Perrine during a visit Renditions Bronze foundry in Twin Falls Tuesday. Burton Perrine is the grandson of I.B. Perrine, who many consider the founder of Twin Falls.

Perrine-descendant sees likeness in statue

TWIN FALLS - They say the eyes have it, but in this case all bets were on the chin.

As two of the descendants of Ira Burton Permine stood next to the statue of the early Win Fulls pinner, it was easy to see a family.

"I think the product's great," said Ira "Burton" Permine III, 58, Permine's grandson and a retired trout fammer, "It's very life-lible."

The statue, by, artist Raiph Lehrman, is of the dapper Perrine, his hand outstretched.
"Beings that he used to spank my famny with that hand, I'm going to keep my distance," joked Burton.

In the later years of Perrine's life, the family would make frequent drives to Boise - trips that took four hours then - for Perrine's medical attention.

"He used to sit in the back seat with us," Burton said, "but we did-n't say much to him. He believed that children should be seen and not heard."

It's not just his grandfather's discipline that Burton remembers, though. "I used to work on the ranch and we'd put all the mus in a bushel for sale," he said. "He'd always come around and put a little more on top. He wanted to make sure everyone got a full measure."

The short stature of the elder Perrine belied a hearty ambition. As he was working in the mines in halley he realized he was too small to do the hard labor, Burton said. "So he went to Utah, bought cows and sold the milk to miners.

He milked cows and converted the milk into gold dust."
One of Burton's children, Randy Perrine, 45, a salesman at Rob Green autos in Iwin Falls, never met his great-grandfather but says being a descendant helps in his job.
"I always try to get on common ground with people," he said. When he mentions his last name, it rings a bell with many people, especially the older folks.
"They say 'I know that name. Where do I know it from?" he said.

Salmon runs follow nature, not simple fixes for dams

But both regions are coming to the conclusion that salmon runs have little to do with dam breaching, and more to do with cycles of nature. ing, and more to do with cycles of nature. Here in the West, the salmon of nature.

Here in the West, the salmon and—steelhead—are—pushing their way back upstream this fall in another impressive run. The fall chinook run is currently jamming the fish ladders at Bonneville Dam, so much so that some fish are being crushed to death trying to squeeze through.

Two weekends ago, the dam averaged 40,000 chinook passing per day, over a fourday stretch. On Sept. 11, a new one-day record was set with 45,884 fish. Bonneville saw another season high that week when 8,045 steelhead crossed on Sept. 13.

The fall run looks like it will continue an amazing run of steelhead and salmon in the Pacific Northwest that started in 2001.

Meanwhile, thousands of tually gone. In spite of multi-million dollar efforts that opened dam passages, elimi-nated fishing and stockledini-lions of fish, the fish have all but disappeared. Now, scien-tists say that salmon popula-tions are heading north into colder waters, and may never return to New England, the southernmost part of their domain.

colder waters, and may never return to New England, the southernmost part of their domain.

The lesson here is that a prosperous Pacific salmon run, and a waning Atlantic run, have little to do with one recovery plan being more effective than the other.

What it does prove is that, in both cases, ocean cycles, weather pattern changes, predators and cooler water temperatures all have an impact on anadromous fish runs. It also proves that opened dam passages are not the simple solution to restoring salmon runs.

That's not a message dam breachers will readily hear, but it's the ruth nonetheless.

When salmon recovery focuses on those factors, rather than just the draconian step of eliminating mammade dams, a better balance will be-established in the needs of wildlife and humans.

Craig's point on Hurricane Isabel

Thile on the topic of perional issues between the East and Larry Craig credit for reminding politicians that natural disasters aren't isolated to one side of the country.

Now that the wrath of Hurricane Isabel has passed over the eastern coast, federal aid will begin flowing to those battered states and communities left in her wake. Sending quick aid to those areas is appropriate, especially when homes are lost, infrastructure is down and resources are ruined. But as Craig stated last week, an imbalance exists between the response given to East Coast natural disasters and those that occur in the West.

