Hispanics' test scores lag behind

Some districts, too, would face battles if scoring well becomes a mandate

By Robert Mayer
Times-News Writer

District-by-district breakdown - B4

TWIN FALLS - High school graduation might be something of a problem for the region's Hispanics, should the state approve the use of its main standardized test as a graduation requirement. For that matter, a handful of schools in the region, too, are going to find it difficult to hand diplomas to a majority of their students based on the spring 2003 Idaho Standards Achievement Test results, which were released Thursday. While proficiency on the ISAT as a graduation requirement is still in the discussion stage, most educators agree that the policy will inevitably become part of the Idaho education landscape.

For some districts, that doesn't pose a problem.

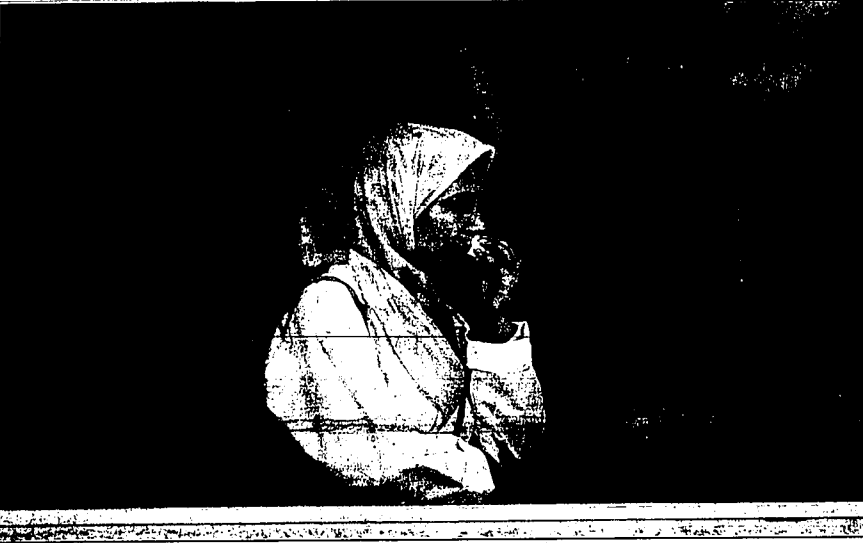

Those that usually turn in above-average test scores - Twin Falls, Hansen and Kimberly, for instance - showed that at least two-thirds of their 10th-graders demonstrated sufficient proficiency

Bomb raises spectre of heightened level of violence in country

Chicago Tribune

BAGHDAD, Iraq - A minibus packed with explosives detonated outside the Jordanian Embassy on Thursday, killing at least 11 people and wounding scores in one of the bloodiest days in the capital since it fell to U.S. forces in early April.

Hours later, a fierce gun battle erupted on a busy downtown Baghdad street after assailants attacked an American Humvee on patrol, seriously wounding two U.S. soldiers.

Two other U.S. soldiers were shot to death late Wednesday night at a Baghdad checkpoint in an attack that shattered what had been four days of relative calm. The shootings brought to 53 the number of U.S. soldiers killed in guerrilla attacks in Iraq since May

West Nile cases triple across U.S.

Wendell horse case seems unrelated so far

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - The number of West Nile virus cases in the U.S. has tripled to at least 164 since last week, a top federal health official said Thursday, but no cases have yet been reported in Idaho this year.

The recent death of a horse near Wendell prompted veterinarian Monte Easterday to send a blood sample to the Washington Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory in Pullman, Wash. But the latest word Thursday was that the horse had tested negative for the mosquito-borne disease.

Health officials had expected the disease to spread this year to all corners of the country, invading Western states previously unscathed. But they appeared somewhat surprised at its speed. Health officials report seven people - all of them elderly - have died from the virus. Four of the deaths were reported in Colorado, the hardest-hit state.

Nationwide, the CDC said at least 164 people in 16 states are infected, compared with 59 a week ago. The latest figures do not include new cases reported by Colorado health officials, which the CDC had not verified.

"The numbers are starting to change very, very quickly," said Dr. Jan G. Ambrose, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "That is very concerning."

Last year, 4,156 people caught the virus, and 284 died. There were 112 cases in four states at this point in 2002, when the United States suffered the biggest reported outbreak of West Nile encephalitis in the world.

Two cases were reported in Idaho in fall 2002, but state disease detectives weren't able to confirm whether the virus was contracted within Idaho's borders. An Ada County man who had traveled to the East Coast was reported to have the virus and recovered. A Canyon County horse that had been transported outside the state also was diagnosed with the virus and was recovering.

The sample taken from the Wendell horse late last month tested negative for the disease, it was considered "suspectious," said Jim Everman, professor of infectious diseases at Washington State

In e-commerce, customers often pay different prices for same item

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Conventional wisdom says the Internet gives consumers more power than ever.

After all, the Web is full of sites with product details and price comparisons that shed light on purchasing the previously inscrutable mortgages, cars, insurance, airline tickets and the like. Frictionless and eBay even let consumers proclaim the prices they want to pay.

But there's a darker side to the equation. The Internet also gives sellers

But economists say that's not necessarily a bad thing more information about consumers than ever before - how many products they buy and when, perhaps even how many each can afford.

Eventually, two people might get the same pop-up ad for the same Zippo lighter, but one ad pitches them for $15 while another says they're $10. That is known as price discrimination, and it's not necessarily bad. Economists say it can make producers more efficient and promote competition.

But even in an uncertain future one thing is sure: Consumers will hate it.

This vision of the Internet is the basis of a new analysis from Andrew Odlyzko, a former Bell Labs mathematician now at the University of Minnesota's Digital

Firefighters try to contain roaring Idaho range blaze

The Associated Press

DUBOIS - Firefighters continued to negotiate rugged terrain Thursday to rein in a range fire that grew to 23,000 acres the day before.

The Deep fire caused the evacuation of campsites and burned one outbuilding on Wednesday, said Andrea Hooper with the Eastern Idaho Intergovernmental Fire Center.

The fire was burning about 17 miles northwest of Dubois and five miles south of the Continental Divide. It began as a midday brush fire until the winds picked up.

An Type-II fire management team arrived from Nevada on Thursday afternoon to set up base operations.

In north-central Idaho, firefighters constructed a suppression line near the boundary of a wilderness area at the 8,920-acre Slime fire, near the community of Elk City. It was 35 percent contained with full containment predicted on Aug. 20. The suppression "suspectious" was estimated at $7.4 million dollars.

Crews were nearing containment on the 26,560-acre Hot Creek fire near the mining community of Atlanta.

Scores

The 2003 spring scores will serve as the foundation against which all subsequent years will be measured. While grades 2-10 took the ISAT - which tests language, reading and math skills - this year only fourth, eighth and 10th grades featured scores categorized according to student proficiency.

Commerce

Technology Center: Odlyzko expects price discrimination to continue to be pervasive not only because of all the personal data collected and generated in online commerce, but also with the rise of "digital rights management" which limits what people can do with online content in the name of protecting copyrights.

Blaine County

More than two-thirds of Blaine County 10th-grade students performed at a proficient level on the ISAT. In fact, Blaine students generally scored above average, the exception being fourth-graders, whose math scores fell below the state average.

Bliss

Bliss students are in trouble if the ISAT becomes a graduation requirement. Less than a third could muster a minimum level score. 75 percent of Bliss 10th-graders were less than proficient on the ISAT language portion.

Buhl

Scores were mixed at Buhl schools, with 9th-graders performing above the state average on all portions while fourth-graders generally scored below state averages.

Pilots arm slowly

Some contend agency needs to move faster

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fewer than 100 pilots were certified to carry guns on commercial flights in the eight months after Congress approved the idea, and pilots are blaming the slow pace on the Transportation Security Administration.

"The pilots say that with the TSA freezing hiring in the air marshal program and the government warning al-Qaida may try more suicide hijackings, it's more important than ever to get weapons in the cockpit."

"Between the air marshals and the federal flight deck officer force, we should cover a vast majority of the domestic flights," said Capt. Bob Lambert, president of the Airline Pilots' Security Alliance. "It just seems like we haven't learned very much from Sept. 11."

The first 44 pilots to complete the five-day weapons training program were designated "flight deck officers" in April 19 and began flying with weapons. The second class finished in July.

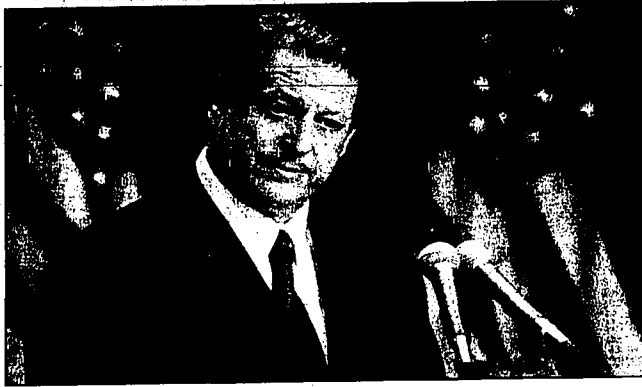

Rep. John Mica, R-Fla., chairman of the House aviation subcommittee, said he's angry that the TSA is moving at "a snail's pace. You can't imagine my frustration," he said. "This should be a quick orientation."

TSA spokesman Robert Johnson said the pace will pick up once summer is over. "We have hundreds in the pipeline ready to go," he said, adding that as of Aug. 1 classes of no more than 50 pilots are being held every week.

The criticism of the pilots' program comes amid growing dissatisfaction with the TSA in Congress. Lawmakers say the agency, which has a $900 million shortfall, has grown too large, too fast, doesn't properly prioritize spending and is slow to respond to queries from Congress.

The TSA had opposed arming pilots, believing heightened security at airports, bulletproof cockpit doors and more vigilant passengers made it unnecessary. Critics said adding weapons to airplanes was inherently dangerous.

Pilots lobbied Congress, arguing they could supplement the air marshals, who cover only a small percentage of the 35,000 daily flights in the United States.

Former Vice President Al Gore addresses about 600 people at New York University in a speech sponsored by the liberal activist group Moveon.Org Thursday in New York.

Gore questions honesty of Bush administration

NEW YORK (AP) - Former Vice President Al Gore, assailing U.S. policies in Iraq and at home, on Thursday argued that the Bush administration "routinely shows disrespect" for the "honest and open debate" that produces the truth.

"I think it's partly because they feel they already know the truth, and aren't very curious to learn about any facts that might contradict it," Gore said in a 35-minute speech at New York University.

The 2000 Democratic presidential nominee, addressing about 600 people in a speech sponsored by the liberal activist group Moveon.Org, said the nation's military and economic policies under President Bush had upset many Americans.

"The direction in which our nation is being led is deeply troubling to me, not only in Iraq but also at home, on economic policy, social policy and environmental policy," Gore said.

"Millions of Americans now share a feeling that something pretty basic has gone wrong in our country, and that some important American values are being placed at risk, and they want to set it right."

Gore, who was cheered throughout the speech by the partisan crowd, also called on Bush to rein in Attorney General John Ashcroft and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld. The Department of Defense's planned surveillance system, Total Information Awareness, was "right out of George Orwell's 1984," Gore said. The plan was renamed Terrorism Information Awareness after complaints by politicians and civil liberties groups.

Gore argued that the administration used false pretenses to launch the war against Saddam Hussein, including claims that the Iraqi leader was involved in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and was on the verge of providing terrorists with chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

"As a result, too many of our soldiers are paying the highest price for the strategic miscalculations, serious misjudgments and historic mistakes that have put them and our nation in harm's way," Gore said.

In Crawford, Texas, where Bush is on a monthlong vacation, White House spokeswoman Claire Buchanan dismissed Gore's criticism, saying, "I think the American people know the president's commitment to the security of the United States and to winning the war on terrorism, our economic security."

The Democrat, who captured the popular vote but lost the electoral college in 2000, delivered the speech amid talk that he should enter the presidential race. On Wednesday, former New York governor Mario Cuomo urged Gore to jump into the already-crowded Democratic field of nine contenders.

Gore reiterated that he would not seek the nomination, although he promised an endorsement down the road of the United States and to winning the war on terrorism, our economic security. Gore said the administration has also given false impression about the results of tax cuts, and he called the federal budget deficit "an emerging fiscal catastrophe."

In both Iraq and the economy, Gore said, the common factor is a dishonesty in the dissemination of facts. "That reality is the nub of the problem," he said.

U.S. might reduce security role in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) - The steady loss of American troops and the terror bombing at the Jordanian Embassy are pushing the Bush administration to revise the U.S. security role in Iraq, shifting some responsibility to emerging local forces.

Secretary of State Colin Powell said Thursday, "It may be what you want to do is to stand back a little bit more and let Iraqis, local officials... protect installations."

That way, he said, "you don't need a coalition military organization protecting that installation."

Powell said at a news conference that the United States intends to use whatever techniques are appropriate against Saddam Hussein's followers and other anti-American fighters, some of whom have crossed into the country. "We have to be nimble, flexible, call audibles as the situation changes."

Two U.S. soldiers were wounded in a fierce gunbattle Thursday in central Baghdad. On Wednesday night, two American soldiers were killed in a firefight in the Al Rashid section of the capital.

The deaths brought to 55 the number of U.S. troops killed in combat since May 1, when President Bush declared major fighting over.

Top Bush aide says she feels responsible for false data

Night Rider News Service

DALLAS - National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said Thursday she felt responsible for incorrect information that slipped into the president's State of the Union address.

Regardless of the error, which involved weapons of mass destruction in Iraq, the United States still had ample evidence to prove the war was justified, Rice said during a speech at a national convention of black journalists in Dallas.

President Bush, during his State of the Union address, said that Iraq was trying to obtain raw uranium in Africa.

Rice said she usually reads all memoros about weapons of mass destruction, but the memo in question had several items. "In the future, we will make certain that we don't have to depend on people's memories from one speech to another."

Bali bomber smiles as he receives death sentence

Attack was largest terrorist strike since Sept. 11 in U.S.

Combined wire reports

BALI, Indonesia - A Balinese judge Thursday pronounced Islamic militant Amrozi bin Nurhasyim guilty of helping organize last October's nightclub bombings here and sentenced him to die. It was the first verdict in a series of prosecutions for Indonesia's worst terror attack, which killed 202 people, many of them foreign tourists.

Survivors and relatives of victims who were in the courtroom variously cheered, applauded, embraced and wept as the chief judge I Made Karna Parna read the verdict and sentence in a firm, resonant voice.

Amrozi, dubbed the "laughing bomber" for his habitual looks of amusement, swayed around in his chair to face the gallery after the verdict. He beamed and flashed two thumbs up. "Allahu akbar!" (God is great), he shouted, six times. "He got death? Death!" Australian lian Danny Hanley said outside the courtroom after the verdict. Hanley lost his two daughters, who were at the Sari Club on this resort island, to a powerful bomb that Amrozi stood convicted of helping to create. A second bomb devastated another club. Amrozi had acknowledged helping in the bombing and said earlier that he would willingly "die a martyr" and that "after me, there will be a million more Amrozis." But Thursday, his lawyers said they will appeal.

"The death penalty is speaking about revenge, and that's not what justice is all about," said Wirawan Adnan, Amrozi's lawyer.

The Oct. 12 Bali bombings were the deadliest terrorist strikes since the Sept. 11 attacks in the United States, and they underscored that Southeast Asia had become a hub for terrorist activity.

On Tuesday, a car bomb exploded at the Marriott Hotel in Jakarta, killing 10 people and wounding 150. Investigators in that attack suspect the same group blamed for the Bali bombings: Jemaah Islamiyah, a network believed linked to Osama bin Laden's al-Qaida, and have said the Marriott attack was an attack at a U.S. embassy.

Amrozi's trial was the first prosecution under an anti-terror decree issued by President Megawati Sukarnoputri after the Bali bombings and then passed into law earlier this year. Human rights groups have criticized the measure as repressive.

The trial, which began April 10, marked a new chapter in Indonesia's efforts to balance security and counter-terrorism with demands for civil liberties in this country of 220 million, more than 80 percent of whom are Muslim, as it tries to build democracy following three decades of military-dominated rule.

Some analysts and human rights activists said that the death sentence could lead to more, not fewer, attacks from a by Southeast Asian network called Jemaah Islamiyah, which many analysts here think was behind the bombing of the J.W. Marriott Hotel in the capital Jakarta on Tuesday. "The death sentence itself will be seen as the first step toward martyrdom by the people right in and around this small and dangerous group of people," said Sidney Jones, Indonesian program director for the International Crisis Group, a research and advocacy organization.

Feds direct BLM to open West to drilling

Critics say order tilts land use policy toward mining resources

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration on Thursday directed government land managers to remove environmental and procedural obstacles that are slowing development of oil and gas resources in several areas in the West with a high potential for energy production.

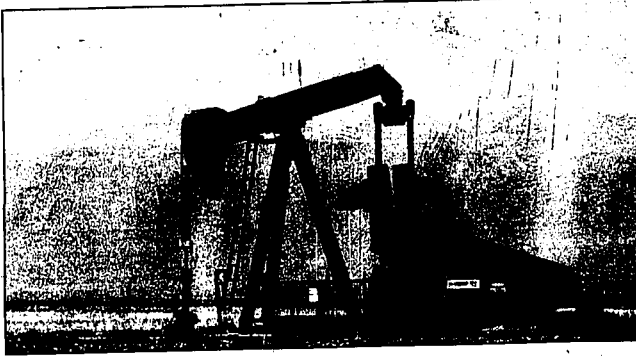

Oil industry representatives applauded the policy changes, which they say will streamline the bureaucracy involved in energy production on federal lands.

But environmental groups accused the Bush administration of sacrificing environmental quality in its effort to boost energy production in government-managed areas.

The new policies, which take effect immediately and do not require congressional review, are the latest in a series of administration initiatives aimed at increasing oil and gas production on federal lands.

The policies are directed at areas managed by the federal Bureau of Land Management in Montana's Rocky Mountain Front, Wyoming's Powder River and Goshute River basins, Utah's Uinta Basin, Colorado's Piceance Basin and New Mexico's San Juan Basin.

Bush administration officials said the environment would not be a victim of the new policies. "Our overall objective is to ensure the timely development of these critical energy resources in an environmentally sound manner," said Kathleen Clarke, the bureau's director.

But environmental groups countered that the clear intent of the rules is to put environmental protection on the back burner.

The new policies direct land managers to allow companies to make up for environmental damage in the areas with the highest energy potential by improving the environment elsewhere.

They are telling companies "you don't have to worry about the harm from the project itself," said Sharon Buccino, a senior attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council, a Washington-based environmental group. "That's creating a sacrifice zone in areas where they want to go in and get the resource."

The new policies also tell land managers to make sure that companies are not forced to do any more than necessary to protect the land, water and wildlife nearby. They should ensure that "the mitigation is the least restrictive necessary to accomplish the desired protection," the policy states.

The new policies also give land managers the option to review existing leases for oil and gas drilling and reduce existing requirements on companies to protect the environment.

The initiative "exposes the real agenda of the administration, which is about promoting energy development. They're not serious about protecting the environment," Buccino charged.

But oil industry representatives said that the changes were necessary to address the current legal and bureaucratic quagmire that prevents them from efficiently producing oil and gas on federal lands.

Democratic unity cracks with actor in governor race

The Washington Post

Support for California Gov. Gray Davis, D, who faces a recall election on Oct. 7, eroded dramatically Thursday as the wall of Democratic Party solidarity he had hoped would protect him collapsed in the wake of actor Arnold Schwarzenegger's decision to enter the recall fray as a Republican.

A trio of powerful San Francisco Democrats — U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein, U.S. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and Mayor Willie Brown — all either criticized Davis or went frosty in their support.

Gov. Cruz Bustamante and Democratic Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi, both proven statewide vote-getters, put their names on the ballot to recall, fanning Davis' plan to survive by giving Democratic voters no alternative to keeping him in office.

Another of Davis' survival strategies — to demonize Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., for bankrolling the recall effort — went flat when Issa took himself out of the race.

And Davis' lawsuits asking the California Supreme Court to allow his name to appear among those of the replacement candidates, and to delay the election until next spring, were both rejected by a unanimous court Thursday evening.

In short, on the carnival ride of California politics, Davis was white-knuckled in a free-falling car. Schwarzenegger's entry into the race, announced Wednesday night in a nationwide television appearance, shook up an already chaotic situation and left even some of Davis' leading allies doubtful of his chances.

"Democrats will have a very difficult time defeating Arnold Schwarzenegger," Brown said in an interview with CNN. Brown, who fought for weeks to build a "fire wall" of Democratic solidarity around Davis, added, "We are in trouble on the Democratic side with Gray Davis."

Church OKs same-sex blessings

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Episcopal leaders gave final approval Thursday to a measure on blessing same-sex couples that its drafters said affirmed the ceremonies as "an acceptable practice in the church."

Gays and their conservative opponents both called it a victory for homosexuals, even though it fails to create an official liturgy for the ceremonies — a policy change that bishops earlier rejected.

The Rev. Frank Wade, head of the liturgical committee that wrote the document, said he interpreted the measure to mean that dioceses conducting same-sex blessings "are operating within the parameters of the understanding of this church and its doctrine and discipline."

Wade's explanation marks a reversal from how several bishops viewed the document when they approved it Wednesday. Those bishops had described the statement as only an acknowledgment that same-sex unions are being blessed in local dioceses — not an endorsement.

Cheney copters use protected area for landing

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Three Blackhawk helicopters, including one carrying Vice President Dick Cheney, used a protected area on a ranch to land and take off three times.

The Nature Conservancy holds a conservation easement on the Puzzleface Ranch where the helicopters flew into and out of Sunday.

Each time into and out of the landing area, the helicopters flew low over Skyline Pond, which is being restored with public funding as osprey and trumpeter swan habitat, according to neighbor J.C. Whitfield.

