U.S. kills nine police officers

Case of mistaken identity in Iraq came on day of increased violence

By Ken Ditzian Knight Ridder News Service

FALLUJAH, Iraq — U.S. troops opened fire Friday on a group of Iraqi security officers who were chasing suspected bandits, killing nine police officers and wounding nine others in what appeared to be the latest in a string of tragic errors by American forces.

The 1 a.m. incident near the town of Fallujah happened during one of the bloodiest 48-hour periods of fighting in Iraq since President Bush declared the conventional war over on May 1. Two U.S. soldiers were killed and as many as 19 coalition were wounded in four separate attacks, military officials and witnesses said.

The two U.S. soldiers were killed in a firefight during a raid about 3 a.m. in the town of Ramadi, 30 miles west of Fallujah, the military said. Seven others were wounded.

In another attack, in Fallujah, at least four bystanders were injured after American soldiers returned fire when their convoy was attacked by bombs and rockets, witnesses said.

The four, including a 1-year-old girl shot in the head, were brought to the hospital where a Knight Ridder reporter was interviewing wounded police officers.

Haythem Saleh said he was visiting relatives in the area when he

Crapo: Salmon talks to focus on Idaho water

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Providing accommodations for salmon without disrupting Idaho's economy will be a focus of upcoming negotiations between water users and environmentalists.

U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo said Friday.

In a phone interview from Cancun, Mexico, where he is attending a World Trade Organization meeting, Crapo said he hopes for collaboration in the salmon discussions.

Crapo offered to lead negotiations among environmentalists, Idaho water users and federal river regulators in an attempt to resolve the issue outside the courtroom.

Environmentalists in late August sent the Bureau of Reclamation and NOAA Fisheries a 60-day notice of intent to sue, charging that Upper Snake River operations ignore downstream needs for salmon and steelhead in violation of the Endangered Species Act.

Craig decries suit against Filer dairy

Issue is too complicated to be resolved in courts, he says

By Julie Pence Times-News writer

FILER — U.S. Sen. Larry Craig says he is disappointed the Idaho Conservation League has filed notice to sue a large Filer dairy for not reporting ammonia- and hydrogen sulfide emissions.

"The way that Sen. Craig sees it right now is that the dairy issue is huge, complicated and controversial," said Will Hart, Craig's spokesman. "A lawsuit does nothing to solve the problem."

Craig, who was recently recognized by the National Farmers Union for his support of the dairy industry, would prefer that neighbors of concentrated animal feeding operations try to work together with dairymen to solve odor and pollution issues that have resulted from the large operations, Hart said.

The Conservation League earlier this week announced intentions to sue Filer dairyman Hank Hafziger for not reporting ammonia and hydrogen sulfide pollution of more than 100 pounds per day. The group contends that federal law requires Hafziger to report to the National Response Center at the federal level, the Idaho Bureau of Hazardous Materials at the state level, and at the local level the coordinator for planning emergencies.

In its letter of intent to sue, the Conservation League said it believes Hafziger has exceeded the federal standards for ammonia and hydrogen sulfide emissions on a daily basis for more than five years. According to federal law, the group says it is allowed to seek civil penalties of up to $27,500 per day.

There are some industrial facilities within the state that already report their releases, including J.R. Simplot Co. in Heyburn, Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Paul and U.S. Ecology Idaho Inc. in Grand View. No Idaho concentrated animal feeding operations are reporting, but they don't appear to be exempted from the requirement, said Mark Masarik of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Boise office.

"The strategy the Conservation League is employing is not unheard of. The Sierra

Music legend Cash dies from diabetes complications

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Johnny Cash, a towering musical figure whose rough, unsteady voice championed the downtrodden and reached across generations with songs like "Ring of Fire," "I Walk the Line" and "Folsom Prison Blues," died Friday. He was 71.

Cash, known as "The Man in Black," died at 2 a.m. in Baptist Hospital of complications from diabetes that resulted in respiratory failure, said his manager, Leo Robin.

The funeral services will be held next week, but a public memorial is being planned and the date will be announced later.

In his songs, Cash crafted a persona as a

“He was never dictated to by a trend or convention or by corporate powers that be. He did it his way.”

— but there was always a dark edge.

One of the most haunting couplets in popular music comes from "Folsom Prison Blues," which went to No. 4 on the country charts in 1956: "I shot a man in Reno, just to watch him die."

Forty-seven years later, Cash's arresting video for "Hurt" was nominated for six MTV Video Music Awards, winning one. His deeply lined face fit well with his voice, which was limited in range but used to great effect to sing about prisoners, heartache and tales of everyday life.

As news of his death spread, other musicians praised Cash for his independence, rebellious streak and

Dairy

 Club, for example, is suing a large Oklahoma hog farm based upon non-reporting, and a group with the acronym of CLEAN is suing Premium Standard Farms in Missouri.
 Hagler has been in the news for his "flush" system for cleaning manure out of his milking barns at both his farms, now owned by Dean Swager, and the Desert Rose Farms dairy near Elmer. Recently Gov. Dirk Kempthorne traveled to Magic Valley to announce the state will no longer approve flush systems on new dairies. Flush systems recirculate lagoon water to flush manure out of barns.
 Hagler said he is in the process of changing from a flush system to a "scrape" system, which relies on machines to push manure out of the barns.
 While some dairymen are moving away from flush systems to help reduce ammonia and hydrogen sulfide emissions and odors, Craig says he is working on securing funding in the new energy bill to be debated this fall. The pollution problems of large dairies are on the way to being resolved through dairymen working with the congressional and state and federal government agencies, Hart said.

Analysts see gap in time on review of bin Laden tape

WASHINGTON - U.S. intelligence believes that the voice recordings of Osama bin Laden and his chief deputy on a videotape released by al-Qaida this week were made separately, perhaps months apart, suggesting bin Laden may be ailing and that the two men may not be together, as previously assumed.
 The video, which shows bin Laden and his top aide, Ayman al-Zawahiri, hiking on a rocky mountain, may be a 2-year old, according to an administration official and an intelligence source. They both look healthy, contrary to reports that al-Zawahiri had been seriously wounded and that bin Laden was ill and perhaps had been wounded.
 "The tape contains what appears to be (separate) audio recordings dubbed over an dated 'video footage,'" said an administration official familiar with the CIA's analysis of the video.
 "Do I think they were in the same room taping at the same time? I think it's unlikely," the official said.
 Separately, a counterterrorism intelligence source said that the bin Laden audio track on the tape has a "different tonal quality" from the al-Zawahiri track and appears to be "an older-generation tape."

Water

 contains about 8 percent of its capacity.
 There is always less water in the fall than at the beginning of the growing season, but watermaster Ron Carlson predicted that this year's final drafting of Jackson Lake will leave the reservoir as low as it has ever been.
 "In the worst case, if we had a winter like we did in 1977 and a summer like 2003, we would have a devastating situation with crop losses from Ashton to Twin Falls. But that's not what we're predicting," Carlson said. "If we have a normal snow year, we'll refill the system. We don't have to have a monster year to make everything right."
 Eastern Idaho water managers predict that there will be 250,000 to 400,000 acre feet of carryover. An acre foot of water is the volume that would cover one acre of ground with water 1 foot deep; it's equivalent to 325,851 gallons of water.
 In the Boise and Payette systems, the carryover situation is far better, officials said. Although Arrowrock Reservoir has been drained almost completely to allow for work on the dam, other impounds still have at least 50 percent or better storage.
 Idaho Water Resources Department spokesman Dick Larsen said southwest Idaho is looking at an "essentially normal water year."
 The key factor for agriculture, fish survival and water-based recreation next year will be the amount of snowfall in the mountains this winter.
 Current long-range precipitation models by the National Weather Service Climate Prediction Center indicate Idaho should have about normal precipitation until springtime. After March, there's a chance the state could get more rainfall than normal through early summer, especially in the Panhandle.
 Idaho also has a chance of warmer-than-normal temperatures this fall and in early winter. But spring and early summer in 2004 are expected to produce about normal temperatures.
 Even if this winter brings above-normal snowpack, it takes a year or more to recharge groundwater stores. And because of the lower water table from recent drought years, Larsen said the department has been flooded with applications for new or deeper wells.
 About 1,200 applications have been received so far this year, Larsen said, mostly for agricultural purposes. A normal year usually brings about 1,000.

Man walks free thanks to DNA test

TWO RIVERS, Wis. (AP) - A man proven innocent by DNA tests of an attack on a jogger is free this week after spending 18 years in prison.
 Steven Avery, 43, was greeted Thursday by family and friends when he arrived at his parents' rural home in eastern Wisconsin. "I feel terrific. The wind, no bars, no fences," he said. "I figured this day would come sooner or later."
 Avery was sentenced in 1985 to 32 years in jail on charges of sexual assault, attempted murder and false imprisonment.
 A law-school group, the Wisconsin Innocence Project, worked on the case for two years, becoming involved after Avery's lawyers questioned the woman's identification of her assailant.

Salmon

 Idaho water users were outraged and called on environmentalists to withdraw their lawsuit. Water users said it threatened to dry up farms by putting Idaho water on the hook for endangered fish.
 At Crapo's request, environmentalists agreed Thursday to withdraw their notice of a lawsuit, at least for 30 days, and both sides agreed to participate in discussions.
 Crapo said Friday that building confidence among the parties and establishing a collaborative approach to dealing with the problem are among his hopes for negotiations. And that could be beneficial in other arenas.
 "I'm very aware there have been years of discussion," Crapo said.
 Salmon negotiations are occurring on other fronts, including the Snake River Basin Adjudication, the gigantic Idaho water rights case. In that forum, mediation has been under way since 1999 among water users, the Nez Perce Tribe and the state and federal governments over the tribe's historic fishing treaty rights.
 Environmentalists are not at the table in those confidential SRBA talks.
 "That is deeply troubling," said Laird Lucas, a Boise attorney with Advocates for the West, a legal group representing environmentalists.
 The SRBA mediation involves only parties who hold water rights tied in the dispute and is a forum bound by legal participation requirements. Solutions proposed through those talks have not been made public as mediation continues.
 When the Upper Snake River operations plan was issued in 2001, it was supposed to be in place for one year, as a settlement was anticipated in SRBA mediation. The environmentalists say. But the plan was extended until 2005 when an SRBA settlement was not reached.
 The Upper Snake River plan leans heavily on a blueprint for the entire Columbia River system that has since been thrown out by a judge. And that is why environmentalists say they are now challenging Upper Snake River operations.
 Groups threatening to sue are the Idaho Conservation League, the National Wildlife Federation, Idaho Rivers United and American Rivers.
 Crapo said the talks he plans to lead will be specific to the environmentalists' challenge surrounding the Upper Snake River. "I personally believe we have a view of it in the context in which it arose," he said.
 The Nez Perce case already has been decided in the SRBA at the District Court level. Former water Judge Barry Wood in 1999 ruled that 1855 Nez Perce fishing treaty rights do not entitle the tribe to water right for virtually the entire river. The tribe appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court, which is scheduled to hear the appeal in November in Twin Falls.
 The appeal will focus on legal issues surrounding the Nez Perce Tribe's 1855 treaty and not necessarily salmon recovery strategies. The Nez Perce Tribe says its treaty is useless because river conditions have deteriorated so much. It is using the SRBA, an administrative sorting of Idaho water rights, to file claims to water in the Snake River in an attempt to recover endangered fish.