Speaking in the Senate a few eaking in the Senate a few days before Isabel's arrival, Craig said urgent financial aid should be sent to all states hit by disaster - not just highly populated ones.

When hurricanes hit communities and public forests in the East, it's standard for the federal government to swiftly authorize millions of dollars in relief. Not so in the case of Western wildfires, Craig said.
"Out West and across other forests of our country, this year we have lost nearly four million acres to wildfire and yet we struggle to get the right to allow the process to clean up, to rehabilitate and re-established environment of these forests," Craig said. "It's time we wake up."
Craig makes a legitimate point - and at an opportune time - about the West's needs. With disaster assistance fresh on the minds of many politicians, it's worth reminding them that rapid federal aid is something all areas of the nation deserve.

This was not always so. The dollar plays a unique role in the global economy, it serves as the world's main currency for trade. The sense of their lending companies, banks and governments—partly explains routine U.S. trade deficits since the early 1980s. This demand has kept the dollar's exchange rate too high to produce a trade balance. But a modest trade deficit is unthreatening; when the U.S. economy is at "full continuation of their lending in the continuation of their lending continuation. Now, that's not true. Despite a faltering U.S. economy, the broadest U.S. trade deficit (the "current account") has expanded to 5 percent of gross domestic product.

Senate increases funds to fight wildfires in the U.S.

Fight wilding

WASHINGTON (AP) - The
Senate increased funds for fighting wildfires by $400 million
Tuesday, nearly floubling fire suppression money in a $20 billion
Interior Department spending bill.
"These dollars will help mitigate the costs of fighting the terrible fires this season," said Sen. Conrad Burns, R.Mont. "Now we need to find a long-term solution to thisproblem so we're not facing it yearafter year."

Insurance

sometiming arount the distribution of the 1990s had little impact on the number of uninsured.

"While the economy was growing, the number of uninsured was rising," Wicks said.

When it comes to fixing a broken health care system, there are a number of proposals on the able. One would be to offer businesses tax credits for providing Vouchers are another in the case say the Medicaid and Children't Health Insurance Program about be capanded while others say they should be replaced.

One thing everyone seems to agree on is that most people cannot afford to buy their own health insurance. The insurance premisely not afford to buy their own health insurance. The insurance premium for a single person averages $2.875 a year, or about $240 a month, while family coverage averages $30,968, or about $756 a month. A family of four making $35,000 a year would never be able to afford health insurance and still pay the mortage.

And then there's Medicare. One of the big problems with Medicare is that decisions on some 10,000 prices for some 3,000 counties are made in Washington, D.C., said Len Nichols, vice president of the Center for Studying Health System Change and a principal research associate for the Health Policy Center of the Urban Institute in Washington, D.C. Vouchers could be one answer, he said.

"It's easier to pick one price

he said.

"It's easier to pick one price than 10,000 prices," Nichols said.
And then there's the question of providing prescription drug coverage. Both the U.S. Senate and the House each have presented plans to add prescription drug coverage. The provided prescription drug coverage is a political hot potato as Democrats and Republicans gear up for the 2004 presidential election. A drug benefit is popular with voters, especially seniors who can always be counted on to show up at the polls. But politicians are starting to realize just how much such a benefit would cost, Nichols said. However, they don't want to rock the boat just before an election. They'll want to give seniors something, he said. "What's most likely is a discount card," Nichols said when it comes to Medicare, something has to change. Currently, there are four workers putting inoney into the system per Medicare beneficiary.

By 2020, there will only be 2.4 workers putting money into the system per Medicare recipient. "We cannot afford business as usual as we go forward," he said. Meanwhile, more and more of the responsibility of providing Medicaid - overage for poor and low-income individuals and families — is being dumped on the states, Nichols said. It has a subject to the states are broke." he said. Nichols said when it comes to health care reform, it's time for everyone to "sit down as a group and do something about this." Failure to do so could come at very high prioching in the constitution that says a critical access hospital will be there when you need one," Nichols said.

