Jack Brooks, a driver with PSI Waste Systems, dumps a load of garbage at the Milner Butte landfill in Cassia County. The Southern Idaho Solid Waste district has raised fees to drop loads at the dump to encourage use of their network of waste transfer stations.

MURTAUGH - Garbage disposal companies bypassing transfer stations and going directly to the dump are putting a financial pinch on the Southern Idaho Solid Waste District, district officials say.

These figures show how much of Twin Falls County's garbage has gone to the local transfer station and how much has gone directly to the Milner Butte Landfill. Figures are in tons.

As a result, companies and individuals in Twin Falls and Blaine counties that haul their garbage directly to Milner Butte Landfill will be subject to higher fees beginning next week.

Management at the solid waste district, which runs the landfill, says a new fee structure is necessary because of a potential $230,000 loss in revenue from companies bypassing transfer stations - which have higher fees - and going straight to the dump.

The effect of the fee increase on residential and commercial garbage customers is uncertain, but at least one private trash hauler indicated it's not happy with the change.

M.V. woman helps bring down drug dealers

By Sandy Miller
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A year ago she didn't know what an "eight-ball" was.

Now she was about to purchase two of them for a friend - a phantom "mystery man" in Gooding, a person who didn't really exist.

Second of two parts

Confidential Informant 2003-C-007 shares her last three digits with a fictitious secret agent. But unlike a James Bond spy thriller, her story is true.

This is the second of a two-part series about the local mother of two, whose work as a confidential informant helped convict a number of Magic Valley drug dealers. The Times-News has chosen to honor her request to conceal her identity, out of concern for her safety and the safety of her family.

How the story came about - A10

and remembered just what had brought her to this point her 20-year-old son, the son she was slowly losing to drugs.

She walked up to the front door. From their unmarked cars, detectives started the recording device.

A woman answered the door and told C.I. 2003-C-007 that Wright was sleeping and that she would go wake him up. A sleepy Wright walked into the kitchen, grabbed a set of scales and took about 10 small plastic bags of white powder out of his pocket. One by one, he poured the contents of each bag on to the scale until it read one-fourth of an ounce - two "eight-balls." A crying baby crawled around the dirty living room floor.

Wright placed the powder in a clear plastic bag, and C.I. 2003-C-007 carefully counted our $400. The drug deal was complete.

One of the detectives counted out $450 in cash, which she put inside her purse. Surrounded by detectives in unmarked cars, C.I. 2003-C-007 began the long drive to Buhl. They stopped just outside Ellers where one of the detectives wired her with an electronic body transmitter. A tracking device was placed inside her car.

She noticed more unmarked police cars on surrounding streets.

Dali sketch disappears; prison official confesses

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The crime was ... well, it was surreal.

On an island inhabited by 14,000 accused criminals, a $250,000 Salvador Dali sketch disappeared during a midnight fire drill, replaced by a fake. And the people responsible were not the inmates, but four prison officials, authorities said.

Last week, a former assistant deputy warden admitted his role in the March 1 robbery at the Rikers Island jail and implicated his co-workers in the role-reversing rip-off. The plot's alleged mastermind and the two other members of the "Dali gang" are all due in court this month.

Mitchell Hochhauser, 40, claimed the irreplaceable Dali ink and pencil sketch was destroyed by a skidish co-defendant - although his claim is up for debate.

Even the Hochhauser guilty plea produced strange reactions: defense attorney Joseph Tacopina, representing alleged ringleader Benny Nuzzo, was just as pleased as the prosecution.

"This is a classic example of a witness with a motive to implicate another person," Tacopina said a day later.

According to Hochhauser, the plot was conceived in "The Bodega" - a snack-room used by the guards. He says Nuzzo's proposal initially elicited laughter, and with good reason.

The sketch depicting the crucifixion of Jesus Christ was a jailhouse fixture since 1965, when the self-promoting artist with the sprawling mustache planned a visit. Dali instead called in sick, sending a note that read "A wonderful gift for the prisoners."

Volla! He zipped off the crucifixion sketch in his Manhattan hotel room, and it was placed in the prison dining room - a pearl amidst crime.

"It's a pretty strange story all around," said Peter Tush, curator of education at the Salvador Dali Museum in St.

Small town loses mayor, police chief, librarian to Iraq war

The Associated Press

BRADFORD, Ark. - The mayor, police chief and school librarian are all leaving for military duty today that is expected to take them to Iraq, and the residents left behind in this tiny town of 800 are scrambling to fill their roles.

"At the local cafe and in school hallways, the callup and what to do about the loss of city leaders is talk of the town. At city hall, meanwhile, officials have been rushing to prepare paperwork necessary to transfer the mayor's power to a 78-year-old retired school teacher.

The soon-to-be acting police chief says Bradford is just one example of how the war in Iraq has affected small town America.

"One way or another we're going to handle it," said Michael Ray, who will become the new police chief, along with his job as a school resources officer. "It's going to be OK. I'm going to run it the same way as if the chief was here."

In addition to Mayor Paul Bunn, Chief Josh Chambliss and librarian Nolan Brown, five other citizens of this farm town have received orders to report to Fort Hood, Texas. There, they will prepare for a tour of duty in Iraq that is expected to put them in Iraq by Christmas.

Grebe Edens, the town's recorder-treasurer, will take over for the 35-year-old mayor. Previously, she spent 24 years as Bradford's fourth-grade teacher.

"Most of the people on the city council now, she's paddled them before," Bunn said.

Edens plans to carry on with Bunn's ideas. "As the mayor says, we're a family here," she said.

At the elementary school, Brown was organizing the library ahead of his deployment. He served in the Marine and Marine Corps National Guard for 31 years. Nov. 57, he was hoping to leave the guard at age 60.

"I've got stuff scattered from here to there getting ready," he says. "I can't say I'm not coming back."

"The children here, they ask me, 'Are you going? When are you going?'" he said. "They know there's some turmoil somewhere. I tell them they may not take me because of my age ... but it would be unwise not to prepare them."

The school had a going-away party for Brown in the cafeteria, presenting him with a cake that read "Our prayers are for you."

The school will shuffle around teachers to make up for Brown's absence.

After nine years at the school, all the students know him. As he leaves, he shouts a goodbye to his cousin's son in the hallway.

Poll: Blue-collar Democratic support for Davis erodes

Los Angeles Times

Recapturing the loyalty of blue-collar and moderate-income Democrats has emerged as one of California Gov. Gray Davis' most pressing problems as the recall election approaches.

In both public and private polls, Democrats with less income and education have displayed much higher support for the recall than more affluent and college-educated party members. Even Democrats who belong to labor unions, ordinarily one of the party's most loyal constituencies, have been abandoning the governor-in-greater-numbers than Democrats who don't belong to unions, according to the most recent Los Angeles Times poll.

"There's no burning enthusiasm for the governor," acknowledged Miguel Contreras, executive secretary and treasurer of the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor. "We have been around a lot of candidates where people had a real relationship with that candidate... With this one initially, it was a little like trying to sell a tough product because the base vote wasn't enthusiastic."

The problem has not been that blue-collar Democrats are more strongly drawn to Arnold Schwarzenegger, the leading Republican candidate to replace Davis. In the most recent Times Poll, conducted from Sept. 25 through 29, Schwarzenegger drew the same level of support from Democrats with and without a college degree: 15 percent.

gerous security duty.

"I'll make a deal with the president," said Bunn, who has fought in Panama and in the Gulf War. "I'll go over there, but I'm not willing to die. Maybe it's because I've got kids now."

Bunn could be gone for up to two years. Even if he stays that long, he'll still have over a year left of his term as mayor when he returns.

Chambliss, 28, has been the town's police chief since 2001. He's not worried about Bradford, which is about 70 miles northeast of Little Rock. He said he expects the town's other four officers to continue to man the school crossings and attend all the ball games.

"I'm curious to see what the Milner Butte will pay $20 and $20 a ton, said the waste district, but the $15-per-ton fee charged to trucks coming from Jerome, Gooding, Cassia, Minidoka and Lincoln counties.

The tipping fee at the Twin Falls transfer station will remain at $33 per ton. Other transfer station rates will also stay the same.

Fees collected by transfer stations are needed to recoup money spent to establish them and to support the operation of waste district officials said. The Twin Falls transfer station, which opened in September 2000 at a cost of about $1.2 million, has never increased its rates.

"We're not out to make a profit," said Robin Baumgartner, the waste district's recycling coordinator. "By law, cities and counties are required to provide sanitation for their people."

"In creating a landfill and financing it, you look at how much revenue you can expect to generate," she said. "If you start losing money in fees you expected to collect, the county is saddled with a lot of debt."

Southern Idaho Solid Waste District administrators have seen a significant increase in direct-to-landfill hauling by companies in Blaine and Twin Falls counties, possibly because those counties don't assess property taxes to pay for garbage hauling. Rather, they pay with gate fees.

"Last year we might have seen one or two a week" going directly to the landfill, Baumgartner said. "This year it's more like 10 a day."

Rather than pass higher fees onto people who are using the system "correctly" - those who utilize transfer stations - the waste district's board of directors opted to raise rates for those who go directly to Milner Butte, Baumgartner said.

Administrators wanted to distribute the debt burden evenly among counties that participate in the landfill district, she said. "Why punish the people who are using the system correctly?"

Others say correct use of the system is not so narrowly defined.

PSI Waste Systems Inc., a Twin Falls-based waste management company, has a contract with the city of Twin Falls for residential refuse pickup. It requires the company to take that waste to the transfer station. Other garbage the company collects, however, can go straight to Milner Butte.

"All regions have flow control ordinances that say waste has to go to a particular landfill as the final destination," said Lee Reitz, manager of PSI Waste Systems, "but not necessarily through a transfer station."

Such laws require solid waste from a district to go to facilities within that district. This guarantees that projected amounts of waste - and their concomitant revenues in the form of fees - go to waste management facilities funded by revenue bonds. Sometimes banks require flow control ordinances as stipulations in contracts.

Garbage flow control is necessary, proponents argue, to secure financing of facilities and to ensure that waste is delivered to environmentally sound facilities.

"It works both ways," Baumgartner said. "It allows the Petersburg, Fla. "It was unusual for Dali to just give things away. He was not the most generous artist."

For 38 years, the art was virtually undisturbed; it was moved just once, in 1981, to the jail's lobby because prison officials feared an inmate might damage or destroy it.

But it was safe, authorities said, until March 1.

Hochhauser and Nuzzo were taken to jail last night, working with officers Timotheo Pina and Greg Sokol. The two bosses staged a fire drill as a distraction while the two officers swiped the sketch from its display case, authorities said.

The foursome hoped for a big payday, officials said - but other officers noticed the fake alarm immediately. The suspects were under arrest by mid-June. By then, an increasingly nervous Urrizaga helped them along the way.

A foreign-exchange student at the College of Southern Idaho wrote how Urrizaga, who was also a student at one time, helped her to adjust to school and life in a new country. There were numerous letters from people who wrote of how Urrizaga gave them food to eat and a place to sleep when they had nowhere else to go. There's even a letter from Confidential Informant 2003-C007's son.

"He's given money to me and lots of others when we needed it to maybe get something to eat, a place to stay or even make sure we had a shirt to wear of our own," her son wrote.

The people who ran Urrizaga's drugs and injected them into their veins don't seem to realize the high price they pay for the drugs. Urrizaga's record is long. He spent time in a Nevada prison after being convicted of attempted murder for hire and drug delivery.

According to Mark Williams, government to pay off debt, but also allows counties to control garbage coming into a cap on what comes into the state."

Opponents of flow control ordinances have voiced concerns that such laws inhibit competition and therefore increase costs, which inevitably get passed to consumers.

Companies like PSI will be affected, but the company's staff so far is keeping mum about potential effects of the new fees.

"We haven't had a chance to see how it will affect us," Reitz said Friday, noting that the company was informed of the changes Thursday. "We were disappointed with the short-term notice."

"Twin Falls County is doing what they have to do," said Gary Cault, also of PSI. "It may be a necessary evil."

"But they have a captive market," he added, "so whether it's fair or not is irrelevant."

Though Reitz would not disclose how much waste PSI takes directly to the landfill, the fee increase will cut into the company's bottom line.

