Salmon talks begin Saturday

Industry, local government groups join water users coalition

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The first salmon summit led by U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo will be held Saturday at the State Capitol in Boise.

The closed-door talks will be attended by environmentalists, federal agency representatives, Nez Perce tribal members, Idaho political leaders and water users. A list of participants was being organized Thursday.

Negotiations will begin at 9 a.m. and are expected to continue into the afternoon.

Finding Idaho water for 2004 salmon and steelhead runs and options for long-term solutions to salmon recovery will be among the key issues debated.

"These are going to be difficult negotiations, and no one should expect quick agreement," Crapo said in a written statement issued by his office.

"But these issues are so critical to our state's future that we must make the effort. I am encouraged both sides have agreed to come to the negotiating table so we can identify our common ground on these issues," the Republican said.

At Crapo's request, groups threatening to sue the federal government over its operation of Upper Snake River dams agreed to give negotiations a try. But the Idaho Conservation League, the National Wildlife Federation, Idaho Rivers - United and American Rivers haven't given up the possibility of a lawsuit.

Barring breaching of four lower Snake River dams in Washington state - an option opposed by the Bush administration - the environmentalists say the next best chance for wild Snake River salmon and steelhead is more water from the Upper Snake River. Today most of the upper river - if not all during drought years - is used for irrigation by the time it reaches Milner Dam near Burley.

Both environmentalists and water users say if more water for salmon is to be released from Upper Snake River dams, it should come from water users who are willing to sell their water for the fish recovery effort.

Coalition proposes budget increase

Education official says plan has no frills

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE - A state coalition of education interests called on Gov. Dirk Kempthorne this week to increase state support for public schools by 4.7 percent for the 2004-05 school year.

The recommendation for $503.1 million in general tax support for school operations is $40.3 million higher than authorized spending for this year, but Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard said it reflects mandated expenses with no frills.

"This is a very somber budget," Howard said on Thursday.

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who sits on the Senate Education Committee, concurred with Howard.

"It sounds on the surface like a conservative approach to funding public schools," Noh said.

Any pay raise for educators would be an additional cost of about $7.8 million for each percentage point increase. There was no general pay raise for state employees or teachers this year.

In the same vein, Noh noted the budget doesn't seem to take into account skyrocketing health care costs. Pay increases to teachers this year only came about through individual districts kicking in extra money.

Rep. Doug Jones, R-Elmer, who sits on the House Education Committee, said keeping teacher pay static puts the state at risk of losing its best teachers to such states as Washington, Oregon and Nevada, where teachers earn more.

"Once a teacher establishes residence in some new place, they are going to stay there for a while," he said. "And the ones most able to get a job are the best qualified, and those are the ones you are going to lose."

The bulk of the extra cash in the proposed state education budget covers additional staff and teachers for new classroom units to handle thousands more students, a decline of $13 million in money from the special education endowment, a multimillion-dollar increase in the state's

Planned Parenthood gives up funds

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Faced with persistent opposition from conservative lawmakers and mandates that exceed financial resources, Planned Parenthood of Idaho is ending its participation in a federally funded family planning program.

President Rebecca Poedy said the decision was prompted by the likelihood that lawmakers will vote to prohibit Planned Parenthood participation and that demand for family planning services has exceeded the $137,000 provided by the government. The current contract expires at the end of September.

But Poedy said she doesn't expect the decision to reduce the services women can get from the organization.

"We have experienced exponential growth in the last three years," Poedy said.

In fact, Planned Parenthood is looking toward adding primary-care services such as diagnosing a treating colds, sore throats and earaches for low-income women starting next year, she said.

Poedy said the organization was forced to make the decision because restrictions and mandates coming from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare had become too ponderous. The agency, pressured by conservative lawmakers, asked Planned Parenthood to continue seeing clients even after the $137,000 grant ran out, she said.

"It was an all-or-nothing model," Poedy said.

Health and Welfare spokesman Tom Shanahan said no other organization submitted a bid to take over the grant by the Sept. 16 deadline. Planned Parenthood provides services to more than 8,000 low-income women. There are two offices in Idaho, one in Boise and one in Twin Falls. The Twin Falls center has seen about 1,000 women since it opened during the summer of 2002, Poedy said.

Shanahan said local health districts will continue providing services as they have in the past.

Congress approves 'do not call' legislation

But second judge blocks anti-telemarketer list

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - With remarkable speed and near unanimity, Congress on Thursday passed legislation intended to ensure consumers can block many unwarranted telemarketing calls. But whether the service million of Americans signed up for takes effect next week was thrown into doubt when a second federal judge ruled the list violates free speech protections.

U.S. District Judge Edward W. Nottingham in Denver blocked the list late Thursday, handing another victory to telemarketers who argued the national registry is unconstitutional and will devastate their industry.

His decision came shortly after the House and Senate voted overwhelmingly for a bill making clear that the Federal Trade Commission has the power to enforce the "do-not-call" list. The legislation was prompted by an earlier ruling by a federal judge in Oklahoma City who said the FTC lacked the power to create and operate the registry.

The House voted 412-3 and the Senate 85-0 for the bill. President Bush said he looked forward to signing it. "Unwanted telemar-

Parents say tests show son doesn't have cancer

The Associated Press

SANDY, Utah - New tests show Parker Jensen is free of cancer, the boy and his parents told reporters Thursday in a brief but emotional news conference in which they forcefully demanded that Utah's court system "leave us alone."

Parker stood in front of his parents, Barbara and Daren Jensen, and told reporters "they didn't find any cancer at all" - a reference to his recent testing with a Boise, Idaho, oncologist.

The Jensens did not detail the test results, saying only that they showed no signs of cancer. The Boise oncologist, Dr. J. Martin Johnston, told The Associated Press that the family forbade him from commenting publicly about the tests.

Johnston said the state of Utah had been made aware of the test results.

But Carol Sisco, spokeswoman for Utah's Department of Child and Family Services, told television station KUTV that her agency did not have all those results, and said Johnston had been informing unsuccessfully to reach the Jensens to give them "more information" before the family made its declaration to reporters.

The Jensens were convinced their son had cancer after calls in his body after having a

Continued from A1. Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, said she was dismayed at the decision.

"My impression is that state family planning clinics have minimal services," she said. "If we are going to rely on state health districts, the number of family planning services they provide is minimal."

"It's my hope that the Department of Health and Welfare will look seriously at re-channeling that money to Idaho health districts which will replace those services," Block said.

"I am pleased that the Department of Health and Welfare is committed to state health districts can easily handle any women that Planned Parenthood might not be able to serve because of giving up the grant."

"I'm going to be flexible with our patients," she said Thursday. "Our goal is not to lose patients. We have still vowed to work with the Department of Health and Welfare to make sure that any families needing family planning and reproductive health services receive them."

Block agreed. Planned Parenthood is a private entity and should get its funding from private sources," she said.

Legislative budget writers last spring rejected the proposal from Ripley and others to prohibit Planned Parenthood's participation in the federal family planning program in what was viewed as an attempt to punish the organization for its support of abortion rights. But it was only a tie vote then, and Poedy said, "we know the odds of winning this battle in January are pretty slim."

In addition, she said while the women seeking family planning services more than doubled in the past four years, the federal grant increased just $8,000, dramatically increasing the subsidy Planned Parenthood had to raise to augment the government money. Poedy said it threatened to bankrupt the organization.

In 1999, she said, Planned Parenthood got $57 from the government for the typical family planning client. The organization added another $100 to cover the full cost.

Today, she said, the government is providing only $19 and the rising cost of care has pushed the cost of Planned Parenthood's subsidy to about $200 per typical client.

Poedy said Planned Parenthood is restructuring its program to require a co-payment that is about 40 percent from some women who had been getting the service for free under the government-financed plan. She said that would have some effect on clients but said Planned Parenthood makes every effort to make sure no one goes without services.

"We are going to be flexible with our patients," she said Thursday. "Our goal is not to lose patients. We have still vowed to work with the Department of Health and Welfare to make sure that any families needing family planning and reproductive health services receive them."

Their refusal led a Utah judge to order the treatment - and prompted the Jensens to flee the state last month. They were charged with kidnapping.

And the risk was great to irrigators who sold their water for fish during the good water years because of Idaho water rules and incentives to protect the Upper Snake River water for irrigation use.

Representing Idaho water users in the Saturday discussions is the Coalition for Idaho Water. Norm Semanko, a water law attorney and coalition president, said the group has grown over the past few weeks. The Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, the Idaho Association of Cities and the Idaho Association of Counties have joined the coalition members.

Schools

Continued from A1. share of pension costs and more instructional time for students needing help to pass high-stakes achievement tests.

Of all the new classrooms are coming from charter schools, which are drawing students from public schools to increase the classroom units without an equivalent increase in students.

To help finance $5 million to help the 25 percent of Idaho students failing to meet proficiency standards on the Idaho Standard Achievement Test, the proposal eliminates $2.5 million for teacher training in reading instruction, implementing achievement standards and dealing with special needs students.

"We're shifting attention away from teachers to supporting the students," Howard said. "When the funds are really limited, we have to prioritize, and this is putting the students first."

Those changes are still pending. The Salt Lake district attorney's office said it was working to resolve that case after the parents surrendered earlier this month and were released on their own recognition.

Despite insisting that his son was cancer-free, Darian Jensen's fierce words for the state suggested there was unfinished business.

"As a father of this family, I tell Utah to leave us alone," Daren Jensen said at the news conference, his voice hitching as he tried to keep his composure. "Let me use my resources to care for my family, to get them the care they need instead of fighting you in court, because I will. I will use everything I have to fight you."

Both parents fought back tears as they urged Utah authorities to stay away from the family.

Barbara Jensen said the ordeal marked "a horrible, horrible summer, and I can't say enough what it feels like that someone wants to come and remove your child from your home."

Daren Jensen said his battle with Utah wasn't about chemotherapy, but about parents' rights.

"This isn't a choice or a fight for treatment," Daren Jensen said. "It's a fight about how to raise your family and care for them."

Prosecutors hope to speed appeal process in case against Moussaoui

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Prosecutors have asked a judge to dismiss all charges against terrorism suspect Zacarias Moussaoui, saying they want the extraordinary request only to hasten an appeal challenging his right to question al-Qaida prisoners.

Prosecutors want an appellate court to overrule two district court orders that gave Moussaoui the right to question three captives who he says could testify he was not a conspirator in the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

In light of the rulings the court has made, the government believes that, at this juncture, dismissal of the indictment ... is the surest route for ensuring that the questions at issue here can promptly be presented to the 4th Circuit (Court of Appeals), the written motion said.

U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema has said she would impose a punishment on the government next week for defying the two orders, which gave Moussaoui the right to question the witnesses through a satellite hookup.

In the new motion, the government asked that the court postpone the effect of any dismissal so the appellate court, in Richmond, Va., could intervene.

Prosecutors have opposed any direct access between the prisoners and Moussaoui, who has acknowledged his loyalty to Osama bin Laden and is the only U.S. defendant charged as a conspirator with the Sept. 11 hijackers.

The government has argued that national security would be gravely harmed if any details were revealed about the sensitive interrogations or statements made by the prisoners, who are held in undisclosed locations outside the United States.

However, federal law says that when a defendant is prevented by court order from disclosing classified information — in this case the al-Qaida testimony — the judge is obligated to dismiss the case unless the court determines the interests of justice would be served by another solution.

Moussaoui's defense team, representing his interests while he serves as his own lawyer, said in a motion released Wednesday the case should be dismissed.

Two of the prisoners were among Osama bin Laden's top operatives, Sept. 11 mastermind Khalid Shaikh Mohammed and a key planner of the attacks, Ramzi bin al-Shibh. The third is Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, a suspected paymaster for al-Qaida.

In a statement, the Justice Department said, "We believe the Constitution does not require, and national security will not permit, the government to allow Moussaoui, an avowed terrorist, to have direct access to his terrorist confederates who have been detained abroad as enemy combatants in the midst of a war."

Students, parents meet day after school shooting

COLD SPRING, Minn. (AP) — Emotional parents hugged each other as they escorted their children to an information session at a middle school Thursday, a day after a 15-year-old boy opened fire at the nearby high school, killing one student and critically wounding another.

School officials said Thursday's meeting was organized to provide a forum to talk about the shootings and to let shaken students and parents know about counseling services available when classes at Rocori High School resume, possibly on Friday.

A freshman is in police custody as a suspect in the shooting, but authorities have refused to identify him. Authorities have said he is cooperating with the investigation and a motive has not been determined.

Several media outlets and students identified the suspect as John Jason McLaughlin, a freshman whose father is a sheriff's deputy.

Sherry Newell-Opitz, the mother of a freshman who was among many students locked down as authorities raced to the shooting scene in the school gym Wednesday, said her daughter has no fear about returning to school.

"I think her comfort level can be attributed to how well the school handled things," Newell-Opitz said.

Matt Toren, a student at Rocori High School, said it would be helpful to get back to school and talk about what happened. "If kids had problems they'll have counselors there to help them," he said.

Sheriff John Samner said about 30 students witnessed the shootings and investigators had interviewed them.

One student was in a weight room when he was shot, and the other was shot in the gym, both shortly after 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

Aaron Rollins, a senior, died at a hospital Wednesday. He was shot in the neck. Brett Barcell, a freshman, remained in critical condition Thursday with gunshot wounds to the chest and head.

Several students described McLaughlin as an intensely shy, quiet boy who kept to himself.

Two Rocori High School students console one another as they leave school Thursday in Cold Spring, Minn., following an information session dealing with Wednesday's high school shootings.

"He really didn't associate with people," said Scott Eisenschenk, a freshman who was in class with McLaughlin just prior to the shooting. He said that McLaughlin wasn't acting any different than normal on Wednesday.

Others said he was self-conscious about his severe acne, which some kids teased him about.

School Superintendent Scott Staska said there was no reason to expect an incident like this from McLaughlin. "There were some typical issues in the past, but nothing that would lead us to something like this," he said. He declined to elaborate.

Hundreds of people came together Wednesday evening at St. Boniface Catholic Church to grieve.

"In the space of a minute our whole world is turned upside down. Nothing can prepare us for something like this," the Rev. Cletus Connors told them.

Mike McMahon, who graduated from Rocori a year ago, said he knew one of the victims, Aaron Rollins, from playing childhood sports together.

"Aaron was one of the nicest kids," McMahon said.

State boxing czar plays fair by ending local bouts

With one swift blow last week, the state athletics commissioner delivered a knockout punch and ended Twin Falls' version of Thursday Night Fights. State officials made the right call to end an event that didn't have the proper elements of well-officiated and properly sanctioned bouts by any means.

fisticuffs, not the sweet science of boxing. If there's anybody who can regulate boxing matters effectively, it's Katsilometes, a former Bannock County commissioner who won regional titles as an amateur fighter, and who still referees bouts today.

Our view: State athletics officials were on target by knocking out Twin Falls' unsanctioned Thursday Night Fights. We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Twin Falls promoter Bob LeCour argued the state's ban was unnecessary, and that the fights used proper equipment and weight classes. But a safe fighting environment needs much more than that. Trainers and medical officials should be nearby at all times, to protect fighters who risk serious physical injury.

Judging by LeCour's other boxing promotions in Montana, providing that sufficient medical care has not been a priority. And because LeCour was banned from boxing years ago, he cannot carry insurance for club boxing fights - hardly a reassuring thought for small-town sports.

When boxing events are state-sanctioned, well officiated and have proper ringside medical care, they are safer and have fewer liability concerns for the state. Then they attract better athletes and genuine fans who appreciate the true athleticism of boxing. This is why the College of Southern Idaho's boxing locker, regulated by the National Junior College Athletics Association, continues to be such a popular event in Twin Falls.

Once promoters comply with state regulations and provide real boxing elements, the sport could return and gain an even bigger following in Twin Falls. But for now, Katsilometes did the right thing to stop the fight.

Dems still seek the 'establishment' candidate

Having trouble figuring out the Democratic presidential race? You're not alone. With 10 candidates, it was bound to be confusing. With no clear favorite, it's even more so. A lot of myths have developed. If you listen too closely or read too much, you might think it's a two-man race between Sen. John Kerry and former Gov. Howard Dean. Or that Mr. Dean has the race wrapped up. Or that he did until retired Gen. Wesley Clark got in.

CARL P. LEUBSDORF

If you watch the debates you might sense it's a race between Dean and Sen. Joe Lieberman. Or that Rep. Dennis Kucinich and the Rev. Al Sharpton are significant players.

Most of those things are not true, at least not yet. The events of the next few months will determine which is the right scenario.

Meanwhile, it's possible that the most important event this month took place when Rep. Dick Gephardt took on Dean in Iowa, charging that the former Vermont governor backed Republican moves in the 1990s to curb Social Security and Medicare.

Sometimes, even in politics, location is everything, and Iowa's Jan. 19 caucuses are the first test affecting convention delegates. Polls indicate that Gephardt, who won in 1988, has the best chance of beating Dean there.

And while the Iowa results won't determine the ultimate outcome, they will influence New Hampshire's primary eight days later. And those first two states, unrepresentative as they are, will shape the rest of the race.

Since 1972, every Democrat who has won both Iowa and New Hampshire has won the nomination. Every time but one there has been a New England candidate, he has won New Hampshire. That means the likeliest New Hampshire winner may be whoever does best in Iowa among Dean, Kerry and Lieberman.

