Dogs on duty

Cinder, one of the newest drug dogs with the Twin Falls Police Department, leads her handler, Officer Jason Farr, on a search for drugs. The department is training two, new dogs it obtained for free from the federal government.

who was managed to the dogs, but our budget is prety tight."

At one point the department had five dogs, but their numbers were depleted by old age and death.

Covington got in touch with Lackland Air Force Base in Texas, where the IFFD got its last dog. Bobby, a few years ago.

"They had several dogs that were rejects from the Department of Homeland Security," Covington said. "Federal standards are much stricter than local ones."To make the cut as a federal canine officer, "they prety much have to walk owner," he said one can't walk on water unless they are on the bottom," he quipped.

Still, the dogs are smart and will provide a valuable service to the department, he said. Bobby has an admirable record of drug and article soizures.

To the TFD's delight, the acquisition came at no cost: The new dogs' federal reject status allowed the department to get them free of charge.

A fully trained dog can cost upward of $12,000, Sgt. Matt Hicks said. "We used to get dogs from the pound," he said, but then trainers would have to star from scratch. Officer Tim Green, a canine trainer based in Twin Falls, and Officer Rick Van Booren, a TFPD dog handler, went to Texas to retrieve Cinder and Carlo. Regether with Officer Jason Farr, another handler, the trio set about getting the dogs prepared for their new duties.

GOODING - County Commissioners scheduled deliberations in an appeal of Jerome Cheese Co.3 wastewater permit for 10 a.m. today at the Gooding County Courthouse.
Commissioners must decide if William and Gloria Archibald, who live more than three miles away from the cheese company's proposed wastewater treatment plant, should be allowed to appeal to stop the project.

If Gooding County commissioners say yes, they will consider whether mit granted by the county Planning and Zoning Commission.

If commissioners say no, the appeal will not be heard, the permit issued by the zoning board will gand, and Jerome Cheese Coaben.

If commissioners say no, the appeal will not be heard, the permit issued by the zoning board will gand, and Jerome Cheese could begin construction.

The issue boils down to whether the Archibalds live too far away from the site to claim that they will be directly affected by it.

The company would pipe about 1 million gallons of wastewater from its cheese and whey processing plant in Jerome seven miles over the county line into Gooding County. T.F. district doesn't qualify for levy

Twin Falls - There won't be an emergency property tax levy in the Twin Falls School District, after all.

Enrollment in the district early in the new school year has exceeded expectation, but it not sufficient to qualify the district for an emergency levy. Human Relations

The School Boll, which had approved imposing the levy if it became necessary is scheduled to receive an update on emollment at tonight's board meeting. Early numbers showed 6;970 students in the Win Falls district, down from 7,009 last year but more than the projected 6,941.

Near each center of activity along the canalis route were clusters of white tents that were home to the many laborers working on the project. Nearer to Shoahone Falls, an occasional settler's shack could be seen jutting up from the sagebrush and, here and there, ground had been prepared for the irrigation water that had been expected, but not delivered, that spring.

trict did use an emergency levy during the past school year to generate nearly $500,000 to hire more teachers, pay for more supplies and materials, and restore some programs eliminated by budget cuts. It cost $50 for an owner of property valued at $100,000.

While another emergency levy is not in the offing, the district has added to the instructional staff as a re-sult of unexpected enrollment increases at sooms schools, Baird said. Two half-time kindergarten positions were added at Lincoln and Oregon Irail elementary schools, one third-guade reaching job was added at Oregon Trail, and one previously unassigned teacher is now teaching first grade at Oregon Trail.

In addition, the district is in the process of shring up to II instructional aides to place in areas where they're needed – especially Lincoln and Oregon Trail.

Under the new feedral No. Child Left. Behind Act, an instructional aide – also called paraeducator – must fave an associate's degree, 32 credits toward a bachelor's degree or have passed a state exam. As a result of the new requirements, district officials have proposed a peraeducator salary schedule that would increase pay for rescner aides. The plan is scheduled to be presented to the board tonight.

Enry-level pay for teacher aides is now $7.75 to $8.33 an hour, depending on eddication and experience. If the board approves the proposal, that would increase to $7.98 to $8.55 an hour. The maximum wage for aides would rise from $11.10 to $11.34 an hour.

"Because there are some higher employment standards, we need to compensate individuals for having met that higher level of criteria," Baird said.

Although the board has yet to act on the proposal, Baird said the increased expense it would bring a boart $3.00 per year—has been included in the budget for the coming fiscal year.

