Committee nears completion of high school proposal

TWIN FALLS – Twin Falls School District officials are near-ing completion of a new block schedule for the high school. But evidently there are some parents who aren't pleased with the committee-driven process the district is using.

The district has been working, on the schedule after hundreds made it clear in a public meeting last spring they didn't approve of a proposed four-period-per-day, eight-course-per-year program that district administration and staff had crafted. The purpose was to increase graduation requirements and allow more opportunities.

On Mondey, parent Gwen Jones told the Twin Falls School Board that she and, other parents are concerned about the direction of plans for a new schedule, Jones called into question the board's instructions to the scheduling committee, which is made up of parents, staff members and students. She said she was under the impression the committee was to explore only block scheduling, when there were other options to be looked at also.

"It is in the opinion of some parents that block scheduling is not in the best interest of the students of Twin Falls High School," Jones said.

Soon the administration and staff will begin finnisiration and staff will begin finnisiration with him and other district officials to discuss the issue, and Jones accepted.

Jones declined to discuss alternative plans with The Times News.
Dobbe said public forums to discuss final plans are tentatively scheduled for Nov. 18-19 at the districts two junior high schools.

The board also approved on Monday increasing wages for the district's teacher aides. In accordance with the federal No Child Left Behind Act mandate, the district is requiring all aides to meet higher education standards. Those who have more education will be rewarded.

A public hearing on the proposed increases is scheduled during the Oct. 21 council meeting, which begins at 7 p.m.

Here's a look at the individual proposals:

Even though the council in July raised the base rate for water service in the city, another rate increase is being proposed.

Mitton is asking the council to increase the base rate by another Scients as month. That would result in a base rate per residence of $10.85 for consumption up to 3,000 gallons. Consumption above 3,000 gallons a month is billed at 40 cents per thousand gallons. There is no plan to raise the per thousand gallon price.

The base rate for commercial customers would increase to $12.85 a month, from $12 now.

Commercial customers get 5,000 gallons a month is often trice. No change in the per thousand gallons that the per thousand gallons is planned.

The students in Jones' class also break into two groups; one group discusses mentoring, the other discusses communication, Jones said.

They choose a leader, have discus-

Students from distinctly different areas of Idaho can end up in the same classroom. The same happens with teachers, Jones said. The information the teachers come up while in her online class helps teachers statewide.

The second piece of IDLAs adult education program includes inservice classes for teachers and aides. Jones said this component is important as aides try to earn college degrees to comply with the No United Lett Behind Act.

Department of Interior and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Speaking to the "resorts airport" section of the American Association of Airport Executives, Kirsch said the FAA is using so-called "grant assurances" to override local derions. Grant assurances are contracts between the FAA and airports in which airport governing bodies agree to FAA stipulations in exchange for federal money.

The new FAA strategy began with President Bush's appointment of Marion Blakey as FAA administrator, Kirsch said, Blakey was a longtime Washington public relations executive before a string of political appointments in Republican administrations. winter wheat

BOISE (AP) – Midsummer heat took its toll on maturing winter wheat as it was being larvested, cutting production by over 2 percent from early summer projections, the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service said.

The spring wheat crop recovered somewhat from earlier heat in late August and September but was still forecast as the smallest since 1988.

The government said winter wheat should total 57.6 million bushels this year, while spring wheat should come in at 29.7 million. In July, the Agriculture Department expected 59 million bushels in winter wheat but only 29 million for the spring cmy 29 million bushels in winter wheat but only 100 million bushels is fractionally lower than last years and only 1.2 million bushels in the information will below the nine straight crops of more than 100 million bushels in the 1990s.

Citizens should make some noise over arsenic mandate

لأجفولات فالفاجرية والزادان

Thless you live in Castleford, you probably don't pay much attention to Castleford's rising water bills. But you should. Like Castleford, many other Western cities soon can expect. pay through the nose to et-new-arsenic standards for drinking water.