Here's another pattern: Virtually every contested Democratic race has become a fight between an establishment candidate and an insurgent. The establishment candidate has usually won: Walter Mondale in 1984, Michael Dukakis in 1988, Bill Clinton in 1992 and Al Gore in 2000.

The exceptions: 1972, when George McGovern rode anti-Vietnam war feeling to the nomination, and 1976, when Jimmy Carter won in a year there never was a clear establishment candidate.

The bad news for Dean is that insurgents usually run out of gas - and money. That happened to Gary Hart, Jesse Jackson, Paul Tsongas and Bill Bradley.

The good news is that his vast bankroll - he'll be shown next week to be far ahead in fund raising - might prevent that. Besides, 2000 looks like 1976 in that the Democratic establishment, while largely opposed to Dean, hasn't found a single alternative.

Kerry has underperformed. Lieberman is too conservative for many Democrats. Sens. Bob Graham and John Edwards have made little impact.

It explains the sudden interest in the untested Clark. But the establishment candidate could be Gephardt, who has support from many fellow House members and a significant, though not overwhelming, portion of organized labor on a fringe.

The latter is important in Iowa, where the key is to identify supporters who will attend a two-hour meeting at a local school, library or firehouse on a frigid January night. Midwesterners have done well there, and Gephardt hails from neighboring Missouri.

He has learned from his unsuccessful 1988 run. He is a crisper performer on the stump and in debates, able this time to make a pitiful argument in a way that produces a successful TV "sound bite" like repeatedly terming President Bush "a miserable failure."

His attack on Dean's history on Medicare and Social Security was ideal for Iowa, which has the fourth highest proportion of people over 65. He's likely to tailor other arguments for Iowa constituencies, knowing it is vital for him.

His fund raising so far has not been impressive, and if he loses in Iowa, he probably can't be nominated. But if he wins, he earns a ticket to post-New Hampshire primaries and a good chance of being the establishment candidate, especially if Dean retains his current lead in New Hampshire.

So Iowa will not only determine Gephardt's fate but whether this will be a long race or a short one.

Police wasted time getting to crime scene

I'm writing to express my frustration with the Twin Falls Police Department in response to events on Sept. 15, 2003.

My mother and her husband live close to the College of Southern Idaho in a quiet neighborhood. On Sept. 15, my stepfather came home from work to find they had been robbed during the day. He immediately called the police. Two-and-a-half hours later, the police arrived at their residence, after my mother had called a second time to ask if anyone was going to respond. Apparently, they were in the middle of a shift change during the first call and it slipped through the cracks.

The police were unable to dust for fingerprints as their lab personnel were out of town. Instead, they took two items back to the lab in hopes that lab personnel might detect something when they returned. After taking a statement and advising my mother to watch the pawn shops, they left. Maybe I've watched too many investigative cop shows, but more could have been done.

For example, had the police questioned the neighbors as my stepfather did that evening, they would have learned that a door-to-door salesman had been in the neighborhood that afternoon asking for donations and selling magazines. Two of the neighbors could give detailed descriptions of the man. In addition, another neighbor saw a maroon van with Montana license plates nearby and remembers a woman hunched in the driver seat. I don't know what happened that day, but these are definitely questionable coincidences that should have been further investigated.

Had the police taken more action, the evening news could have issued a warning for others to look for the van or individuals fitting this description for further questioning regarding their activity that afternoon.

Twin Falls is a small community, and I can't help but wonder: (1) how it could take so long, 2 1/2 hours, for the police to respond to a robbery call within the city limits; and (2) how the police could so negligently fail to do what to me seems like basic detective work - looking for fingerprints and questioning the neighbors. Their lack of diligence frustrates me because my mother and her husband now feel that they have been victimized twice - once by a scam who took what few sentimental items they had in the house and once by the police who have sworn to serve and protect. Gov. Leavitt's record, experience show he's the right choice for the EPA

Think of a key environmental issue - global warming, air pollution, storm water runoff, habitat destruction - and chances are its cause can be traced to haphazard urban growth.

When cities and states fail to plan well for their development, roads and sewers become overburdened and send emissions and effluent into our air and water. Ecologically critical lands disappear before we can protect them. Our people's health and quality of life degrade. So it's essential that the next administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency understand the connections between urban sprawl and the environment. Fortunately, Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt, the president's nominee for the post, is one who does.

I learned this firsthand in working with Leavitt at the National

PARRIS GLENDENING

Governors Association over the past few years. In our respective stints as NGA chairman, Leavitt and I collaborated on an effort to raise the profile of growth issues while developing tools that states can use to tame sprawl and build healthy cities and towns. In governor-only sessions, he lobbied hard, and successfully, for NGA to produce its first-ever land use principles.

Leavitt's passion in this arena grew out of his experience in Utah. While his home state is largely rural, the vast majority of its population - and most of the projected future growth - is concentrated in an environmentally sensitive corridor along the Wasatch Mountains, stretching 100 miles to the north and south of Salt Lake City. The population of this silver of Utah is expected to swell from 1.6 million in 2000 to 5 million by 2050.

Leavitt recognized it was the state's responsibility to make sure that this growth didn't become an unlivable mess. He also believed that citizens and local governments should have a strong say in developing a vision for their future.

With those principles in mind, he enacted legislation to create and administer a special fund for protecting open space in developing areas. He secured funding to preserve 175 miles of railroad right-of-way for commuter rail. And, most impressively, he served as honorary co-chairman of Envision Utah, lending unequivocal support to public-private planning effort that has become a national model. Led by a coalition of business, civic and government leaders, Envision Utah began by listening to people, thousands of them. Citizens were invited to more than 150 public workshops, where, through use of innovative planning tools, they were able to show how they wanted to shape future land use, transportation and open space preservation.

Leavitt participated in the workshops just like any other citizen, sitting for hours at one of the many workshop tables. When Envision Utah asked every household in the region to complete a survey on the region's future, he sat down with his family to do just that. And he recorded a television ad urging his constituents to do the same.

In the end, citizens said they wanted more investment in public transit and affordable housing, more reliance on cycling and walking, more preservation of the open spaces and more town-like development along key transportation spines. The chosen Quality Growth Strategy depends dramatically from current trends, offering 171 square miles of land; conserving expanded choices in housing and neighborhood types; reducing vehicle emissions and traffic congestion; and saving $4.5 billion in transportation, water, sewer and utility infrastructure, which would have subsidized sprawl.

I'll leave it to environmentalist colleagues to scrutinize other aspects of the governor's record. No doubt they will press him to explain how his support of the controversial Legacy Highway squares with his quality-growth principles, as they should.

As Leavitt well knows, the EPA has become an important partner in developing citizen-friendly, market-oriented approaches to managing urban growth along the lines of Envision Utah, which the EPA helped to fund. Far from dictating low places should grow, the agency has supported innovations served as a clearinghouse for best practices and showed admirable flexibility on redeveloping industrial brownfields and managing urban runoff.

Grappling with sprawl and creating great communities have nothing to do with partisanship. Governors from both parties have been leaders in these arenas.

As senators debate Leavitt's confirmation as EPA chief they would do well to recognize his bipartisan leadership in bringing issues of growth and quality of life to the fore.

Parris Glendingen, former Democratic governor of Maryland is president of the Smart Growth Leadership Institute and a board member of Smart Growth America, a national coalition of organizations advocating alternatives to urban sprawl.

Woman faces new charge in shooting

ELKO, Nev. — An additional charge of being a fugitive from justice has been levied against Lisa Ledford, 34, who was found hiding in a hotel room Tuesday after a Minidoka County sheriff's deputy was shot at Cactus Petes Hotel in Jackpot.

Meanwhile, Lt. Randy White was in snafu on Thursday at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise and had been up and walking, a spokeswoman for the sheriff's department said. Doctors asserted and in his right leg, from his hip to his knee, inside the femur. White was shot three times with a 9 mm handgun — once in the abdomen and twice in the leg.

Lt. Bill Cunningham of the Elko County Sheriff's Department said Thursday that the additional charge against Ledford was levied because a warrant for her arrest was issued by authorities in Idaho. She has been charged with being an accessory to robbery in connection with the Sept. 19 holdup of a bin Laden in Paul. Originally charged in Nevada with obstructing an officer, Ledford's new charge brings her total bail to more than $31,000. Cunningham said he expects Idaho authorities will probably extradite Ledford within the near future.

John Kurkowski, 23, remained Thursday in the Elko County Jail on several charges in connection with the shooting of Whites. Authorities were still deciding where to charge him with the Paul robbery — in Idaho or federal court. Elko County officials said they would continue to keep Kurkowski, as the charge of attempted murder of a law enforcement officer and battery on an officer with substantial bodily harm are the most serious of the various charges the excision is facing. Bail on the two counts is set at $50,000 each.

Snowmobilers propose connector trail

KETCHUM — Snowmobilers have proposed a connector trail in upper Easley Gulch on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. The connector would join the Silver Creek and Boulder Creek snowmobile trails, a Forest Service news release said.

Constructing a short connector trail in upper Easley Gulch will eliminate the safety problem of snowmobilers crossing Idaho Highway 75 twice to access the Boulder Creek area, said Deborah Cooper, SNRA ranger. It would also eliminate the need for snowmobilers to travel about half a mile on the Harriman Trail and reduce conflicts between skiers and snowmobilers. Snowmobiler traffic also would be reduced on the East Fork of Baker Creek.

The Sawtooth Snowmobile Club would supply money and labor for trail construction and any needed vegetation restoration. The proposal calls for a road-like bench about 100 yards long nearly two miles up Easley Gulch from Highway 75. Any comments or suggestions about the proposal can be sent by Oct. 22 to the SNRA, HC 64, Box 8291, Ketchum, 83340. Address comments to the attention of Ed Camuddy.

Twin Falls Music Club plans membership tea

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Music Club will begin its 2003-04 calendar with a membership tea tonight at 7. The meeting and program will be held at First Christian Church, 601 Shoshone St. N.

Lynn Berg, a professor of voice at Boise State University for the past 20 years, will present the evening's program. A native of Wisconsin, he has also held faculty positions at the University of Wisconsin-Lau Claire and State University of New York College-Fredonia. Berg has performed extensively throughout Idaho. He has been soloist with the Boise Philharmonic and the Boise Master Choral, and has sung numerous leading baritone roles with Opera Idaho. He has appeared as a guest artist with the Rietz College operatic theater and has toured with the Boise Opera, appeared in the Magic Valley as soloist in Handels "Messiah" with the Magic Valley Choral under the direction of Carson Wong, and has also been a frequent soloist with the Carinas and Wood River Valley chorals in Sun Valley.

'Freedom Bus' wheels into Rupert

Bus riders, locals call for change in immigration laws

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Immigrants want a chance to live in America like everyone else. But the paperwork to fill out and the lines to stand in can be too much, said Gloria Lara, Idaho Community Action Network member and "Freedom Bus" rider.

Immigration rider — People in "about 20 bus to B3" buses are traveling to Washington, D.C., asking for respect and justice for all people and bringing attention to what describe as needed changes in immigration laws. Two buses on the Freedom Ride stopped in Rupert Thursday and were met with a crowd of supporters.

The world has changed, but immigrant laws have not, said Adan Ramirez, member of ICAN who attended Thursday's event. The focus of the bus riders is not to change a specific law, but to make people understand there might be a better way.

"The immigrants are not causing the problem. The laws aren't allowing them to pursue their dreams," Ramirez said.

People cross the U.S. border and are labeled immediately as criminals, drug users or people who don't pay taxes, Ramirez said, but those labels aren't true.

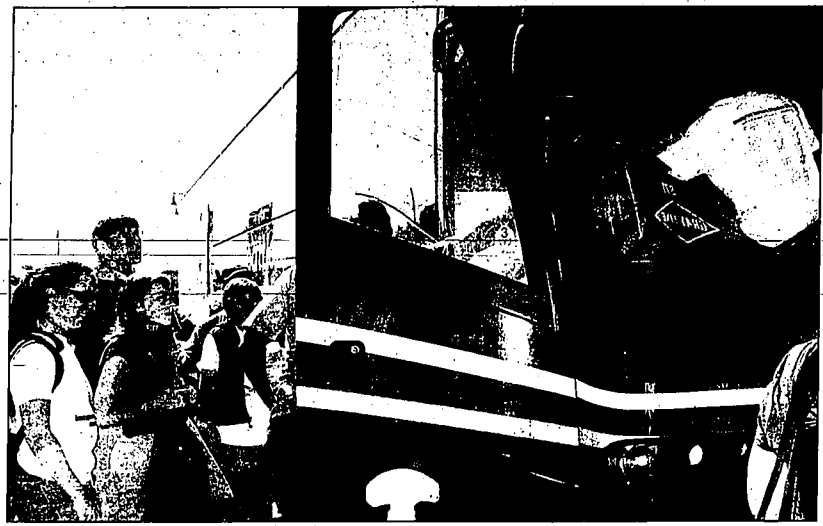

Mayor Audrey Newirth, who spoke at the event, said she has done tax work for many of the local immigrants; it's a misconception they don't pay taxes, she said. "Most immigrants are good people."

Ramirez, a former farm worker himself, pointed out immigrants often take jobs that others won't do. If immigrants weren't a part of the labor force, everyone would see higher prices on products because farmers and others would have to pay higher wages to entice people to work, he said.

"We are so spoiled. We won't take those kinds of jobs," Ramirez said.

"If it wasn't for them, the farmers wouldn't make it," Newirth said.

Ramon Ramirez, president of the Northwest Transplanters and Farmworkers United in Oregon, said changes in the immigration system need to come for those who work hard and practice civic participation and "who are really the backbone of the economy."

The bus riders aren't just about helping Hispanic immigrants. Lara said she, as the sole bus rider from Idaho, represents immigrants from Mexico, Bosnia, Afghanistan and elsewhere.

"They are all going through the same hardships," Lara said.

A rider on the bus from Seattle, Noor Ahmed, said he wants to help thousands of immigrants like him who face illegal deportation. From Somalia, Ahmed sought asylum in the United States in 1997. While in the country, he was taken from his house and told he would be deported. Ahmed worked with lawyers and will not be deported, but he lost his job and everything else in the process, he said.

"I came here to save my life," he said. "I want to live like a peaceful person in the United States."

Lara spoke about other hardships immigrants face — she was the daughter of immigrants. It's hard on children and families as well as the immigrants, she said. Children grow up learning "you're not from Mexico, you're not from here."

Family is what brought Gabriel Deldominguez on the Freedom Ride. Due to "messy" immigration laws, he cannot bring his mother from Mexico to live with him. The bus ride itself is an amazing experience, said Seattle bus rider Dorry Elias. On the bus, 17 countries are represented, "yet we share a common vision of equality and justice."

Tuesday's event was a positive one for Rupert, Newirth said. "I want the Hispanics to know I'm working for justice for them."

"What belongs to God belongs to everyone," Adan Ramirez said.

County looks at fee hike for serving legal papers

By Rebecca Meany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County residents needing to have summonses served might want to act fast.

Service fees are set to double, possibly as soon as next week, if county commissioners approve a proposal from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department. A public hearing on the matter is scheduled Monday.

Under a new state law, county commissioners now have authority to set fees for various county services. In Twin Falls, they set the current fees in the early and mid-1990s, and the money collected by the county for serving legal summonses does not cover expenses, said David Benefield of the sheriff's department.

The fee increase proposal is based on the actual cost of the

"We figured what our costs were with wages, benefits, gas mileage, vehicle maintenance, postage, etc.," he said. "Then we broke it down by how long on average it takes to complete the process."

In Twin Falls, it costs an average of $30 to serve legal papers each time, said Benefield, adding that it takes an average of two and a half attempts to reach each recipient.

Build a new Hailey airport?

Most at public hearing favor move, but Sun Valley Co. urges caution

By Pat Murphy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The first public hearing into how to deal with the Wood River Valley's growing airport problem drew an unexpectedly small turnout, but one generally favoring construction of a larger field at a site distant from the present Hailey field as the ultimate solution.

But Wally Huffman of the Sun Valley Co., the area's largest beneficiary of tourist traffic created by the airport, appealed to the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority in a letter to proceed cautiously and slowly. He pointed out that the convenient location of the airport is preferred by airlines, and a distant location for a new airport might drive business away.

Talk of a new airport is nothing new here: In 1990, a study commissioned by the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority envisioned the possible need for a new field as air traffic increased and commercial aircraft got bigger. The preferred site in that study was located about 20 miles east of Idaho Highway 75 and just north of Highway 20 in an area known as Moonstone.

At the Wednesday evening public hearing, about 65 people were scattered throughout the 550-seat auditorium of the old Wood River High School as airport consultant Tom Schnetzer, of Minneapolis-based Mead & Hunt, worked through a 35-minute explanation with graphics of problems facing Friedman airport and alternative remedies.

Summarizing the basic problem, Schnetzer said the Federal Aviation Administration has virtually removed control of airports from local authorities and imposed design and safety standards that force airports to comply or lose federal money. He explained that Friedman, which operates close to the downtown Hailey business district, has been bumped up by the FAA from a B-3 airport to a C-3 facility because of faster approach speeds and longer wingspans (85 feet) of the new 78-passenger turboprop Bombardier Deltaland 38 Q-400 being flown by Horizon Airlines.

The FAA has notified the airport it must extend the 6,952-foot runway to 7,500 feet, which would require more acquisition of private land to the south of the airport. Tduwday also must be moved farther from the single northwest-southeast runway for safety. The FAA says the control tower also must be relocated on the field, according to Schnetzer.