Panel: Line failures hit before blackout

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — An official timeline of the massive Aug. 14 blackout released Friday describes a series of transmission line failures south of Cleveland that occurred before the outage cascaded out of control, but it does not conclude whether Ohio utilities reacted soon enough to contain the advancing problem.

"The fail-safe (mechanisms) in the system weren't sufficient," Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham said Friday in a briefing with Canadian officials.

But he added that the timeline not intended to explain the blackout's cause. The two-nation investigation continues into possible equipment failures, system flaws and human error, officials said.

Even as the investigation continues, the authority of federal regulators to require a strengthening of the Midwest grid faces a serious congressional challenge. The outage exposed breakdowns in communication and cooperation among the utilities in the area that must be remedied, many grid officials have said.

"If you stop where we are now, that is a problem in the Midwest," said William Museler, chief executive of the New York Independent System Operator, the state's grid coordinator.

The timeline, posted on the Energy Department's Web site, tracks an escalating spread of transmission-line and powerplant outages beginning shortly after noon Eastern Daylight Time until 4:13 p.m. on Aug. 14. By then, major metropolitan areas in Michigan, Ohio, New York and southern Canada, and small parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut, had been blacked out.

Like charts of military campaigns against besieged cities, the timeline maps show northern Ohio communities increasingly isolated as power corridors from the south and east and then the north were cut off by line outages.

Beginning at 4:09 p.m., cities and factories in northern Ohio and eastern Michigan were forced to draw power from only three corridors — northeast Ohio and Pennsylvania along Lake Erie, western Michigan, and Ontario.

Chaos erupted a single minute later, at 4:10 p.m. Transmission lines across Michigan and northern Ohio were automatically disconnected from the grid by protective relays, functioning like circuit breakers to safeguard lines against overheating as power flows surged. Twenty generators went off line along Lake Erie, also to avoid damage from power surges.

Then lines along Lake Erie's southern shore went out, and a tide of electric current bypassing that area pushed its way into New York, crossed into Canada and headed to the Detroit area, where the lights had remained on, for a moment.

Next, in that same minute, New York's power ties to the mid-Atlantic, New England and part of Ontario disconnected, blacking out most of New York. Eastern Michigan was the last area to go dark, at 4:11 p.m.

Lawmakers won't push disclosure in 9-11 report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting a request from other senators and the Saudi government, leaders of the Senate Intelligence Committee said they would not seek to declassify a secret section of a report dealing with foreign support for the Sept. 11 hijackers. Releasing the information "could adversely affect ongoing counterterrorism efforts," committee Chairman Pat Roberts, R-Kan., and Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said in a letter this week to Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla.

Graham asked the committee in July to start procedures to declassify the material. Graham, a presidential candidate, was co-chairman of the Sept. 11 inquiry and a former chairman of the Intelligence Committee.

"This is a serious disappointment from the current leadership of the Senate Intelligence Committee," said Graham spokesman Paul Anderson. He noted that both Graham and Sen. Richard Shelby, the inquiry's top Senate Republican, have said that most of the section could be released without harming national security. In their letter they said they based their decision on their review of the documents and a closed-door hearing with FBI Director Robert Mueller and CIA Deputy Director John McLaughlin.

Bush praises Georgia division

3rd Infantry lost most soldiers in Iraq

FORT STEWART, Ga. (AP) — President Bush eulogized a sea of tan-clad soldiers from the division that notched some of the Iraq war's main victories but also suffered stinging losses, telling them Friday they were helping America win the war on terror.

"We're rolling back the terrorist threat, not on the fringes of its influence but at the heart of its power," Bush said at the home of the Army's 3rd Infantry Division. The division launched the ground invasion that began the Iraq war and led the charge into Baghdad to oust President Saddam Hussein.

A hot sun beat down on about 15,000 soldiers in desert fatigues and their family members, many toting newborns. But the heat did not waver their enthusiasm for Bush, who spent a long day traveling to Georgia, Mississippi and Texas and back to Washington for a weekend at Camp David, Md.

In Georgia, Bush's main focus was Iraq and the war on terror. He scarcely mentioned Saddam's alleged weapons of mass destruction, which still haven't been found even though they were the president's primary rationale for war. Instead, he emphasized what he said was Iraq's position as the central front in the global anti-terror battle, even though the administration has never proven a link between Saddam's regime and al-Qaida terrorists.

Bush is pushing for a resolution to build a multinational force to help U.S. troops with peacekeeping and to gain international help for Iraq's reconstruction. "It's time for others to join us,"

Bush said. "No free nation can be neutral in the fight between civilization and chaos."

The president also acknowledged the 3rd Infantry's sacrifices. The division and affiliated units lost the most people in Iraq — more than 40.

It also faced repeated duty extensions that frustrated loved ones.

Rival Gephardt compares Dean to Gingrich

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — President Bush's rival, Rep. Gephardt on Friday likened rival and Democratic front-runner Howard Dean to Newt Gingrich, the personification of right-wing Republicans whom Democrats have demonized as Public Enemy No. 1.

Gephardt, the former House Democratic leader, resurrected Dean's 1996 comments on overhauling the Medicare program and increasing the Social Security retirement age to link him to Gingrich and the GOP policies of the "Contract With America." The critique reflected Gephardt's determination to cut Dean's advantage in Iowa as well as energize his own campaign.

"Howard Dean actually agreed with the Gingrich Republicans," Gephardt told a union audience.

"It was in this period when Gingrich said Republicans wouldn't immediately kill Medicare. Instead, they would let it wither on the vine," Gephardt said. "And it was also during this time that Howard Dean, as chairman of the National Governors Association, was supporting Republican efforts to scale back Medicare."

Court hands Texas Democrats a loss

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A three-judge federal appeals panel on Friday dismissed a lawsuit filed by Democrats in the Texas Senate who had hoped to derail a new round of Republican-led congressional redistricting.

The Democrats said they would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. The ruling represented another setback for Democrats who have been fighting for several months to thwart GOP efforts to redraw the state's congressional map. They say it would hurt minority representation in Congress.

Director's ex gets custody of kids

Natalie Turner and her children, Carter, 7, and Clara, 4.

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They won't have custody of their grandchildren, but they hope to be part of their lives.

On Friday, in a 4th-District courtroom in Heber City, Utah, it was decided the children of the former executive director of the Hailey Chamber of Commerce will reside in Park City with their father.

The next step is for their grandparents to file a petition for grandparents visitation rights.

"We felt it would be better to see if we could just work it out," said David Turner, father of Natalie Turner, 31, who was killed last month by Utah law enforcement officers outside of Park City. "We feel it's in the best interests of the grandkids — in all our best interests — to get along."

Rick Green, attorney for the children's father, John Pochynok, echoed the same sentiment.

"It's a tragedy and hopefully we took steps today to begin the healing," Green said.

Green said it will be up to the Turners to prove that visitation is in the children's best interest. Once they file for grandparents visitation, certain agreements made Friday will be put into place.

"At that point, the stipulation will be put in place that acknowledges John Pochynok's custody and parental rights," Green said. "No agreement has been reached on any grandparents visitation. We hope to do whatever is best for the kids."

Other agreements made Friday also will go into effect. A protective order filed by Pochynok against David Turner will be dropped in favor of a mutual restraining order.

"It means we stay away from him and he stays away from us," Turner said. "We stay out of each other's business. We live a peaceful co-existence without bothering each other. We call a truce."

The Turners' request for a new guardian ad litem for the children will also be honored.

Turner said both parties also agreed not to release any specific information about the children to the press, which includes their pictures. The photo in today's paper was provided several weeks ago by David Turner's parents, Keith and Ruth Turner of Twin Falls.

David Turner said he just wants to see the best outcome for the grandchildren.

"We wish them the very best of luck raising the children," Turner said. "We just want to be the good, supportive grandparents we've always been."

Turner said he plans to file for grandparents visitation in Wasatch County.

Green said his client has never spoken against the idea of allowing his children to continue a relationship with their grandparents.

"He has not ruled out grandparent visitation by any means," Green said. "He's only said we need more information from the experts."

Green said the children are already working with a child psychologist.

Bald Mountain builds half-pipe

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The timing couldn't have been more perfect. Crews finished digging Bald Mountain's first half-pipe just as the season's first snow showers dusted the peaks of the mountains north of Sun Valley.

"It was the first we've ever dug. It was pretty challenging," said Beau Burks, who owns Burks Excavation. "It was a funky situation, because we were already working on a slope that had a 30-degree angle. And all the slopes on the half-pipe have to be just right."

Burks' Hailey-based excavation crew used a 50,000-pound excavator to dig the pipe, which left a deep semi-circle gash on the far side of Lower Warm Springs directly beneath the Race Arena run.

It is eight to 10 feet deep, 360 feet long and 40 feet wide at its base.

Come winter, snow will be piled up to make the walls even higher. Crews also welded pipes for two new snowmaking guns to provide more snow to that area since half-pipes require a tremendous amount.

And they built settling ponds and silt catches below the half-pipe to prevent erosion next spring since there is no opportunity to establish vegetation this fall.

This winter a snowcat will be specially outfitted to carve the half-pipe out of the snow. Sun Valley built a half-pipe on Dollar Mountain, a smaller ski hill across the valley from Bald Mountain, but discontinued its use because it got such little attention. Resort officials have been searching a few years for a suitable location on Bald Mountain, but it's been difficult because the mountain is so steep.

The half-pipe — similar to some of the pipes found at skateboard parks — has been long-awaited by some snowboarders and freestyle skiers who are salivating at the prospects of performing acrobatic tricks on the curved inclines.

It's also been pushed by those who say it's needed to attract families with kids to Sun Valley, although not all experts agree with that conclusion.

Some skiers, on the other hand, have lamented the construction of the half-pipe.

Burks, for one, can't wait to try it out. "It'll be exciting for sure," he said. "It's definitely going to be testing grounds for us. And although, as they play with different things to see how they work."

Sun Valley Sales and Marketing, Director Jack Sibbald said the Excavators work on the new half-pipe, which sits within view of Warm Springs Lodge at Bald Mountain. The attraction should draw freestyle skiers and snowboarders.

half-pipe likely won't open on Thanksgiving Day when the mountain is scheduled to open because so much snow is needed to build the walls. Crews hope to open it in December.

The half-pipe can be accessed by the Greyhawk chairlift without having to go to the top of the mountain. But Sibbald said there are no plans to offer discounted passes just for that chair.

Forest Service will build Soldier snowmobile parking
FAIRFIELD — Construction of a snowmobile parking lot is set to begin near Soldier Mountain.

The new parking area — scheduled for completion by Sept. 26 — will accommodate 16 vehicles and trailers, the U.S. Forest Service reported.

The parking lot will be a quarter of a mile up Couch Summit Road from the Soldier Mountain Road junction. Couch Summit Road will remain open during construction, but there might be traffic delays.

The project includes vault toilet facilities, drainage culverts, a cattle guard and fencing.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation provided a total of $44,000 in grants through its off-road vehicle and recreational trails programs.

The Camas County Road Department will match the grant with labor expenses, and the Forest Service is contributing $25,000.

The restrooms are among the main expenses. They will be installed this fall if the weather holds.

Otherwise, they will be installed in spring 2004.

"The project will provide a safe and enjoyable location for snowmobile enthusiasts to park their vehicles," said Ann Nissen, acting recreation forester for the Fairfield Ranger District.

