Probation violation means Roberts won't have clean record, faces sentence resulting from guilty plea

By Robert Mayor
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Former Elkhart Elementary School Principal Mary Lee Roberts has been kicked out of Drug Court, just two months shy of graduating from the year-long program.

Instead of having a felony drug possession charge removed from her record by successfully completing the program, she now faces a potential prison sentence. After spending more than a week in jail, Roberts appeared

Mary Lee Roberts

Wednesday before 5th District Judge Monte Carlson, who terminated her participation in Drug Court for an undisclosed probation violation and then released her from jail. "It's extremely disappointing to see how a potentially bright career could be ruined in so short a time," said her former boss, Twin Falls School District Superintendent Terrell Donich. "I feel so sorry for what she's done to herself. I hope she can find a way to get back on track."

Roberts' court records remained off-limits Thursday, although that should change as Roberts enters back into the regular judicial system. That returns Roberts to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Lochs' arena. Because Roberts already pleaded guilty to a felony charge of possessing a pound of marijuana last summer, the sentencing will be fairly straightforward, he said.

As such, there's no room for plea bargaining - that is, arguing for a lesser charge or sentence. "In order to go into Drug Court, you need to take responsibility for what you did in the first place," Lochs said. "You need to say, 'Yes, I have a problem and I did do this.'"

Lochs said he won't ask for it. Please see ROBERTS, Page A2

Craig relents somewhat on promotions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Senate on Thursday approved the promotions of 127 Air Force captains and majors that had been stalled by Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, in a showdown over two transport planes he wanted at an Air National Guard base in his state.

Craig had been holding up 212 of the nominations, but relented under pressure from the White House.

He is continuing to delay approval of nominations of 85 colonels and generals, including Maj. Gen. John W. Rosa Jr., who was picked to lead the Air Force Academy, which has been damaged by a rape scandal in recent months.

"Senator Craig is still reserving his right on the rest of these holds until we are able to come to a conclusion," said Will Hart, a spokesman for Craig.

Craig put the holds on the Air Force promotions nearly three weeks ago and vowed to stall them until the Air Force honors a commitment to add four C-130 transport planes to complete a squadron at Gowen Air National Guard Base in Boise.

Craig said he has worked in the past several years to secure $40 million in construction at the air base in anticipation of the planes being relocated. The additional planes would bolster the Boise air field's standing in the coming round of military base closures scheduled for 2005.

Senate rules allow any senator to delay action indefinitely on a nomination sent by the president for Senate confirmation.

Craig met with Air Force Secretary James G. Roche and White House representatives who acted as arbiters in the dispute, but no "resolution" was reached and there have been no meetings since, Hart said. There have been Please see CRAIG, Page A2

'A life-changing experience'

Blind students climb into canyon as part of pioneer journey

By Rachel Hartigan
Times-News writer

HANSEN - Sitting on a rock overlooking the Snake River canyon, 16-year-old Sarah Turner could make out the forms of the rocks below.

Despite her limited vision, she could see the slow movement of the Snake River and felt the Idaho wind against her face as the sun shone down on her. The Kansas City native tried to imagine what life might have entailed for the Oregon Trail pioneers facing the vast canyon spread out before them more than 150 years ago.

Turner was among a group of 18 visually and hearing-impaired teenagers from the Kansas State School of the Blind trekking across the country mostly by van to retrace the pioneers' journey. The group arrived east of Twin Falls Thursday morning for a stop at the Hansen Bridge, and at the deepest part of the Snake River, they hiked down into the canyon, just as the pioneers might have done.

"It's a lot of fun, but it is hard work," Turner said. "They want us to experience it just as the pioneers did."

The three-week journey began in Kansas City, Kan., on June 6, following the Oregon Trail out west to the Columbia River. The group will then head back east following the Lewis and Clark Trail. They'll ride horses and canoe down parts of the Missouri River, staff member Cynthia Ledbetter said. The group will return home June 28.

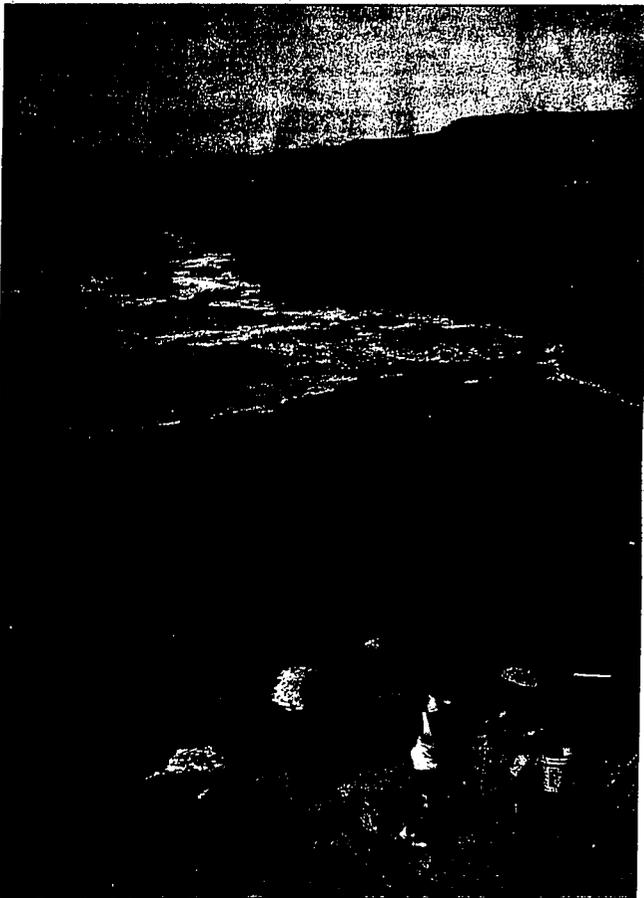

"How far can you take a visually impaired person?" Ledbetter said with a smile. "These kids want to do as much as they possibly can."

Thursday afternoon, the group slowly and steadily climbed down the canyon with buckets in hand to gather water from the river for their "coons."

"Side step down. OK. Notice that rock? Now go straight ahead," staff members told the teens as they slowly made their way down the trail with walking canes.

Twin Falls Lions Club members were on hand to serve as spotters.

Students from the school are on a three-week trip, following the Oregon Trail west and the Lewis and Clark Trail back to Kansas.

Biggest assault since war targets Saddam loyalists

Some Iraqis contend sweep kills innocent civilians

The Associated Press

DULUJAH, Iraq - U.S. fighter jets bombed a suspected terrorist camp and troops stormed door-to-door through Sunni Muslim towns Thursday, seeking Saddam Hussein loyalists in one of the biggest American military assaults since the war.

As Operation Peninsula Strikes entered day three, Iraqi fighters shot down a U.S. helicopter gunship - the first American aircraft downed by ground fire since Saddam's ouster two months ago - and a U.S. F-16 fighter-bomber crashed. The crews of the aircraft were unharmed.

Ten to 15 Iraqis were killed in Thursday's action, part of a sweep through the so-called "Sunni triangle" north and west of Baghdad in central Iraq and marked at its top by Tikrit, Saddam's hometown.

"As we receive actionable intelligence, we strike hard and with lethal force," Lt. Gen. David McKiernan, the

Renewed resistance spurs military action

Thursday's sharp escalation of U.S. military action in central and western Iraq came after increased guerrilla attacks on American troops in the region.

Iraqi forces shot down a U.S. AH-64 Apache helicopter gunship in western Iraq.

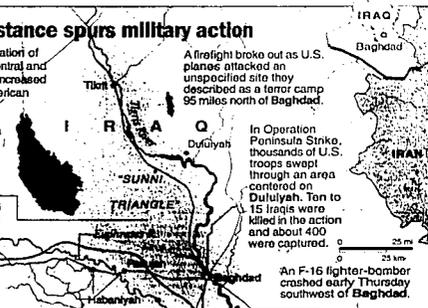

The so-called "Sunni triangle" is the heartland of support for Saddam's now-banned Baath Party.

Four American soldiers have been killed and 21 wounded in Fallujah since April.

A freight broke out as U.S. planes attacked an unpopulated site they described as a terror camp 95 miles north of Baghdad.

In Operation Peninsula Strike, thousands of U.S. troops swept through an area centered on Dulujah. Ten to 15 Iraqis were killed in the action and about 400 were captured.

An F-16 fighter-bomber crashed early Thursday southwest of Baghdad.

with local discussions. White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer has made it clear that the president wants the nomination to proceed.

The Washington Post - The Bush administration signaled strong support for Israel's crackdown on militant groups Thursday, effectively abandoning its earlier criticism of the government of Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon that had sparked an outcry from lawmakers on Capitol Hill and pro-Israel lobbying groups.

Targeting of militants draws scrutiny - Fleischer said the issue is "terrorism" and a "legal process from moving forward." The violence continued Thursday. The fifth Israeli airstrike in 48 hours on Hamas leaders in Gaza killed seven Palestinians, including the combined Israeli-Palestinian death toll past 50 for the week.

Israeli's botched assassination attempt Tuesday of a senior leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement, known as Hamas. "We were very close to an agreement with the Palestinians to end the suicide bombings," said a senior Arab diplomat who spoke to Powell Thursday. "But every time we were close to an agreement, the Israelis launch a disproportionate attack."

Commission member Charles Lenker acts as a liaison to the veterinarians in the county. He told members the No. 1 thing that people for Pets, the group that currently has the contract to run the shelter, can do to get along with all the veterinarians is to spread out its business.

The main thing the city could do, in actual fact, is get on with building a new shelter as quickly as possible. And that is just what the commission is recommending.

maximum sentence, as her record is relatively clean. He wasn't sure Thursday what the maximum sentence is or what he'll ask for. "I don't know for sure what I'll recommend at this point," Leobs said. "The question will be whether she can do a probation based on her failure to do Drug Court."

and mandatory classes. "It's like being in basic training," Leobs said. Another option is a community work center such as the facility on Washington Street, where one may spend days performing a regular job, then return at night to designated for inmates who have jobs whose crimes aren't serious enough to warrant a complete lock-up.

more time or place him on probation. "If they've done a good job, most of them go on probation," he said. Whether Roberts' probation violation that got her kicked out of Drug Court will be an added factor in the sentencing also remains undetermined, Leobs said.

Commission members discussed setting up an indigent fund designated for payment to veterinarians who got involved in after-hours care. They also mulled contracting with vets for the service. But the issue was tabled.

One issue the commission cleared up had to do with whether it is appropriate for the shelter to euthanize pets that people bring to them because they can't afford that service from their vets. Leobs said that is something the shelter is not going to get involved in. It is more humane to get a well-loved pet to be put to death gently with its trusted owner and vet, Blackwood said, and the commission agreed.

Covert unit in Iraq since before war seeks weapons, finds none

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A covert Army Special Forces unit operating in Iraq since before the war began in March has played a dominant but ultimately unsuccessful role in the Bush administration's sly hunt for weapons of mass destruction, according to military and intelligence sources in Baghdad and Washington.

Task Force 20, whose existence and mission are classified, is drawn from the elite Army special mission units known popularly as Delta Force. It sent a stream of initially promising reports to a limited circle of planners and policymakers in Washington pointing to the possibility of weapons finds. The reports included a feed of the optimism expressed by President Bush and his senior national security advisers that proscribed weapons would be found.

Thus far, military and intelligence sources said, the expectations are unfulfilled. Even skeptics of Task Force 20's progress in the weapons hunt speak admiringly of the team's exploits on its other assignments, in which its role was concealed.

Team has had more success with other missions, however

The team captured Palestinian guerrilla leader Mohammed Abbas in Baghdad in mid-April and the Iraqi scientist nicknamed Mrs. Anthrax and Dr. Germ. It fought a bloody battle behind Iraqi lines to prevent a catastrophic release of floodwaters from the Haditha Dam; and it retrieved Army prisoners-of-war. He tested Lynch from a hospital in Nasiriyah.

Task Force 20's principal assignment is to "seize, destroy, render safe, capture, or recover weapons of mass destruction," according to a Special Operations mission statement. To that end it staged raids ahead of the U.S. and British ground advance to locate and destroy caches of nonconventional arms, gathered hundreds of weapons samples and captured as many as half of the "high value" weapons scientists and Bush Party leaders now in U.S. custody. Its role in the search for illicit arms, military and intelligence sources said, turned out to be far more important than that of the search teams operating in the open.

Yet Task Force 20 has come no closer than its widely publicized counterpart, the 75th Expeditionary Task Force, to the Bush administration's declared objective.

Sources with firsthand knowledge of its mission and personnel, and others with access to its reports, said the team has found no working nonconventional munitions, long-range missiles or missile parts, bulk stores of chemical or biological warfare agents or enrichment technology for the core of a nuclear weapon.

The administration cited all those components specifically as part of Iraq's concealed arsenal. The arms were forbidden to Iraq under U.N. Security Council mandate, and President Bush used them as his primary argument for war.

The Defense Department has not made public Task Force 20's preliminary findings, which include a cache of land mines that U.S. analysts believed to be designed for dispersal of liquid contents.

Soldier charged in grenade attack will appear in court

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — The soldier charged in the grenade attack on comrades sleeping in tents in Kuwait was scheduled for a hearing Monday that could lead to a court-martial, the Army announced Thursday.

Sgt. Hasan K. Akbar, 32, a soldier in the 101st Airborne Division, will face an Article 32 hearing at Fort Knox, which is similar to a grand jury hearing in civilian courts.

Two soldiers died and 14 were wounded in the early morning attack on three tents March 23, before the brigades moved into Iraq as part of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Akbar, of Los Angeles, faces two counts of premeditated murder and three counts of attempted murder and could face the death penalty.

The Army has not disclosed a possible motive in the attack, but

George Heath, a Fort Campbell spokesman, said previously that Akbar had been having "an attitude problem."

Akbar's mother, Quran Bilal, told The Tennessean of Nashville shortly after the attack she thought her son might have been accused of murder.

Those killed were Army Capt. Christopher Scott Seifert, 27, of Easton, Pa., and Air Force Maj. Gregory Stone, 40, of Boise.

detained. "There was no reason for them to be arrested. They did nothing," he said. "They (U.S. forces) destroyed all our furniture, all our belongings."

Specialist Chris Rossi, of the 173rd Airborne Brigade, manning a checkpoint on the Tigris River, was unapologetic.

"We're just not taking any chances," he said. "My life's in danger so I'm going to approach them (the Iraqis) as hostile. And until I'm proved otherwise, that's the way I'm going to approach it."

Hundreds of U.S. troops moved in hard and fast through the area, centered on the town of Duluyyah

30 miles north of Baghdad. With helicopters whirring overhead and tanks offering cover, they kicked down doors and pulled out residents, looking for snipers who had harassed them for weeks from the shelter of thick woods.

Twenty rounded up hundreds of people for questioning, though most young people were freed within hours. The U.S. military did not give details about the camp or why it was designated as "terrorist."

"During the day, the people are calm and friendly, but at night they've been ambushing us," said Geary.

Iraq

U.S. ground forces commander in Iraq, said in a briefing Thursday. "Iraq will be a combat zone for some time."

Militants in recent weeks have stepped up ambushes and sniping at coalition forces in the triangle, a heartland of support for Saddam's now-banned Baath Party.

Coalition forces did not give a total of Iraqi casualties in the operation, but said about 400 Iraqis "have been arrested and many were being interrogated." No Americans have been killed but four U.S. soldiers suffered gunshot wounds Thursday, said Sgt. Forest Geary, of the 37th Cavalry, a unit of the 3rd Infantry Division.

"It's one of the largest operations since the war," U.S. Central Command spokesman Lt. Ryan Fitzgerald said of the sweep.

The aggressive raids angered people in Duluyyah, who complained of needlessly heavy-handed tactics by the Americans. One man said his 6-year-old son was harassed.

In a mourner's tent on a side street of the mostly shuttered town, Abid Ali Jassem al-Juburi, a former general in Saddam's army, said he was grieving for his brother and cousin who died early in the U.S. operation.

"My brother was beaten, hit in the face and was killed," he said, adding that U.S. troops took away medicine his family was bringing for a cousin who had suffered a heart attack "and smashed it under their feet."

Another resident, Ammar Salim, said 31 members of his family, males aged 13 to 70, were

House backs tax relief for poor families

Move could doom tax credit for working poor completely

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House narrowly passed an $82 billion bill Thursday providing tax relief for 6.5 million poor families, along with tax cuts for military families and astronauts who die in shuttle missions.

The 224-201 vote sets up a fight with the Senate, which adopted a more modest $10 billion bill last week. The Senate version would provide a $1,000 per-child tax credit for families earning $10,500 to $26,000 a year until 2005. A recently enacted tax cut bill omitted those families from the expanded child credit (currently $600), which triggered Democratic attacks on the Republican-led House, Senate and White House.

The House bill would provide the same tax credit for those low-income families, but for 10 years. It would give members of the military an additional $900 million in tax breaks for housing, death benefits and dependent care.

Both measures would allow families earning as much as $150,000 a year to qualify for the child credit, which currently begins phasing out at $110,000.

The House's decision to broaden and extend the proposed tax cuts could doom the enhanced child credit for low-income parents altogether. The reason: Several senators are threatening to filibuster the House version because it exceeds budget limits. That would force proponents to muster 60 votes for passage, a virtual impossibility on such an issue in the narrowly divided, 100-member Senate.

For nearly two weeks, GOP lawmakers have grappled with how to provide a higher child tax credit for the parents of 12 million children left out of the recently enacted $550 billion tax cut law. Liberal groups and Democrats

Rumsfeld stuns NATO in balking at Belgium law

Los Angeles Times

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Just when NATO appeared poised to move beyond its divisions over the war in Iraq, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld on Thursday threatened to withhold further funding for a new alliance headquarters here because of a Belgian law allowing foreign leaders to be locally tried for war crimes.

Rumsfeld said the decade-old law, under which lawsuits have been filed in Belgian courts against Secretary of State Colin L. Powell and U.S. Army Gen. Tommy Franks among others, "calls into serious question whether NATO can continue to hold meetings in Belgium and whether senior U.S. officials, military and civilian, will be able to continue to visit international organizations in Belgium."

Rumsfeld said that until the law is repealed, the United States "will have to oppose" any further funding for the construction of a new headquarters for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The alliance has been in the early stages of planning for a new headquarters to replace its aging camp plex of buildings. The project is scheduled for completion in 2007.

"Belgium needs to recognize that there are consequences for its actions," Rumsfeld said. "It's perfectly possible to meet elsewhere."

His remarks, coming at the end of meetings that had seemed to go far in repairing the rift over Iraq, stunned the gathering. But Rumsfeld said he was not making a threat.

