Sides agree to salmon summit

Senator hopes talks among environmentalists, water users, feds can head off fish lawsuit

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Environmentalists and water users announced Thursday they will participate in talks facilitated by Sen. Mike Crapo to seek solutions to the salmon debate that has hooked Idaho water users.

Crapo offered to mediate talks among environmentalists, Idaho water users and federal river regulators. Environmentalists responded by withdrawing for 30 days their notice of intent to sue the federal government over its operation of 10 federal dams on the Upper Snake River. The senator has a history of working on these types of issues in good faith, said Justin Hayes of the Idaho Conservation League. "We'll stand down for 30 days and see how it goes," Hayes said. Environmentalists in late August sent the Bureau of Reclamation and NOAA Fisheries a 60-day notice of intent to sue, charging that Upper

A MEMORIAL

Bryan Higason tells a crowd of mourners at Wood River High School several anecdotes about Alan Johnson at a memorial service Thursday. Johnson and his wife, Diane, were slain in their home in Bellevue on Sept. 2.

Friends, family remember Bellevue couple

By Pat Murphy Times-News correspondent

HAILEY—An overflow crowd of friends, family and co-workers gathered in a school auditorium here Thursday to remember with a blend of grief and humor the lives of Alan and Diane Johnson, who were killed in their bedroom Sept. 2 by a rifleman firing a single shot into each of them.

The 675-seat auditorium of the old Wood River High School was packed. Another 50 people stood in the lobby straining to hear a succession of religious messages and personal tributes.

Married for 20 years, the Johnsons—he was 46, she 52—were found shot to death in the bedroom of their upscale Bellevue home on a street lush with large trees and manicured lawns.

Their daughter, Sarah, 16, a Wood River High student, was in the home during the breakfast-hour shooting and fled into the street screaming. A rifle of undisclosed caliber was found near the bodies and has been identified as the murder weapon.

Although Blaine County Sheriff Walt Fennling, the lead investigator into the murder, has said he has "several people of interest" under scrutiny, no arrests have been made, and no suspects have been named. He has said he's awaiting completion of crime lab tests of DNA, fibers and a fatal bullet.

Fennling stood in uniform at the very rear wall of the auditorium Thursday, along with Marshal Randy Tremble, chief of the Bellevue police department, which is the nominal investigating agency because the murder occurred in his jurisdiction.

Both left immediately after the service. The memorial service followed a smaller funeral at St. Charles Catholic Church Thursday morning.

According to the Rev. John W. Morgan, who divides his pastoral duties between Hailey's St. Charles and Ketchum's Our Lady of the Snows Catholic churches, the afternoon service had the largest attendance he could remember.

As they arrived, mourners signed guest books and could write personal notes to Sarah and her brother, Matt, a student at the University of Idaho. They could also scan displays of family photos of Alan and Diane.

Sitting side by side was a genuine cross-section of people who had known and worked with both Johnsons. They included workmen from Webb Landscape and Garden Centers, where Alan was a

Retired general seems ready to shake up race

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Retired Army Gen. Wesley Clark has told friends he is likely to become the 10th Democratic presidential candidate, a move that could shake up the crowded field just four months before the first ballots are cast and provide a credible challenge to President Bush.

Clark, 58, has not made a decision, but the Arkansas resident is aggressively recruiting campaign staff and plans to announce his intentions next week, friends and party officials said on condition of anonymity.

His earliest allies would be from former President Clinton's Arkansas-based political network. Clark has a resume that unnerves potential rivals—Rhodes scholar, first in his 1966 class at West Point, White House fellow, head of the U.S. Southern

White House shifts line on Iraq

The Washington Post

As the Bush administration's leading hawk on Iraq, Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz has been a tireless proponent of the argument that Iraq's possession of weapons of mass destruction was a compelling enough reason for the United States to resort to war.

These days, his emphasis is different. In testimony to congressional committees and interviews with reporters, Wolfowitz prefers to stress the evil, dictatorial nature of Saddam Hussein's defunct government and the opportunity to turn Iraq into a beacon of hope for the rest of the Middle East. He depicts Iraq as the focus of a life-and-death struggle between the forces of democracy and the forces of intolerance, and Iraqis is by no means alone. Since the fall of Baghdad, senior administration officials from President Bush downward have been reinventing the rationale for war. In his testimony last Sunday night, Bush barely mentioned Saddam's chemical and biological weapons programs.

Nasty firefight - A8

Instead, he described Iraq as "the central front" in the war on terror.

Even opponents of the war acknowledge that now that the United States is in Iraq, it cannot afford to fail, in effect conceding that the invasion has created its own justification. There is broad agreement across the political spectrum that a premature withdrawal of U.S. troops would destabilize the entire region and undermine U.S. credibility.

Congressional critics of Bush's policy suspect that the new administration line is designed to distract attention from the failure to find evidence of Saddam's biological, chemical or nuclear weapons programs. When Wolfowitz appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at the end of July to share impressions from a visit to Iraq, he was chided by Sen. Lincoln Chafee, R-R.I., for skirting the issue of weapons of mass destruction.

"I don't think (Wolfowitz and other administration officials) are being forthright," said Chafee, the sole Republican senator to vote against the war.

In a separate interview, Wolfowitz denied the administration is providing different justifications for the war with Iraq.

He said he and other administration officials had been "clear from the beginning" that there were three arguments for invading Iraq: halting the development of weapons of mass destruction, liberating the country from "a terrible tyranny" and creating a democratic model that would serve as inspiration for the rest of the Middle East.

While it's true that Wolfowitz has long advocated a free and democratic Iraq, an examination of his speeches before and after the war nevertheless reveals a clear shift of emphasis away from the focus on weapons of mass destruction as the primary reason for going to war. During the run-up to the war, Wolfowitz argued that "determing Iraq of its chemical and biological weapons and dismantling its nuclear weapons program is a crucial part of winning the war on terror."

Cheney loses round in energy suit case

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal appeals court rebuffed Vice President Dick Cheney, refusing to intervene in a lawsuit delving into the role of business executives and industry lobbyists in formulating the Bush administration's energy plan in 2001.

Dick Cheney

The administration won only three votes in favor of rehearing the request to step into the case in which Cheney and his energy task force are being ordered to turn over a large number of documents to the conservative group Judicial Watch and the environmental group Sierra Club. The request for a rehearing went to nine appeals court judges.

The rejection Wednesday by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit leaves the Bush administration two choices.

The first is to ask the Supreme Court to consider the case. The other is to return to U.S. District Court where Judge Emmet Sullivan says the administration must comply with requests for documents or give detailed explanations about the materials it intends to withhold from disclosure.

The administration argues that the constitutional need for the president to receive candid advice demands confidentiality.

U.S. expects little assistance from allies

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Few nations will soon contribute troops or money to rebuild Iraq, even if the United States succeeds in negotiating a new U.N. Security Council resolution, administration officials said Thursday.

U.S. Secretary of State Colin L. Powell leaves today for Geneva to discuss a compromise that would trade some U.S. authority over Iraq for more international help.

The United States initially resisted the idea of sharing political authority in Iraq, but changed that stand as costs and casualties increased.

Now, the United States has concluded that few nations will quickly volunteer troops or money even if Powell strikes a deal with the five permanent members of the Security Council, but the effort could improve the diplomatic atmosphere, and in the long term produce some assistance, congressional, administration and diplomatic sources said.

The only countries now seen as likely to send troops are Turkey and possibly Bangladesh.

European governments want to put the U.N. in charge of deciding the pace and manner in which Iraqis regain political control of their nation. The U.S. wants a mandate for a U.S.-led international force, but would like the U.S. civilian authority to retain control over Iraq's political development.

the mourning, showing extraordinary poise as they read the enormous list of victims for 2.5 hours. Church bells tolled at the moment Blacked Flight 93 crashed near Shanksville, Pa. A moment of silence was observed at the Pentagon for the 186 victims there. And President Bush stood in silence on the White House lawn.

The relatives at ground zero appeared in various sad permutations: Police Sgt. Michael Curran was represented by his three daughters, Jennifer, 17, Erica, 15, and Heather, 13. Kristen Canillas, 12, stood alongside 8-year-old Christopher (Cody) Canillas; both had lost a grandparent.

"I love you and I miss you," Kristen said after reciting the name of her grandfather, Anthony Luparello.

The children - the youngest was 7 - offered poignant messages to their lost loved ones, their emotions laid bare before a crowd that held aloft pictures of the victims, dabbed tears from their eyes and laid flowers in temporary reflecting pools representing the towers.

The two years since the attack seemed to disappear as speakers surrendered to their emotions.

"My daddy, Gerard Rod Coppola," said Angela Coppola, 20, her voice cracking. "Your light still shines."

Brannon Burke, 13, and her 10-year-old sister, Kylene were matching blue Enje Co. 21 sweatshirts with buttons bearing the face of fire Capt. William Burke Jr. - their beloved Uncle Billy, a second-generation firefighter.

It's heart-breaking and it's heart-warming when you hear them say, "My father, my mother, Farah lights candles at a special service in Pakistan Thursday.

my aunt," said Betsy Parks of Bayonne, N.J., whose brother Robert was killed. "What's amazing is the strength and resilience."

Some family members used their hands to scoop up dirt from the site as a keepsake, slipping it into bags and empty water bottles. For many, it may provide the only link to their lost relatives; authorities estimate the remains of as many as 1,000 victims may never be recovered.

The crowd of thousands observed a moment of silence at 8:46 a.m., the time the first plane slammed into the north tower.

At sunset, two light beams pointing skyward were switched on, evoking the image of the twin towers. They will go dark today at daybreak.

The remembrance extended far beyond lower Manhattan. Firefighters in Chicago joined in the moment of silence, while bells tolled in Milwaukee.

Solicitor General Ted Olson, whose wife, Barbara, died in the attack, told Justice Department employees in Washington that an unrelenting fight against terrorism is the best way to honor the memory of those who died.

In rural Pennsylvania, church bells began tolling solemnly shortly after 10 a.m. to mark the moment Flight 93 crashed. The plane was believed to be headed to the nation's capital; it went down as the passengers fought back against the hijackers.

"I feel incredibly proud for what my nephew did and those brave souls and what a difference they made," said Candace Hoggan, whose nephew Mark Bingham was among the passengers. "They prevented those monsters from continuing on with their plan."

In Manhattan, the footprint of the trade center's north tower was outlined by a 4-foot fence draped with banners bearing drawings and messages painted by children of the victims.

"I remember riding on daddy's shoulders," read the message from 4-year-old Maggie Murphy, written between a picture of flowers and the two towers.

Family members of victims walked down a ramp into the pit of the site. Some knelt to touch the trade center's bedrock; others hugged or wept.

Joan Molinaro, the mother of late firefighter Carl Molinaro, spoke for all the parents who had lost their children.

"I feel your hand leave mine," Molinaro said, reading from a poem she had written. "I feel that warm gentle kiss and wake to the tears on my cheek."

"My baby boy is gone."

Democrats show no shame in gloating

He edited, stage right, with class. Miguel Estrada, President Bush's nominee to a powerful federal appeals court viewed as the springboard to the U.S. Supreme Court, had put his life on hold for almost two years.

Finally last week, after several Democrat-led Senate filibusters, Estrada removed his name from consideration, saying the delays weren't fair to his family or his future.

MYRIAM MARQUEZ

"The time has come to return my full attention to the practice of law, and to begin the ability to make long-term plans for my family," the Harvard-born lawyer, who arrived in this country as a teen-ager, wrote in a letter to Bush.

The Democrats gloated. Estrada was among five nominees for federal appellate courts blocked (either in committee or on the Senate floor) from an up-down vote for confirmation. Sen. Edward Kennedy went so far as to claim Estrada's withdrawal "is a victory for the Constitution, for the national judicial system and for the American people."

Spare us, Teddy. By filibuster, the Democrats managed to bypass the constitutional requirement of a simple majority, thereby the Senate's practice of advice and consent into a litmus test for liberal interest groups.

Clever in the short term, perhaps, but the Democrats surely harmed their outreach to Hispanic moderates and independents by denying all Hispanics a historic moment — the first and highest-ranking Latino judge on the federal bench. It's not as if Estrada didn't have strong backing from a wide range of Hispanic groups, including the nonpartisan LULAC. It's not as if Estrada were such records must remain privileged information necessary to defend vigorously the United States' litigation interests."

The Republicans aren't squeaky clean on plots to deny Democrats certain judgeships, either. When the GOP controlled the Senate Judiciary Committee during the Clinton years, the Democrats complained of candidates never brought up for a vote. It took Richard Pate, a Clinton nominee from California, four years to get confirmed thanks to delays caused by GOP senators' maneuvering.

