The problems solved by DNA computers to date are rudimenta-ry. Children could come up with the answers more quickly with a pencil and paper.

But the researchers hope to someday inject tiny computers into humans to zap viruses, fix good cells gene bad and otherwise keep us healthy.

They're also pursuing the ideath genetic material can self-replicate and grow into processos powerful that they can handle problems too complex for silicon-based computers to solve.

Eventually, the scientists aim computers that can be used, for instance, on deep-space voyages, to monitor and maintain the health of humans on board.

What struck Adleman most that night he jumped out of bed was how a living enzyme "reads" DNA much the same way computer pioneer Alan Turing first contemplated in 1936 how a machine could read data.

"If you look inside the cell you read data.

"If you look inside the cell you find a bunch of amazing little tools," said Adleman, who made the first DNA-based computation in 1994. "The cell is a treasure chest."

In the cell is a treasure read the control of the classic "traveling salesman" mathematical problem how a salesman can visit a given number of cities without passing through any city twice – by exploiting the predictability of how DNA interacts.

Addeman assigned each of seven more strips of DNA that naturally sounded with 'the "cities." That centernted thousands of random paths, in much the same way that, a computer can sift through random numbers to break a code. From this hodgepodge of connected DNA, Adleman eventually extracted a satisfactory solution—a strand that led directly from the first city to the last, without retrac-

What these researchers are

So there's little wonder that their Biologists are only now grasping

The U.S. has about 5,000 troops in the country, tasked with rooting our remnants of the Taliban and al-Qaida. The assault began shortly before midnight Saturday when about 400 guerrillas traveling in rucks drove across the border from Pakistan and attacked the province's Barmal district, about 125 miles southeast of Kabul, said provincial Gov. Mohammed Ali Jalail, it wan't clear how he knew the men came from Pakistan.

Firing rockets, heavy machine guns and grenades, the attackers easily took over the office. About 15 to 20 Afghan police were in the compound at the time and seven of them – including the district police chief – were killed, Jalali said. The rest, realizing they could put up little resistance, fled.

Jalali said between 15 to 20 insurgents were also killed Provincial police chief Daulat Khan said the attracters returned.
"These police died defending themselves." Jalali told The Associated Press from the provincial capital, Sharan. "The attackers, they were a very big group."
The insurgents held the police station until dawn Sunday before destroying the building, getting back in their vehicles and flesing to Pakistan, five miles sawa, Jalali said.

It was unclear why the attackers retreated, but Jalai said they likely did so because by daylight, word of the attack would have been passed on to the U.S.-led coalition, against which the would be little match.

Coalition forces have air power at their disposal and routinely use it when insurgent posttomare identified.

Previous battles between insurgents and government forces backed by the U.S.-led coalition have rarely involved more than 90 guerrilla fighters. Anti-government forces usually move around in small groups on foot.

Ultraconservatives don't much like Leavit either. Fred Smith of the Competitive Enterprise Institute dismissed him as "a western Whitman," a derisive reference to moderate former administrator Christic Whitman. The institute criticized her 2 1/2/year tenure as too hard on business.

The best hope is that, if confirmed as America's top environmental steward, Leavitt will put future generations of Americans ahead of any special interest. Leavitt has a mixed environmental record as governor. Fortunately, he scores highest on issues that come under EPA's jurisdictive 13-state pact that calls for business and government to reduce haze in national parks, including the Grand Canyon, by reducing power-plant emissions. On toxic waste, he stood up to a private consortium trying to store 44,000 tons of spent nuclear fuel on an Indian reservation. His record on water is murky, particularly his advocacy of a highway that would have destroyed were chands near the Great Salt Lake.

Details of Leavitt's record should come out at Senate confirmation hearings this fall. But Democrats shouldn't turn the proceedings into an inquisition of Bush's environmental record. As much as a public examination of that record is needed before the next presidential election, Leavitt's hearing isn't the forum. The EPA has serious problems of its own to examine.

problems of its own to examine.

In recent months, the EPA has been accused of withholding data for political reasons on Senate air pollution and global warming proposals. The EPA's own inspector general said the agency overstated the health of drinking water in anational report card, and may have concealed the dangers of air pollution at ground zero after Sept. 11. Newspaper reports suggest the EPA has exaggerated its enforcement efforts in parts of the country. Senators need to ask: What's going on at the EPA, and how does Leavitt plan to fix it? The answers will, in fact, tell a lot about the Bush administration.

Oh, for the days of hanging chads

K, let the get this straight. A wealthy California Republich bankrolled a campaign to recall the duly elected governor and, when he succeded, he tearfully exited the race he thought he had bought because he didn't have a chance.

because he didn't have a common to that right, do I?
And, in the last two weeks, the nation's media have been in a fremy because the leading candidates for two of the top three political jobs in America are guys they never would have bet on a year ago. Vermont's Howard Dean for president. LaLaLand's Arnold Schwarzenegger for governor of California.