As he sees it, though, the company's optics are limited.

"I don't see PSI opening a landfill," he said. "The cost of creating a new landfill makes it doubtful we'd do that."

And public sentiment is a factor. Few people want to see landfills in their neighborhoods, he said.

For now, users will have to accept the fees. But some might not do so quietly.

"At some point in time the bond and the transfer station will be paid off," Reitz said. "We'd be interested to know if the fees will be reduced then."

the intended target, Urrizaga at one time controlled one-third of the narcotics transactions in the Elko, Nev., area. When Williams began to investigate Urrizaga's dealings with the defendant took out a "hit" on him, he told the court.

Urrizaga was also charged with intimidating a witness after reportedly threatening another inmate at the Twin Falls County Jail.

"He was very typical of a drug trafficker," said Idaho State Police Detective Sgt. Gary Kaufman. "They rule by intimidation and threats and scare tactics."

But even today, as he does time in an Idaho prison for drug trafficking, Urrizaga's following remains loyal.

Mari House still speaks glowingly of the man she says was like a father to her.

"He's a kind, decent man," she said. "When I needed food for my kids, he gave it to me. He gave me a ride to the Walker Center when I needed treatment. He walked me in there. He took the money he had and put roofs on elderly people's houses. He did yard work for the elderly."

Even Urrizaga sees himself as something of a modern-day Robin Hood.

"I have strived to protect the elderly that society discarded like yesterday's paper," Urrizaga wrote in a letter to the judge who would later sentence him. "I provided for underprivileged kids that I society stumbled over every day. I work to get the disabled out of the way so society would not run them over."

But it doesn't excuse his criminal behavior, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Leeb said.

"He justified his drug dealing by saying he used the proceeds to help people," Leeb said.

Fifth District Judge John Hohnhorst was equally unimpressed.

"Mr. Urrizaga paints himself as Robin Hood, stealing from the rich, giving to the poor - picking his finger in the eye of the authorities and helping underprivileged common people," Hohnhorst said last month, just before sentencing Urrizaga to 22 years in prison for drug trafficking.

"I get to see the destroyed lives and the failed marriages and closed businesses that come from methamphetamine trafficking in this community," Hohnhorst said. "We're washing - we're drowning in methamphetamine here."

Urrizaga won't be able to go before a parole board for 12 years. House said the sentence was unfair.

"His meth problem is something he wants to overcome," House said. "Yes, he did a crime, but 12 years is ridiculous."

But Kaufman, for one, is tired of hearing that drug addicts are just hurting themselves.

"We see exactly what this stuff does to families," Kaufman said. "I really get mad when these groups say it's a victimless crime. I'd like to take them with us when we take the children from homes with methamphetamine labs to the hospitals."

Handing of leak stirs talk of double standards

By Andrew Ross

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, which has repeatedly twined and angrily to suspected leaks of classified information by officials in other branches of government, is now under fire for being slow to react to an apparent breach by one of its own.

In numerous instances since Sept. 11, the Bush White House has been quick to condemn others for falling "by safeguard" national secrets. Officials have scolded lawmakers for their allegedly loose tongues, fired off memos to military commanders seen as too cozy with the media, and backed up those admonitions with calls for investigations or threats to curtail access to classified data. Indeed, even as the FBI opened a probe of the administration last week, lawmakers and staffers on Capitol Hill were entering their second year in the crosshairs of a separate FBI investigation launched after the White House leaked information to congressional sources were to blame for classified information.

Qaida communications finding their way into the media.

President George W. Bush track record, many people in Washington, D.C., have been mystified that the White House didn't respond publicly until last week to a leak dating back to mid-July, when a syndicated columnist "outed" a clandestine CIA officer and attributed the information to "senior administration officials." It only reacted after news reports that the CIA formally requested a criminal investigation.

President Bush last week condemned the leak and ordered his staff to cooperate with the FBI probe, but by then the gesture was seen by critics as a belated attempt to contain the political fallout from a leak more than two years ago.

The perceived disparity in the White House reactions has stoked criticism of the administration among members of Congress as well as current and former intelligence officials, who accuse the White House of applying a double standard when it comes to policing leaks to the media.

In fact, many Democrats on Capitol Hill claim that the White House has itself used selective leaks — and selective outrage, at the alleged leaks of others — to advance its policies, particularly as it relates to the war in Iraq.

Some senior Democrats claim they repeatedly have been forced to defend their stewardship of secret information, and fight to maintain their access to it, even as the White House ignored an apparent violation by administration insiders.

"People are very upset about it up here," said Sen. Carl Levin, of Michigan, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Weapons hunters pursue anthrax tips, says chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weapons hunters in Iraq are pursuing tips that point to the possible presence of anthrax and Scud missiles all bid for in the country, the chief searcher said Sunday.

David Kay told Congress last week that his survey team had not found nuclear, biological or chemical weapons so far. But he argued against drawing conclusions, saying he expects to provide a full picture on Iraq's weapons programs in six months to nine months.

While lacking physical evidence for the presence of anthrax or Scuds, Kay said tips from Iraqis are motivating the search for them.

Critics, including many in Congress, say Kay's findings do not support most of the Bush administration's prowar assertions that the United States faced an imminent, serious threat from Iraq's Saddam Hussein because of widespread and advanced Iraq weapons programs.

President Bush has said the U.S. led war on Iraq was justified despite the failure to find weapons.

Kay reported that searchers found a vial of live botulinum bacteria that had been stored since 1953 in an Iraqi scientist's refrigerator. The bacteria make botulinum toxin, which can be used as a biological weapon, but Kay has offered no evidence that the bacteria had been used in a weapons program.

The live bacteria was among a collection of "reference strains" of biological organisms that could not be used to produce biological warfare agents.

Kay said Sunday the same scientist told investigators that he was asked to hide another much larger cache of strains, but "after a couple of days he turned them back because he said they were too dangerous. He has small children in the house."

Kay said the cache "contains anthrax and that's one reason we're actively interested in getting it." Kay, speaking on "Fox News Sunday," did not say whether the anthrax was live or a strain used only for anthrax research.

Before the war, Iraqis said they had destroyed their supply of anthrax. Inspectors haven't found any and Iraqis haven't been able to provide evidence to satisfy investigators that they did destroy it.

Injured illusionist can communicate with doctors

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Roy Horn, the illusionist of the Slaughtered, Roy (who was mauled by one of his tigers during a show, was able to communicate with doctors but still in critical condition and on a ventilator Sunday.

The mauling could mean the end of one of the Las Vegas Strip's most popular shows. Its employees were encouraged to look for new jobs, and officials said that even if Horn recovers it's unclear whether he would ever be able to perform again in the rigorous show.

MGM Mirage's officials said Sunday that it might take another day or two before doctors approve a prognosis for Horn, who was bitten in the neck and dragged off stage. The performer underwent surgery late Friday and Saturday at University Medical Center.

"There has been no change in his status, which goes frankly is good news," Mirage spokesman

Alan Feldman said Sunday morning. "Considering the trauma he has been through, no change in his status is a good place to be."

Horn, 55, was heavily sedated but able to respond to voices and touch, MGM Mirage Resort chief executive Bobby Baldwin said.

"We are guarded, optimistic," Baldwin said late Saturday night outside the hospital. "We are pleased the news isn't worse than it is."

Officials discuss plan to prevent suicides

TWIN FALLS - A dedicated group of Idaho citizens is tackling one of Idaho's most serious but least discussed problems - suicide.

From 1999 through 2001, 559 Idahoans took their own lives, according to a news release from the Idaho Department of Welfare. It is estimated that 40 percent of those who attempt suicide, die. Next to accidents, suicide is the leading cause of death for Idaho citizens between the ages of 15 and 34, the news release said.

A group of Idaho citizens and organizations are asking the community for its help in developing a suicide prevention plan. The public is invited to attend a special meeting from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, 601 Pole Line Road.

"Suicide prevention requires the effort and coordination of a myriad of agencies, groups and individuals," said Dr. Ginger Floerchinger-Franks, the department's injury prevention manager.

Community meetings also have been scheduled in five other cities in Idaho. Participants at the regional meetings will be provided a brief overview of Idaho's suicide problem and basic information on the best practices in the field of suicide prevention from the Institute of Medicine's 2002 report, "Reducing Suicide: A National Imperative." The background information will provide participants with a basis for reviewing and commenting on the plan, the news release said.

Teleconference will tackle biomedicine ethics

TWIN FALLS - The second in a series of five satellite-delivered teleconferences at the College of Southern Idaho will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 14. This session will feature Dr. Vicki Lachman presenting the "Ethical Frontiers of Biomedicine."

Lachman will discuss the viability of successfully cloning human beings along with the possible repercussions of doing so. She also will deal with whether physician-assisted suicide should be legalized, and the ethical issues surrounding the use of human embryos for stem cell research.

Lachman is the founder and director of VL Associates, a firm that provides consultation, training and coaching services to nursing officers and health-care organizations.

The program is produced by the National Phi Theta Kappa and Collegiate Honors Council. It is the second installment of a five-part series called "Dimensions and Directions of Health Choices in a Maze." Other installments will be presented at approximately two-week intervals.

For more information, contact Tremayne at 732-6885 or rtremayne@csi.edu.

Project will coordinate AmeriCorps services

TWIN FALLS - AmeriCorps recruitment efforts are under way in several locations as a new project begins operation in October, according to a news release from South Central Community Action Partnership.

Twin Falls and other Idaho rural communities soon will have a new tool to identify and evaluate a wide range of needs at a central location. By combining the efforts of AmeriCorps members and GIS Internet mapping technology, communities will have the capacity to share and educate both public and private sector entities where trends and gaps in health and human services exist. The information will help communities and potential funding organizations evaluate data to establish priority areas and future program development, the news release said.

The 18-member AmeriCorps program, administered by 211 Idaho, will place members in a number of cities, including Twin Falls, to facilitate the program. In addition to Community Action Partnership of Idaho, AmeriCorps partners include 211 Idaho CareLine, Governor's Coordinating Council for Families and Children, Idaho Kids Count, Mountain States Group Inc., Rural Policy Research Institute, Treasure Valley Community Resource Center and United Way of Treasure Valley.

T.F. police seek bargain cars

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Did you ever wish you could find a heavy-duty, year-old, low-mile, hot-rod car for a little over half of what it cost brand-new?

It can happen. The Twin Falls Police Department, which has budgeted $57,000 for patrol cars, will ask the City Council today to approve a request to bypass the usual bid process used to purchase vehicles from local dealers.

Meeting tonight

The Twin Falls City Council will meet at 5 p.m. today in the new council chambers at 305 Third Ave. E. next to City Hall.

The department has found outside sources that sell used police vehicles that are only a year or two old for between $11,500 and $19,000 per vehicle. "It saves a lot of money getting our cars this way," Capt. Bob Hodge said.

He said last year the department went the route of buying used vehicles for the first time. The cars came from Salt Lake City, where the police agencies rotate their fleets every year or two, Hodge said. There also is a national list the Twin Falls Police Department is looking at this year.

Police approached the three major dealerships in town and asked about used police vehicles. Each dealership was given a bid proposal form, but none said they had the resources for used police vehicles, Officer Chad Wigginton wrote in a request to City Council.

The agencies that sell used vehicles do not participate in a bid process. Instead, they post a list of the vehicles they have available. It is a first-come, first-serve basis. Because of that, not only do the best equipped vehicles go first, but also the total

The McCollums took care of the 'Homeless 20'

It was a group that probably couldn't be gotten together in modern society. Simple and without much form, the "Homeless 20" sprang up as a result of the loneliness of the young engineers and businessmen who had gathered in Twin Falls, without family, to build the great irrigation project, or seek their fortunes.

At the heart of the organization were Robert M. McCollum and his family, who collectively brightened these men's lives with their generous hospitality.

McCollum, who was secretary and sales manager for the Twin Falls Investment Company, left his family in Shoshone and came to the townsite in July 1904, to begin selling town lots and farm land. Soon his wife, Alice, and daughter, Elva, joined him to live on the dusty sagebrush desert that was becoming Twin Falls. In about September, they began building Twin Falls, first permanent dwellings.