"I just stated a fact, that it would not be easy for U.S. or European officials to come to Belgium for meetings," Rumsfeld said. "It shouldn't take a genius to understand that (the law) is a problem. ... People are not going to want to meet here," he said.

Oscar-winning actor Peck dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gregory Peck, the lanky, handsome movie star whose long career included such classics as "Roman Holiday," "Spellbound" and his Academy Award winner, "To Kill a Mockingbird," has died, a spokesman said Thursday. He was 87.

Peck died overnight, Monroe Friedman told The Associated Press.

Gregory Peck

eries "The Blue and the Grey." Peck's rare attempts at unsympathetic roles usually failed. He played the renegade son in the Western "Duel in the Sun" and the infamous Nazi doctor Josef Mengele in "The Boys from Brazil."

Off-screen as well as on, Peck conveyed a quiet dignity. He had one amicable divorce, and scandal never touched him. He served as president of the Motion Picture Academy and was active in the Motion Picture and Television Fund, American Cancer Society, National Endowment for the Arts and other causes.

"I'm not a do-gooder," he insisted after learning of the Academy's Jean Hersholt humanitarian award in 1966. "It embarrassed me to be classified as a humanitarian. I simply take part in activities that I believe in."

Peck died at his Los Angeles home overnight, with his wife, Veronique, at his side, Friedman said.

"She told me very briefly that he died peacefully. She was with him, holding his hand, and he just went to sleep," Friedman said. "He had just been getting older and more fragile. He wasn't really ill. He just sort of ran his course and died of old age."

During his first five years in films, Peck scored four Academy Award nominations as best actor: "Keys of the Kingdom" (1944), "The Yearling" (1946), "Gentleman's Agreement" (1947), "Twelve O'Clock High" (1949). "Gentleman's Agreement," in which he played a magazine writer who poses as a Jew to expose anti-Semitism, was considered a daring film in its time. Peck commented in 1971 that his agent cautioned him: "You're just establishing yourself, and a lot of people will resent the picture. Anti-Semitism runs very deep in this country."

Peck ignored his advice. "Gentleman's Agreement" proved a moneymaker and won the Oscar as best picture.

The actor listed "Gentleman's Agreement" among his favorites of his movies.

Newsman David Brinkley succumbs

NEW YORK (AP) — David Brinkley, who first gained fame as one-half of NBC's Huntley-Brinkley anchor team and for more than a half-century loomed large in the newscasting world he helped chart, has died at age 82.

Brinkley died Wednesday night at his home in Houston of complications from a fall, ABC News said Thursday.

David Brinkley

Chet"; "Goodnight, David" — became part of pop culture.

Based in Washington and focusing on politics, Brinkley was known for his gentlemanly manner, dry wit and occasional suffer-no-fools bluntness. Playing against such refinement were a boyish appearance and a jerky style of delivery that suggested a mild case of hiccup.

"If I was to start today I probably couldn't get a job," Brinkley once said, "because I don't look like what people think an anchorperson should look like."

Perhaps not. But in 1956, his distinctive presence was paired with craggy, leading-man-handsome Huntley for NBC News' coverage of the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

It was a perfect fit. Following that success, the two took over NBC's nightly newscast, with Huntley in New York and Brinkley in Washington. The program, at first only 15 minutes long, switched back and forth between them.

Beyond that regular report, Huntley and Brinkley led NBC as it interrupted regular programming to cover space shots, assassinations, riots and other breaking news with a thoroughness summed up by the unofficial byword "CBS plus 30 (minutes)."

With Chet and David at the helm, NBC News enjoyed ratings dominance throughout the 1960s. During the 1964 Democratic convention, NBC, up against CBS and its anchor Walter Cronkite, won an astonishing 84 percent of the viewership.

But their fame extended far beyond the realm of journalism. A consumer-research company found in 1965 that these co-anchors were recognized by more adult Americans than were John Wayne or the Beatles.

Senate argues over coastal oil inventory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate called Thursday for a comprehensive inventory of offshore oil and gas resources, despite concerns raised by most senators from coastal states that such a study may lead to lifting a 20-year ban on drilling beneath most of America's coastal waters.

The Senate, by a 54-44 vote, rejected an amendment to strip the measure from a broad energy bill that it hopes to finish later this summer.

Supporters of the new study said the inventory was needed to learn how much oil and gas the country has, using the most modern technology including 3-D seismic testing, and did not signal any attempt to open currently off-limit waters to energy development.

That's "a bunch of bunk," retorted Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., one of a solid phalanx of coastal state senators who opposed the measure. They said they were convinced the inventory would be the first step toward pushing for an end to offshore drilling bans.

But senators favoring the inventory argued that it was a study — and nothing more.

"We've got to find out what we've got ... Do we want to adopt an ostrich policy?" asked Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M. While the inventory "appears to be benign," countered Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., "it's nothing more than a prelude to a direct attack on the moratoria." He said the findings are sure to be used to argue that drilling should be allowed in some of the areas — most waters outside the central and western Gulf of Mexico — that have been off-limits since the early 1980s because of environmental concerns.

The oil and gas industry has sought a new survey of the Outer Continental Shelf energy resources.

Revise rules to control Western Days drinking

To hear the Twin Falls City Council's initial complaints, you would have thought Western Days had turned into a Johnny Cash song - full of cowboys wrestling in the mud and the blood and the beer. In reality, it wasn't so.

One day after the recent Western Days celebration, City Council members expressed concerns about a lack of control over alcohol consumption, a number of fights, and other criminal behavior at the celebration. Except that wasn't really the case. The alleged intoxication and fighting never really took place, according to security officers who monitored the event.

In hindsight, council members jumped the gun with their complaints. The episode, however, is a reminder that controlling community festivities can be problematic when alcohol is involved. City leaders would do event organizers a favor by prohibiting alcohol consumption at future City Park festivities.

There are a couple reasons for that. One reason is monitoring. Since 2000, city officials have recommended that Western Days beer drinkers stay in the vendors' beer garden. But people have been free to carry beer around the park, as long as they wear ID bracelets. Police know those wearing bracelets have already shown their ID, verifying they are of legal drinking age. Council members even considered writing a letter to the Western Days Committee to sternly remind them of this responsibility.

But the bracelet policy does not monitor alcohol use among those who bring their own beer coolers.

Bringing your own beer is legal under city ordinances. So why raise a fuss about controlling beer-garden suds, when the city ordinance lets people bring their own and drink it wherever they like?

A second reason for restricting alcohol is more basic. Many local people object to alcohol at a major communitywide celebration on public property. Should alcohol be prominent at a festival attended by children and teens? We don't think it should.

Members of the business community in the Western Days Committee considered going away with the beer garden at this year's event, but they opted to hire a private business for beer sales, instead. Apparently that method didn't satisfy some city leaders. Therefore, if the council still thinks selling alcohol at city events is a good idea, then the city needs to provide clear, consistent rules for supervising beer consumption.

The current policy - with one rule for beer vendors and another rule for individual beer coolers - poses too many complications and pitfalls for event organizers.

Our view: The Twin Falls City Council needs to create consistent rules for alcohol consumption at city park festivities. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Threat of weapons was widened - not diverted

Some war critics can barely contain their glee about the missing Iraqi weapons of mass destruction. But they may be setting themselves up for a fall. As the Bush administration constantly reminds us, Iraq is a big country, and the weapons may yet turn up. If they do, does that mean the administration is vindicated?

Hardly. The focus on missing weapons threatens to obscure the larger point: that with or without chemical and biological weapons, Iraq was never a national security threat to the United States.

The proposition that Saddam Hussein was willing to hand over WMD to terrorists appears to have been based on sheer speculation, and implausible speculation at that. Despite over 20 years of supporting terror against Israel, Hussein never turned over chemical or biological weapons to Palestinian terror groups, securing, correctly, that such action would provoke massive retaliation. Still less was he likely to hand over such weapons to Al Qaeda, a group that has long opposed the "socialist infidel" rule and could not trust to keep the deal secret.

Moreover, Al Qaeda's regime suggests that they never expected Hussein to give them WMD. Computer hard drives and paper documents seized in the March 1 capture of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, a top-level Al Qaeda operative, reveal that the terror group had extensive plans to produce chemical and biological agents on its own. As the Washington Post reported on March 23, the documents show that Al Qaeda had recruited competent scientists and extensively mapped out its plans for anthrax production. If access to Iraqi WMD was a real possibility, why would Al Qaeda go to such lengths to produce its own? And even if one believed the administration's assertions that Hussein might risk destroying his regime by giving Al Qaeda WMD, it was obvious that a war aimed at overthrowing Hussein would greatly increase the chances of those weapons ending up in Al Qaeda's hands. What possible disincentive could the Iraqi dictator have to transferring his arsenal to terrorists, once regime-change was underway and he had nothing left to lose? How could the administration ensure that Iraqi WMD would not be "privatized" and sold to the highest bidder in the chaos accompanying the collapse of the Baathist regime? In fact, components for a "dirty bomb" may already be in the wrong hands. A large nuclear-material storage facility at Al Tuwaitha, south of Baghdad, was looted in the days following the war, and International Atomic Energy Agency officials fear that terrorists could make radiological bombs with the isotopes that have gone missing. What other dangerous materials or proscribed weapons have we lost track of in a "country the size of California"? Sometime in the coming months, U.S. forces may well happen upon some VX canisters or anthrax stockpiles, and the administration will breathe a sigh of relief. Such a discovery may change the media's focus, but it can't change the facts: This war did not avert a serious threat to the United States. Instead, it may have created new ones.

David Brinkley was the best of television news

David Brinkley, who died Wednesday night at age 82, was the greatest broadcast journalist who ever lived. There are many reasons for that. One is that he had a gift for stating complicated things simply. If there was ever a cliché in writing (and he wrote all of his own stuff, unlike many in what passes for broadcast journalism today), I never saw it. And I would have seen it, because I was a copyboy at NBC News in Washington in the early '60s and in charge of filing the correspondents' scripts. I read his scripts as if he was giving me a personal writing course.

Some people thought David aloof, but he was merely reserved. That was a character trait of his generation. He thought too much talking about himself was conceit. He also had a very sense of humor that he used to puncture the pomposity of many politicians for whom he mostly had little regard.

As a kid, I looked for excuses to take him write service copy just to stand in his presence so that something might rub off on this aspiring journalist. I guess something did, because he told me once, "You write well." No award could have meant more. Brinkley and the late Chat Huntley were the first broadcast journalist anchors of the modern era. As their executive producer, Reuven Frank, once observed, no one had ever done this before, so they invented as they went along, creating the modern medium. It wasn't just the volume of stories he covered ("11 Presidents, 4 Wars, 22 Political Conventions, 1 Moon Landing, 3 Assassinations, 2,000 Weeks of News and Other Stuff on Television and 18 years of Growing Up in North Carolina," as he subtitled his memoir). It was the quality of his work that delighted a generation. At the 1964 Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City, David and I were crossing a street and he was mobbed by admirers who wanted his autograph. It was my first whiff of "celebrity journalism," a phrase he detested. Nearly a decade ago, when I had a show on CNBC, David was a guest. He had just published his wonderful memoir, and I was to interview him about it. I told him he would never know what a personal thrill it was for me, a former copyboy at NBC News, to have him on my show. I mentioned that his late mother kept popping up in the book and that she seemed to withhold her approval from him. I asked him if he and his mother had reconciled before her death. He said, "No, but not because I didn't try." "David, she should have been proud of you," I said. "I thought so, too," he replied, as tears filled his eyes. It was a rare look inside the heart of David Brinkley. About five years ago, we met for what would be the last time. He had bought a home in Houston (he said it was to get away from the "trophy wives" of his previous Florida residence). He had a driver, not because of ego, but because he was frail and could no longer drive. His mind was as sharp as ever. Over lunch, he recalled events from many years ago. He also discussed the latest news and was as on top of things as ever. If you are not old enough to remember what Huntley and Brinkley did for TV news, you can read about it in Reuven Frank's book, "Out of Thin Air," or go to the Broadcast TV Museum in New York. These guys were ratings champs, and when Brinkley began his "second act" as the host of "This Week With David Brinkley" in 1981, ratings success quickly followed. The show hasn't been the same (or as popular) since he retired from it. With typical North Carolina modesty, Brinkley once said, "I didn't create anything. I just got here early." Many, especially me, are glad he did. Good night, David. Cal Thomas is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times.

Correction

A May 23 editorial mistated how school district property taxes are set in Idaho. School boards cannot increase property taxes without voter approval. School district tax rates are set according to a formula based on taxable property value in the district. Any additional levies need the approval of local voters. The Times-News regrets the error.

Senators still promote destruction of public lands

On May 27, we attended a meeting that Sen. Crapo and Sen. Craig sponsored on public lands grazing in Jerome. The senators did not attend this meeting, so I did not have an opportunity to ask questions. It was no surprise to me that Mr. Crapo talked only about grazing on his video message as if the other values of the public land were of no concern. The senators did accomplish the purpose of the meeting. The public land managers, "Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service," that must have been required to attend were thoroughly impressed with the implied mandate, "give the ranchers anything they want at any cost." The meeting was not needed to enforce this mandate on public land managers; they already know how to keep their jobs. There were three words that were not mentioned at this meeting. They are "watershed, tourism and wildlife." (I know that my opinion is not the political view of public land management.) Watershed should be the first and the foremost consideration for use of public land. To continue the overgrazing that cost the taxpayers more than $40 million a year with very little return for the money spent is management by politics. (I can think of a few good words for this method of management but "political" seems to cover it adequately.)

Tourism, the second or third largest industry in Idaho, should include recreation and wildlife. Idaho has a wonderful opportunity to be a place where people want to live because of the outdoor recreation opportunities available. The political management of the streams and forests will eventually destroy any hope of this continuing to happen. I travel several thousand miles a year on public land, range and forest. I feel depressed and angry that you can travel for days without seeing any wildlife. I was raised on a ranch and have spent my life with an interest in the condition of our natural resources. Should you ever travel the highway from Glenas Ferry to Boise, envision that just over a hundred years ago, thousands of wagons traveled the Oregon Trail and the livestock lived off the land. Just look at more than 100 years of political stewardship has accomplished. Our senators must be proud to demand the continuation of this type of management of our public lands. ## AROUND THE VALLEY

Hospital needs volunteer drivers

TWIN FALLS - Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has added a new parking lot shuttle service and is looking for more volunteer drivers.

The service uses a golf cart that volunteers drive around the parking lots during peak hours. The cart picks up patients and visitors from the parking area and delivers them to the most convenient entrance for their particular needs. The shuttle is also available to return them to their vehicle when they leave, according to a hospital news release.

The shuttle service operates from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, the times when parking spaces are most limited on the Addison Avenue campus. Additional volunteers are still needed to drive the cart during these times. Scheduling is flexible and, with enough volunteers, the time commitment should be minimal.

Volunteers must be physically fit, customer-oriented and familiar with the operation of a golf cart. Training and orientation will be offered for qualified candidates, the news release said.

For more information about the service or volunteer opportunities, call Loraine Devey at 737-2006.

Kids can show off artistic side in Wendell

WENDELL - Gooding County Health Net will hold Kids Art in the Park from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Children will have a variety of free classes to choose from, including finger painting, beading, sponge painting, sign language, clay, Mexican dance and much more. Parents can help make humanitarian quilts while they're waiting.

Local dealerships will be selling hot dogs, hamburgers and soda.

Blaine County CSI offers trails course

HAILEY - The College of Southern Idaho Blaine County Center is offering a course on historic trails Saturday.

In "Historic Trail Revisited," participants will view portions of historic trails and learn of the impact of emigration historically, as well as environmentally. Instructor April L. Whitten has 12 years' experience in geo-archaeological investigations of natural migratory routes, trails and roads, as well as six years' experience in the reconstruction of paleoenvironments. Her research has led her to investigate paleoindian migratory routes in Wyoming and the Roman roads in Israel and other historic trails.

Participants should bring lunch and water and wear appropriate shoes and clothing. Limited van transportation is on a first-come basis. The cost is $20. The course takes place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and starts at the Fox Building.

For more information or to register, call 788-2038.

Students present flags to Sun Valley chamber

KETCHUM - The Community School graduating class has presented new flags to the Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau as a class gift.

Seniors Ryan McCarthy and Joe DiFrancesco, both Eagle Scouts, raised the new colors at Spencer Unger and Skippy DeFratry lowered the old ones.

Sawtooth Forest raises summertime use fees

STANLEY - Hertz has a few extra dollars with you if you want to picnic in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area this summer.

The SNRA is charging day use fees at Sandy Beach Boat Ramp, Outlet Day Use Area and beach, North Shore Picnic Area and beach, Point Day Use Area and beach, Altamir Inlet Day Use Area and beach and the Wood River Campground picnic area.

Vehicle parking fees will be $3 per day, $10 per week or $25 per year. Weekly and season fee demonstration program trailhead parking passes will be good at the day use fee sites.

Dairyman blames vandals

Open valve causes wastewater flow

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

FILER - A spill from a dairy's wastewater pipeline is under investigation by law enforcement after a dairyman reported possible vandalism.

Desert Rose Farms owner Hank Hafziger reported a wastewater spill on his farm as a possible act of sabotage, Idaho Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Julie Pipal said Thursday.

"There were some unusual circumstances, and the county sheriff is looking into those," she said.

Release of a 2-inch multipurpose valve appears to have caused the spill on 2200 East about two miles south of the dairy, the Ag Department reported. Repeated manual turning of the valve is required to release it, much like an outdoor spigot, the agency said.

Hafziger reported the spill at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Pipal said. An undetermined amount of dairy wastewater was released. Most of the spill was contained near a pumping station, and the remainder spread about 50 feet across the road into a field. Cleanup included scraping the waste from the road and pumping it out of the pooled area.

The spill is under investigation, said Nancy Howell, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman. Further details were not available Thursday from the sheriff's department.

"This is the third act of vandalism we've had," Hafziger said.

Hafziger said he has asked the sheriff to increase surveillance around his farm.

"We're not going to take this sitting down. These people are not helping their cause," he said.

Within two hours after the valve was opened, neighbors were driving by and taking pictures of the spill, Hafziger said. He said he doesn't know who is responsible.

"If I was at fault, I would say so," he said.

Neighbors of Hafziger's dairy have complained for three summers about what they describe as sickening odors coming from the dairy. They often are on the alert to document any waste-handling abnormalities.

Cedar Draw resident Ginny Gunn said neighbors are vocal about the dairy odor problem, but they aren't destructive.

"Why would anybody do that? I don't think anybody in their right mind is going to stoop to these tactics," she said.

Planners set aside vote on lighting

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Although county planning and zoning commissioners liked Bob Stoltz's draft lighting ordinance, they want to first study it and then vote on their plate before taking on any new projects.

Planners Thursday said they'll be talking with county commissioners about possible changes to get to work on a countywide comprehensive plan as well as tackling some zoning issues.