Felon faces 22 years in prison on drug charge

By Rebecca Meany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A convicted felon was sentenced to 22 years imprisonment Friday after pleading guilty to one count of trafficking in methamphetamine. He will be up for parole in 12 years.

Five other counts — one for drug delivery and four for possession, all of which are felonies — were dismissed.

Fifth District Judge John Holbert handed the sentence to Richard Urrizaga, 46, saying "a punishment should achieve a greater objective than punishment for punishment's sake. It should make a drug trafficker stop and think before they do it again."

The mandatory minimum sentence was five years' imprisonment. Prosecutors asked for 20 years in life, meaning his wouldn't be up for parole for 20 years.

"We asked for a sentence to reflect his danger to society," said Grant Loeb, Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney.

Urrizaga was also fined $25,000, $10,000 more than the mandatory minimum.

Group keeps watchful eye on court

By Rebecca Meany

TWIN FALLS — Ten members of the group Court Watch, an organization that monitors the judicial system, attended Friday's sentencing of methamphetamine trafficker Richard Urrizaga.

Members of the group were split in their opinion of the 22-year sentence. Some were satisfied, while others wanted a tougher penalty.

"We watch the defense attorney, the prosecutors, everything that goes on," said member Mary Dana, who noted that the group's mission is not a witch hunt, nor is it to pressure judges. "We watch to see if the sentences are fair and sufficient, how well attorneys present their cases and if they are prepared."

Though it has never found cause to proceed with a formal complaint, the group has a form ready to submit comments to the court if it is displeased enough with a sentencing.

The group got started five years ago with the assistance of Nancy Howell, Twin Falls County

Second district resists AG's request to list school problems

TWIN FALLS (AP) — A second school district has decided to resist the aggressive from the attorney general's office to list its building safety problems and how it intends to fix them.

Whitepine School District joined Cottonwood in objecting to the state's attempt to force them into either listing building deficiencies and being subjected to huge property tax increases to pay for fixing them or denying any problems exist and fixing the state off the hook for listing them.

And Lapwai Superintendent Harold Orr said that while he will formally advise the state of his district's serious mold problems he intends to make clear that much of the responsibility for fixing the problems lies with the Legislature.

It is a joint responsibility to provide a thorough education," Orr said. "It's a shame when these responsibilities are in conflict and cause students to suffer."

The renewed state-school district confrontation was set up earlier in the week when the Supreme Court lifted a lower court ban on the attorney general collecting the safety information.

Fourth District Judge Deborah Ball had stopped the process in June while she determined whether the law authorizing it was constitutional. Ball has promised a decision next month but has already publicly cited what she sees as serious problems.

The law opens school districts to building safety problems to being sued to have them fixed, and if they cannot afford the improvements, the courts must impose a property tax increase to pay for them.

Deputy Attorney General Michael Gilmore, the lead attorney for the state in the 13-year legal battle, said he is trying to avoid those lawsuits by giving districts a chance to resolve problems.

"What we want to do is get things fixed, and there's no reason to have litigation with someone who's fixed everything," Gilmore said.

Idaho is the only state that provides no direct financial help for school buildings and still requires a two-thirds majority to approve school construction bonds.

The state does subsidize some bond interest payments.

Rotarun dedication will honor those who helped develop ski hill

HAILEY — It stands in the shadow of Bald Mountain, a 475-foot bump in a windswept canyon.

A monument will be unveiled naming the mountain "Art Richards' Mountain" after the dentist who helped get the ski hill up and running. And the main run will be named "Logans Run" after Bob and Betty Logan, who have voluntarily overseen the operation of the ski hill every weekend since 1989.

"I really don't know how to take it," said an obviously flattered Bob Logan who, with his wife, has been nicknamed "Mr. and Mrs. Rotarun."

If you go...

- What: The Rotarun dedication and barbecue party.
- When: 2 to 5 p.m. today. The dedication itself will be at 4:30 p.m.
- Where: The Rotarun Ski Hill is located two miles west of Hailey out of Croly Canyon (turn west onto Bullion Street from Main Street) on Rodes Drive.
- Activities: There will be face painting, trampoline jumping, clowns and other activities for youngsters and a three-hole Frisbee Golf tournament, Paragliding demonstration and live band for the adults. Refreshments will be served.

through its own slack period for a few years.

Finally, volunteers replaced the J-bar in 2000 with a top-to-bottom Poma lift that they bought in Austria for a discounted price of $180,000. A plethora of volunteers, led by former Olympian high jumper-turned-engineer Dick Fosbury erected the lift amid waist-high sagebrush.

Today organizers are finishing up a three-year study examining the feasibility of snowmaking. It looks as if the ski hill might be able to establish water rights and buy a portable snowmaking gun for less than $100,000, said Fred Bloedel, a retired aerospace engineer from Seattle, the fund-raiser for the Doppelmayr Poma lift.

The new gun should pose no problem for neighbors, Bloedel added. It's so quiet that you can talk on your cell phone while standing next to it.

Rotarun is the only ski hill that offers night skiing within a three-hour drive in any direction. And, with passes costing $6 for kids and $12 for adults, it offers an affordable place for local skiers.

Between 40 and 50 youngsters and another 20 to 25 adults used the facility on an average day last winter, even though snow conditions were marginal, Logan estimated.

And the ski area attracts a couple hundred people for special events such as telemark races, snowboard X-games and the snowmob derby, which the Blaine County Recreation District charged up two years ago.

Hundreds of Hailey school children have also enjoyed free ski lessons at what some have dubbed "the little hill that could," Bloedel noted.

Boise River Festival files for bankruptcy

BOISE (AP) — The city's showcase summer event is filing for bankruptcy after a 12-year run.

The board of directors has decided there is no viable restructuring plan for reorganization of the Boise River Festival," the board said in a statement.

In previous years, the festival has estimated that about 500,000 people attend the event each summer.

Using an economic impact formula from the International Festival and Events Association, planners calculated the event attracted $25 million to the Boise area each summer.

But director Beth Knox said this year's celebration lost $160,000, despite a one-year cancellation of the Nice-Lite Parade and solicitation of $70,000 in donations from the community.

She earlier predicted the festival would end its fiscal year in August about $525,000 in the hole, down from $569,000 the year before. No current figures were announced Friday.

She said the festival "simply cannot remain in business in the face of the sluggish global economy."

The Iraqi security officers - some of whom were wearing uniforms, witnesses said - were killed on a highway west of Fallujah in front of a Jordanian field hospital.

Albaid said two of the vehicles were white with blue painted doors, the American-approved indicator of an Iraqi police car.

The police killings came just three days after U.S. troops shot and killed one Iraqi policeman and seriously wounded another after their convoy was bombed in Fallujah, according to a western news report.

Albaid said two of the vehicles were white with blue painted doors, the American-approved indicator of an Iraqi police car.

Fallujah, west of Baghdad, is such a hotbed of anti-American sentiment that U.S. troops have withdrawn from the town and left security to national and local police forces.

Albaid said two of the vehicles were white with blue painted doors, the American-approved indicator of an Iraqi police car.

Soldiers from that division killed an 18-year-old girl two weeks ago after her 13-year-old brother fired shots out the door of their house during a raid south of Baghdad.

Albaid said two of the vehicles were white with blue painted doors, the American-approved indicator of an Iraqi police car.

In July, American soldiers gunned down two unarmed Iraqi policemen who were chasing local suspects in Baghdad, in what military officials later called a regrettable tragedy.

Albaid said two of the vehicles were white with blue painted doors, the American-approved indicator of an Iraqi police car.

The facts of Friday's incident were not entirely clear, but accounts from Iraqi witnesses were consistent in certain key respects.

United Nations votes to lift sanctions against Libya

UNITED NATIONS - The U.N. Security Council on Friday lifted 11-year-old sanctions against Libya, formally ending a ban on arms sales and flights imposed after Moammar Gadhafi's government was implicated in a 1988 airliner bombing over Scotland.

Nation/World in brief

The United States and France abstained. The remaining 13 council members supported lifting the sanctions imposed in the wake of the Pan Am bombing over Scotland, that killed 270 people.

has rejected U.S. demands that it allow verifiable and permanent dismantling of its nuclear weapons programs.

The vote was more symbolic than substantive because the sanctions have been suspended for more than four years.

Jerusalem - Israeli leaders shrugged off condemnation of their decision to "remove" Yasser Arafat whenever it chooses.

However, U.S. sanctions against Libya will remain in place. Those sanctions include a ban on American oil companies doing business in Libya, which is among the top 10 countries in the world in oil reserves.

Ararat emerged from his compound in Ramallah for a second straight night Friday and rallied hundreds of supporters, saying: "To Jerusalem we are going as martyrs in the millions."

U.S. deputy ambassador James Cunningham said the American decision to allow the lifting of U.N. sanctions "should not be misconstrued by Libya or by the world community as tacit U.S. acceptance of the government of Libya's harassment of its people."

Ararat's spokesman said the Palestinian foreign minister to emphasize the United States' opposition to expelling Arafat.

Cunningham said the United States was concerned about Libya's poor human rights record, rejection of democracy, history of involvement in terrorism and pursuit of weapons of mass destruction.

Secretary of State Colin Powell telephoned both Shalom and the Palestinian foreign minister to emphasize the United States' opposition to expelling Arafat.

N. Korea rejects U.S. demand to give up its nuke program

SEOUL, South Korea - North Korea again rejected a U.S. demand to end its nuclear weapons program, saying Friday it has no intention of disarming itself in the face of perceived American aggression.

Ararat's spokesman said the Palestinian foreign minister to emphasize the United States' opposition to expelling Arafat.

The commentary by North Korea's official newspaper, Rodong Sinmun comes a day after U.S. officials said in Washington that the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel rods at a key North Korean facility apparently has ceased, although the reason was unclear.

White House spokesman Scott McClellan said "it would not help matters; it would only serve to give him a broader stage."

North Korea can extract weapons-grade plutonium from its pool of 8,000 rods to build several nuclear bombs. The United States has long believed that North Korea has at least one or two nuclear bombs and could have five or six within a matter of months.

Rain brings delight to Russia's mushroom hunters

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia - At the close of an exceptionally rainy summer, sunbathers may be grumbling, but Russia's legions of mushroom pickers are overjoyed.

The Rodong Sinmun position is not new: North Korea repeatedly

When mushroom season comes, Russians head for the forests en masse, carrying baskets and small knives. Children - even in the video-game age, are clearly excited on these sylvan ventures.

Positives are growing in Iraq

Judging from news reports, some might think that my native Iraq is in a terrible mess. Not so.

Critics see attacks on coalition troops as signs that Iraqis oppose U.S. troops. According to a British survey and an Iraqi poll, however, 76 percent and 85 percent of Baghdadis, respectively, favor the continued presence of U.S. troops. That's because Iraqis know to the core of their marrow, that after 35 years of subjugation, brutality and isolation, they need help, and if the United States left too early, disaster would likely ensue.

Considering the grip Saddam Hussein had on the country for 34 years and the complicity and loyalty he'd purchased, the attacks are no surprise, for Saddam's killers know they don't have a future in an Iraq without their boss's patronage and protection. And the overwhelming majority of Iraqis oppose the attacks, knowing that they hinder efforts to rebuild, democratize and modernize the country. With Saddam's sons dead and his quarters of the "most wanted" in custody, Iraqis are more and more assisting the campaign to destroy the remains of Saddam's terrorist apparatus.