Now Democrats, having lost Senate control, resort to filibuster to stop those judicial candidates feared to be anti-choice. Yet when asked about the landmark Roe v. Wade abortion ruling during confirmation hearings, Estrada said, "It is the law. I will follow it."

Not good enough. The whole vicious campaign against Estrada centered on fear. Fear of an unknown, an enigma in Washington circles.

The low-key Estrada didn't help himself either. With no real record of community service during his years as a public employee, with no real links to Latino groups or communities in Washington or anywhere else, Estrada lacked passionate political advocates. Little wonder that Democrat-affiliated Latino groups found it so easy to pound Estrada with unfair innuendo, all geared up for the 2004 presidential race.

Estrada, qualified by all objective measures, didn't deserve to be the whipping boy for Democrats still simmering over the 2000 election.

Those cherished manufacturing jobs are gone for good

As economic fortunes go one way, employment goes the other way.

How can that be? The answer is simple: The American economy is being driven, and riven, by two forces — rising productivity and continuing globalization. The paradox: Profits increase as jobs stagnate. And while both Republicans and Democrats say they wish to provide "good jobs as good as we can," both parties are mere spectators to this ongoing phenomenon.

Let's start with the economy itself. Since 2000, the gross domestic product of the United States has increased by 9.9 percent. But in that same period, total employment has fallen by 0.2 percent. To put it another way, the gain of an additional $80 billion in annualized output has been achieved with 221,000 fewer people employed. Why? The answer is productivity, defined as output per given unit of input. Such output, of course, can be generated by either workers or machines. And productivity surged a remarkable 6.8 percent in the second quarter of 2003, a sign that all those information-technology professionals are earning their pay.

At the same time, the globalization of trade has cut like a scythe through old-line manufacturing employment — 2.4 million factory jobs lost, just since President George W. Bush took office. That's a spectacular statistic, made all the more spectacular by TV reporters standing in front of shuttered factory gates. But how does one evaluate those data, when it's equally apparent that the overall U.S. economy is far from shuttered?

As a percentage of the work force, manufacturing has been shrinking since the 1950s, from more than one-quarter to less than one-eighth. Yet total employment has nearly tripled during that same half-century, from 50 million to 137 million. And thanks to productivity increases, manufacturing output has nearly doubled. That's how countries enrich themselves, by doing more with less. So one might ask, is the information economy an industrial economy or an information economy really so bad? Would we really be happier returning to the days when men did dangerous physical labor in smoke-belching factories?

In any case, such questions might be moot because neither elephants nor donkeys have a plan for reversing the de-blue-colorization of the U.S. work force.

On Labor Day, Bush pledged to create a "jobs czar." Yet it soon turned out that there was less than met the eye — and then, nothing at all. First off, the czarship was an assistant secretary post at the Commerce Department, one of 12 assistant secretaries at that cabinet agency — each one lower on the chain of command than the six undersecretaries, not to mention the deputy secretary, who reports to the secretary. How much clout will such a fourth-tier "czar" wield? And then, to top it off, it turned out that the Bushies weren't really creating a new position at all, but merely renaming an existing assistant secretaryship.

And what of Democrats? The Democratic mantra this year, like every year, is "fair trade." So most of the presidential hopefuls ritualistically speak of modifying, for instance — or even scrapping — the North American Free Trade Agreement. To be sure, manufacturing jobs are going to Mexico because of NAFTA, but they are also going to other countries, such as China. And if the United States slapped on new tariffs and trade restrictions on imported goods, the price of those goods to American consumers would rise, and the risk of a recessionary worldwide trade war would increase.

Watch for those issues to be raised at the meeting of the World Trade Organization under way in Cancun, Mexico. A few Democrats will show up at that resort, soak up the sun, and bluster about "unfair trade" for the benefit of cameras and microphones. But fierce words mean nothing in the face of global trends; to put it bluntly, the manufacturing czar is out of the bag and the cats go anywhere in the world.

America may be a great place to run a company, but it's not a great place to build a factory, where pollution laws and liability concerns put profits at risk. The smokestacks and their jobs are gone, and they're gone for good. No matter what any politician says.

Republican rule means a light sentence for Fort

I would like to say that I agree with Bob Powers' letter. A person would think the Hemphreans (a majority of the Twin Falls County Republicans and the good ol' boys) would be asking for a full audit of the county books. In light of the Bob Fort crime, this is probably the only way of keeping their name clean.

Mr. Fort, so far, hasn't seen the inside of jail. Let me be the one to call that. He's a stolen one-sixty-fourth of what he did. They, too, have a disease of gambling, drugs, alcoholism or whatever. A lot of them would plead guilty, pick trash from the roadside, pay restitution or get religion to be free. These people didn't have the Republican attorney general charge them with one count or the judge appointed by the good ol' boys take sympathy on them. I smell a cover-up by what I will call the Republican Mafia. This will be a problem as long as you have an in-party rule in Twin Falls County.

If Mr. Fort is going to pick up trash, let's put him in orange coveralls for safety. As for Bob Fort's age, let's remember all the grandpa's older than him who have to make the choice of buying presents for their grandchildren at Christmas or paying their property taxes that are freely stolen by members of the one-party rule. Open gun auction makes best sense for Twin Falls Having learned a political lesson a few years back, members of the Twin Falls City Council are being careful not to shoot themselves in the foot over confiscated guns.

Council members again face the question of how best to clean out a growing cache of guns seized by the Twin Falls Police Department. When the issue last came up a few years ago, 174 weapons were destroyed at the city shop.

The destruction fired off a mini-revolt and sparked an unnecessary "Chop a council member, not our guns" bumper-sticker campaign.

The last thing city leaders want is to kick up a Second Amendment fracas in a conservative Western town. It's reasonable for the city to offer a gun auction.

Everyone wins in that scenario. The city can earn a tidy profit. Gun customers can purchase legal firearms. No one is left embittered.

An auction will still have some drawbacks. When the city auctions off confiscated cars, bikes, computers and even homes, they are usually offered to the general public.

Not so with guns. State and federal laws prohibit cities from selling seized weapons to anyone who doesn't have a Federal Firearms License.

Some locals have complained that it's unfair for the city to auction the weapons only to local pawn brokers and gun shops, and they're right. Those groups stand to be the primary beneficiaries of an auction — though the confiscated weapons are the property of all city residents.

Our view: Twin Falls

City Council should open the sale of seized guns to all Federal Firearms License holders.

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

City Attorney Fritz Wonderlich said he will propose that the City Council allow all Federal Firearms License holders to bid, including shops and individual license holders. We would support that move. That way, a wider variety of shops and individuals will have the opportunity to buy and resell the confiscated weapons. A city auction should not be a sweetheart arrangement between the municipality and a small group of retailers.

Not everyone will have a chance to bid up front for the guns. But the more accessible city leaders make the auction to those who have met legal standards, the fewer political problems they're likely to have.

LETTER

Make sure your vet really offers emergency service

If you love your pets, as I did, read on and take action:

It was late, 11:30, and my dog is suddenly very sick. I call our veterinarian and get the answering machine that gives me "emergency" numbers to call. I call and get no answer on one call and another set of numbers to call. I call and again get no answer but am able to leave a message. I then go to the yellow pages and start calling the nearest veterinarians to get help. Three local veterinarians turn me down because I am not their client. I explain the circumstances but am refused all the same. I called Jerome veterinarians and again, I was refused help because I was not in Jerome. Bottom line, my dog died.

Please be sure that you are a client in some form or another in several veterinarians' offices so if you are in need of help, you can call. Also, make sure your veterinarian's office has working emergency numbers and services.

Firefight erupts near Baghdad after troops come under attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Attackers fired rocket-propelled grenades at a U.S. military convoy west of Baghdad Thursday, sparking off an intense firefight that left at least one American soldier wounded, the military said.

Thinks and other vehicles from the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment came under attack in Fallujah, part of the dangerous "Sunni Triangle" region about 60 miles west of the capital, U.S. Army Capt. Jeff Fitzgibbons, coalition spokesman in Baghdad, told AP Radio.

Other "U.S. forces responding to the scene came under fire and returned fire at houses nearby," Fitzgibbons said.

One U.S. soldier was wounded, said Fitzgibbons. "There was no information regarding casualties among the coalition forces."

The Fallujah region has been one of the most dangerous for U.S. soldiers. Support for ousted dictator Saddam Hussein runs "strongest in the region."

A small crowd gathered at the scene of the attack and began shouting jubilantly "Allahu Akbar" or God is great and "Oh, Iraq, we sacrifice our lives and blood for you."

Israeli cabinet decides in principle to expel Arafat

JERUSALEM — Israel said Yasser Arafat will be removed because he is a "complete obstacle to peace, but put off immediate action Thursday on expelling the 74-year-old Palestinian leader.

Later, Arafat emerged from his sandbagged office building and flashed a victory sign to hundreds of supporters who rushed to his headquarters.

In Gaza City, hundreds of gunmen — some firing into the air — rushed to the permanent building in support of Arafat.

"Israel will act to remove this obstacle in the manner, at the time, and in the ways that will be decided on separately," an Israeli government statement said.

The decision was an apparent effort to balance growing public and political pressure for a dramatic move with a desire to avoid a confrontation with the United States, which opposes expulsion.

The open-ended decision gives the ousted Palestinian prime minister, Ahmed Qureia, some time to take steps to cool the violence that has swept the region in recent weeks.

Judge accuses al-Jazeera of reporter of terrorist activity

MADRID, Spain — A Spanish judge formally accused a war correspondent for Arabic television station al-Jazeera of terrorist activity Thursday, ordering him jailed for alleged financing, logistical support and recruitment for al-Qaida.

Investigative magistrate Baltasar Garzon ordered Thyair Alouni, a Syrian-born Spaniard, held without bond. Alouni won fame as a correspondent in Kabul, Afghanistan, for obtaining the first interview and first videotaped message from Osama bin Laden after the Sept. 11 attacks.

Alouni's arrest last week set off an outcry in the Arab world, and Thursday's decision raised the stakes in a case in which journalism, politics, religion and terrorism converge.

Al-Jazeera, an Arabic satellite broadcaster with a combative and independent tone, finds itself in a clash with a headline-making judge whose reputation is equally feisty. Garzon has prosecuted terrorists, South American dictators and corrupt politicians, but he has also spoken out against the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.

On Thursday, Garzon filed a 23-page order outlining Alouni's alleged participation in a Syrian-dominated al-Qaida cell in Madrid suspected of having links to the cell in Hamburg, Germany, that was responsible for the Sept. 11 attacks. The Madrid suspects have been in jail pending trial for almost two years.

Swedish foreign minister dies after stabbing attack

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Foreign Minister Anna Lindh, an outspoken human rights advocate who was touted by many in Sweden as a future candidate for prime minister, died Thursday after being stabbed multiple times in a downtown Stockholm department store.

She was 46 years old, more than 10 hours of surgery for severe internal bleeding and injuries to her liver and stomach, doctors said. She was 46.

"Anna Lindh has left us. The family has lost a mother and wife. Social Democracy has lost one of its most skillful politicians," an emotional Prime Minister Goran Persson said. "The government has lost a competent politician and a good working colleague. Sweden has lost its face against the world."

For Swedes, her death rekindled memories of the Feb. 28, 1986, murder of Prime Minister Olof Palme, who was killed while walking home from a movie theater with his wife. Like Lindh, he had no bodyguards. His murder remains unsolved.

She was outspoken on several international issues, voicing her opposition to the recent war in Iraq and urging the Israelis and Palestinians to both stop their violence and start negotiating.

She is survived by her husband, Bo Holmberg, a local politician, and two sons, David, 12, and Filip, 9.

Pope falters during speech, but trip will continue

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia — Slumped in his chair and slurring his words, Pope John Paul II struggled Thursday at the start of a trip to press Roman Catholic values on skeptical Europeans.

The frail 83-year-old pope, who is battling Parkinson's disease and crippling knee and hip ailments, looked pale and short of breath as he failed to read his full arrival speech for the first time in 102 foreign trips. An aide read most of the rest.

Later, visiting a cathedral in the western city of Trnava, John Paul thanked the crowd in Polish for its warm welcome, but left it to Slovak Cardinal Jozef Tomko to read his brief prayer service remarks.

Clerics decry calls for women equality

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Prominent Saudi clerics and academics warned against calls for equality and increased rights for women, saying such efforts aim to make Muslim women more like "infidel" Western types.