"If we don't have time to do it don't do it," said planning director Wade Bohren, who added that such an ordinance is long overdue. He said he didn't know anyone who hadn't been blinded by the glaring lights driving down the highway on the other side of the interstate.

"I'd be all for it," he said. Stoltz, a county resident and a retired entomology extension specialist with the University of Idaho in Twin Falls, said the ordinance would make things much easier on people's eyes.

Twin Falls County can go from glare to glow, he said. The proposed ordinance drafted by Stoltz and some other members of a county lighting committee, would bring lighting for businesses, schools and otherwise, under the same regulations as those already on the books for confined animal feeding operations. If eventually passed by planners and county commissioners, the new ordinance would require new commercial and industrial businesses to have full cut-off or fully shielded lighting that points downward and does not allow sideways glare.

County commissioners turned down the committee's proposed ordinance a couple of years ago, but put parts of it in the county's new CAFO ordinance. What's different about this second draft is that it pretty much leaves existing businesses alone. The ordinance would not affect existing businesses unless they expanded enough to need a building permit.

Residences, new and existing, would be exempt except for area lights used at farmstead or other residences for security purposes, according to the proposed ordinance. Also exempt would be ordinance would be outdoor light fixtures on facilities and land owned or operated by federal and state government and hold day decorative lighting.

"This is a lot more palatable than the first go-around," said Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman and local dairyman Reagan Hatch.

Planner Darrell Behn said he knows some electricians who say dairy operators would be receptive to the idea because the shielded lights result in an energy savings.

Under the proposed ordinance, all new or expanded commercial and industrial lighting that generates a building permit would have to be designed by a lighting designer, as would sublight vision and common area lighting. No lighting fixture could be mounted higher than 35 feet unless a lighting designer recommended it, and all outdoor agricultural lighting would have to be shielded in such a way that

JEROME - In Idaho, farm settlements tend to wither. Not so east of Jerome.

The Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum, a nearly two-decade-old labor of love by members of the Jerome County Historical Society, is thriving.

The society shows off IFARM on the second Saturday every June in an event it calls Live History Day, a combination of exhibits of vintage farm buildings and folkcraft from the days when going to the grocery store just wasn't an option.

On Saturday, you can get up-close-and-personal, and in some cases hands-on, demonstrations of horse-drawn plowing, spinning, quilt-making, bread-and-butter making, cream-separating, apple-cider pressing, flintknapping, blacksmithing, horseshoing, corn-shelling, comb-making, doll-making, washboard-wash-

If you go...

- What: The Jerome County Historical Society will present its 19th annual Live History Day.
- Where: Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum, located near the intersection of Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93, east of Jerome.
- When: Saturday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. There's a flag-raising scheduled for 10 a.m., with Burl Hult singing the national anthem.
- How much: Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children 6-12; kids under 6 get in free. Family tickets are $15.
- Golf carts will be available for the disabled and the elderly.
- The Jerome County Search and Rescue will sponsor a fly-in breakfast

The Jerome County Historical Society's museum in Jerome, located at 220 N. Lincoln, is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 1-5 p.m. A research room is available with bound copies of newspapers and many books about farming and ranching and everyday pioneering life in south-central Idaho.

One of the largest displays of Japanese-American artifacts from the Mindokota Relocation Center is housed at the museum.

ing, broom-making, home-canning and saddle-making.

On the site you'll find a number of nearly 100-year-old buildings, including a family home, Saturday, starting at the Jerome County Airport, at 7 a.m. Join them for breakfast and take a look at the planes.

Also on view will be a large assortment of tractors, combines, hay rakes, balers, plows, seed planters and irrigation equipment, and an original barracks from the nearby Mindokota Relocation Center, used to intern Japanese-Americans from the West Coast during World War II.

There will be antique tractor-pulling and horse-drawn wagon rides and displays of antique guns and military equipment and vintage cars and trucks.

A variety of food, including hamburgers, hot dogs, ice cream, spiced nuts, kettlecorn and scones, will be available.

There's likely to be even more to see at IFARM during its third decade.

Castleford council hires engineer

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - As part of the city's first steps to comply with costly new federal arsenic standards, the City Council retained a city engineer this week.

The council approved the services of Kiedesell and Associates Inc. of Twin Falls on an on-call basis.

The engineering firm's first official action will be to seek bids for a study of the city's water. The study will identify the levels and types of arsenic present in the water supplied by two city wells.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality estimates the cost of a study alone is between $40,000 and $60,000.

The city, with an annual operating budget of $167,000, wants a bare essentials study. Bid specifications will be for a report no longer than 10 pages in length.

"We want the study to focus only on the arsenic issue," Mayor Rita Ruffing said. "By specifying direction for the study, our cost will hopefully be much less than the DEQ estimate. It absolutely does not make sense that a study of Castleford, with 110 residential and commercial water users, should cost the same as a study for a city with hundreds or thousands of users."

City officials say that any costs not covered by grant funds will have to be covered by loans. And if the city has to secure loans, city officials say they will have to raise water rates.

Castleford is ranked 12th on a DEQ list of qualifying applicants for grant dollars to cover 50 percent of the study cost. The list includes more than 200 sites in Idaho which have been identified with high arsenic levels.

Arsenic levels in the city's water was at 22.3 parts per billion, according to a recent Idaho Department of Water Resources test. The new U.S. Environmental Protection Agency standard of 10 parts per billion must be met by January 2006.

Other city business this week included:

- Moratorium - Zoning ordinance will be the topic of a special council meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday, June 25, at J&D Enterprises.
- An emergency 120-day moratorium preventing new construction.

Richfield remembers past

The Times-News

RICHFIELD - They only celebrate their 95-year-old town's heritage for a single day each year in Richfield. But it's quite a day.

Outlaw Day, a roping and riding-heavy homage to Richfield's sometimes rowdy past, will be renewed for the 48th year on Saturday.

The highlight, as always, will be arena events, which follow the 10:30 a.m. Outlaw Day parade. There will be mud-bog races - and an event called mutton dressing.

That involves three people putting a bonnet, a bra and pantyhose on a sheep. The first team to cross the finish line wins the cash pot (there's a $50 entry fee). Sheep must be caught, not roped.

If you're less adventurous, there's an annual Outlaw Day breakfast from 7-9 a.m. at the town's school, followed by a reenactment of a western shootout by the Blackjacket Retchum, a Shootout Gang at 10 a.m. on Main Street. The parade commences 30 minutes later from City Park.

New York City's first rodeo and there will be stick-horse and goat tying and goat-roping for youngsters.

The annual Outlaw Day dance lasts from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. at the American Legion Hall, with the crowning of the Outlaw Day queen at 10:30 p.m. Tickets to the dance are $5.

This Lincoln County town began life in 1908 as an irrigation project called Alberta, for Alberta Strunk, the first child born at the new townsite.

New York investors later changed the town's name because it suggested the richness of the land and induced potential prospective buyers to the area.

Rainbow Family descends upon Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Getting back to nature in Utah may never be so messy.

The Rainbow Family, a loosely organized counterculture group that holds annual gatherings for up to 20,000 members, is expected to make one of the state's national forests its home for a few days in July.

The family's past gatherings have been a clue, the group's goal of remaining with nature will be a logical headline for the U.S. Forest Service.

Annual members for the Rainbow Family of Living Light were meeting Thursday in the Lyman Lake area on the north slope of the Wasatch-Cache National Forest to decide when and where to hold their annual meeting which usually occurs around the Fourth of July.

The group will meet in the Lyman Lake area, further east in the Ashley National Forest, or in the Joe's Valley area in central Utah, said Kathy Jo Pollock, a national forest spokeswoman.

The forest service has been in discussions with the group about a permit for the gathering. But the process has been stalled by one of the group's points of pride — that it lacks leaders, representatives or spokesmen. That makes issuing a permit difficult, since one person refuses to take responsibility for the group.

Federal forest officials are busy planning for the logistics — and after-shoots — of having so many people camping in one area. The group has gathered annually in numbers of up to 20,000 on public lands since 1972, and last met in Utah in 1974 near Bryce Canyon National Park in the Dixie National Forest.

Members have repeatedly pledged to protect the environment, promising to leave behind volunteers who clean and restore the area.

But that rehabilitation often goes beyond just picking up the trash from a weeklong camping outing.

"I have seen the resource damage and the water quality damage. If it's an area where you have a lot of wildlife, they push them out. With that many people it's hard not to leave a trace," Pollock said.

TWIN FALLS

Lorenzo (Ren) Haley

Lorenzo (Ren) Haley (80), of Twin Falls, Idaho, died as a result of a heart attack on Tuesday, June 10, 2003, at St. Albans Hospital in Boise, Idaho. He was born August 23, 1922, at Burley, Idaho, to Roy G. and Edna Christina Haley. He attended school at Castleford, Idaho, and graduated from high school there in 1942. The following year he went to the University of Idaho in Moscow, Idaho. After one year, he decided to return to the Magic Valley to be a farmer and stockman because he enjoyed living and working on the farm. This was temporarily interrupted when he worked in California at Lockheed Aircraft during World War II. On May 31, 1943, he and Doris Renner were married and moved to their first farm, beginning their happy marriage of 60 years. Their lives were enhanced by their family, which includes two daughters, Judy and Janet, and three grandsons, Paul, Doug and Jon. Lorenzo and Doris owned and operated several farms in the Castleford, Buhl, and Frier areas, before moving to a farm on Highway 74 southwest of Twin Falls, Idaho, where they lived for the last 35 years.

He was an avid horseman and his passion for horses began at two years of age when he spent long days riding his horse, Blackie, in 1933, when he was just a cutting horse performer. He was very impressed and cut cutting became his lifelong passion. He successfully trained and showed cutting horses until recent years. He competed in shows bringing home trophies from Las Vegas, the Cow Palace in San Francisco, the Pacific International in Portland, and all over the western United States. In addition, he has the Idaho State Champion Cutting Horse for five years. He also raised quarter horses of excellent breeding. He enjoyed his many trading transactions, dealing in livestock, and attending auctions.

He was a long-time member of the Baptist Church, and had attended the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls the last 35 years.

He is survived by his wife, Doris Haley, daughter and son-in-law, Judy and Chuck Webb of Ketchum; their sons and wives, Rob and Shannon Webb of Ketchum, Doug and Amy Webb of Bellingham, Washington, daughter, Janet Brewer and her son, Jon Brewer, both of Folsom, California, brother and wife, J. Roy and Irma Haley of Buhl; many nieces and nephews and a very special friend and partner of 30 years, Paul Simpson. He was preceded in death by his parents, and an infant brother, older brother, LaMonte Haley, three sisters, Phyllis Fountain, Gloria Mroz, Caryl Jeanine Haley, and son-in-law, Douglas Brewer.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 15, 2003, at the Twin Falls First Baptist Church, with Dr. Andy Boettcher, officiating. Private family interment will take place in Sunset Memorial Park at a later time. Services are under the direction of White Mortuary, "Chapel by the Park."

BURLEY

Boyd A. Waldemar

Boyd A. Waldemar, 91, of Burley, died Wednesday, June 11, 2003, at his home.

He was born March 4, 1912, in Mount Pleasant, Utah, the son of Nels and Jenny Virginia Justison Waldemar. He was a graduate of Sanicute High School. He married Letitia Nelson in 1942, and they later divorced. Boyd lived in Utah, Texas, and California, prior to moving to Burley, where he has since resided. He had worked for Ryan Aircraft, Lockheed, Boeing, Motor Mercantile in Twin Falls, Mackenzie Auto Parts, and retired from Major Parts, and Supply in Burley. He loved the outdoors and especially enjoyed hunting and fishing.

He is survived by his children, Sue Parker of Twin Falls, Jerry Waldemar and Charles (Lorna) Waldemar of Burley, and Stewart (Linda) Waldemar of Albion; 12 grandchildren; and 24 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 14, 2003, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 East 16th Street, Burley, with the Reverend Al Trachsel officiating. Burial will follow at Mount Marcell Memorial Cemetery in Albion. Friends may call at Rasmussen Funeral Home on Friday, from 6 until 8 p.m., and on Saturday, one hour prior to the funeral.

MACKAY

J.M. James

J.M. James, 75, of Mackay, Idaho, died Tuesday, June 10, 2003, at St. Luke's Hospital in Ketchum, Idaho.

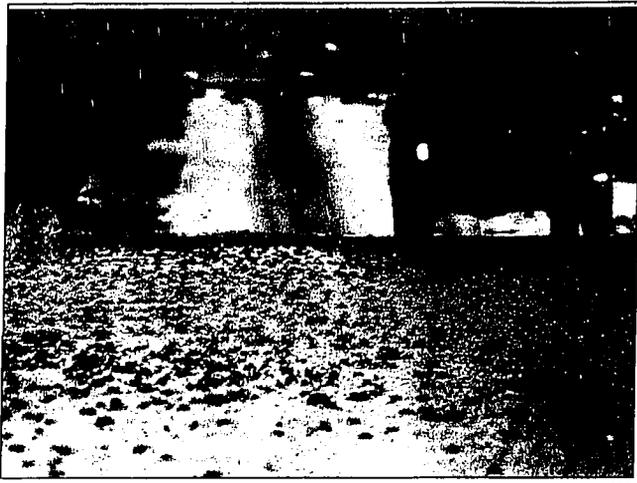

J.M. was born April 13, 1928, in Bell City, Missouri. He was the son of Joseph Marion and Laura Christine (Miller) James, he was the youngest of seven sons. He was a graduate of Bell City High School in 1946 and moved to Gooding, Idaho, in 1949. J.M. married Majorie Thornton in 1950, served with the Marine Corps from June 26, 1953, until he received an honorable discharge due to the death of his wife. He married Virginia Elizabeth Brown in the Gooding, Idaho, area on March 26, 1956. In 1957, J.M. worked with the Department of Agriculture for over 24 years in the ASCS office in Idaho, while working for the government, he was transferred to Mackay, where he retired in 1988.

He was an avid bowler, fisherman, enjoyed Bingo, and spending his children's and grandchildren's sporting and recreational activities. He was a member of the American Legion and Mackay Senior Citizens Center.

He is survived by his wife Virginia, Mackay, two brothers, Lawrence James, Advance, MO, and Milford James, Lebanon, TN, and his children, Bill (Sharon) James, Darrington, Jon (Kath) Lemons, Fairfield; Doug (Janet) Lemons, Darrington; Marty James, Jackson, MO; Jeff (Sharon) James, Mackay; Kony James, Mackay; 11 grandsons, five granddaughters, one great-grandson, and numerous nieces and nephews. J.M. is preceded in death by his parents, and four brothers, Jewel, Milburn, Clotus, and Merle James.

Funeral services will be held Monday, June 16, 2003, at 2 p.m. in the Mackay High School Auditorium. Burial will be at the Mount McCaleb Cemetery in Mackay. The family requests that memorial donations in lieu of flowers be sent to Mackay Senior Citizens Center, 301 Cedar Avenue, Mackay, Idaho 83251. Funeral arrangements were under the direction of Simpson, Marvel Memorial Chapel in Arco.

Fire ravages downtown Emmett building

EMMETT — A seven-alarm fire gutted a 70-year-old building in downtown Emmett Wednesday night. Fire Chief Shannon Crays said the blaze started in the basement of the K & R Furniture Building. Though the furniture store had recently gone out of business, the building still held the Double Dip Ice Cream Store, the Six Rivers Counseling Office, a hospice office and apartments. The cause of the fire has not been determined, Emmett Police Chief Blaine Hyde said. Emmett residents Sherman and Penny Handley watched crews battle the blaze from a nearby parking lot.

Utah governor declares wildfire emergency

SALT LAKE CITY — Gov. Mike Leavitt on Thursday issued a state of emergency declaration that would allow officials to activate the state's emergency operations plan in the event of a wildfire. The declaration is routine and is signed every 30 days during the summer fire season, said Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Scott Behunin. Under the Disaster Response and Recovery Act of 1981, the governor must officially declare an emergency for disaster funds, to be released by state officials.

Alaskan congressman denounces bill that would ban practice of baiting bears

House Resources subcommittee on fisheries conservation, wildlife and oceans

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Alaska congressman angrily denounced a colleague Thursday for introducing a bill that would ban bear baiting on federal lands. "I wish I had my native people in here right now," Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, told the bill's sponsor, Rep. Jim Moran, D-Va., at a hearing. "You'd walk out of here with no head on it."

House Resources subcommittee on fisheries conservation, wildlife and oceans

Moran had argued that bear baiting, which involves leaving anything from doughnuts to pizza out while hunters lie in wait, was unsportsmanlike. "You're trying to legislate what's right for my people," Young told Moran. "You don't know anything about Alaska. You're messing with my people, and that's the wrong thing to do."

Moran stressed that the bill applies only to federal lands. "My constituents do, through their taxes, provide means to purchase and maintain that federal land," he said. "Shooting a bear in the back while you're stuffed in garbage to feed does not constitute a fair sport."

House Resources subcommittee on fisheries conservation, wildlife and oceans

Peterson said that without baiting, problems with bears getting into neighborhoods and rummaging through people's garbage would increase. But Moran argued that baiting contributes to those problems, by acclimating bears to human food and making them more likely to approach people and homes.

The bill's other sponsor, Rep. Elton Gallegly, R-Calif., said federal policy needs to be more consistent. He noted that while the National Park Service bans feeding of bears, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management defer to state authorities on the matter.

"If it is wrong and reckless to feed bears in parks, it is also wrong to do so in national forests and on BLM lands," he said. Matt Hogan, deputy director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said the Bush administration opposes the bill. "Without a wide array of management tools at their disposal, state managers may experience an increase in dangerous interactions between people and bears," he said.

Besides Alaska and Minnesota, the states that allow bear baiting are Maine, New Hampshire, Michigan, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Utah and Idaho.

Thieves steal fees from national lands

BOISE (AP) — Thieves have taken thousands of dollars in fees backcountry and river users pay across southern Idaho to help maintain and improve campgrounds, trails, boat launches and other sites.

"Those fees that we lose there can't come back and help us," said Monte White, law enforcement supervisor for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in southern Idaho. The Payette River has been the hardest hit, White said. Nearly $1,000 has been taken from the boxes rangers and kayakers deposit their $3 daily parking fees in. "The thefts began late last summer and are continuing this year, White said. A reward is being offered to help catch those responsible.

The thefts cut into recreation budgets. Fees on the Payette River finance maintenance projects on U.S. Forest Service and BLM sites.

Boise County Sheriff patrols to assure public safety, signing and reconstruction projects. The Boise National Forest and BLM jointly manage a fee project that has raised more than $200,000 since it began several years ago. The cash has paid for a new kick ramp at Danckia, reconstruction of the Kayak Corner trail, new kick signing and staircase improvement at Hot Springs and Chief Parrish.