Castleford City Council

were forced last Council members were forced last week to hike the city's water rates 73 percent. They need the extra money to start meeting Environmental Protection the extra money to start meeting Environmental Protection Agency requirements, which reduce allowable arsenic levels in drinking water to 10 parts per billion Castleford's drinking water currently measures at 22.3 ppb.

Arsenie is a naturally occurring element, which shows up in water that has flowed through rocks and soil. Western residents have lived with this low-level arsenic for decades, without noticeable health risks.

The new EPA standard, heavily pushed by environmentalists, doesn't remove the most dangerous toxins from drinking water. Instead it adds a needless financial burden that water ratepayers cannot afford.

Castleford officials say complying, with EPA standards, through new treatment plants and engineering studies, could cost as much as $1,000 per a year per household.

Should additional EPA standards.

Should additional EPA standards come down the pike to lower nitrate levels (which are the greater health risk in all communities), local towns will have even bigger costs to swallow have even bigger costs to swal-low.

The federal government needs to ante up if it wants communities to reduce water toxins. This kind of unfunded mandate ties the hands of local officials. It's up to citizens to make their thoughts known to Idaho's state legislators and our delegates to the U.S. Congress.

Unless a grassroots uproar pushes Washington to ease the mandates or pony up more federal aid, sky-high water rates will be here to stay.

Big stink over outhouse cleanup

The U.S. Forest Service wasted little time making sure sanitation crews cleaned up an outhouse near Jarbidge, Nev., last week. But don't think for a second that the threat of dysentery was the federal government's big concern.

the threat of dysentery was the federal government's big concern.

By quickly awarding a contract to EnviroClean of Twin Falls, the Forest Service headed off volunteer efforts to clean up the outhouse for free. The action shows the strength of the government's resolve to show Westerners who's boss on public lands.

Members of the Shovel Brigade had planned to use horse-drawn wagons to carry tanks of waste across the Jarbidge River to disposal trucks. Motorized vehicles have been prohibited on the forest road since a 1995 storm—washed—it_away. Attempts—to—rebuild the road and increase rebuild the road and increase access to the area have been an ongoing conflict, pitting the Forest Service and environmental groups against Elko County and local residents. Federal officials said the cleanup of human waste shouldn't be done by volunteers, due to health concerns and transport risks across the Jarbidge River. So they hastily hired a crew to get the job done.

hired a crew to get the juodone.

The Forest Service can claim the job was done quickly, easily and affordably at anywhere between $9,800 and $15,000.
Meanwhile, volunteer groups can wonder what other volunteer projects will be verbourn in the future.

The lesson learned: When the government wants to limit people's access to public land, don't underestimate the federal poop police.

I read with interest the letter on

The Republicans are coming to California. In Santa Monica and in West Los Angeles, at Junch at the Ivy and over coffee in Brentwood, you can hear the dread and the anger in the Democrats' voices. There's a darkness on the edge of town. Few of these newly minted Arnold-haters ever really liked Gray Davis that much to begin with. Bill Clinton couldn't be president forever, and with Dick Cheney and John Ashcroft runing the country, Calliornia Democrats had looked at Davis as little more than a watchdog to hold the barbarians at the gate until Hillary was ready to run in 2008.

When Democratic activists threaten a countervecall, or when legislators talk about boycotting the new governor's State of the State address, it represents the sort of pettiness and gamesmanship that drove Californians to support a recall in the first place.

But let's leave the bickering and the name-calling to the politicians. Normal citizens, including Californians who have voted Democratic because Republicans ran off the right side of the road, ought to be a bit more thoughtful and a lot more patient.

one-state solution, eliminating the Jewish state by eliminating its Jewish majority. The refused by Palestinian leaders to accept Israel in any borders is the real reason for the ongoing conflict. Western proponents of a one-state solution only justify and reinforce Arab intransigence and territorial great demis should ask themselves why Jewish nationhood, alone among all forms of nationhood, is so problematic and distrasteful. Is Israeli democracy, however flawed, a greater moral blight to humanity than the more perfect autocracles that surround it? Not that a binational state isn't a lovely dream, But if we're already dreaming, then let's imagine a world without states. It would be happy to live in such a world. And that's about as realistic a hope as imagining that Arafat will create a binational democratic state in Pelestine.