Hospital gains still reflect clinic purchase

By Sandy Miller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The purchase of the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital a year and eight months ago continues to be reflected in Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's financial statements.

The purchase of the clinic brought the hospital more patients and more revenue.

"Admissions are up over the prior year by 2,400," Chief Financial Officer John Groesbeck told the Finance Committee Thursday. "There's still an impact of the clinic acquisition."

The hospital's fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 through Sept. 30. As of the end of August, the hospital had counted 39,015 patient days this year, up from 36,585 days the same time the previous year.

By the end of the summer, the hospital's revenue will increase

Robbery reward rises; police seek help in finding suspect

By Rebecca Meany
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a man who is suspected in three bank robberies in Twin Falls has increased from $10,000 to $25,000.

It is more than likely the same man committed the robberies, police say.

The Wells Fargo Bank branch at 1329 Filer Ave. E. was robbed on Sept. 10. The same bank had been robbed on July 30, 2002. A Key Bank branch at 1665 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. was robbed March 31.

In all three cases, the suspect wore long sleeves, gloves and a balaclava, and carried a blue semi-automatic gun and a backpack.

"You have to question why he's wearing long-sleeved clothing and gloves in warm weather," said Detective Dan Lewin of the Twin Falls Police Department. "Is he trying to hide something on his arms and hands that can ID him, like freckles or tattoos?"

"Normally, you'd be concerned about leaving fingerprints," he said, "but he's obviously concerned about us not seeing something else."

The suspect is described as a Caucasian man between the ages of 35 and 45, 6 feet tall and weighing at least 250 pounds. Police hope his physical description and the combination of items he uses will ring a bell with someone, and they are encouraging people to come forward with tips.

Officers declined to comment on evidence collected from the scenes of the crimes. They did say, however, that dogs were not used to track the suspect.

"We have to have dogs there pretty quickly after a robbery, before people walk in and out of the scene and destroy scent trails," Detective Curtis Gambrel said.

Even without a dog's nose, suspects leave trails officers can follow.

James 'Red' Welshire - Twin Falls

James "Red" Welshire, 49, of Twin Falls, died Monday, Sept. 22, 2003.

James was born Oct. 2, 1953, at Danville, Ill., to James K. "Pete" and Norma J. Welshire. He graduated in 1971 from Urbana High School in Illinois. James "Red" worked at a variety of companies, including Razor Cattle Co., Big Creek Fish & Gunk, Stanfield Feedlot, Anderson Gins, Meyers Bakery, ICCO, James & James Forestry Station and Gilmer Inc. driving trucks, logging and most recently dispatching for Gilmer. Those who know and love him best knew James as "Red." Red enjoyed hunting, camping, riding all-terrain vehicles, playing pool and pulling pranks. He was an awesome husband, father, son and friend.

sons, Tony Welshire of Oregon and Allen Froberg. He was preceded in death by his father, James K. "Pete" Welshire and twin sons, Justin and Joshua Welshire.

Although Red was not allowed to raise all of his children, he always made sure to support them. Red was able to have his daughter, Victoria, live with him and Violet at different times and he enjoyed having her with him. Even though Robert and Destiny weren't his, he raised them and claimed them as his very own kids. He was very proud to call them his kids. The love and pride he had for his children was only surpassed by the greatest love of his life, Violet. He left no room for doubt of his pride in her. In Red's heart, his family included his in-laws and friends.

Red's booming voice, which could make a wayward child feel small as an ant, could also make a person feel taller than a mountain. His unique laugh and boyish grin will never be forgotten. He enjoyed a good joke but loved a good prank even better. Although Red was raised in the city, he was a cowboy at heart and lived his life that way. He will be deeply missed by all his family and friends.

A viewing and time of remembrance will be conducted from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 25, 2003, at the Howe-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome. No formal funeral service is planned.

Velma E. Morgan - Burley

Velma E. Morgan, 97, of Burley, died Tuesday, Sept. 23, 2003, at Parke View Care & Rehabilitation Center.

She was born in Giarard, Kan., on March 1, 1906. She was the daughter of Vernon E. and Nellie Rilling Morgan. When she was 5 years old, she moved with her family to Twin Falls, Idaho, where they lived on a homesteaded farm. She graduated from Twin Falls High School, attended Albion State Normal and then graduated from the University of Idaho.

She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Burley. Velma loved her life in California and was forever loyal to the USC Trojans. She loved all sports, watched football, baseball and golf on TV and even knew the names of many of the players. She traveled extensively in her younger years and blessed her nieces and nephew with much love and lavish presents. She enjoyed shopping and in later years was a great catalog customer. She wrote cards and letters to her friends with beautiful left-handed penmanship. She accepted life as it was handed to her with poise and grace. She was a special lady and will be greatly missed.

She is survived by one brother, Wm. J. (Ruth) Morgan of Burley; several nieces; and one nephew. A private family service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 27, 2003, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., Burley, with the Rev. Dr. John A. Rakestraw of the Burley First Presbyterian Church officiating.

Mrs. Eula Ellen Slack, age 87, of Florence, Ala., died Wednesday, Sept. 24, 2003, at E.C.M. Hospital in Florence.

She was a native of Twin Falls, Idaho, and had lived in Florence the past five years. Mrs. Slack was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and was retired from the banking industry.

Visitation will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28, 2003, and from 9 to 10 a.m. Monday, Sept. 29, 2003, at White Mortuary

Mother gets probation in death of infant left in hot vehicle

BOISE (AP) - The mother of an infant who died after being left all day in a sun-baked sport utility vehicle pleaded guilty on Thursday to a voluntary manslaughter and was put on three years probation.

Lori Ann Kelly, 30, entered the plea in an agreement with prosecutors that precluded any jail or prison time. She must perform 120 hours of community service, undergo counseling and make a videotape showing her version of events and how the baby's death could have been prevented.

The tape will be shown by local hospitals in birthing and parenting classes.

"I just hope I can do what it takes, so that this awful tragic thing doesn't happen to anybody else and do my best to educate other mothers and other parents," Kelly told 4th District Judge Darin Williams.

On July 30, Kelly became distracted on her way to work as a project manager for a team of software engineers and forgot to drop 10-week-old Hunter off at daycare. Authorities said the infant died within an hour after being left in the car on a day when the temperature hit 105 degrees.

It was just her third day back at work after maternity leave when Kelly was apparently distracted by a telephone call from her mother, bypassed the daycare center and drove directly to work, investigators said.

She dropped her keys as she got out of the car in the parking lot, further distracting herself, police said, and then worked straight through until late afternoon without a break.

Authorities said she did not remember failing to drop the child off at daycare until she was driving to the center to pick him up that afternoon. She found the baby on the back seat and rushed to the hospital, police said, but the boy was dead.

Kelly and her husband shared child care responsibilities, and her husband had taken their 19-month-old son to his daycare center that morning.

In the past 10 years, more than 300 children have died from after being left in unattended cars, according to National Safe Kids Campaign.

State revokes daycare license because of sex offender's presence

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - State officials have revoked the license of an Idaho Falls daycare operator after learning that a registered sex offender lives in the residence.

Idaho Department of Health and Welfare spokesman Tom Shanahan said the license for Guardian Angel Day Care was revoked Monday.

The in-home daycare, operated by Holly McClain, has been licensed by the state since 1999.

Health and Welfare workers learned in late August that Holly McClain's husband, William E. McClain, was living at the residence, Shanahan said.

William McClain, 52, was convicted in 1991 in Walla Walla County of a statutory rape, according to Idaho's sex offender registry.

He served three years of a five-year prison sentence before he was released in 1994 for good behavior, said Veltry Johnson, spokesman for the Washington State Department of Correction.

Licensed providers of in-home day care in Idaho cannot have sex offenders living in their homes, Shanahan said.

To be licensed, an operator must give Health and Welfare officials a list of anyone who is 18 years old or older and living in their homes so workers can review each person's criminal history.

McClain has been registered at the address since Sept. 12, 2001, Bonneville County Sheriff's Sgt. Kevin Cox said.

But in Guardian Angel's case, it was never disclosed to the department that William McClain was living there, Shanahan said.

McClain said she does not plan to appeal the decision to revoke her day-care license. She said she still tends some children whose parents have said they stand by her and her family.

She said her husband has not hurt anyone and has registered on the state's sex offender registry every year.

"We have complied with every thing the state has asked of us," she said.

Idaho Falls resident Sarah Lane, a former client of the day care, said she pulled her two children out of day care when William McClain's name on a list she requested from police.

Lane said she was curious to find out who on the list might live in her neighborhood. She saw William McClain's name and the day care's address. She said she had taken the two children to the day care for nearly a year.

"When you go to a state-licensed day care, you assume they check everyone out in the home," Lane said.

Leading Republicans unite behind Schwarzenegger

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Two leading California Republicans have thrown their support behind Arnold Schwarzenegger in California's gubernatorial recall, a day after the political novice held his own in a barb-filled debate.

Former gubernatorial candidate Bill Simon announced Thursday that he was endorsing Schwarzenegger, and Rep. Darrell Issa, who bankrolled the drive to get the recall on the ballot, planned to do the same at an appearance with the actor Friday, a Republican source said.

"I am here to endorse Arnold Schwarzenegger for governor. I think Arnold Schwarzenegger is the right man to be governor of California," Simon told a town hall meeting.

The endorsements provide a key boost to Schwarzenegger's candidacy with only one week and at half remaining until Election Day.

It also puts more pressure on conservative Republican Sen. Tom McClintock to fall in line behind Schwarzenegger's candidacy - something he has refused to do.

McClintock vowed in a string of TV interviews Thursday that he is not going anywhere.

"I don't know what it is that people find so astonishing about a politician who actually keeps his promises," McClintock told Fox News. "I promised at the beginning of this campaign that I would sell it through to the finish line, and I keep my promises."

Word of the endorsements comes a day after a debate that was filled with shouting, insults and wisecracks among the five leading candidates seeking to replace Gov. Gray Davis. The debate frequently turned rowdy, and candidates routinely jumped on top of each other's answers and shouted to be heard.

Davis' advisers say the raucous atmosphere bolstered the governor's strategy of portraying the recall campaign as a circus and going about the business of leading California.

Observers said Schwarzenegger's debate performance, while competent and often funny, may have hurt him with women voters, who have not embraced the macho former bodybuilder and action star.

Schwarzenegger repeatedly clashed with independent Arianna Huffington in a way that some analysts called overly aggressive.

"Where this could hurt him is if the exchange becomes a catalyst for discussion about Arnold and women in general," said Arnold Steinberg, a GOP consultant and pollster who is not working for a candidate in the race.

The squabbling between Schwarzenegger and Huffington reached its peak at one point during the debate when she cut the actor off and said, "This is the way you treat women. We know that."

Schwarzenegger replied: "I just realized that I have a perfect partner for you, Terminator 4."

After the debate, Huffington said the "Terminator 4" comment was an offensive reference to a scene from "Terminator 3" in which Schwarzenegger's character snuffs a female robot's head into a toilet. She called it a clear "indication of what he really thinks of women."

Schwarzenegger's aides dismissed the notion that the bickering was part of a pattern of treating women badly.

"If she's going sit there and berate and interrupt the debate, she is going to get treated roughly at times," said spokesman Rob Strutzman.

Schwarzenegger said Thursday that he meant the "Terminator" reference as a compliment. "Because in 'Terminator' we always had powerful women," he told Fox News. "If she takes it the wrong way, it's not my fault."

Post Falls man commits suicide at state prison

BOISE (AP)—A 22-year-old Post Falls convict with known suicidal tendencies hanged himself in a maximum security cell.

Donald Shawn Gryness was found in his cell Tuesday evening, just hours after being transferred from a medium-security facility because of his erratic behavior.

A psychological rehabilitation specialist told a judge the same day that Gryness "exhibited behaviors that have placed his welfare in jeopardy. He has expressed and displayed signs of suicidal ideation."

Less than two weeks ago,

Gryness cut himself on the neck and wrists with a razor after he promised prison staff he would not hurt himself, said officials said.

Gryness was sentenced on what is known as a rider, or enhanced jurisdiction, which allows inmates to receive intensive treatment and evaluation and then either be released on probation or sent to prison for their full terms.

He was being evaluated when his behavior led staff to recommend his transfer to a more supervised environment.

But Gryness was not placed on suicide watch after being moved to the maximum security prison on Wednesday.

"It was determined after a conversation a psychologist had with the offender that suicide watch was not needed," Correction department spokeswoman Teresa Jones said. The interview with the chief psychologist happened as Gryness was being transferred, Jones said, just after 3 p.m.

Gryness was alone in a holding cell and was monitored every hour. He used a bed sheet to hang himself, officials said.

Had he been on suicide watch, Department of Corrections officials said, he would not have had a sheet in his cell and would have been wearing special clothing that cannot be ripped.

Jones said Gryness' May burglary conviction in Kootenai County was his first adult felony conviction.

He was sentenced to probation, but that was later revoked and he was sentenced to the prison boot camp program. Gryness faced a prison term of one to six years if he failed to adequately complete the boot camp.

Commissioner lashes out at migrant supporters

CALDWELL (AP)—Canyon County Commissioner Robert Vasquez is attacking conservative Republican U.S. Sen. Larry Craig for joining with one of his liberal colleagues behind legislation enabling migrant farm workers to gain legal resident status.

The outspoken county official, whose views have sparked controversy in the past, also blasted GOP U.S. Sen. Michael Crapo for supporting increased financing for the farm labor camp in Caldwell and in-state college tuition for children of illegal aliens.

And Vasquez lumped Republican Congressman Butch Otter and Michael Simpson in with the senators and accused all four "of collaborating with the unarmed enemy invading America."

"I am appalled that our federal representatives are working on behalf of illegal aliens in Idaho," Vasquez said in a statement issued by his office on Wednesday as the Immigrant Worker Freedom Ride came through the community.

The cross-country Freedom Ride to Washington, D.C., is promoting improved workplace protections and recognition of immigrants' civil rights, regardless of their legal status.

Earlier this week, Craig and Democratic Sen. Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts sponsored legislation permitting 500,000 undocumented farm workers to gain legal status. Craig said it would stabilize the agricultural work force and prevent what he called today's farm labor crisis from becoming a catastrophe for growers.

But Vasquez objected strongly, accusing Craig and his congressional colleagues of pandering for votes.

"Senator Craig, supposedly a Republican, and Senator Ted Kennedy, the hero of Chappaquiddick, are expected to unveil legislation that would give thousands of illegal aliens legal status to stay in the United States," Vasquez said in the statement.

A Vietnam veteran, he maintained that in many cases illegal aliens get better treatment than veterans who have served their country.

Craig spokesman Mike Tracy declined to respond to the attack, as did the other congressional offices, but Tracy pointed out that the migrant farm worker legislation is supported by both farmers and farm workers in Canyon County.

California men face prison in Idaho drug robbery case

BOURBONIALENE (AP)—Three California men were sentenced Thursday for their roles in a drug-related robbery that was a precursor to the death of a north Idaho drug dealer who had hired them to commit a dispute, with other dealers.

Piero Mendiola, Eddie Mendiola and Antonio "Tony" Garcia pleaded guilty to being accessories to a felony, admitting they knew of a June 2002 robbery and abduction and concealed it from police, Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas said.

The Mendiolas, of Lake Forest, Calif., are brothers of University of Washington women's basketball players Giuliana and Gioconda Mendiola. The sisters were in the courtroom Thursday with their mother, Alicia Mendiola, and other family members.

Another brother, Giovanni Mendiola, 32, had pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the Oct. 11, 2002, death of Brendan Butler, a 20-year-old Hayden Lake drug dealer. Giovanni Mendiola is scheduled to be sentenced Oct. 30.

Piero Mendiola, 31, was given a three-year fixed sentence, while Eddie Mendiola, 34, and the 31-year-old Garcia were given four-year fixed sentences.

First District Judge John T. Mitchell retained jurisdiction, however, meaning the three could be paroled after six months in a prison boot camp at Cottonwood. Mitchell also fined Piero $20,000 and Eddie $30,000 each.

Prosecutors alleged Butler hired the Mendiolas and Garcia, then a Mendiola brother-in-law, as well as a third man, and possibly even kill, rival drug dealers in a large Canadian marijuana smuggling operation.

The sentences Thursday stem from the June 2002 abduction and robbery of one of Butler's alleged rivals, Ben Scocozzo, and his girlfriend.

The state contends that robbery netted $40,000 in cash and two pounds of marijuana, involved the first of two conspiracies to get rid of Butler's rival dealers.

It was during planning for a second conspiracy, in October that Butler was fatally stabbed, prosecutors said.

The Mendiola brothers, Garcia and three others originally were indicted in March on counts including kidnapping, robbery and conspiracy to commit murder. Those charges were dismissed after the defendants agreed to plead guilty to lesser charges last month.

Study puts cost of Colorado's worst-ever wildfire at $23.8M

DENVER (AP)—The cost of the largest wildfire in Colorado history, which destroyed 132 homes and blackened 138,000 acres in 2002, is approaching $24 million, a U.S. Forest Service said in a study released Thursday.

That includes a Forest Service request for $37 million for long-term rehabilitation of the Hayman fire, which started southwest of Denver on June 8, 2002.

In the study, Forest Service researchers said suppressing the fire cost state, local and federal agencies $44.2 million.