Minidoka school district evaluates new structure for middle schools

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT - The recent change from junior high schools to middle schools in Minidoka County will continue to be evaluated for years.

School district officials agree no major problems arose in the program's inaugural year. They say the transition from seventh-through ninth-grade junior high schools to sixth-through eighth-grade middle schools was fairly smooth.

Minidoka County School Board member George MacDonald has heard no comments about the change.

Former middle schools director, and now principal at West Minico Middle School, Sandra Miller said sixth-graders fit in fine at the middle school level.

However it may take a few years of "tasting" different systems to know exactly what works best at East Minico and West Minico middle schools, Miller said. Administrators and teachers are still refining the concept of middle schools.

"At this point we're learning, too," Miller said.

One change already planned for next year is the daily class schedule. Last year the two middle schools followed different schedules. Students at West Minico had 45-minute periods, and at East Minico core classes ran for 55 to 60 minutes while elective classes were 45 minutes. Next year both schools will offer 55-minute class periods.

Miller suggested teachers and staff members jot down the pros and cons of this year's schedule for comparison a year from now. In the end, the permanent schedules might be different at the two schools.

Choosing the right format for the middle schools is an ongoing process and includes much staff input.

"We do two middle schools are alike," Miller said.

Advisory period will also change. That program pairs a teacher and a group of students for the year. A key factor of the advisory period is to provide an adult advocate for students, Miller said. This year advisory class ran for about 25 minutes. This fall it will be split into two 15-minute periods at the beginning and end of the day.

Teaming is another concept introduced with the change. Teaming brings all teachers in the core subject of one grade level together on a regular basis. They evaluate student progress for individual students and the grade level as a whole.

Teachers may also discuss upcoming tests and prepare to administer and analyze those tests.

This year teaming occurred during the school day. Next year it's planned for before or after school or as teachers can fit it into their schedules, Miller said. It will be another concept to evaluate next year.

MacDonald has some concerns about not having teaming as part of the school day. Teachers often have duties before and after school and he doesn't want teachers saddled with duties during teaming time.

Advisory and teaming received mixed reviews from those involved. Some teachers and students liked the concepts and others didn't.

"Our goal is to have happy, healthy, educated middle school children," Miller said.

Small plane crash kills Utah man

ATLANTA (AP) - A Utah man was killed and another seriously injured after their small plane crashed near a rural airstrip Thursday afternoon.

Witnesses saw the plane circle the landing area and approach the runway. The pilot appeared to abort the landing because he did not have enough room to set the craft down. He tried to gain altitude but clipped the treecops at the end of the runway and crashed.

Authorities did not release the names of either the passenger, who was pronounced dead at the scene; or the pilot, who was taken by helicopter to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, where he was listed in serious condition late Thursday.

One year ago, Nampa Police Chief Alan Creech and Reserve Officer Mark Hupre died about a half mile from the Atlanta landing strip. In that accident, witnesses also said the pilot appeared to miss the landing and gain altitude.

West Minico School has new principal

The Times-News

PAUL - Students at West Minico Middle School will see a familiar face in a new position when they return to classes this fall.

The Minidoka County School Board appointed former Middle Schools Director Sandra Miller principal of West Minico Middle School. She replaces Steve Hubsmith, who retired. At a special board meeting last week the board approved Hubsmith's retirement, effective immediately.

The board then transferred Miller from her position as middle schools director to principal of West Minico Middle School for the 2003-04 school year. Miller's salary remains $61,996.

Minidoka County School District Superintendent Nick Hallett said district officials knew Hubsmith was near retirement and planned to retire soon.

The board doesn't plan to hire another middle schools director.

Hallett said the intent of the position was to aid in the transition from junior highs to middle schools. The position was to eventually be phased out. Instead, the board plans to hire a person who will work half-time at each middle school as the vice principal.

Hubsmith worked for the Minidoka County School District for 23 years, mostly in administration. Miller has worked for the district 16 years. She was a teacher at Minico High School for 13 years.

Father of missing toddler refuses to believe grandmother drowned baby

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The father of a missing toddler refuses to believe the child's grandmother drowned her in the Snake River in Idaho.

Adam Bishop on Thursday urged the public to continue to search for 19-month-old Acacia Patricia Bishop.

Bishop said he believes his mother-in-law, Kelley Jean Lodmell, is capable of concocting the story of the child's drowning in order to keep the baby from her and the toddler's mother, Casey Lodmell.

Kelley Lodmell, 38, is charged with first-degree murder and kidnapping for Acacia's disappearance. A woman who has been diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic, reportedly told police that she was trying to kill both herself and her granddaughter in the river.

Lodmell took Acacia from her great-grandparents' Salt Lake County home on May 25. The child is believed to have drowned in the Snake River at Idaho Falls the next afternoon.

An extensive police search of the river has yet to find the child's body.

Acacia's parents have repeatedly said they believe the child is being hidden by someone in Idaho Falls.

"We believe she (Lodmell) has passed her off and created this whole scenario to make us believe that our child is dead and gone," Bishop said. "It is just what would make her the happiest. She doesn't think we deserve her."

The family has offered a $10,000 reward for the child's safe return.

Scientists argue solution to save salmon hinges on population and human nature

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) - Efforts to save wild salmon have ignored fundamental factors that stand in the way of success, including the rapidly growing population of the Northwest, increasing water demand and the inability of people to limit their consumption, scientists said Thursday.

"It is arguable that no solution is possible until we recognize these root problems," said William E. Rees, a professor of ecological economics at the University of British Columbia.

"If we don't confront our nature, we will be destined to repeat our history and potentially the next societal collapse will be on a global scale."

The comments came at the World Summit on Salmon, a gathering of about 160 scientists, fishing and environmental advocates and government officials sponsored by Simon Fraser University.

Robert Lackey, a fisheries biologist for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Corvallis, Ore., said the reasons for the collapse of salmon are well-known: overfishing, destruction of habitat by urban development, logging and agriculture, dams, hatcheries, water withdrawals for irrigation and pollution by birds and marine mammals.

Despite strong returns in the Columbia Basin in recent years due to an upswing in ocean conditions, wild salmon populations in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California remain on a downward trend that began 150 years ago, he said.

One big problem is population in the Pacific Northwest, which is expected to grow from the current 15 million to more than 50 million in the next century, leading to increasing competition for water and habitat, Lackey said. Yet the issue is largely ignored, he said.

Rees suggested history is full of examples showing humans are unable to limit their consumption and thus cannot sustain themselves.

Rees compared the world's failure to act on recent disclosures that ocean fisheries have declined by 90 percent to the people of Easter Island in the South Pacific cutting their last tree about 500 years ago - even though they knew trees were vital for building canoes to catch fish and rollers to move their huge iconic statues. The result was the collapse of their society and population.

"How was it that people couldn't recognize the writing on the wall?" Rees asked. "We are in a state of denial. We treat the symptoms and don't treat the fundamental problems."

As society works to make the global economy more efficient, wild salmon got left behind, Lackey said. While some wild runs will probably hang on, the bulk of salmon are likely to come from hatcheries.

Jennifer L. Nielsen, fisheries supervisor at the U.S. Geological Survey Alaska Science Center said even fish released from hatcheries on the other side of the Pacific can hurt wild runs in North America.

She outlined research showing pink salmon from hatcheries in Japan and the Russian Far East feed in the same parts of the ocean Alaskan sockeye. Years of large hatchery releases in Asia matched up with years of low sockeye returns in Alaska.

Scientist sees anthrax mail case as 'the perfect crime'

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — The deadly anthrax by mail attacks may have been "the perfect crime," says the chief government scientist in charge of defending the U.S. military against biological agents.

They can't crack it because there's no forensic that it was a perfect crime," said Mohr, who led a team Wednesday for The Associated Press of one of the few U.S. laboratories that deals with anthrax.

"But we are not suspected anymore. Some of us were poly-graphed. Col. Gary Harter, commander of Dugway Proving Ground, said he hadn't seen or heard from the FBI in a year.

Whistleblowers sue Newmont Mining

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Two former environmental specialists for Newmont Mining Corp. filed a lawsuit accusing the world's largest gold mining company of routinely misrepresenting state regulators about pollution at a Nevada mine.

"Firing employees for trying to protect the environment is against the law," said Henry Egghart, Reno lawyer.

Newmont officials defended their environmental practices on Thursday and denied the women were retaliated against or fired.

Man appeals sentence in Post Falls murder

BOISE (AP) — The attorney for a Post Falls man urged a state appeals court Thursday to overturn his conviction for killing his ex-girlfriend on various grounds, including one of his public defenders eventually going to work for the prosecutor.

In addition to raising the issue of potential conflict of interest because his attorney went to work for the prosecutor, Cherry also claimed 1st District Judge James Judd improperly permitted evidence at the trial of prior trespass violations and gave improper jury instruction.

Father, son survive plunge into Arctic waters in Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — A father and son on an arctic rafting expedition survived a plunge under river ice and five days without food or supplies, rescuers said.

"The only thing that saved them was a little pocket where they could hold their head and breathe."

The pair lost their supplies Friday when they and their raft were trapped under about 30 feet of water on the North Fork of the Koyukuk River before surfacing in a break in the ice.

New drug rules would ease access to generic versions

WASHINGTON - President Bush on Tuesday announced new rules that would let generic drugs to market by making it harder for the makers of brand-name versions to block the competition.

The change, effective on Aug. 18, limits brand-name companies to only one 30-month stay blocking a generic drug's entry into the market. Companies frequently sue when generic competitors file an application for their product with the Food and Drug Administration, claiming the generics infringe on their patents. A lawsuit automatically triggers a 30-month stay delaying FDA consideration of the generic - and brand-name companies can file a second lawsuit meaning multiple 30-month stays. The FDA had first proposed the new rule preventing brand-name companies from filing multiple lawsuits last fall, and finalized it a day after a key Senate committee approved legislation that would go even further.

Nation in brief

Heart device maker pleads guilty to cover-up

SAN FRANCISCO - A manufacturer of heart surgery devices pleaded guilty and agreed to pay $32.4 million in penalties Thursday for covering up malfunctions that may have led to 12 deaths and numerous other complications.

Endovascular Technologies of Menlo Park, a subsidiary of Indianapolis-based Guidant Corp., pleaded guilty to 10 felonies, including shipping misbranded products and making false statements to government regulators.

The problems involving the Ancure "stent-graft" device, which is used during operations to treat heart aneurysms, were resolved after the device was voluntarily recalled in March 2001 and before it was reintroduced five months later, the company said in a statement.

Senators question fourth Internal probe of FBI agent

WASHINGTON - Three senior senators are raising questions about the FBI's decision to conduct a fourth internal investigation of an agent who aired concerns about the bureau's counterterrorism investigations.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Sens. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said in a letter to FBI Director Robert Mueller that the FBI seems quick to launch such probes when agents speak out publicly.

"This sort of knee-jerk reaction manifests an insecurity and weakness that is dangerous for such an important agency in the war on terrorism, and is certain to have a chilling effect on other FBI employees who want to fix problems, or even make their supervisors aware of problems," said the letter dated Thursday.

Authorities charge two students in dorm fire

NEWARK, N.J. - Two students have been charged with murder and arson for allegedly setting the fire that killed three freshmen at a Seton Hall University dorm nearly 3.5 years ago, authorities said Thursday.

The two, residents of the freshman dormitory at the time, were arrested Wednesday after being indicted by a special grand jury.

In addition to murder and arson, Joseph T. LePore of Florham Park and Sean Ryan of Livingston were charged with aggravated assault and conspiring in a coverup, authorities said.

The two used matches or a lighter to ignite a paper poster that had been torn down and placed on a couch made of highly flammable foam, Acting Essex County Prosecutor Donald Campolo said.

Surgeons operate on impaired pregnant woman

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - A pregnant woman who fell from a loft and was impaled on a microphone stand was in critical condition Thursday after surgery to repair a ruptured lung. Her baby was not harmed, officials said.

The had been born, 34, was injured at her home on Wednesday. She was 8.5 months pregnant.

Maine moves closer to universal health program

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Maine lawmakers moved closer to enacting one of the nation's most far-reaching health insurance plans Thursday, burnishing the state's reputation as a pioneer in expanding access to medical care.

Both the state House and Senate gave the bill preliminary approval. Final approval could come by today, and first-year Democratic Gov. John Baldacci has already endorsed the plan, which would create a quasi-public agency to help people secure medical coverage through private insurers.

Maine's move toward universal coverage is unusual in a year when most states are simply trying to hold onto the coverage they have, said Donna Folkemer of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

The Maine plan builds on and combines efforts already under way in states like California, Minnesota, Vermont and Rhode Island, Folkemer said.

"This is the only state in the country that has a clear plan, funded to provide universal health care in five years," state Sen. Michael Brennan said.

"Maine is way out front on this stuff," agreed Arthur Levin, director of the New York-based Center for Medical Consumers. "In the absence of the feds not moving in the right direction, it falls to the states to pick up the pieces."

Under the Dirigo Health plan, all 180,000 people in Maine who cannot otherwise afford coverage would have access to it by the year 2009. Dirigo, the state motto, is

Latin for "I lead."

Participants would be charged subsidized premiums that would vary according to their ability to pay and the amount of coverage purchased.

The program would not require a general tax increase. The money would come from a patchwork of sources, including a tax on insurance companies, federal funds and $80 million the state expects to save each year by eliminating unreimbursed medical costs run up by uninsured people.

Unlike fossil fuels - coal, oil or natural gas - which produce an array of chemicals that pollute the air as well as the greenhouse gas carbon dioxide, a hydrogen fuel cell when making energy releases only water as a byproduct.

But in an article in this week's edition of Science magazine, researchers at the California Institute of Technology raised the possibility that if hydrogen fuel replaced fossil fuels entirely, it could be expected that 10 percent to 20 percent of the hydrogen would leak from pipelines, storage facilities, processing plants and fuel cells in cars and at power plants.

Because hydrogen readily travels skyward, the researchers estimated that its increased use could lead to as much as a tripling of hydrogen molecules, both man-made and from natural sources, going into the stratosphere, where it would oxidize and form water.

Cigarette makers spend more on advertising

WASHINGTON - Cigarette manufacturers are spending more money than ever to advertise and promote their products, according to a government report released Thursday.

The industry spent $11.2 billion on advertising and promotions in 2001, the last year for which such figures were available, according to the study by the Federal Trade Commission.

The spending marked a 17 percent increase over 2000, when the industry spent $9.6 billion. Despite the increase in advertising, cigarette sales dropped 3.8 percent from 2000 levels, the study said.

Cigarette companies spent most of their money - $4.8 billion - on costs associated with offers such as "buy one pack, get one free." They also spent more than $4 billion for promotional allowances, such as paying retailers for prime shelf space.

Tangled college romance takes surprise turn

DEAR ABBY: When I was in college 10 years ago, I experienced my first intimate relationship one summer with another student, "Bill." When the fall semester rolled around, I learned that my randomly selected roommate in the dorm was an ex-roommate of Bill's. I'll call her April.

I did not tell April about my relationship with Bill because she was still getting over him. Our romance continued for several weeks, but Bill and I were careful to keep it from her.

As the weeks went by, April and I became closer. I finally cut all ties with Bill because of the loyalty I felt to my roommate. In the decade that followed graduation, I married and had a family. I lead a quiet life and I am content.

A few days ago, I received a phone call out of the blue from April. To my astonishment, she informed me that after all these years, she and Bill are back together and about to be married. She asked me to attend the wedding.

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

I never came clean with April about my relationship with Bill and I have no plans to. Knowing him, he never breathed a word of it to her either.

I still hold both my ex-roommate and my ex-boyfriend close to my heart. They are an important part of my past. Would it be inappropriate to attend this wedding, considering the circumstances?

- EX IN A TANGLED WEB, SOMEWHERE IN OHIO

DEAR EX: You are older and happier, and so are they. The romance between you and Bill was over a long time ago. If you can go to the wedding and sincerely wish them both well, I see no reason not to attend.

DEAR ABBY: My live-in boyfriend, "Larry," carpools with me to work every day. We enjoy the benefits of sharing the hour-long commute - the money we save on gas and maintenance, the commuter incentives offered by our workplace and each other's company.

The one thing I don't like is the fact that Larry is constantly late every morning - which in turn makes me late. It's not as though he doesn't have plenty of time to get ready. After I've finished showering and dressing, Larry is still lying around in bed. Once he's up, he turns on the weather channel or checks his e-mail. By the time he finally showers and dresses, we're already running late. (His supervisor doesn't mind if he shows up around 10 a.m. However, I recently started a new job and am expected to be at my desk by 9 every morning.)

I've tried everything I can think of to get Larry to speed up his morning routine. I've joked, teased, nagged and begged. Now I've reached the point where I just sit on the couch and glare at him until he's ready to go. When I suggest we drive separately, he acts insulted. Is there some magic trick to convince my boyfriend of the importance of punctuality... or should I bite the bullet and insist on making the hour-long commute by myself?

- ALWAYS TARDY IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ALWAYS TARDY: Your boyfriend may not be a morning person, but the lack of consideration he shows for the demands of your job could have severe repercussions on your career.

Give him a deadline to get ready to leave. (Set the clock ahead if necessary.) If he's not ready to go, leave without him. I'll bet that you won't have to do it twice.

Girl finds pen pals by putting message in a bottle to sea

SULLIVANS ISLAND, S.C. - Addie Devine found a pen pal after she put a message in a bottle and tossed it into the sea along the Maine coast last summer.

Now the bottle is being used to carry a sort of seagiving chain letter. Addie, an 8-year-old who lives in Cumberland, Maine, tossed the bottle into the Atlantic near Maine's Acadia National Park last July.

Mike Rumph found the corked wine bottle last month in mud behind his Sullivan's Island house and found two notes inside.

"Hello, who ever gets this note, please write back. This note comes from the Saddleback Island cabin ... Hope you get this," said Addie's note, written July 6, 2002.

It included her address and the names of her parents, Suzette and John Devine.

The second note, was from Kristine and Charlie, Perry of Jacksonville, Fla., who found the bottle last August as they were boating near Perry Island off the Maine coast.

Kristine Perry said they thought Addie's note was cute and, on their way back to Florida, added a second note asking whoever found the bottle to write.