And courts across the country have firmly established a state's right to intervene in a family to save a child. In Texas, two parents who, like the Jensens, waged a summer-long battle against child-welfare authorities for alternative care finally relented and allowed their 10-year-old daughter to receive surgery for a lacerated colon olon. The girl, Rachel Stout, later ecovered and was released from

.... gri, kachel Stout, later recovered and was released from state custody.

Utah alone has seen a handful of life-or-death custody battles in the past decade, including the case of Christopher and Kyndra Fink, who put their "propher" son on a starvation diet of fruits and nuts.

Enrollment rises at ISU satellite campuses "It used to be society thought higher education was a public good and the state would pay for it," Vice President for University Advancement Kent Tingey said. But that attitude has changed and now students are saying, Thave a child and a job and the education needs to come to me." The policy change came during the 1990s when the state Legislature offered tax cuts and tax relief rather than commit funds to higher education, Tingey said. POCATELLO (AP) — Though exact figures will not be finalized for another few weeks, Idaho State University officials say enrollment at the school's satellite campuses is up by about 3 percent this year.

campuses is up by about 3 percent this year.

"Our classes are packed full and students are still trying to squeeze in even this late," says idaho Falls center manager Ann Howell. "There seems to be a lot of interest right now."

Officials reported more than 200 students have enrolled at -ISU's Boise campus and about 2,600 have signed up in Idaho Falls.

Falls.

A change in state funding poli-cies for higher education com-bined with tight economic times are generally credited with spurring the surge.

"I don't hink you could have written a script any better, with Peter's retirement," Rodick said. "It was just too good."
Men's tennis has been as wide open as ever lately: Roddick is the eighth man to win at the last eight Grand Slam tournaments, tying the Open era record for most con-secutive different champions. But Roddick appears to have staying power. He's won 19 straight matches, and is 37-2 since reaming with coach Brad Gilbert, Agassi's former mentor, after a first-round exit at the French Open.

CSI starts strong in fall ball

NFL WEEK ONE Texans upset Dolphins, 21-20

MIAMI - A humble second year franchise playing at highly touted Miami, the Houston Texans were the biggest underdogs of the NFL's opening weekend. That made them mad. So did the Dolphins' trash-talking during presence warmuns.

That made them mad. So did the Dolphins' trash-talking during pregame warmups.

"One of their players said, Till see you after today's practice," Houston's Jabar-Gaffrey said, "That was their thinking they were looking at us like this was just a little practice." The Dolphins can only wish the game had been just a practice. Kris Brown kicked his fifth field goal, a 35-yarder, with 25 seconds left and the Texans stunned Miami 21.20 Sunday.

"Not many people gave us a chance to win, but we're not shocked." Brown said "We took it as a alap in the face that we were he largest underdogs the opening weekend."

couraggeous pepsode of political scruting Democratic filibusters for the triumph.

Remember words, because they will surely be thrown back the next time a Democratic president tries to nominate to the court a highly qualified individual about whom Republican senators for whatever frivolous reasonmay. harbor suspicions. Estrada's case will be cited as a critical precedent: A nominee of substance and quality can be filibustered until he quits in frustration because he refuses to answer detailed questions about his views of specific cases and because the administration refuses to turn over his confidential attorney work product for, political scrutiny by the Senate. Who exactly will have the credibility to demand fair treatment for that next qualified nominee?

The handling of Estrada's nomination is a low point in a steadily degrading judicial selection process. Opponents acted on little more than whispers about his supposed rightwing extremism, fears that he would some day be elevated to the Supreme Court and the disgusting charge that he was inadequately Hispanic – whatever that means. Meanwhile, many Republicans, including some-in-the White-House, happiply sought to use the controversy to score points with Hispanic voters – making the nomination into a gross spectacle of ethnic politics. Even more dangerous, Estrada was subjected to a kind of extorion by the Senate: Answer the sort of detailed jurisprudential questions nominees have long balked at addressing, he was told, or you get no wne. We would like to think that this might be a moment for some sober second thoughts—that all involved might wonder—

might wonder what they had done to bring the nomination

the done to bring the nomination process so low. See a te Republicans see Miguel to what extent their own dissipation of the might consider to what extent their own dissipation of the might consider their own dissipation of the might be might wonder whether his multian twillingness even to listen to reasonable Democratic concerns has made his opponents less amenable to his nominees. And Democrats might consider whether continually escalating the battle and smearing people such as Miguel Estrada approach.

people such as Miguel Estrana is a reasonable or honorable approach.

