipe book," I said.

"Why? Bisquick's great," she said. 'My daughter loves the biscuits. I make them all the time."

And these days, when many food companies are developing quick-meal products to meet increasing demand for no-fuss dinners, Bisquick fits right in.

"And products, You buy it for one reason. Then the box is out and you say, 'Oh, my gosh,' I can do so many things,' said Shelly Dvorack, a spokes-woman for Bisquick.

Dvorack said the product is attracting a more diverse demographic group than in past years as more mothers-on-the-go tell each other about it.

"One of the best sales wehicles we have is word of mouth," said Dvorack. "Somebody sees a recipe in a magazine, tries it and it spreads through the group."

So I was relieved to find out I was not alone in my Bisquick dependency. But still, I discovered there are some drawbacks to Bisquick.

My infatuation came to an end when I made pancakes, biscuits, the cheeseburger pic, the taco pic, the blueberry pound cake and the velvet crumb cake all in the same week.

My kids started to complain. Everything tasted a bit like pancakes, they said. I agreed. We had bottomed out on Bisquick, Enough of that yellow box, I decided - for a little while, anyway.

There is usually plenty of iron in the soil, but that iron is chemically tied up because of the high H. Sulfur acidifies the soil and helps plants "reach" iron.

Not so long ago, when Vidalias were first marketed nationwide, the opening of the brief sweet onion season in April was a celbratory event. Now, due to "controlled atmosphere" storage they are sold through much of the fail. To complete a year of sweetness, look for OSO sweets from Chile in January, February and March; Texas sweets in March and April; Walla Walla sweets (from Washington State) in June, July and August; large AmeriSweet from Grand Rapids, Mich., in September and October; and Hawail's Maui onions through December.

Spring veggie fling

Fresh produce makes cooking fun, easy

Milwaukee Journal Sentine

Wild, nutty morel mushrooms and garlicky-onion ramps soon will begin popping up at farmers markets and on restaurant menus that celebrate seasonal produce— nudging aside such winter staples— accessed polatoes turning and mudging aside such winter staples—as sweet potatoes, turnips and parsnips. Tender asparagus and tart rhubarb, the better-known darlings of Spring, won't be far behind.

dartings or symmetric people can hardly wait to shed sweaters and bulky coats, chefs jump for joy when warmer weather finally coaxes delicate, brightly colored vegetables are not because it finally coaxes delicate, brightly colored vegetables are for me carrier, (Rhubarb is a back from the carrier, (Rhubarb is a vegetable).

"Cooking in spring and summer is easy," said Brenton Hammer, chef de cuisine at Celia restaurant, at the Pfister Hotel in Milwaukee, "You can't go wrong, And (customers) get every bit as excited as I do to see these things come in."

The most challenging time to be a chef is around February or March, "when you've been working with and looking at the same produce for four or five months," but have been suffered to the produce for four or five months," I hard because you're so cleate spring. So much is available in April, May and June."

That's not to say Hammer doesn't appreciate winter's root vegetables. By fall, "I'm always happy to see them and work with them again," he said.

Everything becomes more delicate in spring, however, including sauces. In winter, sauces tend to be stock-based and heavier, Hammer said. I lighter and vegetable based. I lighter and vegetable based in season, Hammer and several of the country. The sum of the country and because it's grown in warm regions of the country. But locally grown apparagus always tastes better because it's freshyl picked and in season, Hammer and several other chefs agreed.

Ramps – wild onions with a alightly stronger flavor than leeks and other onions are already on the country. Wisconsin in May, right now are coming from other parts of the country. Wisconsin's ramp and morel season lasts about three weeks, according to Rink DaVee, manager for Home Grown Wisconsin, a coup of 25 farmers from Viroqua to sun Prairie that links farmers for restaurants seeking locally account of the country.

coop of 25 farmers from Viroqua to Sun Prairie that links farmers to restaurants seeking locally grown food. V DaVee noted that many chefs like to extend a short and much-anticipated season by bringing in produce from other parts of the country in April, then switching to locally grown items in May, when they become available. The same seasonal principle-holds true for summer vegetales, though some chefs stretch that season longer than others. "Most restaurants around town serve tomato, fresh mozzarella and basil salad in winter," said Brandon Wolff, chef de cuisine at Dream Dance, the restaurant at Potawatomi Bingo Casino. "But that doesn't make sense because tomatoes aren't in season then." Fiddlehead ferns also are finding their way onto restaurants spring menus. The young, edible, tightly coiled fern frond has a flavor akin to a cross between asparagus, green beans and okra, and stars in side dishes and salads.

