The FBI had been hoping it would not have to wait for the DNA results to determine if the boy is Tristen. They had hoped that quicker tests, such as finger-prints, blood types and dental records, would give them enough information to be certain.

The boy, was brought to an Evanston hospital in February.

Staying at home
Because of his MS and lack of mobility, Peterson needs more care than most. A certified nurses and comes out several times a week, and a registered nurse visits at least a few times a month. Still, it only costs about $1,500 a month to provide health care to Peterson in his own home, and that includes nursing, thegapy and supplies. It would cost at least $4,000 a month - almost three times as much - to keep him in a nursing home, Gates Mogelson said.

Home health care services allow 90-year-old Paul Magee to live independently noting the series about 20 years of the series and 20 years and 10 years of the series attention to the people who will be affected by Medicare cuts.

But even worse, Eacker said, is the effect that leaving the com-fort of their own homes for nurs-ing homes would have on Peterson's and Magee's quality of life. Ing and Peterson's and Mages of life.

"I'd hate it," Peterson said. "I'd who to to go to one."

"I'd hate it, reterson sand va-really hate to go to one."
And what does Magee think about spending the remainder of his golden years in a nursing home?
"Not on your life," said Magee,

"Not on your life," said Magee, who receives not only care, but friendship from the certified nurses ades who visit him beery other day in the home he shares with his 9-year-old aprictor poodle, Jedi. "Ive gat everything I need. I own my own house, and I can live on $1,000 a nouth. I even like some of my own cooking, Im set in my ways now. Ive had 90 years to do it."
Since MS took away his ability to walk back in the mid-'90s. Peterson, a former professional race horse trainer and farmer, has an a paccara campain to get registal bed in his home. Five years ago, he and Jeanette decided to build a handicaped-accessible home on their 20 acres between Twin Falls and Filer.

"He said, 'All I want is a lot of windows and a lot of animals to watch," Jeanette said.

Today, Peterson has quite a view outside the large picture windows of his living room, Just outside the patio door is a fish pond complete with croaking frogs and a babbling creek, and in the distance, he can see the couple's many animals, including watusi, longhorn, belted galloway and Scottish highlander cattle, bison, yaks, muntjack deer, miniature donkeys, a camel and a kangaroo. And there's Buster, their huge 8-month-old Great Pyrenees, and Jakers, the small, calico cat that keeps Buster in line.

Making noise

Meanwhile, home health care agencies say they will continue to fight for people like Peterson and Magee, a World War II U.S. Army veteran who worked as a cameraman and studio producer at KMVT for 25 years before retiring in the early 1980s. He has been on his own for more than 20 years since his wife, Katherine, died. Today, he treasures his independence and being able to remain in his home, where he enjoys listening to old country classics by Hank Snow, Merle Haggard and Randy Travis.

Haggard and Randy Travis.
"They've lived all their lives saving for retirement." Eacker said. "They become till, and we want to give them their independence a reason to live. Home care will save money in the long run."

Eacker and Gates-Mogelson hope the legislators who recive the postcards will feel the same way.

"The louder the noise we make, the more they'll be inclined to oil that squeaky wheel," Gates-Mogelson said.

With the United States noping to transform post-Saddam Iraq into a democracy that could become a beacon for the region, political reform has become a prime topic of discussion in the Arab world. Restless populations sions that would quiet public discontent without threatening their grip on power.

"At no time do I ever remember a period when the demand for political reform runs deeper, through all layers of society, than it does today." said Abdel Moneim Said, director of the Al Ahram Center for Political and Strategic Studies.

Some observers, Arab, and Western, scoff at the notion that Iraq — with its tribalism, religious fractures and history of violent instability – can become democratic or a model for change elsewhere. They say democracy has no tradition in the Arab world, implying it is somehow incompatible with Islam or Arab culture.

"I find that idea terribly insulting," said All Salem, a prominent Cairo writer, "Are we to assume that Arabs are unequal, a lesser people than those evertywhere who want democracy" He points out that Indonesia, the world's most populous Muslim country, is a democracy.

"Democracy didn't have a chance because Arab regimes are a democracy.

"Democracy didn't have a chance because Arab regimes are fascist, repressive and ugly," said flishage Kassem, chairman of the Egyptian. Human Rights Commission. "It has nothing to do with Islam. We are Arabs who happen to be Muslims. It would have been the same if we were Christians of Buddhists."

The frustration that grips millions of Arabs is rooted in the awareness that their political systems are stagnant and that their civil societies remain undeveloped. Power remains in the hands of governments that are not accountable to their citizens. Ecanomics have not been modernized to reflect the new global order and cannot provide sufficient jobs for the 70 percent of the population that is younger than 25, Young people feel disentratives of the proposition of the population that is younger than 25, Young people feel disentrative of the proposition of the proposition of the property of the property of the proposition of the property of the proper cal structures where new ideas and fresh faces are treated with suspicion and nothing seems to change except that power passes from fathers to sons.

Palestinian movement for 44 years.

In the last four years, leadership has passed from father to son in three monarchies - Morocco, Jordan and Bahrain and in Syria, authorities amended the constitution, which says presidents must be at least 40, so 34-year-old Bashar Assad, an excolonel, could succeed his father, Hafez, also an excolonel. Certainly the images of Saddam's statues being pulled down by gubilant Iraqis will not be quickly forgotten by Aral colonel, could be a supposed to the supposed of the supposed by the s

And indeed, in the current atmosphere of introspection, there are signs Arab leaders realize change cannot be delayed indefinitely.

Petnsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, who stubbornly clings to the view that homosexuality is a sin. Santorum's April 7 Associated Press interview was made public last week. The Republican senator made comments that have been olereded as downright bigsted. How, dare Santorum, his critics furne, compare gays and lesbians to bigamists, polygamists, adulterers and the incestuous?

Because he was talking about a legal matter, that's how. Santorum was saying that in 13 states some sexual acts - some focused exclusively on homosexuals, others on everybody are illegal. Other states, at one time or another, have banned biganny, polygamy, incest and adultery as well. Some live thrown in fornication and gambling to boot. Whether the law targeting homosexual conduct remains is up to the Supreme Court, which will

Gephardt plan applies the pressure with health plan

EENE, N.H. - The bold plan for near-universal health care offered last week by Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri sent echoes across the entire Democratic presidential field. Sens. John Kerry of Massachusetts and John Edwards field. Sens. John Kerry of Massachusetts and John Edwards of North Carolina, who were campaigning in New Hampshire over the weekend, were asked at voter forums if they could match it—which, at this point, they cannot. Vermont's former governor, Howard Dean, a physician whose campaign posters proclaim "The Doctor Is In," paid tribute in his own acerbic fashion by trashing the ambitious Gephard proposal as" pije in the sky." Dean has hoped that his own strong health care record would sustain the early momentum he has gained from his outspoken opposition to the Iron war, but he plainly is threatened with losing that franchise.

The first questioner demanded to know what the former trial lawyer's position was on "corporal punishment." Plainly puzzled, Edwards asked a question of his own: "What do you mean by corporal punishment?" As he later confessed, he was on the werge of coming out byldly "against beating 6-year-olds" when the questioner corrected himself: "I meant capital punishment." The next question came from a man wearing the campaign button of Ohio Rep. Dennis Kucinich. Edwards had salted his speech with a Reaganesque line, expressing the hope that the United States would once again be seen by the world "as that shining city on the fill, a beaon of freedom and democracy." Kucinich's man quoted back the senator's words and then asked in scornful tones, "What year was that" when the United States so shone?

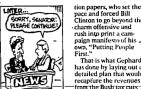

That's been our entire history, Edwards said. "Tell it to the Native Americans and the African Americans and the African Americans and they were off on a spirited debate, which ended in prolonged applause for Edwards' defense of America's good name. Despite such diversions, the overwhelming sense I received from my first prolonged dip into the home of the leadoff primary is that Democrats are dead-serious about real issues and nearly desperate.

Another tax credit was established for small crude oil and natural gas producers to increase domestic production. Beyond the silliness of preferring greater domestic production from small companies rather than from large ones, energy prices are set in world markets regardless of how much we import. Fewer imports accordingly make us no less vulnerable to petroleum market shocks.

While it's tempting to argue that the Energy Policy Act of 2003 represents the sheerest hyporrisy in that it flies in the face of everything Republicans allege to stand for, that would presuppose that Republicans are consciously saying one thing but doing another. Conversations with Republican officeholders, however, suggest that they scarcely understand the implications of their rhetoric about limited government and are thus incapable of hypocrisy. # Searchers might have found remains of Civil War ship

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) - An underwater survey found what might be remnants of the Confederate Iranclad warship Virginia, the former USS Merrimack that fought the Union's irondad Monitor in the 1862 battle that redefined naval wardare. "It would be a stroke of incredible luck to discover it after all these years," said Dick Hoffeditz, curator of the Virginia War Museum in Newport News. The underwater survey, for the proposed construction of a marine terminal of the Elizabeth-River, describes two-shipwrocks.

in the area and says there is "a distinct possibility" that they might be parts of the Virginia and of a schooner that hit the sufference dweek and sank next tolt.

The Monitor and the Virginia - which was built on part of the salwaged hull of a Union sailing ship, the USS Merrimack - fought a pounding battle near Newport News on March 9, 1862.

It was the first clash of wooden ships armored with steel plates to repel cannon balls. Most historians consider the four-hour battle a draw.

On May 11, 1862, the Virginia ran aground near Craney Island. After the crew was evacuated, the ship was set after, detending the 16,000 pounds of black powder in the ship's magazine. Documents show that salvage compaines later removed two boilers and parts of the wooden hull. What was left of the ship was again blown up, and some sections were dragged to the Navy Yard in Portsmouth.

Several parts of the Virginia survive in museums; including deated armor and the ship's wheel at the Mariners' Museum, and an anchor and part of a propeller shaft at the Museum of the Confederacy in Richmond.

The Virginia Department of Historic Resources has called for a follow-up investigation to decide if the wreck spotted in the survey is the Virginia. If it is, federal and state laws require that the ship's remains be removed before any dredging can take place.

The Monitor sank at the end of 1862, landing upside down in 240 feet of water, 16 miles off Hatteras, N.C.

TWIN FALLS - It prompted the biggest theer of the day last Saturday and it could give the College of Southern Idaho base ball fans another reason to shout this weekend. The Golden Eagles garnered home-field advantage on the final day of the season thanks to a 139 upset by Eastern Utah against Dixie State College ace Matt Elliott.

Dixie State College are Matt Ellion.