Other large costs included $38 million in insured property losses, $40 million in timber destruction and $36.7 million in rehabilitation costs to date.

The Forest Service has asked for an additional $56.8 million for long-term rehabilitation, the study said.

"The erosion danger is not over," regional forester Rick Cables said in a statement.

"Rehabilitation work in these watersheds will help, but the healing process has just begun. Severe wildfires in critical watersheds will damage living conditions and quality of life in communities miles away."

State Forester Jim Hubbard

said forest thinning and prescribed burns would reduce the costs of fighting future fires.

"Where practical, we need to return some ponderosa pine and Douglas fir forests to a less crowded, more historically natural condition," he said.

The study said thinning and other treatments done in the year before the Hayman fire reduced its severity.

But drought, winds and expanses of overcrowded forest intensified the fire, even in areas that had been thinned, the report said. Aggressive fire-suppression policies put in place after a 1910 fire in the area also contributed to severe fire conditions, the report said.

"The Hayman fire was at the wrong place at the wrong time," the report said. "The start of the Hayman fire was timed and located perfectly to take advantage of these conditions, resulting in a wildfire run in one day of over 60,000 acres at a distance of 16 to 19 miles."

Former Forest Service employee Terry Lynn Barton admitted starting Hayman fire and pleaded guilty to federal and state arson charges. She is serving a six-year federal sentence and a 12-year state sentence concurrently in Texas.

Airport

imposed suggested airport modifications, Schnetzer showed how Highway 75 alongside the airport would have to be moved farther east and closer to residential areas.

However, the major impact if modifications were undertaken would be closing Friedman airport during the summer for at least 90 days, leaving the closest commercial airport in Twin Falls some 75 miles away.

Costs of improvements would be between $20 million and $30 million.

But Schnetzer told the audience that if the five-member airport authority board decided to build a new airport outside the Wood River Valley, the FAA might accede to negotiations and relent on required modifications at the present airport while a new field is under construction.

A new airport would take an estimated 10 years to build, probably at a cost of $100 million, 90 percent of which probably would be federally funded.

The question of whether meeting current FAA requirements would permanently avoid further modifications, Schnetzer said FAA standards could change again and force even more drastic improvements.

The major question if a new airport is built is what happens to the present field. Should it be maintained for non-commercial general aviation aircraft, or shut down and the land reverted to the early 1900s donor, the pioneer Friedman family?

The governing board will decide at its regular Oct. 7 meeting whether to proceed with a study on a new airport and where it might be located.

FAA standards are not the only concern of the airport and its future. Airport manager Rick Baird pointed out after the public hearing, business interests in the north end of the valley in Ketchum and Sun Valley are concerned about the economic impact of decisions, whereas people in Hailey and Bellevue are concerned about the impact of the airport's noise.

One of those voicing support for a new field was Robert Bouttier, a retired pilot of 34 years for United Airlines who lives in Bellevue. He called the present field dangerous and quoted a former pilot in saying that flying in and out of Friedman is "committing suicide."

Said Bouttier: "There aren't enough ambulances, not enough hospital beds" to handle a major accident at the field.

He advocated a large regional airport that could even handle the huge intercontinental Boeing 777, which could fly non-stop from world capitals to Blaine County with passenger loads of up to 550.

Another supporter of a new airport was Tom Blanchard, one-time airport authority board chairman in the 1990s.

Hospital

hospital had brought in $149.1 million since Oct. 1, up from $133.1 million, or 12 percent, the previous fiscal year.

August was a good month for the hospital. Magic Valley Regional brought in $14.1 million in total patient revenue in August 2003, up from $12.4 million, or 14 percent, the same month the previous year, according to the hospital's monthly financial statements.

Salaries continue to be the largest expenditure in the budget. During August, the hospital spent $3.6 million on salaries, up from $3.2 million, or 13 percent, the same month the previous year.

And like other businesses, the hospital ended up spending more on benefits. The hospital spent $1.2 million on benefits for its employees in August, up from $778,912, or 60 percent, the same month the previous year.

Here are some other highlights from the hospital's August 2003 financial statements:

- Inpatient revenue — $8.3 million, up from $7.4 million, or 13 percent, the same month the previous year.
- Outpatient revenue — $5.8 million, up from $5 million, or 15 percent, the same month the previous year.
- Total operating revenue — After deductions, the hospital ended up with $9.7 million in total operating revenue in August, up from $8.1 million, or 20 percent, the previous year.

- Total expenditures — $9.5 million, up from $7.8 million, or 21 percent, the same month the previous year.
- Net income — The hospital had $249,612 in net income in August, down from $420,982, the same month the previous year.
- Cash and cash equivalents — The hospital had $3.5 million in cash or its equivalent as of the end of August, down from $7 million the previous year. The hospital's cash position is down due to payments to Medicaid, Groesbeck said. The hospital paid a significant amount of its close to $7 million lump sum payment for 1999 through 2002 to Medicaid with cash rather than selling investments to maintain as much as possible in higher-return accounts.
- "That has been the really big impact on our cash position," Groesbeck said.
- Total assets — $104.8 million, down from $106 million at the same time last year.
- Total liabilities and equity — $104.8 million, down from $106 million last year.

Robbery

Gambrel said, "We're not sure how big the area is, if it goes to Boise or up to Burley, but somebody around here knows this guy."

"I understand family or friends are not going to turn this guy in for any amount of money," he said. "But this guy is using a firearm and is getting more dangerous each day. We don't want someone to get hurt."

"His intention isn't to go in and harm people," Lewin said, "but the potential is there."

"I'm speculating that the robber could be living an otherwise normal life.

This could be an individual who lives an outside life with a job and kids," he said.

It's possible that family of the robber isn't aware of their loved one's illegal activity, officers say.

An unemployed husband who comes home with a lot of money might stir suspicion, he said, especially if he has the four items the suspect was seen with: gun, backpack, mask and gloves.

"We don't know what his motivation is," Lewin said. "He may be dependent on this source of income, in that case there's a high likelihood he may hit again."

The reward is being offered by Wells Fargo, the FBI, Key Bank, Idaho Bankers Association and Crime Stoppers.

Anyone with information can contact Gambrel at 735-7279, the Twin Falls Police Department at 735-2476, the FBI at 733-5720 or Crime Stoppers at 732-5387. Callers may remain anonymous.

County

Castleford averages $40, and it's $54 for Rogerson.

From June 1, 2002, until May 31, 2003, the county had 7,072 papers, both civil and criminal.

"That's about 643 per month," he said.

Counties can't charge fees for criminal subpoenas, which make up around 34 percent of the total.

Last year, the sheriff's department collected $110,000 in fees, including jail fees which are set by the Legislature and are not subject to increase. About $94,000 of that was from civil filing fees. Beneficial estimates that number will double if the fee proposal passes.

"The new fee money will help cover current costs," Beneficial said. "But it will go into the general county fund and not directly to the sheriff's office."

"It'll be hard on some people," said Mike McCarthy, managing attorney of the Twin Falls office of Idaho Law Firm, which serves low-income people, and coming up with that is hard."

But in comparison to other counties McCarthy's office deals with, he said, it's not too bad.

"Other counties have been higher," he said. "It's been nice to have lower fees than elsewhere."

In addition to relatively low fees, Twin Falls County provides a service that some counties have eliminated, Beneficial said.

"We're providing a service above what state statute says the sheriff is required to do," he said. "There are private companies that serve papers, but they charge a lot more."

By law, the county must publish the current and proposed fees in the newspaper, two times. Then, there must be a public hearing on the matter. After Monday's hearing, county commissioners will vote on the plan.

The sheriff's department expects the county commission to approve the increases, Beneficial said.

"It's charging the people who want to use this service," he said, "and not the general public."

Buhl School Board examines high school construction specifications

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Board members approved the hiring of Grant Haycock to oversee construction of the new high school located at Sawtooth Boulevard and Seventh Street.

As the newly appointed project manager — or owner's representative — of the school board members called it — Haycock outlined his expectations from the architect and the school board during a special meeting Wednesday.

Architect Jay Christopherson of C A Alliance also attended the meeting with detailed blueprints for the board to review.

Parking concerns were raised by board member Kiestig, who said he did not want to lose a buffer area between the school and Sawtooth Boulevard to make room for more parking.

The school has proposed designated parking areas for the handicapped, visiting school buses, cafeteria workers, staff and students.

School board members agreed to move the building back a few feet to allow a few more parking spaces in the front and still leave the buffer area.

High school groundbreaking

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the construction of a new Buhl High School will be held at 2:15 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 9 on the grassy knoll of the current high school at 525 Sawtooth Blvd.

School Board Chairman Pam McEldre will welcome guests. A presentation on the history of Buhl's schools by former school board member and principal Lee Poppewell will follow.

Muscle will be performed by the schools' choir and band. Student body leaders from the three schools will say a few words on behalf of students.

The blueprints feature an enclosed mezzanine at the building's front, a walking pathway to the present high school and landscaping, which will mostly consist of grass. Once the new high school is built, the old one will become the middle school.

In the auditorium plans, about 612 seats were proposed but school board members decided Wednesday to reduce that number to 500 and dedicate the leftover seating areas to physically disabled users.

Christopherson suggested an alternate floor material in the restrooms, noting that the tile requested by the board might be more expensive than necessary. Haycock said he would check the material and report back to the board before agreeing to the change.

In the kitchen area, more room for freezers and storage was requested.

Some floors in the school will be carpeted, some tiled and the gymnasium will feature hard wood.

Classrooms and other areas will be acoustically furnished where needed, such as the music room and theater.

Christopherson also suggested one furnace between two classrooms instead of one in each room as proposed in the blueprints. The air-conditioning and heating units would be sufficient to cover two rooms, he said. Haycock told school board members he would research the feasibility of that suggestion.

Haycock and Christopherson are expected to sit down with the blueprints and cover each area before plans are sent to state officials for inspection.

Fairfield replaces 1942 curfew law

By Amy Ballard
Times-News correspondent

FAIRFIELD — Following a summer of relatively high vandalism, the city of Fairfield has adopted a new curfew ordinance.

Mayor David Hanks said the previous ordinance, adopted in 1942, "was very general" and brought only a $2 fine for violations.

Modeled after curfew ordinances of the cities of Wendell and Gooding, the new law states that children under the age of 18 may not remain in any street, alley or public place within the city limits between 10 p.m. and 5 a.m. from September through May. In the summer months, children under 18 cannot be out between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m.

Exceptions include children accompanied by a parent or guardian, children engaged in employment for profit, and children going home from school, church or community functions.

A curfew violation is a misdemeanor subject to fines imposed by the court.

Camas County Sheriff Dave Sanders said the number of children breaking curfew has declined since school started, but he could not offer any statistics. "The ordinance gives law enforcement more authority to minimize kids being out late," Sanders said.

Hanks emphasized that the ordinance is intended to help law enforcement keep the streets safe without being unreasonable.

"We wanted it to have some teeth to it, but to be liberal enough that violation of it was not an infraction," Hanks said.

The new ordinance allows a judge to consider whether family problems might have contributed to a violation.

New forecast lowers Idaho's inmate growth

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho's prison population is expected to be stable over the past year and a new forecast anticipates much lower growth than earlier expected in the coming year, Correction Director Tom Beaulclair says.

Beaulclair told legislative budget writers that there were 5,825 inmates in the system last July 1, only 23 higher than the previous July, and the estimate for next July has been lowered 6,131 from more than 6,300 projected earlier. A year ago, analysts expected the population to exceed 6,000 early this year.

But while inmate crowding problems have eased, Beaulclair tried to discourage suggestions that the state could cut back on the $108 million in general tax money it is spending this year on prisons.

"The Department of Correction has so many needs, and we are so far behind the curve," he said. He renewed his pitch for a new prison to house the growing number of inmates with mental-health problems, and he said northern Idaho still needs a community work center that can be used for inmates ready to rejoin society. Local residents derailed plans for a work center in the region last year.

Beaulclair also said the system needs more guards to assure safety and better salaries to attract qualified guards.

Parking officer dies in crosswalk accident

BOISE (AP) — A city parking enforcement officer died Wednesday after being struck by a pickup truck while crossing a downtown street.

Lynn Garner, 60, was on the job and was properly walking through an intersection with the light when he was struck by a pickup truck driven by Leo Miller, 57, police said Thursday. The accident happened at about 2:30 p.m. as Miller was making a left-hand turn.

Garner was taken to St. Alphonsus Medical Center, where he later died.

Miller, a Boise resident, was interviewed at the scene by a special drug recognition officer, Boise Police public information officer Deanna Lokker said. The result of that test is being withheld because the investigation was continuing, Lokker said.

Garner was a new city employee who started his job a few weeks ago.

Candidate Clark berates Bush

NEW YORK (AP) - Retired Sen. Wesley Clark presented his credentials as a Democrat on Thursday with a biting attack on President Bush, then joined his 15th presidential rivals in a mix-it-up debate over tax cuts, Medicare and the job-shedding economy.

Bush is "a man who recklessly cut taxes, who recklessly took us into war in Iraq," said the newcomer to the race and his party, confronted with favorable comments he made about the Republican president as recently as 2001.

For the most part, Clark's rivals avoided criticizing him throughout the two-hour debate - but not one another.

Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts seemed eager for combat, criticizing former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean for favoring a repeal of all of Bush's tax cuts to finance health care expansion and other programs. It is "absolutely wrong" to propose "eliminating all cuts," said Kerry, who favors scaling back tax cuts for the wealthy while maintaining them for lower and middle income Americans.

Dean, ahead of his fellow New Englander in the latest poll in advance of the New Hampshire primary, picked up that challenge quickly.

"This is exactly why the budget is so far out of balance. Washington politicians promising everything," he said. "We cannot win as Democrats" that way, he chastised Kerry. "Tell the truth," he prodded the Massachusetts senator.

Dean said that among the rivals, only he and Sen. Bob Graham of Florida - also a former governor - had ever balanced budgets. With Graham's campaign in financial trouble, that remark amounted to an appeal to the Floridian's supporters to give his own economic credentials a look.

More than an hour into the debate, Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri saw an opening to attack Dean.

He assailed the former governor for having criticized Medicare in the past, and said that in the mid-1990s, Dean spoke favorably of some of Republican Newt Gingrich's proposals for Medicare.

At the time, Gephardt said, he was the Democratic leader in the House, leading the fight against plans promoted by the former Speaker and champion of the GOP return in Congress.

Referring to Dean's self-description as the candidate of the Democratic wing of the Democratic party, Gephardt said, "I think you're just winging it." "That is flat-out false," Dean said of the attack. He added, "Nobody up here deserves to be compared to Newt Gingrich."

Heat wave may have killed 19,000

PARIS (AP) - The heat wave that scorched Europe in August killed more than 19,000 people, according to official estimates tallied by The Associated Press, making it one of the deadliest hot-weather disasters in a century. The death toll may be higher: The AP survey of a dozen countries found that two - Germany and Spain - have attributed only a fraction of summer fatalities to heat so far.

France - by far the hardest hit - on Thursday reported a staggering heat wave death toll of 14,802. Scientists at INSERM, the National Institute of Health and Medical Research, reached the figure by counting the number of deaths over and above what would be expected for the month of August. The toll exceeds an earlier government count of 11,435, a figure based on deaths in only the first two weeks of the month, when Sahara-like temperatures gripped the continent.

No comprehensive Europe-wide toll exists, and the dimensions of the tragedy may never be known since nations are using different measures to determine heat-related deaths. The French compared the spike in mortality rates this summer to last and attributed the full difference to the record heat. The AP conducted its survey over the past two weeks, obtaining information from government and nongovernment sources, including national health ministries and government statistics offices.

Congress OKs $368 billion defense bill

WASHINGTON - Congress unanimously approved a compromise $368 billion defense bill for next year, underscoring that despite differences over President Bush's Iraq policies, there is a bipartisan consensus on the military's role in the fight against global terrorism.

The Senate gave the measure final approval by 95-0, a day after the House passed the measure by 407-15.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the "peace budget on defense" - it does not include money for Iraq - was a "demonstration of our support, of Congress's support, of our men and women in uniform."

The House and Senate also voted to keep federal agencies open next month, despite the failure of the Republican-run Congress to finish most of its rou-

Air Force had eye on spy suspect before assignment

WASHINGTON (AP) - Air Force authorities were "monitoring and investigating" a Syria-born supply clerk before he was sent to the prison camp at Guantanamo Bay to be an Arabic translator for suspected terrorists, court documents show.

Senior Airman Ahmad I. al-Halabi now is charged with espionage for allegedly e-mailing classified information about the prison camp to an unspecified "enemy" and planning to give other secrets about the prison to someone traveling to Syria. He is one of two military members at the prison camp in Cuba to be arrested during an investigation of possible security breaches there.

The other suspect, Army Capt. Yousef Yee, a Muslim chaplain, is being held without charge at the Navy brig in Charleston, S.C. Al-Halabi, 24, is behind bars at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

The Air Force Office of Special Investigations has been keeping track of al-Halabi since November 2002, before he was sent to the prison camp, OSI Special Agent Lance R. Wega wrote in applying for a search warrant with a California federal court: A federal magistrate in Sacramento granted Wega's request for a warrant to collect a package al-Halabi sent from Guantanamo Bay to his home address at Travis Air Force Base.