Laurie Andrews, southern Yellowstone project director for The Nature Conservancy, said a helicopter would not be permitted to land on the ranch except in an emergency.

A Secret Service spokesman said there was no emergency but offered no other explanation. Another agent did not return calls seeking comment.

Established helipads at Jackson Hole Airport and Teton Village are about the same distance from Cheney's home in the Teton Pines Development.

Puzzleface Manager Alan John said this week that the Secret Service made a "one-time request for security purposes."

used to remnants of Saddam Hussein's regime.

"What this shows is we've got some terrorists and we're still operating in a conflict zone," said U.S. Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, commander of U.S. ground forces in Iraq. "We have some pretty significant evidence that there are foreign fighters here."

Sanchez added that U.S. troops would have to stay in Iraq for at least two years to allow the nascent Iraqi army to develop enough capacity to secure the country.

The embassy bombing, the deadliest attack so far on a non-military target, took the lives of several Iraqi guards, civilians waiting in line for travel documents and passengers in nearby vehicles. More than 50 people were wounded, including several Jordanians.

"People in cars were burned up — men, women, even two children," said Salam Alan, an ambulance driver. "There were bodies all over the street."

No group claimed responsibility for the attack. But Jordan's long-complicated relations with its neighbor supplied potential motives for both pro- and anti-Saddam forces.

Some Iraqis opposed to Saddam were angered last week when Jordan's King Abdullah granted asylum to two of Saddam's daughters.

the Jordanian royal family, chanting death slogans, compound guards said. The mob was quickly dispersed as U.S. soldiers arrived.

But Jordan also supported the U.S.-led war to oust Saddam and allowed American troops to be stationed on its territory for the war effort, making the embassy a potential target for Saddam supporters.

Several guards said the embassy had received a written bomb threat Wednesday from an unknown group.

The Jordanian government said Thursday that it would continue political support for the U.S.-led coalition.

"It will not divert us from our path of support and aid to the Iraqi people or the process of stabilization," Jordanian Information Minister Nabil al-Sharif said in Amman.

As U.S. troops were stationing themselves outside the embassy, an explosion ripped through a Humvee a few miles away in a busy central Baghdad shopping district where soldiers often park in the median to shop for television sets, fans and other appliances.

One soldier was blown out of the vehicle. A second was trapped inside screaming as the vehicle burst into flames.

As the soldiers strained to pull their comrade to safety, gunfire erupted from inside a three-story commercial building, according to U.S. military officials.

U.S. troops returned fire as at least 20 Humvees and eight Bradley fighting vehicles carrying reinforcements sealed off the crowded street and joined the battle. U.S. forces fired on the commercial building and an adjacent structure, blasting a huge hole in the facade, witnesses said.

At least one civilian was killed and several others injured in the blast and the ensuing gun battle, according to witnesses and medical personnel.

Scores

Tenth-graders were lukewarm, with scores on reading and language below the state average and math above.

Camas County

The small Fairfield school produced scores generally below average.

Eighth-graders were the exception - 75 percent scored proficient or above on reading, yet the same class fell below the state average in language and math.

Only five fourth-graders took the ISAT, not enough to make their scores public.

Cassia County

Cassia County students struggled, falling below the state average on all portions.

Math proved most troublesome, particularly for eighth- and 10th-graders - both grades scored well below state averages on that topic. Only 37 percent of eighth-graders scored at or above proficiency in math.

Castleford

It was a mixed bag in the Castleford district, where fourth-graders generally scored below the state average while eighth-graders performed strongly on all three portions.

In fact, Castleford eighth-graders scored the highest in the region on the language section of the test: 79 percent were at or above proficiency.

Dietrich

Because of low student population, only eighth-grade scores were available at Dietrich school. But if those scores represent the rest of the school, the student body needs to improve if it's to reach proficient levels.

Not only did eighth-graders score well below the state average in math - only 30 percent were proficient or above - but they scored the lowest in the region on the language section of the test.

The eighth-graders did, however, manage to beat the state average in language, with 77 percent at or above proficient level.

Filer

For the most part, Filer students scored in above-average scores. Tenth-graders were in good shape, ranging between 77 percent and 85 percent at or above proficiency, depending on the topic.

Glenns Ferry

The ISAT proved to be a formidable foe for Glenns Ferry students, with all scores falling well below the state average.

Worse, its fourth-graders scored the lowest in the region in all three subjects.

Should the ISAT be required for graduation, just a touch above 50 percent of 10th-graders would pass.

Gooding

All scores among Gooding students slipped to below-average proficient levels.

Hagerman

Scores in Hagerman tended toward the below-average side, particularly in 10th-grade reading.

Hansen

Hansen would have the highest percentage of 10th-graders graduating if the ISAT were a factor.

Its 10th-graders scored the highest in the region in both language and math, with 91 percent and 87 percent of the class performing at proficient or above levels, respectively.

Fourth-graders, too, featured above-average scores.

Jerome

Floating just below state average were the Jerome scores. Accuracy of eighth-grade scores was questionable because a slew of test results went missing.

Kimberly

Kimberly students did well on the ISAT. So well, in fact, that both its eighth- and 10th-graders scored the highest in south-central Idaho on the reading section.

Despite scoring above-average on reading, Kimberly fourth-graders stumbled in language and math, scoring below the state average.

Minidoka County

in proficiency, particularly among eighth- and 10th-graders.

Only 35 percent of eighth-graders and 49 percent of 10th-graders were proficient or above in math.

Murtaugh

Murtaugh students were mixed on their ISAT scores.

Fourth-graders performed below the state average in all three subjects. So, too, west eighth-graders, particularly in math.

But 10th-graders gave a good showing in reading and language, with some 85 percent of the class performing at a proficient or higher levels.

Richfield

Scores were generally low in Richfield, with one notable exception: Its eighth-graders scored the highest in the region on the one portion that gave most other schools fits - math. Sixty-seven percent of eighth-graders could perform at or above proficient level in math.

The remainder of the school struggled, however, especially fourth-graders in reading and 10th-graders in language.

Shoshone

A slew of below-average scores marked the Shoshone schools' performance on the ISAT. Particularly below average were the eighth-graders in reading and language, where only half the class performed at a proficient or above levels.

Twin Falls

Twin Falls students performed strongly on the ISAT, particularly fourth-graders in fact, 90 percent of fourth-graders tested at or above proficient level in language, the highest in the region. Tenth-graders, too, turned in across-the-board above-average scores.

With 150 test results missing from one of the district's junior high schools, its eighth-grade scores aren't necessarily reflective of student performance.

Valley

Scores were mixed at Valley. Tenth-graders turned in below-average scores. So did eighth-graders - aside from math, which tied the state average. The one above-average score came in fourth-grade reading.

Wendell

Among one of the lower performers in the region, Wendell school scored well below the state average in most areas.

In fact, Wendell's eighth-grade language and math scores were the lowest among the region's 21 school districts. Only half of Wendell's 10th-graders could perform at proficient levels in the three subjects.

Otter's right to question Patriot Act

It passed through Congress and was signed in a rush by President Bush in the aftermath of Sept. 11. But as the war on terror has stretched on, opposition to the USA Patriot Act has grown.

The debate goes to the heart of a question as old as the American republic: How should a nation under attack maintain its valued liberties, when those very freedoms could allow our enemies to harm or kill us?

Increased security measures are a part of every war. Throughout history, when war leads to tightened security, liberties contract. Conversely, when concern for individual freedom holds sway, domestic security may be weakened.

Our Constitution constructs a government to protect order, while simultaneously erecting a fence to protect individuals from that same government. So it is proper for Americans, who cherish their safety as well as their inalienable rights, to question how far government should go to guard our security.

The issue doesn't break along traditional party lines. It is not a conservative vs. liberal issue. Instead, it seems to slash diagonally across our political landscape. One side of the divide (oddly uniting liberals and libertarians) holds that a nation worth defending must sacrifice liberty. The other side says a country that does not ensure domestic tranquility and a common defense imperils its citizens.

U.S. Rep. C.L. "Butch" Otter, R-Idaho, falls into the former camp. He contends the USA

Patriot Act goes too far in its police powers against citizens. As the sole member of Congress to oppose the initial Patriot Act in 2001, he subsequently pushed the House to reject stronger Patriot Act II laws.

Last month, Otter led passage of a House amendment to prohibit unannounced "sneak and peak"

Our view: A thoughtful debate over civil liberties and the investigative powers of the Patriot Act is a proper discussion in post-Sept. 11 America.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

since Pearl Harbor has America felt as vulnerable and deceived as it was on Sept. 11.

National leaders acted boldly on their responsibility to protect the people and find the culprits. The act has helped national security agencies go after suspected terrorists.

But, as the congressional report on the 9/11 attacks concluded last month, national security forces missed significant clues that could have been detected without the Patriot Act's enhanced powers. It's worth asking: Why do federal intelligence need more police power, when those agencies had sufficient leads under pre-existing laws?

Otter's conservative/libertarian leanings bring a valuable perspective to the debate. It's important that Americans balance their valid concerns about protecting liberty with the clear need for national intelligence in the hunt for terrorists.

FRENCH FOR DUMMIES

JULIUS WACHTEL

It is not surprising that the liberal media, Democratic officeholders and academics vociferously oppose the California gubernatorial recall. This misguided but predictable point of view is invariably preceded by a severe scolding of the officeholder whose job his apologetic seems determined to protect.

In these times of financial crisis and political gridlock they come not to praise Caesar but to defend Rome.

In teaching research methods, I spend much of the semester on cause and effect. There is a difference, we know, between causation and correlation. The recall did not land California in "BBB" bond territory. It got there, in part, because passive regulators wended on the elixir of market forces and politicians dependent on corporate sponsors allowed greedy energy traders to plunder the state treasury.

Private and public blunders and self-dealing - much of it taking place during the governor's first watch - helped lay waste to one of the world's leading economies. One could reasonably argue that installing a strong, well-respected leader might be the best news that Wall Street could hope to hear.

But forget the millionaires. An aspect of the crisis that gets little play is Davis' failure to honor his commitments as the state's CEO.

As head of California's executive branch, he is our day-to-day leader, an architect and a forerunner. We expect him to shape and implement policy to promote the public welfare and to provide timely, unbiased information that helps government employees and private citizens make the right decisions in their personal and public lives.

When Davis withheld information about California's declining finances before an election, not from lack of knowledge but for the most selfish of reasons - his political future - he acted in a way that we might expect from a legislator but cannot tolerate from a chief executive.

Keeping the bad news to himself, he pulled the rug from under state agencies on whose services we depend.

Consider, for example, the California State University system. Had it known that the light at the end of the tunnel was an oncoming train, would it have spent hundreds of millions on unessential computer upgrades? Had it been able to implement cost-control measures in a timely manner, would it now be necessary to raise tuition and fire employees?

By keeping the lid on, our chief gatekeeper also disenfranchised the electorate. Davis would have received fewer votes had he squared with us about the state's finances. But taking the blame for situations not wholly under their control is one of the burdens that elected executives must be willing to bear. Silence and prevarication are not options when the buck stops at your desk.

Naturally, we should view the motives of recall proponents with suspicion. Imagine how delicious taking a second bite of the apple must be.

Sill, blaming the recall on anyone but Davis and his party misses the point. We would not be in this sorry place had the governor paid more attention to his duties than his ambitions. Conducting the people's business with fingers crossed behind one's back has diminished confidence in government and stripped old-fashioned terms such as "voter choice" of their meaning.

As a liberal, I am appalled. For myself and the many others who feel misled and cast an unforgotten vote, and for those who must suffer the consequences of political gamesmanship, the recall hardly seems an assault on democratic values. On the contrary, it represents an opportunity to rise in their defense.

Why be surprised that citizens have turned to the state law for relief? At the very least, we will get to find out how choice is exercised when all who wish to be informed are informed.

Julius Wachtel is a lecturer in the political science and criminal justice division at California State University, Fullerton.

LETTER

Rep. Simpson should help pull our nation out of U.N.

When Mike Simpson voted in mid-July against defunding the United Nations, he missed a golden opportunity to send a message that America's sovereignty must remain uncompromised. Among its published agenda items are direct taxation of citizens by the United Nations, worldwide abolition of private ownership of firearms and U.N. control of education.

In defense of his vote, Simpson has offered the entangled explanation that America should remain in the United Nations in order to use our Security Council veto on measures unworkable to this nation. The argument falls apart upon even casual observation.

If America were no longer a member of the United Nations, particularly the Security Council, we would be outside its reach - its actions and resolutions could have no effect on us.

Moreover, without America paying dues, paying for the great bulk of U.N. military operations, subsidizing the dues of other nations and paying for its ancillary operations, the United Nations would die away.

Consider what would be "lost" if the United Nations ended: American military personnel would no longer be put in harm's way enforcing U.N. resolutions.

Terrorist nations like Syria would no longer sit on the Security Council. Terrorist nations like Libya would no longer sit on the U.N. Commission on Human Rights.

The United States would no longer be vilified on the floor of the General Assembly by envious, disgruntled nation-members.

Diplomacy would continue to be conducted, business as usual, without interruption. Recall that during the entire life of the United Nations, effective diplomatic processes were conducted in conferences and summits of two or more nations outside the U.N. framework. The United Nations can claim no victories in this arena.

America would no longer continue to bankroll the enormous bulk of all U.N. operations. According to the United Nations Web site, we pay 22 percent of its annual expenditures ($12 billion) excluding operations of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, where the United States sends the big bucks. No other nation pays as much.

In addition to these assessed charges, the United States also makes "voluntary" contributions to the United Nations.

America would retain its sovereignty uncompromised. In H.W. Mencken's classic 1903 Federalist, he said: "All of Idaho's congressmen should support HR-1146 to get America out of the United Nations."

KATHLEEN HAYDEN Twin Falls

Speak up, then strip down

Remember a few months ago when the Dixie Chicks said they were ashamed of President Bush? A lot of fans turned on them, and radio stations dropped them and some of the Dixies took it back and then posed naked for the cover of Entertainment Weekly. They got a lot of press for it, and what was said and done, their tour did great. During the shows they gave people time to boo them, calling it "Freedom of Speech" - and the crowd cheered. I think it was Elie Harvey Oswald who said there's no such thing as bad press.

Nashville's Spice Girls are just some of the most recent celebrities to catch heat for something they said.

In 1966, John Lennon filed up America by saying the Beatles were more particular than Jesus. With a big American tour only a few days away, the Beatles were backpedaling furiously and his people spun like freaks and they worked their way out of it. And some to think of it. John and Yoko later posed naked. (I'd like to be that, when ABC aired "The Beatles Anthology" eight years ago, NBC went against them with an episode of "The Dick Cavett Show" that included our "Magic Bullet" stunt. NBC's own ratings so, by transference, Penn & Teller are more popular than we. I better, not say that. I don't want people burning top hats and bunnies.)

Back when Trent Lott got into trouble for praying Strom Thurmond's pre-Civil War racism, his supporters whined that Thurmond's weren't giving him his freedom of speech.

The reason certain people get quoted is because they're in the public eye. That's why we know who Tim Robbins and the Dixies said. Of course, some people are going to disagree with them - and those who disagree get their free speech, too. If, like all us loudmouths say, it's OK for people to burn a flag, isn't it also OK to burn cheesy pop records?

If Robbins can be against the war, can't people be against the war, can't people be against the war, if the Dixie Chicks can use TV to make a statement, can't Clear Channel make a statement by not playing their records?

These people are lucky that people still get upset. That means people are listening to them and care about what they say. I can pretty much say anything outlandish I want, and that small segment of the public that hears it just shrugs it off with no complaints.

The Dixie Chicks should be thrilled that people are listening and take them seriously enough to get upset. But I will say that I'm a little bit embarrassed for the United States talking them seriously.

Let a few airlines sink under their own weight

About halfway through my extensive dealings with Lufthansa last week... I had been sent, finally, to the Airport to change a ticket but before I was told, definitively, that the ticket could not be changed...

ANNE APPELBAUM

When airlines are involved, they do. Even though the industry has survived numerous major bankruptcies - Eastern, TWA, Pan Am - people still shiver at the thought that, say, United might also vanish into the history books.

European airlines are even more heavily subsidized, one way or another. Others have pointed out why this makes no economic sense, so I won't repeat the full argument here.

But it is equally true that subsidies have left a mark on airline culture. Although on the verge of bankruptcy, most major carriers appear to believe in the certainty of their own permanence.

Not all of the fault belonged to the airlines. Terrorism, SARS and war in Iraq have cut into airline profits. But those factors have also hurt the hotel industry, the restaurant industry and the economies of places as varied as Washington and Orlando, Fla.

LETTER

Group home residents make loving neighbors

I work for a company that works with children and adults who have developmental disabilities. My job entails managing a residential habilitation program for adults who want to live in a community setting vs. an institutional setting.

More importantly, I am a person who lives in a neighborhood like most people. I also live in a neighborhood where there is a group home three doors down from where my children and I reside.

There are days where no one asks you how your day was! That has never been the case with the residents with whom I've interacted.

I am appalled at the mentality of some people who live in our communities. They are people who go to church every day, live their lives on a pedestal and think they are better than anyone else. They are so egocentric and cowardly that they will not even give their names, as they are trying everything in their power to stop or shut down group homes in their communities.

For those of you people that live in the Burley area and are trying to shut down such programs for those who have disabilities, you should be ashamed of yourselves.

I don't know how you can look yourselves in the mirror every day. And what a good example you're setting for your children!

I hope that some day you are not knocking on my door asking for help if something happens to your child or loved one.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Jerome woman dies in one-vehicle rollover

WENDELL - A Jerome woman died Wednesday following a single-vehicle rollover near Wendell. Kim Fairchild, 22, was driving at about 8 p.m. Wednesday when she drove off the road, overcorrected and rolled at 3100 S. 2050 E., said County Sheriff Shaun Gough said. Fairchild was ejected and killed, Gough said. Fairchild's 4-year-old son was wearing a seat belt and wasn't injured, he said. "There were no witnesses to tell us what happened," Gough said.

M.V. Arts Council plans reception tonight

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council's Full Moon Gallery will host an opening reception tonight for several exhibitions. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. at the arts council office, located at 132 Main Ave. S. The Full Moon Gallery of Art will feature new works by its nearly 25 member artists that pay homage to summer. It'll be on display through Sept. 27. In the Galeria Pequena, "Pushing the Button" - artwork done by various artists on the theme on buttons - also will be on display through Sept. 27. The more than 15 participating artists have developed creative works using buttons, both old and new, in an eclectic mix of mediums. The council's office gallery, quilts by members of the Desert Sage Quilting Guild will be displayed through Sept. 27. The reception is free and open to the public.

F&G seeks comment on hunting, fishing regulations

JEROME - Sportsmen wanting to comment on or request changes to hunting or fishing regulations can attend an open house Monday at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Waterfowl season planning and changes in the fish regulations are under consideration. The open house runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Fish and Game office located at 868 E. Main St. in Jerome.

Individuals with disabilities may request meeting accommodations by contacting the office at 324-4359 or the Idaho Relay Service at 1-800-377-2529 (TDD).

Written comments can be submitted without attending the open house at the Fish and Game office for more information.

Shakespeare Festival seeks thespians

KETCHUM - The Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival is looking for a few good damsels and maids in distress to take part in its Renaissance Fair Aug. 23 at Ketchum's Fish and Game Park. The event will be held in conjunction with the Festival's comedy "All's Well That Ends Well," which will run Aug. 22 through Aug. 23.

The fair will begin just before noon Saturday with a grand parade of the King's Royal Court from the Stage Theatre to Sun Valley Road and from there to the park. Volunteers will be coached in authentic Elizabethan language and behavior and fitted in medieval costumes so they can spend the afternoon in character in between stage performances. The list of needs includes rogues and surly peasants to bring comic relief in the stock, fortune tellers, storytellers, jovial innkeeper and pretty wenches.

To participate call Prue Hennings at 726-9124.

Elmore County seeks fire risk information

MOUNTAIN HOME - Elmore County is conducting a fire risk survey to help with its fire mitigation plan. Northwest Management Inc., in cooperation with local fire officials, will be mailing a brief survey to randomly selected rural homeowners in Elmore County seeking details about home construction materials, proximity to water sources and other risk factors surrounding homes.

For more information on the fire mitigation plan, call Schlosser at (208) 883-4488 or Forrey at (208) 883-45 or contact a county commissioner.

Hospital looks to refinance debt

By Brandon Fiale
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Debt-free by 2011. That's just one option at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center as it looks to refinance its debt and figure out what to do with the savings. There are several good options, Chief Financial Officer John Groesbeck told the hospital's Finance Committee Thursday.

"How conservative do we want to be?" he asked members. The finance committee voted to recommend starting the refinancing process, and the hospital board will now consider the options. The hospital currently has revenue bonds issued in 1993 with an outstanding balance of $21.5 million, hospital spokesman Shawn Barigar said. The bonds are scheduled to mature in 2013, but the debt could be paid early depending on which refinancing option is chosen. The hospital could even be debt-free in eight years, Groesbeck said. "That's a phenomenal accomplishment," he said. "It's a competitive advantage to be debt-free, allowing us to react quickly." However, the advantages of being debt-free must be weighed against the need for immediate hospital improvement, Barigar said. "The hospital board will weigh whether to become debt-free in eight years or to take care of significant construction projects in the short term," he said. "It is more important to be debt-free or to have new facilities?" Refinancing options include borrowing an additional $9 million to be used for facility construction. The facility planning process is still under way, but planners might have alternatives by September, Barigar said. Discussion has included remodeling existing facilities or building new space, he said. Barigar said there is general agreement among hospital staff that improvement is needed. "It's not a question of if, but when," he said. The hospital board has several refinancing options to consider, Barigar said. They include:

'Tribal Energy' infuses camp

Junior camp counselors and cancer survivors, C.C. Cooper, left, and Kim Holford, demonstrate the didgeridoo, one of several instruments they are learning to make and play this week at Camp Rainbow Gold north of Ketchum.