These groups would like to change the way national forests are managed so they can build new marinas to seal jet akis, Caldwell said, fife contends that the contends that the forest Service and Bureau of Land Management for funds so it could start the fee dem program which, he adds, supersedes the Land and Conservation Art prohibiting fees for recreational use of public land with the exception of campgrounds.

It's all part of a plan to privatize public lands, he said.

It's not unimaginable to Caldwell's way of thinking that private industry could pave an asphale road so that a motorist could park his $150,000 RV next to Fourth of July Lake, while other enterpreneurs build a paddleboat marina there and a convenience store selling Ragen.

Dan John have a problem paying 55 to hike - ith not that I'm chean, said Caldwell, who heads up the Idaho Sporting Congress, a conservation group made up of hunters, fishermen and other's concerned about water quality and timber sales. "What I sm against is the big agenda They've put in the parking lots and toilets that they've needed in the past eight years. I say that's enough. We were fine with dirt parking lots. We don't need paved ones."

The specter that Caldwell paints scares Carolyn Baird of Twin Falls, as well: "I'm very much against the fee program for this reason."

But Nelson, who heads up the Kefchum Ranger District, said he doesn't believe that Congress deliberately under funded the Forest Service so it could institute a fee program to allow big bloom to the said.

"Trailhead fees are a really critical tool we have in our toolbox for making sure our essential programs go. They're a way for us to catch up on projects we couldn't do when dollars were tight." Nelson said.

"What I like is that fees are kept locally. And we've tried to do our part by conducting a survey to find out how people wanted they wanted restrooms, trail maintenance, road improvements and habitat procedure.

"When we moved here about 20 years ago, there was, a Verbena and an ancient crabaple tree – and further back, there is a large pine tree," said Cliett. A mature honey locust tree and an old Illac bush, more like a tree now, completed the original landscape.

The trees and bushes remain, but now the yard sports everything from roses to cosmos and coleus to pampas grass and everything from roses to cosmos and coleus to pampas grass and everything in the winter.

In the back yard, drought-tolerance isn't such an issue, because "the longer I garden, the more shade I get".

The back yard has many of the same plants as the front, along with plenty of new ones. In fact, visitors might be so busy looking at the floor-length vinca or the spider plant in hanging baskets that they might miss the big bamboo tree. Or they might be gazing into the waterfall or the small fountain and miss the big pampas grass that's about 5 feet tall and almost that wide across.

black spot. And yes, it will affect inew growth.

Fungal diseases are more likely to strike this time of year. So if you've been watering from overhead, stop. Water only in such a way that you don't get the leaves met. And make sure you water early enough in the day that everything – leaves, blooms and mulch are all dry by sunset.

And you must follow a preventive spray program. Choose three good fungicides. Use each for no more than three weeks at a time, hen switch to the next. Begin spraying as soon as foliage appears in spring and keep it up till hard frost, when the leaves have either dropped or you've stripped them off Spray, all plant surfaces till the solution drips off, and be sure to spray the mulch.

recipe... CHILI

1. 2 quarts dried kidney and 2 quarts dried kidney and 2 quarts dried kidney and 2 quarts dried pinto beans soaked wernight, cooked and drained

1. 10 pounds ground beef

2. quarts large yellow-onions, peeled and diced medium

2. cups chopped garlie

2. 12 cups mild or hot ground chili powder

1. cup paprika

2 1/2 cups mild or hot ground chili powder
1 cup paprika
1/2 cup granulated garlic
5 teaspoons dried oregano leaf
2 cans diced tomato with juice
1 gallon water
Salt and pepper to taste
In a large non-aluminum pot, place the ground beef and cook through till done. Remove from heat and drain any excess fat or grease from the beef. Place back into pot and add in the orions and garlic and continue to cook for 15-20 minutes until onions are soft. Add in the romaining ingredients and continue to cook on low heat for an hour or until most of the liquid is cooked out. Stir every 10 minutes so the beans and meat don't stick to the bottom of the pot. Season to taste. Serve with grated cheese, green onions or other condiments.