Efforts to give women greater rights are part of an anti-Islamic campaign spearheaded by the United States, said 130 Saudi sheikhs and academics in a statement obtained by The Associated Press Wednesday.

Women in Saudi Arabia are segregated in public places, they cannot drive cars, and they must be covered from head to toe in public in this strict conservative society.

The statement said equality between men and women is not possible under Islam. "Any calls for absolute equality is an illegal and illogical call," the statement said. It said allowing women to drive, a repeated request in the kingdom, would lead to "many evils."

The religious establishment is one of the most powerful voices in conservative Saudi Arabia, which ascribes to a puritan form of Islam known as Wahhabism.

Study predicts massive wave of extinctions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Hundreds of species face possible extinction in the next two decades if more land is not set aside to protect them, a study released Thursday said.

The Conservation International study of more than 11,000 species throughout the world has created a global picture of how they are protected.

It was released during the World Parks Congress in the coastal city of Durban where 2,500 international conservationists have gathered.

An urgent addition of 2.6 percent of the world's land area to an existing protection system could help stop the imminent extinction of at least two-thirds of unprotected species, the report said.

Still, many other areas also need protection to safeguard the world's species, the report said. At least 228 bird, 140 mammal and 346 amphibian species are currently completely unprotected.

"We need to do something right away. If it's not done, we will probably see the disappearance of many of these populations in the next 10 or 20 years," said Gustavo Fonseca, Conservation International's Executive Vice President for Programs and Science.

"This will represent extinction to the scale that we have not seen before as a human species," he said.

Activists appeal water transfer decision

JEROME - Environmental activists Bill Chisholm and Lee Halper have filed a challenge in 5th District Court to a decision by the Idaho Department of Water Resources to grant a water right to Jerome County dairyman Adrian Boer.

The case goes back to 1999, when Boer requested a transfer for 4,750 milk cows using 140 non-milking cows in Gooding County. Chisholm and Halper protested the transfer, leading to a series of hearings at the Department of Water Resources and a judicial review in 5th District Court. The case played a prominent role in prompting the Idaho Legislature to limit the "local public interest" aspect of the state's water law. Now only water issues can be considered as reasons to not award a transfer or a new water right, instead of potential damage to a community for other reasons other than water.

The Boer case, however, is still under the jurisdiction of the old law. Fifth District Judge Barry Wood ruled that adding to the odor of a township that already has 66,000 cows had to be considered in the transfer.

Boer could not be reached for comment on Thursday. Chisholm said he and Halper are representing themselves in the case and have plenty of financing from "people who live along the Snake River in Twin Falls County. Those residents say their quality of life and property values have been damaged by them from the dairies above them in Gooding County."

T.F. County Democrats elect four new officers

TWIN FALLS - At their regular monthly meeting this week, members of the Twin Falls County Democratic Central Committee elected four new officers and re-elected four others to represent their political party here for the next two years.

Named to chair the organization was local Realtor Harry Phillips. Others newly elected are Kyle Leuzan, vice chairman; Gary Baty, central committee; and Bob Parrish, secretary. Re-elected were Mel Martin, treasurer; Mike Hiler, legislative District 23 representative; Robert Powers, legislative District 24 representative; and Carole Stearns, central committee woman. John Radford was designated to organize and lead subcommittees to deal with budget and finance, fund-raising and voter precinct issues.

The committee also voted to support local "Howard Dean for President" activities as well as those of other Democratic presidential candidates, pending selection of a single party nominee at the National Democratic Convention in July. Some local Democrats therefore will take part in national observance of "Dean Visibility Day" scheduled to take place on Sept. 20, Phillips said.

"Dean Visibility Day" will be observed in Twin Falls City Park from noon to 3 p.m. Dean supporters also will distribute leaflets in other city locations, according to Julie Fanselow, event organizer. For more information on the Sept. 20 activities, Fanselow can be reached evenings and weekends at 736-8795, or online at juliefanselow.com.

Ketchum-area resurfacing projects begin Sunday

KETCHUM - Two Ketchum-area resurfacing projects along Idaho Highway 75 will begin Sunday, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

Crews will resurface a section of the highway about four miles north of Hailley (mileposts 121-123). The project will protect the existing road against water damage and prolong its life, a Transportation Department press release said.

Two additional sections of Highway 75 between Hailley and Ketchum will be repaved (mileposts 118-119 and 125-126). To lessen impacts on motorists, crews will work between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. The road is deteriorated and worn in this heavily traveled area. Valley Paving of Bellevue is the contractor for the $107,000 project.

Motorists may encounter lane restrictions associated with the projects. Delays of up to 15 minutes can be expected. Both projects are expected to be finished in late September.

Bank offers reward in robbery

By Rebecca Meany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls police were "chasing down a couple of leads" Thursday evening in connection with a Wells Fargo Bank robbery Wednesday, said Staff Sgt. Dan McAtee of the Twin Falls Police Department.

Wells Fargo announced a reward of $10,000, and Crime Stoppers is offering $1,000 for information leading to an arrest.

The robbery occurred at the bank's Lynwood branch by a masked man with a gun. He is suspected in two other-area robberies, according to police.

"It was pretty emotional," said Mark

McEwen, the branch's service manager, who was working during the robbery. "We were in shock."

McEwen experienced a holdup at his previous bank job, but the volatility of each situation doesn't get easier to take.

"Time kind of just stood still," he said. At 2:45 p.m. Wednesday, McEwen was at his desk talking with another employee. A loud voice broke the usual quiet in the bank.

"My first instinct was to stand up and see who was yelling at my employees," he said. "Then I saw the mask and gun, and I hit the alarm."

Company training helped employees deal with the situation, he said.

"We're trained to make sure we remain calm. The employees did great and did exactly what they're supposed to do, even as the guy got more verbal," McEwen said.

The two minutes the perpetrator was in the bank - an unusually long time for a robbery, McEwen said - ticked by slowly. The gunman demanded all the tellers hand over their money, which they did. Meanwhile, the other employees waited for him to leave.

"We don't want anyone to be a hero," McEwen said. "We just wanted to get him in and out as quickly as possible."

Neither, McEwen nor police would say how much money was taken.

So far, the public has been helpful, McEwen said.

"We've been impressed with the public is responding. We've been getting calls about people who fit the description," he said. "It's just unfortunate it took another robbery to get people's eyes to open."

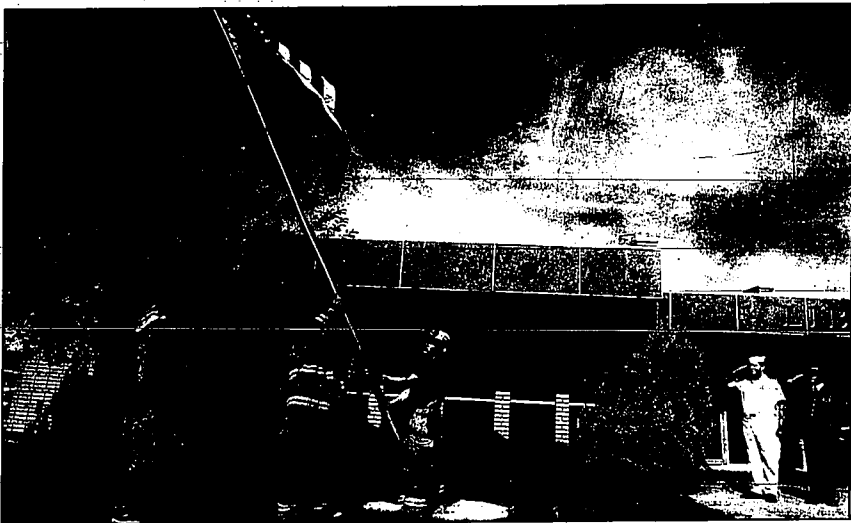

The bank remains open and is ready for business as usual.

"All the employees went back to work the next day and very good to go," McEwen said.

"They did what they're supposed to do," he said. "It's pretty fortunate."

Anyone with information about the case should call the Twin Falls Police Department at 733-7200, the Twin Falls office of the FBI at 733-5720, or the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center at 733-1911.

Idaho supports wolf regulation reinstatement

The Associated Press

BOISE - Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden is backing up a federal challenge to U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnill's injunction over wolves in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The Idaho Republican said he filed a "friend of the court" brief earlier this week in support of an appeal of the injunction which banned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service from enforcing wolf reintroduction regulations on public and private lands in the Stanley Basin.

Winnill in April ordered wolves in the basin to be protected for a second straight grazing season this year - even if they attack stock.

The Western Watersheds Project and Idaho Conservation League filed suit in February to renew last year's injunction that protects wolves which tangle with cattle or sheep there from automatically being moved or killed.

A 1972 law created the scenic recreation area and gives wolves precedence over grazing. Winnill said those rules must be balanced with regulations established in the 1990s, which directed Fish and Wildlife Service to move and possibly kill wolves that prey on stock.

Winnill also ruled on the injunction that protected the public and private land in the recreation area. It remains in effect until November.

Wasden said the environmentalist suit was brought against only the Forest Service for alleged procedural violations in issuing permits to ranchers for federal grazing allotments.

But, Winnill also enjoined the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Please see WOLF, Page B3

Filing begins for council seats

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Prospective mayors and city council members throughout south-central Idaho already are posting for the upcoming election.

Today marks their first opportunity to file for the Nov. 4 ballot.

Through Sept. 26, prospective candidates can pick up forms from their respective city halls and go about getting on the ballot in two different ways. A person can fill out a declaration of candidacy, where he completes a form and pays a $40 fee. Or he can file a petition of candidacy, indicating that he has collected five signatures of qualified registered voters within city limits.

To qualify for election, there are only a few stipulations: Prospective candidates must have resided in their respective cities for 30 days, be older than 18 and be U.S. citizens.

As the Nov. 4 election draws nearer, several incumbents and challengers throughout the region have already announced their intentions to seek office.

Here is a roundup of city positions up for election:

- Twin Falls - Four seats are up for grabs in the race for the seven-member Twin Falls City Council.

Seat Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 7 will be on the November ballot. With the exception of retiring Councilman Howard Allen, who holds seat No. 7, the remaining council incumbents have indicated their intentions to seek re-election. They include Gloria Galan (seat No. 2), Trip Craig (seat No. 3) and Glenda Thompson (seat No. 4).

Two newcomers also have publicly announced their intentions to run for City Council. Shawn Bariga, a Magic Valley Regional Medical Center spokesman, has said he will file to run for seat No. 7. Dennis Kauffman has announced his intention to run, but so far is not indicating for what seat.

Twin Falls holds open-seat elections, meaning each candidate runs for a specific position exclusively against opponents also vying for the same seat.

Twin Falls council members receive $750 annual salaries. Mayor Lance Clow, who is not up for re-election, is paid $1,000. The council annually

Agency plans Capitol tree ornaments

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

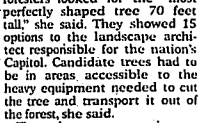

TWIN FALLS - Local school children will make giant ornaments to decorate the Christmas tree that will be cut from an Idaho forest and trucked across the country for display on the U.S. Capitol lawn.

"We want it be representative of Idaho and its communities," said Ruth Monahan, supervisor of the Sawtooth-National-Forest. Monahan told the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club at its Thursday luncheon that the "most community groups can get involved by making ornaments for smaller companion trees also coming from Idaho and by participating in celebrations as the giant tree passes through the Magic Valley."

Boise, Payette and Sawtooth foresters looked for the "most perfectly shaped tree 70 feet tall," she said. They showed 15 options to the landscape architect responsible for the nation's Capitol. Candidates' trees had to be in areas accessible to the heavy equipment needed to cut the tree and transport it out of the forest, she said.

Handmade ornament guidelines

Idaho schoolchildren will hand-craft 5,000 ornaments to adorn the U.S. Capitol tree. Ornaments must adhere to these guidelines:

- Depict the spirit of Idaho and be durable enough to hold up outside for a month and large enough to show up at the top of tree.
- Use reflective, colorful materials, and avoid dull, flat surfaces.
- Use three-dimensional effects for best viewing from all sides.
- Use lightweight, weather-resistant materials.
- Use a large, easy-to-view design 8 inches to 12 inches in size.
- Attach a 12-inch to 15-inch heavy-gauge wire as a hanger.
- Include the creator's name and city on the ornament itself.
- Depict the theme: "From Idaho's Heart to America's Home."
- Shipping boxes should be labeled with the number of ornaments and artists' names and counties.