Gemini scrutinizes relationship

IF JUNE 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY - Your interests are eclectic; you have a natural aptitude for electronics and possess great communication skills. You will fall in love and give love in return this year.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Strong sexual attraction overwhelms Pluto, the moon and Jupiter have you in high spirits. You feel there's an opposition. But, Saturn reminds you, not everything is easy come, easy go.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): As a pleasure-seeking Taurus, you enjoy your good food and music. The approaching full moon highlights your special needs. Sagittarius is on the lookout.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): The pending full Jeraldine Saunders moon in your house - a partnership close to Pluto puts partnerships and marriage under new scrutiny. Deep emotional adjustments may have to be made, but the choice is yours. All will become clear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Learn patience. Your love life needs springing up. Uranus helps you. Lucky Jupiter is in your house of money; you can treat yourself without remorse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Opportunities are flooding in. Your energy level is booming. Protected and loved, you can indulge in delicate spiritual pursuits, but do not underestimate partners. Children and lovers are expecting goodies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pleasant news which may be career or status-related makes you day. Plutinos are not intended for your ears. You can cash in on sweet smiles all around you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may have to roll up your sleeves and give a helping hand to kin. Make subtle suggestions to a friend in need. It's hard to resist taking advantage. You dream of a magical partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mars, your ruler, is soon leaving Aquarius, and benevolent the rest and sharpness of your sting will be less hurtful. People will find you more attractive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tonight's full moon makes you demanding and irresistible. You may have a slumpe of what real power is. Hide your own power play behind Neptune's misty facade.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You value others' virtues more than your own. This night's full moon puts you on call to give service at work and behind the scenes. A Saturn he upsets you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Follow your workout routine with determination. You want to celebrate with canapes and champagne. You're adventurous, and, whether single or partnered, you need no inspiration.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Your ruler Neptune in your house of psychic ability makes you want to channel a message for someone.

Sea sponges tend toward female gender

By far the most of those sea sponges are female.

The Zoot Suit, some recall, was a long cut with padded shoulders, full pleated trousers cuffed tightly at the ankles, and a heavy key chain adorning. A client writes: "My dad says Los Angeles banned suits during World War II. Why? Soldiers, sailors and marines despised zoot suits. Just the wearing of zoot costume invited a brawl, always dangerous, sometimes deadly."

Cops arrest former wife of rapper

ST CLAIR SHORES, Mich. (AP) The former wife of Grammy-winning rapper Eminem could face drug charges after police found what appears to be cocaine in her car during a traffic stop, police said Thursday.

Kimberly Anne Mathers was pulled over on eastbound Interstate 94 on Tuesday morning, the St. Clair Shores Police Department said in a statement. She was accused of failing to change lanes to move away from an emergency vehicle that was parked on the shoulder, police said, and was arrested for driving with a revoked license.

An officer then found the suspected cocaine in Mathers' car and on her person, the statement said. She is released pending further investigation, and no formal charges had been filed as of Thursday afternoon.

Kimberly Mathers divorced the rapper whose legal name is Marshall Mathers III, in 2001. They were married in June 1999 and have a daughter together, Hailie Jade.

Eminem has rapped in his songs about killing his ex-wife. In "97 Bonnie and Clyde," he talks about stuffing her body in a trunk. In 2001, the 30-year-old rapper pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed weapon and was sentenced to two years probation after a confrontation with a man he believed was his killer Kimberly Mathers outside a nightclub.

Air France flies oldest Concorde to Smithsonian

Curators plan to install the plane in Air and Space Museum; public display set for Dec. 15

CHANTILLY, Va. (AP) - Air France turned the oldest of its Concordes over to the Smithsonian Institution Thursday for display near Washington's Dulles International Airport. The 27-year-old aircraft, once seen as the future of passenger air travel, made the last of its 6,967 trips when it flew from Paris to Dulles.

The Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum already is home to the Wright Brothers' plane and the airplane Charles Lindbergh flew solo across the Atlantic. The first of Air France's five Concordes went into service in January 1976. Its inaugural flight from Paris included stops in Dakar, Senegal, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and it remained in service for 17,824 flight hours. "It was the ultimate flight experience, not just because it broke the sound barrier but also because it had its own distinctive atmosphere," said Air France chairman Jean-Cyril Spinetta.

The Concorde that handicapped its whole career was not being able to fly over land because of the sonic booms," said Don Lopez, deputy director of the Smithsonian. The aircraft, developed in the 1960s as a joint project of the British and French governments, saw only limited production.

The Smithsonian will exhibit the plane inside the massive Stephen F. Udvar-Hazy Center, a display hangar the museum is building near Dulles, some 25 miles west of Washington. It will house key elements of the museum's collection that cannot fit in the existing building on the National Mall. The Concorde will go on public display Dec. 15, when the facility is opened to mark the centennial of the Wright Brothers' first powered flight at Kill Devil Hills, N.C.

A large space has already been roped off to accommodate the Concorde's 204-foot-long fuselage and huge, swept-back wings. It will be displayed near the U.S. Army Air Corps' Enola Gay, the B-29 Superfortress that dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. Paris-to-Washington Concorde service began in May 1976, but those flights were suspended in November 1982. Service between Paris and New York ended last month. The aircraft's limited operations schedule was completely disrupted after the July 25, 2000, crash of an Air France Concorde on takeoff from Paris, which led to the suspension of all Concorde operations for 13 months.

Bruce Willis brings reading of 'Dog Logic' to Hailey

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - Has Bruce Willis gone to the dogs?

Dog logic would say it's so. The silver-screen star and part-time Blaine County resident will step up to the local stage in a play reading of "Dog Logic" tonight and Saturday - the same weekend the animated "Rugrats Go Wild" hits the movie theaters with Willis providing the voice for Spike the dog.

Blame it on Willis' new Labrador puppy, if you must. At any rate, Willis, who enjoys relaxing at his Hailey home with his three daughters when he gets the chance, will step away from the camera to sit down on the Liberty Theater stage he and Demi Moore bought several years ago in Hailey.

Tickets are $50 and are earmarked as a fundraiser for the Company of Fools, a theater company Willis invited to lay down roots in Hailey several years ago. Willis' role in "Dog Logic" is the type that could land him in the doghouse with those who would pave paradise. He portrays Hertel Daggett, the caretaker of a run-down pet cemetery in the middle of the California desert. Daggett, who communes with the dead pets under his care, is fighting to keep his ex-wife, long lost mother and real estate developers from turning his 40 dried-up, burnt-out acres of little dead pets into a shopping mall.

"It's written for Bruce," said Denise Simone, COF's associate artistic director. "Not literally written for him. But it fits him beautifully and what he can bring to it. It's a dark comedy in which he plays a dark, utterly fascinating character."

Simone will join Willis for the reading, along with veteran Hailey actress Claudia McCain and Rich Rush, who appeared in the Fools' recent productions of "The Tempest" and "A Christmas Carol."

The play was written by Thomas Strellich, a California playwright who has won a host of honors, including the Dramatists Guild's New Play Award for his Magic Theater production of "Neon Palms" in San Francisco.

"His play has a relevant message, especially for an area like ours where people are so in love with their pets and the land," Simone said. "What does it mean to sacrifice the land for urban sprawl? What makes man different from all the other animals?"

Simone says Willis and the Company of Fools have wanted to do this particular play for "a long, long time." The play reading was arranged hastily when Willis found a couple of unscheduled days on his calendar.

There wasn't enough time to do a full-scale production, although some props will be scattered around the stage. But Simone holds out hope that the Fools can stage a full-scale production of the play in the future. It's that funny.

"It's also a very interesting piece of theater," McCain said. "There are so many angles and layers to it, so much to bite into."

Two readings that had been scheduled for Twin Falls, Roper Auditorium were consolidated into the Saturday evening performance at the Liberty Theater when the Fools realized that many of those who would have attended the play readings already had tickets for Jazz in the Canyon, a weekend-long music festival in Twin Falls. Tickets that were bought for the Twin Falls performances will be honored at Saturday night's performance.

Bruce Willis is appearing in a staged reading of Thomas Strellich's play 'Dog Logic' tonight and Saturday at the Liberty Theater in Hailey, and he's also the voice of Spike the dog in the newly released movie 'Rugrats Go Wild.'

Ketchum offers interactive theater

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Sun Valley has long been the backdrop for summer weddings.

But it's never seen anything like "The Big Hitch."

"The Big Hitch" - its name taken from Ketchum's mammoth Big Hitch ore wagons - is a spoof on everything from Sun Valley weddings to Sun Valley ski instructors to Bellevue cowboys to Los Angeles trust-fund babies.

The theater event, which will be staged by New Theater Company at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church through July 10, was written expressly to give summer tourists a laugh-and-learn glimpse of Sun Valley's rich history and quirks.

But Chris Millspeugh, who penned it, says it should also tickle the fancy of locals. "It's more than a play; it's interactive theater in the vein of murder-mystery packages and such productions as "Tony and Tina's Wedding."

In this case, audience members become wedding guests who

The Bigame Boys from 'The Big Hitch': David Barovetto, Harry Millspeugh, Nick Green and Doug Hanks, watch a raucous ceremony unfold, then attend the barbecue reception that follows. They'll even have an opportunity to line-dance and be in the wedding pictures as they interact with the characters, who will remain in character, such as historical characters at Colonial Williamsburg or Plymouth Plantation.

Boise-born musician comes home to Jazz in the Canyon

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - It's been an amazing ride for a kid from Boise. Curtis Stigers, a clarinet player apprenticed to jazz pianist Gene Harris, went to New York City to become a rock star and instead got discovered playing saxophone in a jazz band - by the son of legendary rock impresario Clive Davis.

Stigers' early success was as a middle-of-road singer likened to Michael Bolton, and he only earned his now-formidable reputation in the jazz world by moonlighting - with artists like Gene Harris.

Stigers will bring all of those currents to a two-hour set starting at 7 p.m. and culminating Jazz in the Canyon Saturday night in Centennial Waterfront Park.

Upwards of 1,500 jazz fans are expected at the 10-hour jazzfest, which will also feature acclaimed jazz pianist Dave Frishberg, who will perform at 5 p.m. "It's doubtful that Curtis Stigers has ever ingested anything stronger than thubarb pie," critic Rex Reed wrote in the New York Observer. "He is the musical equivalent of Mr. Deeds on his way to town or Mr. South on his way to Washington - a lank, swinging Jimmy Stewart type headed for stardom."

Actually, Stigers - who left Boise barely 15 years ago - has already seen his share of fame. His first album for Arista Records went multi-platinum and his smooth, ballad-heavy blend of soul and rock earned him another hit for "Peace, Love and Understanding" on the soundtrack of the movie "The Bodyguard."

Stigers has recorded with Jackson Browne, co-written songs with Carole King and had Transatlantic hits with "Wonder Why" and "You're All That Matters to Me." But what really matters to Stigers is jazz, and it's only relatively recently that he's pursued it.

'Hollywood Homicide' hits Magic Valley theaters

New to the valley

• "Cowboy Bebop: The Movie" — In this anime feature, "space cowboy" and bounty hunter Spike Spiegel has to head off a deadly scheme that menaces the human colony of Alba City on 22nd century Mars. What should be the routine capture of a two-bit cyber-pook by brunette bombshell Faye Valentine escalates into a murderous game of cat-and-mouse as Spike pursues Vincent Volaju. The survivor of a program of biomedical experiments, Vincent plans to release a plague of microscopic robots that will kill every human on the planet, and Spike must outwit him to save Mars. Rated R. • "Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Met Lloyd" — More baffling than trying to determine who's dumb and who's dumber is trying to figure out why the Farrelly brothers would allow a prequel of "Dumb and Dumber" to be made without a fight. Set in high school, before the 1994 comedy, this has all the gross-out humor of Peter Dinklage's "Boyz n the City" but none of the goofy sweetness. It also has neither of the original stars, though Eric Christian Olsen and Derek Richardson have undergone such a complete transformation, it feels at times as if we're watching Jim Carrey and Jeff Daniels. PG-13 for crude and sex-related humor and for language. 82 minutes.

• "Hollywood Homicide" — If this movie were a crime — and it is — then its makers would be arrested for assault with a deadily dull thriller, although they could probably plead to a lesser count of attempted comedy. Harrison Ford and Josh Hartnett mumble their way through a muddled mystery about a group of murdered rappers. Who did it? Why? Don't worry, it doesn't matter. Ford's character would rather sell real estate and Hartnett's wants to be an actor. If their intricate musical cell phone rings make you laugh, then prepare to laugh at least once every four minutes. PG-13 for violence, sexual situations and profanity. 111 minutes.

• "Rugrats Go Wild" — The denizens of both the "Rugrats" and "Wild Thornberrys" franchises suffer in this crude and cynical attempt by Nickelodeon to ram them together. The worst thing is that the puerile Rugrats have dragged the charming Thornberrys down into the diaper bag with them. This is gross-out humor pitched to kids barely old enough to know what's gross and what isn't. The filmmakers even revive Odorama, a gimmick with accompanying scratch-and-sniff cards pioneered by John Waters. Meanwhile, both the animation and the plot are chaotic, cluttered and slapdash. Stay away from this one. PG for mild crude humor. 85 minutes.

• "Anger Management" — Jack Nicholson as the court-appointed therapist for Adam Sandler, a guy clearly more passive than aggressive, and a guy counselled by his doc not to cool down but to pop his top. The movie invites laughs the way Nicholson's character invites rage. PG-13 (crude sexual references, profanity).

Continuing

• "Down with Love" — Fitzzy as a champagne cocktail, "Down with Love" is both a satire and a tribute to the Doris Day-Rock Hudson workplace romances so popular in the early '60s. PG-13 (risque situations, double entendres).

• "Finding Nemo" — We've suspected it for some time, but this film all but makes it official: With five successes out of five attempts, Pixar Animation Studios is now the most reliable creative force in Hollywood. Following the two "Toy Story" films, "A Bug's Life" and "Monsters, Inc.," Pixar gets another boost with an engaging undersea story, written and directed by Andrew Stanton, of a fish family learning life lessons that (surprise!) humans can benefit from as well. With its eccentric characters, the film's morals about the realities of single-parent households (not previously thought to be an undersea problem) and the importance of trust, family and friendship go down a lot easier. When a film comes up with bonuses as devilishly devious as rapacious seagulls who repeat the question "Mine? Mine? Mine?" in a menacing monotone, it's not difficult to cut it all the slack it needs. Voices include Albert Brooks, Ellen DeGeneres. (1:44, G).

• "The Good Thief" — Nick Nolte

Josh Hartnett (left) and Harrison Ford play two detectives with hectic private lives who are investigating the murder of a rap group in Revolution Studios' action comedy 'Hollywood Homicide'.

• "Bruce Almighty" — Jim Carrey with Divine powers? Heaven help us! Heaven — in the form of Morgan Freeman as God in a maharishi tunic — helps Carrey, an aspiring TV news anchor in "Bruce Almighty," a disarming comedy about the uses and abuses of omnipotence. PG-13 (profanity, sexual content, crude humor).

• "Daddy Day Care" — Eddie Murphy as "The Nutty Professor" was funny. Murphy as "Doctor Dolittle" was OK. But Murphy as a "Daddy Day Care" nanny is a ninny. I don't know whether he has lost his mojo, or just his edge. I just hope he finds it before his next movie. PG (poity language and humor).

• "Down with Love" — Fitzzy as a champagne cocktail, "Down with Love" is both a satire and a tribute to the Doris Day-Rock Hudson workplace romances so popular in the early '60s. PG-13 (risque situations, double entendres).

• "Finding Nemo" — We've suspected it for some time, but this film all but makes it official: With five successes out of five attempts, Pixar Animation Studios is now the most reliable creative force in Hollywood. Following the two "Toy Story" films, "A Bug's Life" and "Monsters, Inc.," Pixar gets another boost with an engaging undersea story, written and directed by Andrew Stanton, of a fish family learning life lessons that (surprise!) humans can benefit from as well. With its eccentric characters, the film's morals about the realities of single-parent households (not previously thought to be an undersea problem) and the importance of trust, family and friendship go down a lot easier. When a film comes up with bonuses as devilishly devious as rapacious seagulls who repeat the question "Mine? Mine? Mine?" in a menacing monotone, it's not difficult to cut it all the slack it needs. Voices include Albert Brooks, Ellen DeGeneres. (1:44, G).

• "The Good Thief" — Nick Nolte

stars as a haggard, froggy-voiced gambler with a heroin jones and an eye for fine art in Neil Jordan's remake of a classic Jean-Pierre Melville gangster flick. A heist movie, set on the French Riviera, it's big on mood and style and boasts a multinational cast that mumbles and meanders with conviction. 1 hour, 49 minutes. (drugs, sex, violence, profanity).

• "Holes" — Louis Sachar's young adult novel has been turned into a movie with a younger crowd in mind, but older adults savvy enough to disregard labels will find it surprisingly rewarding. Working from a screenplay by Sachar himself, director Andrew Davis has come up with a sweetly entertaining fable about strange doings in a juvenile correction facility in Texas that switches tones between the comic and the menacing. It's a difficult but finally satisfying balancing act that succeeds, despite a few hicups. Shies LaBeauf, Sigourney Weaver, Jon Voight, Patricia Arquette, Tim Blake Nelson and Dule Hill. (1:51, PG, for violence, mild language, and some thematic elements.)

• "The In-Laws" — Albert Brooks and Michael Douglas star in this forced but agreeable comic conflation about two very different fathers-in-law-to-be — a nervous podiatrist (Brooks) and a super secret agent (Douglas). "Spy Kids" hijinks and "Father of the Bride" angst ensue. PG-13 (profanity, cartoon violence).

• "The Italian Job" — This breezy caper movie, based on the 1969 Michael Caine film, has it all over the original. Writers Donna Powers and Wayne Powers imaginatively rework Troy Kennedy Martin's screenplay for the original film to create a fast and furious action-adventure. The film's comedy counts for as much as the clever and risky ways in which mastermind Mark Wahlberg and gang go after the nasty Edward Norton, who has double-crossed them. The film's big plus is that its director, F. Gary Gray, takes a relaxed, light touch with the proceedings while keeping it all moving briskly. The film's big pursuit sequence, as ingenious as it is, is arguably stretched out a little too long, but even so this is clearly one of the summer's smarter, more sophisticated big-scale entertainments. With Seth Green, Jason Statham, Mos Def and Charlize Theron. (1:55, PG-13, for violence and some language.)

• "The Lizzie McGuire Movie" — For the uninitiated, Lizzie McGuire is the typical, klutzy, trying-to-find-herself junior-high graduate. But Lizzie is a Disney ideal, star of its cable channel and now a feature movie, portrayed by "teen" icon Hilary Duff. "The Lizzie McGuire Movie" is an old-fashioned, harmless dolce, made all the more charming by Duff's winning appeal. PG.

the usual action-movie suspects. The film is nothing if not representative of a new, distinctly less hopeful world. Singleton unleashes spasms of sadism and innumerable leering shots of girls gone wild, albeit — alas — not behind the wheel. More tellingly, in place of Diesel, Singleton offers up the wily, visage of Paul Walker, who, having again received top billing, again barely registers, despite his "best attempt" to walk the walk and talk the talk. The moviemakers wanted diesel, but this star runs strictly on unleaded. (1:47, PG-13, for street racing, violence, language and some sensuality.)