The No. 2 seed Eagles hope Ellior's traggles continue. He is the likely sparter for the No. 3 seed Rehels when the Region 18 playoff best-of-three series begins at 6 p.m. The other Region 18 semifinal pairs No. 1 Southern Nevada and No. 4 seed/Salt Lake CC.

"We'll see who feels hest beforehand," said Dixie head coach Mike Littlewond," He wasn't real sharp (against CEU). In the first inning, he wasn't getting a lot of help from the umpires ohe started throwing right down the middle. He gave up five earned runs, which is a lot for him."

In the season, Elliott has for any only nine earned runs and 12 walks and has struck out 64 batters. He is 7-2 with a 1-48 ENA.

Welker speaks up to keep himself and teammates in the game

By Joe Paisley Times-News writer

job done. No. Welker is not some smack-talking fool.

But a lesson about communication learned from his father, John, now an American Legion baseball coach, has paid off for him and his College of Southern basebai coach, as paid oil no him and his College of Southern Idaho teammates.

"My Dad taught me not to be silent," he said. "It keeps you into the game. If you're not into it, you're not going to make the play."

Welker doesn't quite see himself as a leader.

"I guess I am. I don't my Jo big league anybody." he said.

"Mostly when I'm saying things, It is mostly to remind myself."
When he does that, he often performs better, especially on offense.

offense.

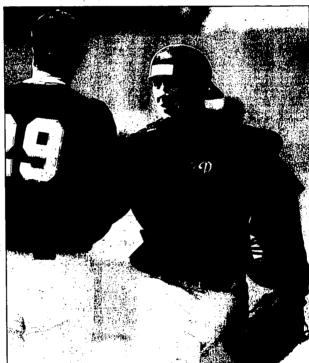

"He brings a lot to the table," said head coach Jim "Skip" Walker. "He displays a leadership and talent when he plays the ship and talent when he plays the right way."

Catcher is an important role in baseball. Not only does the position handle the ball every pitch, but the catcher must be able read his pitcher and become a caiming influence.
"He takes control of a game," said relief pitcher Rich Conway. "If you get out of rhythm, he'll settle you down."
Welker has learned how to handle different pitchers. When they struggle, some need encour-

"You have to be a counselor and a hard ass, all rolled up into one," said assistant coach Boomer Walther. That is another important skill learned from his father, who coaches in Woodinville, Wash, northeast of Seattle.

"He understands players," Welker said. "He's halped with my mentality behind the plate.

With the Region 18 playoffs series against Dide State starting at 6 p.m. tonight, Golden Eagles play at the most critical part of the season.

"If there is a guy you look to this weekend, it's Kris Welker," he said.

DES MOINES, Iowa - Iqwa State basketball coach Larry Eustachy was suspended Wednesday after acknowledging he is an alcoholic, and the athletic director urged the school to fire him.

Three hours after Eustachy said he has sought treatment but will not resign, athletic director Bruce Van De Velde held a news conference of his own to announce that Eustachy would be suspended with pay and should be replaced.

should be replaced.

Eustachy has five days to appeal to the president's office.

Eustachy is 101-59 in five seasons at lowa State, including 1714 last season. In 13 seasons as a head coach, including stops at Idaho and Utah State, he is 260145. Eustachy guided lowa State to Big 12 championships in 2000 and 2001 and was the AP national coach of the year in 2000. Van De Velde took the-action because Eustachy "had engaged in behavior that is inconsistent with his responsibility to conduct himself in a manner that reflects positively on Iowa State University and the university at their programs."

"We came out pretty flat emotionally," he said.

Taysom credited an error-free defense behind him, despite the Diamondbacks having to shuffle and re-shuffle their defense several times due to an injury to starting catcher Vic Hillman and an ejection on backup shortstop Chris Saiz.

"It was nostly defense," Taysom said. "I was able to throw my cut fastball to go away from their right-handed hitters and that was huge. My curve finally started working."

Taysom, who has 78 strikeouts in 47 innings, had to have his best stuff as Tigers starter JD. Lott kept Jerome in the game with his own magic from the mound. Eatt fanned nine and gave up only four hits in 103 pitches.

The teams were scoreless through three innings when Century finally broke through against Lott when Sais reached safely on a bobbled ball in the Sais reached safely on a bobbled broken Sais rounding third when the throw to find Sais rounding third when the throw to find said with the Sais reached the Sais reached the Sais reached the Sais was subsequently ejected for throwing an elbow to try and protect himself. Walker is looking for someone to get a hot had this weekend.

"Usually a series is decided by who has a career weekend."
Walker said. "Who will it be?"
Dixie State (23-17, 159) has a stable of good hitters to call upon. Sophomore Mike Rose is batting. 315 with six doubles and 24 RBIs while freshman Kade Boyer is hitting. 283 with nine doubles and 25 RBIs.

"We feel we can hit against anybody they put out there," Littlewood said. "CSI has a good pitching staff so we'll need to get timely hits."

Sophomore Tyson Olsen hits .305 with four doubles, two triples and two home runs. Sophomore Clayne Garrett both bat. 286 and have 13 RBIs for a balanced offensive attack.

Freshman righthander Zac Stott is second the squad with a 3.19 ERA and a 6-3 record with team-high 62 Innings. Freshrighty Skyler Southwick has a 4-3 record and a 3.81 ERA. medicissaly, the strongest morning:line choice since Arazi in 1992.