Community organizations can contribute to the decorations 5 inches to 8 inches in size for 80 companion trees that will decorate federal buildings throughout the nation's capital. Twin Falls organizers are looking for two ornaments - one to send to the Capitol and the other to auction off in Twin Falls to raise money for improvements to the city Park band shell. In Twin Falls, contact the Historic Old Towne Business Improvement District at 734-2113 for more information.

Oil company gives couple green light

Argentinians will be allowed to complete journey to Arctic Ocean

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - After a 40,000-mile drive from Argentina to Alaska, a couple's dream to reach the Arctic Ocean in their antique car stalled with their goal in sight: The oil fields separating them from the ocean had closed to visitors for the season.

But now, Herman Zapp and his wife, Candelaria, will be allowed to examine the 230 miles to Prudhoe Bay after getting the green light from the BP oil company.

The Zapps left Buenos Aires on Jan. 25, 2000, in a dark blue 1972 Graham-Paige automobile with "Driving from Argentina to Alaska" painted on its side.

"What they didn't count was that our antique car would not have access to the Prudhoe Bay oil fields would have packed up with the end of the summer season.

"The area is secure for anybody besides military," Allen said. Dennis Allen, a member of Antique Auto Musters of Alaska, a group that hosted the couple in Anchorage.

"When they started 3.5 years ago they probably didn't think this far ahead."

BP Exploration (Alaska) was making special arrangements so the couple could complete the journey - but without their vintage car. The car will have to stay behind because the couple hasn't completed a safety course required of all in the area.

Allen said the couple's spokesman Daren J. Beaudio, if the Graham-Paige sprang even a small leak, it would have to be reported under environmental regulations.

And the couple's baby son, who was born during the journey, also will have to stay behind, Beaudio said. No one under age 16 is allowed in the oil fields.

A BP security person would drive the couple in a company bus to a dock where Herman and Candelaria would be allowed to get out and take pictures of the Arctic Ocean, Beaudio said.

"They will be able to complete their journey, maybe not 100 percent intact with their vehicle, but able to say that they followed through on their mission," he said. Allen said the couple would have made it this far without the help of many people.

When they needed a new set of tires in Texas, Allen and another Anchorage man, Bruce Campbell, put up some money along with others.

The baby was born in Greensboro, N.C. on June 4, 2002. Doctors donated their services and money was raised to pay medical bills.

In New York, members of a Graham-Paige car club rebuilt their car's engine because they didn't think the car would make it to Alaska, Allen said.

The journey began with the couple heading to Chile. From there, stops included Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, Honduras, Guatemala, Belize and Mexico.

With baby in tow, the couple headed north to Washington, D.C., and New York, then into Canada. They returned to the United States and traveled through Colorado, Utah and Arizona before arriving in San Francisco where Herman's father lives.

To help finance the trip, they sold copies of a book they wrote titled "Three Americas: One Dream."

From California, they headed north and arrived in Haines Junction, Alaska, on Aug. 15. Three days later they drove into Anchorage where they spent several days with Allen and his wife, Diane.

Herman used a pay phone Tuesday morning to call Allen from Wisconsin to issue his plea for help. He was happy to find out later in the day that BP was going to let them in, even if the baby and the car had to stay behind, Allen said. He said they would probably reach the Arctic-Ocean on Thursday morning.

"It looks like it all is going to work out," Allen said.

Festival brings fewer citations this year

RENO, Nev. (AP) - The latest numbers are in for this year's annual Burning Man festival in the Black Rock Desert. Scrapes and bruises were up, but scrapes with the law were down.

More than 30,000 people camped in the middle of the desert 90 miles north of Reno in late August to build and then destroy a temporary city built around a religious icon - an 80-foot temple topped by the stylized figure of a man.

Bureau of Land Management law officers issued 177 citations overall at the week-long, counter-culture event through Labor Day.

"Overall, the event ran smoothly again this year," said David Cooper, manager of the Black Rock Desert-High Rock Canyon Enlarged Trails National Conservation Area.

The five arrests by BLM agents equaled the five last year despite the fact a record 30,586 people attended the festival, about a 5 percent increase from 2002.

The 102 drug-related citations also were down 25 percent from last year, BLM spokesman Jamie

Thompson said Thursday. "As far as arrests go, I think there is a lot of repeat visitors to the festival," Thompson said. The Associated Press. "I think people really understand now that drug use is not going to be tolerated. I think they are less likely to violate laws than they may have been earlier."

He said he does not believe there has been any easing up on enforcement of laws over the years.

In addition to BLM arrests, the Pershing County sheriff's office made five arrests, three for sex acts in public or for trespassing and one for failure to appear on a warrant from the Nevada Highway Patrol.

BLM officials noted five people were injured in two small plane crashes and one woman was killed in an accident involving a "art car," but said those numbers should be kept in perspective.

"It is a tragedy we all feel," said Terry Reed, BLM district manager in Winnemucca. "But it is also important to remember that similar events occur during a week's time in any group of 30,000 people."

Academy can't guarantee confidentiality for cadets

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) - A top Air Force Academy commander said Thursday that cadets who report sexual assaults cannot be guaranteed confidentiality because the Air Force cannot risk having criminals in the ranks.

Col. Delva Gray, the new vice commandant in charge of handling assault cases, said the academy and Air Force have no choice in making assault reports more open.

"We are different than a regular company," she said in an interview with The Associated Press, noting that officers make life-and-death decisions.

Confidentiality has emerged as a key issue since the academy was plunged into a sexual assault scandal earlier this year.

Air Force officials have said they didn't know how bad the problem was in part because reports were kept under wraps.

But victims' advocates and civilian investigators pointed by Congress say denying confidentiality will discourage victims from coming forward.

Scott Berkowitz, president and founder of the Rape, Incest & Abuse National Network, praised the efforts of academy commanders but also criticized the decision to deny confidentiality.

"What they are trying to do is the right thing, but the end result is the victim doesn't come forward," he said. "Not only does the rapist stay in the system but the victim doesn't get the help she needs."

Work on the new amnesty policy and guidelines for dealing with alcohol abuse, something some academy officials have said is rampant - is expected to be completed soon.

Some victims in the 142 assault cases reported at the prestigious school since 1993 say they were punished for rules violations that turned up during investigations of their cases.

Investigators identify gender of human remains

BOISE (AP) - Investigators have determined that the human remains found at Arrowrock Reservoir last weekend are male, but they hope forensic tests and bits of clothing found with the body will help identify it.

Boise County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Bill Bradcock said a woman's belt buckle and the waistband from a pair of underwear were found on the skeleton, which consisted of the torso only.

The skeleton was discovered last Sunday by a motorcyclist on the "atypically dry" bed of the reservoir. Arrowrock is only about 1 percent full because of drought and work being done on the dam valves.

Bradcock said the belt made of horsehair with a bright turquoise strip down the center is unique enough that someone might recognize it and identify it with its owner.

An autopsy failed to determine the cause of death.

What are the benefits of funeral pre-arrangements?

While some may think it "morbid", pre-arrangement of one's own funeral, is most often done to spare grieving survivors the responsibility, making it in fact, a considerate and loving act. For others, the assurance of a funeral that meets their beliefs and wishes is key. Sometimes, the desire is to assist survivors with funeral and burial cost guidelines.

When you pre-arrange your funeral, it is practical and your wishes will be met. Your family and friends will be glad to assist you at the cost of obligation and concerns are always the main thing on our mind.

Hollister fifth-graders won't move

By John E. Swartz Times-News correspondent

FILDER - Faculty and students at Filder Elementary School can breathe a sigh of relief. "At a special meeting Tuesday, the Filder School Board overturned a previous decision to move the school's fifth-grade class to Filder Elementary.

Hollister second-grader, said her biggest concern would have been transportation. "None of the kids live clear out by Jackson and they'd be on the bus over an hour," she said.

With an enrollment of 67 students - down 11 from last year - Hollister appeared to offer the best solution. "The plan was to keep the students together as much as possible," Graham said. "I think we decided to put four in one class and five in another."

graders were given an opportunity on Friday to voice concerns and offer alternatives to the board's plan. One of the suggestions was to combine the fourth- and fifth-grade students into one class, a pattern already being used in the second and third grades. The sixth-grade class was moved to Filder Middle School in 1996.

Castleford lacks money for EPA arsenic mandate

By Sandra Wisniewski Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - Despite a tight budget, City Council members have approved a study of the city's water system as the first step in complying with the Environmental Protection Agency's new arsenic level standard.

to cover the entire cost of the study, Herring said. The city will have to come up with a portion of the dollars. Council members Wednesday night passed a resolution authorizing Ruffing to sign grant applications, grant agreements and amendments and other documents relating to drinking water-planning grants on behalf of the city.

"Unfunded mandates are killing us," Mayor Rita Ruffing said. "People in our little community won't be able to afford to pay for it if the actual cost is as high as some of the estimates."

The engineering firm of Riedesel & Associates will conduct the scaled-down study of the city's water system, focusing on arsenic content. The water will be re-tested, and the city will look at the affordability of the project in a cooperative effort with DEQ, Region 4 and Rural Development Association.

Cost estimates for construction of a treatment facility after the study is completed could go as high as $250,000. EPA has estimated that could then cost a city $1,000 a year per household to control the arsenic problem, Ruffing said.

The engineering consultants will gather enough information to "take to manufacturers, requesting proposals for the arsenic level in the water, project engineer Donald G. Acheson said. The manufacturer must provide proof that its method of treatment will bring the arsenic level down to the DEQ 10 parts per billion standard. Any on-site tests of the equipment will be the responsibility of the manufacturer.

Couple describes Grand Teton rescue

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Snow blanketed the top of the 13,770-foot peak, crusting all traces of where other climbers had gone. Clouds had settled "like a curtain" on the peak, further disorienting Joe and Beth Hecks.

The couple noticed a cave, telling Beth, "Oh, we can bivvy here if we need to," she recalled during an interview at St. John's Hospital.

"I'm like, no way," she said, adding that the cave was about the size of the hospital bed where Joe had recovered from a fall.

Four poor visibility made it even more difficult to orient. Eventually, they gave up.

Once in the cave, Joe put his coat on his legs like a bivvy sack and they lay next to one another, taking turns exposing their backs to the howling wind.

They still had water in Camelbaks, burritos they had packed for lunch and a stash of cheese, cookies, an apple, M&Ms and two packets of quinoa.

Sleeping off and on, they expected the skies to clear Saturday morning. But snow continued to fall. Now warm and dry, they didn't want to leave the cave, so they waited another day and night, snoring and talking.

Beth measured the cold by watching icicles drip along the cave's entrance. Drizzling meant it wasn't freezing.

"If Joe hadn't gotten hurt, this would have been a big adventure."

—Beth Hecks, one of two climbers lost in a blizzard in Grand Teton National Park

"When you're that cold everything is kind of an effort," Beth said.

On Sunday, the clouds finally lifted. The Hecks split the remaining stash — an apple and 20 M&Ms — and found the descent.

But nearing the Lower Saddle, with their tent in view, Joe slipped and tumbled 50 feet down an icy slab. Beth had roped up, but Joe had felt strong enough to descend without protection.

"I made a poor choice," he said. Beth ran for help. She got the attention of mountain guide Jim Williams, who was eating dinner with clients on the Lower Saddle. Williams called park dispatch and started hiking up to help.

Racing to beat sundown, rangers called the park's contact helicopter, which can fly during "daylight hours only." Williams, meanwhile, helped Beth ascend his climbing harness.

The chopper inserted ranger Marty Vidick, suspended below the chopper, in a 100-foot wide gap at 12,100 feet where Joe had fallen.

The pilot, Rick Harmon, "must have nerves of steel," Joe said.

After placing Joe in an evacuation sled, Vidick flew him suspended below the chopper to Lupine Meadows. Joe was taken to St. John's; Beth spent the night on the Lower Saddle in their tent. The next morning, the helicopter flew Beth out because the wet ropes were swollen, making for a difficult walk.

Despite two nights in a cave, Joe said, "I don't think either one of us thought we were in jeopardy."

That is until the fall.

Added Beth: "If Joe hadn't gotten hurt, this would have been a big adventure."

BYU inaugurates new president

PROVO, Utah (AP) — At his inauguration as president of Brigham Young University, Cecil O. Samuelson said all efforts must focus on the students.

"Our common commitment to understanding of their growth and spiritual and intellectual development is the reason we exist as a university," Samuelson said Tuesday.

"There are many wonderful universities and we applaud enthusiastically the great good they do. But we will not be distracted, not detoured from the fundamental chartered course that makes our mission distinctive," he said.

He was formally installed as president by Gordon B. Hinckley, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which owns and operates the school.