Camp Rainbow Gold lets cancer patients live life more fully

By Karen Bosalick
Times-News correspondent

CATHEDRAL PINES - The beat of jungle drums is pulsating through a little nook of the Sawtooth National Forest north of Ketchum. Occasionally, the rhythmic beating is pierced by the deep guttural vibration of the didgeridoo, an aboriginal Australian horn said to be the oldest wind instrument known to man. The beating and blowing have become a focal point for the 68 youngsters attending Camp Rainbow Gold this summer. The theme of the weekend camp is "Tribal Energy" and even the traditional round dance was reborn as a tribal dance. "I wish it could go on forever," said 16-year-old camper Derek "Big Red" Farry. "The drumming is neat because it's a way of getting kids to come out of their shell and express themselves. But it's more than the drumming. It's the attitude means a lot with the kids at Camp Rainbow Gold. After all, they're here because of one thing they have in common: cancer. One youngster has lost an arm due to it. Another has had so many brain surgeries he can't count them all. And many must couple their fishing or canoeing and chemotherapy treatments at the camp medical cabin. Those who are regulars at the camp, which is in its 22nd year, have rejoined with friends who have seen the word "remission" stamped on their medical charts. And they've mourned at the news that others have lost their battle with cancer and will never be attending camp again. The camp is designed to give them a chance to experience things that kids without cancer get to do. And this year that involved building and learning to play African drums and didgeridoos under the instruction of Aaron Maynard, a drum teacher who plays with Nada Brahma and the Drum Central Group in Boise. "It's been awesome," said the camp's art director Bob Potter. "The energy of what they're doing gets you pumped up. Even when I'm not playing I can feel the rhythm in my body and know it's the same rhythm they're feeling. I can see the look on their faces and know they're having the same experience." didgeridoos are normally made from eucalyptus trees hollowed out by termites. The kids have built theirs out of PVC pipe that Maynard curved over a fire then covered with wood filler and stained to make them look like wood. To get a constant sound they learn to blow on it, using a circular breathing that involves pushing out air while breathing in - kind of like blowing a trumpet loosely. "It's really cool," said 16-year-old Jared Benson, as he etched aboriginal-like designs on his

Castleford subscribes to zone defense

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - Castleford officially has a land-use plan. The City Council unanimously approved a new comprehensive plan, zoning designations and rules and regulations governing those zones Wednesday night, just 48 hours before a 120-day emergency moratorium on a new construction and mobile homes expires.

Hearing

A public hearing on Castleford's proposed $175,325 budget begins at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 13 at J&D Enterprises, located at 300 Main St.

Castleford is no longer among the few remaining communities in the Magic Valley without designated zones.

The moratorium gave the city time to get zoning rules together to protect residents and business owners who had complained that residential areas without regulations threatened their interests.

The zoning ordinance was the outcome of a controversial mobile home that was placed on property along Main Street last year. The owners requested to move their mobile home next to a house they planned to operate as a wedding business. Since Castleford had no designated zones at the time, the request was approved despite some resistance.

The new city zones include commercial, residential and mixed-plan development designations. The mixed-plan designation outlines an application process for individuals that want to operate businesses from their homes. The resident would be required to apply for a special-use permit, and neighbors would have the opportunity to comment on the proposal.

Areas currently designated as mixed-plan include the school, church and park properties.

Police say Mini-Cassia shops sold alcohol to minors

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY - More than half of the 64 Mini-Cassia businesses checked over the weekend illegally sold alcohol to minors, according to Idaho State Police officials. The check by employees of ISP's Alcohol Beverage Control Bureau showed that Mini-Cassia had the second-worst compliance record of the areas surveyed in Idaho, ISP Public Information Officer Rick Ohnman said.

Of the 64 businesses checked over the weekend, 33 sold alcoholic beverages to people younger than 21, Ohnman said. That translates to 51.5 percent of the businesses selling alcohol to minors. That percentage compares with 29 percent of the checked businesses in north-central Idaho, which sold to minors in April, 46 percent of the businesses checked in May in the Shoshone, Gooding, Wendell, Jerome, Piler, Blida and Glens Ferry area, and 70 percent in Boise during a recent summer celebration. A higher percentage of Cassia County businesses violated the law - 62 percent - than did Minidoka County businesses - 42.8 percent. Employees of the alcohol bureau who are between 17 and 20 years old attempt to buy alcohol at convenience stores, grocery stores, restaurants and bars in these checks, Ohnman said. If asked for identification, those employees show their true identification cards in Idaho, driver's licenses are clearly stamped "under 18" and "under 21."

"Many of the establishments never asked for identification, while others simply went through the motions and looked at the ID, then sold anyway," Lt. Bob Clements said in a press release. Clements is chief of the Alcohol Beverage Control Bureau. Clements singled out one sale he called "inexcusable." In that incident, the clerk bypassed the age verification request on the cash register and sold to a minor.

Parties settle lawsuit against school district

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

RUPERT - A sexual harassment lawsuit filed against the Minidoka County School District has been dismissed after the parties reached a settlement. Fifth District Judge Barry Wood signed an order of dismissal and ordered each side to pay its own costs and fees associated with the litigation.

The terms of the settlement agreement are confidential. Idalia Casiano filed a lawsuit against the school district and her former boss, Pete Espinoza, in August 2001, alleging sexual harassment. She claimed that while she worked in the district's Even Start program and Espinoza was her boss, he repeatedly subjected her to "unwelcome conduct of a sexual nature." She claimed he made her consent to his demands and his sexual conduct as a condition of her employment. School district officials denied the allegations and said Casiano failed to mitigate the alleged damages through other channels. Espinoza no longer works for the school district and has moved to Arizona. In his deposition, he said he and Casiano had an adult consensual relationship. Casiano still works for the school district. Casiano had sought punitive, actual and mental anguish damages, attorney fees, court costs, prejudgment interest and post-judgment interest.

Shelley Ridenour is editor of The Times-News Mini-Cassia Bureau. She can be reached at 208-677-4042.

Clements said the ability of minors to purchase alcohol in Idaho "continues to be excessively high," and the bureau will continue compliance checks to combat and reduce underage drinking. Ohnman said the bureau doesn't usually release the names of the businesses which violate the law by selling to minors. ISP personnel can fine or sanction the offending businesses, he said. Penalties range from a $1,000 fine or 10 days of mandatory closure for first-time offenders to closing a business for six months for repeat offenders. No sanctions have been issued by the ISP to any of the Mini-Cassia businesses yet, he said. Each transaction is reviewed before a fine or sanction is imposed. Those reviews are now occurring.

Filer swaps two lots with developers

By Mickey Walker Times-News correspondent

FILER - The City Council has agreed to a land swap that will help the efforts of a statewide organization committed to easing families into safe and affordable housing.

from a prior arrangement with the developer. However, the city lots came into play when Golden Spur developers realized a couple of the lots chosen by Mercy Housing did not meet the organization's size requirements.

running at large to his department's attention, Johnson told the citizens he would make his officers aware of the situation and in violation of the city's ordinances.

Other council business included: • Sewer agreement - The council accepted a main sewer line from the Shepherds Acres subdivision.

Strengthening firewalls - An ordinance amending the building code was passed to increase the thickness of firewalls on newly constructed buildings.

Pump prices move upward after many weeks of stability

BOISE (AP) - The average price for gasoline across Idaho has been heading back up again after being stable for much of the late spring and early summer.

cents below $1.60 a gallon in Idaho. Carlson said the price of crude oil finally hit the wholesale market "and that immediately shows up at the pump."

The association's daily survey of pump prices found that the average price for self-service unleaded on Thursday was $1.633 a gallon in Idaho, up a tenth of a cent from Wednesday.

Market analysts, he said, believe a combination of factors are responsible. They cite the Bush administration's decision to replenish the strategic petroleum reserve, the already tight inventories of gasoline this week of the Marriott Hotel in Jakarta and the fact that oil supplies from Iraq have not met earlier expectations.

The gradual, but seemingly steady rise of the past week or two followed weeks of stability that saw the price range several and you've got tight inventories at it," Carlson said. Idaho's average ranked 26th highest among the states and was nine cents a gallon higher than the national average, which rose three cents in just the past several days.

A year ago, Idaho's average pump price was $1.50, still a dime higher than the national average. Regionally, the Coeur d'Alene area continued to have the highest average at $1.654, but that was down nearly a penny from Wednesday.

The Boise area price was another half-cent lower, at nearly $1.62 while the Pocatello area continued to have the lowest average at just under $1.57 even though the price was up nearly a penny from the previous day.

Armstrong said. "NBC has informed us that they do not have a place on the NBC fall schedule, and they assured us the next episode will be produced."

Armstrong continues to reject claims that the program was not aired because of its content. "As we said initially, the fact that gay men are featured in the program does not automatically make it a candidate for pre-emption," he said.

Woman agrees to plead guilty in child injury case

BURLEY — A Burley woman charged with two counts of felony injury to a child has reached an agreement with the Cassia County prosecuting attorney.

Raqueel Lara has agreed to plead guilty to one count of felony injury to a child in exchange for Cassia County Prosecuting Attorney Al Barrus dropping a second count of that offense. Barrus has agreed to recommend Lara receive a suspended prison sentence of one to five years and be placed on supervised probation for one year.

Lara is scheduled to be sentenced in 5th District Court in Cassia County Sept. 26.

Lara is accused of leaving her two children alone, with the five children of her sister, for at least four hours while they went to a bar Feb. 15. The children ranged in age from 4 months to 9 years.

Lara's sister, Graciela Herrera, has also reached an agreement with Barrus' office. The agreement calls for dismissing four counts of injury to a child against Herrera in lieu of her probation.

Herrera is scheduled to change her plea Sept. 11 in 5th District Court in Cassia County.

Lara's attorney, conflict public defender Dennis Byington, had filed a motion for a change of venue for the trial, before the plea agreement was reached. He said a news story indicating she was a bar when her children were left alone created an unfair prejudice to the jury pool.

New Albertson College chief pledges cooperation with Caldwell

CALDWELL (AP) — Incoming Albertson College President Robert Hoover took over at Albertson College, founded in 1891, on Aug. 15.

Four years ago, when Learned took the helm of the private liberal arts school, he spoke to the club about the tension between campus and Caldwell.

Learned joined the local United Way and YMCA boards. The college contributed $5,000 to help uncover Indian Creek for its scenic value, and professors and students are doing historical and scientific research for the project.

Pearl Harbor survivor gets buried with former shipmates

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — More than 60 years ago, Russell Lott struggled to pull himself across a lifeline to escape the fiery USS Arizona. But when his life ended, it was the sunken ship he chose as his final resting place.

Lott's interment aboard the Arizona in Pearl Harbor this week was likely among the last. National Park Service divers carried the seaman's ashes below the sea to one of the Arizona's gun turrets, among the remains of its shipmates.

"It's a unique moment of closure for being back with their shipmates," said Bernard Doyle, chief ranger at the Arizona memorial. "It's a bonding through catastrophe."

Lott, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, died May 22 at the age of 83. Speakers at the memorial Tuesday said that during the Japanese attack, he was knocked unconscious by explosions that rocked the ship. When he awoke, he ripped the burned flesh from his arms and sought escape. Dangling from a 60-foot-long line stretched four stories above a cauldron of fire, he made his way hand over hand to safety.

Still, those who gathered above the Arizona said the significance could not be lessened.

Feds offer two people as liaisons on wolf issues

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Responding to a request from Gov. Dave Freudenthal, the federal government has named two people as liaisons on wolf management issues.

Freudenthal asked Interior Secretary Gale Norton last month for single person to determine whether Wyoming's management plan is sufficient to end federal protection of gray wolves.

He said that federal officials have sent mixed signals, which have bogged down an already complicated process for shifting wolf management to Idaho, Montana and Wyoming.

Freudenthal was advised this week that Ed Bangs, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wolf recovery coordinator, will be Wyoming's liaison on technical issues, while Service Director Steve Williams remains the official wolf policy spokesman.

Craig Manson, assistant secretary for fish, wildlife and parks, said the designations should insure consistency from the federal government.

The government has issued no formal opinion on the adequacy of the Wyoming management plan. Idaho's plan has been approved. Montana is still finalizing its plan.

Since being reintroduced in 1995, wolves have made a remarkable comeback, and federal wildlife officials say they are ready to take steps to remove the predator from protection under the Endangered Species Act once state management plans are in place.

Under the Wyoming plan, a minimum 15 wolf packs would be maintained in the state with at least seven of them outside Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks and the John D. Rockefeller Jr. Memorial Parkway.

Freudenthal was advised this week that Ed Bangs, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wolf recovery coordinator, will be Wyoming's liaison on technical issues, while Service Director Steve Williams remains the official wolf policy spokesman.

The zoning ordinance covers the everything from rules for the three types of zones to regulations on new construction and mobile homes.

The City Council will discuss building permit fees at its Aug. 13 meeting, where council members will consider a fee schedule based on the values of projects. The city has been charging fees of $5 to $25 for permits.

City Clerk Patsy Kinyon has said increased revenue will be needed to cover the cost of a zoning administrator, building inspector and the expenses associated with publishing notices on zoning hearings on zoning requests.

The council had considered forming a planning and zoning commission to conduct the zoning business for the city. But state law limits a planning and zoning commissioner's service to two terms.

"We would run out of people to serve on the commission," Mayor Rita Ruffing said.

The city's annual budget hearing will be held prior to the council's regular meeting on Aug. 13. It will begin at 7 p.m. at J&D Enterprises, located at 300 Main Street.

Copies of the $175,325 budget have been sent by first-class mail to each city residence and business.

Anyone wishing to comment on the proposed budget can do so at the hearing. Written comments must be submitted to the city clerk by 8 a.m. on Aug. 13.

Volunteer Aaron Maynard of Boise brings his drum expertise to camp as he works on a drum dedicated to one of the many children with cancer at Camp Rainbow Gold.

with a thumback. "It's really a different sounding instrument and everybody who plays it makes their instruments sound different."

"They're very easy to make and fun to teach," Maynard added. "And, it's all about breath control, and any time you're working with breath you have a very calming effect. It's very centering."

Maynard made the drums by gluing together 18 strips of wood over them so they resemble the ashiko drums of Western African countries like Mali, Senegal and the Ivory Coast. He tunes them by tightening rope stretched around the sides of the drum, and the kids stain and paint them to their own tastes.

"I love the philosophy of African music — that everyone has a voice and that drumming is very much a community effort," said Maynard. "Similarly, I use drums and didgeridoos to create teamwork."

In fact, under Maynard's tutelage, the kids sound like something you might hear on the Discovery Channel as they sing an upbeat "Fanga," an African welcoming song, then follow it with drumming. They finish with a flourish that ends with one booming beat.

"Anyone with a heart beat is a rhythmic being. We're constantly beating 'Boom boom,'" Maynard said. "So anyone with a heartbeat can learn to drum. You say it first — 'Goon DO-DO-goon DO-DO.' Then you play it."

"I've found it particularly powerful to play here in such a beautiful setting and for such a powerful purpose. These kids know how important it is to love life and you can sense it in their drumming."

Generous contributors

A number of Magic Valley people have helped raise funds for Camp Rainbow Gold.

Among them, deputy Kurt Atwater who sat atop a lift in Twin Falls for a few days to raise $40,000 for charity — half of which he gave to Camp Rainbow Gold. A former patient of Dr. Don McCusky, long the camp's medical director, recently bequeathed $1,000 dollars a year for 12 years to the camp.

The "Dam Fools," a West Magic Reserve club, gave the camp $1,200 this year, much as they've done for the past 12. Others donors included the American Legion Post of Twin Falls.

How 10th-graders fared, by ethnicity

Please see page A1 for more information

Here are results of the spring 2003 Idaho Standards Achievement Test for south-central Idaho 10th-graders, broken down by ethnicity. If state officials approve a proposal before the Idaho Board of Education, high school students in the future will need to test at proficient or above in all categories in order to receive diplomas. Students would have three years to reach proficiency.

Moscow creates city child-care oversight job

MOSCOW (AP) - City Council members approved the creation of what is billed as the first city job in Idaho dedicated solely to enforcing child-care licensing laws. The quarter-time position, which could be filled as early as October, will fill a crucial void, said interim City Clerk Stephanie Kalas. The decision was prompted in part by the fact that Moscow's former city clerk, who has been responsible for enforcing the child-care ordinance since it was enacted in 1993, and had no time to perform the duties, Kalas said. The city's willingness to include the new position in a local funding year stems from reports of serious problems at child-care facilities, said Heidi Reinertson with the Moscow chapter of Statewide for Children. One Moscow resident testified at this week's budget hearing that she encountered a small, dark and filthy facility where an employee was hitting a child. Reinertson said some local child-care facilities also exceed the city's supervisor-to-child-ratio. "Nothing was being enforced," she said. Mayor Marshall Coststock agreed the city's child-care ordinance lacked adequate enforcement provisions in 1993, and he has urged a new job can be extended to half-time.

ACLU sues over LDS, SLC land swap

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union filed a federal suit Thursday challenging a land swap deal that gives the Mormon church the right to regulate behavior on a disputed downtown pedestrian plaza.

The lawsuit, filed by both the national and Utah ACLU, names Salt Lake City Mayor Rocky Anderson and the city, and asks the court to return control of the Main Street plaza block to the city, which last week signed it over to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The church is not named as a defendant, but is considering whether to intervene in the case, said church attorney Alan Sullivan.

Citing the 1st and 14th amendments of the U.S. Constitution, the complaint accuses the city of illegally capitulating to the church when it traded away the easement through the downtown block of the Main Street rather than maintain it as a public space.

ACLU attorneys say the deal was an attempt to sidestep an appeals court ruling last fall that kept the easement, an integral part of the block's original plan, meant the city had to ensure 1st Amendment free speech and assembly rights.

The 46-page lawsuit contends the city's land-swap sale of the public easement was primarily motivated by religious considerations that endorse the Mormon religion and sent the message that the city favors one religion over another.

"The city's actions are directly attributable to what the Mayor of Salt Lake City himself describes as the 'extraordinary pressure' brought by the LDS Church," the lawsuit states.

Anderson on Thursday denied the lawsuit's claims, and said the ACLU's legal theories were "very strange indeed." He declined to elaborate, saying he couldn't comment on city litigation because it might reveal defense strategy.

The plaza dispute began in April 1999, when the church paid the city $6.1 million for one block of Main Street adjacent to the church's temple. The block, now a landscaped pedestrian plaza, formerly was a main traffic gateway to the city's downtown.

In that deal, the church agreed to the city's demand for public access to the block, but demanded in turn that the church be allowed to restrict smoking, sunbathing, bicycling, "obscene" or "vulgar" speech, dress or conduct on the plaza.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Utah sued, arguing the restrictions were unconstitutional.

Last October, the 10th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in favor of the ACLU and the plaintiff represented, saying the city, not the church, was responsible for maintaining order on the 660-foot-long easement through the plaza.

The ruling also offered an alternative to the dilemma: Sell the easement. The court didn't say how that might be done constitutionally.

WISH COME TRUE

Andrew Nelson, 4, waves to his mother and sisters on the platform as he and his father, Mark, start off on a ride in a Union Pacific engine Wednesday in Pocatello. The Make a Wish Foundation enabled Andrew, who has cancer, to make his dream — to ride a train — come true.

Nuns might appeal sentences, lawyer says

DENVER (AP) — Three pacifist nuns sent to prison for damaging a missile silo in an anti-war protest are considering appealing their sentences, defense attorneys said Thursday.

Denver attorney Scott Poland has already filed notice that he may appeal on behalf of Ardeeth Platte, a 66-year-old Roman Catholic nun sentenced to three years and five months in prison.

He said lawyers for the other nuns, Jackie Hudson and Carol Gilbert, also plan to file notices, which would preserve their right to appeal. "We all feel there were errors committed during the course of the case that effectively prevented them from putting on the defense they wanted to assert," Poland said.

During the trial, U.S. District Judge Robert Blackburn refused to allow the nuns to cite principles established during the international war crimes tribunal at Nuremberg.

Boise teen drowns in Yellowstone river

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A 15-year-old Idaho girl apparently drowned in a popular swimming hole.

Libeth Clair Skollingsberg of Boise was visiting the park with family and friends on Wednesday, swimming in the Firehole River when she went under and failed to resurface, officials said.

Her body was finally found 20 minutes later but attempts to resuscitate her failed, authorities said.

Officials said she was not wearing a life preserver, which is recommended by the Park Service.

Deputies seek trio with ties to Boise pipe bomb

BOISE (AP) — Authorities searched for three young men they believe set off a pipe bomb at a local middle school early Thursday, causing up to $20 million in damage but no injuries.

Ade County Sheriff's Lt. Patrick Calley said a surveillance camera at the Lake Hazel Middle School captured good pictures of the three males he said were probably between 16 and 20 years old.

"We don't know who they are, but the pictures are very clear," Calley said. "A mother, a father, a friend, they'll know who they are."

It was shortly after midnight, Calley said, when the three placed the pipe bomb behind a reader board at the entrance of the school and detonated it. The explosion sent debris flying through a number of windows in the building and damaged the outside walls. The structure remained sound.

Public can comment on Hagerman budget

By Sandra Wisecaver
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN (AP) — The City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed $433,675 budget for the 2003-04 fiscal year at 7 p.m. Aug. 19 in City Hall.

On the agenda after the budget hearing is the updated police policy manual. Todd Bassett presented drafts of the manual to council members for review at their Aug. 5 meeting. The manual includes a new credit card policy for the police department.

Bassett, a Boise State University criminal justice student, is assisting the city as part of his internship requirement.