Maybe this was a sign that Frankel's luck was changing and with little time to spare. The Hall of Famer goes after his first Derby win Saturday with not one but two horses. Peace Rules leaves from the No. 5 post.

A field of 17 3-year-olds was entered for the 1.25-mile race, with Illinois Derby winner Ten Most Wanted the second choice at 6-1. Peace Rules was the co-third choice with Santa Anita Derby winner Buddy Gil at 6-1. Frankel talked with jockey Jerry Bailey about where to place Empire Maker, who bruised his right front foot after a one-mile gallop around Churchill Downs on Tuesday.

"... We both thought 6 through 11 would be taken, "said Frankel, who had the seventh pick in the post-position draw. "But we didn't expect both numbers to bopen."

They were, and Frankel-who had the seventh pick in Sut we didn't expect both numbers to be open."

They were, and Frankel-jumped on them. He wanted to be outside, he said, so Empire Maker could avoid any problems at the start, though he added that his horse was ready for just about anything and that the bruised foot was fine. "If they don't go," he said, referring to a slow, early pace, "then I'l go."

Buddy Gil, winner of his last three races, including the Santa Anita Derby, will leave from the No. 8 post. "We wanted to keep so much of the speed inside of us as we could," trainer Jeff Mullins said.

This is Frankel's fourth trip to the Derby, so he's familiar with the traffic jam that builds entering the first turn. Derby novice Paddy Gallagher, whose Domestic Dispute will be in the No. 11 hole, was grateful to be anywhere but near the rail. The lish trainer once worked for Hall of Fame jockey Bill Shoemaker and asked his advice.

"He told me to stay outside because down inside, the 1,2,5,5 can end up like Ben Hur." Gallagher said.

the school's drug-prevention coordinator.
The state-mandated "lunch huddy" program pairs younger and older students for regular meetings. The partnerships pro-vide younger students with posi-tive role models, building confi-dence in the children to allow them to better handle chal-lennes.

The older students benefit, too, as they're forced to carry the admirable behavior off campus, lest the younger halves of the buddy matches witness destruc-tive behaviors.

As is the case at many regional schools, certain Kimberly stu-

The schedule gives students the potential of earning 16 credits per Academic year. The district will require graduating seniors in the spring of 2004 to earn four additional credits, raising the requirement from 44 to 48. By 2006, 52 credits will be required.

Graduates of 2005 will be required.

Graduates of 2005 will be required to complete two additional math and two additional math and two additional world history and two additional world history and two physical education credits.

"Not only are we going from 44 to 52, we are being specific in which classes the students to take to meet Idaho Student Achievement Test standards," Principal Mark Kress said. "We want our students to be successful and be comparable to other school districts. If we score at the bottom, then we give our students less of a chance. # Officials say new Rupert pool would be better

RUPERT - Rupert's pool won't be open this summer, but the facility could be open and better than ever in two to three years.

But in the meantime, the closure will affect a lot of people.
At the end of, the Tri-Cittes Recreation District's soccer season this year, three boys came up to Mary Anderson, who works for the district, to ask when the pool would open.

When Anderson told them it was broken and would take a lot of money to fix, they replied, "Well, what are we going to do all summer? We came here every summerr we can day."

"And I don't know what we're going to do," Anderson told a group of people gathered Wednesday to hear plans for the Rupert pool.

Rupert pool.

Consultant Don Carey from Bellevue, Wash., said if positive rectation isn't provided for people, especially youth, hey will make their own recreation - and it isn't always positive.

Carey shared his plans for the Ruper pool with roughly 12 people at the public meeting. The plan includes an indoor facility with services for the widest spectrum of people. Construction is estimated to cost $1,621,773.

A 1- to 2-foot deep wading pool with toys similar to sprinklers can capture the attention of small children. A main pool with depths ranging from 3.5 to 6 feet deep can provide lap swimming, swim team practices and meets, water aerobies, recreational swimming and programs like movie nights, Carey listed, warm-water pool provides preschool swimming instruction rehabilitation services and water walking.

Teens, even those who don't swim, will enjoy activities such as water basketball and volleyball in the shallow end of the main pool, Carey said. Seniors will take to the warm-water pool for fitness and rehabilitation.

And youth in the 12 and under range will be there regardless: "I-it-was-a-mud-hole-they'd be there." Carey said.

The key, Carey said, is compromise and keeping all facets of the pool busy at the same time.

Rupert has something to start from, Carey said. While the main drain is collopsed - that's what's keeping the pool from opening this summer—the structure itself is sound and will last a long time.

Using what's there as a base saves Rupert at least $500,000 if it were to build a new facility, Carey said.

City Administrator Roger Bagley said Carey was the only person who said be could help fix the pool and help find the money to do it. Other consultants' jew wanted the city to spend money.

Carey is working to secure grants and donations, but the community can help raise bands.

too. A bond issue is not in the plan, Carey said.

Once the pool is up and running, Carey and city officials want to keep costs to the community low. They are estimating a $2 fees to use the pool. Carey said fees are cheap, feeple will ome and volume is what pays.

Bagley said the theory has worked in the Tri-Cities are low more people can participate.

Carey spoke with several service clubs and organizations this week and several people have already stepped forward to serve on committees and begin raising money.

The pool is more than 50 years old, Bagley said. "We've run out of Band-Aids.".