Mint: Must-have herb with can-do enthusiasm

Mint is an unruly herb.

Mint is an unruly herb.
Give it a hole in the ground and it takes over your garden.
But in spite of its colonial tendencies, mint belongs in every herb garden. The leaves of no other herb, none, not one, match the fruity pungency of its menthol notes.

The plant's noble chemistry means that the leaves smell divine when cut or trampled. Add to that, mint is just plain pretty. Left to bolt, it produces a fabulous array of white, pink, lavender and purple flowers.

Janore advice to grow mint in will have a man of the man of the mint grown in America goes). The only sure-fire way to keep where most of the mint grown in 'America goes).

The only sure-fire way to keep mint-roots; in-their place is to grow the plant in a container. It's pretty and happiest in a relatively large one. It will need a sunny spot and, during summer, daily watering. You can sink the pot in the garden, to help stem evaporation.

the garden, to help stem evaporation.
Or, for a bit of artful jumble a la Laura Ashley, you can place a darge pot in the center of the herb garden, plant it with a selection of mints – spearmint, curly mint, chocolate mint – and then plant other flowering cultinary herbs around the base, such as dill and fennel. There will be enough for you to snip for the kitchen, and plenny left to flower for the bess.
Gardeners are so intimidated by mint's vigor that it is not a big plant with seed companies. Most only list spearmint, or Mentha spicata, the lush green variety with spring green, elegandly serrated leaves.

It became dominant for good reason.

It germinates in about two weeks, grows to about 2 feet tall, and has a rounded, fruity flaws that can serve well in everything from mint tea to Greek salad to tabbouleh. A variant, called English mint, is not quite as delightfully ruffled and has a sharper flavor.

delightfully ruffled and has a sharper flavor.

But shop In nurseries or at tarmers markets, and one can run into a tantalizing variety of mint. At the risk of defoliating the merchandise, do always try to sneak a taste before you buy. Peppermint, Mentha piperitu, has a particularly penetrating flavor. By contrast, the citrus mints, lemon and orange mint, are relatively mild and taste like a basil-geranium cross. Other mints, such as curly mint, silver mint and pineapple or variegated mint, are downright pungent and should be used with discretion. Chocolate mint has a high, clean flavor, perfect for chewing on your way home from a bar. However, keep in mind that the herb's flavor is not just a question of variety. It can be

Flyers cruise to Game 7 victory over Leafs

PHILADELPHIA — After all the games and all the overtimes, the Philadelphia Flyers finally put away the Toronto Maple Leafs. Mark Recchi scored twice and Justin Williams had a goal and two assists, leading the Flyers to a series-clinching 6-1 rout of Toronto on Tuesday night.

The Flyers, advancing to the second round for the first time in three years, will play Ottawa in the Eastern Conference semifinals. The Senators beat the Flyern in five games in the first round last year, holding them to a record-low two goals.

The Maple Leafs had won four straight first-round series.

Simon Gagne and Keith Primeau also scored for Philadelphia, which lost in the opening round four of the last five years. It was the Flyers' first victory in a Game? since they bear Pittsburgh in the second round in 1989.

Gary Roberts scored Toronto's only goal.

For the first time since the 1950 Stanley Cup finals, Games 6 and 7 were played on consecutive nights. The Maple Leafs beat the TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls catcher Brett Miller's sharply catcher Brett Miller's sharply to the seventh inning as the sports Bruins railied to down and complete or the nonconference Tages.

But Bruin com Matt Rasmussen wasn't at all pleased with the play of his squad.

"We came out flat and that was pretty disappointing." he said. "But then we decided to play late."

The Bruins (14-2 overall, 3-0 conference) got three straight singles to start the seventh inning from Mike Littleton, Brandon Salinas and Luke Hawkins. And then a couple of hit batters and a Jerome error set up Miller's shot. The Tigers (9-3) came out quickly. # Boise Cascade chief doesn't expect rebound soon products company to fully rebound fin the near future.

BOISE - Boise Cascade Corp, reported a irst-quarter 2003 net loss of $27.5 million uesday, and Chairman George Harad coss not expect the Idaho-based forest roducts company to fully rebound in the car future.

"At this point, we see few signs of sustained recovery in our businesses." Hard said. "Accordingly, we expect Boise's performance in the second quarter to be similar to or modestly improved over first-quarter results."

The Boise-based company, which has a corrugated container plant in Burley, makes paper, office products and building supplies and owns 2.3 million acres of timber in the United States.

It had a net loss of $6.6 million, or 17 cents per share, in the first quarter of 2002. The company lost $6.2 million in fourth-quarter 2002, or 5 cents a share.