• "Wrong Turn" — The movie suffers a fate similar to many other horror and supernatural thrillers released in the last decade: It leaves you with the feeling that you're watching an episode of "The X-Files," only Muller and Scully never show up. In this case, a group of young people stranded in the West Virginia wilderness are terrorized by a group of inbred, cannibalistic killers. Director Rob Schmidt, working from a screenplay by Alan McElroy, manages to keep the suspense up through the final hour of the film and takes advantage of the natural creepiness of the forest and cabin, where much of the film's action takes place, and the cast acquires itself agreeably, carrying off horror archetypes without much fanfare. With Desmond Harrington and Eliza Dushku. (1:24, R, for strong violence and gore, some language and drug use.)

• "X2: X-Men United" — Genetic mutants with superpowers and super-neuroses, the X-Men return in "X2: X-Men United," unfettered by trying to explain who they are, where they came from, and what's up behind the walls of that fancy prep school in suburban New York. Once again directed by Bryan Singer, who got to work with a bigger budget than he had in 2000's "X-Men," PG-13 (violence, profanity, intense action).

How important is this population segment to your business? Just take a look at the following Idaho population numbers from the 1990 and 2000 U.S. Census:

Age:	1990	2000
55-59	39,467	60,022
60-64	38,550	47,505
65-74	69,755	75,971
75+	54,510	69,976
Total	199,282	253,445

This is a 27% increase since the 1990 census for the age groups!!

This is a substantial increase in a group of people that you do business with! This year's magazine will focus specifically on the 50-65 age group — a group that has a higher income level and more disposable income than any other age group.

'Dark Side of the Moon' will debut Tuesday

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - One of the most popular and long-lived rock albums in history has been turned into the newest entertainment program at the Faulkner Planetarium. 'Pink Floyd's Dark Side of the Moon' will be the 8:15 p.m. program each Tuesday through Saturday this summer beginning Tuesday.

Specialist Chris Anderson has been working on graphics and computer animation for the program since the first of the year. Greenwald says when they started the project, they were simply following up on the success of the Faulkner's other popular Pink Floyd program, "The Wall," which has been shown at various times over the last couple of years.

classical rock groups are traditionally popular at laser-oriented theaters.

The lights and graphics produced at the Faulkner are not laser, but are computer generated images that are projected by programmed light sources.

The rest is true three-dimensionality.

Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors, $2 for students, and $9 for families of up to two adults and five children.

The Faulkner Planetarium is located inside the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the north side of the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Extol will headline metal show Tuesday night

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Extol, a Norwegian rock band that's made a name with its fusion of death-metal, classical music, jazz and goth, will make a stop in Twin Falls Tuesday night.

Extol got together in 1994 with the intention of starting a death-metal band with progressive influences, according to the Ultimate Band List, a online rock encyclopedia.

Heavily influenced by iconic death-metal groups such as Iron Maiden, Napalm Death, and Morbid Angel, Extol found an international audience with the release of its first album,

"Burial," in 1998.

The current lineup - vocalist Peter - Espevoll, guitarists Christer Espevoll and Magne Glidje, bassist John Robert Mjaland and drummer Eystein Holm - has been together for four years, releasing the band's third album, "Undeceived," in 2000.

IN BRIEF

Bumstead will pitch for LSU in CWS
TWIN FALLS — Former College of Southern Idaho pitcher and NJCAA first-team All-American Nate Bumstead is expected to pitch tonight for Louisiana State against Cal State Fullerton in the College World Series.

Bumstead has an 11-3 record with a 3.97 earned-run average and 85 strikeouts for the Tigers this season.
He played two seasons at the CSI, recording a 13-2 mark last year with a 2.06 ERA and 104 strikeouts in 96 innings on the mound. Bumstead led the Scenic West Athletic Conference in wins and finished No. 2 in strikeouts last year.

Former Golden Eagle Okafor plays in USBL

TWIN FALLS — Former College of Southern Idaho center Uche Okafor is playing with the Brooklyn Kings of the United States Basketball League.

Okafor is eighth in blocked shots in the league with 26 blocks through 18 games. Okafor played just five minutes in the Kings' 147-117 loss to Pennsylvania on Monday.

Okafor's last season at CSI was 2001, where he was an honorable mention All-Region 18 pick and averaged 9.2 points, 7.2 rebounds and 2.4 blocks per game. He transferred to Missouri but was ruled ineligible by the NCAA for signing a professional contract in Russia before coming to the United States.

Tom Watson tips his hat after making a birdie Thursday at the U.S. Open in Olympia Fields, Ill. Watson shot 68 to share the lead.

OLYMPIA FIELDS, Ill. — Since when did the U.S. Open become, well, soft?
It's supposed to be golf's nightmare in elm trees.
But Thursday on the far south side of Chicago, the U.S. Open at Olympia Fields went all Hallmark Network on us.
The first day of golf's most cruel-hearted tournament ended with the lead shared by 53-year-old Tom Watson, whose caddy, Bruce Edwards, is feeling the debilitating effects of Lou Gehrig's disease, and 33-year-old Brett Quigley, whose 58-year-old father is caddying for his son's most memorable golf moment.
Not only that, red (under-par) numbers were scattered across the Open leader board like flowers at a wedding. By sunset, 44 players — nearly one-third of the 156-player field — had shot par or better.

“Of all the (U.S. Open courses) I've seen, that was easiest,” Ireland's Padraig Harrington said after shooting an opening 69 that's usually gold-bird good in the Open.
For a tournament that has built its reputation on being as tough as a B-movie villain, the Open relented for one gentle day.
“You can get away with some things out here you probably can't get away with in other Opens, at least for now. You don't have to be quite as precise,” said Mark Calcavecchia, who shot 68 in an

Minico wins in first round of home tourney

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — So far, so good.
The Minico Spartans baseball team entered its own American Legion Rupert Baseball Invitational Thursday hoping to shore up its defense.
Mission accomplished.
The Spartans (3-4) defeated the Highland A baseball team 10-2 in the tournament's opening game at Warburton Field without committing an error. The victory could have been seen as a demonstration of what poor fielding can do to a team's chances when the Razorbacks took themselves out of the game by giving up five runs on four errors in the first inning.

through the early going, collecting just seven hits. Cory Warburton and Kody Cole both had two hits, with Warburton scoring twice and collecting an RBI. Cole scored twice on his 18th birthday.
Miguel Escobedo hit a two-run single in the fourth.
Jarred Tracy, making his first appearance on the mound since early in the high school season, went five innings and allowed just two hits and a run.
“I didn't know if I'd be locating that good,” Tracy said. “But I felt pretty good. My curveball was where I wanted it.”
Kreg Schow came in and finished the game, going the final two innings. It was his first time pitching since junior varsity ball a year ago.
“I was just out there and threw the ball,” he said, shrugging off his performance. “Just playing catch.”

Minico coach Ben Frank said the Pocatello team was most likely antry playing in an upper-level tournament.

Northwest Series rolls into town

Special to The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Making the first of two season starts, the Raybestos Brakes Northwest Series arrives Saturday for the sixth time at Magic Valley Speedway.

Area racers Eddy McKoon, Brett Thompson and Nick Lynch lead an estimated 25-entries to race the inaugural Pepsi 125 John Dillon of Boise, the 1990 Northwest Series champion, is also expected to run.
Three-time Magic Valley Speedway winner Garrett Evans will run as will current series-points leader John Bender of Snohomish, Wash., who has two victories in his last three starts after five events including the latest May 31 at Yakima, Wash.

Through the series' first five races this season, luck has been the story with several drivers looking to turn around their luck. The field will vie for its share of $44,472 in posted awards for Saturday's sixth series event of the 14-race championship series.

With Magic Valley Speedway being a favorite stop on the series, many drivers are looking to get their season back on track.
Evans of East Wenatchee, Wash., said he hopes to turn his disappointing season around at a seemingly lucky oval.

“Magic Valley is a fun track to race,” he said. “I have been real good there because it is the type of track I love to race on.”

If he wins, it will be Evans' 50th career series victory.
Gary Lewis of Bothell, Wash. hopes to pick up his first win of the season at a track where he has three Bud Pole Awards and is the current track record holder.

“I love the place. I have always been fast there and enjoy coming to town. The fans are great and really make us feel at home,” he said.

The Northwest series returns Sept. 13 for the season-ending NAPA 150.

The Budweiser Grand National Sportsman class, NAPA Pony Stocks and Race Trucks complete Saturday's racing, which begins at 7 p.m.
Tickets are $25 for adults and $10 for all children with gates opening at 2 p.m., and McDonald's time trials at 6 p.m.

UW moves to fire Neuheisel

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Washington athletic director Barbara Hedges announced Thursday she is firing Rick Neuheisel as Washington's football coach for betting on the past two NCAA basketball tournaments and lying to school officials and NCAA investigators about it.
“Rick's actions have left me little choice and seriously undermined his ability to continue as the head football coach,” Hedges said during a news conference.
Neuheisel was suspended with pay and given until June 28 to respond to his notice of termination.
Neuheisel, who acknowledged to NCAA investigators he bet on the tournaments, couldn't be reached for immediate comment.

Lies finally undo coach, columnist says — D2

“This is a sad night for me because I've poured a lot of myself into this job — and it was a great job,” Neuheisel told KING-TV late Wednesday.
“I am not the guy they're portraying me to be,” he said. “I'll find new challenges. I will hopefully scale new heights.”
The NCAA prohibits gambling on college sports by athletes or athletic department staff.

“I guess it was justified,” said Warren Moon — a former Washington and NFL quarterback. “He did gamble on college athletics. Even though it was some type of neighborhood pool, it was gambling.”
The 42-year-old Neuheisel, who went 33-16 in four seasons at Washington, insisted he didn't believe he had broken NCAA rules because it was an informal off-campus pool.
He also said a memo from the athletic department's compliance director cleared him to participate.
Hedges indicated Neuheisel's gambling was the last straw.
“The NCAA has taken a position that such gambling is categorically prohibited by its rules.”

Coaching duo comes to Twin Falls

By Scott Thompson Times-News writer

BURLEY - Burley coaches Niki and Shaun Walker are following a familiar path - moving from Burley to Twin Falls High School. Niki Walker will take over as head coach of the Bruins volleyball program, said Twin Falls Principal Ben Allen. She coached the Bobcats last season after a year as head volleyball coach at Minico.

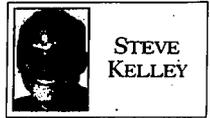

"He was in here about every day bugging me about them," Allen said. "And that's good, when you hear good things about teachers from other teachers." "I was very impressed with her organizational skills," Twin Falls athletic director Andy Barton said. "And her portfolio, as far as how she coaches her team, is very strong." Niki Walker laughed when asked whether she is afraid of being tagged as the Larry Brown of Maple Valley coaches after leaving after one-year stints at both Burley and Minico high schools.

Her husband, Shaun, stepped down after a year as head baseball coach for the Bobcats. He also served as an assistant on the football, basketball and baseball teams at various times in his three years at Burley. He served as Barron assistant in both basketball and baseball. Shaun Walker said he has been told he will assist Harr in basketball and new coach Mike Federico on the baseball team - a job for which he had interviewed. "Even though I didn't get what I wanted in the baseball job, I get a chance to work with Mike Federico who is a great person and a great coach," Shaun Walker said. "And I will get the chance to expand my baseball knowledge. Plus, getting back to Matt Harr has always been No. 1 with me." Harr said Walker expressed him in his interview for the baseball job. "He identified him as an up-and-coming head coach - someone we wanted in our program," he said. The two will be missed at Burley, said Principal Doug Bailey. "It's going to be real tough to replace the caliber of those two," Bailey said. The Walkers' move leaves Burley with three head-coaching vacancies - volleyball, girls track and field, and baseball. The timing, so late in the hiring season, could make it difficult for Burley to replace the two, Bailey added. The Twin Falls School Board still must approve the hirings. A career of lies finally catches up with Neuheisel

Rick Neuheisel is a career liar. He lied to boosters at Colorado who thought he was going to stay there forever. He lied to the staff of Colorado recruits, who thought he'd stay there for the length of their college careers. He lied at Washington to his athletic director who he lied to NCAA investigators. Like Richard Nixon during Watergate, he lied to protect himself. And, when his back was against the wall, he lied some more. In the end, at Washington, he hung himself with his own lies. He ruined a once-promising career with his lies. Tell me who the next college athletic director will be who will hire this liar?

Neuheisel lied again. When they asked him about the pool, the question shocked him. He felt blindsided by it, and he denied participating in any gambling pool. He fell back to a strategy that always has worked for him the past 10 years. If he had known about Richardson's memo and thought it gave him the go-ahead to gamble in the pool, why did he go to the investigators? He thought he did nothing wrong, why didn't he tell the investigators the truth? If he knew about the memo, why didn't he admit to Hedges that he had investigated it? Why didn't he mention the memo to Hedges? After all, he says he thought he had done nothing wrong. His lies, as much as his gambling, are giving the university the just cause it needs to fire him. His lies were the hammer they needed. His lies made it easier to get rid of him.

Neuheisel, as one of his former players said yesterday, is a young man with a lot of money, and he was corrupted by his wealth. He was a smooth-talking golden boy who could wiggle out of any problem. The life of the golden boy, however, turned into fool's gold this week. Neuheisel, who was soft, always thought, with Neuheisel, that Washington wasn't his destination job. The contract extension he signed at Washington was a dream, but the job wasn't a dream. It seemed he always was eyeing the next job. Notre Dame one season. San Francisco the next. And he was a coach who wanted to be a coach, but he wanted to be respected. When he recruited players, he told them they would have the time of their lives. Neuheisel's teams reflected his personality. They were undisciplined. They were soft. They made careless mistakes that cost them games, just as their coach made careless mistakes that will cost him this job. "This is my life," Neuheisel said earlier this week. "It's a life of lies. A life he has dismantled all by himself."

Team withdraws from RBI after player dies in crash

By Scott Thompson Times-News writer

The opening day of the Rupert Baseball Invitational was played under a pall Thursday after word spread that a member of the Boise Brewers died in a wreck traveling to the tournament. Three others were injured - one critically - in the one-vehicle rollover, which happened at 7:40 a.m. outside of Boise on I-84 just west of Stage Stop at mile post 64. Eighteen-year-old James Arthur Dodge, of Meridian, died on the scene when he was ejected from the rear of the vehicle. Idaho State Police Trooper Van Wagaman said it didn't appear that Dodge was wearing a seat belt. Minico coach Ben Frank said he was stunned hearing the news. "You just can't imagine that," Minico coach Ben Frank said. "During the baseball season, you're with these kids just as much as their parents. Your heart just goes out to the family, the team, the coaches." Eighteen-year-old Joshua Sheehan, of Meridian, was critically injured and was taken from the scene by helicopter to a nearby hospital. Nineteen-year-olds Thomas J. Fenwick, of Boise, and Thomas J. Pinkley, of Meridian, were also injured and transported by ambulance. The Brewers, who were scheduled to play the tournament's second game at noon against the Highland AA team, withdrew from the tournament. The driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel and drifted off the interstate, ISP said in a report that didn't identify the driver. State police are continuing to investigate the circumstances of the crash.

in for the Boise Brewers, who withdrew from the game after a player died in a crash traveling to the tournament. The Razorbacks' AA team beat the young Spurs 13-6, as Minico committed 10 errors in the contest.

McCooy Worthington went 2-for-3 with two runs scored and an RBI for Minico in that game. In other games Thursday, Cache Valley beat the Highland AA 6-1 and the Highland A knocked off Brigham City 5-4 in nine-innings.

Minico played Brigham City in the late game, which ended after The Times-News' press time.

Cardinals outlast Red Sox in 13

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Edmonds hit an opposite-field, three-run homer in the 13th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Boston Red Sox 6-7 Thursday after wasting a pair of late leads.

Edmonds also had a solo homer and Edgar Renteria went 5-for-6 for the Cardinals, who took two of three from the Red Sox in a first meeting between the teams since St. Louis won the 1967 World Series 4-3.

Nomar Garciaparra hit a tying triple in the ninth inning and a tying single in the 10th inning.

Trot Nixon's RBI single off Esteban Yan (2-0) cut it to 6-6 in the bottom half.

With runners on first and third, Bill Mueller failed to sacrifice before grounding into a double play that scored a run. Yan then walked Jeremy Giambi and intentionally walked Jason Varitek, putting runners on first and second.

John Damon, who hit 1-for-6, then fled to short right, ending the game after 4 hours, 33 minutes.

Cardinals starter Garrett Stephenson allowed just three hits over seven innings, but the Red Sox rallied in the ninth against Cal Eldred.

Yankees 6, Astros 5

NEW YORK — Joe Torre made it clear he expects his New York Yankees to play with more heart. They got the message.

One day after getting no-hit for the first time in 45 years, the Yankees bounced back against the same Houston bullpen that shut them down. Alfonso Soriano hit a tiebreaking single in the eighth inning, and New York beat the Astros 6-5 Thursday.

Torre held a press conference after Wednesday night's 8-0 loss, and the Yankees responded by showing some championship grit.

Houston took a 5-3 lead in the sixth, but this time, the Yankees were able to get some big hits against the Houston bullpen.

Kian Rivera's RBI single off Juan Sanchez cut it to 5-4 in the sixth. Raul Mondesi singled off Brad Lidge with two outs in the seventh to tie it at 5.

Soriano's single off Octavio Dotel (5-2) completed the comeback. The Yankees won for the first time this season when they did not after six innings — they had been 0-20.

Giants 8, White Sox 4

CHICAGO — Barry Bonds hit a tying two-run homer in the ninth and Rich Aurilia hit a clutch two-run slam later in the inning to rally the San Francisco Giants over the Chicago White Sox 8-4 Thursday night.

Barry Colton (6-6) struck out Bonds in his first three at-bats and took a three-hitter into the ninth.

Colton, who pitched complete games in three of his previous 14 starts, allowed seven runs and seven hits in 1.3 innings. He became the first pitcher to strike out Bonds three times in one game since Anaheim's Scott Schoenweber on June 13, 2001.

Dodgers 3, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Kazuhisa Ishii allowed two runs over seven innings and Paul Lo Duca drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning single as the Los Angeles Dodgers dominated a three-game sweep of the Detroit Tigers with a 3-2 win Thursday night.

Lo Duca extended his hitting streak to 20 games as the Dodgers handed the Tigers their second St. Louis Cardinals' Jim Edmonds jumps on his three-run, home run in the 13th inning Thursday at Fenway Park in Boston.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. —

list with a neck injury. The Devil Rays have lost a season-high seven straight games.