Tension, the way it should be

tension wound tighter.
Strange game, baseball.
One night chaos reigned, the next night the sky rained, and then, to everyone's surprise, came a pure pitching duel Monday night that featured 22 strikeouts and gave the Boston Red Sox a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

The American League championship series, tied now at two games spiece, settled down to a nerve-racking contest with the Yankees baffied again by knuck-lebuller Tim Wakefield and the Red Sox fans holding their breath after a pinch-likt, ininh-inning homer by Ruben Sierra.

There were a couple of hit batsmen, though nothing that raised a fuss. This game was all about Wakefield's dancing knucklers and easy motion and the Yankees' frustration in trying to figure him out.

"He was terrific," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "We had him on the ropes a couple of times, but we couldn't get the hit that would put him on the ropes. He's a class act. I thought we battled him tougher than last time."

Wakefield bean New York in the first game in Yankee Stadium and he was 'even tougher this time, giving up one run and striking out eight in seven innings.

"I think I had a little more depth tonight ... depth meaning."

"I think I had a little more depth tonight... depth meaning top to bottom," Wakefield said, motioning with his hands to show how far his knucklers were dropping. They looked at times as fittey were floating from the Yankees' shoulders to their ankles, and one batter after another looked silly trying to hit them.

Yankees Shouners to mankles, and one batter after another looked silly trying to hit them.

"It was probably one of the most exciting games I've been in my entire career," said Wakefield, who had pitched in nine previous postseason games. He won Game of the 1992 NLCS with Pittsburgh at Atlanta, then didn't win another postseason game until the start of this series. If this game lacked the fireworks of Saturday's Pedro it set the stage for more thrills to come. Instead of the Yankees taking a commanding lead, the Red Sox are back in business as they try to win their first World Series

Sox are back in try to win their first World with their first World wince 1918.

The Red Sox were determined to keep up the intensity they showed in the first three games without the lighting that accompanied it in Game 3. The rainout on Sunday worked to calm everyone's nerves.

"It might have been healthy, helping both sides to settle down," Boston's Kevin Millar said.
The only shenanigans came in the eighth inning when Boston manager Grady Little played a mind game with Yankees relieve?
Jeff Nelson.
Nelson was involved in the bullpen fight with a Boston grounds crew worker on Saturday and when he came into the game this time, Little tried to rattle him
by going to the umpire.

by going to the umpire.

"We just got some indication that maybe we saw a little something out there," Little said, suggesting the "little something" might be some way of cheating. "We didn't know, but we appreciated the umpires going to check." Three umpires converged in the infield then examined Nelson's belt buckle and glove. Nelson smiled wryly through the whole inspection, came away clean and went back to pitching. "I guess they wanted to undress him to see if he had anything to doctor the ball." Torre said. "I have no idea what it was." It was, in all probability, just payback for Torre asking the umpires on Saturday to check Mike Timlin's cap. Which, in turn, went back to Little complaining about Clemens' special 300-wins glove earlier this season. When the Red Sox and Yankees meet, they try to find all kinds of ways to get inside each other's head. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't, and sometimes the tit-for-tat gets ugly as it did Saturday.

Saturday.

This time the game hung on nothing but Wakefield's mastery of the quirkiest pitch in baseball. No frills, no fights. Just baseball at its best.

"They're so explosive that I don't know if you ever feel like a game is yours," Brett Favre said after the Packers lost their 17-point lead. "We were in the driver's seat, but against Kansas Ciry, you never know."