One day, shortly after the house was completed, Alice suggested to her husband that they entertain some of the many lonesome men in the area who were far from their homes, wives and friends, and who were living in tents or boarding houses with no place to spend their evenings. Bob agreed, remarking that the piano had dragged a tone or two in coming across the desert from Shoshone, but the boys wouldn't notice it, as the kitchen range was working just fine.

Accordingly, the next evening, Feb. 4, 1905, 11 homeless fellows scraped the mud from their shoes on the McCollums' front steps:

The group spent the evening visiting, singing, and filling up on home cooking.

In reporting the party, the Twin Falls News said, "The cordial and hearty 'come again' at the hour of departure was followed by a ... resolution on the part of each guest not to miss any similar occasion, and, thereupon, each hid himself home, positive that 'Old Time is a liar; we're twenty tonight!'"

BLM, volunteers clean dumpsite near Gooding

The Times-News

GOODING - The Bureau of Land Management is taking steps to clean up a site northeast of Gooding that has been an illegal dump for trash and hazardous chemicals for several years.

The illegal dumping has been taking place on a county road that passes through BLM land about five miles northeast of Gooding. As the road passes through a lava field, dumpers have found simple hiding spots among the natural cracks and crevices.

Funding for bridge study still falls short

Chairman says some entities have made commitments

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Greater Twin Falls Transportation Committee intended to round up $300,000 by Oct. 1 for an environmental impact study for a third bridge over the Snake River Canyon.

But though the committee didn't get the job done, $1.45 million in federal dollars is still available. The $300,000 is what the federal government is requiring of local entities that have a vested interest in a new bridge. An environmental impact study is done in conjunction with any proposed project that would use federal money - and/or require federal permits - and would significantly affect the quality of the human environment.

The preferred spot for the new bridge is north of the U.S. Highway 93-Highway 30 interchange west of Twin Falls and on the 300 road on the north side in Jerome County. Planning for the project began three years ago, and it could be another 20 before the long-term project is completed.

The committee will seek contributions from most cities in Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome and Lincoln counties. The committee also will be asking for money from about 15 highway districts within the four counties, as well as the counties themselves, said committee chairman Dave Maestas.

Twin Falls County commissioners already have approved giving $10,000 a year for the next three years to help fund the study. Maestas said several other entities already have made commitments, but he wouldn't say who they were or how much they've promised.

"We don't have all our ducks crossed and it dotted," he said. Twin Falls City Councilman Trip Craig, who also sits on the Greater Transportation Committee, said the council likely will decide whether it wants to throw some money into the pool in January. That is when the study will start its strategic plan for the next three years.

But there are some questions the council wants answered first, Craig said. Council members want to know who is going to pay for the study, who is going to pay for construction of the bridge and how long the environmental impact study will take. In addition, Craig said the council wants to know if city residents are going to experience double taxation in paying as city residents and also as county residents.

"Is the city paying twice?" Craig asked.

He said he thinks the issues can be worked out, "but it hasn't been the easiest sell yet."

mattresses, appliances, organic waste, furniture, animal carcasses, and other kinds of trash. BLM is putting the illegal dumpers on notice that the area is being cleaned up and future violations will be prosecuted.

"Besides being an eyesore from all the trash dumping, we've also found hazardous chemicals among the debris. That makes it a dangerous situation for the public and a health hazard, especially as close as it is to the Big Wood River," said Tim Fuller, a Hazardous Waste Specialist at the

Michael W. Allen - Burley

Michael William Allen, 33, departed this life Sept. 29, 2003. Michael was born Aug. 18, 1970, in Burley, Idaho, to Bill G. and Leah Fenstermaker Allen. He was raised and went to school in Burley. After graduation from Burley High School in 1989, Mike entered the U.S. Navy, where he served for three years. On Oct. 15, 1996, Michael married his sweetheart, Cindy Pinkerton in Burley, where they made their home with three children. Michael worked for nine years as a relief operator at Kraft Foods, in Rupert, where he made many friends.
Gone too soon from our lives, Michael was a loving and caring son, husband, father and friend. More than just his husband, Michael was Cindy's best friend and support.
Michael enjoyed pro football, video games and music. He had a great artistic talent and drew beautiful wildlife sketches. Michael, Cindy, and Bill loved to go hunting together where they would sit around the camp fire telling stories, laughing and enjoying the company of one another. Mike loved to go fishing with his Dad. He was his father's greatest love and friend.

Michael was preceded in death by his mother whom he deeply missed.
Surviving him are his father; wife; children, Crystal, Ashley and Derek; his brother, Bret Allen; sisters, Nicole Allen and Michelle Ketchum and his special niece, Sabra Ketchum; and many aunts, uncles and cousins. All of us will miss Michael's big smile, hugs and loving ways.
In lieu of flowers, the family would appreciate your donation to the Burley Elks Rehabilitation Center.

City Hall will be at 375 E. First Ave. The facility, formerly known as Wendell Middle School's annex building.

Irene Rounsefell, a local historian, said Wendell city officials originally wanted to convert the construction of a city building and Valley Manor Assisted Living, into city hall. However, the upkeep and remodeling expenses proved too much for the city's budget.

Local leaders sold the Wendell home to E. Williams in 1919 and used the money from the sale to purchase the three lots on West Main Street.

In March 1920, City Council members approved plans for the construction of a city building and began accepting bids from contractors. Once again, however, the city lacked the funds needed to start construction and all bids ultimately were rejected.

It was not until that point on details about City Hall are a bit vague. What she has been able to piece together by combing through copies of The Wendell Irrigatorist, what was then the local newspaper, is that community members and clubs got together and helped with the construction.

Between 1920 and 1921, the Civic Club, a women's organization, held public entertainment of all kinds, such as ice cream number of vehicles is limited, Wendell explained.

"In order to comply with the law, the police department needs City Council approval to purchase these used police vehicles," Wington wrote. "We have complied with the law by getting out bid to the local dealerships, and they have stated that they do not have resources to sell used police vehicles. With the City Council's approval, we look forward to purchasing these used police vehicles from these outside agencies."

The cars will have between 15,000 and 40,000 miles on them. They will be either Fords or equal models with rear-wheel drive and at least a 4-cylinder high performance engine and a police suspension system.

"These cars are low miles and basically have all the miles worked out of them," Hodge said. In addition, they are already outfitted with all the new equipment, he said.

Typically the department runs their vehicles between 95,000 and 100,000 miles, Hodge said. The cars tend to be fairly worn out by then because they are driven around town with lots of stop-and-go driving 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"It's rough on a car," Hodge said.

Also at today's City Council meeting, officers Brian Maughan and Tom Fleming will be receiving certificates for completing their training courses, along with Sgt. Dan McAtee.

Teacher talk in Mini-Cassia yields reading strategies

By Shari Chaney Times-News writer

RUPERT — Simple things can have profound effects.

Learning how to participate in a book discussion as a first-grader prepares a child for college, Minidoka County teachers decided Friday during an in-service activity.

Sheila Borland, consultant with Consortium on Reading Excellence, talked with teachers about book discussions Friday afternoon. The past two days of training have included many other specific issues and strategies about reading.

Consortium on Reading Excellence consultant Sheila Borland talks with Heyburn Elementary School teachers Beckie Solakiewicz and Cheryl Howard during in-service on Friday.

Teaching students to discuss a book rather than just recite facts helps make them think, connect to a story, become involved in their own learning and find out their thoughts count.

Borland, who teaches fourth grade, rather than just recite facts helps make them think, connect to a story, become involved in their own learning and find out their thoughts count.

wait to be called on.

Sometimes, it's just about teaching children manners, Borland said — how to jump in politely, recognize others' thoughts and make sure their own thoughts are connected to the discussion.

Teachers can learn to help students put energy into listening, not just waiting for their own chance to talk, one teacher pointed out.

By asking students to be involved in a discussion, the teachers ensure everyone is actively engaged in the story, Borland said.

Teachers in Minidoka County attended in-service training both Tuesday and Friday. On Friday afternoon, they had specific strategies ready to try in their classrooms.

"Thinking aloud while reading a story to kindergarten students can aid in comprehension. If something in the story reminds the teacher of something else, they should share it with the students, kindergarten teacher Angelle Pruss said. It might help the student connect to the story and understand it better.

Asking students to visualize the story rather than just showing them pictures also can help them comprehend and be engaged in the story, said second-grade teacher Cheryl Howard.

Involving students by asking what they learned and what they liked about a story keeps them interested," said kindergarten teacher Mary Frances Cozakis.

"The more involved they are, the more interested they'll be," Cozakis added.

Homeless

The newspaper's quote is taken from "The Boys," a poem written by Oliver Wendell Holmes, for a reunion of the Harvard class of 1829. The first stanza asks:

Has there any fellow got mixed with the boys?
If there has, take him out, without making a noise.
Hang the Almanack's cheat and the Catalogue's spite!
Old Time is a liar! We're twenty tonight!

The clever poem goes on making its point that even the old, important men of the Harvard class — doctors, judges, congressmen and such — had remained boys at heart.

Somehow, Holmes' "twenty," an age, became the supposed number of men to have initially received the McCollum's hospitality, not just the 11 who had actually been present. A week later another, somewhat larger gathering was held at the McCollum home, and the report of it was the first to use the term, "Homeless 20."

The group remained active for several years, during which many festive parties took place, most of them in the dining parlor. Sometimes, the Innesons' men would swoop down, uninvited, in "true pioneer style," very late in the evening, and catch McCollum collared and in his slippers.

BLM's encouraging anyone with information about illegal dumping on public lands to contact their local county sheriff or the BLM at 732-7200.

The McCollum residence. When built, it fronted on Seventh Avenue North, but it has been remodeled extensively. It exists today as Ann's Eyewear Boutique at 694 Shoshone St.

favorite meeting place of the "old guard." At the gatherings there was, inevitably, a lot of story-swapping and boyish hijinks. There was usually a bit of specializing and, occasionally, the card game "High Five" was played.

Best of all, there was always plenty of spirited music. Elva, a 1903 graduate of Shoshone High School, was a talented pianist, as was her mother. At their house, the two of them would preside at the piano — Twin Falls, first — accompanying "the boys" while they sang everything from the comic to the classical. Often, the evening would end with a favorite hymn, or the doxology. Once, Bob McCollum was given the alternative of singing "A King of the Desert Am I" or being turned out of his own house. He sang, and the roof was "buled three inches" by the applause that followed.

There were also instrumentals, including one by a certain "Kappel Meister" Swydenaki, who played a few selections on his violin, which were said to have been "so soulful that they would bring brought tears from a coyote."

At one memorable convalesce, Alice McCollum, "the godmother of the homeless," was thanked for her hospitality, and Burr Pettite, who was present, was praised for his foresight in founding the area. At midnight, everyone trudged through the mud to the Headquarters Restaurant for a buffet. There, the foundation of the Twin Falls Commercial Club (Chamber of Commerce) was laid, and the organization was perfected just a few months later on July 11, 1905.

As the years passed, Bob McCollum assumed ever more responsibilities. He served as city trustee for a year. In 1907 he became secretary of the Twin Falls North Side Investment Company and sold farms and town lots on the north side with great success. In 1908, he took charge of sales on the Salmon tract.

To the great dismay of the community, all three of the McCollums died within the brief period of 33 months. Alice passed away, at age 55, on Easter Sunday, 1915, after a brief illness. Her death plunged Bob into a condition of deep melancholia from which he never recovered, and he also died, aged 57, in that first house built in Twin Falls, on Dec. 21, 1917.

Just six weeks later, daughter Elva also expired of an unstarred cause. By then, she had become the wife of Joel W. Craven and was the mother of two children.

The McCollums lie side by side in the old Twin Falls cemetery. Homeless 20 was buried in a granite tablet erected by 22 men of the "Homeless 20" with this inscription: "In loving memory of Alice Roselle McCollum, Mother of the Homeless Twenty, Homeless Woman of Twin Falls, May Her Kindness Ever Be Remembered."

TWIN FALLS — The No. 3-5 hitters for the College of Southern Idaho displayed their power this weekend against Utah Green and Utah Blue in fall exhibition baseball play at Walker Field.

All six games were won handily by CSI, which is undefeated this fall season.

"He hit one like it was off an aluminum bat," Walker said.