Other business at the Hagerman City Council's Aug. 5 meeting included:

- Tot fare — Richard and Elizabeth Cristobal expressed concerns about speeding motorists on Bruneau Street. Motorists also regularly run the stop sign at the intersection of Bruneau and Fourth, Richard Cristobal said.

- "I sit every day and watch 15 cars run that stop sign, some of them at very high speeds," he said. "I'm surprised we haven't a very big problem. Twenty-five miles per hour is too fast as far as I'm concerned."

- The council responded by requesting additional police patrols of the area.
- The Cristobals also expressed concerns about a sack of hay on property in their neighborhood. The couple questioned whether the stack violates the city's fire codes, but were told the stack on private property is in no violation.

- Light objectives — Council members objected to the location of a new street light installed on State Street as part of the Hagerman Downtown Improvement Project. The fixtures were placed in the middle of the sidewalk. The council wants the light poles moved to the landscape area located next to the sidewalks. The city will not be responsible for the cost of relocating the lights.

- Signs vandalized — Stop signs installed on East Avenue recently were stolen. The signs have been replaced. Signs will be replaced at the intersections of East Avenue with Valley Road and Main Street.

- Vandalism in park — The restrooms at the city park were vandalized again early this week. Superintendent Richard Scruggs told the council. Due to the repeated destruction of the facilities by vandals, the restrooms will be locked up during the nighttime hours.

- Library report — Usage of the Hagerman Public Library was down 16 percent from July of last year, possibly due to the recent record temperatures, librarian Wilma Butting said. Five families consisting of eight patrons joined the library during the month.

- Catering permit — The council approved a catering permit for a wedding at the American Legion Hall on Sept. 13.
- Residential hook-up — A domestic water and sewer hook-up at 238 Main St. E. was approved contingent on the fee payment.

Engaged woman questions her future

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, and after four years of dating have recently become engaged to "Zack." We are very much in love, and quite frankly, until lately I never could have imagined myself with anyone else.

Last week, one of my co-workers - I'll call him Keith - confessed to me - and the more I think about it, the more I feel a mutual attraction. Keith has been a good friend over the years.

We work out together on a regular basis in the company gym and have shared many lunches. Abby, I am confused. I find myself thinking about Keith more than my fiancée.

Keith has always been easy to talk to. I wish Zack and I could have the conversations I'm able to share with Keith.

The last thing I want to do is wreck my engagement. How can I stop this confusion and once again focus on my relationship with my fiancée? Help!

- S.O.S. ASAP IN THE SUNSHINE STATE

DEAR S.O.S.: Let's analyze this situation. Why did Keith wait until you were engaged to Zack before declaring his feelings? Could it be that once you were "taken" you his freedom?

Many men find women who are married, engaged, going steady, etc., easier to talk to and even more attractive than those who are available.

Do not allow yourself to be distracted from a relationship that has worked for four years. Limit your workouts with Keith and put your energy into developing better communication with Zack.

DEAR ABBY: For more than a year I have been a live-in caregiver for a sweet 94-year-old lady I'll call Ethel. For the most part, Ethel has enjoyed good health. We have a lot of fun together.

Last week, when we went on our weekly outing to the beauty shop and lunch, I noticed how loud her voice was in the restaurant. She attracted the stares of several diners. Ethel has also begun chewing with her mouth open, completely unaware of how she appears.

I want to let her know that she isn't acting like the well-mannered lady she's been in the past, but I don't know how to tell her without hurting her feelings. Please give me some advice on how to broach the subject. There is only one restaurant in our small town, and Ethel dearly loves our weekly meal there. Thanks, Abby.

mention to the doctor the change in her table manners. Any abrupt change in the behavior of a person is something his or her physician should know about.

Please don't be resentful or embarrassed. You are her caregiver, and it is your obligation to inform her physicians what you observe.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wedding etiquette question. Twice within the last month, I've been invited to a bridal shower without receiving an invitation to the wedding. I have witnessed a social blunder or two in my day, but this takes the cake. Are you with me on this, Abby?

- DISGUSTED IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR DISGUSTED: To invite someone to a bridal shower who will not be invited to the wedding is a breach of etiquette. However, before becoming angry about it, please consider that this was ignorance on the part of the couple or the families.

This postcard promoting Lexington, Ky., shows the Louisville, Ky., skyline.

Kentucky city's cards promote wrong skyline

DANVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Lexington's skyline isn't known for its scenic view from the Ohio River — mainly because the central Kentucky city is nowhere near it.

But a Danville Cracker Barrel restaurant has been unwittingly selling postcards of Louisville's skyline, emblazoned with "Lexington."

The company that designed and printed the postcards, Pages of Time-Seek Publishing, acknowledge they made a mistake.

"Boy, don't know how, but these pictures got swapped in the press run," said Wanda McClendon, of the Goodlettsville, Tenn., company.

Seek Publishing has recalled the postcards, McClendon said.

Jason Riggs, who works in the postcard department at the company, said the company has designed 4,000 different cards for cities across the country and "had only three or four mistakes."

Rep. Hal Rogers' work in D.C. helped eliminate toll on road

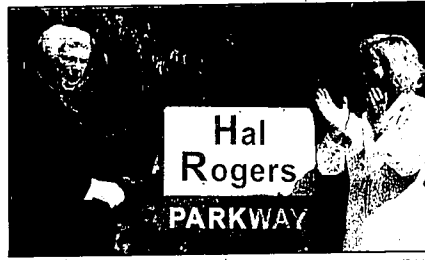

HAZARD, Ky. (AP) — In the eastern Kentucky mountains that Daniel Boone helped carve out for settlement two centuries ago, his name and reputation remain larger than life.

Festivals honor the rugged, buckskin-clad frontiersman. Businesses, towns, even a national forest are named after him. But to the chagrin of some, Boone's name is being stripped from the area's main highway in favor of Rep. Hal Rogers'.

"Nothing against Hal Rogers, but I think we're getting a little carried away naming things after politicians," said Mike Mullins, head of the Hindman Settlement School in Knott County. "Hal Rogers' day will come and go, just like my day will come and go, but Daniel Boone will be remembered forever."

Rogers, a Republican from Somerset, has represented eastern Kentucky in Congress for 23 years and helped obtain the $13 million in federal funding that allowed the state to eliminate tolls on the parkway.

The two-lane road, especially popular during the autumn leaf season, runs almost 60 miles through remote, mountainous forest not so unlike the terrain that Boone himself encountered.

The state transportation agency announced its decision to rename the parkway in June at a ceremony where Rogers help symbolically topple a toll collection booth.

Transportation Secretary James Codell III said at the time the new name thanked Rogers for doing "many great things for southern and eastern Kentucky."

"With anything you do, everybody has different opinions," said Kentucky Transportation Cabinet spokeswoman Selena Curry. "Some people like it, some people don't."

Rogers, in a statement from his office Tuesday, did not address the public debate about renaming the road. "It's a tremendous honor to have this parkway named after me," he said. "I am humbled."

Already, signs renaming the road Hal Rogers Parkway are going up, and the old Daniel Boone Parkway signs will come down next year after maps are reprinted.

But Boone's enduring folk-hero status in Kentucky is not so easily removed. Boone, who lived from 1734 to 1820, built his reputation as the model of the American frontiersman in the 1770s for his exploration and settlement of the state. He hacked out the Wilderness Road, which led early settlers across the Appalachian Mountains and into Kentucky and points west, and helped defend early encampments from Indians.

And his name can still draw tourists. Every fall, thousands of people gather at the Daniel Boone Festival in Barboursville to celebrate the man's life and times, dressing in coonskin caps and parading around in buckskin clothing.

One eastern Kentucky newspaper, The Floyd County Times of Prestonsburg, said renaming the road is a silly honor that Rogers should decline.

"For all of Rogers' ability to bring the gray home from Washington, it pales in comparison to the legendary life of Boone," the newspaper said.

But The Big Sandy News of Paintsville said Rogers deserves having the highway named after him because of his impact on the region socially, environmentally and politically. "We ought to be naming our kids after the guy," the newspaper said.

Acclaimed author Welch dies

Los Angeles Times

James Welch, the eminent novelist whose books about American Indian life brought him international acclaim, has died. He was 62.

Welch, who had battled lung cancer since October, died Monday of a heart attack at his home in Missoula, Mont.

The Montana-born American Indian author of seven books burst onto the literary scene in 1974 with the publication of his first novel, "Winter in the Blood."

The book, which is narrated by a young Indian who lives on a ranch on a reservation in north central Montana, garnered a front-page review in the New York Times Book Review by novelist Reynolds Price, who called it a "nearly flawless novel about human life."

"That book was so brilliant in technique that it really took Native American writing to a new level," Bill Bevis, a retired University of Montana literature professor, said Wednesday.

"Riding in the Earthboy 40," a collection of his poems dealing with Indian subjects, was published in 1971. Welch's first novel reflected his poetic sensibilities.

Welch turned to historical fiction for his 1986 novel "Fools Crow." The story of a band of Blackfoot Indians in the Montana Territory of the 1870s earned Welch the Los Angeles Times Book Prize for fiction.

Montana-born novelist Ivan Doig, who was asked to write a book jacket blurb for "Fools Crow," remembers that after reading a galley of the novel, "It became clear what Jim's standing was among my generation of Western-writers."

In that book, Doig said Wednesday, "Jim managed to, I think, enter the soul of the people of the Blackfoot tribe. That seemed to be the single, greatest imaginative leap into a people that any of us writing here in the West have managed."

Welch turned to nonfiction with his 1994 book "Killing Custer: The Battle of the Little Bighorn and the Fate of the Plains Indians," an account of the famous 1876 battle as seen from the Indian perspective.

His last book, "The Heartsong of Charging Elk," was published in 2000.

"Jim as a writer was an empiricist," Pulitzer Prize-winning author Richard Ford, a part-time Montanan who first met Welch 20 years ago, said Wednesday. "He went out into the world and brought the world to the page and was a wonderfully unphobic and felicitous writer."

"Jim was also purely a writer. I don't think he had any vocational interests besides being a writer."

Wide load on the American road

The Hummer, a commercial version of the military Humvee, commands space and attention on the road. It comes in two models — the H1 and the H2.

SOURCE: Associated Press AP

Hummers elicit awe, disdain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeing a Hummer come down the road sometimes stirs feelings much like watching soldiers roll into a foreign town. People either stare very hard to see them or very much not.

Dave Breggin in Littleton, Colo., gets many hand gestures when he rolls by in his 1995 behemoth. He gets waves. Thumbs up. Or less friendly sign language. "Once in a while, someone doesn't like the concept," he said. "They express themselves a bit."

An SUV on growth hormones, Hummers suck up road space, tax breaks, gas and attention. Hot sellers, they are showing up everywhere — cruising the beach strip, roaring through the plains in Kansas, parking outside steak-houses in the nation's capital.

"It's like being in a parade all the time," said John Zohn, a Hummer salesman in Pompano Beach, Fla. "Jalopy du jour. It's phenomenal. You pull up to a red light next to a Ferrari, people are more likely to look at the Hummer."

A splashy byproduct of the armed forces — inspired by and patterned after the military's workhorse Humvee — Hummers are so in-your-face other drivers feel driven to get out of way.

"It's designed to run people off the road," complained van owner Verma Griffin, 40, of Denver. "Not one Hummer has ever let me in the lane I wanted to get in. They say, 'Hey, I'm king.'"

For William Glenn, 72, of Hendersonville, Tenn. — a self-described Cadillac four-door sedan man — seeing a Hummer reminds him of his days in the tank corps.

"It looks like a tank coming down the road," he said. "You'd have to take a semi and 18-wheeler to hurt them. I just want to stay the heck out of their way."

In a recent Associated Press poll, 60 percent of respondents said they find Hummers unappealing, 33 percent found them appealing and just 7 percent wouldn't hazard an opinion. Men were more inclined to like them than women — although a minority of both sexes did — and people in the 18-to-34 age group were evenly split on the question while older people were clearly thumbs down.

One striking feature of the poll, done by ICR/International Communications Research of Media, Pa., is that so many people had an opinion. On other poll questions, about SUVs, safety and energy policy, they were more likely to equivocate.

Hummers are produced in partnership between General Motors and AM General, Indiana-based maker of the High-Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle, or Humvee, that started it all.

Smoke alarms might not be loud enough, analysts say

CHICAGO (AP) — Anna Marie Newson thought her family would be safe with smoke detectors in her home's hallways and the bedrooms of her five children.

But the Milwaukee-area mother got an alarming wake-up call when the blaring detectors failed to rouse several of the children during an experiment done by local fire officials and a television news crew. "We were outside and we could hear the alarms going off," Newson said in an interview this week. "It's kind of scary. At least now we know."

Those results helped prompt a warning from safety specialists that it may take more than just the traditional siren-based alarms to awaken young children during a fire.

That includes recordings of parents' voices, vibrating alarms or even flashing strobe lights, according to recommendations from Northbrook, Ill.-based Underwriters Laboratories, an independent organization that certifies safety for consumer products.

"There might not be a single answer to this complicated issue," said UL's John Drenberg. "It seems clear, however, that some children, especially young children, may at times sleep so deeply that it may not be possible for the alarm alone to rouse them to the point where they can reliably evacuate a house on their own."

Government data show that from 1991 to 2000, there were more than 33,000 deaths from residential fires nationwide — 24 percent among children under 15, Underwriters Laboratories says.

The organization's recommendations were issued last week by a research panel that UL formed following experiments last fall involving Newson and another family on Milwaukee's WISN-TV, and a similar experiment at a Dallas-Fort Worth TV station.

Newson found she had to awaken several of her children, then aged 8 through 14, after eight minutes of blaring. Fire officials say less than two minutes is an optimal escape time.

The UL panel also reviewed other reports, including Australian research in 20 children aged 6 through 17 that found few consistently were roused by smoke alarms.

Timeless river

On the second Saturday in August, local wagoners and their livestock brave the Snake River near Glens Ferry, just as the Oregon-bound emigrants did 150 years ago.

Glens Ferry renews Three Island Crossing

Today
 7 p.m. - All-equine parade, Elmore County Fairgrounds to Three Island State Park.
 9 p.m. - Crossing dance, Spirit of the Horse Corral, 262 E. Idaho St.
Saturday
 6-10 a.m. - Pioneer breakfast, sponsored by the Glens Ferry Chamber of Commerce, Three Island State Park.

GLENS FERRY - Probably more than most high-desert towns, this one is preoccupied with water this summer.
 It's hot, it's dry and the opening of the city's new water treatment plant is about a year away. No wonder the 17th annual dip in the Snake River, the Three Island Crossing, captures everyone's attention.
 A handful of intrepid horsemen and wagoners will dip their fellochs into the Snake River at 5 p.m. Saturday and sample what it was like to do so 150 years ago when this empty slice of Oregon was a long, long way from help.
 Occasionally, some of them get wet - which is, after all, part of the attraction of the event that draws about 3,000 visitors to this town of 1,300 on the second weekend in August.
 The Three Island Crossing celebrates Glenn Ferry's location at a major choke point on the Oregon Trail, where westward-bound emigrants found themselves on the horns of more than one oxen.

 To ford from the south to the north side meant a shortcut to Fort Boise and the Willamette Valley beyond. To stick to the south shore meant a longer - and perilously dry - odyssey.
 Contemporary wagoners and their animals have to traverse a couple of hundred yards of water, flowing between 7,000 and 8,000 cubic feet per second. That's not a lot by historical standards, but this particular stretch of river is prone to sink holes and tricky eddies.
 There's a two-year-old Oregon Trail interpretive center in Glens Ferry now that spells out the details, and there's no question many Three Island Crossing spectators come to see a bit of history.
 But the crossing itself frequently has its edgy moments.
 Dozens of trekkers have been dunked over the 17-year history of the crossing, including then-Rep. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, in 1998. (He survived to become a senator that fall.)

 The event itself has expanded for two to three days this year, with the first Three Island Crossing auction scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday at the Elmore County Fairgrounds, featuring Western and Native American collectibles.
 The annual all-equine parade gets things started at 6 p.m. tonight, followed by a dance at the Spirit of Idaho Horse Corral at 9.
 Between breakfast on Saturday and the crossing in the afternoon, food vendors and artisans will set up shop at Three Island State Park.
 There will be a mountain-man village, live entertainment and a performance by Native American dancers.

A Day in the Valley expands

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - In its 14th summer, A Day in the Valley has expanded to about 72 hours.
 A parade, a car show and a street dance, as well as the traditional Sunday-afternoon music, fun and games in City Park, are all part of a weekend designed to celebrate the 27,000 south-central Idaho residents of Hispanic heritage and their contributions to the Magic Valley.
 It starts tonight with the Hispanic Heritage Fiesta Queen pageant at 7:30 in Roper Auditorium. Ten young women from throughout the Magic Valley will compete for the title of "Reina de la Fiesta" and scholarships and prizes.
 The pageant will include talent, sportswear, evening gowns and spontaneous questions. Additional entertainment will include guest soloists and traditional Hispanic dances.
 Admission is $5 - kids 10 and under get in free - and tickets are available at Eduardo's and Garibaldi's restaurants, or at the door.
 On Saturday, a parade is planned down Main Avenue, starting at Magic Valley High School at 5 p.m. Entries will include charros, traditional dancers, low-riders, motorcycles, fire trucks, police cars, a color guard, race cars and pageant contestants. A street dance, from 8-11 p.m., will follow on Main Avenue.

 On Sunday, the music starts at noon in the City Park bandshell with a performance by La Familia. Grupo Salvaje will follow at 2:30 p.m. Nobles at 4 p.m. and Los Tecolotes del Valle at 6:30 p.m.
 The fiesta will officially open at 1 p.m., with the pageant winners introduced at 3:30 p.m. In between, a jalapeno-eating contest is scheduled for 2:15 p.m.
 Elsewhere in the park on Sunday, a car show is planned, with a "hopping" contest at 2 p.m. and a stereo sound-off at 3:30 p.m.
 Children's activities are also scheduled, with pinatas broken at 1:3 and 5 p.m. and a mini-train and bouncing toys available to youngsters.
 Also in the park Sunday afternoon, there will be an arts and crafts and a mask-making workshop and contest.
 The fiesta is sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho, the Keever Foundation, Magic Valley Distributing, La Posada, Garibaldi's, Eduardo's, Street Customers Magazine, Power Plant and the Twin Falls police department.

'Freaky Friday,' 'S.W.A.T.' hit Magic Valley theaters

Raw to the valley

'Freaky Friday' - Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan play a mother and her teenage daughter who get a new perspective when they switch bodies on the eve of Mom's wedding. Directed by Mark Waters. With Mark Harmon and Egorod Gould. (PG, for mild thematic elements and some language.)

'Man on the Train' - French pop idol Johnny Hallyday is absolutely brilliant as an aging criminal come to rob a small-town bank and who meets up with a lonely old local (Jean Rochefort) who changes his life. Director Franck Leconte has made a beautiful, witty noir, soulful and sad, and, ultimately, sweet. The ending's a bit of a mess, but so what? R (violence, adult themes)

'S.W.A.T.' - Big screen update of the '70s TV show finds the Los Angeles Police Department's elite team tackling mercenaries out to spring a drug kingpin. Colin Farrell, Samuel L. Jackson, Michelle Rodriguez, Li-Cool J and Olivier Martinez. (PG-13, for violence, language and sexual references.)

Tess Coleman, left, and her daughter, Anna, right, don't see eye-to-eye on anything - but they gain a little newfound respect for the other's point of view when each wakes up in the other's body in Walt Disney Pictures comedy 'Freaky Friday,' starring Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan.

Continuing

'American Wedding' - A gagfest that makes the audience giggle at least twice as often as giggle, this third in the American Pie trilogy whipsaws the audience between gross-out and guffaw. With Jason Biggs, Alyson Hannigan, Seann William Scott and the sublime Eugene Levy. 1 hr. 36 R (profanity, sexual candor, raunchy humor)

'Bad Boys II' - Martin Lawrence and Will Smith are back and hunting down hoods in this wham-bam two hours and 26 minutes of raging shootouts, over-the-top car chases and lots and lots of gunfire. It's a no-holds-barred sequel, and while there are awesome stunts and spectacle, the whole thing's exhausting. R (violence, sex, profanity, drugs)

'Space Almight' - Jim Carrey has fun playing God while He (Morgan Freeman) takes a much-needed breather, but this modest fable about a frustrated Buffalo, N.Y., TV news anchor who uses divine powers selfishly and the need to understand one's true gifts and worth, takes place in a synthetic, airless universe, overdone with special effects and spectacle and marred by a jumbled, jarring production design. Even so, staunch Carrey fans are likely to be underwhelmed. With Jennifer Aniston. Philip Baker Hall. (1:41. PG-13, for language, sexual content and some crude humor)

'Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle' - Reteamed with the ringer-vide director-turned-franchise-maker McG (Joseph McGinty Nichol to his mom and dad), the saucy triumvirate spawned from Leonard Goldberg's '70s show have Goldberger up for the volume for movie No. 2. Gleefully airheaded and slick, 'Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle' serves up platitudes of semilar offerings. PG-13 (violence, sexual innuendo, drug use)

'Daddy Day Care' - Eddie Murphy as 'The Nutty Professor' was funny. Murphy as 'Doctor Dolittle' was OK. But Murphy as a 'Daddy Day Care' nanny is a Johnny I don't know whether he has lost his mojo, or just his edge. I just hope he finds it before his next movie. PG (potty language and humor)

'Finding Nemo' - Who lives in an aquarium under the sea? Little Nemo! When this frisky orange fish (think candy corn with legs) breaks free from the Great Barrier Reef, he proves to his timid dad that there's nothing to fear but for itself. Though not as great as 'Toy Story 2' and 'Monsters, Inc.', Pixar Animation Studios that are the gold standard for family movies, 'Finding Nemo' is a delightful underwater adventure. G (scenes of loss, separation and suspense)

'Gigli' - Ben Affleck and Jennifer Lopez star in this excruciatingly unfunny crime comedy romance, in which the cuddly brity twosome bicker, banter and discuss gender roles while their 'psychologically challenged' marriage yelps 'the Bewitched' over again. 2 hrs. 04 R (sex, violence, adult themes)

'How to Deal' - Although this film is at times too contrived and too neatly tied together, it is more thoughtful than most recent teenage movies. It centers on the impact of divorce upon a 17-year-old (Mandy Moore), whose mother (Peter Gallagher) has left

Big box office

- Last weekend's top-grossing movies:
1. 'American Wedding,' Universal.
  2. 'Spy Kids 3-D: Game Over,' Miramax.
  3. 'Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl,' Disney.
  4. 'Seabiscuit,' Universal.
  5. 'Bad Boys II,' Sony.
- Source: Exhibitor Relations Co.

his wife (Allison Janney) for a much younger and more glamorous woman. These and other key actors, who include Trent Ford, Alexandra Holden and Nina Foch, manage to dent the film's aura of artificiality. (1:41. PG-13, for sexual content, drug material, language and some thematic elements.)