Braves 4, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Gary Sheffield and Andrew Jones each homered and Shane Reynolds took a three-hit shutout into the seventh inning for Atlanta.

Barry Zito (7-5), last year's AL Cy Young Award winner, dropped his first inter-league game in eight starts as Oakland lost its third consecutive series for the first time in nearly a year.

John Smoltz pitched one inning to record his 25th save in 26 opportunities.

Blue Jays 5, Pirates 4

TORONTO — Mark Hendrickson won for the first time in almost a month as Toronto completed a two-game sweep of Pittsburgh.

Carlos Delgado increased his major league-leading RBI total to 74 with a two-run single for the Blue Jays, who won their fourth straight game.

Hendrickson (5-5) won for the first time since May 16.

Pittsburgh's Aramis Ramirez went 0-for-4, ending his career-high hitting streak at 22 games.

Twins 15, Rockies 3

MINNEAPOLIS — A.J. Pierzynski hit a grand slam and a three-run homer for Minnesota, which scored seven runs in the first inning.

Pierzynski hit his second career grand slam, had his first multi-homer game and finished 3-for-4. His grand slam came off Darren Oliver (3-5) with the Twins already leading 3-0 in the first.

Padres 9, Indians 4

CLEVELAND — Jake Peavy got his first win since April 25 as home runs by Rondell White and Ryan Klesko helped San Diego rally past Cleveland.

Trading 3-0 after four innings, the Padres scored four runs in the fifth and five in the sixth to help Peavy (5-5) and avoid being swept in their first ever series against the Indians.

Mets 11, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas — Vance Wilson homered and drove in five runs and Al Leiter pitched six shutout innings as the Mets won just their eighth game since Steve Phillips was fired.

Leiter, Graeme Lloyd and John Franco combined for New York's third shutout of the season. The Rangers had 11 hits, but left 14 men on base while being shut out for the third time.

Leiter (7-3) struck out six and scattered eight hits over six innings, four days after allowing eight runs on nine hits in two innings against Seattle.

National League Brewers 6, Marlins 5

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers had little trouble generating power against the pitching staff which has given up the fewest home runs in the major leagues.

Eric Young and Wes Helms each homered in a five-run sixth inning as the Brewers hit his 20th homer, as the Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak with a 6-5 victory over the Florida Marlins on Thursday.

Young hit his ninth of the season and Helms hit his 11th, both establishing career highs. Sexson's homer tied him with Cincinnati's Adam Dunn for the NL lead.

Games will be played at the Twin Falls High School field near Sawtooth Elementary and at Carter-Gibb and Frontier fields.

Five Twin Falls Terror teams will play in brackets for girls aged 16-and-under, 14-and-under and 12-and-under.

The tourney is sponsored by Domino's Pizza and Latham Motors.

Robbins rejoins Oakland Raiders

ALAMEDA, Calif. — Barret Robbins stood on the Oakland Raiders practice field, hands on hips, quietly chatting with fellow center Adam Treu.

On the way, it seemed like any other day at NFL minicamp. It wasn't.

This was Day 1 of Robbins' freerun.

On Thursday, he participated in his first formal workout since being suspended by the Raiders a few hours before the Super Bowl. The NFL center's fall from grace couldn't have been more public. Robbins, a recovering alcoholic who's since been diagnosed with bipolar disorder, had a roller coaster weekend in January that included a drinking binge, a trip to Tijuana and thoughts of suicide.

After a 31-day stint at the Betty Ford Center and several weeks of recovery, he feels ready to repair his image — and to return to the Raiders alongside a few teammates who initially didn't want him back.

Southwest Missouri State still isn't satisfied

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Southwest Missouri State isn't happy just to be in the college World Series for the first time.

The Bears were a surprise at-large selection to the NCAA's field of 64.

That attitude ended when they went on the road and won the regional at Nebraska and then the super regional at Ohio State.

Coach Keith Gutin doesn't want his team to be this year's lovable underdog at the College World Series.

"We never beat that drum, and we're not going to start now," Gutin said Thursday. "We felt early on that we were going to be a good club. Like a lot of clubs, you have peaks and valleys. The peak is here, and it has been the last two weeks."

The CWS opens Friday with South Carolina (44-20) playing Stanford (45-15) and the Louisville (48-14) meeting Fullerton State (45-20-1).

First-round games Saturday pit Southwest Missouri State (40-24)

Bears have played in the NCAA baseball tournament.

Of all those times, this wasn't the year the Bears thought they'd make it to Omaha.

"Ohio State and Nebraska had those big budgets," Rowe said, "but when you step between the lines, all you've got is your 11.7 scholarships and your coaches. We'll take our chances."

While Gutin said his team will enjoy every minute it is in Omaha, third baseman Brooks Colvin promises not to get caught up in the new atmosphere.

"We've been the underdog the last two weekends," Colvin said. "Hopefully, the fans will adopt us. If not, these last two weeks have been the best preparation we could have for a tournament like this."

South Carolina, runner-up to Texas last year, plays a Stanford team that is making its fifth straight CWS appearance.

The Gamecocks lost six of seven games in March, but since April 30 they are 16-3.

"In the middle of the season, we weren't sure we were going to play in the conference tournament, but we were able to play some pretty good baseball down the stretch," South Carolina coach Ray Tanner said.

Stanford, which lost five of its first eight games, has won 18 of its last 19 to earn its 15th trip to the CWS.

The Cardinal feature the nation's top catcher in Ryan Garco and pitchers John Hudgins (11-3) and Mark Romanczuk (12-0).

Fullerton opened the season with a three-game sweep of Stanford.

"Any time you can sweep Stanford, you know you have a pretty good ballclub," Titans coach George Horton said.

LSU is back at the CWS for the first time since 2000. It's the first trip since Leonard as head coach. He took over in 2001 for college baseball icon Skip Bertman, who now is LSU's athletic director.

A comfortable lead

Matt Kenseth's 176-point lead is the largest lead of the season and the largest after 14 races in a season since overtaking Dale Earnhardt Sr. led Dale Jarrett by 213 points in 1993.

POST-RACE NOTES

Dale Jarrett's woes continue

Cox News Service

Dale Jarrett's run of bad luck continued Sunday when Jarrett's Ford hit the wall on the 54th lap and burst into flames. Jarrett, who was the defending champion of the Pocono 500, escaped unharmed.

"It's always hard to get out, especially when you're trying to get out in a hurry, but everything is fine," Jarrett said.

"It's unfortunate," Jarrett added. "I had a really good car, and that's just kind of the way the season has gone."

The 1999 Winston Cup champion dropped to 27th in the series standings.

Schrader escapes crash unhurt

Jarrett wasn't the only driver who experienced a fiery crash at Pocono. Ken Schrader's Dodge flipped and hit the wall at about the same spot Jarrett's car hit.

Schrader, who was not injured, said his car suffered a "massive brake failure."

Biffle criticizes Skinner for crashes

Greg Biffle had harsh words for Mike Skinner, who wrecked near the end of Sunday's race.

"He [Skinner] causes about half the wrecks in Winston Cup. He pushed the 9 [Bill Elliott] up into the wall through the tunnel in front of us and wrecked a bunch of people," Biffle said.

Skinner wound up 44th, three laps down. He is now winless in 217 career starts.

Labonte spins out Green in tight fight

Racing for seventh place with just a few laps remaining, Terry Labonte spun out Jeff Green which ended the Pocono 500 under caution.

Green's No. 1 Chevrolet crashed in nearby, the same spot Steve Park did in 2002 when he was driving the No. 1 car.

Labonte went on to finish seventh for his third top-10 of the year, while Green ended up 33rd for his seventh straight finish of 10th or worse.

"He pulled down to try to block me. I tried to go back to the outside of him to pass him, but I got into the back of him and around he went," Labonte said.

"I hate it for him, because he was having a really good run and he's the last guy that I'd ever want to run into because he's a super guy."

Newman gets back on track

Ryan Newman jumped two spots in the standings to 16th after he finished fifth Sunday at Pocono.

It was Newman's third straight top-five finish as he continues his turnaround from a horrible start this season after being rookie of the year in 2002.

"It looks like we've got our consistency back now," he said.

Davis believes team didn't break rules

Cox News Service

Bill Davis Racing issued a brief statement last week expressing surprise that Daimler Chrysler has terminated its agreement with the team and filed a lawsuit against it.

"Bill Davis Racing firmly believes that it has not breached the Daimler Chrysler agreement, and that there is no justifiable reason for Daimler Chrysler asserting a claim that it has breached such an agreement," according to the statement.

Davis, who now fields Dodge Intrepids for Ward Burton and Kenny Wallace, allegedly has been assisting Toyota in its preparations to enter NASCAR's Craftsman Truck Series.

Kenseth has shot at bonus

Matt Kenseth will collect a $150,000 bonus from the series sponsor should he win Sunday at Michigan International Speedway.

It's been 45 races since a Winston Cup points leader won a race and took home the bonus — which increases by $10,000 each time it goes unclaimed. It's payable to the points leader or any driver who wins to move to the top of the standings.

After 14 races this season, Kenseth is the only driver eligible because Dale Earnhardt Jr. is 176 points behind and cannot make up the spread in Michigan.

Injured Elliott finishes race

Bill Elliott had a backup driver on hand Sunday to take over the No. 9 Dodge if Elliott's broken foot couldn't handle the shifting at Pocono.

Elliott was able to last the duration of the race, finishing 19th. Elliott says he believes there should be a way for injured drivers to compete without having to start every race.

"I wish there was some sort of formula where you could throw out X number of races," he said, adding the increased spots that drivers are running today mean wrecks do more damage to their bodies.

"We do wreck, and nine times out of 10 you are hurt in some way," he said. "You've got to be 110 percent in the race cars every Sunday or you're not competitive. If you're off half a 10th [of a second], that could be the difference between fifth or 25th or 35th."

Tony Stewart's 16th career victory Sunday was his first since he won last August in Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Stewart breaks slump with win at Pocono

Cox News Service

Reigning Winston Cup champion Tony Stewart won Sunday's Pocono 500, his first win of the season — and his first since Watkins Glen in August 2002.

Stewart, who started fourth, took the lead on the 15th lap, one lap after coming to pit road in third position. He left with the lead after his crew outworked those of leader Sterling Marlin and Matt Kenseth.

"It felt like the crew won the race today, not me," Stewart said.

He took the lead for the final time with 11 laps left when Todd Bodine and Jeremy Mayfield pitted, but got a bad break when Kurt Busch blew a tire to bring out a caution flag with eight to go.

But Stewart's Chevrolet

was leading Mark Martin's Ford when the green flag waved for the final three laps and beat him back to the line by five car-lengths after Terry Labonte spun out Jeff Green to end the $4.2 million race under caution.

Martin finished second, while teammate Kenseth finished third. Dale Earnhardt Jr. finished fourth.

Stewart's win Sunday at Pocono Raceway ended the longest drought of the driver's career at 27 consecutive defeats.

"It's been a long time coming," Stewart said.

Stewart's win comes on the heels of major disappointments in the last two races.

Two weeks ago Stewart suffered an engine problem at Lowe's Motor Speedway, then lost at Dover International Speedway last week after NASCAR imposed a one-lap penalty for stopping out of his stall on pit road.

Like at Dover, Stewart's car was the fastest in the field. Martin, who stayed close to Stewart before the

"We were going to try and make something happen," Martin said. "If anything went wrong for him, we were going to be all over it. No tricks, but if he slipped or missed a gear, we maybe could have gotten close to him. It would have been on, but I can't say I was fixing to get him."

Stewart, known for his angry outbursts, was in a playful mood following his win.

He bumped the pace car as he was coming to the checkered flag with the field under caution.

"I was having fun," Stewart said in Victory Lane. "But the guys called me on the radio and said, 'be easy on the car,' so I got busted."

Kenseth leads second-place Earnhardt Jr. by 176 points after 14 of 36 races.

"It was a great finish for us," said Kenseth. "We had a good car all day for the long runs."

County-by-county sales

Here are county-by-county sales reports - for all industries - processed during May. Total sales include both taxable and non-taxable.

County	Total sales	Taxable
Blaine	$50,773,346	$30,293,957
Canyon	$310,636	$236,204
Cassia	$41,134,835	$11,961,594
Gooding	$11,909,987	$2,806,648
Jerome	$31,621,079	$12,707,484
Latah	$1,517,271	$1,231,965
Minidoka	$27,869,889	$5,561,849
Twin Falls	$142,441,598	$41,875,121
Valleywide	$307,598M	$106.684M

These exclude sales by some businesses that have locations in more than one county. If those companies each file just one sales tax return, the report is included in county-by-county numbers. Also excluded from county totals are sales by business headquartered outside of Idaho.

Also, each monthly report reflects returns processed that month, and the Idaho State Tax Commission's speed of processing varies with its staff workload. So the commission cautions against comparing a single month's report with the year-ago one to spot sales trends.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Housing interest rate drops to record low

TWIN FALLS - For the first time in its 31-year history, Idaho Housing and Finance Association said Thursday it is offering an interest rate below 5 percent.

The record-low 4.25 percent 30-year fixed mortgage interest rate is available through any of IHFA's nearly 40 participating lenders, with 80 branches statewide. The rate, coupled with IHFA's new Down Payment Assistance Program grant of up to $2,000, can be attractive offer for a potential home buyer.

To participate in IHFA's mortgage loan program, home buyers must meet borrower requirements and income and sales price limits that vary by county.

A current list of participating lenders and program qualifications can be found on IHFA's Web site at www.ihfa.org/residential\_lenders.html.

Former Sprint chief will get $9M in separation

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Former Sprint Corp. chief executive William T. Esrey will receive more than $9 million in compensation, consisting of fees and bonuses under a separation agreement with the telecommunications giant that was disclosed this week.

Esrey, who left Sprint this year over a questionable tax shelter, will receive $270,833 in compensation each month for 18 months, another $270,833 in consulting fees each month for 12 months, and an $895,633 bonus, according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Sprint also agreed that after one year, it will pay Esrey $4,400 for each day he provides consulting services to the company. Esrey also can receive up to $100,000 in legal fees for the negotiation of the severance agreement.

Wireless division Sprint PCS has a store in Twin Falls.

McDonald's unveils new advertising theme

CHICAGO - McDonald's Corp. unveiled a new advertising theme designed to attract younger and hipper consumers: "I'm lovin' it."

The slogan will replace "We love to see you smile" this fall and be used as the tag line for its marketing efforts worldwide for the next two years.

McDonald's officials, who announced the new tag line at a Chicago gathering of top managers and marketing consultants, said it's aimed at helping the restaurant chain connect better with customers - especially young adults, moms and kids.

"We know we need to be more modern and more relevant in how we communicate to today's consumers," chief marketing officer Larry Light said.

McDonald's restaurants in Magic Valley are locally owned franchise operations.

Bread business resurrects trucking terminal

By Lorraine Caverer
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The former Consolidated Freightways terminal - vacated abruptly when the trucking company filed for bankruptcy protection in September - has been purchased and is becoming a bread distribution center.

A purchase agreement shows the building was bought for $280,000 by Paris LLC, a Taylorville, Utah, company, said Larry Haycock, deputy clerk for the Twin Falls County recorder.

Ron Johnson of Transportation Property Corp., the brokerage firm handling sales of Consolidated Freightways properties, said the Twin Falls sale closed May 27.

Paris LLC then leased the building to Kansas City, Mo.-based Interstate Brands Corp., parent company of Wonder Bread and Eddy's, Johnson said.

Ray Schmidt, a sales representative at the Boise Interstate Brands bakery, said the Eddy's bakery in Boise closed May 31 and the product is instead being made at the Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah, Interstate Brands bakeries. The product will be distributed out of the former Consolidated building in Twin Falls.

Schmidt said Interstate Brands plans to lease the building long term as its distribution center.

A few transport drivers were hired, Schmidt said. Some of the transport drivers who worked at the Boise bakery came to Twin Falls and continued to work for the company, he said.

Bob Johansen, general manager for Interstate Brands, said the company is still remodeling the former Consolidated building.

Painting will take two to four weeks. Two out of the five truck bays were filled in to provide more storage. The bread company is also in the process of replacing overhead doors and completing other remodeling tasks, which will accommodate bread distribution.

About 14 trailers will run daily between Utah and Twin Falls and will distribute bread to 13 points in southern Idaho and eastern Oregon, Johansen said.

"We feel like we're ready to go," he said. Consolidated's 10,000-square-foot distribution facility at 211 Freightways St., on 3.55 acres, employed 10 people until Sept. 3.

PINING FOR THE PAST

Andrew Crane unrolls a length of cable from the wall in The Ballroom on the corner of Shoshone Street and Second Ave. N. The event center on the renovated building's second floor remains in business, and there will be a second facility and a party rental store in the building.

Downtown landmark seeks to recapture 1920s look

By Lorraine Caverer
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The building where The Ballroom hosts wedding receptions and catered banquets - included among the structures of the Twin Falls Downtown Historic District - is being restored to the look it had in the 1920s.

The downtown landmark has seen eight decades of the first century of Twin Falls history. The Elks built the building in 1922 for their lodge activities, said Andre Crane, the current property owner. Members of the Elks financed the building by borrowing money against their personal insurance. With that money, 20-year bonds were purchased. In 1942 the loan was paid off and a large party hall to celebrate, Crane said.

From the 1920s to the 1970s, retail shops occupied the main level with the Elks lodge upstairs. Some of the shops included a department store, Standard Printing and Hooper Furniture.

In about 1975, Shane's Furniture moved out and the Elks began using the former retail spaces for lodge activities, with the exception of Matador Barber Salon, owned by Ivan Rood. The Elks sold the building to Crane in 1998.

New Rood's business has been in the building longer than any other, Crane said.

"I have been right here in this same window for 29 years," Rood said.

Rood said he thinks it is wonderful that the building is being remodeled.

"I like the old architecture of the building downtown," he said. "They have a personality of their own."

Crane is using several historic photographs as the basis of much of the building's exterior restoration. He is sinking about $35,000 into exterior work.

Suzy Pfefferle is leasing the building from Crane for The Ballroom special events business, which she took over, and for her relocated party and event business. She is putting in about another $35,000 to restore the interior.

The building, now sporting a historical appearance, looked much the same in this photo from the 1920s.

In order to bring back the 1920s look, Crane is putting in decorative woodwork and awnings above storefronts and adding transom windows similar to those which had been removed at one time. He is also painting the building the original almond color.

"It's been quite a job," he said. "I think it is going to look real good."

For her part, Pfefferle is turning the main floor into a reception hall and convention center with the capacity to accommodate about 600 people. It's a 4,600-square-foot room which will be known as the Shoshone Room. Parties for Rent, a party-equipment rental business, will be in a third room on the Second Avenue and Shoshone Street corner of the building.