Sales in the first quarter of 2003 anteressed 4 percent to $1.9 hillion, compared with $1.8 hillion in the same period A year ago and also in fourth-quarter 2002.

Monroutine items in first quarter 2003 ortaled $14.9 million after taxes, or 26 cents per share. They include a charge of $6.1 million, or 11 cents per share, for employee-related costs with the company's cost-reduction program.

Solic Cascade is criting 700 jobs – about $1.0 million and $1 million for a new accounting standard for asset retirement obligations and $4.7 million for a new standard for vendor allowances. Without those charges, the company still had a first-quarter loss of $12.6 million, or 27 cents per share.

Harad said sales and income in the office products business are likely to decline in the second quarter from current levels, as they typically do, but year-over-year sales comparisons should continue to be positive.

Before the charge for employee-related costs, Boise Office Solutions' operating income was $29.9 million, down from $37.4 million in first quarter 2002. Sales increased 6 percent to $538 million, from a year ago. Harad also expects wood products markets to strengthen modestly as better weather allows the building season to get under way.

Boise Building Solutions had an operating loss of $8.5 million in first quarter 2003, compared with an income of $8.8 million a year ago. Average plywood and lumber prices during that time fell 5 percent and 14 percent, respectively.

The operating loss in Boise Paper Solutions was $700,000, compared with a loss of $10.8 million a year ago. Average product prices rose 4 percent in that period and manufacturing costs were down 1 percent. Hard predicted paper business results should be similar in the next quarter.

results should be similar in the next quar-ter.

First quarter sales for the paper division increased 6 percent to $468 million from 2002.

Stocks surge on earnings reports

NEW YORK (AP) – Investors sent the Nasdaq composite and Standard & Poor's 500 indexes to their highest levels in three months Tuesday after better-than-expected earnings boosted optimism that corporate profits are improving.

are improving.

Analysts said investors were also reassured by President Bush's comments indicating that Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan would likely be reappointed.

The Nasdaq advanced 26.99 to 1,451.36, the highest since Jan. 14. He S&B 300 index gained 1936 to 911.37, the best level since Jan. 16. The Dow Jones industrial average, meanwhile, closed up 156.09 at 8,484.99. It was the best finish since March 21.

Still, if questions do arise, ir's best to try to answer them. My only advice with children who are grade school age or younger is to tread gingerly.

"They could just be told that the government gets the money from taxes or things like U.S. savings bonds," said Barbara Phipps, an associate professor at the University of Kansas and director of the school's Center for Economic Education.

Vicky Collins, a Dallas area financial adviser, suggests giving younger children some perspective and relevancy.

"I think one of the hardest things is ... to understand what a billion dollars even is," said Collins.

APRIL 23RD IS-YOUR BIRTHJAY — this will be a doingtuctive year where personal goals are realized; a 'year also for playing safe. You have leadership qualities and an air of authority. An excellent time for channeling surplus energies and embarking on new ventures. Career changes likely, in August/September. Parents and older family members require attention. Your sexiness intrigues. July will be memorable, and you'll receive invibations to several big events.

'ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Financial, legal and career endeavors prove successful today despite unwillingness to take risks. Expansion to do with finances is likely. You accomplish

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"Some kick lies in not getting what you thought you wanted, but getting what you have."

— Garrison Keiller

Some suit combinations lend mackets to easy analysis; some are far more difficult to calculate. Focus your attention on the club suit today and decide how you should want to ensure that you lose no tricks in the suit. At can be done, but at the table and woken up South to that each when he played four hearts, he received the defense of two rounds of spades and as hist to the diamond jack. He won in hand and drew trumps in three rounds, then played a club to dummy's are and a club to his hand. When the bad spill came to life, he cashed the ace of diamonds and his club winner, then cut loss with a club. But East could take the trick and cash his diamond winner, one down.

with a club. But east count was the trick and cash his diamond winner, one down. The winning solution does not require second sight or an early club fineses. Instead, after winning the diamond king, South draws trumps in three rollings. Now he cashes the club king, leads a filamond to dummy's acc, then exits with a diamond. If West takes this trick, he must give a takes this trick, he must give a takes the rick, he must give a takes the club would travel it. The best he can do is to lead a politic of the country of the countr

2 Pass

ANSWER: Bid three diamonds. Your partner has a game-forcing hand with long spades, but you do not know whether to play notrumps or spades — and slam is not know whether to play no-trumps or spades — and slam is still in the picture. Your bid asks for further information. If partner bids three no-trump, you will be happy to pass.