Dean was the story du jour for August until the California recall came along. Now it's all Arnold all the time. Now, let's see, why again, are they trying to recall the current governor? He hasn't molested an intern. He just has done a lousy job.

That, though, is why he gets four years - so he has time to fix what he screws up early in his term before voters call him to Something you'll never read in The Times-News (as long as I draw breath) is a review of a local concert or show.

That statement may disappoint some readers. We recently printed a letter from an unhapy music lover, who had looked in vain for coverage of an Aug. 7 har an or coverage of an Aug. 7 band concert. She asked: "Where was The Times/News? And why was there no congratulations in the paper for a job well done on their final appearance by these talented musicians?"

It's a good question. I have three answers – three reasons for not reviewing local performances.

Reason 1: Who would write, the reviews? I'm proud of our talented staff, but our expertise small-town paper can't afford a squad of culture mavens. So our reviews would have questionable squad of cuture inversion outcomediation of careful inversions and credibility.

Reason 2: An honest reviewer sometimes praises, sometimes praises, sometimes pans. George S. Kaufman harpooned a young Italian tenor with this famous line: "Guido Nazzo is nazzo guido."

Let's face it. Some local amateur shows are better than others. An honest critique of a weak performance might humiliate he performens and discourage others from trying out.

Some small-town reviewers have solved this problem by always writing something nice, no matter what. That may please Renson 3: This is the big one. I've never seen much point in telling readers they missed a great play last night. A paper performs a more valuable service by publicizing shows beforehand. So that's what we emphasize.

ze. Each Friday's "Weekend" sec Each Friday's "Weekend" sec-tion is a catalog of coming events. So is Saturday's "You Weekend" column. We preview additional events in all sections of the paper. Any show that needs publicity should find a warm welcome in our newsrom. So what about that Aug. 7 concert?

It was the debut of the Twin Falls Centennial Dance Orchestra, along with the season's final city band concert. It was a big event, and we previewed it on Page A1 the day before – with two photos and a detailed fact box.

So my answer to the letter writer is: If you wonder where the The Times News was, think about the enormous audience that night. It doubled the normal rumout at a city band concert.

I'm sure the church folks back home felt good about their gifts. But we shared with the villagers a sense of absolute mystification at a policy that would burn down people's homes in the middle of the night, then give them tin and soap and sweaters to rebuild their lives.

Here seemed to be one in every the could look at you with the cold,

The old widows - there seemed to be one in every hut - would look at you with the cold, dead eyes of people who had been violated forever and seemed to expect always to suffer.

But mostly I remember the men, who, if they hadnt slipped away when the mess began, would be taken by the American troops for interrogation. Usually, several young soldiers would throw the man down while yelling the few Vietnamese phrases they knew. At least one would hold a rifle to his head. Another might stand on his neck. His hands would be bound be hinded his back. He would be wrenched up into a kneeling position. Many times he would be blindfolded. Eventually a "pacification" team member would come along and question the man in Vietnamese. Be men documents when lost in the first. He would be yelled at, cursed at, and sometimes spit on. I wish to the problem the sportsmen and women have in this state currently is the lack of a public votice in the process.

I wish to the process of an Idaho Fish and Game commissioner in eastern Idaho was not a dedicated sportsman or a person with a history for working on wildlife issues—he was a retired state legislator. His only claim to any experience was that he sorved on a committee in the lack of the state of the state of the state of the region of the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics in his region of the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics of the region and throw the biology-based game hereds in his region of the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics of the region and throw the biology-based game management out the windly was the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics of the region of the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics of the region of the state? Or is he going to respond to the politics but we found out how wrong we were right here in the Magic Valley when Dr. Fred Wood was appointed to the Commission. I will give Dr. Wood credit for a couple of things - first, is he is a hunter, and second, he will at least admit that his decisions are based on politics.

An example of this artitude is when he ignored the Idaho Rish and Game biologists management study on the elk in the South Hills. He ignored this study on how to best manage this herd because of his political interest in conv-towing to a few machers in the South Hills. A majority of these ranchers have expressed support for a viable herd that is properly managed, but a few of Dr. Wood's friends do not want viable elk herd in the South Hills. The result is a carefully studie. Elk Herd Management pletely in the South Hills and Game Department to issue a large number of cow elk tags to be issued for the South Hills. The other problem that we have is contacting Dr. Wood to discuss issues. When you call his office, you get a recording, and when I have written him a letter, cuss issues. When you call his office, you get a recording, and when I have written him a letter, it goes unanswered. However, he listens to his rancher friends who helped get him appointed to the Idaho Fish and Game

Pope: Europe strays from Christian roots

Christian roots

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy
(AP) - Pope John Paul II said
Sunday that Europe is suffering a crisis in values and expressed hope that the addition of 10 more countries to the European Union nexy sear would be an occasion for the continent's renewal.