"There were several line drives where if he'd hit under it more they would have gone just as far. It was unreal how hard he hit it, both him and (freshman) Jeremy (Thomas)."

Sophomore Charlie Strandlund also connected for some shots.

But the Eagles shined in more ways than just hitting the long ball. The team also displayed good savvy with its situational hitting (the bunts, sacrifices and bloop singles that move basemen).

"We did some really good things," Walker said. "Our situational hitting has gotten good."

Those hits came against a solid pitching staff assembled from the Utah high school ranks. A couple got the CSI coaches attention as possible recruits next fall.

Walker was most pleased by how the Eagles batters worked against the pitchers, getting quality at-bats.

"We stuck in there, got hitters counts and got hits," Walker said. CSI also performed well on the

Cubs end frustration

Chicago ends 95 years of postseason failure with Game 5 win over Atlanta

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Ninety-five years of frustration. Ninety-five years of ridicule. Put it all to rest. The Chicago Cubs are postseason winners.

Kerry Wood pitched another dominating game and Aramis Ramirez began the celebration with a mammoth home run, pushing the Cubs past Atlanta 5-1 Sunday night for their first postseason victory since the 1908 World Series.

The franchise that endured the College of Coaches and the curse of a goat moves on to play Florida in the NL championship series. Game 1 is Tuesday night at Wrigley Field.

The Braves suffered another heartbreaking loss in the postseason, going down for the second year in a row in Game 5 of the division series.

Twelve straight division titles have produced only one World Series championship, and the Braves face an uncertain future. Gary Sheffield, Greg Maddux, Javy Lopez and Vinny Castilla are all in the last year of their contracts. A couple of ex-pirates helped the Cubs break through in the postseason. Kenny Lofton led off the game with a double and came around to score the first run.

Ramirez put the Cubs up 4-0 with a two-run homer in the sixth — a massive, 439-foot shot over the center-field wall.

Braves pitcher Mike Hampton didn't even turn around after Ramirez connected. With Wood on the mound, the Cubs could have popped the champagne right then and there.

Wood won for the second time in the best-of-five series with a performance that matched his effort in Game 1.

A disputed call by the umpires — is that becoming a theme of this postseason? — led to the only Atlanta run. The big Texan went eight innings, giving up just five hits before giving way to Joe Borowski, an ex-Brave who finished off Atlanta in the ninth.

Chipper Jones led off the Atlanta with a long drive to right field — in a further sign that the Cubs' fortunes have changed — Sammy Sosa jumped and caught it at the wall. The Braves were a dominant hitting team during the regular season, leading the NL in all major categories. But the lineup that produced six 20-homer players and four guys with 100 RBIs couldn't do anything against Chicago's young guns. Twenty-three-year-old Mark Prior pitched a two-hitter in Game 3, a 3-1 victory for the Cubs. Wood, 26, gave up seven hits and three runs in 15 1/3 innings.

Red Sox refuse to die

The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox were four outs from another postseason failure when David Ortiz snapped out of his slump and saved their season.

Hitters in his first 16 at-bats of the series, Ortiz lined a two-run double off Keith Foulke with two outs in the eighth inning Sunday to give Boston a thrilling 5-4 win over the Oakland Athletics.

Manly Ramirez, who was 1-for-12 coming into the game, also broke out, getting two hits and scoring the go-ahead run as the Red Sox forced a decisive fifth game.

"I couldn't think of a better time for that to happen, because the clock was running out there," Boston manager Grady Little said. "That was a good time for them to bust loose."

the teams fly across the country for Monday's Game 5.

Scott Williamson pitched two perfect innings for the win, getting Erubiel Durazo to pop up to third base for the final out. For the third time in as many games at Fenway — the wild-card clincher, then Games 3 and 4 of the division series — the Red Sox poured out of the dugout to celebrate.

Barry Zito will be pitching on three days' rest as the A's face the possibility of first-round elimination for the fourth consecutive season.

"We feel like we have the driver's seat because we have Pedro going tomorrow," said Red Sox outfielder Johnny Damon, who homered and threw out a runner at third.

"We know Pedro's going to be on."

Yankees eliminates Minnesota easily

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The New York Yankees sure got back to their postseason best in a hurry.

The Yankees hit four doubles in a six-inning fourth inning Sunday, giving David Lirio a big lead and breezing into the AL championship series with an 8-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

After a sloppy loss in the opener that brought back memories of last year's first-round flip against Anaheim, New York, beat the Twins three straight times to clinch the AL division series 3-1.

A rested Yankees team will open the ALCS on Wednesday night at home against Oakland or Boston.

Wells improved to 9-2 lifetime in the postseason by going 7 2/3 innings for the Yankees, who took fourth and knocked out Twins starter Johan Santana.

Bernie Williams and Hideki Matsui each hit an RBI double, and Nick Johnson added a two-run double. Alfonso Soriano's bloop two-run single made it 6-0.

Derek Jeter later homered for the Yankees. After losing Game 1 at home 3-1, New York outscored Minnesota 14-3.

The big-budget Yankees are under increasing pressure to win it all this year after going consecutive seasons without a World Series title.

They put themselves in a great situation by finishing off

Minnesota on Sunday.

They'll have two days off to rest before Game 1 of the ALCS, while the Red Sox and Athletics play a decisive Game 5 on Monday night after making a cross-country trip to Oakland.

Pedro Martinez pitches for Boston against Barry Zito, so neither ace would be ready to face the Yankees on Wednesday.

The Twins, who beat Oakland in the first round last year, will have to settle for two straight AL Central titles after back-to-back playoff appearances for the first time since 1969-70.

U.S. loses in Cup semifinal

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — There will be no World Cup repeat for the American women, no triumph before a raucous home crowd.

Spectacular goalkeeping by Silke Rottenberg, a brilliantly executed corner kick and into the net in the 15th minute, and the Germans withstood one U.S. threat after another.

Kerstin Garefrekes' header off Renate Lingor's corner kick glanced off the crossbar and into the net in the 15th minute, and the Germans withstood one U.S. threat after another.

Maren Meinert, the MVP of the WUSA last year in its final season of existence, scored in the match's final minute, then German star Birgit Finjan punctuated the win with a goal just before the end of extra time.

Germany will play Sweden for the World Cup title next Sunday in Carson, Calif. The United States will face Canada, a 2-1 loser to Sweden Sunday night, for third place.

"We brought our 'A' game in terms of the attacking," U.S. coach April Heinrichs said. "That's a great team we played. 'I've got to think that maybe this was the greatest game ever played.'"

Packers pluck Seahawks

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Brett Favre guided Green Bay on five consecutive touchdown drives to help the Packers beat their former coach, Mike Holmgren, 35-13.

That was sweet revenge for Favre, who self-destructed in Holmgren's first return to Lambeau Field when he committed six turnovers in a 27-7 loss to the Seahawks in 1989.

This time, Favre completed 19 of 25 passes for 185 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions for Green Bay (3-2).

Ahman Green ran 27 times for 118 yards and two touchdowns against his former coach. Shaun Alexander gained 102 yards on 20 carries for Seattle (3-1).

Green Bay's Donald Fisher lunges forward on his 11-yard touchdown run during the third quarter Sunday against Seattle.

Bills 22, Bengals 16, OT
ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Travis Henry's 2-yard plunge capped a five-play drive 4:53 into the extra period, lifting the Bills.

With Buffalo trailing 16-13, Drew Bledsoe marched the Bills 59 yards on 13 plays to set up Rian Lindell's 29-yard field goal with 28 seconds remaining in regulation.

Bledsoe wasted no time in securing the win, taking the Bills 57 yards after the Bengals (1-4) opened overtime going three-and-out.

He finished 19-of-35 for 211 yards passing. Henry scored twice for Buffalo (3-2), returning to action after two rib cartilage lesions from last weekend's 23-13 loss to Philadelphia.

Patriots 38, Titans 30
FOXBORO, Mass. — Mike Cloud returned from a four-game suspension for a substance-abuse violation after a 15-yard TD with 3:14 left to give the Patriots the lead, then Ty Law clinched the win with a 65-yard interception return for a score.

The ending was wild.

First Steve McNair bulled into the end zone from a yard out to give the Titans (3-2) a 25-24 lead, and then for a 2-point conversion to rookie Tyrone Calico.

But Beth Johnson returned the kickoff 71 yards to the Tennessee 30 for the Patriots (3-2). Three plays later, Cloud ran up the middle for the winning TD, capping a day in which he gained 73 yards on seven carries.

Cowboys 24, Cardinals 7
IRVING, Texas — Emmitt Smith sprained his left shoulder against his former teammates in the first half, then watched as the Cowboys won their third straight for the first time since 1999.

Quincy Carter threw for 277 yards and two TDs and the defense had two safeties in a four-play span in the third quarter as Bill Parcells won his first home game as coach of the Cowboys (3-1).

Smith lost a yard on six carries for Arizona (1-4), marking the first time in his 206 games that he failed to gain at least 1 yard.

Dolphins 23, Giants 10
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Olinde Mare kicked three field goals and receiver James McKnight scored on a 68-yard reverse as the Dolphins took advantage of four New York turnovers and an injury to kicker Mike Bantom to win.

Ricky Williams, who was held in check until a game-clinching fourth-quarter drive, led the third straight win for Miami (3-1) with a 1-yard touchdown run. He finished with 22 carries for 39 yards, his worst game as a Dolphin.

Vidings 39, Falcons 26
ATLANTA — Gus Fretotte picked up for the injured Dante Culpepper again and threw a pair of touchdown passes to lead the Vikings.

Rod Smart — aka "He Hate Me" — had the flashiest play for the Panthers, returning a kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown. John Kasay added field goals of 49 and 23 yards.

It was a confidence-building game for the Panthers, who opened last season 3-0 before going on an eight-game losing streak. The injury-riddled Saints (1-4), down six starters on defense, lost their third consecutive game.

SAN FRANCISCO — Terrell Owens caught five passes for 79 yards and a touchdown as the San Francisco 49ers spoiled Steve Mariucci's homecoming.

Jeff Garcia completed 15 of 27 passes for 192 yards and rushed for another score for the 49ers (2-3), who snapped a three-game losing streak with just enough offense to extend the Lions' road losing streak to 19 games.

Detroit (1-4) couldn't move the ball consistently in its fourth straight loss.

On the third play of the third quarter, Clinton Purds broke through a big hole on the right side and ran 65 yards, putting the Broncos on top 20-10.

Then Trent Green hit Eddie Kennison for 12 yards to launch a 5-play, 77-yard drive that pulled Kansas City to 20-17. After Priest Holmes picked up 22 yards on a run and G on a shovel pass, Johnnie Morabito beat DeSha O'Neal in the end zone for a 25-yard touchdown catch.

Newman stays out of pits, gets Winston Cup win
KANSAS CITY, Kan. — Ryan Newman's gas-mileage gamble paid off with another Winston Cup win Sunday at Kansas Speedway.
 Newman elected not to take part in a flurry of pit stops with a 65-lap race, then held off a furious challenge from Bill Elliott to win the Banquet 400-his series-leading eighth victory of the year.
 Jeremy Mayfield, who stayed out of the pits along with Newman, was third as Dodge took the top three spots.
 Elliott, riding after a restart with 14 laps to go on the 1.5-mile tri-oval, got held-up momentarily by Mike Skinner's lapped car. He passed Mayfield to win the first of two NASCAR Cup events at a new venue.
 Harvick finished sixth, followed in the top 10 by Jimmie Johnson, Wallace McMurrary, Rusty Wallace and Ricky Rudd.

Rioting follows college homecoming fest
MANKATO, Minn. — Police arrested dozens of students during an alcohol-fueled riot in the streets following a homecoming football game here at Minnesota State. Many two-lane road last Saturday night in a largely student residential area, some setting fire to trash bins, tearing down fences, smashing car windows and throwing rocks and bricks at police. Public Safety Director Jim Franklin said.
 Police in riot gear used eye and skin irritants to disperse the crowd, and arrested about 40 people.
 The area became so dangerous that it took an armored vehicle attended by 12 officers to get out of the riot, which reportedly wasn't breathing, Franklin said. Witnesses said the riot started when about 400 students at a party after the game became violent. The rioters threw empty beer bottles at about 11:30 p.m.
 Mankato lost the homecoming game 20-9 to North Dakota State. The team is winless six games into the season.