'Johnny English' - If looks could actually kill, Rowan Atkinson's face would have to be licensed as a deadly weapon. Which would be fortunate for the character he plays, a British secret agent who is not awfully good with more conventional means of espionage destruction. A comic actor of genius who raises silliness to an art form, the wonderfully expressive Atkinson gets to make excellent use of those devastating looks in this spy spoof where he turns up as a James Bond type more likely to kill adversaries by accident than on purpose. The film, bathroom humor and all, was specially crafted as a vehicle for a performer who is a major star not only in his native Britain but around the world. Directed by Peter Howitt and scripted by Neal Purvis & Robert Wade (who've written Bond movies 'The World Is Not Enough' and 'Die Another Day') and William Davies. With Ben Miller, Natalie Imbruglia and John Malkovich. (1:27. PG for comic nudity, some crude humor and language.)

'Lara Croft Tomb Raider: The Cradle of Life' - Angelina Jolie is back as the British babe archaeologist in a somewhat flatter and more engaging follow-up. Our pic takes up as a James Bond around the globe in search of Pandora's Box while a Nobel Prize-winning madman is hot on her heels. PG-13 (action, violence, sex)

'Sinbad: Legend of the Seven Seas' - The latest version of 'Sinbad' is a pleasure to look at. It's filled with fine, imaginative moves and an overarching sense of visual freedom, a feeling for play that entices us into enjoyment. When it comes to dialogue and story, however, the film apparently used up all its initiative changing its hero's ethnicity to lie here that isn't overly familiar and formulaic, nothing that's even in the same arena with the eye candy of those vivid adventures. With the voices of Brad Pitt, Michelle Pfeiffer and Catherine Zeta-Jones. (1:26. PG, for adventure action, some mild sensuality and brief language.)

'Spy Kids 3-D: Game Over' - Resurrecting the kitschy '50s film fad of 3-D, the one-man band known as Robert Rodriguez regroups his sleuthing Cortez clan in 'Spy Kids 3-D: Game Over,'

'The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen' - Set in 1900, this tale about seven fictional Victorian heroes who are recruited to fight the force attempting to bring Europe to World War II is dead on arrival. With Sean Connery as Allan Quatermain, James West as Tom Sawyer and Naseeruddin Shah as Captain Nemo. PG-13 (violence, sexual innuendo)

'Legally Blonde 2: Red, White & Blonde' - Now a Boston lawyer boldly striding toward partnership in couture heels, Elle Woods (Reese Witherspoon) enters with many of the same accessories that worked for her so well in the last movie. One absurdity leads to another and before long Elle has moved to Washington, D.C., where, newly employed by a congresswoman (Sally Field), she sets up shop with the intention of banning cosmetics (testing on animals). Directed by Charles Herman-Wurmfeld ('Kissing Jessica Stein') and written by script-polishers about town Kate Kondell, the film moves at such a brisk, easy clip that there isn't much time to linger over its flaws. The story adheres strictly to formula and Elle's friend Paulette (Jennifer Coolidge), but however lightly pooled the animal-rights issue gives the film indisputable ink. But there's something a bit more far out about a movie as willfully frivolous as this one dropping the names of PEETA and Princeton philosopher Peter Singer as casually as Versace. (1:34. PG-13, for some sex-related humor.)

'Pirates of the Caribbean' - An improbably entertaining, if overlong, adventure that brings new meaning to the term 'summer camp.' Doubleboons! Ripped bodices! Unbuckled swash! Rumi! 'Pirates of the Caribbean' has it all. PG-13 (violence, sexual innuendo, alcohol, zombies)

'Seabiscuit' - Gary Ross' corny but effective adaptation of Laura Hillenbrand's bestseller turns her tale of turf, manure and triumph into a New Agey tribute to the broke-down horse who beats three broken men. Starring Jeff Bridges, Tobey Maguire and Chris Cooper. PG-13 (Sexual innuendo, racing injuries)

'Sinbad: Legend of the Seven Seas' - The latest version of 'Sinbad' is a pleasure to look at. It's filled with fine, imaginative moves and an overarching sense of visual freedom, a feeling for play that entices us into enjoyment. When it comes to dialogue and story, however, the film apparently used up all its initiative changing its hero's ethnicity to lie here that isn't overly familiar and formulaic, nothing that's even in the same arena with the eye candy of those vivid adventures. With the voices of Brad Pitt, Michelle Pfeiffer and Catherine Zeta-Jones. (1:26. PG, for adventure action, some mild sensuality and brief language.)

'Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines' - Arnold Schwarzenegger is back (and Edward Furlong isn't) in this second sequel about a cyborg from the future and the fate of humankind in the here and now. James Cameron didn't direct and the special effects are so-so, but T3 has its charms, B-movie charms, and a new neenessy who looks, and smells, like a runway model. 1 hr. 50 R (violence, profanity, end-of-the-world despair)

the first Hollywood feature to require the use of those chic red-and-blue-lens spectacles since 1935 in 'Freddy's Dead: The Final Nightmare,' PG (intense action, scares)

'Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines' - Arnold Schwarzenegger is back (and Edward Furlong isn't) in this second sequel about a cyborg from the future and the fate of humankind in the here and now. James Cameron didn't direct and the special effects are so-so, but T3 has its charms, B-movie charms, and a new neenessy who looks, and smells, like a runway model. 1 hr. 50 R (violence, profanity, end-of-the-world despair)

'2 Fast 2 Furious' - The faster you drive, the less intelligent you become, an axiom proved by '2 Fast 2 Furious.' '2 Flash 2 Flameout' is a better description for this sequel to the 2001 break-away hit 'The Fast and the Furious.' PG-13 (violence, sadism, profanity, sexuality)

'28 Days Later' - Set in England in the near future, this taut, terrifying sci-fi follows a group of survivors trying to find safety in a country crawling with murderous zombies. Visceral and magnificently creepy R (violence, sexual violence, profanity, intense scares)

'Dreamcoat' comes to Burley's King Center

The Times-News

BURLEY - Community Artists and Students Theater League will present the Intermountain Regional Touring Company production of Andrew Lloyd Webber's new production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" tonight and Saturday at the King Fine Arts Center. Local talent includes Janelle Byington and Darrin Jackson of Malta and Trent Turner of Declo.

"It's so cool that people from Burley get to be in a production of this magnitude," Jackson said. "With a different cast, it is like a whole new show. Even if you've seen 'Joseph' before, this one is different."

"You don't see this kind of humor in any other play," said Byington, who is the show's narrator.

"It's so open to so much artistic interpretation that we could change it-a lot-of-make-it-really funny. I think the people of this area will love because it is highly energetic, spicy and colorful. It is a great show."

"It's so fun because we'll be going along and all of the sudden we are singing cowboy, then a saucy French number is next, then a singing Elvis," Darrington said. "Each song has a different, unexpected theme. It is very

S.V. offers arts and crafts festival

By: Karen Bösselick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Carvings on prehistoric woolly mammoth tusk and boiled potato. Figures depicting South American historical scenes in colorful wooden boxes will appear at the Sun Valley green this weekend.

The setting: the 35th annual Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. today through Sunday on the lawn east of the Sun Valley Ice Rink.

The festival will feature the work of 130 artists selected from among 700 applications about 10 percent are from Idaho this year — an impressive percentage considering the state's small population and the national reputation of the festival, says Festival Director Jenifer Gentry.

Festival rules are strict: no manufactured work, no imported work and no work that's been made by other people. Such high standards have earned the festival a place among the top hundred juried outdoor festivals in the nation, as well as recognition by the National Association of Independent Artists, as being among the top four festivals in the West for quality of exhibition and a variety of other things.

"I do shows all over the country and this is one I would definitely travel to," said Hailey craftsman James Reed, whose popular Animalia crafts have been featured in the show for 15 years.

"It's small but it doesn't need to be big because it's got the right people. And, from an artist's point of view, it attracts browsers who have money and who like stuff."

In addition to browsing, the festival has a variety of entertainment, art demonstrations and activities for children.

You can kick off the morning with a Chi Gong instruction at 10 a.m. Sunday or morning movement and meditation on Friday and Saturday.

Daddy-a-Go-Go will perform his family rock and roll show at 11 a.m. Saturday and juggler David Winstein will entertain at noon each day.

Montana's Watercarvers Guild will perform folk ballads, uptempo bluegrass and Celtic melodies from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday and the Bruce Innes Trio featuring Cheryl Morrell will perform during that slot on Sunday.

Children can make masks, finger puppets, baskets, books, jewelry, stained glass and tin relief from 1 to 4 p.m. each day at the children's crafts area.

And adults can learn about everything from wood turning to photography to sculpting with potato paste in 30- to 45-minute hands-on artists, demonstrations in the Artist Demonstration tent.

Among the demonstrators will be Jack Burgess, a Ketchum woodcarver.

Burgess built log homes for a living, after graduating from college with an art degree. But his focus shifted following a vacation to Germany when he was so captivated by wood carvings in a shop window that he persuaded the owner to open the door late at night.

"Next thing he knew he was sitting among master carvers and their apprentices at a workshop in the mountains and he was fast becoming hooked on woodcarving."

"I like the physicality of using tools and body. And you get to touch it," he said. "When I demonstrate, people are surprised how long it takes. I hand them a chisel and mallet and they find out that what looks easy when I do it is actually very hard to do."

Emerson Drive, a band from Alberta, will perform at the Cassia County Fairgrounds on Tuesday.

Canadian boy-band headlines Cassia fair

The Times-News

BURLEY — OK, they're not Rascal Flatts. Yet

But Emerson Drive, the cute five-member boy band from the wilds of Alberta, has a contract with Dreamworks Records and history on its side.

Singer Brad Mates, 25; bassist Jeff Loberg, 26; fiddler Pat Allingham, 25; keyboardist Chris Hartman, 25; guitarist Danick Dupelle, 29, and drummer Mike Melocoin, 26, who will perform at the Cassia County Fair Tuesday night, have as much in common with pop boy-bands as they do with the new-traditionalist country sound they espouse, but they seem to have found an audience, according to Dreamworks, with its formidable marketing machine, has something to do with that, but so does the fact that their work was produced by ex-'70s rocker Richard Marx.

Most of Emerson hails from around the western Alberta town of Grand Prairie, from where they toured as a band called 12 Gauge in a rickety school bus.

Entirely fair

Emerson Drive will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Cassia County Fairgrounds arena in Burley. Tickets, which are $14, are available at the door or from the fair office.

The fair starts Monday and continues through Aug. 16. Dates: Monday, Aug. 11, through Saturday, Aug. 16, in Burley. The county fair parade will roll at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. Team sorting is also on tap that same day. Carnival rides and concessions are open Tuesday, through Aug. 16. Thursday through Saturday will be the PRCA Rodeo. Paratour horse racing is also scheduled Friday and Saturday afternoon. Saturday's morning schedule includes the 4H livestock sale, on the free main stage, Wednesday through Saturday, will be a typist and additional local entertainment.

Signed to a record deal in 2001, their self-titled album appeared the following year. They've supported it since then with nearly non-stop touring.

Sonicflood, Plumb headline Rock the Canyon

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — In the realm of praise music, the acts don't come much different than Sonicflood and Plumb.

Sonicflood, Dove Award-winning and Grammy-nominated, is the classic CCM band — all hard-edged choruses and five-part harmony, resonant of Creed and Delirious?

Plumb is actually Tiffany Arbuckle, a singer-guitarist who briefly fronted the band when it opened for Jars of Clay in the late 1990s. Her sound is alternative CCM and her vibe is starker.

Sonicflood, which will perform tonight at 8 p.m. in Centennial Park capping the first night of the Rock the Canyon Christian rock festival, and Plumb, which will conclude the festival Saturday at 8:30 p.m., are really two opposite points on the continuum of music that will be performed at the festival.

Tara Leigh Cobble, a 24-year-old Tennesseean, will start the music at 5 p.m. tonight, followed by Outside the City, a local band, at 6 p.m. Even so, the festival's opening will follow at 7.

On Saturday, Cobble will sing again at 2:30 p.m., followed by the Idaho-based band Lystra's Silence at 3:30 p.m. and These Days at 4:30 p.m. The Boise quartet Grand Prix at 6:30 and the Iowa band 38th Parallel at 7:30.

The Grammy-nominated Christian rock band Sonicflood will play tonight at 8 p.m.

Arbuckle founded the band upon purchasing an acoustic guitar from future songwriting partner and Plumb co-producer Matt Bronleewe. Bronleewe introduced Arbuckle to friends Joe Porter (drums) and Matt Stanfield (keyboards), and the lineup was completed with bassist J.J. Plasencio and guitarist Stephen Leiwike. The group released its self-titled debut on Silverstone in 1997, with Bronleewe and Jars of Clay's Dan Haseltine co-producing the record. The band's second album followed in 1999.

Sonicflood's Tom Michael (bass), Todd Shay (guitar), and What? Rock the Canyon, two days of Christian rock and pop music by 10 different bands and artists, will take to the Snake River Canyon this weekend.

Where: Centennial Waterfront Park, north of Twin Falls. No parking will be permitted in the canyon during the concert, but there will be parking available in the Magic Valley Mall parking lot and at other sites.

When: Today from 5-10 p.m. and Saturday from 2:30-10 p.m.

How much: Tickets for each day are $8 for adults, $7 for children 12 and under, and for two-days are $15 for adults and $13 for children. Tickets are available at the Christian Bookstore in Twin Falls and Creations Bookstore in Burley, or through Select A Seat at (208) 426-1494, online at <http://www.idahotickets.com>, or at Albertson's in Twin Falls and Paul's Market in Ketchum.

Brett Vargason (drums) have been playing together since their college days in Michigan. David Alan (keyboards) and Rick Heil (lead singer) first met as members of the rock band Big Tent Revival in 1997. This history, along with an agreement in what Sonicflood is called to, lay the groundwork for leading others in worship at concert appearances.

The band's first album sold 500,000 copies.

Bobcats advance at Legion state tourney

The Times-News

LEWISTON — One down and two to go. The surprising Burley Bobcat Single-A baseball team shut out Coeur d'Alene 4-0 during the opening round Thursday at the American Legion state tournament to advance to the semifinals tonight.
Pitcher Andrew McMurray kept Coeur d'Alene in balance all contest when it mattered most.
"They had the bases loaded three different times, I think," Burley coach Doug Bailey said. "But we never felt in danger that we were going to give up anything big or that he was getting in any jeopardy."

The Bobcats will take a step up in competition tonight when they face Sandpoint at 5 p.m. Zac Pickup will be on the mound for the Bobcats (24-11). Sandpoint defeated reigning state champion Mountain Home 4-3.
"They are a very, very good club," Bailey said. "They hit the fastball well, so Zac is going to have to mix it up. We could be in trouble if doesn't get his curve over."
Pickup was electric for the Bobcats Saturday when he picked up the victory against Upper Valley that got Burley to the state tournament.

He wasn't at the top of his game against Wood River in Burley's district opener against Wood River a week ago, Burley still rallied to beat Wood River.
Second baseman Scott Hickenlooper had a solid day in the field for Burley, starting an inning-ending double play on a sharply hit ball and knocking down another to keep a Coeur d'Alene runner from advancing.
A boxscore was unavailable by press time Thursday night.

Single-A State Tournament

Thursday
• Burley 4, Coeur d'Alene 0
• Sandpoint 4, Mountain Home 3
• Boise Barons 2, Marsh Valley 1

Second-half surge

Chicago's Paul Konerko and Carl Everett celebrate Konerko's home run against the Kansas City Royals July 31. The White Sox are the hottest team in the majors since the All-Star break.

White-hot Sox climb into playoff contention

More MLB — Page D2

CHICAGO — After their dismal display in the first half, the Chicago White Sox weren't even in the background of the playoff picture.

They weren't hitting. Their pitching was shaky. They couldn't beat the lowly Detroit Tigers.
"We played so bad the first half," Frank Thomas said. "You couldn't play any worse than we played in the first half."

Yet here they are, shaking up the AL Central race with an early second-half tear. A major league-best 15-5 since the All-Star break, the White Sox have made up six games on Kansas City and are now just a game behind the division leaders.

"Honestly, there's no explanation," Paul Konerko said. "I can't figure it out — and I don't want to. I just want to have the team keep going the way it is and, hopefully, we'll win this thing."

The White Sox were off Thursday before beginning a three-game series with Oakland.

On paper, the White Sox were supposed to be one of the American League's top teams. They'd traded for Bartolo Colon, pairing him with Mark Buehrle for one of the most formidable 1-2 combinations in the AL. They'd bolstered their bullpen by getting closer Billy Koch, Andy Thomas, Magglio Ordonez and Carlos Lee gave them an offensive juggernaut few teams could match.

But the White Sox didn't live up to the hype, stumbling through

"I can't figure it out — and I don't want to. I just want to have the team keep going the way it is and, hopefully, we'll win this thing."

— Paul Konerko

April and May. Colon, Buehrle and Koch scuffled, and Ordonez, Lee and Konerko struggled to find their hitting strokes. Manager Jerry Manuel's job seemed to be in jeopardy.
They got a little boost from the annual Crosstown Series, taking four of six from their North Side rivals, the Cubs. They took five of six from the Twins, too, and suddenly found themselves three games back on July 2.

Convinced his team could make a run at the playoffs, general manager Kenny Williams made two big moves. First he traded for Roberto Alomar. A few hours later, he got Carl Everett.
But the White Sox ended the first half 45-49 and seven games back. Chicago then lost 10-9 to Detroit, their fourth straight loss

Tennis dad faces charges of drugging son's opponents

The Associated Press

PARIS — Just how far parents might go to help children reach the sporting elite has become shockingly evident in France with the arrest of a man on suspicion he spiked the drinks of his 16-year-old son's tennis rivals with a prescription drug.

One player died in a car wreck after apparently falling asleep while driving, and another was hospitalized for two days, investigators say. Police are trying to determine whether there were other victims.

Christophe Fauvau, 43, a retired soldier from Terziez-Bains in southwestern France, was arrested Saturday and placed under judicial investigation to determine whether he should be formally charged with unintentionally causing a death by administering toxic substances.

He is suspected of giving the anti-anxiety drug Xanax, which can cause drowsiness, to several opponents of his son, Maxime.
Calls to the Fauvau home Wednesday and Thursday went unanswered.

The case is reminiscent of Houston's "cheerleader mom," Wanda Holloway, who was charged in 1991 with trying to hire a hit man to kill the mother of her 13-year-old daughter's cheerleading rival. Holloway, who served six months in prison, hoped the grieving daughter would drop out of tryouts for the school cheerleading squad.

Suspicions about Christophe Fauvau arose at a tennis tournament June 28 when a player reported seeing Fauvau tamper with the player's water bottle just before his semifinal match with Maxime, police say. The player turned the bottle over to police, who say it tested positive for Temesta.

The next day, Maxime defeated another player in the tournament's final match. That player fell ill shortly after the match and required a two-day hospital stay, Capt. Christian Flagelle, a police investigator in the town of Dax, said Thursday.

In another tournament July 3, Maxime defeated 25-year-old Alexandre Lagardere, a school teacher. Lagardere complained of fatigue after the match and took a nap at a friend's house near the stadium. He slept for two hours, then was driving home when he crashed his car and died.

Police believe Lagardere fell asleep at the wheel. Toxicology

Brothers carry sibling rivalry into pennant race

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — No more family photos and warm reunions. It's time for Bret Boone and his brother Aaron to get serious about their sibling rivalry.

Bret and the Seattle Mariners visit New York this weekend for three games against Aaron and the Yankees. With both teams in first place, it could turn out to be an AL playoff preview.

The third generation of Boones in the big leagues, the All-Star infielders have often played against each other since they were teammates with the Cincinnati Reds in 1997 and in '98. But these might be their most heated games since they were kids.

"We've played each other a fair amount," said Aaron, traded from Cincinnati to the AL East-leading Yankees at the July 31 deadline. "We talked about the trade. He's excited for me. It's a chance to win, a chance to be in a great organization."

"We're looking forward to seeing each other this weekend. We'll have dinner and hang out a little."
Bret is normally more outspoken than his younger brother — as evidenced by his harsh criticism of commissioner Bud Selig at the All-Star game. But the slugging second baseman downplayed the upcoming series, saying Seattle needs to stay focused on holding off Oakland in the AL West.

School's always out for NCAA star athletes

MAURICE Clarett was never really a college student and from the look — and smell — of things, he won't be a college athlete much longer, either.

Here's one clue to how close to gone Clarett is: Ohio State coach Jim Tressel didn't save a spot for his suspended star in Wednesday's team picture.
Back in 1997, the 6-foot-7, 250-pounder of the old Soviet Union, when Tressel was a kid, getting left (or edited) out of official Kremlin photos was guaranteed to be hazardous to your health.