Beyond the unbeatens, the most surprising turnarround belongs to Dallas, which at 41 effectively leads by two games in the NFC East over the Redskins, Giants and Eagles and have wins over New York and Philadelphia that will help with potential tiebreakers. Even Bil Parcells, who has been downplaying his team's success, was upbeat after the 23-21 win over the Eagles on Sunday. "I thought we'd be well-prepared," Parcells said. "I could leal. encouraging sign for the highly rated teams that have started slowly.

Denver barely lost to the Chiefs and will contend with them for the AFC West title and the Bucs won't surrender their title easily, Seattle looks legitimate at 4-1; the Colts and Dolphins certainly are, as are the Fatriots despite all their injuries.

But let the unbeatenness, especially teams like the Panthers, who lead Tampa Bay by two games in the NFC South and already hold a road win over the Buccaneers. Motorola Inc. rose 8 cents to 513.87 after the world's second-largest mobile-phone maker reported quarterly earnings that beat analysts' expectations by 3 cents per share.

"People are feeling pretty good about the Motorola earnings," said Mark Donahoe, managing director at US Bancorp Piper Jaffray in Minneapolis, "There also was an upgrade of the software sector by Lehman Brothers which helped things ... #### At-Home Pet Euthanasia

When the time comes and we face the painful decision about pet euthanasia, this can be a very stressful and difficult time for us and our cherished pet.

Because this is always a challenging time, Kimberly Pet Care Clinic has decided to offer a new compassionate service of at-home euthanasia for those sick and suffering pets who have lost their quality of life. This service will help alleviate the stress and problems associated with bringing a painful and excitable animal to the Veterinary Clinic. This will provide you and your pet with a relaxed environment during those final moments.

Pet Cremation

Remembering the years of love and care given to our pets and the lifetime of companionship and devotion they return, we cherish their memories long after their brief lives have ended. It is then proper that we give some thought to our pet's final arrangements.
Kimberly Pet Care Clinic is now offering pot cremation services.

"The fact that we have been she to enter the financial markets and negotiate a new four year deal with improved terms speaks volumes about how far we've'come in the past 20 months," President Stephen Hanks said.

"While we currently have about 1800 million in cash and no debt, this facility reinforces our liquidity, capacity and flexibility in our markets," he said.

The company was formally known as Morrison Knudsen Corp, and built such engineering marvels as the Hoover Dam, the Golden Gate Bridge, Grand Coulee Dam and the Trans-Alacia Pipeline.

It bought Raytheon Co.'s con. struction division in 2000 - a decision that drove the Idaho company into bankruptcy when existing contracts carried much larger costs than expected when the deal was made.

The company took the name Washington Group International when it emerged from bankrupt-cy.

"The difficult we do immediately. The impossible takes a little

In the World Championships in Rhodes in 1996, Beryl Kerr and Roberta Trayman were debuting for Great Britain. Their result on this deal was rather better than the Fates might have predicted. If you look at just the North and South hands, Kerr appeared to have done all the hard work simply by reaching six not-tump from the South seat, since there appear to he 12 to he 12 to he 12 to he tricks. On the heart the South seat, since there appear to be 12 top tricks. On the heart feat, Beryl wor in dummy and cashed a top spade to discover, that not everything in the garden was lovely. However, West chose to pitch a low club—discouraging and deceptive. Why? Because if she had not done so, there would be no story!

she had not done so, there would be no slory!
Now Berrl guessed very well to play a low club from dummy to her nine. (East's decision not to split her honors is certainly not absurd, though it turned out to be fatal.) West ducked, but Kerr crossed back to a top heart and played the club jack to the queen, king and ace. Alas for West, she had no clubs left, so she had to exit with a red card, and Kerr ran all her red-suit winners, finishing in hand.

In the three-card ending, Kerr

In the three-card ending, Kern had two clubs and a spade in hand, with dummy having the K-Q-10 of spades. East could no longer retain her guard in both black suits, so the contract came home. The biggest problem for Kerr was explaining to her teammates just how it had been done!