Football poll stays steady heading into big weekend
NEW YORK — The top six teams remained the same in the latest Associated Press college football poll heading into a weekend of big showdowns.
 Oklahoma extended its season-long run atop the poll following a 53-7 victory over Iowa State and heads into the Red River Shootout against No. 11 Texas ranked No. 1 for the first time since 1987.
 Miami was second in the Top 25 released Sunday following a 22-20 escape against West Virginia last Thursday night. Ohio State, Virginia Tech, Florida State and LSU follow the Hurricanes in the poll.
 The Sooners received 59 of the 65 first-place votes and 1,617 points in balloting by the panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Hurricanes came off first and 1,523 points. The Buckeyes got the remaining five first-place votes.
 Arkansas, Georgia, Southern California and Nebraska round out the Top 10.
 The USA Today/ESPN coaches poll had the same top six teams as the AP.

OTHER VIEWS

Special counsel is overkill for federal search into leak

Los Angeles Times

President Bush is right. The Justice Department, not a special counsel, should investigate allegations that an administration official illegally leaked the name of a CIA employee whose husband had authoritatively disputed White House claims that Iraq attempted to buy uranium ore in Niger. Neither an appointed special counsel nor a new independent counsel act — which Sen. Joe Lieberman (D-Conn.), a presidential candidate, is calling for — would be helpful or desirable.

Their view: This

guest editorial from the Los Angeles Times says an independent counsel is unnecessary to probe security leaks in the White House.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

ized crime. None were discovered. President Reagan's Housing secretary, Samuel Pierce, was investigated for nine years and not indicted. In the Iran-Contra affair, special prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh spent eight years and $47 million chasing officials like Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on often picayune charges; the first President Bush pardoned Weinberger and others.

Kenneth W. Starr took zeal to a new level, turning the initial Whitewater investigation of President Clinton into an open-ended inquiry on his sexual escapades with Monica Lewinsky.

Republicans mercifully let the law die in 1999. But Democrats like Sen. Charles E. Schumer (D-N.Y.), perhaps suffering amnesia, are demanding a special counsel — an investigator appointed by Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft with the staff, subpoena powers and ability to convene a grand jury. Lieberman wants a full-blown independent counsel, with a two-year limit that permits extensions for "good cause."

Allowing career Justice Department officials to take the lead is enough, until a need for something more is proved. At this point, demands for an outside counsel smack more of opportunism than common sense.

Military opinions differ on Clark

JOSEPH L. GALLOWAY

Not many of those who served with the general who would be president are neutral about him. They either love Gen. Wesley Kame Clark, or they hate him.

Clark, 59, who graduated first in his class of 579 at West Point in 1966, has shot toward the top of a field of 10 declared candidates for the Democratic nomination for president in just two weeks.

In an informal survey of active-duty and retired general officers, most of whom declined to be quoted by name, the most common descriptions of Clark were "very smart" and "very ambitious."

At least four said that Clark was the "Courtney Massengale" of their generation, a reference to the anti-hero in one of the most popular novels among soldiers.

"Once an Eagle" by Anton Myrer. Myrer's hero is Sam Damon, a Nebraska farm boy without the political pull to get into West Point, who earns his battlefield commission in World War II. Damon is a loyal, honest, self-effacing officer whose first thought and lasting love is for his sergeants and soldiers. Damon's nemesis is Courtney Massengale, a fast-talking, politically connected West Pointer who cares only about his own career.

The book has a cult following among military men; most aspire to be Sam Damon and loathe the Massengales in their midst.

Retired Lt. Gen. Paul Funk said of Clark: "The all important moral force just wasn't there when he was in command. His greatest asset was the ability to sort out which way the wind was blowing."

One recently retired general, who used the Massengale descriptive, said of Clark: "He is a bright staff officer who should never have commanded above the captain level. The Republicans will have a field day with this."

Retired Gen. Barry E. McCaffrey notes that Clark volunteered for duty in Vietnam after finishing two years at Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar. Clark commanded a company of foot soldiers in the 1st Battalion 16th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, in Vietnam in 1969 and 1970 and was badly wounded in combat. He earned a Silver Star for valor.

(He) is probably the most intelligent officer I ever served with," McCaffrey said. "He has great integrity, sound judgment and great kindness in dealing with people. He is a public servant of exceptional character and skill."

McCaffrey acknowledged that Clark doesn't fit the mold that most officers traditionally held to, what he called the "model of courage, simplicity, lack of politics, total down ground, scheming only to stay out of Washington." He adds, "Was does not fit — except for the courage — but he still has been a treasure to the national security process."

A senior retired general said that Clark's penchant for getting around his bosses eventually got him fired as NATO commander in Europe. "He constantly backdoored the secretary of defense (William Cohen) by going directly to the secretary of state (Madeleine Albright) and the national security adviser (Samuel Berger) to work his agenda, rather than presenting his case directly to his boss."

The general said Clark's downfall as NATO commander was hastened by his actions before and during the Kosovo crisis and air war against the Serbs. He said Clark predicted that two days of bombing would bring Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to his knees. The war lasted 73 days.

A retired Air Force general who saw Clark operate in that war said Clark was "an extraordinary micro-manager — he would insert himself into individual cockpits." He added, "If Wes Clark gets the nomination I swear to God I will call the Republicans and volunteer to form a one-man truth squad and follow him around setting the record straight."

Another retired Army general said that after Clark, then a lieutenant general, had spent two years on the Joint Staff he went to see the Army chief, Gen. Dennis Reimer, to ask what his next assignment would be. Reimer told Clark the Army had nothing more for him, signaling it was time for him to retire.

Two of Clark's champions, Defense Secretary William Perry and then-Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. John Shalikashvili, intervened. They engineered the promotion of Clark to four stars and command of U.S. Southern Command in Panama. Clark had survived to fight again.

What the generals who criticize Clark may not understand is that their ideal of a general officer — humble, honest Sam Damon — wouldn't stand a chance in politics. Wesley K. Clark just might.

The part we left out

Sometimes a great story has to take a back seat to good judgment.

Today's front page concludes the tale of a Magic Valley mother's fight against drug dealers. It's a powerful story, but an important element is missing: the name of the courageous mom.

As I've mentioned before, The Times News needs courageous, unnamed sources. Our credibility depends, in large part, on attaching the real names of real people to the information we print. Relying on unnamed sources creates the risk of sloppy or even fraudulent reporting — a scene in some recent high-profile scandals.

But this story demanded to be told, with or without the hero's name.

For us, the story began with a phone call to reporter Sandy Miller. Miller had just written about a drug felon's struggle to put her life back on track. As Miller recalls the conversation, the caller thought the story was too sympathetic to a convicted, methamphetamine dealer. The caller offered another side of the story.

BETWEEN THE LINES Clark Walworth

Her side of the story was amazing. Furious at the people who had peddled meth to her son, this 40-something mother had infiltrated the local drug trade on her behalf of police. She had put her life at risk to bring down drug dealers.

Miller says she was excited to put the story into print, "because it's a good example of people taking back their neighborhood." She was impressed that the woman was determined to tell her story, despite the risk of retaliation by criminals. The woman even let us take her picture.

Miller spent four hours interviewing the woman in detail. Then she combed court records and talked with police and prosecutors to make sure the woman's story checked out. It did. The woman is a genuine hero.

But when police detectives learned about Miller's project, they were concerned. The story, deserved to be told, they agreed, but identifying the woman in print was too risky. They phoned the woman and urged her to reconsider.

Not even an angry, courageous mom is bulletproof. So the woman called Miller back.

At first she asked us to kill the story — a suggestion that made Miller's heart sink. But eventually we reached a compromise. We would tell her story but hide her identity.

"The most important thing was her safety," Miller says. "If something happened to that woman because of something I wrote, I don't think I'd do very well with that."

So we're omitting the woman's name. The story identifies her the way she was listed in court records: "Confidential Informant 2003-C-067." In the photograph on Sunday, we covered her face with a black box.

It's not an ideal solution, but it allows us to tell this woman's inspiring story. We're grateful for her courage.

City council candidate is decent, thoughtful

Many years ago, I was one of several mothers who chaperoned a group of Bull students on a trip to Spain. Shawn Bariger was a student in that group. It didn't take long to become aware that he was an extraordinary person. He consistently was there to help when I was struggling with my suitcases. With an invitation to "grab my arm and hang on," he even helped guide me safely through a rather raucous crowd after the bullfights in Madrid. Shawn has now become a responsible, community-oriented adult. He did not ask me to write this letter and will probably be somewhat embarrassed when he reads it, but in this time when the public questions anyone running for public office, I thought the residents of Twin Falls needed to know the history of thoughtfulness and decency of this man who is a candidate for your city council.

JUDY FELTON Buhl

Candidate will help mold Twin Falls' vision

The people who first established Twin Falls as a city were people with a vision. We now move into a second century, and the leaders of our city must continue with that vision.

I have worked as a volunteer with many city and county committees in the past and at present to continue the vision brought to our valley 100 years ago. Through proper planning, we look to the future with vision. Now I wish to work directly for you as a city council person where I can continue to help mold our vital and energetic city into what we the people would all like to see.

Vet helped provide care in another county

I have recently read a few letters regarding emergency visits to local veterinarians. So far, I have not read anything that is in support for veterinarians. So I thought I would write a letter and also inform the public about my recent experience with a local veterinarian.

In early February, I received a phone call from my husband informing me that a car had hit my beloved dog, Lacie. I immediately called my vet and, without hesitation, he told me to bring her right in.

My husband and I arrived at the clinic a little after seven that evening. Lacie was rushed to the back room to be examined. It seemed Lacie had received a fractured vertebrae in the accident and would need surgery and amputation. My veterinarian made a quick phone call and, within minutes, my husband, Lacie and I were headed to Hailey. Not only did my veterinarian help ease Lacie's pain and provide her with a backboard for support but he also offered me his own personal vehicle to take Lacie to Hailey so that she would be more comfortable.

We arrived in Hailey around 10 that night and the veterinarian and his staff were there waiting for us. He looked at Lacie's X-rays and told us there was nothing he could do for her. So, in the end, I, too, lost a beloved member of my family.

Having told my story, I would also like to offer some advice to other pet owners in the area.

When you acquire a new pet, take it to your veterinarian so your pet and veterinarian can become acquainted with each other. Make sure you and your pet visit your veterinarian regularly for vaccinations and routine checkups. Ask your veterinarian about his or her emergency policy, how to get a hold of him or her and whom he or she recommends to call if he or she isn't available. You cannot expect a veterinarian to respond to an emergency call at all hours of the night for a sick animal they haven't seen in two to three years or if at all.

Veterinarians have a life and family, too. Unfortunately, Twin Falls does not have an emergency hospital for pets like other areas do. Until Twin Falls does acquire one, we have to rely on our veterinarians for this service.

The mother of two's time as C.I. 2003-C-007 had come to an end. "What I wanted for me, getting Melissa out of here into the hands of Urrizaga," she said.

Detectives met C.I. 2003-C-007 and the undercover policeman at a nearby church and searched the area.

"Then they paraded us through the jail so Urrizaga would be sure to see us," she said.

"Then I drove back to ISP headquarters in Jerome, where C.I. 2003-C-007 filled out her statement.

"Then I went home," she said.

"Urrizaga now sat in a jail cell on $1 million bond.

Her son called C.I. 2003-C-007's son called.

"What the hell is going on, Mom?" she said her son asked.

"I've got people looking at me thinking I narked everyone out. He asked his mother why she had done it."

"I said, 'Because I want to take back my own little corner of the world,'" she said.

Her son said, "Mom, do you realize the kind of jeopardy you put yourself in?"

With a quiver in her voice and tears in her eyes, she repeated the same words she said to her son that night.

"If I'm going to lose you, I want to know I did everything I could."

Urrizaga pleaded guilty to one count of trafficking in methamphetamine. Last month, he was sentenced to 22 years in prison, 12 years fixed. If he serves his entire sentence, he'll be 71 years old when he gets out.

"A punishment should achieve a greater objective than punishment for punishment's sake," 5th District Judge John Hohnhorst said when he sentenced Urrizaga. "It should make a drug trafficker stop and think before they do it again."