And when Tressel was asked whether he was comfortable that Clarett hadn't done anything that would get his forehead stamped "ineligible" by the NCAA, he replied, "Nothing that I know of."
Amazing the things coaches don't want to know. Or how selective their memories get sometimes. By and large, the football members of theaternity haven't had to wade with the bouts of amnesia that routinely plague their basketball brethren, but

Indians rookies stop Mariners

CLEVELAND (AP) - Billy Traber pitched five-hit ball for seven innings, and fellow rookies Jody Gerut and Travis Hafner hit solo homers as Cleveland defeated Seattle 3-0.

The Indians took two of three from the Mariners, who remained three games ahead of Oakland atop the AL West.

Traber (6-5) struck out five and walked two. David Riske pitched a hitless eighth and Dany Baez worked the ninth for his 24th save.

Seattle starter Freddy Garcia (9-12) lost for the sixth time in seven starts.

National League Braves 7, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE - Mike Hampton won his sixth straight decision and Vinny Castilla drove in three runs with a triple and a homer in the Atlanta Braves' 7-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Thursday.

Hampton (9-5) didn't allow a hit until Eddie Perez grounded a ball through the right side of the infield with two outs in the fifth.

Giants 7, Pirates 5

SAN FRANCISCO - Jeffrey Hammonds fouled off a bunt try and then hit his first homer for San Francisco, a two-run shot that broke a seventh-inning tie and sent the Giants over Pittsburgh.

It was 5-1 when Jose Cruz Jr. drew a leadoff walk in the Giants seventh from Brian Boehringer (5-3). Hammonds tried to sacrifice but fouled it off before homering into the left-field stands on a 3-2 pitch.

Rockies 4, Phillies 3

DENVER - Todd Helton and Chris Stynes homered as Colorado came back to beat Kevin Millwood and Philadelphia.

Helton homered for the second straight day. Stynes connected in the seventh inning, breaking a 3-2 tie with his ninth home run of the year.

Cubs 9, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO - Sammy Sosa hit a two-run homer for the second straight game and Moises Alou and Eric Karros also connected for the Chicago Cubs, who routed the San Diego Padres 9-3 on Thursday for a three-game sweep.

Cardinals 3, Marlins 0

ST. LOUIS - Albert Pujols reached 100 RBIs, scored his 100th run and extended his hitting streak to 21 games as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Florida Marlins 3-0 Thursday night.

Brett Tomko pitched shutout ball into the ninth inning as the Cardinals ended a three-game losing streak.

Devil Rays 3, Royals 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Pinch-hitter Al Martin hit a two-run triple and Julio Lugo followed with an RBI single in the bottom of the ninth inning as Tampa Bay beat Kansas City.

Closer Mike McDougal (3-5) allowed a leadoff single in the ninth to Toby Hall. Travis Lee reached when second baseman Carlos Febles misplayed his grounder for an error.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Marion Jones aims to return in September... LONDON - Olympic champion Marion Jones plans to make her comeback barely two months after giving birth to her first child.

Jim Montgomery, the baby's father, said Thursday that Jones had trained throughout her pregnancy and was eager to return to the track. Her aim is to run the 100 meters at the Sept. 5 Golden League meet in Belgium.

Jones gave birth a month early to a boy, Tim Montgomery, on June 28.

She won five medals at the 2000 Sydney Games, including gold in the 100 meters, 200 and 1,600 meter. A year later, she lost her 100-meter world championship crown to Zhanna Blyudskaya of Ukraine.

Milicic intends to sign with Pistons despite suit... BELGRADE, Serbia - Montenegro - Darko Milicic has left for the United States, determined to sign with the Detroit Pistons despite a lawsuit courted by the under contract to the European team.

The 18-year-old 7-foot forward was the No. 2 selection in the NBA draft in June behind LeBron James of Cleveland.

Milicic said in the Dnevnik daily on Thursday he is "99 percent certain" he will sign with the Pistons despite last month's suit in New York by the team against his agent.

The club is demanding at least $10 million in punitive damages.

The Pistons said they will not proceed with negotiations until the situation with Milicic's former team is resolved.

Milicic's club, Hemofarm Vrsac, says agent Marc Manganic and Rimaclo Management Corp. interfered with the player's European contract. Milicic has played for Hemofarm in Serbia since 2000, and the club says he is under contract through 2005.

Milicic's agents are not prevented from drafting players under contract to foreign teams, but league rules stipulate an NBA team can pay no more than $350,000 toward buying out a contract.

Stackhouse gets charge dropped after apology... BEAUFORT, N.C. - A misdemeanor assault charge against Washington Wizards guard Jerry Stackhouse has been dropped after the former All-Star apologized to the alleged victim.

Stackhouse was arrested last month in Atlantic Beach on a charge of assault on a female after a dispute at a rental property with a customer of the property manager, according to an arrest report.

W. David McFadyen Jr., district attorney for Carteret, Craven and Pamlico counties, said Thursday that Stackhouse had apologized.

The maximum sentence under the charge would have been 150 days in jail for habitual offenders.

Capitals defenseman Johansson retires... WASHINGTON - Defenseman Calle Johansson retired Thursday, ending a career in which he appeared in more games than any other player in Washington Capitals history.

Johansson, 36, will remain with the team as a scout. He played 983 games for the Capitals during a team-record 15 seasons. He also is the franchise's leader in points by a defenseman (474), assists by a defenseman (361) and power-play goals by a defenseman (51).

Johansson was acquired from Buffalo in a trade in 1989. Sabres drafted him in 1985.

Judge refuses to dismiss indictment against Williams... FLEMINGTON, N.J. - A judge refused Thursday to throw out a manslaughter indictment against former NBA star Jayson Williams, who is charged in the shooting death of a limousine driver.

Judge Edward Coleman said defense attorneys failed to prove Williams was a victim of bias or vindictiveness by prosecutors (474), assistant U.S. attorney in Alexandria Township. He could face nearly 55 years in prison if convicted on all charges, which included aggravated manslaughter, possession of a weapon for an unlawful purpose, aggravated assault, and witness and evidence tampering.

Williams' trial is expected to begin in January.

Blues re-sign leading scorer Pavel Demitra... ST. LOUIS - Pavel Demitra will stay with the St. Louis Blues after the team agreed Thursday to re-sign him to the one-year $6.5 million salary an arbitrator set this week.

Following the ruling Monday, the Blues had until Thursday to decide whether to keep Demitra, their top scorer with 36 goals and 93 points, trade him or allow him to become a free agent.

Demitra has led the Blues in scoring four of the past five seasons and has topped 30 goals in three of the past five seasons.

Agassi advances to Montreal quarters... MONTREAL - Andre Agassi stumbled out to a 4-1 deficit, then recovered to beat local wild-card entry Simon Larose 6-4, 6-2 Wednesday and reach the quarterfinals of the Canada Masters.

The top-seeded Agassi, a three-time champion at the hard-court (turf) U.S. Open, wasn't worried when he trailed.

Agassi next faces Rainer Schuettler in a rematch of their Australian Open final in January. Agassi beat the German in four sets, 6-4, 6-3, setting up what was their first meeting since. Schuettler, seeded eighth, beat 10th-seeded Jiri Novak 7-5, 6-0.

Wimbledon champion Roger Federer, seeded third, eliminated No. 16 Tommy Haas 6-4, 6-3, setting up a quarterfinal against Max Mirnyi, who upset No. 11 Paradorn Srichanphan 6-3, 6-2.

David Nalbandian, the 2002 Wimbledon runner-up, advanced Vince Spadea 6-4, 6-2, and next faces Feliciano Lopez, who ousted Karol Beck 6-4, 7-6 (3).

Love takes lead; rain stops play

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Davis Love III tied a tournament record with 10 birdies and led the lead in the weather-delayed first round of The International on Thursday.

Love had 19 points under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this event at Castle Pines Golf Club.

Charles Howell III was next with 14 points. Play was delayed by lightning in the afternoon for 1 hour, 44 minutes and was suspended because of darkness with 13 players still in the course. They were to conclude their rounds early Friday prior to the second round.

Love, who has won three times this season and stands fourth on the money list with more than $4.2 million, finished just one point shy of the tournament record.

Love, who needed only 23 putts, also said he "can't remember the last time I putted with such confidence all the way through."

Love birdied his first three holes, including a 30-foot putt at No. 1. Love, in the 10th fairway when play was stopped, had four birdies in his last five holes. He had his lone bogey at the par-3 16th when he missed the green.

Bob Hey and Jonathan Kaye each finished with 12 points, while John Rollins had 11 and Chris Riley 10.

The scoring system gives players 8 points for a birdie, 5 points for an eagle, 2 points for bogey, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse.

Beem won last year with a four-round total of 44 points, including 19 on Sunday.

Jacquelin shoots 62 at Inaugural Nordic Open

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Raphael Jacquelin of France set a course record with a 10-under-par 62 Thursday for a three-stroke lead after the opening round of the inaugural Nordic Open.

He made eight birdies and an eagle in approaching golf's magic number of 59.

Match-play loss bumps Wie from U.S. Women's Amateur

GLADWYNE, Pa. — Teen sensation Michelle Wie was beaten 1-up by Mary Martinez on Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Women's Amateur.

The 13-year-old from Honolulu won the U.S. Women's Public Links in June. Two weeks ago, she was eliminated in the third round of the U.S. Girls' Junior.

Martinez was eliminated later Thursday in the second round, falling 4 and 3 to Kwan-Chih Lu, who will face defending champion Becky Lucidi in the third round Friday. Lucidi beat Ashley Rollins 5 and 3 in the first round and Avery Kisler 4 and 2 in the second.

Aree Song beat Emily Bastel 4 and 3 in her first-round match and Laura Cross 4 and 3 in the second round. Cross had eliminated ed Song's sister, Naree, 5 and 4 in the first round. Virada Nirapattongporn, runner-up to Wie in the Publiclinks, advanced with a 4 and 3 first-round win over Cecilia Bakstedal and a 5 and 4 second-round victory over Ashley Hoagland.

In-Bee Park and Erica Blasberg, who tied for third in stroke play, also advanced to the third round. Parke defeated Katie Connolly 2 and 1 in the first round and Lindsay Hulwicz 7 and 6 in the second. The third round and quarterfinals are Friday, with the semifinals Saturday. The 36-hole final is Sunday.

Football players' deaths during 2002 totaled 15

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Fifteen football players died in the United States last year — down from 23 in 2001 — and none of the deaths were from heartstrokes, according to an annual study.

Five died in 2002 after on-field head injuries, according to the study released Friday by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Three of those five were in high school, one was in youth football and one in a semi-pro league.

The other 10 died from natural causes not directly tied to the game but provoked by vigorous exercise, such as asthma or heart problems, according to the study. The study reported that about 1.5 million junior high school and high school students play football in the United States. Colleges and universities field about 75,000 players.

Researchers were surprised at the lack of heartstroke deaths last year. The number of heartstroke deaths among football players had climbed in recent years, from 13 in the entire decade of the 1980s, to 15 in the 1990s, and seven in 2000 and 2001 combined.

"We have been concerned because heart-related deaths are either entirely or almost entirely avoidable," said Dr. Frederick Mueller, a professor and chair of physical education, exercise and sport science at UNC-Chapel Hill.

to baseball's worst team. The White Sox won the next three against the Tigers, starting a season-high, eight-game winning streak.

After taking two out of three in a home series against the Royals this week, they are within a game of Kansas City.

The Royals — and everyone else in the AL — had better beware. It's not just that the White Sox are winning, it's how they're doing it. All-Star starter Esteban Loaiza is still dazzling, and he's finally getting help. Buehrle is 7-1 in his last eight starts, while Colon is 4-0 with a 1.14 ERA in his last four outings.

The White Sox have homered 26 times in the last 10 games, and outscored Kansas City 32-16 last week. But they can play, small ball, too. In Wednesday's 3 victory over the Royals, Chicago scored its last two runs after Alomar and Jose Valentin mowed runners to third on grandstands.

"We are playing as a team, we're doing the little things right and we're being unselfish guys," said Alomar, who likened these White Sox to the Toronto team that won the World Series in 1992 and 1993.

"I'm just excited to be here," Alomar said. "And excited to have a chance to play for the pennant."

Boones

"I'm being with the Yankees doesn't make any of those games more or less important," Bret said. "I look at it as going to New York and needing to win. That's all, really."

Still, the Boone family seems to be the middle of every big baseball story these days — and it's been a month of emotional ups and downs for the entire clan.

When Bret and Aaron were both selected for the All-Star game in July — the 14th set of brothers to become All-Stars — the Boones turned the Chicago trip into a family reunion complete with parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins and children.

The Boone family was the first to send three generations to the midsummer classic. Bob Boone, Bret and Aaron's father, made four All-Star teams during a 19-year career as a durable catcher with Philadelphia, California and Kansas City. His father, Ray, was a two-time All-Star third baseman with Detroit. The four of them got together for a proud family photo before the July 15 game.

But Bob was fired less than two weeks later as manager of the salary-slashing Cincinnati Reds, a jolt to the entire family.

Sooner after, Aaron requested a trade. New York beat out several teams pursuing him, including the Mariners, by parting with top pitching prospect Brandon Claussen.

After hitting 273 with 18 homers and 65 RBIs for the Reds, Aaron moved right into the Yankees' starting lineup at third base. He's hitting only 136, with one RBI in his first five games, but he couldn't be happier playing his pinstrikes.

"Honestly, and I'm not saying this now because I'm on the team, but I always loved the Yankees," Aaron said. "It's the Yankee way, something about the Yankees. Enough said."

Joe Torre, Yankees manager, briefly played with Ray Boone as a rookie on the 1968 Milwaukee Braves.

"No question being a third-generation player, he respects the game," Torre said. "He's a very young player and he's very young. There could be a long future for him here."

Drugging

tests showed traces of Temesta in his system, which investigators suspect was administered by Fauvau.

The case has shocked many, especially in the tennis world. "It is unparalleled, scandalous," Thierry Pham, a member of the French Tennis Federation technical committee, said in a phone interview Wednesday.

Pham said he was particularly puzzled because Maxime is not considered a champion material. "He was not part of the tennis elite for his age, which makes it even more bizarre. He was just a good, local player."

It is Fauvau's 13-year-old daughter, Valentine, who is seen as her family's great tennis hope.

"She is one of the best players in the country in her age group," Pham said. "For her it is very sad because she will have to suffer pressure in her career because of what her father did."

Fauvau is not accused of drugging any of his daughter's opponents.

Despite the doping allegations, the tennis federation is not planning extra security measures for local or national tournaments.

"It would be a bit sad if we had to start putting water in a safe with locks and a key," Pham said. "It's not right to change rules because of an isolated incident."

Strong team effort by U.S. pays off big

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — American teams showed power and perfection Thursday at the Pan American Games.

Neither softball team allowed a baserunner, women's volleyball and handball squads advanced to later rounds, and a U.S. record was set in the javelin.

Kim Krieger, who was not in a medal position before her last throw, unleashed a mighty toss to break her American record. Her throw of 199 feet, 8 inches exceeded her previous mark by 7 inches and gave her the gold medal.

"I knew I could throw this far," she said. "As soon as I let it go, I knew it was a good throw."

Krieger is the first American woman to win gold in Pan Am javelin since 1975.

The world champion women's softball team routed the Bahamas 10-0 as Lori Harrigan threw an abbreviated perfect game. She retired all 15 batters before the international mercy rule ended the game after five innings.

The men's pitcher Doug Gillis beat Mexico 4-0 with a perfect highlight by Mike Dryer's three-run homer.

The women's volleyball team bent to advance to the quarterfinals, and the handball squad qualified for the semifinals by downing Uruguay.

In the medals race, the United States topped its rivals to 76: 32 golds, 20 silvers, 24 bronzes. Cuba is next at 52, 26-13-13.

Back at Olympic Stadium, young sprinting sensation Allyson Felix, still a few months shy of her 18th birthday, cruised through her 200-meter semifinal heat in 22.9 seconds, setting the stage for Friday's run at the gold.

In the hammer throw, James Parker of Great Falls, Mont., won a silver medal, and John McEwen of North Canton, Ohio, got the bronze which Dan Browne of Portland, Ore., finished third.

In women's handball, the United States earned a semifinal spot on Saturday by beating Uruguay 24-21. Next up is Argentina, which beat the Americans 25-19 in the preliminary round.

Scoring five goals apiece were Britiane Martin (Marietta, Ga.), Dawn Lewis (Park City, Utah), Lisa Eagen (Oskaloosa, Iowa) and Edina Bakar.

By beating Peru 25-20, 21-25, 25-22, 25-22, the women's volleyballers set up a quarterfinals match with either Mexico or Venezuela on Monday. Nicole Brannagh scored 19 points and 16-year-old high school phenom Cynthia Bofoza added 11 in her first national team start.

The U.S. equestrian team won the dressage competition, while the fencers won men's saber.

Thomas, James of Columbus, Ga., edged Cuba's Reinier Estopinan in 50-meter rifle, with Kenneth Johnson (Crawfordville, Fla.) earning bronze.

Brandie Neal (Spencer, Ind.) was the women's skeet champion, and John McNally (Heath, Texas) won bronze in 25-meter men's pistol.

Alexandre Despatis of Canada won his second gold medal, using his final dive to edge Mexico's Fernando Platas in 3-meter springboard. Troy Dumais of Ventura, well. He likes to go straight to the heart of things. He was no more likely to back down in a conversation off the field than he was in a collision on it. But that's changed, too.

On Sunday, he blew off a meeting with Marcus Allen set up by his high school coach. Allen had been inducted into the Hall of Fame earlier in the day and graciously set aside some time to offer Claret some advice. "Didn't even call us," said Thom McDaniels, the kid's former coach.

Tressel would give anything to be able to say the same thing two weeks from now, after all those investigators have finished going over the OSU campus with fine-tooth combs. Claret, understandably, lowered his profile and bit his lip on more than one occasion. He turned up to work out and watch a few minutes of practice indoors Thursday at the Woody Hayes Center and left without saying anything.

Apparently, that was in keeping with the spirit of things. Tressel's invitation to Claret through the media a day earlier had been lukewarm at best. "He's certainly free to stop by. He's not suspended from being on the grounds. But he's not taking part in any of the activities like meetings and practice," the coach said.

"It's just like we have a standing rule with our former players. They can come by practice any time. They just don't get invited."

By the close of media day, the Buckeyes to a man bravely said they were prepared to defend their title without Claret being "involved."

As if any of them, Claret included, really had a choice.

those are coming. There are still far fewer 19- and 20-year-olds ready to play in the NFL than the NBA, but more of them will be coming down the pipeline, too. Which brings us back to Claret.

The kid knew when he first set foot in Columbus that the odds he would ever pose for a graduation photo were about the same as Mike Tyson leaving home without his American Express card. It could happen.

But that was before Claret got a taste of what it was like to be sprung to hang out with LeBron James, out beyond the reach of the NCAA, out where it's OK to have expensive things and to get cocked down the pipeline, too. In possession of them.

And that was before he played in a $13 million bowl game for the national championship last winter and got a peek at the corporate hospitality tents and cocktail parties surrounding it.

And before Claret ripped his way through the season before the championship game — for failing to help him return home for the funeral of a murdered friend — and then raised the ante by calling OSU's side the "party line."

Denson aims to make his mark

Former Notre Dame star just hopes to make Detroit's roster

ALLEN PARK, Mich. (AP) — Aurry Denson knows he needs every chance he can get to make the Detroit Lions. With injuries to Shawn Bryson, Avon Cobourne and Artise Finner, all battling Denson to back up tailback James Stewart, Denson is expected to log quite a bit of playing time in the Lions' preseason opener against Pittsburgh. "This is a big game for me, but at this point, anything I can do to make an impression is important," Denson said. "I'm going to take any opportunity I can to make things happen."

Denson left Notre Dame in 1998 as the school's leading rusher, but has had little success in the NFL. The Lions are his sixth team. He has rushed for just 222 yards.

This spring, he played for the Rhein Fire of NFL Europe, and was the league's second-leading rusher with 725 yards in 10 games.

Panthers
SPARTANBURG, S.C. — Marcos Martos grew up in soccer-crazed Mexico City dreaming of playing in the NFL. "Everyone laughed at him, but he didn't listen."

"Now Martos is a receiver in Carolina's training camp, trying hard to continue bucking his national trend.

"When I was 6 years old, I started watching TV, and I just loved the NFL," he said. "When I turned 7, my birthday wish was to play in the NFL one day. All my family just laughed so much."

"My family was always saying, 'Football, no! We play soccer here.' I guess I was a little bit stubborn. I played football."

Martos, who lives in Cancun, spent the past seven years playing for the Barcelona Dragons of NFL Europe. His best season was in 1999, when he caught 20 passes for 257 yards and four touchdowns.

He's had tryouts with Denver and Dallas.

Jaguars
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — No progress was reported on Day 14 of rookie quarterback Byron Leftwich's holdout, which is now the longest in team history.

DT Marcus Stroud (knee) and RB Fred Taylor (bone bruise) are the notables who won't play in the preseason opener Saturday at Minnesota.

Bills
PITTSFORD, N.Y. — Buffalo Bills tight ends Dave Moore and Mark Campbell are among several players nursing injuries as the team prepares for its preseason opener at Baltimore on Saturday.

Moore and Campbell were held out of practice Thursday. Moore has a strained hamstring and will be a game-time decision, while Campbell (right hamstring) is expected to play, coach Gregg Williams said.

Williams said two players won't play — rookie defensive tackle Laualae Sape (strained left calf) and rookie offensive tackle Gary Byrd (dislocated kneecap and torn tendon).

Vikings
MANKATO, Minn. — Corey Chavous is playing strong safety for the Vikings right now while two young players, Willie Olford and Brian Russell, try to earn the other starting spot.

Olford is a free safety, but Russell will play the strong position if he gets the job — forcing Chavous to move to free. A winner probably won't emerge for a while, so Chavous could wind up switching positions shortly before the regular season begins.