In addition, she will continue to rent out The Ballroom upstairs for parties and events.

She is modernizing the building by adding air conditioning and heating, bringing it up to code, and adding a small foyer on the main level.

The Magic Valley Bow Hunters archery range will continue to occupy the basement.

Old siding had closed off the windows. When it started coming down a couple of weeks ago, people going by could see inside. And many have stopped to ask what is going on, Pfefferle said.

The Elks remodeled the building in the 1970s and put up the siding at that time, Crane said.

"When we took the siding off people could see the beautiful beams and pillars," Pfefferle said.

When Rood moved in the old windows were still there. He wasn't pleased when they were covered.

"It took away the original look," he said.

The interior and exterior cement pillars - the original building supports - are one of the main features that instead of being hidden will now accentuate the building, Pfefferle said.

Original hardwood floors will also distinguish the building's character.

For many years the ground-level room was seldom used, she said.

"The room was dark and dingy," Pfefferle said. "Nobody ever looked in it. Now people will be attracted to it."

In fact, she has already booked several events in the room including a wedding, July 12 - the first time the new room will be used.

Pfefferle decided to renovate and lease the building after a three-year search for a place for her party business.

She needed a place with high ceilings so she could accommodate parties year-round. She needed the 17-foot high ceilings because of the tall plastic trampoline structures designed for children to bounce in.

"I love old. Getting an old building and one that would work for our accommodations is a bonus," she said. "We're very excited."

Old could be a bonus for others downtown, too.

"If it generates more foot traffic, people discover adjoining or neighboring buildings," Rood said. "Every business can complement each other."

Auction will feature two ranches

The Times-News

OAKLEY - South of Oakley, a couple of large cattle operations are up for bid this month - with no minimum bid.

Two working cattle ranches that straddle the Nevada/Idaho border just south of the Idaho border will be sold by absolute auction June 26, promoters said Thursday.

The ranches, which together operate on roughly 110,000 public and private acres - including about 40,000 deeded acres - will be auctioned by The National Auction Group of Gadsden, Ala. Both ranches are owned by Frank Gould, descendant of telecommunications and railroad pioneer Jay Gould who founded the Union-Pacific Railroad and Western Union.

In Nevada, Trout Creek Ranch has roughly five miles of frontage on Goose Creek. About 7,500 of the acres are deeded, while 46,000 acres are public. Bureau of Land Management land. Much of the land is fenced and irrigated, and the property boasts artesian hot springs. The 55,000-acre Grouse Creek Ranch is just across the state line in Utah and includes 32,000 owned acres and mineral rights. One feature is a large lake reservoir and controlling ownership of the West Fork of Grouse Creek reservoir which provides the water for miles of irrigation pipeline on the ranch.

Both ranches are being sold with all equipment and with the existing herds of cattle.

Both will be open for inspection beginning Wednesday; call 800-445-6597. After Wednesday, call on site at (254) 377-2830. The successful bidder will be required to pay 10 percent on auction day and must have $30,000 in certified money to bid on Trout Creek Ranch and $50,000 for Grouse Creek Ranch. To bid on both, the requirement is $75,000.

Auction promoters gave these directions to find the ranches: From Idaho Highway 27, turn south to west at a four-way stop; turn south at Goose Creek Road; and follow auction signs to the property.

Ag Tour will travel to local farms today

The Times-News

JEROME - Don't miss the bus if you planned to tour local farms today.

Denials are in the spotlight today as several local chambers of commerce collaborate to put on the Southern Idaho Chambers Ag Tour. The event begins with a 7 a.m. breakfast at Best Western Sawtooth Inn in south Jerome, with an Idaho Department of Labor speaker and a video on dairy economic effects. A bus tour departs from the Sawtooth Inn for both morning and afternoon segments, at 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Lunch is set for noon at Sawtooth Inn, with a panel discussion on "Sitting Down with the Right Way." The afternoon tour ends at 5 p.m.

The bus tour highlights local agricultural diversity, with stops at a major dairy, a beef operation, a buffalo feedlot, a horse farm, an aquaculture research center, an alligator farm. The former three stops are on the morning tour schedule, and the latter three in the afternoon.

Organizers offer a number of registration options: $30 for all day, both meals; $15 for the morning segment and both meals; $20 for either the morning or afternoon segment, with one meal; or $12 for either breakfast or lunch only.

Stocks rise despite mixed news Retail sales rebound in May

NEW YORK (AP) - Wall Street moved higher for a third day Thursday, despite a mix of economic reports, as upbeat investors made more bets on an economic recovery by year's end.

Prices fluctuated for much of the day before ending mostly higher on a burst of late-day buying. "There's a little bit of jitteriness," said Todd Clark, head of listed equity trading at Wells Fargo Securities. "We have some negative reaction to business inventories being lighter than expected. ... But in general, we have a generally better tone to things."

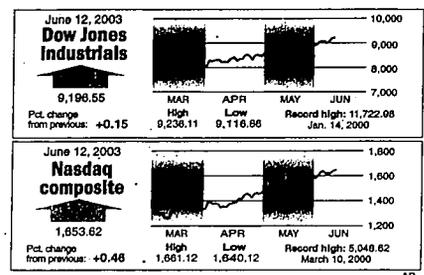

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 13.33, or 0.2 percent, at 9,196.55, having advanced in eight of the last nine sessions for a net gain of 472 points.

The broader market also rose. The Nasdaq composite index gained 7.50, or 0.5 percent, to 1,653.62. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 1.03, or 0.1 percent, to 998.51.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that the nation's retail sales rose by 0.1 percent in April, compared to 0.3 percent in March. The figure was slightly stronger than the flat reading analysts expected.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the number of American workers filing new applications for unemployment benefits last week dropped by a seasonally adjusted 17,000 to 400,000. Still, the number remained above 400,000, a level that suggests a lackluster job market.

And in a third report, the Commerce Department said business inventories of unsold goods edged up 0.1 percent in April as companies appeared cautious about the economic outlook. Analysts were expecting a 0.2 percent rise. Wall Street has seen strong gains in recent months on encouraging quarterly profits and anticipation of an economic recovery by the end of the year. Some analysts believe stocks may be clearly on an upward path, although others caution that the recent advance could have come too fast. "The institutional investors, the pros if you will, are pretty darn optimistic at this point," said Hank Herrmann, chief investment officer at Wedell & Reed Financial, citing low interest rates and better corporate profits. "Retail investors are getting more optimistic but they're certainly not euphoric."

He added that stocks would likely continue their upward trend until the Federal Reserve's June 24-25 meeting as investors bet the policymakers will cut interest rates beyond their already 4.1-year low. "The equity market is going to have a good bid all the way up to the Fed meeting," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumers amped in May from a shopping slumber and gave a final boost to retail sales, a key sign for the economy's revival.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that sales at retailers nudged up last month by 0.1 percent from April's total. By comparison, sales fell 0.3 percent from March to April. "It appears the consumers have begun to bounce back from Iraq-induced doldrums," said Rosalind Wells, chief economist at the National Retail Federation.

Shoppers actually showed a stronger inclination to spend in May than suggested by the 0.1 percent rise. "A 4.3 percent drop in sales at gasoline stations reflected lower pump prices and restrained the overall growth in retail sales. Excluding gas station sales, retail sales climbed a solid 0.4 percent in May, the government said.

Consumers, the main force in keeping the economy going, spent more freely in May, driving up sales of furniture, electronics and appliances, and clothing. People also went out more to eat and drink. Despite the gains, consumers still are watching their spending and are not leading a much hoped for postwar economic boom.

"Consumers may not be setting records for volume, but they're buying the economy time to catch its breath," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock.

On Wall Street, stocks moved higher. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 13.33 points to close at 9,196.55. Important factors in consumer spending these days are low mortgage rates, solid home values and a refinancing boom that has left people with extra cash. Rates on benchmark 30-year mortgages fell to a record low of 5.21 percent this week, the mortgage company Freddie Mac reported Thursday.

Those forces are helping to offset the fallout from a sluggish job market. The unemployment rate was at a nine-year high of 6.1 percent in May.

A second government report Thursday said new applications for unemployment benefits last week dropped by a seasonally adjusted 17,000 to 430,000. The Labor Department said that even as the number of jobless has remained above 600,000—a level associated with a lackluster job market—for 17 straight weeks.

The number of workers who continue to draw jobless benefits rose by 120,000 to a 20-year high of 3.8 million for the week ending May 31, the most recent period for which that information is available.

The Federal Reserve has kept an important short-term interest rate at a 41-year low of 1.25 percent with the hope of motivating consumers and businesses to spend and invest more. Economists expect the Fed to reduce that rate by at least one percentage point at its meeting June 24-25.

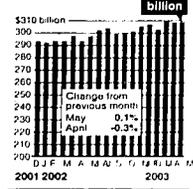

A rate cut and the fresh round of tax cuts signed into law by President Bush this month should energize the economy, analysts said.

Also Thursday, the Commerce Department reported that business inventories of unsold goods nudged up 0.1 percent in April as sales slid 1.5 percent.

While consumers have been doing their part to carry the economy, businesses have not.

Retail sales

Here is a look at retail sales, seasonally adjusted.

SOURCE: Department of Commerce, AP

Businesses have been wary of making big investments in capital spending and in hiring. In the first report, sales of automobiles dipped 0.2 percent in May, despite free-financing offers and other generous incentives. That came after a 1.7 percent increase in April.

When both sales of autos and gasoline are removed from the picture, retail sales rose a brisk 0.6 percent in May.

Sales at furniture stores jumped 1.1 percent in May, compared with a 0.5 percent increase the month before. At electronics and appliance stores, sales increased 2.9 percent, up from April's 0.8 percent gain.

At department stores, sales rose 0.7 percent in May, compared with a 1.2 percent drop the month before.

Sales at bars and restaurants increased 1.4 percent in May, an improvement from April's 0.4 percent drop.

Rate on 30-year mortgages hits another record low

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mortgage rates slid to new lows this week, good news for people looking to buy a home or refinance the one they already own.

The average rate on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages dropped to a record low of 5.21 percent for the week ending June 13, Freddie Mac, the mortgage giant, reported Thursday in its weekly nationwide survey.

This week's rate surpassed the previous low rate of 5.26 percent set last week. The new rate marks the lowest since Freddie Mac began tracking 30-year mortgages in 1971. Records that reach back earlier indicate that the rate is the lowest in more than four decades, economists said.

Nothhaft, Freddie Mac's chief economist, said mortgage rates dipped this week in anticipation that the Federal Reserve will reduce short-term interest rates at its June 24-25 meeting.

For 15-year fixed-rate mortgages, a popular option for refinancing, rates fell to a record low of 4.60 percent this week, besting last week's rate of 4.65 percent, which had been the previous all-time weekly low. This week's rate was the lowest level since Freddie Mac began tracking 15-year mortgages in 1991.

Rates for one-year adjustable mortgages declined to a new low of 3.54 percent.

A year ago, rates on 30-year mortgages averaged 6.71 percent, 15-year mortgages were 6.17 percent and one-year adjustable mortgages stood at 4.67 percent.

Targeted killings?

Helicopter attacks spotlight Israeli policy of pinpoint strikes

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel calls them targeted killings, attacks using pinpoint accuracy to liquidate Palestinians preparing terror attacks on Israeli civilians. Palestinians say Israeli missile strikes are crude assassinations carried out in crowded streets that often kill the innocent.

Israeli missile attacks that killed 20 Palestinians in three days — more than half of them civilians — have reopened debate over the morality, effectiveness and political wisdom of Israel's strategy.

Israel considers the strikes a prime tool in its effort to destroy Palestinian militant groups, but critics say the assassinations have done little to stop terror.

"This is immoral, totally ineffective and it doesn't fit a democracy," said Yoel Beilin, the former justice minister who opposed the policy when it was adopted in November 2000. "These assassinations are capital punishment without trial."

From November 2000 until May 31, Israel killed at least 103 targeted people and 53 bystanders, according to the Israeli human rights group B'tselem. Since Tuesday, 20 more people died in four strikes — at least a dozen of them bystanders.

Former Cabinet minister Ephraim Sneh says the strikes are the most effective way to combat terror and wreck the infrastructure of militant groups.

"They are targeted. They are surgical, in most of the cases ... they are pinpointed toward the real masterminds, the organizers of the terror activity," he said. "These are the ones who ... brainwash the suicide bombers, these are the ringleaders, these are the people who gather the intelligence."

There is uncertainty about the attacks' effectiveness, and little evidence they have cowed militants. Generally the militant group Hamas carries out revenge attacks — as it did this week, when a suicide bomber killed 17 people in a Jerusalem bus blast.

However, many Israelis have concluded suicide attacks would continue in any case, and the militants must be fought.

Israel has long said it was targeting " ticking bombs" — militants bound for terror attacks. But some targets have been top militant leaders, and in a few cases, the Palestinians claim they were politicians.

Israelis counter the title politician should not protect those inciting murder.

The new round of attacks began Tuesday with a failed effort to kill Abdel Aziz Rantisi, a Hamas leader Israel accuses of recent involvement in attacks.

It came less than a week after Israeli and Palestinian leaders launched the "road map" peace plan with President Bush, and two days after Palestinian militants killed five Israeli soldiers.

The strike against Rantisi was roundly criticized — by Bush and by Israeli and Palestinian leaders — as contributing to the cycle of Israeli-Palestinian violence.

On Wednesday, a Palestinian suicide bomber blew up a Jerusalem bus, an attack Hamas said was revenge for the strike against Rantisi. Less than an hour later, an Israeli helicopter fired on a car carrying two Hamas militants in Gaza. The car exploded and Palestinians moved in to try to help. The helicopter returned and launched more missiles, killing seven other people, witnesses said.

"Is that the peace that they are talking about? Killing children, mothers and old men and leaving an open wound inside our hearts that will never be closed?" asked Nawal Daloui, who lost two cousins in the attack.

"Yesterday closed the small window of hope that I used to look forward to a good future," said Daloui, who was wounded along with her 3-year-old daughter Manar.

An Israeli security official, speaking on condition of anonymity, expressed regret innocent people were killed Wednesday, but said it was the militant's fault for being in a populated area.

The official said Israel has called off many attacks for fear of civilian deaths.

B'tselem says the strikes are extrajudicial assassinations and the overwhelming force Israel often uses is out of proportion to the tactic's benefits.

"Israel and the government and the army do have the obligation to protect Israeli civilians, but they have to do it under the law," said Yaël Stein, B'tselem's research director.

Israel's policy came under sharpest attack last July when an F-16 plane fired a laser-guided bomb into a building in Gaza City, killing

A Palestinian shows baby shoes and a baby bottle retrieved from a car that was destroyed by an Israeli airstrike in Gaza City Thursday. In the third airstrike against Hamas targets in 24 hours, Israeli helicopters on Thursday fired missiles at a car in Gaza City, killing five people, including a young child, and wounding 25, doctores said. Above right, unidentified relatives of Bat-El Ohana grieve during her funeral in the cemetery in Kiryat Atta, near the northern city of Haifa, Israel, Thursday. Ohana, 21, was one of 17 people killed in Wednesday's bus bombing in Jerusalem.

Hamas leader Salah Shehadeh and 14 other people, including eight children.

Attacks like this degrade Israel's moral authority, Beilin said. "When you take the liberty of assassinating these people, there is a big question about the limits. Where does it begin, where does it stop and who is the judge? Who decides who should be killed?" he asked.

COMBINED NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT AND INTENT OF REQUEST RELEASE OF FUNDS (FONSI) AND NIO/RROP

June 13, 2003
 Idaho Housing and Finance Association
 585 W. Myrtle
 Boise, ID 83702
 229-331-4769

This Notice shall satisfy the above-cited two separate but related procedural notification requirements.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

On or about June 20, 2003 Idaho Housing and Finance Association (IHFA) will submit a request to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the release of HOME Investment Incentives program funds under Title II of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act as amended for the following project:

Project Title: Magic Valley Mutual Self-Help
 Project Description: Twenty single-family units
 Location: Filer, ID and Butli, ID

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

Idaho Housing and Finance Association has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR) on file at Idaho Housing and Finance Association, 585 W. Myrtle, Boise, ID and may be examined or copied weekdays 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Any individual, group or agency disagreeing with this determination or wishing to comment on the project may submit written comments to IHFA, P.O. Box 7899, Boise, ID 83707, attn: Geraldyn D'Laura. All comments received by June 26, 2003 will be considered by IHFA prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds. Commenters should specify which part of this Notice they are addressing.

RELEASE OF FUNDS

IHFA certifies to HUD that it has obtained in her official capacity as Vice President consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA as well as the laws and authorities, and allows IHFA to use program funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will consider objections to its release of funds and IHFA's certification received by July 18, 2003 or a period of fifteen days from the date of this notice (whichever is later) only if they are one of the following bases: (a) the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer or other official of Idaho Housing and Finance Association; (b) the recipient has not made a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; (c) the recipient has not provided the information required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; (d) another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unacceptable from the standpoint of environmental quality; (e) the recipient has submitted funds under the program; (f) the recipient has submitted a written finding that the project is unacceptable from the standpoint of environmental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted by the recipient within the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58) and shall be addressed to U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Environmental Review Office, One 400 5th Sixth Avenue, Suite 700, Portland, OR 97204-1832. Potential objectors should contact HUD to verify the actual last day of the objection period.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolf

"Teach me to feel another's woes,
To hide the fault I see."
—Alexander Pope

When one team lost a game-winning on today's deal, South admitted that the loss was really his fault. "Playing in three no-trump, I received a low-spade lead," he said. "Rather than rely on diamonds being 3-3, I played low from dummy. East hopped up with the spade king and decided that there could be no future in that suit. So he optimistically shifted to a heart, and the defense cashed their four winners in that suit in double-quick time. Was my play so terrible? I thought that the percentages favored a finesse over the 3-3 split.

His teammate who had been sitting East at the other table was quick to reassure him that his opposing declarer had indeed followed the percentages also. He too had declared three no-trump on a spade lead and had taken the spade finesse lead.

"So why did he not also go down in three no-trump?" asked South, now confident that the debacle was not really his fault.

"Well," said East, "our declarer could see the location of heart shift if the spade finesse lost. To encourage us to continue spades if the finesse was wrong, he put in the spade queen from dummy at trick one. Admittedly, this would blow our cover if the lead was away from the king, but he thought it was a worthwhile investment. And so it proved: I took the first trick with my king, but had no reason not to continue spades. Declarer now ran for home with his nine winners."

ANSWER: Bid one no-trump. A call of one no-trump shows a balanced hand in the 12-14 range and does not emphasize a good spade stop. While you would rather find an alternative action with such feeble spades, anything else would be an even grosser distortion — so bid one no-trump and try to be too flustered about it!