Urrizaga also was fined $25,000 - $10,000 more than the mandatory minimum.

Wright was sentenced to 15 years, eight of them fixed.

House was charged with two counts of delivery of a controlled substance. Four months later, she was shot nine times in an incident unrelated to her criminal case. She survived.

House pleaded guilty to one count of methamphetamine delivery and could have been sent to prison for life. Instead, the state asked for between three and five years' probation based on her lack of felony convictions and for humanitarian reasons.

Today, House is studying business management at the College of Southern Idaho and is working at the college part-time through its work/study program. She attends 12-step meetings and is just two months away from receiving her six-month chip.

"I'm sober, clean and I'm going to school," House said. "I'm taking responsibility for my actions, and I'm changing my life."

But there is no love lost between House and C.I. 2003-C-007. House said her arrest had nothing to do with the changes she has made in her life.

"The only reason she took everyone down was her son," House said. "Her son still moved out - he still left. The only thing that got me going was my shooting."

C.I. 2003-C-007 has little sympathy for dealers and addicts, saying it's not just themselves they're hurting.

"No one forces them to do it," she said. "They make a choice. Junkies are always feeling sorry for themselves. How about the parents who lie awake night after night wondering if their kids have a roof over their heads and food in their stomachs? How about the sister who lost her brother?"

Starting over

C.I. 2003-C-007 has paid dearly for her efforts. Her marriage broke up, and she had to move and change jobs. In a way, she has had to start a new life all over again.

"I lost a lot doing this," she said. She had her son, now 20, arrested again last June for assaulting her. He was sentenced to 180 days in jail, which was suspended. He remains on probation.

"I will always love that kid," she said. "He will always be my kid, but I don't know him anymore."

She has seen her son just once since that day. He was coming out of a grocery store as she and her teenage daughter were walking in.

Her daughter misses her big brother, but she's proud of what her mom did.

"My mom did something great," her daughter said. "She took out some pretty big drug dealers, and the world is all the better for it."

ISP detectives are also grateful.

"I so admire her for motivation for becoming an informant," Kaufman said. "I wish more citizens would come forward like this person has."

C.I. 2003-C-007 said the experience has shown her she's even stronger than she thought.

"I'm proud of what I did," she said. "No one wants to mess with me or my kids. I will be your best friend, but if you're selling drugs, I'll be your worst nightmare."

And she hasn't lost hope.

"I have my daughter and the promise of tomorrow," she said. "If it helps one child to say he wants to go back home," she said, "then it would have been worth it."

And who knows? Maybe that one child will be her son.

Asleep at the wheel

Magic Valley is Idaho's drowsy driving capital

By Steve Crump
 Times-News writer

MALTA - There's a 20-mile stretch of Interstate 84 where the road never bends.

And here, between pasture and alfalfa fields, the line between boredom and slumber often blurs into disaster.

"When you interview survivors of an accident in which the driver has fallen asleep, the driver often has no memory of it," said Capt. Dave Neal, the Jerome-based commander of Region 4 of the Idaho State Police. "The way I see it, I remember a bump in the road or I remember being in the wrong lane."

These are stories that ISP patrolmen and other Magic Valley law enforcement officers heard 93 times last year, and that's just the tip of the iceberg. Most drivers who die at the wheel with disastrous results don't - or can't - own up to it.

"Drowsiness fits into the larger category of accidents caused by distractions and inattentive driving," said Darin Christensen, Boise-based public information specialist for the Idaho Transportation Department. "And it's a small percentage of those accidents."

But on the basis of what the ISP is told, the Magic Valley is far and away the drowsy driving hotbed of Idaho.

Between 1998 and 2002, there were 17,271 motor vehicle crashes in Region 4, which includes the eight counties of south-central Idaho. Five hundred twenty-two of those crashes were drowsy driving accidents, or 3.0 percent. Statewide, the percentage of sleep-induced accidents was 2.2 percent.

That's because the Magic Valley has more lonely rural roads than most of the rest of Idaho. Two-thirds of the mileage of I-84 - the state's main east-west thoroughfare - is in the Magic Valley, and south-central Idaho also has long, straight stretches of U.S. Highway 93 and Idaho Highway 75. At least 14 people have died in sleep-related accidents here since 1998.

"It can catch up with you," Neal said. "I make a lot of trips back and forth to Boise, and sometimes even when I'm well rested I catch myself wanting to nod off. When you've rolled down the windows, turned up the radio and start telling yourself you only have a few more miles to go, it's time to pull over."

The issue has new visibility since New Jersey earlier this year became the first state in the nation to make drowsy driving a criminal offense. Although Idaho isn't considering following suit for now, other states are likely to. Drowsy driving is a factor in 100,000 crashes nationwide a year, according to the National Transportation Safety Administration, killing 1,550 people. Eighteen people died on Idaho highways from sleep-related accidents in 2002, the last year for which statistics are available.

"You have no margin for error when you drive sleepy," Neal said. "At 75 mph, you'll be off the road or in the median in the blink of an eye."

Thirty-seven percent of the driving population has nodded off at one time or another behind the wheel, according to a study conducted by the NHTSA - including 49 percent of male drivers. Between one-fifth and one-third of those drivers reported doing so within the last month.

One-third reported dozing in broad daylight and nearly half - 47 percent - had been driving for an hour or less at the time. On average, drowsy drivers had six hours sleep the night before.

So what's the solution?

"Take it seriously," Neal said. "You can't will yourself to keep your eyes open, safety experts say. Warning signs include your

Don't call us, we'll call you - promise

I've been writing columns for a long time now, two or three centuries at least. The writers on topics that touched a nerve among you readers, the morose-TV-commercials-nerve, the loud-cell-phone-talkers-nerve, and of course the low-flow-toilet-nerve, I even touched - and I regret this deeply - the Barry Manilow nerve.

But I've never touched a nerve like the one I touched when I wrote about telemarketers.

To review: In August, I wrote a column about the National Do Not Call Registry, which allows you to go to an Internet site (www.donotcall.gov) and register your phone number. The plan is that most telemarketers would then be prohibited from calling you.

HUMOR Dave Barry

The Do Not Call Registry is wildly popular with the human public. More than 50 million households have signed up. This displeases the telemarketing industry, which believes it has a constitutional right to call people who do not want them.

Several telemarketing groups have filed lawsuits to block the registry. So in my August column, I printed the toll-free telephone number of one of these groups, the American Telemarketing Association. My thinking was: Hey, if the ATA feels its members have a constitutional right to call you, then surely the ATA feels that you have an equally constitutional right to call the ATA.

Well, I turned out that I did not even begin to call up the telemarketing industry. Thousands and thousands of you called the ATA. I found out about this when I saw an article in a direct-marketing newspaper, the DM, which quoted the executive director of the ATA, Tim Searcy. Here's an excerpt from the article:

"The ATA received no warning about the article from Barry or anyone connected with him," Searcy said. "The Barry column has had harmful consequences for the ATA," Searcy said. "An ATA staffer has spent about five hours a day for the past six days running the phone line and clearing out messages."

I just hope nobody interrupted the ATA's dinner.

I myself received approximately seven billion phone calls, letters and e-mails on this topic. About 90 percent came from consumers who are wildly enthusiastic about the idea of calling telemarketers. Many of these consumers wanted me to publish more telemarketer numbers, including residential numbers. As one e-mailer put it: "I think we should call them at home and try to sell them the idea of not calling people at home."

The other 10 percent of the response came from people in the telemarketing industry, who pointed out that I am an evil vermin scum, and - even worse - a member of the news media. Their main arguments are that (a) telemarketers are hardworking people, and (b) if they're not allowed to call people who don't want to be called, telemarketing jobs could be lost, and U.S. economy would suffer. Tim Searcy of the ATA was quoted in the Los Angeles Times as saying that the impact of the Do Not Call Registry would be "like an asteroid hitting the earth."

As I write these words, lawyers and politicians and lobbyists and judges are swarming all over the telemarketing issue, so I don't know what the legal status of the Do Not Call Registry will be when you read this column. But it appears that the telemarketers plan to continue their efforts to sue the planet by fighting for the right to call people who do not want to be called.

I realize that this makes many of you angry. I realize that many of you would like to, once again, let the telemarketers know how you feel. And I am, frankly, tempted to reveal to you here that the American Telemarketing Association (Web site www.ataconnect.org) seems to have a phone line working (at least for now) at 317-816-2333.

But would it be right to reveal this?

The autumn of our accessories

The Washington Post

The air is crisp, the leaves are changing - and it's the right time for a wardrobe update, ladies and gentlemen. Not an overhaul, just a refresher. A few key items to revamp a tired closet:

1. A funky shoe. The fashion behind the popular United Nude shoe could come only from an architect and a shoemaker.

Attitude For fall, they've added a spat-in-four different colors that wraps around the Mobius like a wearable pig-in-a-blanket.

2. Metrosexual products. A guy-strength brew of botanicals for the mug, with cool packaging.

3. Headgear. Headbands and other hair gadgets are back and better than ever. Clips, bands and clasps in warm, foliage-inspired colors and chunky leather make a bo-hum ponytail much more flattering.

4. A sneaker from your past. Classic meets current with this season's Adidas, Converse, Puma and New Balance offerings.

5. A bag that's also a bracelet. This tweed purse is more wrist than clutch.

6. Anything mod. For the guys: For the girls: Add some '60s style to the makeup bag (a smart, toasty, case) - that shimmering, headbanded look.

7. Something old and something new. A chunky pearl necklace, reinvented with a ribbon closure.

Autumn is a good time for a wardrobe update. From top, United Nude Mubis shoe can be worn with or without spats, $288; Flight 001 toiletry case, $29; Kid Glove shoes ($12) and after-shave ($36) gels; skinny tie, $39; Coletti Malouf Nade Collection ponytail holders, $30-$50; pearl necklace with pink ribbon tie, $34; Sita S-Pan compact, $38, and lip color, $24; Bambina di Coccolato's tweed beagle clutch, $82; Converse Quikstars, $68, and Adidas Mal Nubucks, $60.

Consider pros and cons of visiting an esthetician

DEAR PAULA: Have you found research showing any of the treatments that an esthetician performs are viable besides being an hour of (expensive) relaxation? I know that many spa offer treatments that cost a fortune but are worthless for skin.

I recently saw a program featuring the "Mediterranean Mud Treatment." It saddens me that women are so easily taken in by these so-called miracle potions. Most women are so desperate to feel good about themselves they will try anything that sounds convincing, and the high price tag of these treatments and exotic claims only serve to validate why these treatments are so powerful and "special." I do not yet have licensing to work as an esthetician.

Education-wise, I fear that I will be sitting and listening to a lot of misinformation that I would not use, so I am looking for some good solid advice before I invest $3,000-$4,000 in order to be able to work in this field.

- THE TRUTH AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH, VIA E-MAIL

DEAR TRUTH: Without question, there are a lot of products and services offered in salons and spas that have, at the very least, questionable benefits, and at the worst, many that can be harmful or damaging for skin. I also feel strongly there are numerous wonderful things a facialist can provide that generates a good income and a gratifying experience for the client.

When it comes to services estheticians perform, there are many reasons a facial can be of help. Removing blackheads or minimizing blemishes; various levels of exfoliation whether it be from mild chemical peels to microdermabrasion; relaxation, and deep moisturization can all be extremely beneficial for many skin types. Even cellulite treatments (like Endermologie) can be temporarily helpful and have a slight potential to improve skin structure.

Although mud masks won't purge toxins (exactly what toxins are extractable through sweat or skin tissue?) and lymphatic massage won't change how you wrinkle, these treatments can feel great and be thoroughly relaxing. If you own a salon or spa, how you present treatments and what products you recommend is totally within your control. It obviously becomes much more problematic to work for someone else who does not agree with your point of view.

That can take work and effort, but I know there are good estheticians out there who don't just want to gouge their customers. Your education process can be challenging but as is true with any information you receive you can do the research to determine whether or not it matches with the real world or is it just marketing hype and misleading advertising.

The diet slurpee discovers missing ingredient

Los Angeles Times

A new, low-calorie sweetener is making its U.S. debut in a diet frozen cola drink, but it may not be long before you find it in breakfast cereals, brownies, ice cream, candies and energy bars.