"So much has been done by so many. I am frankly embarrassed, but am constantly reminded that today is not about me. It is all about this wonderful place and idea we know as Brigham Young University," said Samuelson, who began working as the university's president May 1.

Samuelson succeeds Merrill J. Bateman, who was the university's president for eight years and is now serving in the church's Quorum of the Seventy. Bateman died Tuesday of a coronary artery aneurysm.

The inauguration ceremony had a new, shorter and less costly format, lasting only 55 minutes.

Past BYU inaugurations sometimes have included extra events such as a parade and ball.

Tuesday's events included a small professional, a luncheon and a reception for university faculty and staff.

House committee chairman continues resisting pressure to end tax breaks

BOISE (AP) — The conservative chairman of the state House tax-writing committee is discounting the large number of states that have imposed sales tax on services.

Nampa Republican Dolores Crow was unconvinced by a state Tax Commission comparison showing that 173 kinds of services were taxed by at least one state and that some states, like Hawaii, taxed all but four on the list.

"Every state is different," said Crow, one of two legislators who head up a task force on sales tax exemptions.

She called the comparison helpful, "but I don't think it's a blueprint for Idaho. It is helpful to see how other states are doing it."

Idaho taxes only 39 of the 173 service categories. Analysts estimate the untaxed services and other exemptions are costing the state about $1 billion in revenue under the 5 percent sales tax and $1.2 billion under the temporary 6 percent tax.

But analysts also believe the state would only be able to recover about 70 percent of receipts if the tax were extended to all transactions and probably never more than 85 percent once business people are educated on collecting and remitting the tax.

Judge won't step aside over campaign money

CALDWELL (AP) — A district judge refused to disqualify himself from a murder trial despite having received an election campaign contribution from the defense attorney's wife.

Third District Judge Renee Hoff said she consulted with an attorney before deciding to reject the petition from prosecutors that she disqualify herself from presiding over the trial of Dane Lawson for the murder of Cary Sturgis. That trial is scheduled to begin Sept. 16.

Hoff said the contribution from the wife of Lawson's attorney, John Bujak, would not affect her impartiality.

"I can tell both sides I don't have a bias for or against either side," Hoff told attorneys during Wednesday's hearing. "The campaign contribution does not require a disqualification."

The judge was unsure whether she even knew the Bujaks, saying she may have met the couple at a party.

Bujak was miffed by the petition's inference that he was "I neither come to this courtroom getting special treatment nor expecting special treatment," he said. "The motion really offended me."

Teen wonders how to pick up pieces after tantrum

DEAR ABBY: I am 17. Two months ago, I found out that my boyfriend, "Jesse," was cheating. I went berserk. I broke into his house when his parents weren't home and trashed his room. I tore up the cool stuff I had given him and threw it all over the place. I brought along all the gifts he had given me and did the same thing to them.

My problem is, we're back together now and his parents hate.

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

banned me from their house. They are snobby, uptight people. His dad is a cop. His mom is a teacher. They are very opposite from my family. I know they will make me feel awful if I apologize - so I haven't.

Jesse feels stuck in the middle, and it's starting to strain our relationship. What should I do?

- TEEN IN QUEENS, NEW YORK

DEAR TEEN IN QUEENS: The first thing you should do is talk to a counselor at school about anger management classes. Face it, honey, you went off the deep end.

By all means, you owe Jesse's family an apology. I recommend you make it quickly. Bear in mind that breaking and entering is a crime. So while you're at it, thank his father for not reporting it and putting you in the legal system. If they see you're contrite and sincere about getting help, perhaps they'll allow you back in their home.

Edison's brain had great worth

Of all the humans who ever lived, which one had the brain with the greatest cash value? Put that query to the fellow on the next story. To see if he comes up with the experts' consensus: Thomas Alva Edison.

REVISITED
L.M. Boyd

Osak vernacular: "Bad year. Took three hogs to make a shadow."

Q. Where did the writer William Sydney Porter get his nom de plume "O. Henry"?

A. He'd once worked in a pharmacy. He'd noted there that writings of a French chemist named Oasian Henry were indexed under "O. Henry."

"The oxymoron I like," writes an Idaho woman, "is 'mature man.'"

It has been a common belief in southern Asia that a tiger's ears are so sensitive they can hear the whistling of a man's breath through his nose hairs. So hunters keep their nostrils barbered.

Body language is innate. Worldwide, people who pout about the same expression to do it. You know who learned that? Charles Darwin.

Words can't describe this upcoming offer, Capricorn

SEPTEMBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... your natural sense of drama, empathy and optimism would make you a good teacher or therapist. You may feel under pressure to make a commitment at the moment, but the time may not be quite right. With hard work, you will achieve your goals this year as responsibilities are assumed. On a subconscious level, you may feel that your psyche is being taken to the cleaners as you experience major changes. You're a born traveler.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Although you've given your word and want to fulfill your obligations so as not to disappoint, it's best to let others know today that you can't follow through.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20): You're rightly proud of your accomplishments and triumphs. But, something you've overlooked may outsmart you. Don't allow others to maneuver you into a corner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You feel obliged to make a decision. With Mars and Uranus retrograde at the top of your chart, you're better off biding your time. With Mercury retrograde also, delays are likely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There's not much you can do as your options are limited and tricky. A discussion with loved ones may have to be reviewed as the whole picture is not yet known.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your many efforts are not bearing fruit, but you have to be patient. Whatever the case may be, the tide is turning, even if you won't see the benefits or profit today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): When examining issues, you conclude that freedom comes at a price. Partners' limitations must be seen for what they are. You're in demand so why not enjoy the ball?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're facing someone's dilemma with great patience. Sharing a burden, you may neglect making your own decisions. It's your talent that counts. Staying healthy has you rushing to the gym.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Minor differences could become major misunderstandings. It's very important you get your views across. You may feel puzzled that nobody shares your point of view. Rely on your intuition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone could be flirting and making loving overtures. You may have to bend as supervisors or employers are making new rules. Aquarius may be helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An offer sounds just too good for words. The Virgo sun is bestowing some lucky rays on you; make the most of them. Be reassured, goodwill is not in short supply.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your usually altruistic nature is somewhat suspicious. Ideas that once excited now leave you jaded. Your enthusiasm is tempered by your need for self-preservation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Saturn's harmonious aspects give you a clearer picture of what you're all about. You're reassured that you're on the right track without having to replace your dreams and goals.

Feds consider charges after ABC smuggles uranium

WASHINGTON — In a clash between security and the First Amendment, federal authorities are threatening criminal charges against ABC News after the network smuggled harmless depleted uranium into the country for a second time during an investigation of border inspections.

ABC News said Wednesday it believed its actions constituted legitimate investigative journalism that highlighted U.S. anti-terrorism security on the second anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. The report was scheduled to air Thursday.

Senior law enforcement officials familiar with the investigation, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said agents of the FBI and Immigration and Customs Enforcement were helping the U.S. attorney in Los Angeles draft a possible criminal complaint in the case but that the decision would rest with Attorney General John Ashcroft.

Ashcroft, a former senator, received a word of caution from one of his former Republican colleagues.

"When the media are involved, I would urge that significant caution must be used by the federal government to ensure that legitimate reporting is not chilled," Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, wrote Ashcroft. "While embarrassed government bureaucrats may not think so, the country benefits from government mismanagement being exposed."

More Marines contract malaria after Liberia mission

WASHINGTON — The number of malaria cases among U.S. Marines and those serving with them in Liberia rose again Thursday, with 51 showing symptoms of the illness, defense officials said.

Five new patients were identified with mild cases and were treated aboard the USS Iwo Jima rather than evacuated out of the region, officials said. Navy doctors are investigating what they say is an unusually high rate of the illness among service members who were in Liberia only briefly last month on a peacekeeping mission, then returned to a three-ship amphibious group offshore.

The 51 sickened represent almost a fourth of soldiers who went ashore to help West African peacekeepers last month.

Scientist finds rhinoceros skeleton in South Dakota

WASHINGTON — Buffalo and antelope weren't the only critters to roam the Great Plains.

The National Park Service announced this week that it has identified fossil remains excavated from South Dakota's Wind Cave National Park as belonging to — of all things — a rhinoceros.

According to park service paleontologist Greg McDonald, who made the find, the animal was a smaller, distant cousin of the rhinos in present-day Africa, and lived approximately 32 million years ago. "Back then, the climate of South Dakota was more like Florida's," McDonald said Tuesday. "The area was heavily forested. The grasslands we know as the Great Plains were only just beginning to emerge."

Senate Democrats back in Texas say they'll fight on

FORT WORTH, Texas — The Democratic senators who returned to Texas for the first time in six weeks and their counterparts in Washington repeated their pledge this week not to abandon their fight against a Republican redistricting plan.

The 10 holdout senators, who left the state July 28 to scuttle Gov. Rick Perry's second special legislative session, were given a heroes' welcome at a raucous airport rally in Laredo. "We will fight every day in every way until we win," said Sen. Judith Zaffirini, the first of the Democrats to exit the private plane that ferried the group from Albuquerque, N.M., back to Texas.

The decision to return came after the 11th member of the group, Sen. John Whitmire, defected and gave the Republican-dominated Senate the 21 members it needs to conduct business. When the 11 left, the 31-member Senate was paralyzed because the state Constitution requires that at least two-thirds of the members be in the chamber to conduct business.

That business will resume Monday when Perry's third special session on congressional redistricting begins. Perry and other GOP leaders are pushing for redistricting because the 17-15 advantage the Democrats enjoy in Texas' U.S. congressional delegation runs counter to the strength Republicans have demonstrated in recent statewide elections.

Nation in brief

Comedian Tom's bongos bring prison term, fine

PITTSBURGH — Tommy Chong, who played one half of the dope-smoking duo in the Cheech and Chong movies, was sentenced to nine months in federal prison and fined $20,000 Thursday for selling bongos and other drug paraphernalia over the Internet.

The 65-year-old was allowed to remain free until federal prison officials tell him in a few weeks where he must report to prison.

Chong also forfeited about $100,000 for his arrest on federal drug paraphernalia charges. He'll spend a year in probation after he's released from prison.

His Nice Dreams Enterprises, which made a line of marijuana bongos and pipes, was to be sentenced later Thursday. Under federal law, the business itself can be placed on probation or face other sanctions.

Chong pleaded guilty in May to conspiring to sell drug paraphernalia and pleaded guilty on behalf of Nice Dreams Enterprises, which did business under the name Chong Glass.

Arts on Tour opens season with Acadian folk quartet

The Times-News

A little folk music, a little laughter, a little gospel, a dozen handbells and a whole lot of moves will highlight the Magic Valley Arts on Tour season that begins Monday.

• Barchois, Monday, 7:30 p.m., College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium, Twin Falls. Tickets: $14 for adults, $10 for students and children.

Before there was Cajun music, there was Acadian music—the former term is just a bad English translation of the latter. Both originated in Nova Scotia and the Evangeline region of nearby Prince Edward Island; it's just that the British kicked most of the French out of Canada's Maritime Provinces after they won the French-Indian War and those Acadians resettled in Louisiana, where they eventually became Cajuns.

"You can't swing an accordion these days without hitting a Cajun band, but Barchois—a folk quintet from Prince Edward Island—is an unusual chance to hear the musical template for Cajun and zydeco.

Barchois is a rhythmic, high-voltage musical style of Celtic influence, born in the heart of the French community and kept alive for 2-1/2 centuries. Their show combines the local fiddling style with contemporary arrangements of old French songs, innovative step-dance choreography, and a sense of humor that is inspired by their homeland.

All four members of Barchois—fiddlers Louise and Albert Arsenault, pianist Chuck Arsenault—are multi-instrumentalists, vocalists and percussive step-dancers and have grown up immersed in the musical traditions they present.

Frears' bright lights, ugly city

By Glenn Lovell
Knight Ridder Newspapers

Part dreary expose, part fractured fairy tale, the latest from Britain's Stephen Frears takes the most unsavory of topics—the black market in human kidneys—and turns it into an upbeat, mostly satisfying tale of survival in the Big Seedy City. This is one of those modest imports that can be enjoyed more for its character portraits, which are complex and poignant, than for its rather melodramatic story line.

Like Frears' first international hit, "My Beautiful Laundrette," "Dirty Pretty Things" deals with strangers in a strange, often inhospitable land. This time, however, instead of London's Pakistani community, the emphasis is on its illegal immigrants from Africa and the Middle East. Okwe (Chiwetel Ejiofor) is a Nigerian doctor without papers, forced to work as a cabby and night porter; the Turkish Senay (Audrey Tautou of "Amelie") is employed by the same hotel and later by a sweatshop run by a sadistic leech. Though from different social strata, Okwe and Senay occupy the same boat, and it's taking water fast. Which is why they ally against a mercenary co-worker and the omnipresent immigration authority.