MORNING BREAK

Pisces gets excellent news

IF SEPTEMBER 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... you were obliging and helpful as a child. Those born on this day usually live to a ripe old age. Ambitious and steadfast, you have to work hard for your success. You could be in accountancy or legal fields. You're attracted to older partners. This year holds the unexpected and a new interest in electronics and computers. Cultivate an attitude for seeing the glass half full rather than half empty.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Your packed seventh house has partner's appreciation, which enriches your life. At work, you're busy providing a written report. Your influence on others could be inspirational.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): This morning there's a work overload and you're rushing to get things done before the weekend. Romance may be inviting trouble. Libra is sympathetic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have a fresh attitude to romance, which is transforming your love life. There's some positive news on the home front. A happy chance, or good news could be at your front door today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get an agreement in writing. Stop resisting changes. A job or something you've looked forward to is close at hand. Your self-confidence is still fragile, but you're on the up.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your feet may be tired from overwork. Insist on written proof and documentation. Talking to a lover has you passing a test. You want to map out the future of a relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): With Jupiter and Mercury in your sun sign, your optimism is validated. An older friend introduces you to a new passion that has you fired up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're enjoying the responsibility that has been thrust upon you. You want to share some of the fringe benefits. Well-meaning Virgo offers a tip.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You're taking a fresh look at money and power. Family members have questions, and building new trust is not easy at first. Pisces supports your claim.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A friend apologizes for a financial or property mix-up. Although things are satisfying on a professional and status level, you're surprised by a twist of circumstances that seems beyond your control.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You're determined and your mind is made up. Superiors are impressed and promotion could be at hand. But where's the money? The advancement may involve spin-offs rather than cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A mysterious phone call or e-mail brings news from abroad. You wonder if it has to do with an inheritance. Whatever, you may discover an intriguing fact. There's passion involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Associates bring some excellent news. There's information regarding money or an inheritance. An old flame could become a love match. A stylish Virgo may single you out.

Township fines singer over fire cleanup

BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) - Township officials have fined Aretha Franklin for not removing a tennis court at the site of her Detroit-area home, which burned down.

The $225 fine issued Wednesday is the latest in a battle between the singer and township officials over clean-up responsibility.

People in the news

ites following the Oct. 25, 2002, fire at her 10,000-square-foot Oakland County home.

Franklin had received three prior citations from townships officials for failing to promptly clean up the debris outside the nearby gutted mansion. Along with demolishing the tennis courts, officials also want her to remove other debris from the lot.

Without a house on the lot, township property should look like country land, "not a vacant lot," Tina Burton, code ordinance enforcement officer, told the Detroit Free Press.

Here's how an Egyptian traditionally trains a biting horse not to bite. He taunts the biter with a leg of mutton hot out the fire. Although such meat is not on the horse's diet, the big beast can be expected to nip at it when so taunted. After chomping down on that a few times, the horse elects a different course of action. How the Egyptian trains a horse not to kick I do not yet know. Stand by.

Pentagon revives R&R program for troops in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP)—American troops will get a vacation from the campaign in Iraq under a R&R program being revived for the first time since the war in Vietnam.

A plane load of troops is to arrive Friday in Baltimore. The first of the candidates to be flown out of deployments that have turned out to be longer and tougher than some expected.

"First of all, rest and recuperation... is essential just because what they're being asked to do is pretty darn difficult," said Maj. Pete Mitchell, spokesman for the U.S. Central Command. "But it's more than that; we also believe rest and recuperation will improve readiness."

He said officials hope that after a mental and physical break from Iraq, forces will "be that much more alert; that much more on top of the game."

The first plane load was en route to the Rheinmain Air Base in Germany, one of two destinations for those getting leave.

Mitchell said Thursday. Others are flying to Baltimore. Those flights are being paid for by the government, and troops continuing on from there to their homes or other places will cover the expense of their continuing flights.

The program applies to all troops who have been given one-year tours of duty in Iraq and in supporting roles in neighboring countries. It allows up to 15 days leave, half of their annual vacation. "This is the first time an R&R leave program has been provided in a combat theater for all forces on 12-month orders since Vietnam," Mitchell said.

Officials are still working out details of the program and so it will start out slowly. It also will depend on developments on the ground, where daily attacks on coalition forces have slowed stabilization efforts.

Eventually, the military hopes to also provide flights to Atlanta, Dallas-Fort Worth and Los Angeles.

There are 130,000 Americans inside Iraq and tens of thousands more in Kuwait, Qatar and so on.

The subject of deployment lengths has been a sensitive one in the Iraq campaign, with some active-duty soldiers and their families complaining bitterly about delays in their homecoming.

Yearlong rotations were ordered during the summer as the Bush administration found little success in getting more nations to contribute forces.

Explosion in Iraq kills eight

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—An explosion at a market outside Baghdad killed eight Iraqis and wounded another 13 Thursday, hours after a bomb damaged an NBC News office and a member of the U.S.-appointed government died from wounds received in an ambush five days ago.

The market in Baqubah, about 30 miles north of Baghdad, is believed to have been struck by a mortar, U.S. military spokesman Sgt. Danny Martin said.

Earlier Thursday, a bomb damaged a hotel housing the offices of NBC News, raising fears of attacks against international media. A Somali guard was killed and an NBC sound engineer was slightly wounded in the early morning explosion at the small al-Aike Hotel in the city's fashionable Karrada district.

Meanwhile, a member of Iraq's Governing Council, Aquila al-Hashimi, died from wounds suffered when she was ambushed by six men in a pickup truck near her Baghdad home. This was the first time violence

Aquila al-Hashimi claimed the life of a member of the U.S.-appointed administration. In the north, eight American soldiers were wounded — including three seriously — when their convoy was ambushed with roadside bombs and small-arms fire in Mosul, Iraq's third-largest city. The tenuous security situation prompted U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to order a further reduction in U.N. international staff in Iraq after two bombings at U.N. headquarters, including one on Aug. 19 that killed 22 people.

And the commander of U.S. forces in Iraq, Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, warned he would use whatever force necessary to defeat those who attack American soldiers.

But use of force has led to "friendly fire" deaths in Iraq.

On Thursday, the military said U.S. soldiers shot and killed two Iraqi policemen in Fallujah on Aug. 20.

Col. Bill Darley, a spokesman with coalition joint task force, told The Associated Press that an Army investigation found that the soldiers acted in accordance with the rules of engagement. He identified the soldiers as members of the 1st Battalion, 41st Infantry, part of the 1st Armored Division's 3rd Brigade. Darley did not give further details.

On Sept. 12, U.S. soldiers killed eight Iraqi policemen and a Jordanian hospital guard near Fallujah. The police were chasing a car known to have been involved in highway banditry.

Al-Hashimi, one of three women on the 25-member Governing Council and the leading candidate to become Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, died in a U.S. military hospital five days after being ambushed by six men in a pickup truck near her Baghdad home. She was to have attended the annual meeting of the U.N. General Assembly in New York this week.

It was the first attack on a member of the ruling council since it was appointed in July by the U.S. administrator for Iraq, L. Paul Bremer. Al-Hashimi, who will be buried Friday, came from a prominent Shiite Muslim family and served in the Foreign Ministry during Saddam Hussein's regime.

Al-Hashimi, 50 and unmarried, was the only official of the ousted regime appointed to the new leadership. The current council president, Ahmad Chalabi, blamed the attack on Saddam loyalists; no arrests have been made.

The council declared three days of mourning beginning Thursday and said al-Hashimi "fell as a martyr on the path of freedom and democracy to build this great country. She died at the hands of a clique of infidels and cunning people who only know darkness."

Thousand Springs Festival blooms again

By Steve Crump
 Times-News writer

HAGERMAN - Let's see: the Snake River, cottonwoods, oaks and ash, just turning fall colors, and a forecast high of 85 degrees. What's not to like about the 11th annual renewal of Thousand Springs Festival Saturday and Sunday on The Nature Conservancy Preserve east of here?

Between 1,500 and 2,000 sun-art and music-lovers will roll down into the Snake River Canyon in shuttle buses to see the work of 75 artists, listen to live music and sample rainbow trout, pork sandwiches, wine and beer.

The proceeds go to support the

How do you get there?

The Thousand Springs Preserve is located east of Hagerman on the Snake River and is accessible via Exit 155 off Interstate 84 from the east and west; via the Bob Barton Highway from the east, or via Clear Lake Grade from the south. The routes are well marked; follow the signs. Those who arrive at the parking area at the top of the canyon are ferried back and forth to Ritter Island by free shuttle buses.

Conservancy's 400-acre preserve and to the Southern Idaho Land Trust, a non-profit, Twin Falls-based organization that provides support for landowners who conserve property through donations, transfers and conservation easements.

"Many people have discovered how special the Thousand Springs area is through a visit to our annual festival," said Matt Miller, the Boise-based spokesman for The Nature Conservancy. "This year, festival visitors will be helping The Nature Conservancy and SILT continue to protect the many special areas of southern Idaho."

The setting is Ritter Island, a 75-acre gem off the north bank of the river, at the foot of 200-foot basalt cliffs whence gush the famous Thousand Springs. A dairy farm once operated by Minnie Miller is located there - a state-of-the-art facility in the early 1900s known nationwide for its Guernsey cattle. The Conservancy bought the property in 1986.

Festival visitors are encouraged to tour the historic farm buildings and hike around the preserve.

Canoe and wagon rides offer tours of the island, and storytellers will relate historic tales throughout the day. Nature walks and live bird and reptile displays also will be available. There's also a kids' activity corner.

The Nature Conservancy will offer expanded displays this year, with booths on Snake River natural history and conservation at the entrance to the festival.

The music headliner this weekend will be the Brent Jensen Group, fronted by the director of jazz studies at the College of Southern Idaho. Other artists will include Celtic Fire, The New Trio (jazz), Tim McNeil/McIveweather Lewis, Strings Attached (bluegrass), singer/songwriter Gayle Chapman, Blueheart (jazz), Red & Gray (blues), Travis Ward and the Juneyard Bandstand (retro blues and jazz) and the Centennial Orchestra with Brian Farnon (big-band swing).

Festival hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for seniors and children under 12.

The Mount Harrison Foundation discovers 'Emperor's New Clothes'

By Steve Crump
 Times-News writer

BURLEY - When the Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation decided to make its annual fall production children's theater, Walt Roberson had a idea.

He'd read the work of a Portland, Ore., playwright named Karen Boettcher-Ort and decided it was a perfect fit. The result is "The Emperor's New Clothes," which opens its two-week run tonight at the King Center.

"It's a fun play, a good play for young people," said Roberson, a special-education teacher at Declo High School for the past 14 years whose love for theater has been a part-time passion since college.

In "The Emperor's New Clothes," the kingdom of Glump has been taxed into penury ever since its king became a pampered clothes-horse with a staggering lack of taste. Not only is he an egomaniacal hypochondriac, he has three "lovely" daughters who are quickly becoming bad caricatures of their father.

The monarch and his family are so busy mismatching their wardrobes, the rest of the kingdom is in a shambles. Enter two con artists who devise an ingenious plan for fleecing the emperor. Their pitch: magic cloth which appears invisible to people unworthy of their position.

Naturally, everyone chooses to "see" the magic cloth - until a child points out that all the grown-ups are running around in their underwear. The emperor is shamed into reform, and his spoiled daughters learn a lesson in humility.

If you go ...

- What: The Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation will present Karen Boettcher-Ort's "The Emperor's New Clothes."
- Where: King Center, Burley.
- When: Tonight, Monday, Thursday and Oct. 3-4, 7:30 p.m., and Saturday at 2 p.m.
- How much: Tickets, which are $8 for adults and $5 children, are available at the door.

Who's who

Cast members of "The Emperor's New Clothes": Aaron Merrill, Brent Hansen, Jaymie Jensen, Ana Hernandez, Tenea Crystal, Michael Bushman, Lianna Bollingbroke, Almee Elizabeth Milton, Frances Jones, Laura Ward, Danielle Bollingbroke, Alex Milton, Brenda Piarce, Joyce Merrill, Aaron Merrill, Ben Gebhart, Amber Long, Sarah Bollingbroke, Sydney Gill, Jessica Gull, Alyson Yepes, Dan Bollingbroke and Jaclyn Rogers.

Brent Hansen plays the emperor, Almee Elizabeth Milton, Frances Jones and Laura Ward his daughters, and Aaron Merrill and Ben Gebhart are the con men, Mr. Wart and Mr. Hog. Sarah Bollingbroke plays the small girl.

Joyce Merrill is the assistant director.

A Mighty Wind

Christopher Guest, Michael McKean and Harry Shearer gently tweak the world of folk music in this mockumentary about a reunion of old folkies.

The goofy triumvirate plays the Folksmen; Eugene Levy and Catherine O'Hara make an amusing couple as Mitch & Mickey; and John Michael Higgins leads a diamond-family type group called the New Main Street Singers. All the Guest troupeurs are here, including Fred Willard and Parker Posey, and they're all amusing. But this movie's not just funny, it's rather tender, too. You may not laugh as uproariously as you did in "Best in Show," but you'll love the characters more, fragile and charming, these folk singers.

'Respiro,' 'American Splendor' hit M.V. theaters

New to the valley

• "American Splendor" - As original as its subject, Harvey Pekar, Cleveland schlub-savant and creator of the antiheroic comic "American Splendor." Directors Shari Springer Berman and Robert Pulcini combine elements of animation, documentary and feature in the film in which the real-life Pekar and Paul Giamatti appear as the eloquent crank. R (profanity, sexual candor)

• "Duplex" - Ben Stiller and Drew Barrymore as a young couple whose dream home comes with a drawback: a problem tenant. With Harvey Fierstein. Directed by Danny DeVito.

• "Respiro" - Set on a dusty, rocky Mediterranean island, this strange, lyrical reverie, imbued with an air of casual surrealism, is about a slightly mad woman (Valeria Golino) and the family and townsfolk who don't know what to do with her. A gorgeous and peculiar little picture. 1 hour, 30 minutes. PG-13 (nudity, violence)

• "The Rundown" - A mobster's son and his henchman overcome enmity in the Arizona desert as combined forces against an evil mine owner. With the Rock. Directed by Peter Berg.

Continuing

• "The Book of Mormon Movie" - Director-producer Gary Rogers' "The Commandments" style treatment of the first chapters of LDS holy book. With Noah Danby as Nephi and Michael Flynn as Laban. Rated PG-13 for violence.

• "Bruce Almighty" - Jim Carrey with the power of Heaven help us Heaven - in the form of Morgan Freeman as God in a maharishi tunic - helps Carrey, an aspiring TV news anchor in "Bruce Almighty," a disarming comedy about the uses and abuses of omnipotence. PG-13 (profanity, sexual content, crude humor)

• "Cabin Fever" - Filled with coarse comedy and flesh-eating content, this impressively icky scare pic combines the hillbilly country horror of the first "Blair Witch Project" with the viral decimation and paranoia of "28 Days Later." It's not as gimmicky as the former, nor as good as the latter, but it's darn scary - and funny, too. R (violence, gore, sex, nudity, profanity, drugs)

• "Cold Creek Manor" - Thriller in which a couple think they're escaping urban dangers by moving into an elegant home, unaware of those that await in the country. With Dennis Quaid, Sharon Stone, Stephen Dorff, Juliette Lewis, Kristin Stewart and Christopher Plummer. Directed by Mike Figgis.