There is, however, little ground for optimism on any of these points. Bush proceeds with nominations, such as that of Alabama Attorney General William H. Pryor Jr., which spark altogether legitimate-opposition – and he has responded to the controversy over Estrada by making two provocative additional D.C. Circuit appointments, without consulting Democrats, to judgeships whose necessity is very much in doubt. Democrats are pleased to have a campaign and fundraising issue, raising the question of how much goodwill Bush could win even were he to demonstrate the leadership he hasn't shown. Both sides seem wholly convinced of the perfidy of the other yet can acknowledge no fault-of-their-own. Basic-fairness to nominees has been the first casualty. The excellence of the judiciary, in the long run, is threatened as well.

Campaign finance reform batters Constitution

The Supreme Court can do many things, including saying what's "constitutional" and what sin'. But it can't alter the wording of the Constitution. When the court hears arguments Monday on the latest campaign finance law - called McCain-Feingold after its Senate sponsors, Republican John McCain and Democrat Russell Feingold it will face a simple question. Will it allow the First Amendment to mean what it

In its 1976 Buckley vs. Valeo decision - ruling on the 1974 campaign finance legislation—the Supreme Court attempted to stradde the contradiction.
Congress could not, as it had tried, limit campaign spending without dangerously curbing speech, the court said. But Congress could limit campaign
speech, the court said. But Congress could limit campaign contributions, because dependence on big contributors might create corruption."
In practice, this lawyerly distinction hasn't worked. Here's
why. Suppose I want to contribute to your campaign, federal, law limits how much I can give. But the law allows me, on my own, to spend as much as I want to elect you. Now, suppose I sak you how I should spend that money — what ads to run, what mailing lists to use. Once I've done that, my "spending" effectively becomes a "contribution" to you.

tively becomes a "contribution" to you.

To plug this loophole, the Pederal Election Commission has rules restricting "coordination" between candidates (and their staffs) and sayone spending independently on their behalf. You associate and what we can talk about. Problem solved? No. The "solution" deprives us of our guarantees of free speech and political association. The issues arm't abstract.

guarantees of free speech and political association.

The issues aren't abstract.

After the formation of ACT, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee said: "We're going to be watching very closely to make sure. they are not coordinating with the Democratic Party." Ponder the absurity-let's bar Democrats from cooperaing with Democrats from cooperaing with Democrats.

Campaign finance "reform" thrives on mythology, Myth number one: campaign spending is excessive. It sin't. in 2000, that $3.3 billion worked out to $12 excessive it sin't. in 2000, that the control of the country of the countr

The First Amendment says that Congress shall make "no law... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble ..." The court can uphold McCain-Feingold and reaffirm Buckley vs. Valeo. But it can't square either with the words of the First Amendment.

Roberts gets a free ride for buying pot

Will someone please come up and slap me upside my head for not understanding? I read just last week where Ms.

Roberts is getting her hand slapped and let go. I feel that maybe something should be explained to the people of this community who are either turn-ing their heads or just claiming that "she's a nice person."

Look, she went to another state and mailed herself a pound of port! What's that you say? You don't know what a pound equals? One pound equals 16 ounces, which equals about 30 joints (marijuana cigarettes) per ounce.

Now, boys and girls, let's do the math – 30 times 16 equals 480 joints. If she smokes one per day, that is enough for a year and a half! Maybe she doesn't smoke it in cigarette form. Maybe it's a pipe or "bong," which could intensify the effect. Now how long would it last?

"But she lost her job and was embarrassed." OK, so what if it was your average joe Schmuck off the street? He'd be made an example of how tired we are of drug users and would probably be doing three to five in the state. Personal use? Yeah, right. OK, so now I'll get off my soap

QUESTION: Is it wise to use brokerage account beneficiary provisions to avoid probate and transfer securities at death?

Idaho permits transfers of stocks, bonds, and mutual funds at clash to the next generation by means of a transfer-on-death (TOD) agreement between you and your broker. They work best with small families and simple estate plans. Here is why:

The larger the family the greater the likelihood that a child will predeceased child's share? Some TOD agreements are flexible enough to address this contingency to your understanding and satisfaction. Others are not. Brokers like simple forms. They re easier to explain and fill out.

TOD's should not be used where part or all of these funds are intended to pass from the estate of a deceased spouse to a trust for the surviving spouse.

Tip: When considering whether to use a TOD agreement.

Tip: When considering whether to use a TOD agreement make sure you understand how the arrangement will operate under a variety of contingencies. Make sure it meshes with the terms of your will of rust.