Many who militated against toppling Saddam predicted that Iraq would descend into communal violence or civil war. Instead, Iraqis have worked together and closely with coalition authorities and troops. Local councils and courts are functioning throughout the country. Workers in schools, hospitals and government ministries have elected their own leaders - the first steps in self-government.

Growth of democracy
The seeds of democracy are sprouting, too, in the forms of private organizations and 150 new newspapers and magazines. A clean police force is being constituted, as is a defense force, to replace coalition troops. Roughly 30,000 troops and police from 30 countries are arriving, too.

Dilapidated schools and other infrastructure are being rebuilt, and the economy is being revitalized. In parts of the country that for more than 20 years were allowed only one hour of electricity a day and no clean water, basic services are now almost nonstop.

Except for the isolated contract killings and for sabotage, the country is calm and experiencing improved conditions day by day. A transitional government and a Cabinet are in place, and Iraqis will soon convene to write the country's constitution, paving the way for elections.

One Iraqi friend in America told me that his brother back home is so happy with the way things are going that he wants to build a statue of President Bush in front of his house. Another friend said his siblings told him they could finally breathe, in their homes, after years of strangling fear. My uncle in Baghdad said, "We've been brought back to life."

Freedom emerges

Experts and diplomats warned grimly that without Saddam, Iraq would break apart, destabilizing the region. Instead, Iraqis of all stripes have shown that their main allegiance is to Iraq and their main aspiration is to live freely. Most clergy have counseled patience and cooperation with the coalition, and extremists have not gathered great support. Even Ayatollah Khomeini's grandson, who went to Iraq on a pilgrimage, praised America as a liberator, urged separation of mosque and state, and called Iran "the worst dictatorship in the world," reminiscent of the "church in the dark ages of Europe." Iraq has not intruded into Iraq, and its Kurds have not risen up in secessionist revolt. Israel did not get drawn into a wider conflagration, and no friendly governments fell.

Critics also predicted that if the United States encroached on Iraqi territory, thousands of coalition troops would perish and soldiers would face urban combat, chemical and biological attacks. However, because Iraqis wanted to be rescued from Saddam, not fight for him, coalition troops faced little resistance. Instead, troops were greeted with jubilation when Iraq was freed, and they are still cheered and welcomed warmly as they carry out their duties.

Military action did not cause a refugee crisis, nor a health crisis. Environmental disaster also was averted - dams were not broken and oilfields were rescued before Saddam set them ablaze. Iraqi oil production - this time for the benefit of Iraqis - has reached 1.8 million barrels per day and will approach peak levels next year. There also was no spike in oil prices, because world supplies were not disrupted.

Woeing out terror

Many prophesied apocalypticity that attacking Saddam would unleash an explosion of anger in the "Arab street" and terrorist attacks all over. The evidence appears to argue the converse: Weak and ineffectual responses to terrorist attacks in the '80s and '90s perpetrated them, while strong action, as in Afghanistan and Iraq, halts them. Thus, the world's most powerful terrorists have been toppled, the Middle East has been moderated and some Arabs, despite their news media's obsession, watch with fascination as an experiment in representative democracy unfolds at their doorstep, an eventuality that could transform the region and counter the wave of terrorism.

During Operation Iraqi Freedom, coalition forces did their utmost to avoid hitting water-pumping stations, electricity networks, hospitals, schools and mosques that Saddam used to base weapons directed at coalition forces. Thus, by restraint, civilian casualties were kept to a minimum, and the coalition's targeting of Saddam's palaces and bases of power delighted Iraqis, who knew that their salvation was near.

Hang up on caller ID

LENORE SKENAZY

Ah, sweet mystery of life, I know you're calling. I've got caller ID. As you probably know, caller ID tells you the name and number of whoever is trying to reach you. And with this Space Age service, all the fun of picking up the phone has gone the way of "Hello!"

Perhaps you remember that old-fashioned greeting: "It's what you would utter - a little hopeful, a little tense - when you had no idea if it was your dream date, dad or dental receptionist calling. Today, about 40 percent of all phone subscribers get caller ID, and their ranks keep growing. This means chances are good that the person you are so eager to talk with has spent at least a nanosecond debating whether or not you are worthy of a chat."

And if you happen to be "Mom," often the answer is - no answer. An informal survey I conducted over the Internet indicates that Mom usually goes straight to voice mail. And mothers-in-law? Please. As one friend (who prefers to remain anonymous) put it, "My mother-in-law has an uncanny ability to call at exactly the wrong moment. Like when my kids are running around killing each other." Caller ID means never having to pick up and explain, "They love each other. Really. Those are screams of affection."

Another friend uses her extra second of in-law prep to put on a fake cheerful voice - or flee the room. And several folks admitted they will approach peak levels next year. There also was no spike in oil prices, because world supplies were not disrupted.

Not to mention several sessions of therapy. There is a reason, notes wiseacre Joan Michelson, that it's caller ID, as in "id." It lets us cut out all our subconscious aggressions.

For that caller ID was invented to subvert the American family. No, that was the separate teenage phone line. Really, caller ID was invented circa 1988 simply because the phone company is always coming up with new ways to complicate our relationships. First it was calling waiting. Do you put Friend A on hold in the hopes that a Friend B of higher quality is calling? And if Friend B turns out to be a dud, how do you get him off without actually saying, "Look, I thought you might be someone better, but... ych." Click.

Yep, that really enhanced our lives. Then came voice mail, which allowed us to annoy all callers with the most morose of messages. ("We're not home right now" - duh - "so leave a message" - double duh - "at the sound of... see, what could be? The gong? The giant burp? The marachi? No, by golly - "the beep!")

And let's not forget cell phones which have allowed us to annoy absolutely everyone in earshot - which, by the way, usually does not include the person we are talking to. ("WHAT? You're breaking up. I missed what you just - WHAT?")

And now caller ID has become a permanent part of the landscape, thanks to the increasingly popular phone service packages that include it, no charge. Sure, most people say they like it. OK, love it. It lets them prepare witty remarks and save valuable seconds by not having to ask, "Who is this?" And, of course, it screens out telemarketers.

But mostly, caller ID provides a life bereft of life's little phone surprises. This is progress only if you have already purchased your aluminum siding and talked to Mom earlier in the day.

LETTER

Vendors handled leftover game tag sale poorly

I wanted to let everyone know of our experience on Saturday with the sale of the leftover big game tags. The guidebook stated that leftover tags were to go on sale at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 30, at a first-come, first-served basis. My husband and I stopped at Jackson's Kountry Korner in Buhl on Friday to find out how the sale was going to be handled, and the cashier told us she didn't know but recommended that we get there early. I arrived first at the store at 2:45 a.m. on Saturday. When the staff arrived at 5 a.m., I again asked the cashier (a different lady) how the drawing was to be held. She also didn't know but called her manager. She was told that the tags were to be sold on a first-come, first-served basis and agreed and I was the first person there. She began taking down names as people came in, and mine was the first on her list. My husband and I then sat for an hour until the tags went on sale. Around 9:30, another employee arrived to help sell the tags. This lady then announced that she already had a list of people from earlier in the week, so I was no longer first. Not only was it not posted anywhere in the store but the other employees I dealt with had no idea of this other list. Although I waited for seven hours, I was put at the bottom of this list. The people already on the list didn't show up until well after nine. I had no chance at a tag. I don't understand why the other employees, including the manager, didn't know about this list and why something wasn't posted to inform other customers. It was certainly not handled fairly.

The way this sale was put together by the Fish and Game Department is a joke. Several vendors across the area didn't worry about the first-come, first-served policy, instead they put themselves and family and friends in first, decreasing the chances of everyone else getting a tag. We also have reason to believe that some employees of vendors were accepting money from people to have their names put at the top of the lists. This hardly seems fair, much less legal.

I wonder if anyone else in the community ran into similar problems and what should be done about it.

'Three's Company' star dies of heart problem

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Ritter, whose portrayal of the bumbling but lovable Jack Tripper helped make the madcap comedy series "Three's Company" a cash hit in the 1970s, died of a heart problem after falling ill on the set of his new TV sitcom. He was 54.

Ritter became ill Thursday while working on ABC's "Simple Rules." For Dating My Teenage Daughter, said Susan Wilcox, his assistant of 22 years. The show became Ritter's TV comeback vehicle.

He died at Providence St. Joseph Medical Center shortly after 10 p.m. Thursday, six days before his 55th birthday. The cause of death was a tear in the aorta, the result of an unrecognized flaw in his heart, said his publicist, Lisa Kusteler.

"It's just stunning, unbelievable," Wilcox said. "Everybody loved John Ritter. Everybody loved working with him. ...

Whatever set he was working on, he made it a very fun place."

"It's like there is a big tear in the world's heart," actor Henry Winkler told "Entertainment Tonight."

Joyce DeWitt, who co-starred with Ritter and Suzanne Somers in "Three's Company," told "Entertainment Tonight": "I cannot find words to express my sorrow — such a great loss to the joy in the world."

Somers, in a tearful interview on Fox's "Good Day Live," said she had reconciled with Ritter after clashing over money demands on "Three's Company."

"I learned so much from him," Somers said Friday. "He was the best physical comic I've ever watched."

Ritter was married from 1977 to 1996 to Nancy Morgan, the mother of his three oldest children, Jason, Carly and Tyler. He married actress Amy Yasbeck in 1999, the mother of Stella.

Cash

Continued from A1 made him a powerful influence in country, rock, folk- and gospel music.

"His influence spread over many generations," said Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones. "I loved him as a father and a singer. I remember years ago a big part of my repertoire was two of my favorite Johnny Cash songs, 'I Walk the Line' and 'Ballad Of A Teenage Queen.'"

Marty Stuart, who was once in Cash's band and married to his daughter Cindy, said "Cash answered to no one but himself, what he heard in his own heart and own mind and own soul. He was never dictated to by a trend or convention or by corporate powers that be. He did it his way."

Cash had been released from the hospital Tuesday after a two-week stay for treatment of an unspecified stomach ailment. The illness caused him to miss last month's MTV awards, where his "Hurt" — a cover of Trent Reznor's hard rock song with Nine Inch Nails — won for cinematography.

"To hear that Johnny was interested in doing my song was a defining moment in my life's work," Reznor said Friday. "To hear the result really reminded me how beautiful, touching and powerful music can be. The world has truly lost one of the great."

He had battled a disease of the nervous system, autonomic neuropathy, and pneumonia in recent years. His second wife, singer June Carter Cash, who co-wrote Cash's hit "Ring of Fire," died in May.

Singer Dolly Parton said, "Johnny Cash has only passed into the greater light. He will never, ever die. He will be with me more important in this industry as time goes by."

Singer Kenny Chesney said Cash was one of the first artists whose music was universal.

"Whether anybody knows it or not, they were directly or indirectly influenced by Johnny Cash," he said. "Rock 'n' roll, country, gospel, Johnny's music crossed any boundary that was put up in front of him."

Cash wrote much of his own material and was among the first to record the songs of Bob Dylan and Kris Kristofferson.

"One Piece at a Time" was about an assembly line worker who built a car out of parts stolen from his factory. "A Boy Named Sue," a Shel Silverstein song he took to No. 1 in 1969, was a comical story of a father who gives his son a girl's name to make him tough.

Cash said in his self-titled 1997 autobiography that he tried to speak for "voices that were ignored or even suppressed in the entertainment media, not to mention the political and educational establishments."