Judge dissolve PÖRTLAND, Ore. (AP) - A judgic Wednesday shut down petition gathering charity run by a preminent antitax activist, who the judge said operated the "sham" charity to achieve personal political goals. The judge also ordered Bill Sizemore to dissolve his political action committees and bannel him from organizing any similar charity "to avoid the type of racketeering violations which have occurred in this case." The ruling followed a jury's decision last September that Sizemore's Oregon Taxpayer's United Education Foundation and his PAC filed false campaiza and tax reports and committee fraud and forgery to obtain sizatures for petitions on two antiunion initiatives. The measures rejected by vores in 2009, sought to prohibit union dues from being used for political purposes without memsaid. # California bill proposes to ban farmworkers from hand weeding

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) – Ana Solis says she still has a hard time sleeping after 21 years of backbreaking work as a farmworker. It was worse three years ago when she says was forced to pick weeds by hand.

"I could only sleep after taking three aspirin," says Solis, 52, whose doctor placed her on disability eight months ago for stress, which she says, was partly induced by hand weeding.

"We worked eight hours per day and we had Tylenol or Advil during the day," she says. "Sometimes we would go to the toilet to rest because we were very tired."

Solls, who has picked weeds in carrot, lettuce, onion and broccoli fields, says she hopes state officials will ban the practice among farmworkers to avoid problems like the pain she's had in her legs, hands and back.

Montgomery, an attorney for the California Rural Legal Foundation, which tried to ban hand weeding last year. The non-profit organization submitted the proposal to state safety regulators after the bill failed.

"The goal is to come up with a regulation that prohibits hand weeding in situations where long handled tool can be used," Montgomery said.

The hand-weeding bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Paul Koretz, D-West Hollywood, passed the Assembly and was slated for debate in the Senate's labor committee last year but it never got there after furmers and farmworkers failed to find a compromise. Similar bill, ided in the Senate in 1955.

The division's medical unit also issued a memo in 1993 further criticizing the practice because workers are exposed to pesticides and fecal matter in soil.

Farmers opposed the proposal because they say hoes damage delicate crops like strawberries and cilantre.

"I thought it was so stupid," said organic raspberry and strawberry grower Ben Lucero in Lodi after he heard the proposal. "During the spring, weeds start to grow in between the plants. All the baby plants start gowing up and you put a long handle hoe in there and you would ruin the whole crop. We don't use any herbicide because we're organic. "I'll believe it when I see it. This has gone on for two years and we've heard the same story for two years," said Doris Cory, of Shrewshury, Mass. Her son was also a Syracuse University student.

Britain's Foreign Office said it has received no official confirmation of Libya's offer.

Foreign Office Minister Mike O'Brien said that while ongoing talks appeared to be "drawing toward a conclusion," there were still details to be agreed. "I think that may be possible, but we have still got some final discussions to have with them, so I think we need to be a little bit cautious at this stage," he said.

According to U.N. resolution, Libya must acknowledge responsibility for the Dec. 21, 1988, explosion.

Arches National Park offers amazing vistas in a fragile landscape

Two miles from the trailhead, after scooting down off the last rock ledge, rounding the last curve of the path and standing in fine sand with blue sky towering above, our eyes came to rest on one last geological marvel.

Deep inside Arches National Park, my girlriend and I stood in front of Double O Arch at the end of a hise that took several hours. Rising before us was a structure that looked like an artist's masterpiece in clay sculpture, or some construction of papier-meche for a movie set.

The rock presented two delicate openings, one easy to wilk-through and its roof forming the floor of the second opening, much larger, above it. The sun and blue sky streamed through each opening. Our strenuous hike had come to a stellar conclusion (never mind the two-mile return trip across the tops of rock fins and in the crevasses between towering cliffs).

The 1rek through Devil's Garden, which can take hikers past six arches before reaching Double O Arch, was the highlight of two April days spent in Arches National Park in Unah. By year's end, some 80,000 more visitors will have many of the same stories to tell and similar photos to display.

According to the Arches brochure, the area boasts the high-est density of natural arches in the world. The soft sandstone so prevalent in the area and the unstable saltbed below combine with water, ice and extreme temperatures to sculpt the breathtaking rock formations. With pure blue desert skies and the La Sal Mountains as a backdrop, if's an emazing venue for hiking and a great destination for nature photographers.

The beauty of the area draw visitors in droves, and that means a special challenge for park managers, according to Cathy Thy of the Canyonlands Natural History Association. The landscape is as fragile as it is picturesque, with rocks that crumble and extremely delicate desert soil that harbors the hope for yegetation in the arid climate.

"The biggest challenge we have is educating people about the cryptobiotic soil," said Tuly, who works at the visitor center just inside the park gate.

There are signs all along the park rails which say "it's alive." They urge people ant to stray from the trails, because treading on the wrong pastch of otherwise ordinary-looking dirt could do long-lasting damage of the park gate.

"Most people are pretty respective of the rails of the park parts which say "it's alive." They urge from short, easy strolls on sand to lengthy hikes that entail the scaling of sharp inclines and the traversing of ledges exposed to heights.

Hardened hikers as well as relative couch potatoes will come away satisfied. And nearly every hike, long or short, leads to a view of gorgeous stone structures. For the truly adventurous, there are backcountry areas of the park for explosion and camping, but strict, environmentally conscious regulations apply.