Prepare-Shrubs-&-Trees-for-Winter

Although spring is the best time for pruning, a light fall pruning can benefit many shrubs and trees. Some plants need preparation for the winter, especially large, overgrown shrubs. And, in the case of deciduous trees, pruning when the leaves are off will give you a better idea of how it will affect the shape of the tree.

What should you prune?
• Any dead or diseased twigs or branches should be cut off as soon as branches should be cut on as soon-as you see them.

If you wish to do further tidying up, cut thin, weak twigs that have not borne flowers or fruit.

Any crossing branches that rub against and damage one another should be pruned to leave a strong framework for the plant or tree.

Proper tools are essential for fall pruning chores. The choice of which tool to use depends largely on the size of the branches that are to be pruned and the amount of pruning you need to do. In general, hand pruners work well for small jobs, loppers for thicker branches up to 3 inches in diameter, and tree pruners for those hard-to-reach tree limbs.

When it comes to peanut butter, Americans go nuts

When Lee Zalben was a child, his mother grew tired of finding the family peanut butter jar rav-aged by the fingers of her two sons. So she made sure there were sons. So she made sure there were always three jars on the shelf, marked "Lee," "Scott" and "Mom" Deborah Zalben herself being no stranger to midnight peanut-butter cravings. In Newsday's school lunch survey, peanut butter and jelly scored an impressive win in the sandwich filling category, a result that surprised no one, certainly not Leslie Wagner, executive director of the Peanut Advisory Board, which represents peanut growers in Georgia, Florida and Alabama. Alabama.
"I don't know why kids love peanut butter, but they do," Wagner said.
Parents, too humans

Wagner said.
Parents, too, have always appreciated peanut butter, especially its lunch-friendly, qualities.
Wagner pointed out, that before insulated lunch boxes and cold-packs, peanut butter was one of the safest things you could spread on a sandwich that would be left at room temperature for hours.

Here are a few recipes to get delicious meals on table fast

By Sylvia Rector

Even someone as food-sawy as Martha Holmberg, publisher of Taunton's Fish Cooking meanine, finds weeknight dinners a challenge. That's why a magazine whose name suggests high-end cooking has a section called Quick & Delicious. Now it's the topic of a new soft-cover recipe collection, "The Best of Fine Cooking 101 Quick & Delicious Recipes" (Taunton Press, $6.95), on newstands now. Or order at www.finecooking.com or by calling 866-489-0746; additional postage is $3.50.

Declo, Webb wear down Wildcats in marathon

DECLO - Forget subtlety. Forget nuance.

Forget deception.

After almost five games, the Declo
Hornets volleyball team decided to go straight down the middle to 6-foot senior Melissa Webb until the Filer Wildcats could stop her. They couldn't.

Webb had 20 kills and seven blocks esday to lead the Hornets to a 21-25, 25-25-21, 18-25, 15-12 Sawtooth Central 23, 25-21, 18-25, 15-12 Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference victory.

Much of Webb's damage came late in the match as the Hornets (94 overall, 2-3 SCIC) abandoned any thought of going anywhere besides to hor.

"I told them, "Set Melissa until they stop her," Declo coach Shella Wheeler said.
And the Hornets listened.

Declo trailed 11-10 in the fifth game hen Webb came up with a kill followed by block to put the Hornets up 12-11. Setter atle Wall then served an ace to make it 13-11.

And then it was time for Webb to go back to work as the Hornets set her five straight times on the same point — with Filer digging her wrice and blocking her enough to slow the ball down another couple of times. But the fifth time did the trick as Declo went up 14-12.

"My setter (Wall) was doing a great job of telling me which direction to go," Webb said. "They were doing a really good job of blocking the outside, so I knew that it was going to be coming to me."