The commercial launch of tagatose, which has 52 percent of the sweetness of table sugar, came with the introduction of 7-Eleven's Diet Pepsi Slurpee. For years the convenience store chain had tried to create a no-calorie version of its popular drink, but those efforts had failed either the taste test or the consistency test.

Combined with two other sugar substitutes, erythritol and sucralose (Splenda), tagatose makes the frozen drink taste more like the sugar-sweetened original. A naturally occurring sugar found in dairy products and sold under the brand name Naturose, tagatose is made from whey, a byproduct of cheese-making. It's a bulk sweetener like saccharin and Splenda, but those and other artificial sweeteners are hundreds of times sweeter than sugar and must be mixed with fillers. Tagatose spoons and measures just like sugar.

The sweetener withstands the heat of baking, dissolves like regular sugar and remains stable when exposed to air. Because it doesn't raise levels of blood sugar or insulin, it can be used by diabetics. Furthermore, it's a flavor enhancer that reduces bitter aftertastes of other sugar substitutes.

"It offers the potential to be a good-tasting sweetener that can readily be used in recipes, which is a big deal," said Dr. Anne Peters Hermsel, a diabetes specialist at the University of Southern California, noting how difficult it is to cook with sugar substitutes. "This will be easier."

Tagatose was developed and patented by Spharix Inc., a bio-engineering firm in Beltsville, Md., which licensed the rights for use in food and beverages to Arla Foods, a Danish dairy producer. Although Arla wasn't required to seek FDA approval to market tagatose in food, the company provided the agency in 2001 with scientific data supporting their conclusion that tagatose is safe, said Linda Kahl, an FDA consumer safety officer.

Like several other sugar substitutes, tagatose is partly absorbed in the small intestine, some of it breaks down in the large intestine.

As a result, in large amounts, it can cause bloating, gas, nausea and diarrhea. But at the doses most people might consume in a day, tagatose shouldn't cause a big problem, Kahl said.

Other companies have expressed interest in tagatose, including Kellogg's. Last October, the Michigan cereal and snack giant wrote the FDA saying tagatose could be useful in the fight against obesity.

Spharix has sponsored research at the University of Maryland into the potential use of tagatose as a Type 2 diabetes treatment.

Very small studies have shown that taking tagatose regularly lowers levels of glycated hemoglobin, an indicator.

Tagatose is the latest sugar substitute.

JEROME - Hilary J. Sherwood and Nathan N. Cook, formerly of Jerome, were married Sept. 25 in the Salt Lake Temple.

Coughing may help to hold off a heart attack

VIENNA, Austria (AP) - Coughing vigorously until an ambulance arrives could save the lives of heart patients who are going into cardiac arrest, a doctor said recently.

Dr. Tadeusz Petelenz, a researcher in Poland, said the technique, called cough CPR, forces blood to the brain while the heart is starting to fail and keeps patients conscious long enough to call for help. It may also reset their heart rhythm, he told a meeting of the European Society of Cardiology.

He recommended Cough CPR be taught to the public, but other experts said while the concept is provocative, it needs more study. Every year about 300,000 people in the United States die from sudden cardiac death.

Cardiac arrest can be caused by a sudden problem with the heart's rhythm - ventricular fibrillation. It can also be caused by a heart attack which occurs when a blockage cuts off the heart's blood supply.

In three-quarters of cases, the attack happens at home, often when the victim is alone. Circulation stops, the victim faints and brain damage occurs within minutes. Death usually follows in about 15 minutes.

Sleep

eyes closing or going out of focus by themselves; difficulty keeping your head up; inability to stop yawning; wandering, disconnected thoughts; inability to remember driving the last few miles; driving between lanes or tailgating; continually jerking the car back into the lane, or drifting off to the right side of the road.

At the very least, pull over, walk around the car and stretch. Or pull into a freeway rest area and close your eyes for five minutes.

Avoid if possible driving during hours when you would normally be asleep, take along a passenger, and if your passenger wants to take a nap, make sure it's in the back seat.

"It's a problem on straight highways with traffic moving at high speeds," said Bruce Christensen, the Region 4 traffic engineer for the Transportation Department. "Certainly something to think about."

Accredited Cruise Counselor
One question you must answer when you book a cruise is "What meal seating do you prefer - early or late?" If you physically don't feel comfortable when you eat late (like me), take the early seating. Your dinner hour will be 6:00 pm and you will attend the nightly show production following your meal. If you don't want to be rushed to get ready after your day in port, or if you like a cocktail hour before dinner, then take late seating - usually 8:30 pm. Your show schedule will vary during the week - some nights it will be before your meal and other nights, following your meal.
Princess Cruises is a cruise line that has initiated a program called "Personal Choice" seating in addition to early and late options. This allows you to choose the hour when you go to the dining room. Once in a while you may have to wait to be seated and may not always get the waiter you had the night before, but many clients really like that "personal choice."
Another concept is "alternative dining." Many ships now offer other restaurants besides the main dining room for dining. There is a surcharge but the dining is more intimate and the service superb. Call one of our cruise experts to discuss these finer details of a cruise. There is so much more to a cruise than just the price.

Advil, Motrin may block heart-saving effects of aspirin

The Washington Post

Aspirin may fit nicely with Advil and Motrin in your medicine cabinet. But if you use aspirin regularly for its heart benefits, these and other anti-inflammatory painkillers may reduce aspirin's protective effects, according to a new study. Researchers at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, an affiliate of Harvard Medical School, published the findings last week in the online version of the journal Circulation.

Millions of Americans take aspirin to reduce their risk of heart attack and stroke, and for the sizable subset of those people who also regularly use nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) for the pain of arthritis and other conditions, the new research may have clinical implications, said the study's lead author, Tobias Kurth.

Our study provides more evidence that regular users of non-aspirin NSAIDs may not experience the clinical benefit of aspirin," said Kurth. "But we need more data on which specific NSAIDs interfere with aspirin and how to effectively combine these medications for people who need to take both."

Previous studies have suggested that non-aspirin NSAIDs block aspirin's heart-protective effect, but this is the first that focused on risk for a first heart attack. Researchers showed that aspirin did not protect against a first heart attack in regular users of non-aspirin NSAIDs, those who used the drugs 60 or more days per year. But intermittent users of the drugs still received the heart benefit. The study controlled for such factors as age, smoking, exercise and history of other medical conditions like high blood pressure, diabetes and arthritis.

The findings were based on data from the Physicians' Health Study, in which more than 22,000 healthy male physicians nationwide were randomly assigned to take 81 milligrams of aspirin or a placebo every other day; neither the study participants nor the investigators were aware of any individual's assignment.

The participants were surveyed every year about their usage of aspirin and other NSAIDs and whether they had experienced a heart attack. The trial was halted early, in January 1988, after about five years because aspirin use was found to reduce the risk of a first heart attack by 44 percent.

Aspirin is thought to reduce the risk of heart attack by binding to an enzyme, called COX-1, that promotes blood clotting. Because aspirin and other NSAIDs share a common docking site on COX-1, the other NSAIDs can occupy these sites instead of aspirin, thereby reducing aspirin's protective effect.

A study published in 2001 by the New England Journal of Medicine suggested that regular use of ibuprofen, even when it's taken 12 hours before aspirin, reduces the benefit of aspirin.

The study did not examine the impact of newer NSAIDs, including Celebrex (celecoxib) and Vioxx (rofecoxib), which bind only to the COX-2 form of the enzyme. Ibuprofen was the most widely used non-aspirin NSAID during the five-year study period, said Kurth. But researchers are investigating the effect of these newer drugs - called COX-2 inhibitors - by continuing to follow the Physicians' Health Study participants, some of whom take them now that they are available. And next year, a large national study involving female health professionals will also supply data on this topic.

DEBTS, HEIRS and NONRESIDENTS

QUESTION: My father died recently owing creditors a lot of money. Will his house sale proceeds be used to pay debts?

Probably not. Idaho law extends his homestead rights in his principal residence (and its sale proceeds) to his heirs or devisees under his will.

Terms: a homestead right is a person's right to protect up to $50,000 of equity in a principal residence from the claims of creditors. An heir is a person entitled to inherit from the estate of a person who dies without a will. A devisee is a person designated to inherit under a will.

Although you might think that a homeowner's homestead rights would lapse at death - under Idaho law they survive for the benefit of heirs and devisees.

Exceptions: mortgage holders and Medicaid reimbursement claimants still have rights against a deceased homeowner's equity. General, unsecured creditors do not.

In this apartment, there's a crowd

DEAR ABBY: Karl and I met a few days after he had broken up with his girlfriend, "Lisa." My brother introduced us. I was keen, at first. I had heard Lisa was pregnant with Karl's child, but he told me it was over between them. I guess Karl said all the right things because we immediately hooked up, and our relationship got serious fast.

A week later, Lisa called Karl to "discuss the baby." At that point, Karl and I were living together. He

DEAR ABBY: Karl and I were living together. He had to move out. Since there wasn't time to find a new apartment, I moved into the guest room.

Surprisingly, we've all been getting along really well, but there is something that I haven't told you: I'm also pregnant with Karl's child. I really don't know what to do. Karl has two kids on the way and they are less than a month apart. Please help.

-A HOPELESS PREGNANT WOMAN

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me how you feel about the possibility of a child support for your child.

Although the three of you are getting along now, there is no guarantee that it will continue when there are five of you. Bear in mind that Lisa, not Karl, was the person who told you to move out. It's unlikely that Karl is ever going to give you an exclusive commitment.

IF OCTOBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY... you were born lucky and privileged; you possess a strong aesthetic sense and like to collect anything from coins to paintings. Money comes through buying and selling. You have a roughish, wheeler-dealing element that revels in taking chances, but you like to hide away sometimes. You care for appearances, often sparing no expense on food and drink. Presently, you're forced to make important decisions; speculation would not be good.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar aspects could interfere with daily routines today and prevent you from completing a job. Low energy and stress need to be supplemented with sound nutrition and vitamins.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You wonder if an old friend who's always been supportive is really on your side. You're in a very good space and feel that nobody can hold you back. There's a hard-earned promotion in the pipeline.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): With sun and Saturn at odds today, there could be criticism, backlashes and unexpected difficulties. Your diplomatic self can solve these in a jiffy. You're winned and dined this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You counteract this morning's feeling of apathy. As a determined Scorpio, you soon sort out a home situation. Is there something simmering on the backburner having to do with house or mortgage property?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):

Compromise could be an effective way to go today. Friends and neighbors are expecting an answer. You really have to weigh out for those banana skins around the home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keeping things under control is your general aim today. You could be gaining prestige. The advice you've been looking for may be turning up this evening in a familiar guise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):

Now is a good time to stop hiding your talents. Being in the open won't immediately give you recognition, but it will pay off later. A friendship may be rekindled.

FISCS (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Use caution when driving early this morning as conditions are volatile. Avoid tiffs. A partner proves supportive. Older children make demands and are manipulative. Guard your feet and teeth.

ULCERATIVE COLITIS PART I

Ulcerative colitis is a disease that causes inflammation and sores, called ulcers, in the top layers of the lining of the large intestine. The inflammation usually occurs in the rectum and lower part of the colon, but it may affect the entire colon. Ulcerative colitis rarely affects the small intestine except for the lower section, called the ileum. Ulcerative colitis may also be called colitis or proctitis.

The inflammation makes the colon empty frequently, causing diarrhea. Ulcers form in places where the inflammation has killed the colon lining cells; the ulcers bleed and produce pus and mucus.

Ulcerative colitis is an inflammatory bowel disease (IBD). Ulcerative colitis can be difficult to diagnose because its symptoms are similar to other intestinal disorders such as irritable bowel syndrome and to another type of IBD called Crohn's disease.

Ulcerative colitis occurs most often in people ages 15 to 40, although children and older people sometimes develop the disease. Ulcerative colitis affects men and women equally and appears to run in some families.

WHAT CAUSES ULCERATIVE COLITIS?
Theories about what causes ulcerative colitis abound, but none have proven. The most popular theory is that the body's immune system reacts to a virus or a bacterium by causing ongoing inflammation in the intestinal wall.