Still, that's not a concern to the Vikings. "No, we figure we need to give him a day because he is so smart," coach Mike Tice said.

Steelers
LATROBE, Pa. — An offensive line that's been reconfigured by injuries this training camp received more bad news when the Pittsburgh Steelers found out Todd Fordham injured his elbow.

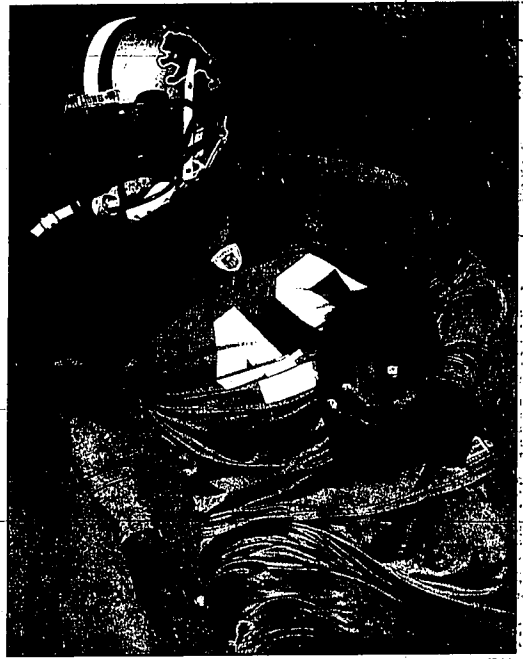

A free-agent pickup last spring, Fordham has been playing with the second team at right guard to help make up for the loss of starter Kendall Simmons. Fordham had also been considered a contender at right tackle, but instead becomes the third key lineman to miss time.

Simmons was diagnosed with diabetes two days before camp opened and has yet to practice. Center Jeff Hartings missed the past week with a knee injury that knocked him out of four games last season.

Cowboys
SAN ANTONIO — Receiver Joey Galloway left the Dallas Cowboys' camp after Thursday's practice to return to Ohio for his grandmother's funeral. He'll miss the preseason opener.

Relatives, coaches remember Dennehy

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Family, friends and Baylor University officials gathered Thursday for Patrick Dennehy's memorial, remembering the slain basketball player as a young man strengthened by a rekindled faith as he struggled to balance basketball, academics and family.

"He was as much a man as he was a boy, as easygoing as he was stubborn," girlfriend Jessica De la Rosa, 20, told more than 300 people at Jubilee Christian Center. "There was nothing at all simple about that guy ... but he still makes me smile and laugh because there were so many things about him that were wonderful."

Dennehy, who transferred to Baylor last year after getting kicked off the team at New Mexico for temper tantrums, became a born-again Christian in June 2002.

"The Bible says that whoever calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved, and Patrick did that a year ago," Jubilee Pastor Dickernal said as mourners wept and at times held their palms up to the sky. "He was still a kid, and he did some foolish things like all of us did as young men. There are questions that need to be answered, but we believe by God's grace they'll be answered by his divine providence."

Dennehy, 21, was last seen near Baylor's campus in Waco, Texas, on June 12. His body was found in a field a few miles away last month.

Carlton Dotson, 21, Dennehy's roommate and former teammate, was arrested and charged with murder July 21, after reportedly telling authorities he shot Dennehy when Dennehy tried to shoot him. He is in a Maryland jail and could be extradited to Texas.

Thursday's two-hour service featured a dozen gospel singers, two electric guitars and a Scripture reading by Hammer. The rap star was a Jubilee minister in the late '90s, when he led a Sunday night hip-hop service at the nondenominational church.

Nearly a dozen Baylor officials, including President Robert B. Sloan Jr. and coach Dave Bliss, attended the memorial. The university will hold its own memorial Aug. 28 in Waco.

Harvick has pined for win at famed track

By Rick Minter
 Cox News Service

INDIANAPOLIS — Auto racing can be a cruel sport, sometimes taking the lives of its participants. But it also tends to reward people like Kevin Harvick, who realized a boyhood dream of winning at Indianapolis Motor Speedway by taking Sunday's 10th running of the Brickyard 400.

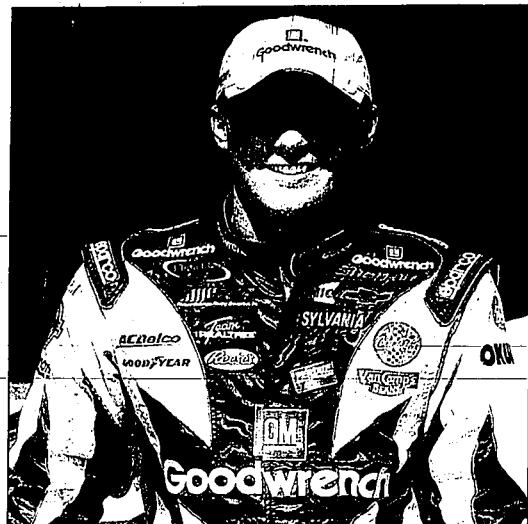

Harvick motored past rookie Jamie McMurray on a restart with 16 laps to go and drove away to victory. Winston Cup points leader Matt Kenseth finished second and boosted his lead from 232 to 286, while McMurray, Jeff Gordon and Bill Elliott completed the top five.

Winning at Indy was something that had been on Harvick's mind since he got an autographed photo from four-time Indy 500 winner Rick Mears years ago.

On the photo Mears wrote, "Good luck. Hope to see you here some day."
 "I've looked at that picture for a long time," said Harvick, 27, as he reflected on the fourth, but biggest, win of his 212-year Winston Cup career. "When I finally got the opportunity to race here a few years ago, it was pretty much a dream come true."
 "It's hard to explain how good I feel."

The same was true for his car owner Richard Childress, who tasted victory at the Brickyard with the late Dale Earnhardt in 1995 but took great pleasure in celebrating with the driver who took over Childress' car after Earnhardt's death.

The veteran car owner participated in the winning crew's traditional kissing of the bricks on the frontstretch of the historic track.
 "I've never had a cold kiss that felt so good," he said.
 Like Harvick, Childress had fond thoughts of Indianapolis Motor Speedway long before he ever had a race car.
 "I always dreamed of coming

to Indy, just to see it," he said. "Every year I would listen to the Indy 500 from the time I was just a kid."

"I never will forget the day listening to the [1964] race when Eddie Sachs got killed."
 As with most Winston Cup races these days, pit strategy was a key factor Sunday. Harvick started on the pole and led 17 laps before turning over the lead to Bill Elliott.
 But the fastest cars for most of the race belonged to Tony Stewart, who led three times for 60 laps, and Jamie McMurray, who led twice for 33.
 Late in the race, teams began to execute plans they hoped would bring them victory.
 Harvick made a green-flag pit stop on Lap 133 of 160, which meant he wouldn't have to stop again.
 Kenseth took gas and four tires on Lap 106, with the hope of taking only gas on a later stop and winding up out front. But a caution flag at Lap 140 spoiled that strategy.

 "I knew this would happen," Kenseth radioed to his crew as the yellow flag flew.

But since most of his competitors also stopped, he returned to the track in third place, with fresher tires than McMurray and Harvick, the two drivers in front of him who did not pit.

Stewart, who had taken right-side tires and gas 11 laps earlier, came back in under caution on Lap 142 to get left-side tires and a chassis adjustment because his car was handling so poorly. He returned in 12th place and finished there.

McMurray and Harvick stayed on the track and kept the lead, but on the restart, they had to line up behind several drivers who were on the tail end of the lead lap.

As the drivers came up to speed, the tail-end drivers boxed in McMurray so Harvick drove to the bottom of the track and into the lead, bringing his teammate Robby Gordon with him.

Then, as the pack sped down the backstretch, Dave Blaney appeared to slow with a flat tire, triggering a Talladega-style crash that collected seven other drivers — Terry Labonte, Joe Nemechek, Sterling Marlin, Ricky Rudd, Jimmie Johnson, Johnny Benson and Mike Skinner.

On the restart for the final 10-lap dash to the checkered flag, Harvick opened a big lead, while McMurray and Kenseth struggled to get by second-running Robby Gordon.

Harvick said his teammate, with whom he has occasionally been at odds, took care of him this time by blocking his challengers.

"He did all he could for the company and myself today," Harvick said.

Jarrett's jack man escapes crash without major injury

By Rick Minter
 Cox News Service

INDIANAPOLIS — Dale Jarrett and his team had a huge scare during the Brickyard 400 when jackman John Bryan was struck by Jarrett's car during a pit stop. He avoided serious injury.

The incident occurred less than two years after Bryan was struck and injured on pit road at Homestead (Fla.) Speedway. On the 37th lap of Sunday's Brickyard 400, Bryan was standing on pit road preparing to jack up Jarrett's No. 88 Ford when Jarrett lost control, spun around and hit Bryan. The contact knocked Bryan into the wall and sent his jack rolling down pit road.

Bryan and Joe Krupa, a photographer who was struck by a tire that was about to be put on Jarrett's car, were taken to nearby Methodist Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Fortunately for Bryan, he was wearing a helmet, a piece of equipment NASCAR mandated after the incident at Homestead in which Bryan and three other crewmen were hit by the spinning car of Ward Burton.

Jarrett, who returned to the track after repairs to his car, shouldered the blame.

"This is probably the worst day of my life," he said. "It's the most devastating thing I've ever been associated with, and it was just stupidity on my part."

He said his heart wasn't in the race when he returned to the track after repairs. He finished 39th.

"I had to finish it for the guys because they probably thought I couldn't have cared less," he said.

Nudge for Ward Burton

Bill Davis, owner of the No. 22 Dodge driven by Ward Burton, said Sunday that he's ready to part company with the only driver who ever won a Winston Cup race in his cars.

A day after Burton went public with his complaints about the team's poor performance of late and indicating he'd like to find a new ride, Davis said he's ready to accommodate.

"Nobody's happy," Davis said. "We haven't run to our potential for two years now, and we offered Ward the opportunity to go look elsewhere, and we did the same thing."
 "We think change is better."

But Davis disputed garage rumors that Burton could leave as early as next week.
 "No, no, nothing like that," he said, adding that he was surprised the issue had become public knowledge.

"I was surprised that Ward decided to go to the media and make such a big deal out of it," Davis said. "But he did, so this is something else for us to deal with."

Scott Wimmer, who drives for Davis in the Busch Series, is a likely replacement in the No. 22. Burton, considered one of the more talented drivers in the garage, could wind up driving for either Richard Childress or Dale Earnhardt Inc.

Relief sweeps Kurdish town gassed by Saddam U.S. hunt compels Saddam to move

Most residents welcome U.S. troops as liberators

By Pamela Constable
The Washington Post

HALABJA, Iraq - Fifteen years ago, this remote Kurdish town near the Iranian border entered the world's lexicon of modern-day horrors. First, Iraqi warplanes bombarded the rebellious enclave for several hours, shattering doors and windows. Then, at about 2 p.m., they swooped lower.

"We smelled something rotten, and when we breathed in, we couldn't breathe out," said Wais Abdel Qadir, a gaunt man of 30 with a "deep and chronic cough." The sky was full of smoke, and someone said it was chemicals. People started crying and running toward the mountains. I was burning and I became blind, but someone led me out. After walking for two days, we reached Iran."

Qadir was the only member of his family to survive the gassing of Halabja by the Iraqi military on March 16, 1988. About 5,000 people perished in an attack that stunned the world and revealed the ruthlessness of Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein.

Now that Saddam has been driven from power, Halabja's 50,000-odd residents can finally breathe freely. In the past, dozens of blocks still lie in ruin and hundreds of residents still suffer from effects of the gassing, there is an atmosphere of relief in the streets and an unabashed pro-Americanism that has lingered long after people in many other parts of Iraq have soured on the U.S. military presence.

In the busy central bazaar this week, there was no hint of tension or danger. Shopkeepers in turbans and billowing trousers invited an American journalist for endless tea. A group of 10-year-old boys proudly displayed collections of soccer cards (David Beckham and Ronaldo were the most popular), and cheered when a U.S. military helicopter passed overhead.

Ahmed Mohammed Hassan, 72, holds court in the Halabja market. Unlike many areas of Iraq, pro-American feelings remain high in the Kurdish town.

White geese walked proprietarily down the street. There was not soldier or gun in sight.

"Saddam wanted to kill us all, but now he's gone and the Americans have come to bring us law and democracy," said Jamil Azad, 35, who has fashioned a tea shop out of cinder blocks covered with sacks. His brother's family escaped to Iran and then Sweden after the 1988 attack, and he was eager to send them a message. "Please tell them Halabja is safe now," he said. "It's all right to come home."

Halabja is firmly under the sway of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan (PUK), one of two major Kurdish parties that divided administrative power in this semiautonomous region of northern Iraq after the 1991 Persian Gulf War and continue to exercise control here. The PUK contributed several thousand guerrilla fighters to the military campaign that toppled Saddam in April.

But the town is also home to several militant Islamic groups that once violently battled the PUK and that still make many residents uneasy. In recent weeks, the groups have fallen under the scrutiny of U.S. military forces, who suspect they may have links to al-Qaida or other armed Islamic movements.

On Saturday at dusk, a convoy of about 25 U.S. military vehicles roared into Halabja as attack helicopters hovered overhead. They went straight to the house of Ali Abdul Aziz, an Islamic leader in his eighties. The heavily armed troops burst in, handcuffed Abdul Aziz and took him and about 15 other men into custody, witnesses said. Then the convoy roared off again, with the choppers still circling.

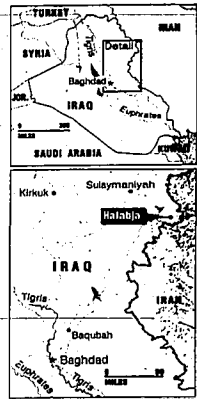

When a journalist located the house on Sunday, it was full of women in black veils, wailing and shrieking in grief. In the parlor, Abdul Aziz's daughters and aides insisted repeatedly that he had done nothing wrong, that his group was nonviolent and wanted only to spread Islamic values in society.

"We expected the Americans to come and help Halabja rebuild. Instead they came to occupy us and make chaos," said Kamel Haji Ali, a political aide to Aziz. He said his movement had split in 2001 from Ansar al-Islam - a militia based in northeastern Iraq that is considered a terrorist group by U.S. officials - and that it was now involved in mainstream politics. "We can think of no reason for this arrest," he said.

American military spokesmen in Baghdad did not comment on the raid, but Kurdish regional officials in the nearby city of Sulaymaniyah said they fully supported the U.S. actions. So did many Halabja residents, who said they were afraid of the Islamic group because it had a history of violence and intimidation.

Despite the revitalizing effect that the fall of Saddam has had on Halabja, the town is still very much a place in mourning.

Virtually every family here lost a relative in the gassing, and the main cemetery is full of large, grassy plots where entire clans are buried. A sign at the entrance says "Bathists Keep Out," a reference to the Baath Party that was headed by Saddam and controlled the country for 35 years.

The town's major landmark is a stark white monument to the dead. Inside is a plaster tableau of lifelike victims frozen as they fell, covered with chemical ash and cradling their children for protection. The center is a rotunda in which some 5,000 victims' names are carved in black stone.

The 1988 attack, in which Saddam's bombers dropped a mixture of nerve and mustard gases, occurred near the end of the Iran-Iraq war, in which some Kurdish guerrilla groups fought on the Iranian side. The incident spurred an outpouring of aid from around the world that rebuilt schools, clinics, houses and orphanages.

U.S. hunt compels Saddam to move

TIKRIT, Iraq - Saddam Hussein has been forced to move at least three times a day because of mounting raids by U.S. forces on sites where soldiers have found evidence that someone important to the ousted Iraqi leader himself - had been hiding, a U.S. general said Thursday.

As the raids eat away at Saddam's support network, it has become increasingly difficult for guerrilla Iraq leaders to find foot soldiers willing to attack U.S. forces - driving the amount paid for a successful attack as high as $5,000, said Maj. Gen. Ray Odierno, commander of the 4th Infantry Division, citing Army intelligence.

"He is clearly moving three or four times every single day," Odierno told a news conference at his headquarters in one of Saddam's former palaces. "Through some of the raids we've done there are indications that somebody has been moving through there - somebody extremely important." Saddam is likely being protected by a network of tribal and family supporters who are helping him move around, Odierno said.

Iraq, not U.S., will decide on OPEC quotas, U.S. says

ROME - The Iraqi people and not the United States will decide if the country should accept OPEC quotas on its oil production, U.S. energy secretary insisted Thursday.

Iraq's exports are still far below prewar levels, but the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has been watching closely, concerned that a revival of Iraqi crude exports might flood the market with crude and drive down prices and reduce demand for oil exporters everywhere.

U.S. Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham stressed Thursday that the Iraqis must eventually decide how to sell their oil.

Iraq is one of OPEC's 11 members that hasn't participated in the group's production quotas since 1990. Analysts say it could be a challenge for OPEC to reintegrate Iraq into its oil system, as other members of the group might be reluctant to pump less oil to accommodate exports from a resurgent Iraq.

War-injured boy will receive artificial limbs

LONDON (AP) - A 13-year-old Iraqi boy who lost his parents and both arms in the war that toppled Saddam Hussein arrived Thursday in Britain for treatment.

With a U.S. Army that as a souvenir and pledges from Kuwait's government to pay for his treatment until he reaches 18, the boy, Ali Abbas, is headed for Kuwait state plane. Also on board was his uncle and another injured Iraqi boy, 14-year-old Ahmed Hamza, who lost his left foot and right hand in U.S. bombings near Basra.

Both boys are scheduled to be fitted with prosthetic limbs at Queen Mary's Hospital Rehabilitation Center in London.

The boys were evacuated to Kuwait in mid-April and treated for burns caused when U.S. missiles struck their homes. All lost his father, pregnant mother, brother and 13 other relatives. Ahmed lost a sister.

All's story drew international attention after pictures of him crying in pain at a Baghdad hospital appeared around the world.

Ahmed's father, who went to Kuwait from Iraq recently at the boy's request, carried him to the bus that drove them to the aircraft for the flight to a British air force base west of London.

Before the boys left the VIP hall in Kuwait City airport, three members of the U.S. Army military police gave them camouflage hats and arm bands.

The boys beamed when they saw the team, whose job has been to reunite Iraqi children treated in Kuwait with their families, and giggled as they put the hats on their heads and called them "cowboys."

"I'm going to miss them," said Maj. Kate Van Aiken, of Gloucester, Mass.

Security, reconstruction woes push Afghanistan to near chaos

By Robyn Dixon
Los Angeles Times

WARDAK, Afghanistan - Two months after a gun attack, the bullet holes in the Datsun sedan have been patched and it runs beautifully. But water engineer Asil Kahn walks with a limp and he still has two bullet holes in his body, one of them half an inch from his spine.

The vehicle's humanitarian logo made him a victim in the battle for Afghanistan's future, where water engineers, mine-clearers and humanitarian workers - people the country needs most - are prime targets for militants trying to destabilize President Hamid Karzai's interim government.

The May attack on the Afghanistan Development Agency car in Wardak province, south of Kabul on the road to Kandahar, injured Kahn but killed the driver.

"They weren't robbers or thieves," said Kahn, 46. "They just wanted to kill us. They're people against the government. They thought that maybe there would be some foreigners or some officials from aid organizations in the car. That's why they shot us."

U.S. forces have their hands full trying to subdue attacks in Iraq. But with the slow buildup of a national Afghan army, an inadequate U.S. and coalition presence and poor progress on reconstruction projects, Afghanistan is spiraling out of control and risks becoming a "narco-infla" state, some humanitarian agencies warn.

Afghanistan's governor of Herat province and former warlord Ismail Khan Ghans next to the national flag during a news conference in Kabul Aug. 1. Khan rejected allegations made in a human rights report last week suggesting that several other senior military and political leaders were behind wide-ranging rights abuses in the war-tattered country.

choking commerce and trade. If the country slips into anarchy, it risks becoming a haven for resurgent Taliban and al-Qaida fighters. And the point of U.S. military action here could be lost - a major setback in the war against terrorism.

Money spent on the war may end up being wasted, and dragging the country back from chaos could be even more costly. America spends about $900 million a month on its forces stationed here, but little of the $3 billion authorized for aid in the Freedom Support Act has been spent.

U.S. promises of a Marshall Plan for Afghanistan raised Afghan expectations, but security and reconstruction woes are undermining support for the coalition among ordinary Afghans. Their disappointment and disillusionment plays into the hands of anti-government militants.

Humanitarian agencies, calling for a big boost in international funds for security and reconstruction, contend that the commitment to Afghanistan is relatively low. A CARE International paper in January stated that postwar international aid spent in Bosnia-Herzegovina was $326 per capita, compared with $22 promised for Afghans up to 2006. For every peacekeeping soldier there were 48 Bosnians, compared with one for every 5,380 Afghans, the paper

Taliban kill six Afghan soldiers

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan (AP) - Dozens of suspected Taliban fighters attacked a government office in southern Afghanistan early Thursday, killing six Afghan soldiers and an Afghan driver for an American aid organization, a provincial intelligence chief said.

The attack - one of the most brazen and well-organized recent assaults in the region - was possibly part of a trend involving militants targeting Afghans working for foreign agencies.

said. Yet Bosnia poses no appreciable terrorist threat.

There are 8,500 U.S. military personnel leading the 11,500 international coalition forces in Afghanistan. An additional 5,000 international troops secure the capital city, Kabul. A key missing piece is an Afghan army, but with only 4,000 troops trained so far, it will take many years to reach the planned 70,000-strong force. It won't be ready in time to ensure free and fair elections scheduled for June. Some of the 4,000 trained soldiers have already defected because of poor salaries and low morale.

The security vacuum outside Kabul has emboldened Taliban fighters, who constitute the bulk of anti-government militants, some who cross from Pakistan, others based in the east and south. U.S. officials say the Taliban controls part of the opium business, a rich source of funds to attract fighters.