Webb finished the typically tight SCIC battle off with an ace that landed on the line.
"Melissa was doing a great job of mixing it up and going in all directions." Wheeler

Win over Raiders, 3-0 start have Broncos feeling a mile high

By John Marshall Associated Press writer

DENVER - Beating Cincinnati and San Diego was a nice way for Denver to start the season. The wins gave the Broncos a little more confidence and new quarterback Jake Plummer time to get comfortable. But it is not like the Broncos took out the town bully with one punch. It was the Benglas and Chargers, after all. Embarrassing the Raiders on national television?—Now-that's saying-some-thing.

Tigers tumble toward record loss total

Detroit must win four of final five to avoid infamy

By Larry Lage Associated Press writer

DETROIT—The embarrassment on the field is just about over for the Detroit Tigers, a season of futility coming to a mertiful end. Then, of course, they'll have to deal with the jokes for years to come.

As this once-proud franchise closes in on the modern record of 120 losses, it can find solace in one other piece of history:

The team they seem destined to pass, the 1952 New York Mets, won the World Series just seven years after setting the standard for bad baseball.

Most of it not good, though.

Detroit beat the Royals 15-6 in Kansas City on Tuesday night to snap a 10-game long streak. The Tigers set the American League record for

With a slaw of minor league caliber players, and a handful of vestmen not worth the millions they're making, the Tigers were not expected to be competitive this season after losing 106 games in 2002.

Eliminating boundaries between the two districts will create a more fair and equitable assessment system and will create unity within the two districts, he explained. Property owners would be assessed intead of the business owners. And property would be assessed instead of the business owners. And property owners, if they choose, could pass the assessment burden on to busi-

But the grief still quivers in her face as she ticks off some of heradvice for students who have no career direction.

Don't pay for tuition — or let parents pay — before you've investigated jobs or careers you might like doing someday.

Do use the career center and library, but keep going, Get some hands-on experience in fields that interest you.

Do internships early — junion and senior year of high school.

Network with people in the field you're pursuing.

Don't choose a callege major first. Choose a career first. English offers herself up as an "unsuccessful role model." "You think you're doing everything right, being really focused on classes, working hard and getting good grades," she said. "But it wasn't a very good plant because I didn't know where I was going.

"Once you're out of school, your flexibility goes down the drain. You might not find out until then that you don't like sitting in a cubicle, but you still have bills to pay."
English thought she was being practical when she chose business and economics as a major. Her father took the same approach and is a successful computer engineer. Her mother, an artist, nudged her in that direction.

Only now does English realize she ignored many of her own cre-ative talents and interests because she was so focused on getting a degree.

After college, she began custom-painting furniture and occasionally sells her pieces, and she takes on interior-design projects.

But that's likely to remain a side interest because she intends to go back to school for a master's degree.

ogo ouch to general to the career while at UCSB, English explored resources at the career but found the "2-inch While at UCSB, English explored resources at the career center, but found the "2-inch thick books" to be intimidating. She wishes she had starred looking for career guidance in high school, peppering counselors with more questions about career fields than college applications. She wishes she had taken more time to get on the job experience to augment her studies. "Most schools just aren't addressing this issue, and if they do it's sporadic," she said. "Until they do, it's up to parents to encourage children to explore careers early."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things be-fore breakfast."

— Lewis Corroll

One of the main weaknesses in the improving player is not taking the opponents' bidding into account. On today's deal, if you (South) reached six hearts against silent opponents, you would presumably play to rulf a spade in dummy — a line that needs nothing more than finding trumps splitting and nothing too unpleasant in spades.

But the auction here has told. you that this approach to the hand could not succeed today, because East will surely overruff the third spade. So, abandon a line with no chance of success; it is time to find a new plan.

Well, what chances do you have? Since you cannot take rulfs in dummy, your best hope is to collect a surprising number of rulfs in your hand. To that end, win the opening spade lead and so that he see an appropriate the power of the propriate of the pro