His career spanned generations, with each finding something of value in his simple records, many of which used his trademark rambling rhythm.

Cash was a peer of Elvis Presley when he began recording in Memphis in the 1950s, and he scored hits like "Hey, Pony!" during that era. He had a long-time friendship and recorded with Dylan, who has cited Cash as a major influence.

Cash won 11 Grammy Awards — most recently in 2003, when "Give My Love To Rose" earned him honors as best male country vocal performance — and numerous Country Music Association awards. He was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1980 and inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1992.

June Carter Cash, who partnered with him in hits such as "Jackson," and daughter Rosanne Cash also were successful singers. The late 1960s and '70s were Cash's peak commercial years, and he was host of his own ABC variety show from 1969-71. In later years, he was part of the Highwayman supergroup with Clayton Jennings, Willie Nelson and Kristofferson. In the 1990s, Cash found a new artistic life recording with rock-rap producer Rick Rubin on the label American Recordings. He was back on the charts in 2002 with the album "American IV: The Man Comes Around."

He also wrote books, including two autobiographies, and acted in film and television shows.

Eagles open conference play against Salt Lake

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Play time is over. The College of Southern Idaho enters the South West Athletic Conference volleyball season against the team most likely to usurp the 233 Golden Eagles - the Salt Lake Community College Bruins.

The first serve goes up at 3 p.m. in the CSI gym. Head coach Ben Stroud expects his Eagles to be prepared for an important match. "I think they'll be ready," said Stroud. "They know it is a must win. You can't lose at home and hope to host." Salt Lake (12-9) comes in healthy with considerable talent. Sophomore outside hitter Emilia Vierla of Brazil leads the Bruins with 174 kills and fellow countrywoman Ananda Lopes mans the middle. Czech outside hitter Michaela Malenoverova is healthy after getting hurt at the end of August. Freshman Laurie Chambers leads the Bruins in blocks with 61 and has 58 kills. "They have two or three good hitters and have really good size," Stroud said. Eagles fans will see a much-improved team from the Outback Steakhouse tournament. Sophomore hitter Andrezza Santos continues. Please see CSI, Page B4

Bruins battle back

Rally over Nampa moves Twin Falls to 3-0 on season

By Joe Paisley
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - They must have made that pass over the middle a thousand times in the Martins' backyard.

Friday night at Bruin Stadium, senior quarterback-Luc Martin and junior tight end Joey Martin did it again and again in the second half, powering Twin Falls to a 28-27 come-from-behind victory over Nampa in Class 5A non-conference football.

Joey Martin hauled in a 16-yard pass from Luc Martin with 3:16 remaining and placekicker Carl Ott's PAT kick into the wind was good to lift the Bruins to 3-0 on the season.

Martin to Martin over the middle was one of a couple of halftime adjustments made by the Bruins coaching staff that made a big difference in the second half. "They dropped a linebacker back and that gave us 15 yards open until he hit the safety," said Twin Falls head coach Gary Krumm. "Some of those were called and others were audibles."

Please see BRUINS, Page B2

Alex Castaigne eyes the Nampa defense as he tries to move the ball down the field. The Bruins rallied from a 24-7 halftime deficit to take a 28-27 victory Friday at Bruin Stadium.

Hornets answer questions with 27-7 win

Declo beats Burley at line of scrimmage

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

DECLO - In the Burley Bobcats, the Declo football team had the perfect test.

The two biggest question marks for the Hornets coming into Friday's game were how their minuscule line would perform against size and how their defense would stop a straight-ahead running game. The Hornets answered both questions resoundingly, manhandling the Bobcats 27-7 in a game that wasn't that close. Declo beat up Burley on the line of scrimmage and plugged up the Bobcats' running game all evening. Declo (2-0) struggled a week ago to stop the run against South

Fremont and the strength of the Bobcats (0-2) was supposed to be on the offensive line where they would run between the tackle. Defensive coordinator Ben Merrill and the rest of the staff spent countless hours to correct the Hornet run defense. It obviously paid off. "Coach Merrill and the kids deserve a lot of credit," Hornet coach Kelly Kidd said. Quarterback Ken Webb also answered any questions about the Hornet passing game as he threw one strike after another to repeat his performance from a week earlier. On Friday, he threw for three touchdowns and ran for another on a 1-yard sneak that was set up by a 35-yard pass to the 1-yard line. Webb completed 7-of-14 passes for 163 yards with many others right

Bengals look to rebound against Northern Colorado

By Jared Ehom
Times-News correspondent

POCAHELLO - It's awfully early in the season, yet tonight's football game between Idaho State and Northern Colorado has a lot riding on it - especially for the Bengals. For starters, another loss would probably drop ISU out of the national I-AA rankings. Worse, it would seriously damage the Bengals' hopes for an at-large bid to the I-AA playoffs in two months. "Every game is important to us," said ISU coach Larry Lewis. "We don't look at this game as any bigger or more important than any other game. It is just one on the schedule we have to play to get ready for the conference games." Lewis may sound as if he's not putting much importance on the game with the first-year I-AA Bears, but the mood at practice this week has been intense. The Bengals, after suffering a humbling 62-0 defeat at the hands of Boise State last week, want nothing more than to put memories of that loss behind them with an offensive explosion. "We're slightly embarrassed," Lewis said. "We know we're better than that. We're looking happy to play another game and prove we're better than that." ISU fans certainly hope so. The Bengals were limited to just 6 yards of rushing a week ago and barely 150 yards of total offense. "That's just not who we are," said ISU receiver and doer-of-the-ball or why we were so ineffective. But we know we can be better than that." The Northern Colorado (2-0) was a powerhouse at the Division II level, winning national championships in 1996 and '97. The Bears

Luc did a great job. Martin found his brother over the middle on fourth and 9 with 3:49 remaining to keep the winning drive alive. "They made great second-half adjustments," said Nampa coach Jay Whinery. "That's a tough thing to do at halftime. They're 3-0 for a reason."

Another adjustment that came up big was a pivotal defensive stand by the Bruins early in the third quarter.

The second game after Twin Falls running back Alex Castagno fumbled for the second time in the game, giving Nampa the ball with a 21-7 lead and 10:58 left in the quarter. The Bulldogs drove to the Twin Falls 18 before the Bruins forced Nampa quarterback Phillip Dettis into three incompletions — including one on fourth and 10 — and shut down running back Chris Fabel for no gain to turn the ball over on downs with 9:00 remaining in the third.

"That was the turning point," Whinery said.

That adjustment was made by the defensive line, which allowed itself to be caught upfield in the first half but held their ground and controlled the gaps in the second half.

"They hardly had to block us (in the first half)," Krumm said.

That stand started Twin Falls rally. Castagno scored from 1-yard out to make it 21-14 with the kick with 5:10 left in the quarter. Twin Falls mixed it up with short passes, including Martin over the middle on one third-down and big runs by Castagno to march 22 yards in 3:50. Nampa went three-and-out on the next series and Twin Falls started the tying drive on its own 43. Again, Martin over the middle for 23 yards on third and nine set Twin Falls up with first and goal entering the fourth quarter. Four seconds later, Castagno weaved his way in from 7 yards out for the tying score.

Nampa (1-1) would answer. And once again, Twin Falls (3-0) made mistakes that nearly cost it the game.

With four fumbles, three lost, Twin Falls tried to hand the win to Nampa, which tumbled twice and lost the ball once.

Still, the Bruins persevered. "We overcame our mistakes," Krumm said. "It tells me a lot about them."

An encroachment penalty on fourth and 3 on the Bruins' 11 kept the Bulldogs' drive alive before scoring with 5:42 left.

But a high snap on the point after kick ruined the Bulldogs' chance and a quick tackle by AJ Stone gave Nampa a six-point lead only 27:21, setting up the winning drive. Castagno rumbled for 148 yards on 28 carries while Luc Martin was 15-for-22 for 177 yards, 121 coming in the second half, and one touchdown. Joey Martin had six catches for 89 yards.

Nampa's Dettis was 8-for-16 for 186 yards, but only 35 yards came in the second half. Adam Albright had five catches for 147 yards, but only two grabs for a combined 9 yards in the second half. Tullfua ran for 51 yards on nine carries while Dettis scampered for 53 yards on five carries. Sepeti Moulou had 49 yards on 10 carries while Fabel had 35 yards on eight carries up the middle.

Los Angeles takes 1-0 lead in WNBA finals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Sparks built a 21-point lead in the first half, then waited for Detroit to catch up.

The Shock never erased their double-digit deficit, and the two-time champion Sparks won 75-63 Friday night in the opening game of the best-of-three WNBA Finals.

Lisa Leslie, last year's finals MVP, scored 14 of her 23 points in the first half and had 12 rebounds. DeLisha Milton added 19 points, Tamecka Dixon had 15 and Nikki Teasley had 11 assists for the Sparks.

Detroit's Swin Cash scored 15 points and Deanna Nolan had 15 despite a back bruise. WNBA rookie of the year Cheryl Ford had 11 points and 12 rebounds playing in front of her father Karl Malone, one of the new members of the Los Angeles Lakers. Center Ruth Riley was held to six points as Leslie repeatedly scored over her. It was like 1988 all over again for Shock coach Bill Laimbeer, formerly one of the "Bad Boys" on the Detroit Pistons, who lost to Sparks coach Michael Cooper and the Lakers in seven games of that year's NBA Finals.

The once-fierce Laimbeer was helpless to do anything about his team's shots that bounced off the rim or turned into airballs. At times, he shook his head and stood with his hands jammed in his pockets. Cooper and the Sparks within one victory of a championship three-peat, something the Houston Comets did when they won four consecutive titles from 1997-2000. Game 2 is Sunday in Detroit, where Game 3 would be Tuesday if necessary.

The Sparks' halftime lead was the second-largest in WNBA playoff history. Detroit, making its first-ever finals appearance after being the league's worst team last year, was playing at Staples Center for the first time this season after being Los Angeles in overtime at home. The Shock was a woeful 7-of-37 in the first half, surprising for a team that led the league in scoring with 75.1 points a game. Detroit had 12 of its 15 turnovers in the half.

Clutch closing drive gives Filer victory over Valley

The Times-News

HAZZELTON - With the wind howling in their faces, the Filer Wildcats refused to go down, driving 50 yards with just over six minutes left to pull out a 27-26 win over Valley Friday in Hazelton.

Head Silvester's touchdown from 3 yards out put the Wildcats (2-0) up by a point with 2:21 left. But the Wildcats ensured the win with an interception of Valley.

Michael Grant led the Vikings (3-3, 0-1 Canyon) with three touchdowns, including a 37-yard interception return, a run of 42 yards and a 36-yard catch, and finished with 109 yards rushing on 13 carries.

All of Grant's touchdowns came in the first quarter to give Valley the 20-0 lead. But Filer scored on a Jake Thornton 15-yard reception from Dan Ramseyer in the second quarter and Ramseyer added a 5-yard run in the third to make it 20-14.

The Wildcats took the brief lead to open the fourth with their third unanswered touchdown when Ramseyer connected with Jay Karel. Joe Miller scored from a yard out for Valley in the fourth and Silvester's final TD.

"It was a really good game," said Valley coach Marlin Mussenman. "We came out of the chutes hard. Mike had some big plays and we tried to hang on at the end but they did play hard in the stretch. It would have been a nice win for us, but they did play hard, that is a plus for us."

Valley (0-3, 0-1 Canyon) visits Kimberly on Friday.