People with ulcerative colitis have abnormalities of the immune system, but doctors do not know whether these abnormalities are a cause or a result of the disease. Ulcerative colitis is not caused by emotional distress or sensitivity to certain foods or food products, but these factors may trigger symptoms in some people.

SCHOOL DAYS

Bliss FFA places first in competition

BLISS - The Bliss FFA team placed first in this year's district forestry competition held at the ranger station at the Big Smokey Campground.

High individuals from Bliss in the forestry competition were: Brian Elliott, first high; Rusty Perron, second high; and Chase Erkins, fourth high.

The competitions were difficult, and there were six different activities in the competition, reported Marlorie Kast with the Bliss FFA chapter. The activities were:

Map reading, which involved identifying 10 map symbols and finding their location on a map. Compass reading, that is, simulating the skill of marking off a timber sale boundary.

Log scaling, which involved identifying the species, diameter, length and board feet volume.

Tool and equipment identification, where students had 20 tools to identify.

Tree and plant identification, where students had to identify 15 plants or trees.

Timber cruising, where students had to determine species, diameter at breast height, total height and board foot volume of four trees.

Homecoming is in the air at Jerome High School

You can smell it in the air. The excitement is mounting at Jerome High School.

Today is the start of Homecoming week, which will be filled with activities for students, parents and community members. This week's theme is "Rumble in the Tiger Jungle."

"Homecoming is just a fun week that allows all the students to show their school spirit and support JHS, while getting a few laughs and having fun, senior Krista Kuhl said.

The second annual Powder Puff Football game will be held at 7 p.m. at the football field. The cost is $2. There will be free hot dogs and drinks starting at about 6:15 p.m.

A bonfire takes place at the Bernsen's residence, 750 E. 330 S., after the volleyball game on Wednesday. Call the school at 324-8137 for more information.

The homecoming parade will start at 1:45 p.m. Thursday. The game starts at 7:30 p.m. Friday. The homecoming king and queen will be announced at half-time.

Last week, seniors attended the Magic Valley Campus Tour at the College of Southern Idaho. Students received valuable information about CSI and the college process, toured the campus and spent the afternoon perusing the career fair.

The deadline for senior project proposals is Wednesday. If you are interested in becoming a mentor for a senior project, call Janet Avery at 324-8137.

Princess Patricia O'Dell. Success comes through shared commitment between parents and teachers. Parent/Teacher conferences are from 5-8 p.m.

New Benji Graybeal Scholarship awaits Castleford students

We will have a new scholarship beginning this spring - the Benji Graybeal Scholarship.

Last year, Benji was selected by the United Dairymen of Idaho as the regional distinguished award recipient, which also meant that Castleford Schools was a recipient of $5,000.

Following input from staff members and the community, Benji, along with the school administration, decided to establish a scholarship that will be disbursed over the next five years. Dianne Clark, our school Safe and Drug Free coordinator, has organized two class retreats this fall. The senior class retreat focused on class unity and leadership. Jaylynn Twiss was a guest speaker and helped each student develop personal goals and a personal mission statement. The focus of the freshman class retreat was building class unity. Class retreats are planned for the sophomores and juniors later this semester.

Homecoming will be Oct. 13-17, with the theme, &The Devil went down in C-town.& The cheerleaders and student council are busy making plans.

Castleford cheerleader adviser Brenda Thomson, names this year's cheerleaders: Kelly Tabet, Janet Hurley, Jorie Schorzman, Amanda Draper, Lauren Kiine, Anne Lopez, Connie Klaxon. FCCLA adviser, has the Wolf

Pack Bakery operating and preparing many tasty items. They are listed on the school Web page: www.castleford.schools.com. In fact, if you would like to see the weekly or monthly calendar, as well as individual teacher or class information, they can also be found on the Web page.

A personal note: I would like to thank the patrons who have called complimenting the school for this column.

Look around - clubs about at Twin Falls High

Everywhere you look in the halls of Twin Falls High School, there are recruitment posters and flyers for all the different school clubs and organizations.

During every CIP, or communication information period, held during three hour, there are daily announcements in the school bulletin about the dates of upcoming meetings with announcements of treats for all who attend. The many new advisers and their clubs are anxious to get started with the year's activities.

A few clubs are already up and running with their first fundraisers under way. Distributive Educational Clubs of America, better known as DECA, is single-handedly trying to fill the sweet tooth of every student and faculty member with the sale of suckers. The dance team, which already sold candles earlier in the year, is busy selling their Little Caesars' pizza and cookie kits; and the Business Professionals of America are getting the ball rolling on their nominations for the annual Mr. TFHS competition.

Meanwhile, others are still getting their members and officials in order: The Ping-Pong Club; and the Family, Career and Community Leaders of America, or FCCLA, have recently elected their new officers. Key Club, which is, among other clubs, under new advisement, recently sent members and officers elected last year, to a training rally in Blackfoot.

Bowling club, Hispanos Unidos and others are still in the early stages recruiting new members.

Clubs and organizations are a great way to get involved in high school and meet new people. Most of the clubs at TFHS are still open to new members and new ideas. It is not too late to join, so be listening to the announcements and read the school bulletin for information on where and when the club meetings are, and don't forget there are treats!

U.N. Council condemn Israeli attack

to facility

BAGHDAD (AP) — The U.S. and other nations on Sunday condemned the Israeli attack on a U.S. military facility in Iraq, saying it was a "provocative and unjustified" act.

The Iraqi Lawyers League, pressing a rights campaign under an ex-political prisoner of the U.S., has won another concession from the Americans as well: accelerated hearings with lawyers for some of at least 5,500 detained Iraqis.

The U.S. has also agreed to meet with U.S. occupation chief I. Paul Bremer a month ago to register complaints about the internment of thousands of Iraqis without charge since a U.S.-British invasion force toppled Saddam Hussein's Baath government in April.

It told Bremer the Americans aid the Iraqi people ought to have become friends since then, but the way they have handled these things has produced just the opposite effect," Malik said.

Journalists were barred from Camp Cropper, but released detainees this summer told of overcrowded and unsanitary conditions, and they alleged physical abuse by guards.

Yasser Arafat installs emergency government
RAMALLAH, West Bank — Yasser Arafat installed an eight-member emergency cabinet on Sunday with Ahmed Qureia as prime minister, an apparent attempt to deflect possible Israeli action against him following a suicide bombing a day earlier.

Israel threatened last month to "remove" Arafat, without setting a time. The United States appears to have demanded for his expulsion after Saturday's attack by Islamic Jihad. Nineteen Israelis were killed in a crowded beachfront restaurant in the northern port city of Haifa.

Aides to the Palestinian leader said he was clearly concerned about possible Israeli action after the bombing.

In installing an emergency cabinet, Arafat makes it more difficult for Israel to move against him. The United States appears willing to give Qureia a chance, and any Israeli action against Arafat could force Qureia's immediate resignation and cause chaos in Palestinian areas.

Qureia, who had been tapped for the job last month, had initially planned to present a larger cabinet to parliament for approval on Wednesday. Arafat's decree Sunday meant that Qureia takes office immediately.

Pope leads long, lively ceremony at square
VATICAN CITY — Days after some cardinals gave dire descriptions of his health, Pope John Paul II led a long and lively ceremony Sunday to give the Church's new saints, capping the appearance with a spin in a "popemobile" around St. Peter's square to wave to tens of thousands of cheering well-wishers.

The 83-year-old pontiff, who suffers from Parkinson's disease, held up rather well throughout his 2.5 hours in the public eye, although near the end of the canonization Mass he began heavily stirring his words and let German Cardinal Walter Kasper read three paragraphs in German.

John Paul declared three missionaries to be saints: Daniele Comboni, an Italian; Arnold Janssen, a German; and Josef Reinademetz, an Austrian.

War-weary Chechnya votes for president
GROZNY — In their war-shattered capital and impoverished villages, Chechens voted for a president Sunday in an election condemned by critics as a sham but promoted by the Kremlin as a step toward ending a decade of violence and chaos.

Authorities said no official results would be available until Monday, but Russian news agencies quickly reported that Kremlin-appointed Chechnya administration chief Akhmad Kadyrov appeared headed for victory, as was widely expected.

Home-based Entrepreneurs Cashing In On eBay/Online Auction Boom

Thousands of Americans are building fortunes without leaving their front door. That's right — no boss, no 9-to-5 dead-end job, no stress. The only daily commute they make is to the bank — to deposit checks totaling hundreds or even thousands of dollars.

The business? The answer may surprise you. Online auctions.

Everyday Americans are discovering what Internet business experts have known for years: that the online auction industry is almost a foolproof way to make money — big money, according to experts, without risk or much start-up capital.

A recent article in USA Today, states, "On any given day, there are 6.5 million items for sale on eBay and 1 million new items are added daily."

The online Auction market is one glowing symbol of this mega trend. Led by eBay and Yahoo! Auctions, online auctions continue to break new records and old expectations. They have transformed themselves from humble beginnings to be come truly unique world-wide market places. And, the online auction world represents a massive shift in how people are earning money today.

According to industry experts, online auctions are booming because they are the world's largest shopping malls, attracting serious buyers looking for a particular item, bargain hunters tired of paying full retail, hobbyists searching for rare collectibles, and even people who see shopping as entertainment.

Recent events have scared shoppers away from traditional shopping locations, such as department stores and shopping malls.

The end result is that tens of millions of people — not only in America, but from all over the world, — are logging in to auction sites, such as eBay, and spending huge amounts of money on everything from toys to office equipment.

Sellers are happy to oblige — cleaning out their garages and closets to sell nearly anything online — clothing, tools, electronics, jewelry, collectibles, antiques, cars, and recreational vehicles. In many cases, auction items don't necessarily need to have substantial value. Remember the adage, "One person's junk is another person's treasure."

Sellers often look for undervalued bargains that can be sold for a hefty profit. One eBay seller, Larry Rueschhoff, boasts of "finding an old camera for $8, and watching it sell for $1,200."

That works out to be a tidy profit of $1,192 or a gain of 15,000%. Not bad for a couple of hours of work.

Online auctions have become so lucrative that thousands of Americans have happily tossed their day jobs or started a second career, and made a better living selling online. Not only do they sell their own things, but also set up home-based businesses selling excess or outdated inventories for businesses, or items for friends, acquaintances, and neighbors. All it takes is a computer, Internet access, and basic computer know-how.

These entrepreneurs quickly become experts in knowing how to market their auction items to attract exceptionally high bids. They know how to get bidders excited, this often results in attractive initial bids, which quickly double or triple or more.

They not only know how to use digital cameras, but also how to photograph the item to increase its sales appeal. They learn how to use the auction site so that they can have dozens of listings at one time. They know how to get payment quickly — without bad debts. They know how to research which items sell for the largest margins possible.

One online auction seller, Jim Wilson, decided to specialize in software auctions and watches for bargains that he can use to resell. "I happened upon a nice little (software) title, well let's just say that we had a very nice Christmas! I bought 200 of this hot item for only $5 each including shipping. They sold in less than 2 months, for an average $70 each plus shipping. Jim's $100 investment turned into $14,000 in only 90 days. Try that in the stock market!

Small business owners are also finding online auctions a valuable tool in growing their businesses. One antique dealer says, "I started selling on the Internet about two and a half years ago and love it. This is the only way to reach people all over the world. We have improved our business by almost 100 percent each year."

Anyone can begin by registering for eBay® either through eBay® or at the web site www.clickincome.com. Once registration is complete, the user is able to list and sell, as well as place bids on other sellers' undervalued items. Users are often amazed to see profits increase as the bids in-cross. New bids come in daily, sometimes hourly. And every new bid means more money in someone's pocket.

With online auction sites, the entire bidding process is automated by the web site, which means that items are for sale 24 hours a day. When the auction ends, the seller contacts the winning bidder via e-mail to exchange selling information and confirm method of payment.

After a few hours or days, the seller receives money over the internet, or from conventional checks, money orders and even cash in the mail.

Thousands are convinced that there isn't a simpler, more powerful way to make money than Online Auctions. Even a beginner can earn a great second income.

Of course, experts warn that novice online auction sellers can make simple, yet costly, mistakes and that learning about online auctions is time well spent before placing the first item up for bid.