The park's campground offers 52 campsites, but Tuhy said they fill essentially every night from mid-April through October. # Fence aims to rehabilitate old roadbed Question: I went to fish at Dog Creek Reservoir last week. When I got there I noticed a new fence across the road going along the eart side of the reservoir. I was told the Fish and Game put he fence across the road. Why did you fence off the road?

Answer: Dog Creek Reservoir is an irrigation reservoir north of Gooding. The land is jointly towned by the Idaho Department of Lands and the U.S. Burcau of Reclamation. The Fish and Game Department has written agreements with both agencies to operate and maintain the Idam and manage the reservoir dam and manage the reservoir as a public fishing and hunting area. The fence you are referring to originally existed to prevent motorized vehicle access north of the dam. Vandalism to the fence and continued unauthorized vehicle access throughout the area created many two-track roads along the east shoreline. Fish and Game employees recently repaired the fence to stop vehicle use around the east side of the reservoir. The roads were heavily rutted from previous use during muddy conditions.

The roads also provided some people with a convenient dumpaite for household garbage and litter. We decided to fence off the road to rehabilitate the old roadbed, prevent new unauthorized road development, protect the habitat around the reservoir, and stop littering.

Department employees also repaired the old boat ramp and will be replacing the old restroom near the dam. To accommodate handicapped fishing the department also developed a new handicapped accessible dock near the boat ramp.

The reservoir is approximately 120 acres. Anglers wanting to fish the upper end of the reservoir from the bank will now have to take a few minutes to walk from the parking lot near the dam.

Well-known Moab sheep herd began with single ewe

MOAB, Utah (AP) - Never underestimate the power of a little feminine persuasion - even among bighorn sheep.

There is, on the outskirts of town, near the entrance to Arches National Park, a band of desert bighorn sheep. Some days, up to 20 sheep have been counted, but most days about a dozen sheep can be seen feeding along the roadside undisturbed and oblivious to cars and trucks passing, just yards away.

It is the most-viewed herd of wild sheep in the state. And, it all began with a single ewe.

Desert bighorn are, by nature, initial animals, preferring remote seclusion to hectic traffic.

In 1985, its sheep were trapped in Canyonlands National Park and released in a remote area of Arches. Within days a single ewe with a small lamb left the group deep inside the park and was spotted along the road north of town. The next year she showed up with a new lamb and a yearling, and the next with a male suitor.

Over time more ewes came, followed by more rame. Now is the control of the power has more seme.

Over time more ewes came, followed by more rams. Now it's casually referred to by locals as the "town herd."

"What is interesting," said Jim Karpowite, big game coordinator for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, "is she came from a very secluded area of the state. There's no reason why she'd pick a spot next to a road.

"It's really not a bad area, though. There's good feed next to the road and a good escape route. There's also water in nearby Courthouse Wash."
This herd is indicative of the direction bighorn sheep in general are taking in Utah. They were nearly wiped out by early pioneers and later by uranium mineers out searching for their fortunes during the boom in Utah in the 1950s. After a brief recovery, disease – suspected to have been again decimated the population.

Today, said Karpowitz, Utalisighorn herds are growing and, even more importantly, surviving. It is estimated there are California bighorn in Utah.

Part of what led to the growth, improved habitat, the transfer of

Of the three, the desert is the most coveted by hunters simply because there are fewer available, it inhabits the most rugged terrain and therefore is the most difficult to pursue. It is also the smallest of the three. A desert ram will weigh about 125 pounds, a Rocky Mountain ram about 250 and a California ram somewhere between the two.

The desert bighorn roams the dry areas along the Colorado Plateau in Southern and Southeastern Utah, with a few holding in the Mojave area by the Virgin River. The Rocky Mountain sheep are mostly found along the Green-River corridor between Flaming Gorge and the town of Green River, with the most recent herds holding on Mount Timponogas and Provo peaks. The California sheep are

McKinley climbing season begins

Rangers aim to keep the mountain clean this year

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - The climbing season has begun at Mount McKinley, and this year rangers plan to keep it clean.

The National Park Service expects more than 1,100 people to take on America's highest mountain over the next two months. Most climbers will start their ascents from the tent city that springs up every spring on Kahiltna Glacier.

Base Camp emerged April 23 when the High Altitude Rescue Team from Fort-Wainwright dropped off tents, fuel and other supplies from revin-rotor Chinook helicopters, said Roger Robinson, chief mountaineering ranger at the Park Service's Talkeetna Ranger Station.

On Saturday, a crew of volunteers and angers from Denail National Park and Preserve set up the camp at 7,200 feet.

As of Stunday, 24 climbers were on the 20,320-foot mountain and a handful were attempting nearby Mount Foraker.

Ninety percent of McKinley climbers take the same route, the West Buttress.

The mountaineering rangers cluster at another camp at 14,000 feet. Wice the size of Base Camp, it has four tentiles shelters that are particularly strong and windproof.

Last year, predators killed the baby sandhill cranes, called colts born to a pair at the small, shallow pond. Hearst and her friends in the Audubon Society suspect the birds escaped from the Pocatello Zoo because they never learned to migrate for the winter.

A warm spring runs into the pond, so it never freezes and has become a crucial wintering place for ducks and other waterfowl.

IDAHO FALLS (AP) – It's Saturday morning and four east-ern Idaho men are building their first fly rods under the watchful eye of Mike Towler, an instructor who has built hundreds.