• "Dickie Roberts: Former Child Star" - Starring David Spade as the self-titled has-been, "Dickie Roberts: Former Child Star" is a cookie-cutter production from Adam Sandler, whose films celebrate arrested-development crumb who belatedly learn social skills. Narrated in the style of an "E! True Hollywood Story," the film is intermittently funny and strangely intermittent. PG-13 (drug and sex humor, profanity)

• "Dirty Pretty Things" - Stephen Frears' brisk killer of a thriller, set in London's under-ground economy of immigrants and illegals, stars the remarkable Chiwetel Ejiofor as a cab driver who moonlights as a hotel night clerk and discovers a brutal conspiracy. 1 hour, 34 minutes R (graphic surgical procedures, profanity, drugs, sexual candor, violence)

• "The Fighting Temptations" - Gooding plays a fast-talking city slicker who has come back to his childhood home, and childhood sweetheart, to take over the church's gospel choir. A phony feel-good musical comedy featuring the no-chemistry coupling of Cuba Gooding Jr. and Beyonce Knowles. PG-13 (profanity, adult themes)

• "Finding Nemo" - Who lives in an anemone under the sea? Little Nemo! When this frisky orange clownfish (think candy corn with fins) breaks free from the Great Barrier Reef, he proves to his timid dad that there is nothing to fear but fear itself. Though not as great as "Toy Story 2" and "Monsters, Inc.," Pixar Animation movies that are the gold standard for family movies, "Finding Nemo" is a delightful underwater adventure. G (scenes of loss, separation and suspense)

• "Freaky Friday" - Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan are unpredictable and inspired in this otherwise cheesy remake of the movie about the misunderstood Mom and misunderstood Teen who have new appreciation for each other when they exchange bodies for a day. 1 hour 33 minutes. PG (coarse language)

• "Matchstick Men" - Ridley Scott's anxious comedy-drama is about a con man (Nicolas Cage) with obsessive-compulsive disorder whose carefully ordered life is disrupted when his 14-year-old daughter, Angela (Allison Lehman), recklessly skateboards into it. With touches of "Paper Moon" and "The Sopranos," "Matchstick Men" is about how family ties tug unpredictably at the heart of an apparently heartless character. PG-13 (violence, sexual content, profanity)

• "Once Upon a Time in Mexico" - A crooked CIA agent (Johnny Depp) hopes to get "Desperado's" El Mariachi (Antonio Banderas) out of retirement long enough to foil an assassination plot. After a while, the flick starts having the same effect as one too many tequilas: all of it becomes blurry and numbing. R (violence, profanity)

• "Open Range" - Kevin Costner directs, and stars with Robert Duvall, in this wondrously strange, loping throwback of a western about two crusty cowpokes facing off against a nasty rancher and his thugs. Annette Bening also stars. R (violence, profanity)

• "Pirates of the Caribbean" - An improbably entertaining, if overlong, adventure that brings new meaning to the term "summer camp." Doubloons! Ripped bodices! Unbuckled swash! Rum! "Pirates of the Caribbean" has it all. PG-13 (violence, sexual innuendo, skeleton zombies)

• "Seabiscuit" - Gary Ross' corny but effective adaptation of Laura Hillenbrand's bestseller turns her tale of turf, manny, and triumph into a New Agey tribute to the broke-down horse who heals three broken men. Starring Jeff Bridges, Tobey Maguire and Chris Cooper. PG-13 (Sexual innuendo, racing injuries)

• "Secondhand Lions" - Edgewise as a marshmallow and twice as syrupy, "Secondhand Lions" is the story of two crusty Texans (Robert Duvall and Michael Caine) recruited to turn a soft, fatherless boy (Haley Joel Osment) into a self-sufficient man. Written and directed by Tim McCanlies, screenwriter of "The Iron Giant," "Lions" iron whitsny is a jackhammer on the heart. PG (threat of violence, rough language)

• "S.W.A.T." - A well-staged action procedural in which Special Weapons and Tactics hotshots in the LAPD break up a bank robbery, endure rigorous training exercises, barge in on homeowners, escort an international crime lord to prison, and take an unexpected ride on Los Angeles' subways. "S.W.A.T." is by the numbers, by the book, and by the way, pretty good. PG-13 (violence, profanity)

• "Underworld" - Logic doesn't figure prominently in the latest entry into the horror-fantasy amalgam - a kind of monster-mash "Romeo and Juliet" featuring vampires and werewolves - which works to the good and bad of the story. The young English actress Kate Beckinsale wears a lot of gleaming black latex, shoots formidably sized guns and confesses to the thrill of being something called a Death Dealer. Bathed in television-blue and punctuated by splashes of red, "Underworld" borrows much of its look and vibe from other superior entertainments - "The Matrix" hangs heavily over the film, as do "The Crow," "Blade" and countless Hong Kong shoot-outs - but director Len Wiseman brings a nice Goo flavor to the proceedings. Ains, as is often the case with lower-end genre movies, the story cooked up by Wiseman and his friends, actor Kevin Grevious and the film's screenwriter Danny McBride, is decidedly less important than the look of the film and its influences. With Scott Speedman, Michael Sheen and Shane Brolly. (2:01. R, for strong violence/gore,

Eighth Street Center hosts concert

The Times-News
BUIHL - A concert and dinner featuring folk-world-blues artist Harry Manx will be held Oct. 10 at the Eighth Street Center.
Manx, who performs lap slide-guitar, the Mohan Veena, the blues harp and sings, has been called an "essential link" between the music of East and West.

His songs are short stories that use the essence of blues and "depth of Indians ragas."
The dinner, to honor the Eighth Street Center's fourth anniversary, will include red lentil soup, Persian salad, chicken tikka, Perseus' cauliflower, ghost pullan rice and baklava. There will be a no-host bar, including beers from the Sun Valley Brewery.

Tickets are $40 person and doors open at 6 p.m. For reservations, call the Eighth Street Center at 543-2888.
The Eighth Street Center is located at 200 N. Eighth.

CSI will hold jazz summit seminar

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS - A new College of Southern Idaho Jazz Summit Seminar series will be held Oct. 11 at the O'Leary Junior High School auditorium.
CSI Jazz Studies director Brent Jensen said this will be the first of many workshops to bring high-caliber jazz musicians and educators to the Magic Valley throughout the school year.
The featured guests will be the Deirdre Rodman Quintet in a free public concert at 8 p.m. on Oct. 11. Starting at 3 p.m. that day, Rodman and others will conduct jazz master classes for students.

Rodman lived in Twin Falls as a child but says she hasn't been back for many years. Now 32, the pianist and composer handles a busy schedule of performing and arranging in New York City. Her group's newest CD, "Simple Strokes," features a vocalist, Luciana Souza and the Neighborhood School Children's Choir.
Jensen can be reached at 732-6765 or at bjensen@csi.edu

Rodman has recorded and toured extensively with and without the quintet, also appearing on the "Conan O'Brien Show" and "Live with Regis and Kelly."
Donations will be accepted at the door the evening of the concert, with all proceeds benefiting the CSI Jazz Studies program.

Arts-award nomination deadline arrives

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS - The deadline is today for nominations for the Magic Valley Arts Council and the City of Twin Falls' Biennial Mayor's Awards for Excellence in the Arts.

zations (groups that work to expand the arts in the community), arts-education programs (achievement in use of the arts in education), individual benefactor (a person who supports the arts through financial and personal involvement), business benefactor (businesses that support the arts financially and encourage employees to participate through volunteerism), and arts community leadership (people who exhibit strong principles and are dedicated to growing the arts in Twin Falls).

Recipients of the awards will be honored at the "Red, White and Bluegrass" dinner on Oct. 10.
Detailed information and nomination forms are available at the Magic Valley Arts Council office or by phoning 734-ARTS.

M.V. Arts Council offers marketing workshop

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council will host a marketing workshop geared toward artists on Oct. 11.
The session, open to all Magic Valley artists, will be held at the Full Moon Gallery of Fine Art and Contemporary Craft, 132 Main Ave. S., from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
The workshop will present artists a chance to update their knowledge and awareness of current art marketing techniques in areas such as identifying and pricing artwork, increasing computer marketing skills through electronic mediums, exploring opportunities of hanging artwork in professional offices and public building, exploring contracts and copyright laws, and trends in framing, material sourcing and pricing.

Presenters will include Kelly Daluso of the Buhl Arts Council; Barbara Garrett, the Idaho

Commission on the Arts' director of artist services; Twin Falls attorney Leon Smith; and Edil Szanto, director of the Instructional Technology Center at the College of Southern Idaho.
Cost of the workshop is $12 for non-arts council members and $8 for members of the Twin Falls and Buhl arts councils. Registration includes the workshops, materials and lunch.
Deadline to register is Oct. 6. Call 734-ARTS.

Mini-Cassia Community Concerts season begins next month

The Times-News

BURLEY - Season memberships are on sale for the Mini-Cassia Community Concerts season, which starts Oct. 3.

Subscriptions for the four-concert series are $32 for adults, $16 for students and $96 for families, which includes children over the age of 5 living at home.

Artists this season include pianist Richard Glazier on Oct. 3, singer Elisabeth von Trapp on Nov. 13, guitarist Richard Smith and cellist Julie Adams on Feb. 11, and the Bar-J Wranglers on April 24.

All concerts begin at 7:30 p.m.

Richard Glazier

Membership in the Mini-Cassia Community Concerts Association entitles a person to attend the four concerts offered each season in Burley, as well as those Community Concerts held in Boise and Idaho Falls, as seating available, at no extra cost other than their membership cost. Membership season runs from fall to spring, roughly paralleling the school year.

Brochures announcing the upcoming season's attractions are available at Welch Music, 1328 Overland Ave., Burley; Mayfair Clothing Co., 1258 Overland Ave., Burley; Burley Public Library, 1300 Miller Ave., Burley; or the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce, 1177 7th St., Heyburn. Glazier, the season-opening artist, has won many honors, including the Pro Musicis International Award, National Federation of Music Clubs Young Artist Competition Grand Prize and the Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst (DAAD) grant, the highest academic honor awarded by the German government.

He is also the recipient of a grant, from the Indiana Arts Commission in recognition of his artistic achievements.

Glazier has been acclaimed as a recitalist and soloist with orchestras throughout the United States and Europe. Career highlights include his debuts in Carnegie Hall's Weill Recital Hall, Jordan-Hall in Boston and the Bing Theater, Los Angeles, and performances of all-Gershwin concerts at the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts, the Cleveland Institute of Music and the Chautauqua Institution. In 1995, he performed with Byron Janis in a work for one piano four hands at the Pro Musicis 30th anniversary gala at Lincoln Center's Alice Tully Hall. Glazier was recently a featured guest in the concert series, "Michael Feinstein and Friends" at Carnegie Hall.

Glazier has released two Gershwin recordings on the Centaur Label entitled "Gershwin: Remembrance and Discovery" Volumes 1 and 2. In 1998, Glazier was chosen to record an all-Gershwin project in honor of the Gershwin Centennial for the PianoDisc company's Artist Series. He has completed the first volume of the piano works of Scott Joplin for Centaur Records and will soon release his latest recording project, "A Salute to the Hollywood Musical."

Glazier pays tribute to performers such as Judy Garland, Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly, their films and the composers who wrote for them in his one-man multi-media show entitled "A Salute to The Hollywood Musical."

Kimberly grad wins medalist at tourney

McMINNVILLE, Ore. - Linfield College freshman Matt Taylor, a 2003 graduate of Kimberly High School, shot an even-par 72 to earn medalist honors at the Northwest Conference Championship.

Matt Taylor

Linfield shot 413 for second place, five strokes back of Willamette College, for the men's team title. Making his collegiate debut, Taylor's round included three birdies and three bogeys. He beat Pacific University's Noah Horstman, who shot a 73, by one stroke. Taylor's roommate, sophomore Trevor Phillips, was in a five-way tie for fifth place at 78. Linfield's fall golf season concludes Wednesday, Oct. 1, when the Wildcats play at Pacific's home course, Quail Valley in Forest Grove, Ore.

Red Sox rip O's to wrap up AL wild card

Marlins clinch at least a tie in NL

The Associated Press
BOSTON — The Red Sox are back in the playoffs for the first time since 1999, looking for their first World Series title in quite a bit longer. Derek Lowe held Baltimore to two hits over six innings, and Jason Varitek, Nomar Garciaparra and Kevin Millar homered as Boston clinched the last spot in the AL playoffs by beating the Orioles 14-3 Thursday night. The Red Sox, who have made the postseason 10 times since 1918 without winning a championship, are four games ahead of the Seattle Mariners in the AL wild-card race with three games remaining.

"These fans deserve this, and they definitely deserve a World Series championship," second baseman Todd Walker said on the field during a raucous celebration. "We're fired up right now, and we're going to do what we can." Boston's win also finalized the AL matchups for the first round: Minnesota will play against the Yankees starting Tuesday in New York, and Boston will open the following day at Oakland. Playing before a full ballpark for the 64th consecutive home game, the Red Sox quickly gave the crowd of 34,526 something to cheer about. It was 12-0 after four innings, and the rest of the night was just a prelude to the celebration. With the crowd cheering, flashbulbs popping and the Red Sox perched on the dugout steps, Ramiro Mendoza struck out Brian Roberts to end the game. The Boston players poured out of the dugout for a somewhat subdued celebration — it didn't even match the one that greeted David Ortiz's 10th-inning homer two games earlier. But this time they had hats, T-shirts and champagne. Gabe Kapler and Tim Wakefield sprayed the fans with bubbly, while Garciaparra went out to the outfield to applaud the fans. Millar took a microphone to the pitcher's mound and reprised his embarr-

Jerome jumps on Minico

Tigers use precision passing in sweep of Spartans

By John Dorr Times-News writer

JEROME - Passing is a key to victory in volleyball. Tuesday night Jerome had one of its most consistent nights passing, while Minico had a night to forget. The result was a three-game sweep, 25-18, 25-21, 25-13, by the Tigers in the non-conference volleyball match. "We did a great job of eliminating mistakes and that started with great passing," said Jerome assistant coach Scott Burton. "That passing made for an easy night for Tigers setter Whitney Clark, who set up her teammates often for a total of 21 kills. "This was one of our most consistent games," she said. "It will give us momentum against (Great Basin Conference leader) Century." After struggling against conference foe Burley last week, Jerome (5-7 overall, 0-2 Great Basin)

This was one of our most consistent games. It will give us momentum against Century.

- Jerome setter Whitney Clark jumped out early in Game 1. Senior middle blocker Kendira West took the quick set from Clark and found the floor with her swing as Jerome took a 12-8 lead. A pair of Tigers miscues pulled the Spartans within two points, but the tables soon turned again in Jerome's favor 21-14 late. West, who finished with seven kills and four blocks, is new to the volleyball team after playing soccer for the past three years. "This is my senior year and I wanted to do something different to make it fun," she said. But it's taken some time for her to get in the swing of things after until late. Kabree Dayton had three kills to keep Minico close. "Whitlock's kill made it 23-21 for the Tigers, who closed it out for the 2-0 lead. The third game was tied 2-2 early, but two quick kills by sophomore Ailin German started a 7-0 run by Jerome. Sophomores German, who chipped in five kills, and Kulm, showed why they've earned spots on the varsity team. "It is a learning experience," German said. Minico tried a last rally, but the Spartans could only cut the lead to seven on a pair of kills by Godie Smith, as Jerome pulled away. For the Spartans, who passed well in wins over Region III opponents Pocatello and Twin Falls last week, it is just a matter of getting back to the basics. "The little things will kill you," Minico coach Jackie Rasmick said. "We played well beating Twin Falls and Pocatello. If we get back to that we will be taken to be reckoned with."

CSI focuses inward as SWAC play approaches
By Joe Paisley Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - Improving each match remains a constant effort for the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team. The third-ranked Golden Eagles return to Scenic West Athletic Conference play this weekend against the College of Eastern Utah at 7 tonight. The home-stand concludes with a 3 p.m. Saturday match against Colorado Northwest in Coeur d'Alene City College. Neither opponent is expected to upset CSI (29-3 overall, 1-0 SWAC) on its homecourt this weekend. So, head coach Ben Stroud is more concerned about what the Golden Eagles are doing headed into the matches instead of the opponents. "It's all about us," Stroud said. "We have to focus on what we are doing." Improved passing will continue to be a priority in practice and in matches for the Eagles as they prepare for the national junior college volleyball tournament in November. "They know it's our weakness," Stroud said. "They'll try to serve us tough. It's what I'd do if I was coaching against us." Disrupting CEU's offense will be a key. The Golden Eagles (6-9, 1-1) are a more athletic bunch than in years past and have a quick offense that could be effective if the team passes well. "They have decent size and jump well," Stroud said. "They are not a bad team." Problems passing would play into CSI's hands with its big and physical block. "Still, CEU can't be overlooked. Eastern Utah knocked off Dixie

U.S. buries Nigeria at World Cup

New York Daily News
PHILADELPHIA - Women cheat, they collide, they throw elbows. It's a soccer match, after all, and men get to hurl their weight around carelessly like this whenever they wish. Why shouldn't a female athlete trip and kick and shove and dive? So when Nigeria's Women's World Cup team took the field on Thursday night against the U.S. women, everybody was braced for some serious bruises and lacerations. And that's what they got, from the early moment when Cindy Parlow was pulled down in the penalty box to the last-minute elbow thrown by airborne Abby Wambach to the head of Nigerian defender Bunmi Kayode. Kayode was carted off to the

Undeclared Bruins rest, prepare for second half

By Joe Paisley Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - Even while they enjoy a bye week, the Twin Falls Bruins knock the meat of their season still awaits them, including Region III Four-Five-Six round meetings at Skyline Oct. 10, Minico Oct. 17 and Highland Oct. 24. The team is confident, but not overly so, after opening the year 4-0. It is the school's best start since a 5-0 mark in 1992. "I think the kids understand it," said first-year head coach Gary Krumm. "They're proud of what they've done and should be. But we understand how important the next five weeks are."

The second half of the season begins with next Thursday's home game against Jerome. After that, those three road conference games in a row will likely decide if this year's Bruins make the Class 5A playoffs. The Bruins close the regular season at home with Idaho Falls Oct. 31. "We're definitely heading into the tough part of our schedule," Krumm said. The team's coaches took advantage of the extra practices to work on special teams this week. A bad punt snap and other mistakes marred an otherwise dominating 48-15 performance against Emmert last week. "We used this week to work in a

Astros tie Cubs atop NL Central

TORONTO (AP) - Carlos Delgado hit four home runs Thursday night, becoming the 15th player in major league history to accomplish the feat in leading the Toronto Blue Jays over Tampa Bay 10-8.

Delgado connected in four straight at-bats. His first homer of the game was the 300th of his career. His fourth came off Lance Carter (7-5).

Delgado was the first player to homer four times in a game since Shea Green did it for Los Angeles on May 23, 2002, against Milwaukee.

The Toronto slugger was the fifth AL player to do it, the first since Mike Cameron for Seattle on May 2, 2002, against the Chicago-White Sox. Lou Gehrig, Rocky Colavito and Pat Secoy also did it in the AL.

Tigers 5, Twins 4, 11 innings

DETROIT - Shane Halter hit a two-out, solo home run in the 11th inning to snap Minnesota's 11-game winning streak.

With their third straight win, the Tigers would have to lose their final three games of the season to break the post-1900 record of 120 defeats by the 1962 New York Mets.