Local road concerns could stop trucks

Heavy sugar beet rigs may not be allowed on certain local roads

By Scott Kraus
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON — If the Hillsdale Highway District in Jerome County is any indication, Transystems LLC will find it slow going to get all the local permits it ultimately wants in order to use 129,000-pound trucks to haul sugar beets for Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Idaho.

Hillsdale is the only highway district that has banned local permits for the company's 129,000-pound trucks under Idaho's new 10-year test of the heavier trucks on about 600 miles of state and U.S. highways.

The local permits are needed to get Transystems' trucks from the approved state routes, which don't include interstates, to Amalgamated's beet piles and sugar plants.

Berwyn Mussmann

While other districts haven't banned the heavier trucks, the Hillsdale commissioner's concerns may reflect those of other officials who received requests from Transystems, which hauls all of Amalgamated's beets from beet piles to its factories.

For instance, the Jerome Highway District, which covers just over half of Jerome County, plans only to consider any requests case by case, Road Supervisor LeRoy Lewis said.

Rod Rudolph

The three commissioners in Hillsdale say they know Transystems' arguments about the benefits of the heavier trucks. The company maintains that the 129,000-pound trucks cause less damage because they spread their weight better by using 10 axles instead of seven like on the 105,500-pound trucks which were previously the heaviest allowed. It also says the 129,000-pound trucks reduce trips by 20 percent.

Further, the Hillsdale commissioners — Dan Schaeffer, Chairman Berwyn Mussmann and Randy Sellers — are all farmers and say they can see the value of more efficient operations. But

Big Sky cuts back on flights, personnel

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. — Big Sky Airlines is dropping three daily flights and temporarily laying off some employees in hopes of breaking even, a company official said.

The Billings-based airline for more than a year has been Twin Falls leaders' top recruitment target for new flights at Jolin Field. But an industry consulting firm recently said three-times-daily Boise-Twin Falls round trips in Big Sky's 19-seat aircraft would be unprofitable for the airline.

And the airline is not in expansion mode.

Big Sky will reduce its fleet from 15 to 10 aircraft as of Oct. 4 and will cut its daily flight between its hub in Billings to Nevada and city of Reno flights from Billings to Missoula and Helena.

Big Sky has been flying direct to Denver for about three years. CEO Denny says the company's president for the airline, said Big Sky likely will not resume flights to Denver.

"That route has not been profitable at all. We're been losing money in the Billings to Denver route," Denny said.

Denny said the cuts will not affect costs for passengers.

"The goal of this is to reach a cash break-even situation," he said.

Denny did not have figures Thursday night to say how much money the company must save to break even.

Bank of America employees await status report for retirement funds

Knight Ridder News Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Some of Bank of America Corp.'s 134,000 employees are among the thousands of investors who may have lost money because of questionable trading practices in its mutual fund division.

The Charlotte-based bank's retirement-plan options for employees largely comprise bank stock and bank-owned mutual funds, primarily the Fidelity Funds allegedly used by a New Jersey hedge fund for illegal trading.

Bank spokesman Bob Sticker said Thursday that the company is planning to communicate "very shortly" with employees about the status of their retirement plans.

Bank of America has branches in Magic Valley.

The bank has not talked with employees about the possible impact of the alleged illegal trading on 401(k) investments since New York Attorney General Eliot Spitzer alleged last week that Nations Funds managers allowed Canary Capital Partners LLC to engage in illegal trading, which he said may have caused long-term investors to lose money.

EVOLUTION OF A LANDMARK

Mack's Inn, near Island Park, is shown July 26. The inn developed into an area landmark over the years, and many in the area are hoping new investment can revitalize it and make it once again a prime gathering spot for people near Yellowstone.

Island Park gathering spot sees new investment interest

The Associated Press

ISLAND PARK — When the clatter of steam engines punched through the silent forest where William "Doc" Mack camped with his horse and buggy, he knew his favorite river would soon draw hundreds to play on its banks.

At first, there were a few tents near the station. Travelers bound for Yellowstone National Park could spend the night or stay to fish with the jovial optometrist-turned-entrepreneur.

But over the years, Mack's Inn evolved from a secluded retreat into a local landmark that worked its way onto official state maps.

Its guests shopped at its general store and ate, drank and danced in the lodge. An old picture of the lodge at Mack's Inn, nearly buried in snow, hangs in the front of Jim Terreo's store next to the resort.

"It was quite a building," Terreo said of the structure that was once the centerpiece of Mack's Inn, and burned down in 1989.

Sometimes, someone who has been vacationing at the inn since childhood stops by to say "hello," and Terreo will tell them about the glory days at the Mack's Inn Lodge while he sits in a recliner in front of the fishing supplies.

Now, the Snake River slips beneath rumbling traffic on U.S. 20, but under the bridge, children still net minnows hugging the bottom of the clear river.

Just upstream, their families still sit on the porches of cabins and hotels at Mack's Inn and plan their woodland adventures.

With new investment, many residents hope to restore the 87-year-old retreat to its former status as one of the prime gathering places on the way to Yellowstone.

With new investment, many residents hope to restore the 87-year-old retreat to its former status as one of the prime gathering places on the way to Yellowstone.

They just came out of the woodwork and said "We'd like to buy Mack's Inn," Evans said of investors who made an offer for the place last year, but then backed out of the deal.

Evans said they have since put the resort on the open market, and an investor from out of state visited it recently.

Kevin Murray, with Re/Max Homestead, said the property is listed at $4.3 million. That includes 38 motel rooms in two buildings, 26 cabins, an RV park, a convenience store and a dinner theater where guests can eat to the musicals put on by local performers.

The sale would also include the Henry's Fork Landing restaurant across the river, which Evans said they purchased four years ago to keep a bar from being put in.

Evans said they lease and runs the restaurant with her husband, Jim, who often performs at the dinner theater.

"It's like living in heaven," she said of the area.

Snowmobiling in the winter, hiking in the summer and the steady stream of interesting people, tourists and locals alike, have made her business experience in Island Park well worth the remote location.

She said her lease at the restaurant will continue regardless of who owns what she describes as the "glory place of Island Park."

Others who live and work in the area expressed similar sentiments, saying they are happy to see Mack's Inn up for sale and that they want to see investment in a new lodge. Evans said he first considered selling the resort last year.

He said that owners recently put the resort up for sale in hopes that a potential buyer will have the resources to renovate existing buildings and replace the lodge.

Once a lofty, open building that was home to a thriving restaurant, bar, dance hall and general store, the lodge was the hub of Island Park for a long time, said Aleana Gunnell.

Now the postmaster at the Mack's Inn post office, Gunnell has lived in Island Park for more than 30 years. She can remember when Mack's Inn was synonymous with Island Park, and she said the Mack's Inn ZIP code was the main source of mail for residents for decades.

Even if the resort changes hands and the new owners decide to change its name, Gunnell said the post office and the area at large would still be referred to as Mack's Inn.

Rick and April Evans bought the area's namesake in 1995. However, Rick Evans said that besides some cabin remodeling, they haven't been able to improve or expand on many of the facilities they dreamed of revamping when they moved here from Utah. Some in the community are ready for a change as well.

"It's a good thing because they really haven't done much with it," said Terreo of the possible sale.

Idaho grape growers look for autumn niche

Farmers hope to break into table grape market

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho growers do not intend to outproduce California for table grapes, just help supply Americans' demand in the fall.

Growing grapes in Idaho is not a new concept, but so far it has been isolated to wine grapes.

Most table grapes come from California and the central valley, such as Chile. But Idaho farmers, who have recently formed the Idaho Table Grape Association, say their grapes mature later than California, giving them a niche market.

"We have an 8- to 10-week window when California grapes are over and before the Chile grapes arrive," said Tom Elias, a Marsing grower and association vice president. "This gives us a window to bring a lot of fresh grapes to the market."

That window is from mid-September to November, Idaho Department of Agriculture marketers say that period gives Idaho growers a chance.

"The harvest would happen after California is done and, for marketing purposes, that's the key," Mandi Thompson said. "California is the 800-pound gorilla, and to compete with their head-on would be really difficult."

There are only seven growers in the new association, but they say they already are seeing a growing interest in their grapes.

Association president Ronald Mann said buyers in Asia, Central and South America, Canada and Alaska have expressed interest in buying them.

received orders for 200,000 pounds of Idaho grapes from about 60 acres. Mann said the group would like to see that number swell to 1,000 acres by 2015. That would garner up to $24 million in sales.

One obstacle is the startup costs. Converting cropland to grapes usually costs $4,000 to $5,000 an acre. Elias said it takes about four years for grapevines to produce effectively.

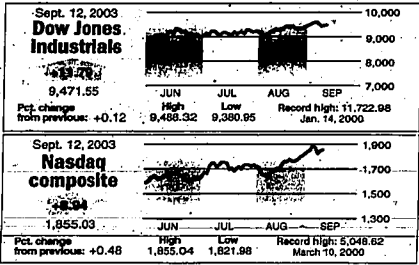

So, Mann said farmers are not advised to immediately convert all their land to grapes. Instead, they should consider doing a few acres at a time.

Stocks edge up despite retail report

NEW YORK (AP) — A burst of buying lifted Wall Street modestly higher Friday despite a disappointing report on software licenses by Oracle Corp. Analysts said investors decided to take advantage of some bargains after the Dow Jones industrials lost as much as 78.81 earlier in the day.

"Generally speaking, people are optimistic, but we're not at a point where it's appropriate as long as the economic and profit picture continues to improve as they have been," said Susan L. Malley, chief investment officer for Malley Associates Capital Management in New York.

The Dow finished up 11.79, or 0.1 percent, to 9,471.55, having gained 39 points the previous session.

higher. The Nasdaq composite index rose 8.54, or 0.5 percent, to 1,855.03. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2.21, or 0.2 percent, to 1,018.63.

For the week, Dow fell 0.3 percent, the Nasdaq rose 0.2 percent and the S&P lost 0.3 percent. The Nasdaq and S&P ended a four-week winning streak, while the Dow fell after five weeks of gains.

Stocks were sluggish for most of the session but edged higher late in the day. A report Friday morning on retail sales for August came in below analysts' expectations, contributing to pessimism about the economy's prospects for a turnaround.

But traders had other good news about the economy to focus on. The Wall Street Journal reported Friday that economists pulled in a monthly survey predicted the economy will have grown in the second half of the year at the fastest rate in four years. Stocks have been choppy over the past week as investors commemorated the anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks and wondered whether the market's six-month rally might have come too fast, too soon.

"The market is now getting focused on every single one of the economic numbers," said Janet Engels, director of Private Client research group at RBC Dain Rauscher. "The equity markets have moved up, and therefore the market's short-term things are clearly improving on both the consumer and business side."

Hewlett-Packard chairman touts value of Idaho plant

BOISE (AP) — Hewlett-Packard Co. Chairman Carly Fiorina, who weathered the largest merger in the history of the computer industry, said research and development are keeping the local work force intact and the company competitive.

"When you eliminate jobs, it gets a lot of attention," she told the Boise Metro Chamber of Commerce on Friday. "We've been able to retain stable levels here because as we were eliminating some jobs, we were adding others."

rely employs 140,000 people worldwide, with about 3,700 in Idaho. Midway through 2001, as HP was cutting a total of 11,000 workers, the local work force was 3,800.

Hewlett-Packard's Boise plant, which pioneered the LaserJet printer, once was heavily involved in manufacturing. Fiorina said that has shifted so that about 90 percent of the labor force in Idaho is in research and development and marketing.