"I can't wait to hook a steel-head on my flies and the fly rod built myself, says Craig Ward of Rexburg, Ward is in the first stages of building an 7/8-weight and he's already dreaming of a 10-pound wild fish on the Salmon.

Ward's sentiment is the constant refrain of anglers who have graduated from fly-tying to building, their own rods. They want, a hand in every aspect of the fly-fishing experience; from tying and building to casting and setting the book.

If they could, they would fabricate their own reeds and manufacture their own lines.

Rod-building fits fly-fishermen perfectly. Both crafts draw from similar talents, namely perfectionism, style and stubbornness.

The first is perfectionism.

Although the steps in fishing—cast the fly, mend the line, set the book—and rod-building—ream the cork, thread the guides, epoxy the thread—are simple to describe, they are invariably tougher to complete than describe. And in both cases, no fly-fisher-man worth his salt likes doing

And in both cess, in hy-dise, and when worth his salt likes doing them poorly.

Anglers don't just like to catch fish, but they want to do it with style, using their best fly, timely cast and drag-free float.

Rod-builders want their guides in, sync, but their thread must be seamless and their cork must be balanced just so.

"The pride is in the work," Belger said. "If found myself going back and redoing some of the first guides over because I had gotten so much better.

Pacific Sunwear settles pay lawsuits

ANAHEIM, Calif. - Teen clothing retailer Pacific Sunwear has settled two lawsuits for $4 million that, if approved by a court, could give as many as 600 California store managers and co-managers retroactive overtime pay, a plaintiffs' attorney said.

The suits, filed in 2001 and 2002, allege inadequate staffing levels in stores caused managers to spend more than 50 percent of their time more than 50 percent of their time answering phones, stocking shelves, unloading freight and doing other clerical tasks. That would make them eligible for overtime according to Galifornia law, which requires exempt employees to spend more than half their time on duties that require discretion and independent judgment.

require discretion and independent padgment. Pacific Sunwear – which has a store in Magic Valley Mall – denied the allegations in the lawsuits but said it settled to avoid the cost and distraction of protracted litigation. The settlement will not affect first outsire earnings, the company said. Matthew Righetti, a San Francisco attorney who filed the first complaint against Pacific Sunwear in 2001, said the company has agreed to change its practices as part of the settlement.

Co-managers will now be nonexempt employees and thus eligible for overtime, Righetti said. Managers will also have reduced hours, and jobs will be restructured so more managerial duties are performed, he said. Pacific Sunwear executives declined to say whether any changes are planned.

Clear Channel reports lower Q1 earnings

SAN ANTONIO — Clear Channel Communications Inc. on Wednesday reported lower earnings in the first quarter, but its results were in line with expectations.

The world's largest radio station operator said tearned $71 million, or 12 cents a share, in the three months ended March 31, compared with $90 million, or 15 cents a share, a year earlier. Excluding a pre-tar gain of $28.1 million related to the saler of a relevision tieness end a security and dobt reduction, the 2002 earnings were $73 million, or 12 cents per share.

In Twin Palls, Clear Channel has radio stations KEZ1-FPA, KLUCAM and KLID-FPA.

Clear Channel reported revenue of $1.78 billion in the period, up from $1.7 billion in 2002.

The latest per-share earnings matched the consensus of industry analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call.

The biggest revenue boost in the quarter came from its outdoor advertising division—principly billboards—s which increased 22 percent to $450.5 million. Much of that growth came in Europe and Australia, company officials said.

Revenue from radio was up 1.6 percent to $795 million, with most of that increase coming from the acquisition of four radio stations.—Clear Channel operates about 1,200 radio stations and 19 television stations in the United States, and has an ownership state in 250 radio stations oversess. The company is also the world's largest producer of concerts and other live events, and has major interests in bill-boards.

Woman contends school is place to learn about money

As a young adult, Dara Duguay was in and out of financial hot water. She mismanaged her checking account, overused her credit cards, worried how she would pay her bills and frequently endured financially stressful situations.

"I didn't grow up with parents sitting down and showing me how to balance my checkbook," Duguay said. "I generally learned by trial and error."
But learn she did. Today, Duguay is one of the nation's most passionate advocates of financial education for children. "I see a really strong connection to education" and good money management skills, Duguay said.

As the executive director of the JumpStart Coalition for Personal Financial Literacy in-Washington, D.C., Duguay has spent the past six years promoting and overseeing financial education initiatives nationwide.

That means everything from developing a personal finance curriculum for math lessons to providing a forum for Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan to speak out on the importance of educating young people in finance and investing. Greenspan did just that in early April to highlight Financial Literacy for Youth Month. Duguay, knows she faces a tough task. A nationwide study by JumpStart last year found that students' knowledge about managing money has fallen off. According to the 2002 survey, high school seniors answered only 50.2 percent of personal finance questions correctly, down from 51.9 percent in 2000 and 57.3 percent in 1997. Duguay tackled financial education topics in an interview with me this month. Here are some of her comments, edited for brevity:

Q. Should schools have a responsibility to teach kids about money?
A. Absolutely. There is no fall-back. In reality, most Americans are horrible in managing their money. Look at bankruptcles, which were up 8 percent in the first quarter. You can't necessarily assume parents are going to teach kids about money.
Q. What's holding back schools?
A. Money is an issue. We can't expect schools just to add another class. We have developed all the tools teachers need. Our biggest challenge is to help teachers figure out where they lessons into their existing cur-riculum. And it can't be a volun-tary effort. It needs to be made a requirement. Utah has actually mandated personal finance instruction. Louisiana is another example.

mandated personal inance instruction. Louisiana is another example.
Q. Why aren't students performing better on the JumpStar personal finance tests?
A. We think that the reason is twofold. First, there has been an emphasis on teaching the basic reading, writing, math. This means that other subjects are not given priority, like personal finance. Our survey found that only 15 percent of respondents learned personal finance in the will be financially illuterate. Secondly, teachers are not adequately trained to teach personal finance. We need more teacher training to give them the confinence to teach the subject mater. The blind cannot need the best of the subject mater. The blind cannot need the subject mater of the subject material that the subject materia grams, including consumer, economic and personal finance education.

That's why the JumpStart Coalition is involved in teacher training programs. It's not enough just to give teachers a book if they are not very comfortable with the material.

A. The legislation has not been very effective for personal finance in finance education because nothing is mandatory. And there are a laundry list of programs ellgible for this money.

Q. Where are parents in this picture?

A. Parents are not sitting down with their kids to talk about money. They are not comfortable with the subject, and the problem has become worse. Things are now more complicated because of a plethor of financial products. How are you supposed to explain all these complex financial instruments when you're not sure yourself?

Q. So what can parents do?
Any tips?
A. The best way is to get your kids involved. If you have older kids, have them help you balance your checkbook or write checks when you are paying the bills. I've been told this is the most effective strategy to get kids to stop asking you for money. It hey can start seeing how much things cost, in relation to your paycheck, they will get a sense of the value of things.

The more that parents can talk about money with their kids, the-better. Talk to them about the mistakes you've made. Kids can learn through your words and your actions. Realize that they are watching and learning from you. If you don't save and you use credit cards every day, for example, you are sending them a message.

You've lost your job, and the search for a new one may be discouraging. But you stand to improve your odds by considering a new industry. In an annual poil of job seekers, human resources firm DBM found that 75 percent of the respondents switched industries to land a new job, up 3 percent from 2001. But 65 percent of that group said their new position came with a lower salary than the old one.

came with a lower satary man the old one.

"The best way to navigate this tough employment market is for job seekers to strategically mar-ket themselves to potential employers as opposed to simply applying for a job," said DBM president Tom Silveri.

"Job seekers should consider repackaging their skills and competencies to demonstrate how they can easily and effectively be transferred to a different industry, and explore job opportunities that may not at first be obvious," he said.

The study group included 6,900 people from 42 countries. The poll found striking differences between job-search methods in the United States and Britain.

Briain.

Americans network, with 51 percent saying that's how they found a new job. Only 43 percent of Britons used this method, opting instead for print advertising a (25 percent). In the U.S. only 4 percent used advertising and 5 percent sought a search agency.

about a positive air-travel develabout a positive air-travel development:

For the past two months, Delta pricing analysts in Atlanta have been keeping many Twin Falls fares within $50 of Delta fares out of Boise to the same destinations, he said.
"And that is a very, very good development, that the pricing is much closer to our neighboring city. I think many travelers will find that attractive, and we hope to see more travelers flying out of the local airport," Carberry said.

Delta got good response to a spring fare sale in Twin Falls, he said, and the airline's pricing analysts are coming to understand the local market's travel habits better.

For just a $50 difference, Carberry hopes more air travelers will eliminate a drive to the Boise airport.

"In the past, we've seen much greater disparity," he said.

60 and Getting Flt program works for Buhl resident

1 would like to recognize Jan Mittleider, the College of Shuthern Idaho and the Buhl School District for the wonderful

Program, "60 and Cetting Fit."

This program is free for men and women 60 and over. For about eight months, the fall through the spring. I have attended the classes held for one hour three times a week at the Buhl High School gym. The program has increased my flexibility and stamina, along with filling an important spot in my social life. I have made wonderful friends, including our instructor, Mary Martinette, who knows her business and brings us all joy. We have a lot of laughs.

Thanks for everything, Jan, Mary, CSI and Buhl High School. What a wonderful community offering.

LDS members provide help

LDS members provide help In Episcopal Church move
To Our LDS Friends:
Members of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension cannot stop talking about the incredible work provided by the 15th Ward of the Kimberly Stake, LDS Church when we moved into our. new church on Eastland Drive on Saturday, April 12.
Many strong backs and willing hearts provided man and woman power to move us, unpack us and, then provide a joyous and fülling lunch for the 150 or more workers of the day. What a phenomenal spit gift!

Thank you all for your love and assistance. God truly blesses Twin Falls with faith communities who help others along in their journeys. DICK JARDINE Twin Falls

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

i. The golden rule is that there are no golden rules." — George Bernard Shaw

At both tables on today's deal from the Spingold Teams Champlenship, the West players rose to the occasion when their chance came to break the rules. Both source eventually taken to two normal by their partners. Both west players rose to west players to the occasion when their chance came to break the rules. ANSWER: Jump to two hearts rather than bidding one heart. If you play your takeout doubles as guaranteed to be relatively shape-suitable, then this hand is just worth an invitational jump to two hearts. Give partner short clubs, and four hearts cannot be too far off.