"Dirty Pretty Things" isn't as good as Frears' "Dangerous Liaisons" and "High Fidelity," but it's well-meant and impassioned, thanks mainly to the charismatic Ejiofor, whose physician speaks for a large and growing subculture when he says, "We are the people you do not see. We drive your cars, clean your houses, wash your clothes,

'Mexico' hits valley screens

New to the valley

"Cabin Fever" - Teenagers head to a cabin in the woods and encounter a flesh-eating virus. With Rider Strong, Jordan Ladd, Joey Kern, Corina Vincent and James DeBello.

"Dirty Pretty Things" - Stephen Frears' brisk killer of a thriller, set in London's underground economy of immigrants and illegals, stars the remarkable Chiwetel Ejiofor as a cab driver who moonlights as a hotel night clerk and discovers a brutal conspiracy. 1 hr. 34 R. (graphic surgical procedures, profanity, drugs, sexual candor, violence)

"The Legend of Suriyothai" - A splendid and bejeweled historical epic set in 16th-century Thailand and centered around the exploits of a queen who sacrifices everything to save her king and her kingdom. Lavish spectacle and amazing battle scenes. R (violence, nudity, adult themes)

"Matchstick Men" - The arrival of neurotic con-man Nicolas Cage's daughter disrupts his latest scheme. With Sam Rockwell, Alison Lohman and Bruce McGill. Directed by Ridley Scott.

"Once Upon a Time in Mexico" - Writer-director Robert Rodriguez's El Mariachi (Antonio Banderas) is back in action, recruited by corrupt CIA agent Johnny Depp. With Salma Hayek, Mickey Rourke, Eva Mendes, Danny Trejo, Enrique Iglesias, Marco Leonardi, Cheech Marin, Ruben Blades and Willem Dafoe.

"The Secret Lives of Dentists" - Campbell Scott and Hope Davis star in this delicate, melancholy rumination on the institution of marriage, directed by Alan Rudolph and based on a Jane Smiley novella. It doesn't all work, but it resonates. R (sex, profanity, adult themes)

"Swimming Pool" - Francois Ozon's English-language debut stars the author as a mystery writer vacationing in the south of France, and rudely interrupted by a trashy French teenage sexpot (Ludivine Sagnier). Intrigue and resting psychological tensions ensue, but, alas, so does a somewhat dunky, ambiguous ending. R (nudity, sex, language, violence, adult themes)

"Bruce Almighty" - Jim Carrey with Divine powers? Heaven help us! Heaven - in the form of Morgan Freeman as God in a maharishi tunic - helps Carrey, an aspiring TV news anchor in "Bruce Almighty," a charming comedy about the uses and abuses of omnipotence. PG-13 (profanity, sexual content, crude humor)

"Capturing the Friedmans" - Andrew Jarecki's wrenching chronicle of a Long Island family whose paterfamilias pleads guilty to dozens of counts of pedophilia although he claimed innocence - because he may have been guilty of sex crimes even more heinous. No MPAA rating (sexual candor about molestation)

"Dickie Roberts: Former Child Star" - David Spade shines in the title role of this raunchy, but sweet-natured comedy as a 35-year-old car parker who envies his big comeback role in an upcoming Rob Reiner picture. With his advance for a tell-all memoir Dickie pays a family to live with them for about a month in order to recapture the lost childhood he feels he needs to seem like the "real person" Reiner wants for his movie. this and much more plays out more persuasively - and hilariously - than one might imagine. With Mary McCormack, Craig Bierko, Scott Terra, Jenna Boyd, Jon Lovitz, Rob Reiner. (139, PG-13)

"Finding Nemo" - Who lives in an anemone under the sea? Little Nemo! When this frisky orange clownfish (think candy corn with fins) breaks free from the Great Barrier Reef, he proves to his timid dad that there is nothing to fear but fear itself. Though not as great as "Toy Story 2" and "Monsters, Inc.," Pixar Animation movies that are the gold standard for family movies, "Finding Nemo" is a delightful underwater adventure. G (scenes of loss, separation and suspense)

"Freaky Friday" - Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan are unpredictable and inspired in this otherwise cheesy remake of the movie about the misunderstood Mom and misunderstood Teen who have new appreciation for each other when they exchange bodies for a day. 1 hr. 33 PG (course language)

"Jeepers Creepers 2" - In this slow-building sequel to the 2001 fright-fest, the half-man, half-bat, all-demon Creeper wakes from a 23-year slumber ready to eat flesh and terrorize folks in the dusty back country of Somewhere, USA. R (violence, gore, profanity)

"L'auberge espagnole" - Literally translated as "the Spanish inn," but apparently French slang for a melting pot of cultures, a free-for-all, Cedric Klapisch's love-song to the new Europe is set in Barcelona; where a clutch of twentysomethings, each from a different corner of the continent, share an old apartment. When a French-economics student enters the picture, screwball antics ensue. R (sex, profanity, adult themes)

"Le Divorce" - James Ivory's deliciously droll adaptation of the Diane Johnson trigedromy of manners about Americans in Paris. Naomi Watts and Kate Hudson are the free-spirited Californians mystified by the rigid social conventions of their host country, personified by the delightful Leslie Caron and Thierry Lhermitte. PG-13 (discreet violence, sexual candor, profanity)

"My Boss's Daughter" - The thing is, the movie is not awful. It is a genial youth comedy that sees Ashton Kutcher well as a vehicle. As a lowly researcher at a publishing company, Kutcher

Twin Falls faces surprising Nampa squad

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

Get geared up for football Friday night - The Varsity page is on D4

TWIN FALLS - Friday is another test for the Twin Falls Bruins.

Nampa (1-0) comes to town on the heels of a 39-32 upset road win over perennial Class 5A power Eagle while Twin Falls (2-0) enters the high school football contest fresh off an impressive 50-21 win at 4A Mountain Home.

"You know they will be jacked coming off a win against Eagle," said Twin Falls coach Gary Krumm. "Our kids feel pretty good. We've had excellent practices."

Which 5A team will cool off after kickoff 7:30 Friday night at Bruin Stadium?

The Twin Falls defense was impressive against Mountain Home. Two big plays - a 63-yard run and 40-yard pass - kept the Bruins from holding the Tigers well under 100 yards of total offense.

"We dominated defensively," Krumm said. "We wore down Mountain Home."

Senior Kyle Gambrel shined in relief duty for injured outside linebacker Mitch Smith, who is healthy this week. Gambrel collected nine tackles and "really sparked the defense," Krumm said.

They face a more volatile offense in Nampa's Wing-T, which scored four touchdowns in the fourth quarter to pull out a win at Eagle.

"We will see a better team on offense one that put up 39 points against a good Eagle defense," Krumm said.

Their leader is versatile senior quarterback Philip Bettis.

Second-year Bulldogs head coach Jim Whinery likes to send Bettis out on the

Utes rally to beat California, 31-24

SALT LAKE CITY - Brandon Warfield scored his third touchdown of the game on a 14-yard run with 1:06 remaining as Utah rallied to beat California 31-24 Thursday night.

Warfield was held well below his average of 177 yards per game, finishing with 94 on 30 carries, but he could not be stopped in the fourth quarter. He carried seven times for 46 yards on the final drive, ending it by breaking in on an option around the right side and diving across the goal line.

Alex Smith was 15-of-27 for 136 yards and ran for a touchdown in his first start for the Utes (2-1); he won in front 47,68 red-clad fans - the largest crowd to see a football game at Rice-Eccles stadium.

The Utes, who led 21-7 at halftime, were forced to rally after allowing 17 straight points in the third quarter.

Adimchinobe Echemandu ran for 80 yards and a touchdown and Jeff McArthur had 130 yards on eight catches, including two touchdowns for the Beavers, who are down in the fourth quarter.

Minico sophomore recovers after rupturing spleen in practice

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A little after 4 p.m. Monday afternoon, Minico sophomore running back Aaron Phillips was trying to fight his way through a hole in a blocking and tackling football drill.

Hours later, he was fighting for his life in the intensive care unit of Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

Phillips had taken a shot on the side of the ribs in the drill, rupturing his spleen.

"No one knew it at the time."

"I just figured he had the wind knocked out of him," Minico junior varsity coach Steve Barnes said at the team's practice Wednesday.

"It wasn't a hit that you don't see a hundred times a day in practice. It wasn't one of those where the coach gets up screaming, 'That's what we're looking for. I don't know whether to say it but just right or just wrong.'"

"Almost dead wrong."

"The doctors kept saying 'Life threatening,'" said Aaron's mother, Jean Phillips. "The doctor said his spleen was just cut in half like a semi drove through it."

The medical staff didn't let on to him how serious it was.

"I think they were trying to protect me," he said from his hospital bed. "But I was in a lot of pain. And I was shaking really hard and they kept throwing blankets on me."

They weren't trying to hide it Thursday, when he was well on the road to recovery.

"They said that if he had waited another hour, I'd be dead," Aaron said, his voice still scratchy and hesitant and weak.

He is already out of intensive care.

Twist to the routine

No one would have guessed he would have ever been at the hospital at all Monday as Aaron squatted next to the players in the gym trying to catch his breath. By the time the team moved to the next drill, Aaron told Barnes that he was feeling better. But things were getting worse as he filled with blood from internal bleeding.

His mother is still having trouble believing it.

"You would never dream that you could send your kid to school in the morning, and in the evening he would be fighting for his life," she said. "A nurse told me, 'You have no idea how fortunate you are. You're going to take your son home. It was close. I don't know if you know how close.'"

She began to light-back-tears, sitting across from Aaron in his hospital bed. He looked away as if to try not to think about it.

It didn't take long for Aaron to realize things were going downhill Monday after getting back in line for more drills.

"He said, 'Coach, it's getting worse,'" Barnes said.

Barnes then took Aaron to the coach's room and called Boyd Phillips at work to pick up his son. But Aaron wanted to play through the pain, Jean said. Barnes wouldn't let him, realizing that the injury was more serious than anybody originally suspected.

But he still had no idea how serious - "I nearly fell over when I heard how serious it was,"

Minico High School assistant football coach Steve Barnes talks with a player during a practice. Barnes recognized the need for a possible medical alert when sophomore Aaron Phillips complained of pain after a drill Monday. Phillips had suffered a ruptured spleen and needed to get to a hospital.

But he still had no idea how serious - "I nearly fell over when I heard how serious it was,"

Barnes would later say.

"At this point, I figured he had some bruised or cracked ribs," Barnes said. "I wanted him to see a doctor. I've been coaching for 18 years, and it's my tendency to err on the side of caution, if anything. Thank God, I did."

Still battling

Time was becoming critical.

Aaron was already home when Jean arrived from running some of the couple's other five children around.

"He was grayish white and didn't look good when I got there," Jean said. "I've always known that he has a high tolerance for pain. He's not going to fess up if he's hurting."

So she tried to push him to the evening clinic in Burley but was held up for 15 minutes by the road construction entering town from Rupert.

"He started going into shock," Jean said. "So, I have a 2-year-old and I got his blanket and put it on Aaron and tried to get him to calm down."

At the evening clinic, Jean was told to wait in line. But that didn't last long when the staff saw Aaron's condition. They told Jean to get Aaron down the street to the emergency room, immediately.

"His stomach was already swollen up like a basketball," Jean said.

Once Aaron was diagnosed with a ruptured spleen, the big issue became whether they could save the organ while keeping him alive.

"At first, they were going to pull it out," Jean said. "But then Dr. (Paul) Dearing said, 'No. He's young enough and strong enough and athletic enough that he'll be able to recover.'"

But they wouldn't know for 48 hours whether Dearing was right. And it was risky, since Aaron could continue to lose blood.

"Dr. Dearing, he was just such a miracle," Jean Phillips said. "You could tell he really cared. And he took readings every few minutes at first to make sure he was OK. And then he took them every hour."

Back to better

It was important to Dearing and to Jean.

Driver pursues dream

Local racer looks to make NAPA 150

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Regardless of how he finishes, Bruce Quale will be one happy man Saturday night.

The Twin Falls driver will take a race in the NASCAR Nextel Series Northwest Series NAPA 150 for the first time. It's been something he's wanted to do since the first time he saw the race seven years ago.

"Ever since they first came here I thought, 'Man, that would be an awesome deal to do that someday,'" Quale said. "A lot of things came together. If I'd known, would have asked around earlier."