The pontiff in recent weeks has decried what he calls a movement away in Europe from its Christian roots.

"You can't deny, that in these times of ours, Europe is going through a crisis in values, and it is important that it recovers its true identity," John Paul told pilgrims and tourists in the courtyard of his summer residence in Castel Gandolfo, a town on a hill near Rome.

The Vatican has mounted a campaign to persuade EU leaders toinclude a reference to Christianity's role in Europe in the Union's new constitution, which is being prepared.

TWIN FALLS - You're no Karl Malone

The Los Angeles Lakers power forward is 40 and has been playing pro basketball for 20 years, mostly with-out injury. At the same age, your odds of escaping harm on the basketball court are considerably slimmer.

"Ankles and knees," said Dr. Mark Wright, a Twin Falls orthopedic surgeon. "Those are the casualties of basket-ball"

And quite common ones, according to a landmark sports medicine survey sponsored by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and published in the online journal Injury Prevention (http://lip.bmljournals.com), accounting for four injury episodes for every 1,000 Americans — an injury rate almost 11 Zi times higher than the next-most perilous sport, cycling.

"It doesn't surprise me," said Dave Little, a physical therapist with the Family Sports Injury and Physical Therapy Clinic in Twin Falls. "Guys play basketball when they're not really in shape, and it's real easy to come down on somebody's foot and sprain an ankle."

Basketball is responsible for the most sports injuries among Americans aged 15-24, it ranks sec-ond among those 5-14 and third among those over 25.

"Sprained ankles are common in basketball, but the biggest problem I see with basketball players is that they Please see SPORTS, Page B3 Ankle strengthening exercises

Options exist, but it's difficult to fix acne scarring

HEAR PAULA; I've dealt with the for 10-plus years now. I wen't had truly clear skin since

I was 13.

I'm now actually looking beyond acne to when I can have some "repair work" done on my actie scarring. What do you think about microdermabrasion as compared to laser resurfacing? Also, is there a certain amount of time that has to pass after using Accutane before having laser surfacery?

—LAURA, HOUSTON
DEAR LAURA: There are so many kinds of lasers or light therapies being used for the face it is hard to know exactly what procedure you had in mind. Depending on the laser procedure, comparing it to microdermatersion is ilke comparing oranges and apples. Abhative laser resurfacing is a serious medical procedure done by a physician in a single application, and the effects can last for five years or longer. Nonablative laser resurfacing takes several treatments and the results are less dramatic.

Lasers of any nature can only be done in a physician's office. Microdermabrasion can be performed by anyone and the results are considered minimal and not long lasting. Microdermabrasion also requires repeated treatments to improve the outcome and then it is still only transient, with the positive effects lasting a few months at best.

Acne scarring is the most difficult skin problem to correct but each of these methods is an option with its own set of pros and cons. Ablative laser resurfacing canhave the best results but with greater risks. Nonablative laser resurfacing can have benefit for minor or moderate scarring with minor to no risk but the results are not sweeping.

Microdermabrasion can show some improvement but only for minor scarring or discolorations and there is minimal to no risk.

Whatever you decide, it does take a long time for the skin to normalize after Accutane, I feel strongly that any resurfacing is problematic for at least a year, and 18 months would be wise. don't even recommend waxing or using depilatories for a year after Accutane, because of the risk of damage to the skin.

trustee under her living trust. Do I need to file a will for probeted:

Maybe, it all depends on whether there are any assets outside of must hat need to be transferred into trust. Your sunt obviously is no longer able to do that and the holder of a power of attorney cannot do that because a prover of attorney; her to roper valid after the principal clear.

The question is better answered after looking at what the will provides, what the trust provides, how assets are titled, and whether there are any debt or tax issues in need of resolution at death.

Trusts can serve useful purposes. They cannot be ignored at they death of the trust grantor, and they are not self-axecuting. That is to say, the trust instrument does not get up and do things on its own. An authorized person – often the successor trustee – must pull the loose ender together.

together. The best advice is to gain a thorough understanding of the trust, the will, asset titling status, and make a determination of whether a personal representative should be appointed to assist in carrying out the terms of a will. The successor trustee will administer the trust. If a personal representative (executor) is needed, a judge will appoint one after the will is submitted to the probate court. The good news is that probate is a fairly efficient process in Idaho.