Detroit (41-118) set the AL record for losses on Monday night with its 10th consecutive setback. Since then, the Tigers have not lost. Detroit has won three straight for the first time since sweeping a three-game series against Cleveland from Sept. 2-4.

Royals 7, White Sox 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Carlos Beltran's two-run homer off Dan Wright (4-7) combined with a sacrifice fly gave the 26-year-old switch-hitter 99 RBIs.

With 101 runs scored and 41 stolen bases, Beltran is on the verge of becoming only the sixth player since 1900 to record 100 RBIs, 100 runs and 30 steals in a season.

Cutthroats sweep pair from Declo

The Times-News

Local sports

DECLO - The Kerchum Community School Cutthroat soccer teams swept a pair of games from Declo Thursday, with the boys winning 6-0 and the girls also blanking the Hornets 3-0.

The Hornets boys team kept Kerchum off balance with a quick counter strike in the first half of the game but failed to get any balls into the net as the Cutthroats led just 1-0 at the break.

The second half was a different story as the Community School (4-1-2) exploded for five goals and dominated play by spreading the smaller field more.

The Cutthroats certainly adjusted in the second half, with Bobby Flanigan scoring two of his three goals. John Hayes, Nancy Caldwell and Luc-McCann also all scored for KCS.

The Cutthroats girls team also dominated action, with senior Morgan Arriola knocking in a pair of goals and Amy Alexander also scoring.

TWIN FALLS - A defensive lapse in the 17th minute allowed Highland to score and the goal stood up as the Rams beat host Twin Falls 1-0 in Region III Four-Five-Six girls soccer Thursday at Ascension Field.

Miscommunication between the Bruins' goalkeeper and two defenders left ball free in front of the net for the easy goal. The Rams out shot Twin Falls 13-11, with the Bruins bouncing two off the crossbar and another off the sidestop.

Assistant coach Steve Schmid. "Our offense is still spitting," Schmid said. "I'm not trying to make excuses, but we've got to make our own breaks. Our passing is still weak and our finishing is not good."

"The thing that is saving us is our defense."

Twin Falls (3-5-1 overall, 1-3-1 conference) will face the Community School on Monday at 5 p.m.

SHOSHONE - The Lady Indians rolled to their 15th straight volleyball victory Thursday with a sweep of Camas County and Wendell.

Katie Strunk, Sarah Hubsmith and Hailey Harris each hit seven kills in Shoshone's 25-16, 25-16 win over Northside Conference rival Camas County. Kyla Astle served 12 points. In the 25-13, 25-11 victory over Wendell, Meghan Sorenson served 11 points and Strunk put down six kills.

Shoshone (15-0 overall, 7-0 Northside) visits Bliss Monday at 6 p.m. before taking on Class 3A Gooding on Tuesday.

Buhl def. Filer 25-17; 25-17, 27-29, 25-14

FILER - Senior Jessica Brown led a power rally showing in a 25-17, 25-17, 27-29, 25-14 Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference road win at Filer Thursday.

Brown had 15 kills and 17 digs and senior setter Davis Kippes made 45 assists and served 23 points. Dana Scott added 12 kills and 10 digs.

As strong as the Indians were on offense, it was their defense that impressed Filer coach Ed Richards.

"We missed 18 serves and we shanked 15 serve-receive balls," Richards said. "You can't win in this league doing that."

Linebacker Heather Filer with 12 kills and Monique Schaal had 10 kills. Filer (5-16 overall, 1-4 SCIC) goes to a triangular match with Snake River at American Falls on Monday.

Nebraska goes to the air to put away S. Mississippi

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Jammal Lord threw two long touchdowns less than two minutes apart in the third quarter and No. 15 Nebraska surprised Southern Mississippi with its passing game. Lord was 6-for-14 for a season-high 124 yards and no interceptions. He also ran for a score. Playing in front of a record home crowd of 36,125, the Golden Eagles never gave themselves a chance to pull the upset. Southern Miss (2-2) committed five turnovers and the Cornhuskers (4-0) turned the first three into touchdowns. Lord's plenty of criticism for his ineffective passing as the Cornhuskers went 17 last season, their worst record in 40 years. And Nebraska had all but abandoned the pass in its first three games this season, throwing it an average of 13 times a game. The Cornhuskers threw six passes in beating Penn State 18-10 in their last game.

But when the Huskers needed a big play to regain momentum against Southern Miss, they went to the air. Southern Miss was fooled badly on a play-action fake by Lord and let Ross Pilkington run free down the middle. Lord hit Pilkington in stride for a 44-yard score that made it 24-7 with 9:51 left in the third. After Southern Miss fumbled away a snap, Lord went deep again. This time he hit Isaiah Fullen right between the numbers for a 43-yard score to make it 31-7 with 7:59 to go in the third. The Cornhuskers ran for 141 yards, less than half of what they had been averaging. Nebraska's top-ranked defense, led by linebacker Demorrio Williams, smothered the punch-less Golden Eagles. Southern Miss, which was averaging 14 points a game coming in, managed just 144 yards, eight first downs and one score against Nebraska's starters.

Undeclared rivals collide in Mackay

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

A state championship preview? Biggest game of the year?

Well, Raft River football coach Randy Spaeth isn't ready to go that far as his Trojans (4-0) head up to Mackay tonight to take on the Miners (4-0) in a rematch of the last two years' Class 1A, 11-man football title game.

Spaeth does acknowledge tonight's game is a big one, though.

"There are going to be two pretty good football teams there," he said. "Two real good football teams."

Mackay coach Jack McKelvey also isn't making too much of the game.

"It would be just a good win for us," he said. "Our backs wouldn't totally be up against the wall if we lost. We'd control our own destiny. But we'd have to beat a couple good football teams."

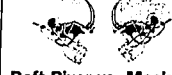

The teams, both of which are undefeated this year, squared off for state titles in 1999, 2001 and 2002.

Not much looks to have changed, except that all the 1A, 11-man teams moved down to eight-man.

"Raft River is still running the ball and looking to surprise you deep every now and again when you think you're in the box. And Mackay is still Mackay."

"They're still running pretty

Game of the Week

Raft River vs. Mackay

Where: at Nolan Sayer Field, Mackay High School

When: 7 p.m.

Last meeting: Raft River won last year's 1A 11-man title game, 27-14

Series: Mackay leads 10-7 since 1994, but Trojans have won last three meetings.

Keys to victory: Raft River — The Trojans will not be able to lineup and blow the Miners off the ball, so they will have to become more balanced. Mackay — Bend but don't break. Raft River will move the ball, but the Miners will have to make those long drives fizzle without too many points going up on the board.

much the same stuff," Spaeth said. "They've just modified it for eight-man."

Both teams have their quarterbacks back from a year ago, with T.J. Parks of Mackay throwing to a good group of receivers. And running back Justin Gillish is a threat to go the distance every time he touches the ball.

"Parks throws a real pretty ball," Spaeth said. "We'll have to be ready for him, and Gillish is dangerous."

Raft River's Quinn Harper directs the Trojan offense, with Norm Kimber and C.J. Tuckett running behind a very good offensive line.

"Our offensive and defensive lines have just been playing really well," Spaeth said. "We had some questions before the season."

The game will wrap up a tough opening five games for the Trojans (4-0), who started with Nevada state champion Carlin, followed by reigning state eighth champion Castletop.

Hansen and perennial playoff contender Hagerman.

It is that schedule that has Spaeth most concerned, since Castletop, Hagerman and Mackay are all conference games and only two teams qualify for the playoffs.

"With Castletop, Hagerman, Mackay and us, and only two berths, I know there are going to be two pretty damn good football teams staying home," Spaeth said.

Raft River beat Hagerman 16-12 two weeks ago, while Mackay is yet to have a close game.

"The Trojans were the last team to beat Mackay at Nolan Sayer Field, winning 14-12 in October of 2001.

But McKelvey doesn't think home field is that big a deal.

"I think it's more a matter of that we've had some pretty fantastic teams here the last few years," McKelvey said. "We were winning on the road, too."

How does this team stack up with the fantastic teams of recent years?

"I think it's too early to tell," McKelvey said. "We haven't played anyone of Raft River's caliber, yet. We'll know more toward the end of the season. But we're happy with how we've played."

Best of the rest:

• Filer at Declo

Declo coach Kelly Kidd has been scolded of Filer's speed for three years.

This is the first time he might have reason to be as the Wildcats are undefeated under first-year coach Jason Schweikert. The Hornets (2-0) are almost always undefeated this time of year.

"They are a much better football team this year than they have been," Kidd said. "They play wide-open and it will be tough to defend."

Schweikert, who guided Pocatello last year, started right before the season began the Wildcats have been improving in a hurry.

After years of struggling to develop a passing game, the Hornets have to improve their run game, Kidd said.

"We got it in our head somewhere that we're a passing team," he said. "Maybe pass blocking is easier. But we have to get it back in our heads that we're a physical football team."

• Glens Ferry at Wendell:

The Wendell Trojans have had enough of mauling the larger 3A schools en route to a 4-0 record and now they are after perennial thorn-in-the-side Glens Ferry.

The Flins (1-3) have played well, and lost, the last two 2A state title games. Wendell is now hoping to do Glens Ferry one better and take home the prize.

A win tonight will at least put them in the driver's seat of the Canyon Conference.

• Castletop at Hansen

Reality has caught up to Castletop (1-2) this year with so many graduated off last fall's state title team. It also caught up with Hansen last week when Raft River thumped the Huskies 52-6 after the Huskies started out 3-0.

Both teams need a win to stay in the playoff picture.

• Buhl at Gooding

In another SCIC contest, the Gooding Senators will be looking for their first win against the Indians (2-1) since 1996 when they won 27-12. Gooding (2-1) has to rebound after a crushing 56-14 loss to Wendell.

Webb carries Declo in five-set victory

Declo's Melissa Webb almost single-handedly carried the Hornets to a thrilling five-set victory over Filer Tuesday, recording 20 kills and seven blocks.

The entire momentum of the match would change when Webb rotated to the net, where she pounded down one titanic shot after another. She also seemed to grow stronger as the match went on, virtually wearing down the Wildcats like a power running back in the fourth quarter.

Webb, along with Hornets setter Katie Wall, were named to the all-tournament team in American Falls over the weekend as the Hornets captured the title with victories over West Side, Grace and Pocatello.

But it was the conference victory over Filer that was the biggest as the Hornets got a leg up in the rugged Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference.

Browns' Couch will start Sunday

Loser of lengthy QB derby steps back in for injured Holcomb

BEREA, Ohio (AP)—Tim Couch has been handed back his starting job—at least for one week.

Couch, demoted to a backup role after four seasons as Cleveland's No. 1 quarterback, will start Sunday against the Cincinnati Bengals, replacing the injured Kelly Holcomb.

"I feel good about it," Couch said. "You always want to play. I hate that it came with Kelly getting injured, you never want to see that. But I've got to take advantage of my opportunity, go in and play well and try and get a win."

Couch didn't learn he would make his 2003 debut until before practice Thursday.

"It's exciting," he said. "I'm looking forward to a chance to get back out there and play again. Hopefully, everything goes well and we get a victory."

Holcomb broke his right fibula during the first quarter of Sunday's comeback win at San Francisco. He also sprained his left ankle in the third quarter but refused to come out and rallied the Browns to a 13-12 win by throwing two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter.

On Wednesday, Browns coach Butch Davis said he would wait until after pregame warmups Sunday before deciding who would start at QB. However, Holcomb's injuries haven't responded as quickly as expected to round-the-clock treatments, prompting Davis to make the switch.

"There's too much uncertainty," Davis said.

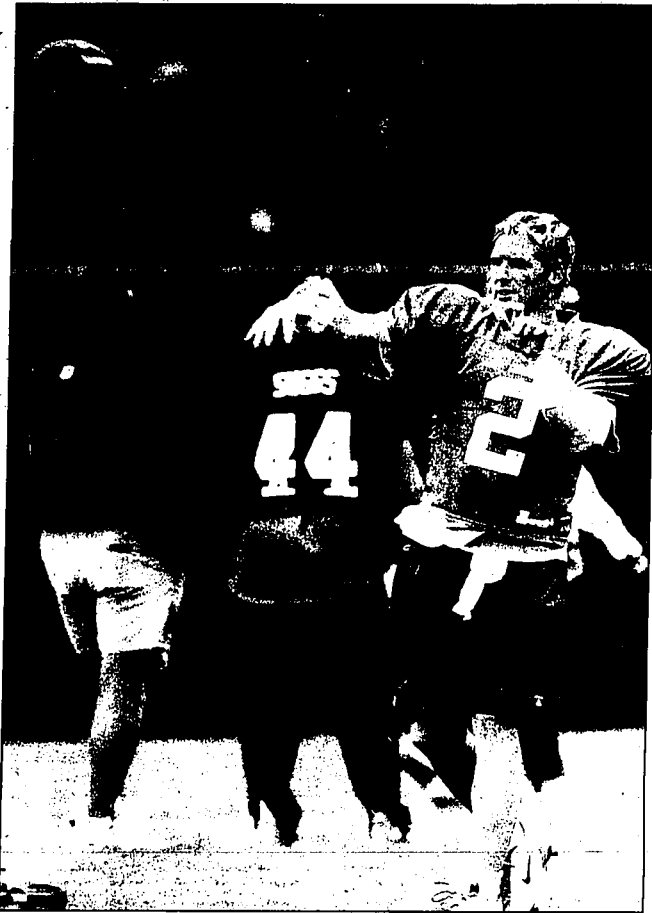

If he's healthy enough, Holcomb could be on the active roster as Couch's backup, Davis said, or perhaps dress as the third-stringer. The Browns are currently carrying just two quarterbacks on their 53-man roster.

Rookie Nate Hybl is on the practice squad and could be signed in time for Sunday's game.

Couch, a former No. 1 overall draft pick, lost his job before the season opener when Davis ended a six-month long quarterback controversy by relying on a "gut feeling" to name Holcomb his starter. Holcomb had waited seven years for the chance to start, which may explain why the 31-year-old gritted his teeth and played through the pain in last Sunday's win over the 49ers.

If Couch plays this week, Davis could find himself right back in the middle of a quarterback dilemma. However, he's trying not to think that far ahead.

"Right now, all we're worried solely on the Bengals. There isn't time yet to worry about reclaiming his job from Holcomb.

that," he said. "This happened so quick. I just want to go in and get a win. All I'm worried about is the near future."

Titans, Steelers renew rivalry in Pittsburgh

Winless Philadelphia faces critical contest against Buffalo.

By Dave Goldberg Associated Press writer

When the NFL realigned, it split up Pittsburgh and Tennessee, a good old AFC Central rivalry dating back to the days when the Titans were the Houston Oilers.

No, they're not talking anymore about whether Mike Renfro had both feet down in the end zone in the 1979 AFC title game — although that was one of the plays that eventually led to instant replay.

But this remains a good rivalry, even if it's not played as often these days. Last season, the Titans beat the Steelers 34-31 in overtime to reach the AFC championship game, and the players know each other well.

Pittsburgh is favored by three points — home-field advantage in what shapes up as a defensive game. Both teams have been stingy in their two victories, with Pittsburgh shoring up a pass defense that was very leaky a year ago.

"I think it's just us being coordinated and trying to eliminate the big things. Last week, there were only two plays over 14 yards. That was big," coach Bill Cowher says. Good rivalry. Close game.

STEELERS, 17-16

Philadelphia (plus 3) at Buffalo

Buffalo's offense was stifled so badly in Miami it looked at times like the Eagles, who have scored just 10 points in two games.

Eagles are still hurting in the secondary, which Drew Bledsoe will exploit.

BILLS, 24-13

Kansas City (minus 3) at Baltimore

The Chiefs are the better team, but a 4-0 start is hard, even if you're good.

RAVENS, 21-20

New England (plus 3) at Washington

The Patriots' injury list keeps getting longer. Maybe too long to beat the Spurliners.

REDSKINS, 24-20

Runa start: One game in Dallas, two at the Meadowlands.

COWBOYS, 20-19

San Francisco (off) at Minnesota

The "off" is for Daunte Culpepper, who says he'll play in pain.

Either way, this is the Vikings' first game outside the NFC North.

49ERS, 19-6

Indianapolis (minus 2) at New Orleans

Payton goes home for the second time as a pro. The Colts are another team not good enough to be 4-0.

SAINTS, 24-23

Atlanta (plus 6) at Carolina

Rumor has it Julius Peppers will line up at tight end for Carolina.

PANTHERS, 13-3

BRONCOS, 41-9

San Diego (plus 7) at Oakland

The Raiders were horrible in their last two games and the Chargers may be due.

CHARGERS, 20-19

NASCAR clears Earnhardt

Last week's crash, concussion won't keep him from racing at Talladega Sunday

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Dale Earnhardt Jr. was cleared by NASCAR on Wednesday to race this weekend at Talladega Superspeedway where he is seeking a record fifth consecutive victory.

Earnhardt sustained a minor concussion and sprained his right foot in a wreck Sunday in Dover, Del., and NASCAR required him to undergo a thorough physical before he could be cleared to race.

Earnhardt was examined Monday by neurosurgeon Dr. Jerry Petty and NASCAR reviewed the report Wednesday.