The first step was finding a top level sponsor for the race, one of the NASCAR Southwest Series. Eddy McKean, came up with reasonable offer after the last Northwest tour stop in June at Magic Valley Speedway.

"He'd mentioned a few times he always wanted to run," McKean said. "I decided to help him out and help him get in the show."

McKean is renting his backup car to Quale. Judging from last week's practice run, Quale has a competitive vehicle, running about 10 seconds off the pace set by McKean's top car.

"It's actually the newer car but we just haven't got all the bugs out of it yet," McKean said. "We went back to the old car because it's still a tick better."

MVC boys shut out Wendell, 3-0

By Steve Turner
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Christian Conquerors stayed true to their name as they defeated the Wendell Trojans 3-0 boys-high school soccer - 3 Thursday at Ascension Field.

Leading the way for Magic Valley Christian was Jeremiah Vandenberg, who scored a goal and had two assists.

Wendell actually led in shots on goal, 12-11, but the Conquerors first two shots of the first half by Michael Allen (12th minute) and Jeff Sweet (14th minute) found the net, putting Wendell in an immediate hole.

The game's final goal by Vandenberg, who was left alone on the right side, was perfectly set up with a floating pass over the goalkeeper's head.

"I kept my eye pointed and ready to see the top of the goal," Vandenberg said. "I knew when I wanted to put the ball and I hit my spot."

The win was important for the Conquerors (1-1), who were blown out in their first outing of the year.

Sports marked the second anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks with moments of silence and poignant reminders, from American flags on the greens at the PGA Tour's John Deere Classic to the names of victims displayed on the scoreboard at Tampa's Tropicana Field.

Each hole on the Tournament Players Club golf course in Silvis, Ill., flew an American flag instead of the traditional yellow numbered ones. At Tampa, two message boards said "We Remember" and "9-11-01" and the names of victims slowly scrolled over a waving flag.

With flags at Yankee Stadium at half-staff, the New York Yankees had a moment of silence during a low-key ceremony before their game against Detroit. Color guards from the New York City Police Department and Fire Department were on the field as "God Bless America" was sung, and a pair of fans behind home plate held up an American flag.

Potent offenses collide

By Kevin Hall and Scott Thompson Times-News writers

WENDELL — If Kimberly hopes to shed the three-game losing streak it currently has with longtime rival Wendell, the Bulldogs are going to have to shut down the Trojans' triumvirate of quarterbacks: Tyrel Davis, tailback Cody Howerton and all-purpose back Jysen Lancaster for starters. The three Wendell athletes accounted for 30 of Wendell's 50 points Friday at Wood River and are a big reason Wendell has opened 2-0 with blowout wins at Valley and Wood River.

"Cody Howerton is kind of a special player. But Tyrel and Jysen are also both gifted athletes," Wendell coach Jerry Diehl said. "What we like to do is get you to the perimeter and spread the defense out. Then we can run off tackle, or up the middle, or wherever — we do what they do defensively."

As happy as Diehl is with his potent offense, it's on defense where tonight's game with Kimberly will be won or lost. The series dates back to the 1950s, when Kimberly and Wendell each played Big Five Conference with Glens Ferry, Shoshone and Valley.

"I think it's going to be a really good ballgame," Diehl said. "It's going to be one of those games that comes down to making adjustments. They're a pretty good team and we got some pretty good players."

Specifically players such as fullback Ricky Zdrov, tailback Jim Reeves and quarterback Andy McGrew.

Reeves scored twice and Zdrov led the Bulldogs with 85 yards rushing on 11 carries with a score in Kimberly's season-opening, methodical 31-0 rout of American Falls.

"We're going to key on their formations and their backs and what they got their guards on," Diehl said. "They got that Zdrov kid; he's big and he can run like the wind and he's a good kid. He's going to be tough to stop. And

Game of the Week

Kimberly vs. Wendell

Where: Blaine Scott/Sheidan Swenson Memorial Field in Wendell

When: 7 p.m. today

Series: Wendell leads 17-16 since 1970

Last meeting: Wendell won its third straight in the series 34-18

Keys to victory: Kimberly — on offense, the Bulldogs have to control the ball and avoid turnovers while getting Ricky Zdrov open to make plays and Andy McGrew time to pass. On defense, they must stop Wendell's triumvirate of quarterback Tyrel Davis, tailback Cody Howerton and all-purpose speedster Jysen Lancaster. Wendell — on offense, Wendell must open holes for Davis and Howerton while keeping Kimberly off the field. On defense, the Trojans must avoid mistakes and giving up the big play.

What to watch: Kimberly's passing game is good.

Diehl said he and Kimberly coach Kirby Bright are friends dating back to their time coaching in Buhl in the early 1990s.

"He knows what we got and we know what they got, so we'll decide it on field."

Best of the rest

Burley at Declo

Declo football coach Kelly Kidd sees tonight's game with Cassia County rival Burley as a win-win situation.

"If we win, it's a big confidence builder for us," Kidd said. "If we lose, it's a reality check that we have to get back to work. I think the people in the stands have a lot more to lose than the players."

But don't fool yourself: Kidd would like to see last year's 21-14 loss to the Bobcats. Declo, 1-0 after beating South Fremont a week ago, won the first two meetings of this three-year-old rivalry.

And Burley, 0-1 after falling to Bonneville last week 47-13 in a game they trailed just 13-7 going into the fourth quarter, wants to get untracked under first-year coach Scott Paine.

"Except for the outcome, I was really happy with how we played against Bonneville," Paine said. "Our defense was great. You look at 47 points, but that wasn't the defense. We went for it a couple times inside our 40 in the fourth quarter. We held them to 13 points through four quarters. That was good enough to win."

The Bobcats' strength is on the lines, where Cole Jones leads them on both sides of the ball.

"He leads us on offense and he leads us on defense," Paine said. Burley is utilizing a power running game to take advantage of the Bobcats' superior strength.

"We have the parts that will allow us to throw the ball more than in the past," Kidd said. "They won't be able to put everybody in the box against us."

Kickoff is 7 p.m. at Declo.

Carey at Camas County

Carey has dominated its Sawtooth Conference rival recently, winning eight of the last 10 meetings, including six in a row from 1993-98. But the team has alternated winning the past four times. Winner usually grabs driver's seat to playoffs.

"They have good athletes in key spots," Krumm said. "They have good quickness. The Treasure Valley coaches say they are a lot better than in the past."

The Bulldogs also have good size on both lines with a NFL-style 4-3 defense anchored by two solid tackles in juniors Van Dunn and Fernando Pedraza and a terrific middle linebacker in Ruiz.

"Our offensive line knows we have to get a hit on him and slow him down," Krumm said. "They have to take care of the tackles and their middle linebacker because we like to run the ball to holes."

"We're going to find out how good we are up front."

If the O-line can protect him, Bruins senior quarterback Luc Martin will look to build on a good outing last week when he went 10-of-12 for 185 yards and three touchdowns, all to Eric Snow, who had four grabs for 124 yards.

There are some injury concerns on offense. Starting running back Alex Castagno missed Wednesday's practice with a deep thigh bruise while starting tight end Joey Martin went down with a banged knee Wednesday.

Castagno has been a workhorse so far, gaining 429 yards on 61 carries, scoring six touchdowns in two games.

Both are priced Thursday and will start Friday.

Notes

Awards: Defensive player of the game honors went to Nathan Robertson, who had 10 tackles (five for loss) and one fumble recovery. On offensive team, kicker Carl Ott, the school's boys soccer goalkeeper, connected on all six PATs last week while Zach Schaefer got the last-minute award for fielding all seven punts returned cleanly. Offensive tackle Craig Barnes was cited as the practice player of the game for his extra work in motivating other players. Snow garnered the offensive honor. Twin Falls' 22-8 record last week is a Twin Falls 1985, 21-13. The team's last playoff, 1995, 37-27 Bulldogs win at Nampa.

Sauter's run-ins draw drivers' ire

By Rick Minter
Cox News Service

RICHMOND, Va. — Johnny Sauter appears to be making a bid to become NASCAR's newest wild boy. The 25-year-old driver from Needah, Wis., had a run-in with Mark Martin during the Sharpie 500 at Bristol Motor Speedway that left Martin with a wrecked car and harsh words for Sauter.

"That boy's a weapon," Martin said.

In Friday's Funai 250 Busch Series race at Richmond International Raceway, Sauter slammed into Matt Kenseth twice in the final four laps to get his second win in the series.

Kenseth, one of the mildest drivers in the series, was uncharacteristically critical after the race. Kenseth had recovered from the first hit, then was knocked out of the lead on the final turn of the race and fell to sixth.

"I passed [Sauter] fair and square, and he just ran into me," Kenseth said. "I don't race that way."

Sauter said Saturday that he's making no apology for his aggressive driving.

"It was just good short-track racing and tempers flare," he said. "We were racing hard and Matt took it kind of personal and tried to wreck me under caution."

Winner dodges as field tangles at Richmond

By Rick Minter
Cox News Service

RICHMOND, Va. — Ryan Newman stretched a tank of fuel for 131 laps to win the Chevrolet Rock & Roll 400 at Richmond International Raceway, his sixth triumph of the season.

But most eyes were on the Knock and Roll 400, which was taking place in Newman's rearview mirror as four of the top five runners traded blows in the final laps of the Winston Cup race.

The first major contact came on Lap 381 when fourth-running Robby Gordon spun in Turn 3 after contact with Jeff Burton.

"I will wreck him in the next couple of weeks," Gordon said. Then Ricky Rudd and Kevin Harvick collided, sending Harvick into the wall with four laps to go. Harvick spun into the wall, while Jeremy Mayfield seized the opportunity and claimed the runner-up spot.

Rudd finished the race in third, followed by Burton and Rusty Wallace. As Rudd rolled to a stop, Harvick pulled his wrecked Chevy alongside and jumped on the hood of Rudd's car.

Rudd said Harvick caused the spin and that he gave up a spot to Mayfield while trying to give him room to save his car.

But he was hot at Harvick for damaging his car on pit road after the race.

"It's ridiculous that NASCAR puts up with this," Rudd said. "We planned to run this car next week, and now look at it."

Matt Kenseth, who entered the race with a 583-point lead over runner-up Dale Earnhardt Jr. in the points standings, brought out the third caution flag of the race when he spun on the frontstretch on Lap 54.

He said his car was handling poorly just before he spun into the wall.

"I couldn't hang onto it," he raved to his crew.

His crew patched up his No. 17 Ford and 50 laps later he was battling for a spot in the top five. He finished seventh.

Two early-race, multi-car crashes on the backstretch ruined the night for several drivers.

A seven-car crash on the backstretch on Lap 94 ruined the night for Bill Elliott, Dave Blaney, Kyle Petty, Steve Park and Johnny Sauter.

Nine green-flag laps later, Greg Biffle bumped John Andretti exiting Turn 2. That contact sent Andretti into the wall and six trailing drivers scrambling to get through the wreckage.

Todd Bodine and Christian Fittipaldi were the big losers. Bodine was forced to park his No. 54 Ford and finished 42nd after starting 12th. Fittipaldi was credited with 43rd.

Tempers flare after race

It got kind of crowded in NASCAR's big red truck late Saturday night as officials summoned two entire teams after a pit road altercation broke out following the Chevy Rock & Roll 400.

Ricky Rudd, who finished third behind winner Ryan Newman, ran into the back of Kevin Harvick in the closing laps of the race on the 34-mile oval at Richmond. The contact sent Harvick spinning into the Turn 1 wall. Rudd said Harvick climbed on top of Rudd's car, the straightaway, and that he gave up the runner-up spot to Jeremy Mayfield as he slowed in an attempt to let Harvick right his car.

But Harvick was looking for revenge and drove onto pit road and into the side of Rudd's No. 21 Ford.

Harvick, who wound up 16th, threw his HANS device at Rudd, and then members of Harvick's Richard Childress Racing crew — and Harvick — climbed on top of Rudd's car.

NASCAR summoned both teams to the red truck, which serves as its mobile office. NASCAR official Jim Hunter emerged from the truck and vowed to put an end to the "bench-clearing mentality" that took place after the race.

"What happens on the race track will stay on the race track and we'll deal with that the best we can."

"It's our responsibility to deal with that."

Hunter didn't give specifics, but he indicated that stiff penalties are forthcoming.

"We are not going to condone this type of behavior," he said. "What happens on the race track will stay on the race track and we'll deal with that the best we can."

"There is a very strong possibility of penalties," he said. Rudd said his crew stayed away from the fray and doesn't deserve to be penalized.