Airline

Continued from B6 Employee furloughs are expected to help make up costs, but Denney said it has not been determined how many employees will take leave or for how long. The airline employs about 250 people, with approximately 175 based in Billings; Denney said.

The airline also dropped money-losing routes between Casper, Wyo., and Billings as of Aug. 1 after flying those routes for less than a year. Big Sky President Kim Champney said then the airline had been losing $50,000 to $60,000 a month on the routes.

The airline will contact passengers who have already made reservations for flights on canceled routes, and make other arrangements for them with other airlines.

The regional airline began operation in 1978 and serves 19 cities in five states — Montana, Colorado, Idaho, North Dakota and Washington — with a fleet of 12 passenger Metro II and Metro 33 aircraft.

Trading

Continued from B6 Funds investments is still being determined. Bank of America executives have announced internal and external investigations and promised restitution to investors who lost money.

The bank offers employees about a dozen funds as retirement options. They include nine Nations Funds, two funds managed by other investment companies and one other bank-owned fund that is not part of the Nations Funds family.

to communicate directly with them at the same time we communicate with clients," Sticker said.

A few of the bank's employees, who asked that their names not be used because the bank's policy prohibits workers from talking with the media without permission, expressed faith this week that their retirement savings would be safe.

"I think the executives will take care of it," said one uptown Charlotte employee. "Everyone feels pretty secure."

Bank of America's stock price has dropped since the Canary allegations surfaced last week.

In a civil complaint against Canary, Spitzer alleged that Bank of America brokers allowed Canary to trade mutual fund shares after the 4 p.m. market close at that day's market price, a move that is considered illegal. Such trades can capitalize on after-hours increases in share prices, an advantage not afforded to ordinary customers.

The complaint states also that brokers knew that Canary was timing the market, which involves going in and out of the market in short periods of time, a move that often hurts the value of the funds for other investors.

Another employee said he was concerned about the bank's

Bigoted brother can't accept new relative

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my 28-year-old, college-educated daughter, "Emma," married "Manny," a wonderful young man. The problem is, her brother (my son "Bruce") hates Manny because he is from a foreign country and not as well-educated as Emma. He feels Emma is wasting her life married to him.

Emma has told me she dated a lot of "well-educated jerks" and feels lucky to have found a wonderful, caring, loving, hard-working man who adores her. She doesn't care that she makes more money than Manny.

I am filled with resentment that Bruce and his family have cut themselves off of Emma and Manny are not welcome at Bruce's home for holiday dinners or family get-togethers. This has hurt my daughter terribly.

Bruce still wants to have a relationship with me, but I am so angry that it's difficult to be civil to him. My son is rigid and judgmental, and it is impossible to reason with him. I don't believe he will ever accept Manny into our family. Any advice?

charm.

Bruce cannot banish Emma and Manny from the family unless you and the rest of the family cooperate. My advice is to arrange alternative sites for family gatherings at holiday time and extend an invitation to Bruce and his little family. If they choose not to include themselves, it's their problem. Don't make it yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and have never had a boyfriend or any romantic experience. I catch a boy I met in summer school (I'll call him James) has shown some interest.

James has started calling me, and I think he might ask me out. I haven't really gotten to know him yet, but most of my friends think he's a loser because he's not particularly good-looking.

As much as I care about what my friends think, I want to give James a chance. Should I?

Maybe you've seen those old-timey red tomato-shaped pin cushions. That design had a purpose. Believers of old thought it good luck to put a ripe tomato on the mantel of any new dwelling. But ripe tomatoes weren't to be had year-round. So tomato pin cushions found a market as housewarming gifts.

That's right, parachutes came before airplanes.

You might take a 15-minute nap every four hours to see if that makes a genius out of you. It's what Leonardo da Vinci did.

Thoughts from the religion desk

Heading down the backstretch before galloping to the finish line

After reading "Seabiscuit," I was eager to see how Hollywood treated this engaging book by Laura Hillenbrand.

Very well, I'd say. A little heavy-handed with the Jeff Bridges' speeches comparing a broken-down-and-unsuccessful horse with the down-and-out populace of the Depression, but still a fair telling of the tale. And you don't have to be a lover of horses or horse racing to enjoy both the book and movie.

On the Web site: EthicsDaily.com, Brent Younger finds a spiritual message in the book and movie "The Gopel According to Seabiscuit."

"Maybe what makes us pay attention is that we all instinctively understand how much we need the grace of a second chance," Younger writes.

And with the cast of misfits in "Seabiscuit," the story of second chances in a time of hopelessness comes through loud and clear. Younger, a Baptist minister from Texas, then asserts the role of churches in "mending the broken."

"The church is here for those who think of themselves as dismissed, worthless, shattered by tragedy, wounded by divorce, damaged, forgotten and abandoned. It's a spiritual connection worth pondering... But I wonder how many churches - and other religious homes - make mending the broken a priority? It should be."

The Dalai Lama was in Bloomington, Ind., last Sunday to dedicate a new temple. It was his second stop on a 16-day tour of the United States. During his Indiana visit, according to the Associated Press, he stressed the importance of faith: "Religion should implement. The teachings should be part of our lives," he said. Tibetan spiritual leader said, "If there are people who don't have much interest in religion, they will see negatives." Sounds like the Johnny-Mercer-Harold-Arlen song: "You've got to accentuate the positive, eliminate the negative... And it's as true of faith as it is of life."

What can churches do about a shortage of priests and ministers? In "The Journals of Father Alexander Schmemmann, 1971-1983," the renowned Orthodox priest makes a bold proposal for the Eastern Orthodox Church: "More and more often I think that the priesthood should not be a profession; that is, priests should work, have another occupation."

His comment was reprinted recently in Sightings, an online newsletter, by Joseph F. Byrnes, professor of modern European history at Oklahoma State University. Byrnes makes a similar point about his Roman Catholic faith and the shortage of priests: "If today priests were drawn from many professional backgrounds - teaching, medicine, law, manual skills - and were prepared to preach, teach and preside in Catholic communities (parishes), we would have a much broader base of candidates to draw from."

He goes on to describe the different roles of ministry in the New Testament (elder, church leader and priest) and contends that non-clerical priests "could be one of the principal solutions to the current troubled state of the Catholic priesthood."

Byrnes develops his argument in greater detail. But suffice it to say that both proposals shouldn't be quickly dismissed. As Catholic and non-Catholic churches wrestle with the various ways of clergy solutions such as Schmemmann's and Byrnes' may be not only a theoretical possibility, but also a practical necessity.

Book of Mormon hits the box office

By Bible Thomas Reese
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - "The Book of Mormon Movie: Volume I, The Journey" is coming to a theater near you, thanks in part to a Jerome businessman who provided financial backing for the movie.

Kurt Thompson, owner and operator of Jerome Homes, also served as one of the movie's executive producers.

"(LDS) President Kimball's challenge to use film in helping to 'cover every part of the globe' with the Book of Mormon has definitely struck me," said Thompson, who was the largest financial contributor to the $2 million-dollar venture. "I am convinced everyone involved with this movie is moving their best effort to accomplish this."

Kurt Thompson

It's a movie that tells the story of people who traveled from Jerusalem to the Americas in 600 B.C. The Book of Mormon covers about 1,000 years of this history. The movie's Volume I focuses on Lehi's journey through the Arab desert across the great ocean to the promised land and the early years in the new world.

Filmwriter/director Gary Rogers said he was inspired by Cecil B. DeMille's 1956 movie "The Ten Commandments."

Ever since I saw "The Ten Commandments" nearly 48 years ago, I have wanted to make "The Book of Mormon Movie," Rogers said.

The movie was filmed on location in Ogden, Utah, on the island of Kauai in Hawaii and at Universal Studios in Hollywood.

The musical score was written and conducted by Robert C. Bowdin, former associate conductor of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and performed by the City of Prague Philharmonic Orchestra.

Rogers approached Kurt Thompson a little over a year ago and asked him to invest in the movie. Thompson was interested and, two days later, a deal was struck. Thompson declined to give the exact amount of his investment.

"Producing a movie is not much different from investing in a large industrial construction project or any other investment," he said. "I'm a country boy. My SANDY, Utah - A $2 million movie based on Mormon scripture debuted before about 850 people Wednesday night.

Gary Rogers, its director and producer, wept as he thanked the people in the Jordan Commons theater who had helped make his five-year dream for "The Book of Mormon Movie" to come true. He introduced cast, crew and investors, and said their second goal was to see their money back. Their first goal was to see a movie that would Guitarist Doyle Dykes, at last year's First Assembly of God Fall Round-up, was so popular that the church invited him back to perform again this year.

Assembly of God kicks off round-up

By Steve Turner
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The First Assembly of God Church squares off for its Fall Round-up - every year for three years now - with barbecued ribs, cook-off and lasso contests, yodeling and buffalo chip tosses, plus some very special music by legendary guitarist Doyle Dykes.

To plan the event, round-up director Nancy Duncan said, she had to start months in advance.

"We started planning the round-up in 7 or 8 months ago," said Duncan, who is First Assembly Pastor Dan Duncan's cousin. "It will be similar to last year's event, but we've added some new things."

This year, for example, the Dutch oven cook-off will be split into two divisions - adults and children.

Then there is the chili cook-off, always a tight contest. Dan Duncan's wife, Audree, won the competition last year.

"I remember who won the chili cook-off last year because I was the one she beat," noted Nancy Duncan, with a laugh.

"We have friendly competitors and there are a lot of fun," Dan Duncan said.

Darren Gere, a profession musician, is working with the yodeling competition this year.

"He will be giving yodeling clinics, teaching the kids and then we will have the contest," Dan Duncan said. "The yodelers will be judged on projection, clarity and showmanship."

Nancy Duncan said this contest is a fancy way of saying people will be screaming and hollering, but it will be a lot of fun.

Doyle Dykes, who wowed the crowds last year, is back by popular demand.

Event helps injured pastor

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

FILER - The brace that Tim Chandler wears on his right leg is a cumbersome reminder of his horrific motorcycle accident.

Chandler was riding his motorcycle to the bank, down Addison in Twin Falls, on Aug. 6, behind traffic that was being slowed for a crime scene investigation. He assumed the car in front of him was going past sixth, he said, because it didn't turn there, so he checked his rearview mirror and decided to go around. That's when the car stopped and Chandler's leg collided with it - in what police described as a no-fault accident.

Tim Chandler

Registered Nurse Janice Link was driving by when she saw her pastor lying on the pavement in a pool of blood. She asked the office at the scene for permission to go to him. She knelt down beside Chandler and talked to him for three or four minutes, until the ambulance arrived, she said.

"So there was already someone who was trained and was able to come right to him and knew what to do immediately," she noted.

"There was an artery that was nicked in the leg and he could have really been in a lot of danger had someone not been there quickly to help him."

The tibia plateau of Chandler's leg was severed. Link explained that the two bones in the lower leg - the tibia and fibula - form the support for the knee (plateau) just below the joint. The tibia sustained a crushing injury, which an orthopedic physician later described as resembling Greenputts. The fibula was broken.

Chandler's wife, Becky, said the fact that Link was at the scene and, later, in the emergency room was quite a coincidence. Link, herself, was injured in an accident outside of Mountain Home in January, and Chandler was the one lending his support.

So when Chandler arrived at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Link asked Chandler, "Is this de ja vu, or what?"