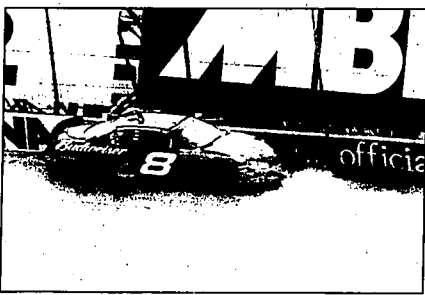

"My foot gets a lot better every day. I've stayed off of my feet, kept ice on it, and the swelling and soreness is much less than it was on Monday," Earnhardt said. "It would take a heck of a lot more than this to keep me out of the car."

Working in Earnhardt's favor is his mastery of the 2.66-mile superspeedway, where he has won the past four Winston Cup events, as well as the Busch Series race there April.

"Talladega is about intense mental focus, it's not a physical track like Bristol or Martinsville where your body takes a beating," he said. "I'm sure once I get in the car, this won't have an impact on me."

"I've been to the shop a few times, and the guys are making sure I'm comfortable in the car, so we will be ready to go."

Earnhardt was injured late in Sunday's race, crashing hard into the wall. He was briefly knocked out and taken to a local hospital for evaluation. He finished 37th in the race, and dropped from second to fourth in the Winston Cup standings.

NASCAR's policy of medically clearing a driver was put in place partially because of Earnhardt, who admitted last season he thought he had lingering effects of a concussion in several races.

Since then, NASCAR has required all drivers to receive written medical clearance from a doctor approved by sanctioning body before the driver can compete.

Talladega sees more tinkering with rules

The Associated Press

"It's just really intense," Gordon said. "You hardly get a moment to take a breath."

That's what restrictor-plate racing has done to NASCAR's longest and fastest oval, where speeds above 200 mph were once the rule.

Speeds have been closer to 190 in recent years, because plates limit air to the carburetors and sap horsepower. With cars' speeds similar, they drive three- or four-wide and there is at least one big multicar crash in just about every Talladega race.

It's close to impossible for one car to pass another.

NASCAR continues to tinker with the rules in an effort to solve that problem without raising speeds or making racing more dangerous.

For Sunday's EA Sports 500, NASCAR increased the holes in the restrictor plates by a 32nd of an inch and increased the height of the stock cars' rear spoilers.

Bobby Labonte hopes the changes will help break up the big packs of cars.

"Opening up the plates will give us a little more throttle response and give us the horsepower to make up for the taller spoilers," the 2000 series champion said. "We need to be able to try and pull out and pass, where in the past you just couldn't do it unless you had someone go with you."

Labonte isn't touting single-file racing. He just doesn't want to see those large groups of cars.

"Hopefully, it will still be an exciting race for the fans, but we as driver's won't have to worry about our spotters telling us on the radio that we're three-or sometimes four-wide out there. That's never fun."

Labonte said.

John Andretti, who will drive a Richard Childress Racing car at Talladega, recently tested the new setup.

He said the rule changes aren't going to alter things very much, although the bigger spoiler should make speeds pick up in the packs. Also, that will make it easier to catch cars from behind.

"As always in restrictor plate racing, there will be a third that drivers that like it, a third that hate it and a third that don't care," Andretti said.

Washington Federal announces dividend

JEROME - Seattle-based Washington Federal Inc., parent of Washington Federal Savings, announced a quarterly cash dividend of 22 cents per share.

The dividend will be payable Oct. 17 to common stockholders of record on Oct. 3.

This is Washington Federal's 83rd consecutive quarterly cash dividend.

Washington Federal Savings provides residential real estate loans, checking, money market accounts and certificates of deposit through 120 offices in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, Texas and Colorado. The company reported $7.2 billion in assets and $4.4 billion in deposits as of June 30.

Idaho Rural Summit set for Nov. 18-19

COEUR D'ALENE - Idaho leaders will gather in Coeur d'Alene on Nov. 18-19 to discuss issues affecting rural development.

"Our goal is to bring people and agencies together and brainstorm ways we can collaborate for the benefit of rural Idaho," said Idaho Rural Partnership Director Sara Braasch.

Keynote speakers for the two-day event include Craig Nolle of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, Idaho Sen. Mike Crapo and Gov. Dirk Kempthorne.

Topics of discussion include rural economic trends and social, cultural, educational and communal resources that can make or break rural communities. Participants will also hear about the Inland Northwest Economic Adjustment Strategy, the Idaho Department of Transportation's long-range plan and job-creation success stories in rural areas.

The Idaho Rural Summit will be held at the Coeur d'Alene Resort in concert with Connect-Idaho, a conference where many of the same officials will discuss ways to strengthen telecommunication capabilities and broadband connectivity throughout the state.

Registration for the Rural Summit is $75 per person and includes all meals and workshops. Discounted room rates are available until Oct. 10. To register, go to the training and events section of the Idaho Small Business Development Centers' Web page at www.idahosbdc.org.

IHFA will inaugurate association chapter

BOISE - Idaho Housing and Finance Association will coordinate the opening of an Idaho Chapter of the Affordable Housing Management Association during the 2003 Idaho Governor's Conference on Housing.

AHMA represents managers, owners and professional service providers in affordable housing communities.

The Idaho chapter will hold its inaugural session at 4 p.m. Oct. 7 in the Salmon River Room at the Boise Centre on the Grove. Registration to the conference is not necessary to attend the meeting.

The aim of this first meeting will be to establish membership, create the initial agenda for the organization, and establish a board of directors," said Bill Ward, IHFA housing compliance manager. "Assisting with this kick-off will be the national and neighboring state AHMA organizations, with the intent of developing a coalition within the Northwest for affordable housing property management agents, owners and participating administrative organizations." The national organization is the voice in Washington for 17 regional affordable housing management associations nationwide.

The new Idaho chapter already has a Web: www.ahma-nw.org/idahoh.html.

84-year-old worker receives award

By Loretta Burkhardt
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - As part of a national salute to senior workers, 84-year-old Ynez Kelly has landed Idaho's Outstanding Older Worker honors for the year 2003.

The Experience Works Prime Time Award is given once a year to a senior representative from each state, including the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, who represent excellence in the workforce. To be nominated for the award, a person must demonstrate the characteristics of "leadership, learning, mentoring and community service," explained Margie Alexander, local field operations coordinator with Experience Works.

The older worker award is part of a national awards program designed to remove barriers and lessen stereotypes about older workers by honoring their involvement in

Ynez Kelly

America's workforce, Alexander said.

Kelly's work-related philosophy is a fit with the program.

"Working brings happiness back to you," said Kelly, who works 20 hours a week as a bookkeeper at Gem State Trophies and has been with the company, at 347 Locust St. S., for more than 17 years.

Bookkeeping and secretarial work are nothing new to Kelly. After graduating from high school, she completed business school and then spent the next 30 years raising three college graduates of her own - while managing the office duties of a family-owned electrical business. But she didn't stop there.

After the death of her husband, she enrolled at the College of Southern Idaho to "update" her working skills. Those skills now carry over to the community as a whole.

Besides helping with youth programs at her church, Kelly has served for years as secretary of the Twin Falls County Board of Community Guardian.

Of Basque heritage and with a strong service ethic, she has always put her convictions to work. During World War II, despite full-time employment, she somehow found the time to work as a nurse for the local Red Cross.

"I believe we were put on the earth to serve," she says simply.

And how does she see older workers as compared to the younger generation?

"Older workers are more reliable, with less down time than the younger," she said. While all senior nominees will be honored this week as part of National Employ the Older Worker Week, Kelly didn't have to wait to see the plaque that bears her name. During a banquet last month, she received the prestigious award from Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho.

In the past, winners were also awarded a trip to Washington, D.C., for an awards ceremony and a small part in legislative hearings on issues important to seniors. But due to a lack of funding since the 9/11 terrorist attacks, this year's trip has been placed on hold.

"But I should change (and) we're hoping they'll get to go with next year's winners," Alexander said.

Experience Works is a national, non-profit organization that offers training, employment and community service opportunities for mature workers.

BOOMERS' BEST FRIENDS

Diane Benson feeds her Labrador puppy, Lucky, a dog treat at her house in Potomac, Md., Monday.

Empty-nesters-help growth of pet health care

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Diane Benson, 53, had always adored the family dog, Pepper, a black Labrador who would excitedly greet her on the driveway when she came home. But this bond grew particularly strong after her kids grew up and moved away.

"Some people say they can't wait to be an empty nester, but this dog filled a void for me," said Benson, a high school Spanish teacher in Potomac, Md. Recently, Pepper died of cancer. Now, Benson and her husband have Lucky, a new lab. This time around, Benson says she would strongly consider cancer treatment, regardless of cost, if Lucky was stricken and their was a good chance of success. "I took Pepper's death very hard," she said.

Fed by a growing bond between owners and their pets, companies are ramping up their offerings of pet care and luxury services ranging from cancer and arthritis treatments to cat and doggie massages, acupuncture and speciality room service.

Analysts say much of the demand is being driven by more affluent baby boomers, born between 1946 and 1964, whose children recently moved away but who don't yet have grandkids to indulge. "An empty nest is a pet's best friend," said Ken Budd, features editor at AARP The Magazine. "Boomers are more inclined to spoil pets. Just as their kids had to go to the best camp, the dog or cat has to have the best toy, the latest gadget."

The average age of a pet owner in now 46. They contribute to a $31 billion pet care industry, according to the American Pet Products Manufacturers Association.

A recent report by the McKinsey Group predicts that the pet care industry will grow 4.5 percent annually to reach about $36 billion by 2007. It cited strong potential in basic pet medications, such as those that stave off parasites; treatment of age-related diseases including arthritis, kidney problems and cancer; and products for "lifestyle issues" such as reproduction control and anti-obesity drugs.

Companies are already responding. Addison Biological Laboratory Inc., for example, recently began offering a sterilization shot for puppies, called Neutrol, to replace surgical castration, while Pfizer Inc. developed a new arthritis pill for dogs in 1997 that comes in a tasty chewable liver flavor.

The goal: make medical treatments not only more effective but also less painful for pets, allowing dotting owners to have a greater peace of mind.

"We get calls from consumers who say, 'Geez, my dog has cancer, diabetes, this problem or that, is there something we can

Stocks fall on drop in demand for goods

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - A larger-than-expected drop in durable goods orders intensified Wall Street's concerns about the economy Thursday and sent stocks sliding for the second straight day. Technology issues again suffered the largest declines.

Investors are worried that after six months of rallies, stocks have climbed too high given a still questionable economic recovery. "There is doubt at these levels ... that we have further gains this year. We are now looking for reasons to justify our work," said Brian Pears, equity trader at Victory Capital Management in Cleveland.

But Pears also said investors' desire to own stocks outweighs the temptation to sell. The tech-dominated Nasdaq composite index closed down 26.46, or 1.4 percent, at 1,817.24. On Wednesday, the Nasdaq dropped 58.02, its largest one-day point loss since July 1, 2002. The market's other gauges also pulled back, having just suffered their biggest losses in just over four months, or since May 19. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 81.55, or 0.9 percent, to 9,343.96, having dropped 150.03 Wednesday. The Standard & Poor's 500 index declined 6.11, or 0.6 percent, to 1,003.27, having shed 19.67 in the previous session.

Will bear market's lessons stick? Some experts say yes

The Baltimore Sun

Within four years, investors went from crowing about their easy success in the stock market to being cowed by a bear market of the likes not seen since before World War II.

It became all too clear, and too late for many, that a diversified portfolio of stocks, bonds and cash works better for small investors than betting their future on a few stocks in a single sector.

Now that stocks have started to rally, the question is whether the lessons of the previous three years will stick through the next bull market. Some financial experts say the lessons and the pain of losses won't be easily forgotten. "These lessons have repeated themselves over and over again. What's different this time is that because of the aging population, you have a much larger percentage of people that were at the retirement age, and retirement no longer became an option for them," said Saxton Birdsong, chief investment officer with Baltimore-Washington Financial Advisors in Ellicott City, Md.

"You had more people paying attention during this period than you had in other periods."

Others aren't so sure. "I'm skeptical. Our emotions often steer us horribly wrong. What makes us human isn't changing. We have not all become rational, arithmetic calculators," said Pat Dorsey, director of stock analysis with Morningstar in Chicago.

"Look at Nasdaq," said Dorsey, pointing to the technology-laden index that has risen 38 percent this year. "Please see LEBNERS, Page E3

Manufacturers fell on the drop in durable goods orders. Dow Industrial Caterpillar Inc. $1.54 to $68.90 and Ford Motor Co. declined 11 cents to $11.15.

In a second report, new applications for jobless benefits fell last week by a seasonally adjusted 19,000 to 381,000, a seven-month low, the Labor Department said.

Analysts said investors were nervous about placing more bets on Wall Street ahead of third-quarter earnings due out beginning next month. But analysts said they're optimistic about companies' results and that investors should likewise be pleased.

"We have started to see this year a trend where companies make conservative estimates on their earnings. The don't want to overestimate ... and in the past three quarters earnings have exceeded expectations. I think that trend will continue to see that next quarter," said Thomas F. Lydon Jr., president of Global Trends Investments in Newport Beach, Calif.

Some tech stocks are selling for prices far higher than earnings would justify, he said. And why? Because investors' questions are a real head caller asks about the same technology companies that were high fliers three years ago.

Some experts don't expect investors to get caught in a dot-com bubble again. But, they add, bubbles have a way of moving, and investors might not recognize the signs of a different kind of bubble until it pops.

"It's too soon to judge," said Margaret Jones, chief executive of Whittinger Capital Management in Minneapolis. "It's going to be very interesting to see if the lessons stick. If history is any indicator, they won't stick."

Despite the recent run-up in stocks, plenty of investor money is still being held in cash. "I'm not sure if it's a sign of a bear market or just a sign of a market that's not moving," said Charles Lieberman, chief investment officer for Eaton Vance Corp. in Boston. Selling losers not only allows investors to write off losses, but it also can assure they will have "capital to face another investment day," he said.

"Don't invest in the past. It's human nature to invest in what's over has performed well recently, and that can be dangerous. It's not unlike if you drive a car looking out the rear-view window," said Charles Lieberman, chief investment officer for Eaton Vance Corp. in Boston. Selling losers not only allows investors to write off losses, but it also can assure they will have "capital to face another investment day," he said.

There's no guarantee that the investment will continue to do well, and often letters to an investor will end up paying to do better.

Some investors seem to be repeating that mistake when they rushed out of stocks and into bonds, experts said. If rates are rising, bond interest rates go up, bonds will lose value and investors could get burned.

Conflicts exist. "People became much more aware of the conflicts of interest that work against them in the financial markets," Birdson said. That includes analysts giving a rosy recommendation on a bad stock so their firms can do investment banking business with the company, he said.

Now investors are more apt to ask financial advisers tougher questions about the investment than they are recommending, and that's good, he said.

It won't be as exciting as owning a single stock that skyrocketed, but a well-diversified portfolio can prevent huge swings in portfolio values.

Earnings matter. In 1999, many of the best performers of the Nasdaq were companies that had never earned a penny, VanDeWeghe said. Momentum had propelled the stock of these companies to the top of the market, but they had never earned a penny, VanDeWeghe said. Momentum had propelled the stock of these companies to the top of the market, but they had never earned a penny, VanDeWeghe said.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
The following described property will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder in lawful money of the United States. In the office of Twin Falls Title & Escrow, 905 Shoshone Street North, Twin Falls, ID 83301 01/26/2003 at 11:00 AM of said day. For the purpose of foreclosing that certain Deed of Trust recorded 01/05/2001 as Instrument No. 2001-00024, and executed by SHARON L. SHRIBLEY AND CHRISTY L. SHRIBLEY, as Grantor(s), in favor of "MERS" MORTGAGE ELECTRONIC REGISTRATION SYSTEMS, INC. as Beneficiary, to STEWART TITLE OF BOISE, INC., the Current Trustee of record, covering the following real property located in Twin Falls County, state of Idaho:
Township 10 North, Range 17 East, Boise Meridian, Twin Falls County, Idaho, Section 12. A parcel of land in the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of land in the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter more particularly described as follows:
Commencing at the southeast corner of said section 18 from which the south quarter corner of section 18 bears NORTH 89°15'00" West 2851.56 feet; thence NORTH 89°15'00" East for a distance of 100.00 feet to the southeast corner of section 18 for a distance of 100.00 feet; thence NORTH 89°15'00" East for a distance of 781.45 feet to a point in the center of Dead Man Gulch and being the easterly boundary of Jay-No-Ranches Estates; thence NORTH 89°15'00" East along the center of Dead Man Gulch and along the easterly boundary of Jay-No-Ranches Estates for a distance of 114.37 feet; thence NORTH 89°15'00" East along the center of Dead Man Gulch and along the easterly boundary of Jay-No-Ranches Estates for a distance of 65.29 feet; thence SOUTH 02°25'00" West for a distance of 910.94 feet to the true point of beginning.
SUBJECT TO A 25.0 foot wide county road easement along the south boundary of the above-described parcel. And subject to an easement to the Twin Falls Canal Company for the use and maintenance of the Dead Man Gulch lateral along the northerly boundary of the before-described parcel.
The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above-referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Idaho Code, Section 60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the street address of 1150 SOUTH PARK AVENUE WEST, TWIN FALLS, ID 83301 is sometimes associated with said real property.
Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the debt secured by the subject property, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust.
The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 08/01/2002 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due therefor, plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 8.750% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto. The principal balance owing at this date on said obligation is $190,008.54, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations hereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustee's fees and costs and any other amount advanced by beneficiary to satisfy said obligation, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.
Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said Trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 1506(A)(4) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.