As security worsens, there are sharp differences between the aid community and Western leaders on how to prevent a deepening slide. Many in the international aid community in Kabul believe the coalition's latest response to the security problem - small scale military teams tackling modest reconstruction projects - will have little impact and will put aid workers at more risk by blurring the line between them and soldiers.

About 40 percent of the $5.2 billion pledged by the international community last year has been spent but with little progress on reconstruction projects like the Kabul-to-Kandahar road. Much of the money has been eaten up by emergency relief - food, medicine, blankets and tents.

Haji Abdul Khalq, 54, arrived on Kabul exhausted by 14 hours on the shattering, rocky track of a highway from Kandahar. It was inconceivable to him that $2 billion had been spent in his country since January last year.

"From what we can see, they didn't spend more than a dollar," he spluttered angrily. "There are no paved roads, no reconstruction of government buildings, no help for the people and no government salaries.

"I think at first people were very hopeful, (but) day by day they lose hope," said Khalq. He said Taliban forces in the region were growing bolder. A June 30 explosion at a Kandahar mosque that injured more than a dozen was apparently aimed at the anti-Taliban militia. Earlier, a day later another anti-Taliban militia was shot dead in Nakobak village, six miles south of Kandahar.

In the same week, said Khalq, Taliban fighters from the region set up a base northeast of Kandahar in Zabul province. Afghan forces attacked, killing a dozen Taliban fighters and capturing about five.

The Taliban rebels offer local people good salaries - more than $10 a month - to fight, while Khalq grumbled that he and his men are not being paid at all. Afghanistan's severe budgetary problems are leaving many civil servants unpaid.

President Karzai has repeatedly called for the deployment of ISAF forces outside Kabul, a request echoed by U.N. secretary-general Kofi Annan and international aid agencies. But reconstruction teams or PRTs - military-civilian teams of 50-100 people deployed to rebuild infrastructure - would play a key role in improving security. Four are working, independent of ISAF, and eight are planned.

Rise in girls smoking sparks alert

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) - Government anti-tobacco campaigns should target girls and women because surveys show teenage girls are now smoking almost as much as boys in many nations, officials told an international conference Thursday.

A report released at the 12th World Conference on Tobacco found that the gender gap in tobacco consumption among youths is closing.

The report said there were no significant differences between cigarette smoking rates of 15- to 16-year-olds in more than half of the 150 countries surveyed. The results of the survey, the first of its kind, were similar for other tobacco products.

"Programs specific to gender must be developed which emphasize the serious health consequences of tobacco use," said Charles Warren of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The findings indicate tobacco-related deaths would increase significantly if the trend in teenage smoking continues, researchers said.

The global survey, showed that only in the eastern Mediterranean region were boys still smoking significantly more than girls, while Europe and the Americas had the smallest gender gap in tobacco consumption.

In Europe, 33.9 percent of boys smoked cigarettes regularly, compared with 29 percent for girls. In the United States, 17.7 percent of boys are smokers compared with 17.8 percent of girls.

The increase in young girls' tobacco use was attributed mainly to aggressive marketing aimed at women in which the tobacco industry portrays smoking as fashionable.

International tobacco companies continue to identify women and girls in developing countries, and particularly in Asia, as a vast untapped market," the report said.

Actor Sharif found guilty of head-butting

PARIS (AP) - Actor Omar Sharif was convicted of striking a police officer at a casino near Paris and received a one-month suspended sentence, court officials said Thursday.

The 71-year-old Egyptian actor also was fined $1,700 on Tuesday for insults and violence directed at a police officer July 5 at the Enguignes-Bains casino in suburban Paris, a judicial official told the Associated Press.

The official, speaking on customary condition of anonymity, gave no further details, but Le Parisien newspaper reported Sharif was arguing with a croupier while playing roulette at the casino, where he was known as a regular.

When an officer intervened and asked Sharif to leave, the actor insulted and head-butted him, the newspaper reported.

Sharif was not reachable for comment. An employee of the hotel where he lives in Paris said the actor was on vacation for the rest of the month.

Swiss train collision injures at least 64

ASTEGWILER, Switzerland (AP) - Two trains collided Thursday near the Swiss Alpine resort of Interlaken, injuring 64 people.

One driver ran a red light on a signal at a casino near the town of Interlaken and Lauterbrunnen, breaking when he realized his error. The oncoming train was going 31 mph when it crashed head-on into the stopped train at about 9:50 a.m.

Rivers dry up, fires rage as heat grips Europe

ROME (AP) - Rivers and ponds were drying up and wildfires blazed in several countries as Europe staggered through a deadly heat wave, although cool weather gave some spots a welcome break on Thursday.

Clouds and a light morning rain kept the mercury from climbing to the record-breaking peak of 104 degrees that had been forecast in Belgium.

Still, three towns set new records and temperatures were expected to "remain quite high," said Edward De Dycker, chief forecaster at Belgium's Royal Meteorological Institute. "The heat wave continues."

Winds also shifted to the north over

Britain, decreasing temperatures that had been in the mid-90s as low as 72 degrees at Heathrow Airport.

The number of deaths blamed on heat or fires rose to 38 Thursday, after Croatian police reported the death of an officer deployed to guard the U.S. Embassy in a Zagreb suburb.

The 41-year-old policeman died Wednesday of a heart failure likely caused by the heat, police said.

Also Thursday, wildfires forced the closure of a road near the Italian resort of Sorrento, a picturesque town on the Gulf of Naples, for a few hours. Some homes also were evacuated for a few hours as a precaution in Tuscany and the northwestern Liguria regions, the Civil Defense Department said.

Water-logging helicopters and planes were working to extinguish the fires, which already have destroyed hundreds of acres of woods and Mediterranean bush.

Weather experts from Italy's state-funded CNR research center said the heat wave among the five worst in the last 150 years would likely last until September.

Europe was hit by hot air from northern Africa rather than the usual weather patterns that come in from the Atlantic, said Capt. Alessandro Fucello, from the Italian air force's meteorology office in Rome.

High-temperature records have been broken in several French cities, and London, which registered its highest temperature ever Wednesday - 83.7.

Fires, fanned by hot winds, also were reported in Croatia, Greece, Spain, Portugal and France. In the German state of Brandenburg, which surrounds Berlin, authorities said 395,000 acres of forest had been closed to the public because of the danger of fires.

Few facets of life escaped the heat wave, which was particularly oppressive because air conditioning in homes and shops is uncommon in much of Europe.

Horizon Organic posts strong sales growth

PAUL - Boulder, Colo.-based Horizon Organic Holding Corp., an organic foods marketer and the outgoing parent of a Paul & Deen Thursday said its sales grew 21 percent to $54.0 million during the second quarter.

Earnings from continuing operations declined to $34,000, or 5 cents per diluted share, from $547,000, or 6 cents, in the second quarter of 2002. Those results include $691,000 in transaction costs associated with the announced acquisition by Dean Foods Co., which after tax impacted earnings by 4 cents per diluted share.

Net income for the second quarter, including discontinued operations and transaction costs, was $183,000, or 2 cents per diluted share, compared with year-ago net income of $353,000, or 3 cents, Horizon said.

On June 30, Horizon and Dean announced Dean will acquire the 87 percent of Horizon's shares that it does not already own for $24 a share.

After losses on discontinued operations in both years, Horizon's net income for the first six months of 2003 was $370,000, or 3 cents per diluted share, compared with a loss of $1.3 million, or 12 cents per diluted share, in the 2002 period.

"The company is continuing to work with an experienced dairy farmer as well as new prospective buyers for the sale of its Idaho dairy farm," Horizon's Thursday statement said.

Best Buy raises quarterly earnings estimate

TWIN FALLS - Minneapolis-based Best Buy Co. Inc., which is preparing to open a Twin Falls store, on Thursday raised its estimate for second-quarter earnings per share from continuing operations to a new range of 37 to 42 cents, compared with analysts' consensus estimate of 30 cents per share.

On June 18 it had predicted a range of 27 to 32 cents per share for the quarter which ends on Aug. 30.

Best Buy reported earnings from continuing operations of $79 million, or 24 cents per diluted share, for last year's second quarter.

"Strong comparable-store sales growth, increasing gross profit rates and diluted cost controls all are contributing to the higher earnings guidance from continuing operations for the second quarter and for the fiscal year," said Darren Jackson, executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Best Buy forecast diluted earnings per share from continuing operations of $2.27 to $2.32 for the fiscal year, compared with analysts' consensus of $2.22 per diluted share. Its prior estimate was $2.17 to $2.22 per diluted share, and it reported diluted earnings per share from continuing operations of $1.91 for fiscal 2003.

The company sold its interest in The Musicland Group Inc. earlier this quarter and has classified the former subsidiary's results as discontinued operations.

Firm looks to put new TV station in T.F.

By Rachel Hartgen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A UPN affiliate television station with supplemental Christian and regional programming should begin broadcasting in the Twin Falls and Sun Valley regions shortly.

The burgeoning KIDA-TV will plan to air on cable-free Channel 5 from a Sun Valley signal at Seattle Ridge, Martin Turner of Turner Enterprises, the TV station owner, said July 29. The full-service station will run programming from the former L'Herisson Furniture building on Blue Lakes Boulevard in Twin Falls.

In addition to UPN television,

Turner envisions the new station airing local news and programming similar to that of KMTV Channel 11, she said.

"We plan to start out with a half-hour news show and eventually move to a news hour," Turner said.

Turner sought initial interest in the Twin Falls area earlier this year, applying for a grant from the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's Business Plus II development campaign in April. A station building had not been purchased at that time, chamber executive Kent Just said. The proposal might be reconsidered later by a successor campaign, Business Plus III.

Turner has since purchased the 10,500-square-foot building which had stood vacant for two years under L'Herisson ownership.

"We received many applications, but many people felt it was too big," Dorothy L'Herisson said. "Turner saw the 'for sale' sign and contacted us."

The deal became final June 1, and Turner's building plans initially received approval from Twin Falls' planning and zoning commission in early July. The commission, however, has since called for review from the Twin Falls City Council; the problem, commission members say, could be a proposed 120-foot broadcasting tower.

"The commission thought the tower could have a significant impact," said LaMar Orton, city planning and zoning director. "The commission has now scheduled a public hearing in front of the City Council."

At the Aug. 18 meeting the building proposal will be reviewed for a second time. If it's approved, Turner will need to obtain appropriate permits, including license approval from the Federal Communications Commission, the national agency responsible for regulating radio, television, wire, satellite and cable communications.

Turner has filed the appropriate FCC licensing and building construction paperwork, and her application is being processed, said Turner's attorney, Robert L. Olender of Koerner & Olender P.C. of Maryland. An approval date from the FCC is not known.

Las Vegas-based Turner Enterprises has applied for numerous FCC television licenses nationwide, according to the FCC Web site. It wasn't clear what Turner's personal involvement would be in the local station.

The station may look to hire around 25 employees, just said. For now, Turner will work to meet necessary regulations to move production forward.

"We hope to get on the air, and to be a positive asset to these communities," she said.

Retail sales finally heat up

Nation's retailers post positive results in July

The Times-News and
The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Retailers finally got a break in July as warm weather and heavy discounting helped lift sales above expectations for many merchants, even the struggling department store sector.

As retailers reported their sales results Thursday, all industry segments appeared to benefit from an improved selling environment. Wal-Mart Stores, the industry leader, boosted its profit outlook for the second quarter.

J.C. Penney, Kohl's and Old Navy parent Gap Inc. were among the retailers that reported sales that beat analysts' forecasts.

Even May Department Stores, which has struggled with sales declines, eked out a solid increase in sales at stores open at least a year. Sales at stores open at least a year, known as same-store sales, are considered the best indicator of a retailer's health.

"It was a good month, and it will be a good omen for the second half," said Michael P. Niemira, vice president of Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi Ltd. "Sure, the month was promotional and weather helped, but this could be the start of a much better trend."

His company's same-store sales of 77 retailers was up 3.9 percent, well above the 3 percent gain Niemira had expected. That compares with a 2.6 percent increase in the year-ago period.

The pace is well above the sluggish 1.5 percent increase that had been seen for most of the past year, although the last two months same-store sales improved slightly, averaging a 2.2 percent gain.

July - when retailers step up discounting to get rid of summer items - is one of the least important months in a retail sales calendar. Analysts are now closely monitoring August and September, which account for the critical back to school season.

Wal-Mart, which along with other retailers struggled with cooler than normal temperatures in May and June, said same-store sales were up 4.6 percent, well past the 3.7 percent increase predicted by analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call. Total sales were up 11.9 percent, driven by food, electronics, swimwear and pet supplies.

Group visits ethanol plant in Nebraska

By Lorraine Caveney
Times-News correspondent

DECLO - A group of Magic Valley businessmen and farmers is joining a group from eastern Idaho today on a bus trip to Nebraska to visit an ethanol cop.

Magic Valley Energy Co., in conjunction with Bear Lake Economic Development Corp., is organizing the trip to provide interested people with a view of a 50 million-gallon ethanol facility in Aurora, Neb.

"It is a mirror image of the type of facility we would like to build in the Magic Valley," said Winston Inouye, co-director of Magic Valley Energy Co.

Inouye, a Declo farmer and well driller, formed Magic Valley Energy Coalition about 2-1/2 years ago.

"After attending some conferences I became interested in ethanol as a value-added industry," he said.

"After a feasibility study was completed and some initial funding was raised,

The group could see that some substantial engineering and a substantial business plan were needed. Magic Valley Energy Coalition met with Intrepid Engineering of Idaho Falls.

"Magic Valley Energy Co. was formed to achieve what we thought was a great goal," Inouye said.

The next step is to show people that an ethanol facility would be environmentally friendly and without odor.

"We need to take people to see one up and running," he said.

People on today's bus trip can also learn the economic value of having an ethanol plant in a farming and dairy community, organization said.

Jack in the Box profit falls but beats estimate

Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO - Jack in the Box Inc. said its third-quarter profit fell by 18 percent in part because of higher food and insurance costs.

Net income for the San Diego-based burger chain, the nation's fourth-largest, fell to $19.8 million, or 54 cents a share, in the quarter ended July 6, compared with a profit of $24.2 million, or 60 cents a share, a year ago. The latest quarterly profit beat by 5 cents a share the consensus estimate of analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call.

In Magic Valley, the burger chain includes restaurants in Burley and Twin Falls.

The company's third-quarter revenue rose by 6 percent to $488.6 million, up from $461.2 million a year ago.

Continued economic weakness and increased costs for workers compensation insurance, food and packaging hurt the company's bottom line, said Robert J. Nugent, chairman and chief executive.

BOISE - Difficult power generating conditions and a delayed tax benefit left the holding company for Idaho's largest utility in the red this spring.

IDACORP Inc. said the depressed performance raised questions about whether it can maintain the annual dividend at the $1.86 per-share rate it has paid for more than a decade.

The owner of Idaho Power Co. reported a second-quarter loss on Thursday of $879,000, or 2 cents a share, on revenues of $200.3 million.

That compared with a $3.1 million profit, or 8 cents a share, on nearly $219 million sales a year earlier.

It was the third straight quarterly loss posted by the corporation that owns Idaho Power Co., which provides electricity to most of Magic Valley. Even without a one-time charge, the performance fell short of the 32-cent gain Wall Street analysts surveyed by Thomson First Call had expected for the April-June quarter.

"Certainly these results do not meet our expectations or those of our shareholders," President Jan Packwood said in a statement.

"However, by continuing to manage through the ongoing drought conditions, combined with the expected reversal of the tax allocation impacts, we remain confident that we will achieve our previously stated earnings guidance,"

While the company has accumulated a $4 million loss, or a dime a share, during the first half of 2003, Packwood reaffirmed the earlier projections that per-share earnings through December will range from 90 cents to $1.15.

But he indicated that conditions needed to maintain the annual dividend had not been met since he suggested to stockholders in mid-May that he was optimistic the dividend could be sustained.

Continued from E1 combined state and federal tax rate for the quarter to 32.5 percent, compared with the 38 percent forecast.

38 percent for fiscal year 2004, the company said. Sales at stores open at least a year, a key measure of chain performance, fell by 0.2 percent in the third quarter, but better than the 2.5 percent drop forecast by the company and a gain from the 1.5 percent drop a year ago.

and earlier this year, may be easing. Last month McDonald's Corp. announced a 4.5 percent gain in same-store sales for its second quarter, the first quarterly uptick since 2001.

Retailing stocks advanced Thursday on a string of companies reported July sales exceeded Wall Street's expectations, due to warm weather and significant discounting.

Decliners included consumer lender AmeriCredit, which dropped 1.20 to $6.60, after issuing a 2003 profit warning.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners 8 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange. Consolidated volume was somewhat light at 1.69 billion shares, less than the 1.85 billion traded Wednesday.

The Russell 2000 index, a barometer of smaller companies, fell 0.14, or 0.03 percent, to 453.77.

Mortgage rates reach highest level in a year

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rates on benchmark 30-year mortgages climbed this week to the highest level seen in a year, something that is chilling - but not freezing - refinancing activity.

The average rate on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages for the week ending Aug. 8 was 6.34 percent, up sharply from last week's rate of 6.14 percent, Freddie Mac, the mortgage giant, reported Thursday in its weekly nationwide survey.

This week's rate marked the highest since the week ending Aug. 2, 2002, when rates at 6.33 percent averaged 6.43 percent.

The recent upward swing in mortgage rates marks a turnaround from the middle of June, when rates on 30-year mortgages fell to 5.21 percent, the lowest level in more than four decades.

percent. Rates for one-year adjustable mortgages rose this week to 3.80 percent, up from 3.68 percent last week.

The recent rise in mortgage rates is slowing home-mortgage refinancing activity, which had been on a red-hot roll before the upward swing in rates.

Applications for new financing deals edged down by 2.4 percent last week from the previous week, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America reported. "The relatively modest drop in refinancing activity despite a rather sharp increase in interest rates indicates some borrowers decided this might be their last chance to refinance before rates went up further," said Jay Brinkmann, the association's vice president of research and economics.

Refinancing has played an important factor underpinning consumer spending, a main force keeping the economy going. Keeping the economy from cooling to paychecks and other incentives coming from President Bush's third tax cut will move in to support spending as refinancing cools.

Economists said rising mortgage rates also probably will dim the vibrant housing market a bit, but they expect sales to remain healthy.

"Home sales in the second half of this year won't be as robust, but we'll still see an annual record," said David Lovell, chief economist at the National Association of Realtors.

Lereah is forecasting existing-home sales to total 5.65 million in new-home sales to total 1.92 million in 2003. Both would mark all-time highs.

Ethanol

Continued from E1. are taken out of grain. What is left is ethanol, which is made into distiller grain, a cattle feed which costs about a $120 a ton.

Idaho every day from all over." Inouye said. "Dakota Gold is one example of a well-known distiller grain that is imported from the Midwest to Idaho would not have to import as much distiller grain if it were produced in-state, he said.

"It would be a big infusion to our local economy," Inouye said. He is executive vice president of the Magic Valley Energy Co., which is working with financial companies and local investors including several local farm and dairy producers, but Inouye declined to say who they are.

State Rep. Bert Stevenson is one of the people who planned to go on the trip. "I'm interested in going because I have some questions," Stevenson said. "I want to know what kind of impact it will have."

Stevenson said he's interested in knowing whether an ethanol plant would work here. "Retired farmer and former Minidoka County Commissioner John Rensberg said he is also going on the bus trip."

"I've been working on this ethanol project a bit," Rensberg said. He is interested in an economic-development standpoint. The $50 million investment...

An ethanol plant would be a $50 million investment that would bring 50 directly related jobs.

and the 50 employees it would take to operate the plant impressed Rensberg, he said.

Mechelle McFarland, executive director of Mini-Cassia Development Commission, is also going, as well as a Wendell City Council member and a Gooding County planning and zoning board member.

At the end of June Isaacson said he had been meeting with the Magic Valley Energy Co. and its engineers to negotiate building an ethanol plant in Gooding County adjacent to Wendell city limits.

But Inouye had two plans already in the works. One is the east side of Magic Valley and one on the west. Locations are being negotiated during the second half of the year.

Utility

Continued from E1. "The company is challenged by operating results that are significantly below the current annual dividend," the corporation said in its earnings report.

Because of lower-than-anticipated cash flow, needed investment, IDACORP said, "the company's ability to sustain the level of dividends paid in the past is less certain, and it is possible the board of directors may reduce the dividend as early as 2003."

The company has paid the $1.10 dividend without interruption since mid-1989, using reserve cash to finance it in 1991, 1992, 1994 and 2000. It is per-share carried full debt. But the gap has never been as wide as the one developing this year, corporate officials said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Strip away the phony tinsel of Hollywood and you find the real tinsel underneath."

Against four hearts West cashes the top diamonds and carefully switches to a spade. You finesse, bringing yourself up to nine tricks now. But with the K-10 of clubs offside, how can you avoid losing two tricks in that suit along with the top diamonds? The solution lies in a partial elimination. You have to perform a strip-squeeze...

First you try the heart ace, finding the bad news. If you now draw all the trumps and cash your spade winners, you lose the tension in the ending. West can in two clubs and a master diamond, and you will have no endplay. The secret is not to strip off all the trumps. Rather, at trick five lead a heart to East's nine and your jack, and now give up and drawing trump to repeat the strip-squeeze, cash the spade ace, then lead a club and cover East's card. West leads the trick—but what is he to do next?

He has a choice of leading clubs, diamonds, or spades. If he leads a club into your tenace, you lose no more tricks in that suit. So his only alternative is to give a ruff and discard, a spade being a more accurate play than a diamond. You have to take care to ruff high in dummy, pitching your club loser, and now you can lead a heart back to your eight, cash the heart queen, and claim the rest.