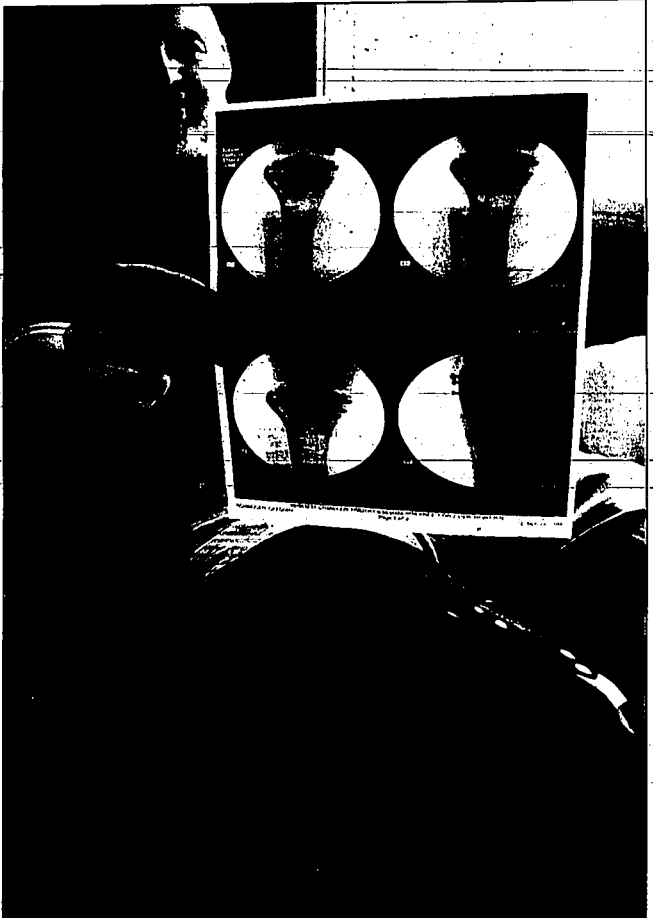

"They had each sustained broken right legs, with the same kind of crushing injury - and the same surgeon did the repair work."

"I was in the hospital six days here in Twin Falls, then transferred to St. Alphonsus in Boise and had surgery to put it back together, and I was in the hospital again another week in Boise," Chandler said.

"Now I'm in the recuperative stage and have been back home now a couple of weeks."

It will be three months before he can put weight back on the leg, and the doctor warned Chandler to be careful.

"He said, 'We had one chance at saving the leg and we took it - I put screws everywhere there could decide to host a benefit to raise money for the newly formed Chandler Medical Fund. A fund has also been set up at U.S. Bank in Filer.

Kay Sheaffer, wife of In His Name assistant pastor Terry Sheaffers, said Chandler is dearly loved, not only by his congregation but by the whole community.

Reader weighs in on longstanding debate

I haven't written for a while, so I apologize to all persons I usually offend, especially to the reader who replied to my letter of July 5. My letter had to do with how the Southern Baptist chaplain at Camp Bushmaster, Iraq, who allegedly was attempting to coerce soldiers coming in from several days of fighting to be baptised. The reader wrote that the chaplain had been cleared by a House subcommittee. I believe the reader was trying to snow me. I checked carefully and found that of the five Army subcommittees, none had met to discuss the allegations against Chaplain Josh Llano. And when I talked with an officer at the House Subcommittee on Army Personnel, he laughed at the allegations and pared girls' camp presentations, participated in the Constitutional Government Debate and helped with kindergartners. She was assisted by her mother, Brenda Hamler; Keri Smith, and leaders, Laurie and Debbie Lancaster.

Dalai Lama's U.S. tour will end with significant private meeting

By Richard N. Ostling
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The 14th Dalai Lama is simultaneously the exiled monarch of Tibet, a Nobel Peace Prize-winning statesman and Buddhism's most renowned world leader — aspects that are all evident during his current U.S. tour. — But a private event may be the most significant moment in the India-based lama's visit — a conference in the upstate New York community of Garrison for 300 leaders of local Buddhist centers in the Western Hemisphere. This is apparently the biggest gathering of Buddhist teachers ever held in the United States. Only followers of the Dalai Lama, known as "Buddhist or Vajrayana" ("the Diamond Vehicle," denoting clarity of experience) is one of Buddhism's three main branches. The others are Theravada ("the Way of the Elders") and Mahayana ("the Greater Vehicle," which includes Zen). double the total a decade earlier. One survey puts U.S. Buddhists at 3 million to 4 million. Most are immigrants, their numbers swelled by the 1965 liberalization of U.S. immigration laws. But an estimated 800,000 are native-born converts or "new Buddhists," including such celebrities as movie actor Richard Gere, who helped plan the Sept.-22-23 Garrison meeting. Such progress owes much to the magnetism of the 68-year-old Dalai Lama, who by Tibetan tradition was recognized at age 2 as an incarnation of Avalokiteshvara, the Buddha of Compassion and the reincarnation of his deceased predecessor, Tibetan Buddhism known as "Buddhist or Vajrayana" ("the Diamond Vehicle," denoting clarity of experience) is one of Buddhism's three main branches. The others are Theravada ("the Way of the Elders") and Mahayana ("the Greater Vehicle," which includes Zen). The Committee of Chaplains sided completely with Chaplain Llano. Now the Army is considering putting 12 showers at Llano's desert outpost.  touch people." Some in the audience won their tickets through media outlets, and others were friends and family of the cast and crew. Rogers is selling tickets over a Web site and then booking the movie in cities where sufficient tickets are sold. He said the response has been international. "We'll be in Sydney, Australia, before we're in Denver, Colo. ... We're all ready to go into Toronto," which is the hometown of actor Noah Wyle. The Book of Mormon is one of four books that comprise the canon of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It tells of Lehi, a prophet who with his family and others flees from Jerusalem to the New World, where they found a civilization. The first part of the story takes place about 600 B.C., with the families of Lehi and Ishmael journeying through an Arabian desert, crossing a great ocean and reaching the Americas. Volume 1 of Rogers' planned nine-movie series ends with the separation of Nephi and his followers from his brothers, Laman and Lemuel, shortly after the death of their father, Lehi.

Rogers said his video production company to help finance the movie, and he stretched his $2 million budget by relying on Mormon crew members who volunteered their services. The movie received a PG-13 rating due to a scene in which Nephi kills an evil ruler.

Tests confirm ancient Jerusalem tunnel was built as Bible describes

By William McCall
The Associated Press

A tunnel that snakes under the ancient walls of Jerusalem likely was built around 700 B.C. during the reign of King Hezekiah, as described in the Bible, a new study suggests.

The tunnel's age had been debated by biblical scholars, a few of whom had suggested it was built centuries later. The only surviving clue of its age had been an inscription discovered in 1880 on a tunnel wall, which supported the link to Hezekiah but did not specifically name him.

In the new study, analysis of strata across the tunnel's ceiling, of the Siloam Tunnel and plant material recovered from its plaster floor both confirm the biblical record, researchers say. "We believe this point is now clearly settled," said Amos Frumkin, a geologist and director of the Cave Research Center at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He and colleagues presented their analysis in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Hershel Shanks, an expert on the history of Jerusalem who writes for the Biblical Archaeology Review, said "it's nice to have scientific confirmation for what the vast majority of biblical scholars and archaeologists believe." Shanks, who didn't participate in the new study, said confirmation of the tunnel's age was important because so little scientific testing has been done to date biblical structures.

"If you can couple various technological capabilities and science with more traditional scholarship and other historical analysis, and reach the same conclusion, that's a pretty powerful argument," said Bruce Zuckerman, a University of Southern California religion professor.

Testing is difficult, they say, because sample material from buildings and structures mentioned in the Bible are hard to identify and may be poorly preserved, or access by scientists may be restricted for political or religious reasons. The tunnel's plant fragments were subjected to radiocarbon dating, which measures age by the decay of a radioactive form of carbon. Core samples from the stalactites underwent chemical testing and other examination to determine age.

As far as Frumkin or other experts such as Shanks and Zuckerman could determine, the tests marked the first time that a well-identified biblical structure had been subjected to extensive radiocarbon dating.

Biblical accounts mentioned in Kings and Chronicles say the 1,750-foot-long tunnel was constructed to move water from the Gihon spring all the way across the ancient city of Jerusalem into the pool of Siloam to protect the city's water supply from an Assyrian siege. The Assyrian empire was conquering its way into the area after a rebellion led in part by Hezekiah.

The serpentine tunnel, now a tourist attraction, still bears pick marks from workers who occasionally had to adjust their course to meet with a second team of workers coming from the opposite side of the city.

Lore shapes the Ten Commandments

By Jeffrey Weiss
The Dallas Morning News

A lot of what Americans think they know about the Ten Commandments may not be true—or at least it's at odds with ancient tradition.

For instance, there is no mention of "Ten Commandments" in the original Hebrew. In Exodus, when Moses comes down from the mountain, the rules inscribed on his tablets aren't named. When Moses goes get around to talking about them, he calls them "segret ha-dvareim." The phrase can be translated as "10 words" or "10 statements," or even, in context, "10 things God said."

That makes sense because, in the traditional Jewish numbering, the first on the list isn't a commandment: "I am the Lord your God, who has taken you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of slavery."

OK, so maybe they aren't all exactly commandments, but we all know what they looked like, right? Just about everybody recognizes the connected double-tombstone as the shape of the stony Tablets of the Law.

Except there's no mention of that shape—or any other—in the Bible.

Jewish sacred tradition, contained in the Talmud, says the tablets were square or rectangular. And some tradition holds that they were made of sapphire, not granite. Experts say the familiar shape came from 11th-century English artists. Judging comparing Christianity to Judaism—to the delight of the calendar faith—used the tablets as a symbol of "out-moded" legalism. The artists used a shape that even those who could not read would instantly recognize—the "diptych," a writing tablet made of two arched, hinged slabs of wood or stone.

OK, so the shape is made up, but at least we agree on the words, right?

Well, the King James Bible popularized the edit, "Thou shalt not kill." But scholars of Hebrew say the line is much better translated as, "Do not murder." Even the seemingly straightforward command, "Don't steal" may not be what it seems. A traditional rabbinic interpretation is that the line really means, "Don't steal another person"—in other words, "Don't kidnap."

And Jews traditionally understood the end of the first line—"Who has taken you out of the land of Egypt, from the house of slavery"—to mean that these laws applied specifically to them. A shorter set of commands, the so-called Noahide laws, applied to non-Jews.

Some Jewish sages made a case that the Ten Statements were a summary of all the laws of the Torah. But other sages said that the passages were even more central. Tradition holds that the Ten Statements weren't placed into the standard worship liturgy because to do so might have caused Jews to focus on those 10 laws to the exclusion of some 600 others contained in the Torah.

Even Christian tradition is ambivalent about how central the Commandments are. In the Gospels, Jesus cited other Bible passages when asked about the most important laws. Paul, in the Letter to the Romans, does likewise. "The commandments, 'Do not commit adultery,' 'Do not murder,' 'Do not steal,' 'Do not covet,' and whatever other commandments there may be, are summed up in this one rule: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.'"

Finally, there's the exact order of the Commandments.

Judaism numbers the line beginning "I am the Lord, your God" as the first "commandment." Catholicism splits covering property from coveting a spouse. Protestantism divides the law against idolatry from the prohibition against worshipping other gods.