"We had one guy there," Rudd said. "It was the Wood brothers against [Richard Childress Racing]."

"They had 30 guys there using our car as a doorman."

—Rick Minter

Just after the ensuing restart, Tony Stewart and Jeff Burton collided entering Turn 3 with Stewart skidding into the wall.

"You can thank Jeff Burton for that mess," Stewart told his crew. He spun two more times and finished 27th, three laps off the pace.

Jimmy Spencer kept his No.

7 Dodge among the lead pack for most of the race. He was running in fourth place on Lap 316 when he suddenly keyed his microphone and in a dejected voice told his crew chief Tommy Baldwin: "It blew up, Tommy."

He ran eight more laps before parking for the night.

Nadeau returns to site of crash

By Rick Minter
Cox News Service

RICHMOND, Va. — Most race drivers go to the track to get as much as they can in the way of trophies and cash—and points. Jerry Nadeau came to Richmond International Raceway this past weekend to see how much he could give back to the people who saved his life after a horrific crash at the track on May 2.

Nadeau, still recovering from a head injury suffered in that crash during practice before the spring race at Richmond, met with doctors and patients at Virginia Commonwealth University Medical Center in Richmond on Friday and Saturday to thank the rescue workers who removed him from his car and treated him at the track.

During an emotional visit to the hospital, Nadeau received an ovation from the staff and met with a patient, Tommy Bradshaw, who for three weeks has been in the same brain injury unit where Nadeau was treated.

Quale

Modifieds season points titles in 1997, 1999 and 2001. He's stepped back from racing regularly in the past couple years due to other commitments, but he couldn't turn down this chance.

"I'm pretty excited about it," Quale said. "Eddy has a top-notch backup car."

Quale went out and got additional support from sponsors including Prudential Idaho Homes and Properties, Smith Roofing, Darren Hall Construction, Pepsi, Canyon Motors and a group of fan and friends who pooled together some money.

Now, he has to qualify for the 24-car field, with time trials beginning at 6 p.m.

"That's a big step," Quale said. "(McKean's) confident we can."

"I'm still a little nervous." If he does qualify, expect those butterflies to be in full flight before warmup laps Saturday night.

In Modifieds, I'm pretty comfortable," Quale said. "I will have butterflies until the green flag falls."

Racing his first Northwest Series race on his home track should help him overcome some of those nerves.

And he's grateful McKean has given him a chance.

"He's been a great help," Quale said. "It's been really fun and they are a great group of guys."

Besides McKean, Nick Lynch of Burley will race. His brother, Scott, won't, but will serve as crew chief. Brett Thompson of Jerome is also scheduled to race.

Teipid tourism

Twin Falls' tourism traffic is a bit sluggish this season. Here are a few visitor counts from the Buzz Langdon Visitor Center, at the south end of the Perrine Bridge:

August: 6,549
That's down 4 percent from the 6,798 visitors during August 2002 - bad news to tourism-dependent businesses. The August visitor counts were even larger in 2001 (7,244) and 2000 (8,640).

Season-to-date: 27,757
That's down 5 percent from the 29,156 visitors last year through August. The visitor center's season starts in mid-March each year.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - The chief of Sprint Corp.'s wireless division is taking over as president and chief operating officer of the telecommunications firm, a move that Sprint called a major step in its restructuring effort.

Regional group grapples with budget

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Leaders of a regional marketing organization ran into snags Thursday as they considered a proposed budget of roughly $22.9 million.

Board members of Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization disagreed about whether to roll over the previous year's unspent cash into the new regular operating budget. And some asked for more detail about spending plans, while others called for more flexibility for SIEDO's executive director to spend on the unexpected.

SIEDO board members reached no decisions Thursday as their meeting stretched into overtime and members tricked out. Their votes will be collected later by e-mail.

The budget they're directing is pieced together from dozens of contributions - which organizers prefer to call investments - aimed at attracting new employers to southern Idaho, promoting the retention and expansion of existing employers and building support within the community for economic development.

In short, it's about creating and keeping jobs.

A two-county effort launched SIEDO a little over two years ago to market all of Magic Valley. Started by Jerome and Twin Falls investments from both businesses and public entities, SIEDO now has funding from Mini-Cassia's private-sector, too. SIEDO is well into its third fiscal year, which runs from July 2003 through June 2004, but the budget remains unsettled. On Thursday, executive board members presented a proposed budget showing $22.635 in the pot. That's $189,500 in new contributions, $6,000 of in-kind (non-cash) contributions from the College of Southern Idaho, $2,686 in carryover from a special marketing project and $24,449 in unspent carryover from previous fiscal years. Executive leaders propose spending virtually all of that.

Tougher mortgage rules

David Burnett, owner of Deep South Home Gallery in Montgomery, Ala., stands in his nearly empty sales lot Wednesday. Burnett says business has been down, and thinks new Fannie Mae loan restrictions on manufactured homes will further hurt the industry.

Fannie Mae cracks down on manufactured-home loans, worrying industry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Manufactured homes are a popular choice for low-income families, but new regulations from mortgage giant Fannie Mae could price some of those would-be homeowners out of the market.

Concerned about rising loan delinquencies and foreclosures, Fannie Mae has begun requiring a 10 percent down payment for 30-year mortgages on such homes, plus a fee of one-half of 1 percent of the loan amount.

For people who cannot afford 10 percent, Fannie Mae has introduced a 20-year loan requiring a 5 percent down payment. However, monthly payments are higher.

Manufactured homes are built in factories and assembled on building sites. They include mobile homes, though many manufactured dwellings have characteristics found on traditional single-family homes - pitched roofs, dials and porches.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development says mobile or manufactured homes account for one-third of all new single-family homes. There are about 7.2 million such homes, many in rural areas and the South.

Sheila James is getting ready to start her two children on an allowance.

Her daughter, Nova, is 6 and in first grade, while 4-year-old Sean is a preschooler. "They are emerging shoppers," said James of Norfolk, Va.

But James is struggling with how to design her family's allowance system - specifically whether to tie the money to chores.

"Some chores just need to be done and there shouldn't be monetary compensation," James wrote to me in an e-mail. "But it seems concerned about rising loan delinquencies and foreclosures, Fannie Mae has begun requiring a 10 percent down payment for 30-year mortgages on such homes, plus a fee of one-half of 1 percent of the loan amount.

The average sale price is roughly $49,000, compared with about $164,000 for a traditional single-family home, according to the Manufactured Housing Institute, an industry trade group.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., has sent numerous letters to Fannie Mae chief executive officer Franklin Raines asking him to withdraw the down payment guidelines, which went into effect Aug. 24.

"To make it harder for people to buy homes in this way is a great mistake," said Frank, ranking member of the House Financial Services committee.

According to Fannie Mae's Deborah Tretler, the changes were prompted by a spike in delinquencies and foreclosures on manufactured home loans. That came after many home sellers and lenders in the late 1990s extended loans to buyers with poor credit histories or not enough income to pay their mortgages, industry experts say.

"We don't serve borrowers well when it is easy for a borrower to get into a home under very flexible terms, only to have them lose their home, their credit ruined and their homeownership dreams turned into a nightmare," said Tretler, vice president of single-family homes.

Lance George, research associate for the private Housing Assistance Council, said of the changes: "In some remote rural areas, that will knock people out" of the housing market.

But he also said: "It's not all Fannie Mae's fault. It's the industry. They let a lot of the retailers go wild and give loans to every-

Retailers focus on profitable holidays

Knight Ridder News Service

Last month, in the heat of Houston, more than 1,000 managers from Wal-Mart Stores Inc. gathered to preview holiday merchandise in preparation for the retailer's top-selling season.

The employees roamed through store aisles featuring shelves laden with tree-trimming décor as executives rallied the managers into a holiday spirit - despite a nagging fear that consumers will keep close watch on their spending.

"We believe Christmas comes no matter what," said Tom Williams, a Wal-Mart spokesman. With brick-and-mortar sales ramping up, mass-market retailers such as Wal-Mart have turned their focus to "ramping up" business for the last two months of the year. The holiday season is a crucial time for retailers, where some reap more than 30 percent of annual sales.

Yet the momentum of last year's dismal sales - a 2 percent growth rate that was the worst showing in a decade - is still a fresh memory for retail executives. And while the statistics showed signs of perking up in recent months, the environment is far from robust.

Whether or not consumers will be more willing to spend this year than last is an ongoing concern.

Retail executives surveyed by the Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi said they had higher hopes for consumer spending in the next six months, but they seemed guarded when placing inventory orders for the holidays.

"We continue to know consumers will continue to buy cautiously," said Ellen Tolley, spokeswoman for the National Retail Federation in Washington, D.C. "A general sense for consumers is to buy it when you see it."

Buyers for Target Corp.'s discount stores planned cautiously this year even though the company is optimistic about sales for the second half of the year, said Brie Heath, a spokeswoman for the discount chain.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. ordered more than a year's inventory for the holiday season so not to tip its hand to competitors, a spokeswoman said.

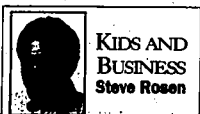

"It's a season that you never want to be caught flat-footed," he said. "The burden is on us to stay in stock."

Sears, Roebuck & Co. declined to disclose its inventory plan for the holiday season so not to tip its hand to competitors, a spokeswoman said.

Planning for the holidays takes place about a year in advance, and orders are typically placed in

Give kids an allowance at the right time, in the right way to me that doing out money without having to earn it helps the child become an adult looking for a handout."

She raises an interesting issue, one many parents can identify with.

I believe every child should receive an allowance as a way to learn how to manage money. But when it comes to chores, I'm firmly in the camp that believes compensation should not be tied to work. Nor should the allowance be used as a disciplinary tool.

Some readers have told me about elaborate job charts and other systems they've set up to ensure that the work is completed before money gets doled out. And I understand the rationale - that it gets the kids used to the way they'll get paid when they become grownups with jobs.

It's just not my approach. I don't have the time or energy to manage the chores my children do or don't do. Nor am I interested in debating the quality of the job because, believe me, my three kids can be expert negotiators.

Moreover, what are you going to do when you child says, "I don't want to clean the bathroom this week because I don't need the money?"

Do you really want to go down that path? To be sure, my kids are expected to perform some basic house-keeping duties, like making their beds, setting the kitchen table for dinner and keeping their rooms clean. Although there are no financial ties to those privileges can and do get yanked if certain things don't get done around the house. That's more appropriate, in my mind, than a key to money.

If they are interested in an extra job, such as washing my car or helping in the garden, they'll earn extra cash. But the primary

Stocks end slide in light trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rose for the first time in three sessions Thursday although the market's course was choppy as investors weighed up the earnings from Adobe Systems Inc. and brokerage downgrade of IBM. Trading was light and Wall Street subdued on the second anniversary of the Sept. 11 terror attacks.

Despite the market's weakness this week, analysts remain upbeat and say investors are too. The analysts have noted that the market was expected to retreat after the major indexes had pulled together a four-week winning streak.

"It is never going to go away. It is always going to be in the back of our minds," said Brian Pears, head equity trader at Victory Capital Management in Cleveland, adding that the anniversary is more of an emotional issue on Wall Street, rather than a factor in trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 39.30, or 0.4 percent, to 9,459.76, having shed 165.83 in the previous two sessions. The broader market was also higher. The Nasdaq composite index rose 22.28, or 1.2 percent, to 1,846.09, following a two-day decline of 64.81 on Wednesday, as Nasdaq suffered its worst day in nearby two months, dropping 49.62. The Standard & Poor's 500 index advanced 5.50, or 0.5 percent, to 1,016.42, having lost 20.72 in the previous two sessions. Wall Street has been climbing since mid-March, when its major gauges fell to their lows for the year. The advance was fed by the stronger economic growth and corporate profits that investors have sought for more than three

Mortgage rates edge downward after steady rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a fairly steady upward climb since late June, mortgage rates edged down this week. The average rate on 30-year mortgages declined to 6.15 percent for the week ending Sept. 12, compared with last week's 6.44 percent. Freddie Mac reported Thursday in its weekly nationwide survey.

gates, a popular option for refinancing, rates fell to 5.46 percent from 5.77 percent. Rates for one-year adjustable mortgages dipped to 3.87 percent from 3.98 percent.

In the middle of June, rates on benchmark 30-year mortgages slid to 5.21 percent, the lowest level in more than four decades. But since late June, rates on those mortgages as well as other types have mostly risen. Among the factors contributing to that trend are signs that the economy is picking up speed and concern about growing federal budget deficits, economists say. As a result, bond rates are up, causing long-term mortgage rates to rise.
